

1 Who Fled Floyd Jail Still Free Hale Says Turnkey At Fault in Break By Seven Prisoners

Only one of the seven prisoners who escaped the Floyd county jail early last Wednesday morning remained at large Tuesday morning, after the surrender at the jail Monday of Ronnie Hall, 19, of Branham's Creek.

The remaining fugitive is William Colvin, 25, of Paintsville.

Hall came to the jail, accompanied by his parents, and surrendered.

Ricky Adkins, 20, of Allen, was the first to be caught. He was arrested here by Prestonsburg police, the day of the break. After his return to jail he slashed his wrists and was taken to River Region Hospital, Louisville, for psychiatric examination. Kenneth Mullins, 20, of Printer, and Dwayne Williams, 17, of Robinson Creek, were captured Thursday, near Garth, by state troopers. The last returned to jail were Clarence Stone, 25, of Middle Creek, was arrested Saturday by state troopers near his parents' home, and Jeffrey Mullins, 17, of Printer.

Bloodhounds were brought here from Lexington and had a part in tracking down at least two of the escapees. Services of a privately owned helicopter also were used.

This Town...That World

If this isn't Indian Summer, let's give it a pretty name and adopt it for an annual repeat.

HAPPY FELLAS

The most interesting thing I saw on Election Day involved three dogs wallowing in play in a pile of leaves on the courthouse lawn. Not a hair would they have turned, even if a dog-catcher was being elected.

Which reminds me of our Wonder-What-Happened-to-That department, if any. Wonder what happened to that dog pound?

NO SALE

Back to the election: Had an idea I might needle some of the candidates Monday by trying to sell them an ad in this week's paper, but all were strangely missing, and the one candidate's wife whom I located wearily remarked that she wished I was on the ballot to give her the blessed opportunity of voting against me.

AULD LANG SYNE

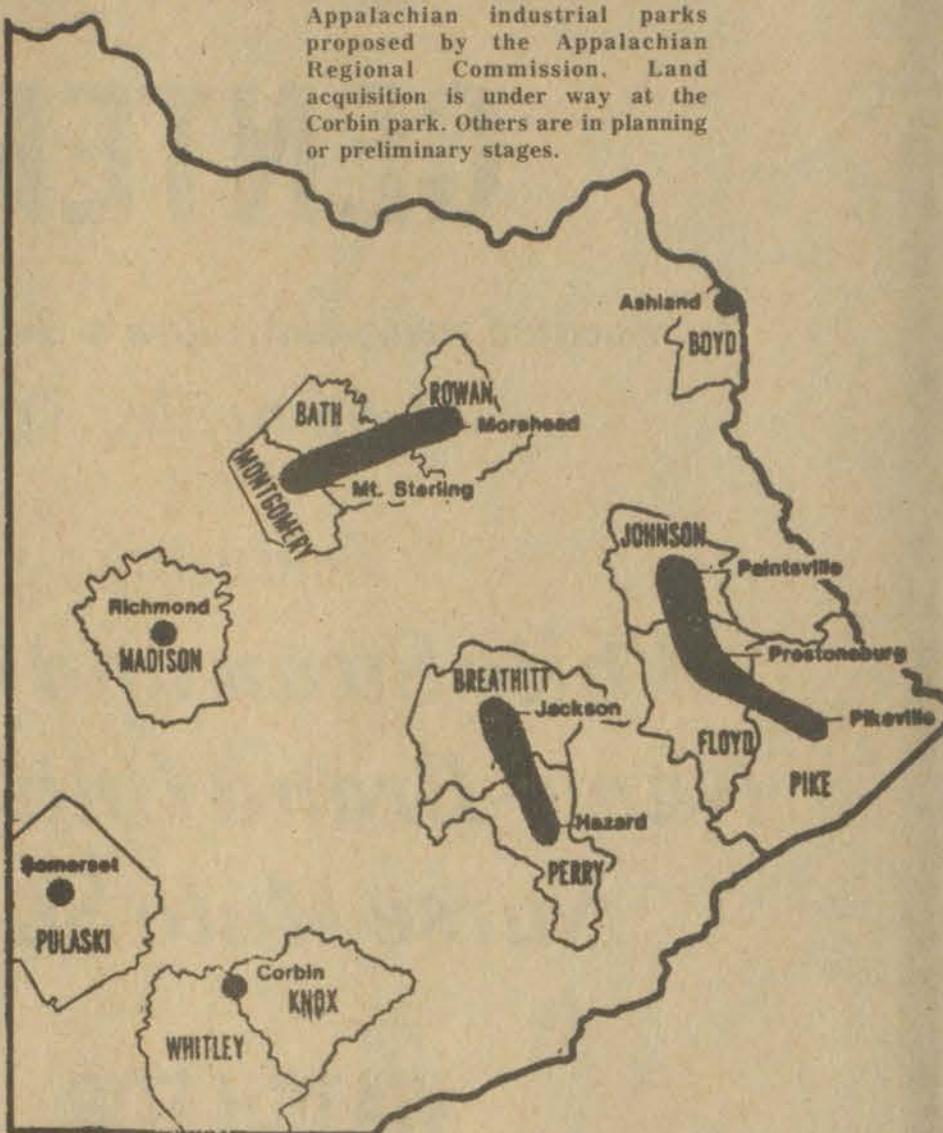

The only reason I ever sat up till midnight at New Year's was to hear Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians swing—oh, so smoothly—into "Auld Lang Syne."

Now Lombardo is gone, and so is Bing, and his "Silent Night" that lent just a bit more to the wonder and beauty of Christmas.

Now the leaves are gone, and I never did quite forget myself and become downright lyrical about it all, sorely tempted as I was. That should give others reason to be thankful.

Appalachian industrial parks proposed by the Appalachian Regional Commission. Land acquisition is under way at the Corbin park. Others are in planning or preliminary stages.

The Prestonsburg-Paintsville-Pikeville area is one of seven "growth areas" in the state which have been singled out by the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) for industrial development.

Land acquisition already is under way for an $8.1 million industrial park at Corbin, and, if successful, this could be the prototype for the six others. In addition to the center proposed for the Floyd-Johnson-Pike section, areas marked for industrial growth, and presumably for industrial parks, are:

Somerset, in Pulaski county; the Mt. Sterling-Morehead Corridor in Montgomery and Rowan counties; the Jackson-Hazard area in Breathitt and Perry counties; the Ashland and Richmond areas.

These developments are tentatively planned to be under way by 1980. ARC envisions developments embracing a total of 200 acres in the seven areas to employ at least 12,000 persons, according to Darrell Gilliam, ARC program manager.

Funding of the developments would be made by ARC, EDA and other federal agencies and the Kentucky Industrial Development Authority.

The ARC program is designed to put the seven designated areas in the "industrial development ball game." But it adds:

"Without land, they're not in ball game at all."

Only One-Third Expected To Vote

Veteran political observers have predicted a total vote of no more than 8,000 at Tuesday's election, and there were some who saw in lowering skies the threat of even a lighter vote than that.

If that prediction proves to be accurate, the voting will be only one-third the registration. The total number of registered voters in the county is 24,475—more than half the county's population.

Another . . . If any Republican candidate emerges the winner from Tuesday's balloting, it will be in the face of almost 10 to 1 odds. Of the voters registered, 22,165 are Democrats and only 2,201 are registered Republican. The remaining voters are 107 Independents and 2 listed as "other."

The voting strength of the county is almost equally divided between the sexes—12,463 male to 12,012 female. Black voters number 123, according to registration data at the county clerk's office.

County Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson said about 400 absentee ballots were issued for Tuesday's election. That figure was cited in contrast to the Leslie county absentee ballot total which has been reported at about 1,800—roughly, a third of the county's total registration.

The voting in the county, according to early reports, was orderly and without complication except at Branham's Creek where a voting machine malfunction was reported.

Major Building Projects Here Set for Start

Public construction here is set for a sudden boom.

Work is expected to begin today (Wednesday) on the $2.8 million, 80-unit Highlands Terrace housing complex for the elderly and handicapped, and the contractor, J. T. Goggans, of Danville, has moved onto the May's Branch site.

Groundbreaking is scheduled Saturday on the North Lake Drive site of the Municipal building which will be built for the city by Tom O. McGuire, contractor, at a cost of approximately $690,000.

Work is scheduled to begin shortly on the two-mile extension of a sewer line from the new National Guard Armory on US 23 to the Highlands Medical Center. Contract for this work was awarded last Wednesday night by the Prestonsburg Utilities Commission to the Don Sharp Co., Winchester, Ky., on its low bid of

All Democratic candidates won in Tuesday's election, but Republicans in some races made strong showings.

Contrary to predictions, more than 12,000 ballots were voted during the springlike day. Many had forecast a vote of no more than 8,000. The balloting was orderly.

Tabulation of the vote had not been officially completed until past 9 o'clock Tuesday night, and all returns were not available before The Times was printed.

The vote totals in major races:

For District Judge—Harold J. Stumbo, 5,743; Scott Collins, 4,060.

For County Judge-Executive—Henry Stumbo, Democrat, 6,868; Ronald Frasure, Republican, 5,661.

For Sheriff—Doug Lewis, Democrat, 7,022; Hollie Barnett, Republican, 4,825.

For Magistrate, District 1—Ray Wilcox (D), 3,062; W. T. Foley (R), 747; Harold Baldrige (Ind.), 147.

For Magistrate, Dist. 2—Kenneth Roberts (D-incumbent), 1,102; French Hensley (R), 779; Andy Conley (Ind.), 84.

For Magistrate, Dist. 3—Edward Caudill (D), 2,663; Emerson Brown (R), 602.

For Magistrate, Dist. 4—Elder Hershell Hamilton (D), 1,729; Russell Clark (R), 1,049.

The bid for a Constitutional convention lost in this county with 2,592 "No" votes to 1,883 "Yes."

The voters in the city of Allen voted to transfer ownership of the water system there to the city of Prestonsburg, the latter to assume all indebtedness against the system. The vote was 67 to 19.

All Democratic incumbents for constable—Corbin Joseph in Dist. 1, Bob Hackworth in Dist. 2, Buddy Bryant in Dist. 3 and Paul Stilton in Dist. 4—were reelected.

Only one city election, Wheelwright's, was an issue for the voters to decide, since the city candidates in Prestonsburg, Allen, Martin and Wayland were unopposed. The Wheelwright returns were unavailable at press time.

Unopposed county candidates were: James "Jitter" Allen, Democratic incumbent for Representative in the 95th legislative district; Arnold Turner, Jr., Democrat, for County Attorney; C. "Ollie" Robinson, Democratic incumbent for County Clerk; incumbent Lawrence Hale, Democrat, for Jailer; Lovell Hall, Democrat, incumbent, for Property Valuation Administrator; incumbent James J. Carter, Democrat, for Coroner, and Elmer Rice, Democrat, for County Surveyor.

Lincoln Memorabilia Given by Mrs. Combs

A Prestonsburg woman this week presented to the Commonwealth of Kentucky her extensive collection of Lincoln memorabilia which will be on display at the historic Mary Todd Lincoln home in Lexington.

The presentation to the state by Mrs. Stanley A. Combs was made Monday at a press conference arranged by Mrs. Louie B. Nunn at the Mary Todd Lincoln home. Included were 35 volumes of Lincoln biographies, the original Lincoln letters to David A. Smith, great-grandfather of Mrs. Combs, and the original Ford Theatre handbill advertising the play attended by Lincoln at the time of his assassination.

Eby Cites Ongoing Red Cross Work

Dave Eby, national director of disaster services for the American Red Cross, told members of the Archer Senior Citizens Center Friday morning of the ongoing work of the Red Cross organization in Floyd county in connection with damage incurred during April's flood disaster.

Eby told the group that during the month of November Red Cross workers would hopefully conclude what he termed the recovery assistance phase of Red Cross relief work in the county. During this phase, Eby explained, the Red Cross will look at needs of families which still exist, determine whether the family has its own resources to provide for the need, and, if not, "take care of those needs through national Red Cross funds."

Members of the senior citizens group told of personal experiences in April's flood as well as earlier flood disasters and praised the Red Cross for its relief efforts. The only criticism voiced was the fact that some relief recipients falsify damage claims in order to receive benefits. Eby told the group that "this always happens to a certain extent during the emergency assistance phase which immediately follows a disaster." At such time, Eby said, the Red Cross is distributing supplies and rendering aid simply to help victims survive the days following the disaster, and "we have to depend on the victims' stated needs . . . because it's impossible to make home surveys of all the victims during a time like this." He stressed, however, that persons guilty of such falsification are relatively few.

Archer Senior Citizens Director Verlie Newman told Eby that the most pressing problem with many of the county's older residents at present is the fact that furnaces which were damaged have yet to be repaired, posing the prospect of a winter without adequate home heat.

Eby assured the group that this month's work by Red Cross personnel would concentrate on seeking out such problems and correcting them before the onset of cold weather.

Eby pointed out that a great deal of confusion had come about during the initial flood relief operations as a result of inconsistencies in federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (H.U.D.) policy. "HUD policy would vary drastically from state to state, even county to county," Eby said.

Eby, who participated, along with several other state and national Red Cross officials, in Prestonsburg's recent Red, White and Blue Day parade, cited Floyd Red Cross Chapter Executive Director Shelby Willis for efforts with the organization, saying, "You've got a good person with Shelby, so please get in touch with her concerning any problem, and we'll take a look at it as quickly as possible."

Eby, who works out of the American Red Cross eastern headquarters in Washington, D. C., was in charge of relief operations in the entire area affected by the April flood.

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

It has no fixed date of arrival (sometimes it doesn't come at all) and no definite time of duration, but almost every year in November, temperate latitudes of the earth experience a delightful weather phenomenon known as "Indian Summer."

In Europe this mystic spell of warm, hazy, summery days is often known as "St. Martin's Summer," "Old Wives' Summer" and "All Hallow's Summer." And because of the things that often occur during its all too short duration, here in the United States, it has acquired still another name—"fifth season."

During this fifth season, especially if it hangs around long enough, spring flowering shrubs and plants often put forth scattered bloom. Brown, frostbitten grass shows green, resident birds sing briefly and some even make half-hearted attempts at building nests. But unfortunately this activity in nature never lasts for long because as Thomas DeQuincy wrote, it is only a last brief resurrection of summer—a "resurrection that, like the lambent and fitful gleam from an expiring flame, has no root in the past nor steady hold upon the future."

Indian Summer with its purple haze, glinting gossamer of wandering, airborne spiders and bittersweet languor, goes by still another term, "the halcyon time of autumn."

For this title we can thank Greek mythology. Ancient Greeks thought this wonderful period of reprieve from the rigors of winter was a special gift of the gods to the kingfisher, or halcyon. These early people believed the kingfisher built a floating nest on the sea and incubated and reared its young during the calm warm days of Indian Summer.

A common characteristic of all Indian Summers is the haze that pervades the atmosphere from horizon to horizon, giving the earth a quality of unreal and disturbing drifting into another and mysterious realm of time and eternity. Early American settlers assumed this haze to be smoke from prairie fires set by Indians to drive buffalo herds into more advantageous spots for slaughtering for winter meat. They assumed too that the abnormal warmth came from the heat generated by these great hunting conflagrations.

But not with the buffalo gone, the prairie in crops and widespread forest fires controlled by USDA foresters, the haze still returns each autumn as it did in the days of yesteryear. The actual cause of Indian Summer is still a subject of much conjecture, but the name the colonists gave the season is now all but universal.

Carroll Suggests Varied Pay Scale

Gov. Julian Carroll has asked the Legislative Research Commission and the General Assembly to study the possibility of offering state employes in certain parts of the state higher salaries than employes doing similar work in most of the Commonwealth to compensate for those areas with higher costs of living.

In an Oct. 25 letter to House Speaker William Kenton (D-Lexington), Carroll noted that the state's rate of pay in some areas, such as Jefferson County, is not sufficient to prevent state employes from defecting to private industry and causes difficulty in finding employes.

The Governor said vocational teachers' in Jefferson county had been difficult to recruit and retain by the state since the local school system also hires the instructors, but at a higher rate of pay. He noted that the state must often compete with private tradesmen employes who tend "to pay a premium wage for such skilled workers" in Jefferson county, as compared to the rest of Kentucky.

Gov. Carroll said, however, that on Oct. 16 the Department of Personnel had approved a 10 per cent pay increase for the state's vocational teachers, with additional 10 per cent increase for teachers in Jefferson county.

He said a similar approach had been used in other state agencies in other parts of Kentucky, noting, "when applied judiciously (the approach) seems to have merit."

"This issue is complicated because," he wrote, "... we recognize the need for equity and comparable pay for comparable work; and yet... budget considerations and personnel management principles suggest the need for flexibility..."

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Goble, of Dwale, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Miss Tammy Lynn Goble, to Mr. Gary Michael Shepherd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Shepherd, of David.

The wedding will be solemnized at the United Methodist Church, Dwale, Wednesday, November 23, at 7 p.m.

The gracious custom of open church will be observed.

Hunting Banned in Area Of Daniel Boone Forest

An area in the northern portion of the Daniel Boone National Forest has been closed to all hunting, effective November 3, and will remain closed indefinitely.

The forest supervisor's order banning hunting applies to the area between Kentucky Route 801 and Cave Run Lake from Kentucky Route 826 and the Licking River dam to the Warix Run boat ramp. This includes Scott Creek boat ramp and the Twin Knobs recreation area. Portions of this region previously were open to hunting.

Under the terms of the order, all firearms or other implements designed to discharge a missile capable of destroying animal life must be unloaded and encased while in the closed area. Violators are subject to $500 fines and six-month jail terms or both.

The order is intended to provide safety to the non-hunting public and to allow greater opportunities for wildlife viewing.

THE FIRST TIME a federal employment service was established in the United States was in 1970, under the Bureau of Immigration, according to a publication issued by the U.S. Department of Labor, "Labor Firsts in America."

Gas Company Plans Dwale Fire School

The Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company is planning a firefighting school to train employees in the proper techniques of extinguishing natural gas and crude oil fires, with the first training session to be held November 10 at the Dwale compressor station.

This session is in conjunction with the Kentucky Public Service Commission which will be conducting its annual seminar for utility companies operating in this area.

The training is made up of two sections—a classroom session and the actual extinguishing of natural gas and crude oil fires. Company employees will be involved in both sections and will be extinguishing the various fire situations.

In addition to the Public Service Commission's participation in the fire school, local fire departments and rescue squad personnel are invited to observe the training offered to the company employees.

Local fire departments or rescue squads interested in observing this school should contact the Safety Division of Kentucky West Virginia Gas at 886-2311 for additional information.

What Do We Mean?— 'Back to Basics'

The Kentucky Education Association will hold a conference in Louisville November 19, just to hear what people mean when they call for "back to basics" in education.

Try answering that in a hundred words or less. Nobody has asked us what we mean by the phrase, but we propose to give it a try within such limitation:

"Eliminate the frills, concentrate on qualifying young people to write not only legibly but also sensibly, to read with understanding, use mathematics in practical fashion, return to the tested and proved principles of living—and start all that early."

Having said that, we cannot resist the temptation to expound. A return to basics would not, in our thinking, necessarily relegate to the discard other parts of the school curriculum, but would put them in their proper place, farther back in the line until the youngster gets his intellectual feet on the ground. That is to say, we think the pupil should really learn something before going, for example, into the matter of a career about which he learns a little in the classroom and less that would qualify him for a career.

"Return to basics" infers that we have strayed away, and with less than satisfactory results. The disciplining of minds, wills and bodies is among the missing. Undisciplined, young minds never really learn how to study and to apply their abilities until in some cases it is too late.

Back to basics? Start early on the foundation—honest-to-goodness work on the Three R's and on spelling and grammar, and never leave the grades without a solid knowledge of them. Then, with something to build upon, turn the developing mind to those broader areas of education, careers, sciences—to the fullest capacity of the mind. Don't worry about making these youngsters citizens of the world before they are truly citizens of their own classrooms.

BACKWARD GLANCE

While observing a birthday at this desk, the other day—I do not believe folks my age celebrate them—I did a bit of harking back and was reminded of the things we had and didn't have, "way back when."

We had no telephone, radio, automobile, plane, income tax, coal mine, train, plastic jug—or polluted water. No electricity, or natural gas—or atom bomb.

And I doubt if they had discovered the stomach ulcer at that time.

Things we had—not much. Only a heavenly portion of peace and quiet.

H-M-M . . .

This fellow expounded on the folly of the racing fan, the poor soul who would focus his interest on an animal whose brain is no bigger than a walnut, with a midgit for a rider, but all he has on the nag, and then join 15,000 other nuts in yelling, "They're off!"

"Darned right—they're off," he added. I was ready to sound an "amen" when he quirked an eyebrow at me and continued:

"And why in the world a grown man will go out and spend hundreds of dollars on a boat and fishing tackle, and then stay out in the rain, hours on end, and freeze one end of himself off while waiting for a fish to nibble his hook is beyond me."

I gave no amen but must confess that on occasion I have wondered a bit about this matter, myself.

Visitors from 49 states and 12 nations have visited the Mary Todd Lincoln House in Lexington since the restoration was opened less than six months ago.

The only shrine to a First Lady in America, the Mary Todd Lincoln House sits on Lexington's West Main Street less than a block from the Hyatt-Regency Hotel, The Mall at Lexington Center and Rupp Arena.

Aside from the individual visitors from every state except Alaska and the foreign nations, various organizations are bringing their members to the Georgian-styled, brick house where Mary Todd lived with her family from 1832 until 1839 when she travelled to Illinois to meet and marry another Kentuckian, Abraham Lincoln.

The 20-room house was restored by the Kentucky Mansions Preservation Foundation under the chairmanship of Mrs. Nunn.

UNLIKELY LETTERS by WILLIAMS

Letters to the Editor

Is Coal Really Our Ace in the Hole?

Bumper stickers tell us that "coal is our ace in the hole." How we welcome the rebirth of the coal industry after 20 years of depression and unemployment. It does mean many jobs and increased business.

But wait—does the coal industry really benefit us as much as it should? As much as it might? The answer is a resounding "no" for three reasons.

1. Only 15 percent of the tax money comes back to the coal counties, while 85 percent goes into the state's general fund. Last year the state collected $112 million in Severance Tax. Thirteen million dollars was returned to the coal producing counties to fix broken roads (not build new ones!) and only five million for "economic development." And that's all! For example, in Floyd county, coal companies paid $3,451,215 in severance tax during the 1976-77 fiscal year, but only $775,217 was returned for our benefit in the county. We have only one chance to benefit from coal, for when it is gone, that's the end of it. Shouldn't we receive at least one-half the revenue from our only industry?

2. The State also tells us how we can spend the money that we do get. They make the final decision on which roads are repaired. They must approve our plans for the use of economic development money before we can spend a dime of it. For example, we can build a recreation and swimming area in a county, but we cannot have a penny to staff it or run it. Or, we can build an industrial park but cannot provide more housing or more needed services to make our area attractive to any industry that might use the buildings. Our county might have five top priority economic development projects but have the state veto them all. In other words, the State does not trust us to spend the money that we do get—and that must change!

3. Whatever money the coal counties get is given at the whim of the governor each biennium. There is no law which says that any money from Severance Tax is to be returned to the counties. There should be such a law guaranteeing at least half the tax being returned. What can we do to change all this? Write the governor or contact him now, before December 1, as the budget is being made. Only an aroused citizenry will change the present system. One-third of the people in Kentucky who live in coal counties should surely be able to make a difference!

Fair Share Severance Tax Coalition By Mike Mullins Pippa Passes, Ky.

Ask Law Enforcement

We, the people of the McDowell, Minnie, Drift and Hunter area, want to try to get some law enforcement in our community. They're called, but they never respond. There are many examples, but here are just a few.

The hospital calls when they really need some kind of law, if they show up at all it's always three or four hours late. Frazier's Creek is very dangerous every night because of all the fights and people on dope. A person needs to carry a gun, or they could be killed, but the law won't do anything about it. A boy was hit by a car at Drift. He was crippled for life. The case was never investigated. We guess the law didn't care. This past Saturday night in the head of Stumbo Hollow, a girl was being molested. They called half the night for some law, but they never showed up. The girl was still there the next day and still scared to death. The McDowell School is not a safe place to send your children, because of all the dope and fights, and wild drivers. But why shouldn't they be that way? They know there's no law around here, the same as the adults do. Here's just a few people who agree we need some kind of law in Floyd county and especially in this area.

If by some chance you can get someone arrested for attempted murder or destroying property, all they get is a free ride to Prestonsburg and a tour through the courthouse and half the time they beat the law back home.

In Remembrance

The Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church of Prestonsburg thanks the Lord for the life and ministry of its former pastor, the Rev. M. Robert Regan, who departed this life July 12, 1977.

Even while he was limited with age and infirmity, Brother Regan continued his ministry by writing hundreds of letters and cards to give spiritual encouragement to friends, both far and near. Furthermore, upon his death his library went to the Clear Creek Preacher's School in Pikeville. His works do follow after him. We are grateful for his life.

New DHR Service Helps Locate Abandoned Children's Parents

The message appeared, a letter at a time, at 10:30 a.m.: "The FPLS extends a warm welcome to Kentucky—our newest terminal state."

It appeared on a computer printer at the Kentucky Department for Human Resources (DHR) Thursday, opening a new phase in service by the department's child support branch. Kentucky became the 26th state to have a direct computer link with the Federal Parent Locator Service (FPLS) in Washington, D. C.

The child support branch aids in locating parents who voluntarily abandon their families and deprive them of financial support. Federal law requires every state to conduct such a program.

Before the computer link, Kentucky obtained information from federal records by sending queries and receiving data by mail. According to child support branch Manager Jo Stratton, the time lapse between query and reply averaged two to three months.

"During that time, the person we were seeking may have moved several times," she said.

Through the computer link system, available information will be received from FPLS in as little as 10 days.

The link-up and the information obtained can be used only to locate absent parents. The FPLS computer, which can be reached only after six levels of security are cleared, is programmed to trace these parents through records of several federal agencies, including the Social Security Administration, the Department of Defense and the Internal Revenue Service. Beginning Nov. 30, the computer also will check with federal employment records.

"One beautiful thing about this new system is that it requires no new equipment. It uses equipment we already operate to gather information within the state," said Mrs. Stratton. "We dial up the federal computer with a toll-free number."

If additional equipment is needed in the future, Mrs. Stratton added, 75 per cent of the rent or purchase cost will be paid by the federal government.

According to Gail Huecker, commissioner of DHR's bureau for social insurance, which includes the child support branch, Kentucky and most other states are experiencing an annual increase in the number of parents who abandon their families.

"We have steadily intensified our efforts to locate these parents and obtain the financial support for their children," Mrs. Huecker said. "This direct computer line is a giant, progressive step for us. By finding these absent parents more quickly, the parent locator system can reduce welfare dependency and, in turn, remove some of the burden from the taxpayers."

Federal Grants-in-Aid Available On Nat'l Registrar Property

Federal historic preservation grants-in-aid are available to private property owners listed on the National Register by applying through state programs, it was printed out recently by the Kentucky Heritage Commission. The grants can be used to prepare statewide historic preservation plans and surveys and to acquire and develop properties on the National Register. Funds specified for development are used for the protection, rehabilitation, restoration, and reconstruction of historic properties.

(Garfield Place, Prestonsburg, is listed on the National Register.)

Programs designed to recognize, protect, and restore buildings, sites, and other landmarks important in Kentucky's history are handled by the Heritage Commission.

According to Mrs. Kathy I. Sloane, chairwoman of the Heritage Commission, the agency, which was created in 1966 by the General Assembly, has proceeded to fulfill many of its historic preservation goals. "Much of the work," she said, "has been accomplished through four state and federal historic preservation programs. Those are the Kentucky Historic Resources Survey, the Kentucky Landmark Certificate program, the National Register of Historic Places and Historic Preservation Grants-in-Aid."

State archaeologists and historians will be conducting the state historic resources survey by taking inventory of the archaeological and historical resources of 24 counties for the next two years. The survey, for which an intensive, comprehensive, countywide, professional approach is used, will provide necessary information for state and federal agencies to plan preservation activities in Kentucky.

"The survey teams," said Mrs. Sloane, "coordinate their county work closely with local officials, local preservationists and historical groups, and the commission's volunteer county representative. In addition to locating and identifying each historic site, the team maps, photographs, and documents the site. To emphasize county traditions and local history, they record the historic and present names of the site, the names of the architect and builder, the date of construction, an architectural description and any other significant historical information on the survey form."

The survey requires that identification of certain sites, structures, buildings, THE FIRST WOMAN cabinet officer was Frances Perkins, who became Secretary of Labor in 1933, according to "Labor Firsts in America."

QUESTION BOX

The Question Box answers from the Bible to questions from readers. By Pastor Forrest Howe, M Div., Box 462, Allen, Ky.

QUESTION: Is the Old Testament still binding upon a Christian?

ANSWER:

There are many people who believe that the Old Testament was done away with after Jesus. They now claim to be "New Testament Christians". It is interesting to note, however, that the New Testament church only had what we call the Old Testament as their Bible. The New Testament, as we know it today, was not compiled until the middle of the fifth century A.D. So one can see that the "New Testament Christians" thought very highly of the Old.

Jesus told the Jews to "search the Scriptures" in John 5:39. In Matthew 5:17-19 we see Jesus saying that he did not come to abolish "the law and the Prophets". Surely if Jesus were going to do away with the Old Testament, he would not have made statements like these.

Paul also thought highly of the Old Testament. In Acts 17:11 he commends the Bereans for their intense study of the Old Testament. In 2 Timothy 3:16 He tells us that "all Scripture is inspired by God... Just a few verses earlier he tells Timothy "to continue in what you have learned and firmly believed". Paul continues, "You have been acquainted with the sacred writings which are able to instruct you for salvation." Notice Paul calls them "sacred" and secondly, uses the "are" and not "were". At no time did Paul speak disparagingly of the Old Testament.

Now it is true that after the time of Christ some of the practices of the Old Testament were no longer necessary. For instance, the ceremonial system was ended in Jesus. Paul, however, observed these feasts even up until just before his death. They however were no longer necessary. No longer was the governmental system needed when Israel ceased to be a nation. Even though some things were abolished in letter, the principle remained. As for dietary and sanitation laws, they were in essence still effective. If Europe had followed the sanitation laws given through Moses, most of the dreadful killing diseases of the Middle Ages would not have occurred. The "Black Death" was the result of poor health habits by the Europeans.

The Ten Commandments definitely are still binding. They are the principles of God character and cannot be changed anymore than God can. They are the only definition of sin that is given in the Bible. If they are erased we would have no way of telling what sin is.

To sum it all up would be to say that there is only one Bible, not two different books by which men can live. The true New Testament Christian will see this and place the proper respect in these "sacred writings".

(If you have any questions concerning the Bible or religious matters Pastor Howe will be glad to answer your questions. All names are confidential. Also, if you would like a copy of the free book CAN GOD BE TRUSTED, write to him at the above address.)

Marks Owsley, Laurel For Disaster Assistance

Gov. Julian Carroll has asked the Farmers Home Administration declare Owsley and Laurel counties a disaster area as a result of a tornado which occurred October 1. Some 20 farms in the two counties were affected.

A declaration by the Farmers Home Administration would make federal assistance available to those who suffered damage.

THE FIRST LABOR DAY parade was held in New York City under auspices of the Central Labor Union on September 5, 1882, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's "Labor Firsts in America."

Art Workshop Offers Bonuses

Have you been to Lake Cumberland State Resort Park in deep autumn? Have you long nurtured a desire to paint but feel inadequate and frustrated with your efforts? Have you wondered how a puppet show is put together, and also how a puppet is put together?

Then be at the park, the week-end of Nov. 18, 19 and 20.

Have you longed for a relaxing day on the lake, fishing gear at hand and day-to-day worries pushed out of the boat or off the lakeside to become mere ripples as contentment, peace of mind and sheer joy of a scenic countryside take over?

Then make this particular lake week-end a family outing. Whatever the secret, outdoor people tell how the mind is freed when they are surrounded by water and woodland. To add to this euphoria, any raveling of guilt disappears, for you know your children are back at the lodge enjoying a puppet show and your wife (or husband) is also at the lodge picking up painting techniques from the prestigious Kentucky Heritage Artists.

Norma Campbell is the artist-craftswoman who will present her puppets in a performance at 8:30 p.m. Friday (Nov. 18). Starting at 9 a.m. Saturday she will conduct a workshop on how to make puppets.

Beginning at 4 p.m. Friday, Al Cornett will direct a workshop in painting oil landscapes; Brett Johnson will direct painting with polymer; Tony Oswald, still life technique and A. Jack May will lead interested persons on a tour for field sketching.

Saturday morning workshops from 9 until noon will be under the direction of Charles Spaulding, basics of painting; Gary Akers, watercolor; C. G. Morehead (who did the painting with peanut butter), painting buildings; Helen Price Stacy, painting flowers; Don Ensor, painting transparent glass; A. Jack May, field sketching, and Norma Campbell, how to make puppets.

Starting at 1 p.m. Saturday, Gary Akers will demonstrate painting with watercolor; Tony Oswald, still life; Brett Johnson, acrylics; Nellie Meadows, flowers; Harold Collins, drawing with charcoal; Russell May, landscapes in oil, and Robert A. Powell, pen-ink drawing. A special program by the entire Kentucky Heritage Artist group will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday, and next morning at 9 the group will conduct the popular critique session.

There is no charge for the workshops or programs, but there is a registration fee of $3 for the seminar. A number of rooms in the lodge are being reserved for visitors. Reservations may be made directly with the park, but specify that you are to be a participant.

If you want to paint with an artist you should bring along painting supplies.

State Said Eyeing Paintsville as Site For State Building

Paintsville Mayor James Trimble announced this week that the state is considering Paintsville's urban renewal site as the site for a regional state office building.

"We are really plugging for this office," he said, "for it can bring 4,000 to 5,000 new jobs to Paintsville."

"Paintsville is really the crossroads of Eastern Kentucky. The Bristleback area, where this building is proposed, is the only available site I know that is within 30 minutes' drive from five courthouses in the region."

The site he spoke of has been cleared by Paintsville under a combination of urban renewal and community development programs. Already slated to go on the site area a high-rise apartment building for senior citizens and a city-county health department with extra offices to serve regional programs, the mayor said.

Trimble said his information on the proposed structure came from James Byrd of the Kentucky Department of Finance.

THE FIRST PUBLIC employment office was established in New York City in 1834, according to "Labor Firsts in America," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

CANCER Answer line

American Cancer Society

(A regular feature, prepared by the American Cancer Society, to help save your life from cancer.)

A librarian writes: "I learned to do breast self-examination 10 years ago and now that I have gone through the menopause I am not sure of the proper time of the month to do it."

ANSWER line: Your physician will help you select a proper time of month for you to practice this important self examination, and may suggest other kinds of tests that will be useful as you grow older. Please remember to examine your breasts once a month. It is one of the best ways of finding possible breast cancer, a disease that becomes more common as women grow older.

An auto worker explains: "I suffer from ulcers, and my doctor told me to quit smoking. Why?"

ANSWER line: Cigarette smoking has an adverse effect on the healing of stomach ulcers. Also, death rates from peptic ulcers among cigarette smokers is nearly three times that of nonsmokers. Those are two very good reasons to quit smoking and you can do it. Helpful free literature and advice is available from your local American Cancer Society Unit. The ACS may be able to offer a smoking withdrawal program. Please take advantage of these offers because you have a real incentive now to give up a healthdestroying habit.

A woman in her 20's writes: "Last month my aunt died of ovarian cancer. What can I do to protect myself against this disease?"

ANSWER line: There is no known way to prevent ovarian cancer which occurs most frequently in women between 40 and 65 years of age. It is a difficult disease to diagnose so it is wise to follow a sound general health rule for all women: have routine pelvic examinations on a schedule that your physician thinks best for you. Women who have a history of ovary-related problems such as infertility, a tendency towards spontaneous abortion, increased premenstrual tension or heavy menstruation with marked breast tenderness, and a family history of ovarian cancer, should certainly be under a physician's care.

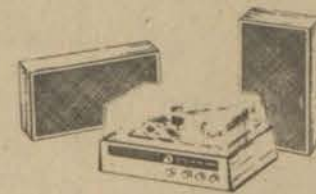

A school custodian asks: "Is it possible to slow a cancer even if it's not possible to cure the person?"

ANSWER line: Yes. There are many ways of managing cancer treatment to extend life as long as possible. You should understand that some forms of cancer are more slow-growing than others and, even if a particular individual may not be saved it may be a period of many years between first diagnosis and death. Those intervening years can be healthy and productive. In fact, many cancer patients are alive five years after diagnosis—some 230,000 Americans in 1977.

Advantages both ways. It's good for the corporation regardless of size, because the premiums for life insurance on corporate-owners, executives, key employees . . . all employees . . . are tax deductible as a business expense under a recent government regulation. So the employee gets the benefit of increased compensation, up to $50,000 in term life insurance purchased by the corporation, with no current income tax liability for either party! The employee can even have permanent life insurance, retain the cash values and benefits, and pay only the tax on the premium. It's a good concept.

Now, all you need is a little help to do something about it. Kansas City Life, The Lioness, would like to introduce you to one of our people who knows the ins-and-outs of this new concept.

Our people have a Concept 79 Planning Kit which provides you with an easy way to understand and plan this new benefit program for you and your employees.

Beverly Hills Fire Causes Disciplinary Action Against 3

Gov. Julian Carroll last week announced steps to strengthen the state Fire Marshal's office by creating 38 new positions and transferring the office to a new state Department of Buildings, Housing and Construction. He also announced disciplinary actions against three officials in the Fire Marshal's office.

In a press conference to announce state government actions to prevent a tragedy similar to the Beverly Hills Supper Club fire in May, Gov. Carroll said State Fire Marshal Warren Southworth was being demoted to technical advisor to the state fire marshal "at a substantial reduction of pay."

Carroll said he and Insurance Commissioner Harold McGuffey had asked acting Fire Marshal Robert Estep to take that position permanently but that Estep had requested a few days to consider the post.

In addition, Carroll said Southworth had been fined some 15 working days' pay and has been placed on 30 days leave without pay. Southworth has been on leave with pay since mid-September.

However, Gov. Carroll said the reassignment of Southworth was not an attempt to make him a scapegoat in the Beverly Hills tragedy. He said the investigation "revealed Mr. Southworth to have been a superb inspector and highly competent in the technical aspects of the job." But, he said, the investigation found "managerial weaknesses" in Southworth's office.

Deputy State Fire Marshal Stanley Boyd and field inspector John Bramlage also were placed on 30 days' leave without pay. When the leave expires, the two will be transferred to work with the state "Fair Plan," an insurance approval system for high risk buildings. State investigators found poor communications between state officials and the board of governors of the Fair Plan.

Of the 38 new positions, Carroll said about 30 positions will be field personnel, mainly inspectors. The rest will be staff personnel.

Gov. Carroll also said he was directing that an attorney be appointed to the State Fire Marshal's office. He said the "lack of legal counsel" was "one of the critical problems in the administrative process of following up on (fire) inspections."

However, the Governor noted that although the additional personnel would help strengthen the state fire marshal's office, "personnel is only part of the problem." He then announced the coming creation of the Department of Buildings, Housing and Construction, which will also involve the transfer of the state fire marshal from the Insurance Department to the new department.

Gov. Carroll said the major goal of the new department would involve promulgation of a uniform statewide building code for use by fire and building inspectors at both the state and local levels. The code also would provide a clear definition of state and local government's areas of responsibility.

Absentee Balloting Causes Some Area Clerks Concern

By BRYAN WILKINS
(In The Lexington Herald)

An informal telephone survey last week of East Kentucky county court clerks indicates that the absentee ballot may have become more popular than ever in this election.

In Leslie county, Clerk Earl Fields says he's being overworked trying to mail out nearly 1,800 absentee ballot forms, the largest number that have ever been registered from his office.

"Something is going to have to be done about it, or we might as well do away with voting machines," Fields said yesterday.

Yesterday was the last day a voter could request an absentee ballot form and the county clerks were busy trying to get the forms into the mail in time for them to be filled out and mailed back for election night counting next Tuesday.

Fields says the sudden balloon in requests for the absentee ballot forms is a new development in Leslie county, where there are several "hot" election races being waged in the county that for many years was considered in the Republican fold.

"In last spring's primary, we mailed out around 800 forms," Fields said. The Leslie county absentee ballot total could amount to more than one-third of the total county vote, Fields indicated. The clerk said that "99 per cent of the ballots" were being sent to voters who reside in Leslie county.

While Leslie county stands head and shoulders above the other counties of Eastern Kentucky that have sent our hundreds of absentee ballots, a common feeling was expressed by the county court clerks that the time has come to "tighten" up the laws dealing with registering for the forms.

The clerks said the current law leaves absentee voting "wide open to fraud," that "the laws are too loose," and "it encourages vote selling."

"I get more every year and I don't approve of it," says four-term Magoffin County Clerk Howard Hensley.

Hensley should know, because 12 years ago, he lost an election after 76 absentee votes were carried in by his opponent's daughter "and every one had voted the same way, against me."

"I'd carried the election on the machines, but do you know it took from until 1965 to 1968 to get it (the election) overturned and cost me $13,000 and went to the Court of Appeals," Hensley continued.

"I'd like to knock 'em all out if I could but I can't do anything about it. I have to do my duty and register any person who qualifies," Fields said.

Under current Kentucky laws governing absentee ballot voting, any person who is a registered voter must fill out an application form by mail or in person which states: "expect to be absent . . ." on election day.

The county court clerk takes the application, checks out the signature to make sure that it matches the one on the registered voter card, and sends the absentee ballot to the voter if all is in order.

Several decades ago, the law required that the completed absentee ballot form be notarized, or given proof of its authenticity. Nowadays, there is no notarization required.

State Rep. Bill Weinberg (D-Hindman) said he intends to prefile a bill he has drawn up with the help of the Legislative Research Commission (LRC) that will require stricter controls on absentee ballot voting.

"We have too many other problems in the state, and absentee voting should not be one of them," Weinberg said.

Weinberg's bill would require that the absentee ballot be notarized; the voter swear to his or her absence, the voter prove a mailing address to avoid 50 absentee ballots being mailed to the same one; and the state residency requirements be tightened to cut out voters who have been out of state for 15-20 years, but who are still voting in it.

Knowles, Leslie To Lead Alcohol Forum Session

Steve Knowles, of Prestonsburg, and Doris Leslie, of Ashland will head a session of the Kentucky Alcohol Forum at the Lexington Civic Center, Nov. 10-12, which will concern itself with the need of alcoholism programs in the rural areas of Kentucky and suggest some possible ways of meeting these needs.

The forum is an annual event sponsored by the Kentucky Association on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, Inc. The three-day event is open to the public.

Topics will include "Alcoholism—Disease vs. Addiction; Alcoholism as a legal defense in the courtroom; a family who tries to fight the 'battle of the bottle,' and a new blood test that is being developed to diagnosis alcoholism.

The forum is sponsored by the Kentucky Association on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (K4A), a private, not-for-profit association of people who are concerned about alcohol problems and seek constructive solutions to them.

Speakers will include Dr. Charles Lieber, of the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine in New York City. He is one of the foremost researchers on alcohol and liver functions in the United States. His most recent accomplishment was the development of a blood test capable of diagnosing a heavy drinker even after up to seven days of abstinence.

Church Helps During April Flood

From figures just released, the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference of Seventh-day Adventists assisted the flood victims of Eastern Kentucky with more than $24,020 in the form of clothing, bedding, and other expenses through its Emergency Services program.

Directing the relief effort in the Big Sandy region was Forrest L. Howe, pastor of the Prestonsburg Seventh-day Adventist Church. The Seventh-day Adventists operate their program in such a way that assistance from other states may be called upon. Because of the wide expanse of the April flood, the local Adventist churches called upon stocks of clothing and other supplies from as far away as Florida and New Jersey, said Howe.

The Emergency Services program is made possible through donations by members and friends of the church during its annual "Ingathering" drive which is in progress now.

BIG SANDY RIVER, swollen by week-end rains, presented an ominous site to flood-weary Floyd countians. Although no actual flooding took place in this county, a number of Harlan county residents were driven from their homes as a result of high water which also caused loss of life and property in mountainous sections of several other southeastern states.

Kentucky Fishing Report

Frankfort, Ky., November 7—Heavy week-end rains statewide have sent water levels upwards on many of the state's major lakes and generally slowed the fishing activity. The lake-by-lake rundown, according to the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources:

LAUREL: Black bass good on surface lures and crank baits in inlets and bays; crappie good around stick ups; clear, rising, two feet below power pool and 63 degrees.

KENTUCKY: Sauger good drifting minnows in the canal; crappie fair still and drift fishing minnows over submerged cover and drop-offs; black bass slow and improving on crank baits in inlets and bays; in tailwaters, sauger good, catfish fair; murky, stable at winter pool and 60 degrees.

BARKLEY: Crappie fair over submerged cover and drop-offs; black bass slow on spinner baits and crank baits in inlets and bays; in tailwaters, crappie and sauger fair; clear to murky, stable at winter pool and 60 degrees.

CUMBERLAND: Black bass fair to good on the lower lake on artificial night-crawlers and do-jigs over drop-offs and ledges and with some white bass in jumps in large tributaries and slow on the lower lake on surface lures and crank

Jewel Thieves' Haul $250,000; Search Spreads

A three-state police alert has been established in the search for two gunmen who last Thursday evening robbed the C and H Rauch Jewelry Store in Weddington Plaza, near Pikeville, of an estimated $250,000 in jewels.

An automobile later found in the Mullins vicinity, near the scene of the robbery, has been identified by State Police as the getaway car. Meanwhile, the search for the two robbers, and at least one accomplice continues.

The jewelry store manager told authorities that two men entered the store at about 7 p.m., and at gunpoint demanded the jewelry. They practically wiped out the diamond department, it was said.

State Police say they have a witness who saw the two gunmen leave the store and enter a car which was driven by a middle-aged white woman. They said there may have been another man in the vehicle.

Ages of both robbers were placed at 35-40 years. One was described as being tall, 6-2 to 6-5, with kinky silver-gray or blonde hair, having a black mustache and wearing dark clothing. The other is 5-5 to 5-7 in height, has a dark growth of beard and wore a dark jacket at the time of the robbery.

The search is concentrating on Eastern Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

FURNITURE IMPORTS SOAR WASHINGTON—The United States imported household furniture valued at $364 million in 1976, a 40 per cent increase over 1975. Exports rose 50 per cent to $126 million, mainly because purchases by Saudi Arabia more than tripled.

Organization Gains Charter As 'Defenders of Decency'

Dr. W. E. Davis, of Paintsville and Prestonsburg, this week announced the incorporation of Defenders of Decency, which he describes as dedicated to "the defense of decency, especially in art, literature, radio, television and movies and to uphold and maintain in our society a God-given standard of morality as enunciated in the Ten Commandments."

Incorporators, in addition to Dr. Davis and his wife, are the Rev. Floyd Cooper, Ada, Okla., Pete Parks, Tupelo, Okla., and Doris Hamilton, Columbus, Ohio. The charter was granted by the state of Oklahoma.

Davis, who heads the group, said the movement was first incorporated in Arkansas as the Clean Literature Crusade but that problems with other media have mounted till it was held necessary to include radio, television and moving pictures. He added that Defenders of Decency have not filed for a tax-exempt status, since it will be involved in necessary political activities.

He said Defenders of Decency will operate strictly on a membership basis, and for that reason the number of members is important. No fixed membership fees are set; every person who contributes any amount to the move will be a member.

"We plan a chapter in each community and will seek a membership of such strength that we can meet any situation that may arise," the minister said. The organization bases its opposition to the lewd and obscene in the several media on the Supreme Court decision that community standards determine if a book, film or other presentation is obscene.

"We will work for legislation, not to legislate morality but to prevent the legislation of immorality," Davis said.

GROUPS CRAFT DISPLAYS

Any local school groups, community groups, or businesses interested in sponsoring a display or demonstration of the work of Appalachian Guild of Artists and Craftsmen members, should contact the Bush Gallery, Prestonsburg. A guild board member will promptly reply to your inquiry.

Support is asked by this local group in their drive to promote the arts and crafts of the Appalachian area. The public is invited to attend a "Dutch" auction, Nov. 7-28 at the gallery.

VISIT PUBLIC BUILDINGS

Relocation of pipeline to make way for construction of new KY 80 is occupying gas companies all along the designated route of the highway. Miles of pipeline are in the process of being moved or replaced in the Bull Creek-Water Gap area, the northern terminus of the new route. Columbia Gas Co. pipeline, such as the 20-inch line pictured above on the Right Fork of Bull Creek, is being rerouted over steep hills to avoid the path of Route 80.

Gardening Tips from Extension Specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture

There is more to the bean than that which meets the eye and it is indeed, quite a vegetable. It doesn't make much difference the variety, all beans are good. It may be a stringless green pod, cornfield bean, pole bean, navy bean, sulfur bean, or the enormous succulent fall bean. When cooked slowly in a black cast iron kettle with a piece of salt sow belly for seasoning and eaten with thick hot cornbread, fresh churned cow butter and slices of cucumber or ripe tomato, there's nothing much better in the way of eatables.

Those versed in the scientific lore of nutrition say green beans are full of vitamins but there is little need here to waste time and effort in discussing the chemical content and other arcane virtues of this prolific vegetable. The correct thing to do is to cook up a big mess after the fashion mentioned and let nature take its course.

Beans can be stored in many ways. They can be pickled in brine, canned in sealing jars, frozen in the deepfreezer, or hulled out and dried and served as soup beans. They can be picked green, strung and broken up and dried to make "shucky beans."

Shucky beans can be kept indefinitely and there are those who will swear that a big kettle of either soup or shucky beans will not only banish hunger, but when eaten with a "tater" onion the size of a hoss apple, will ward off sickness, cure ingrown toenails and whiten the teeth. Also to furnish the horsepower for sawing logs, grubbing sprouts and swinging a No. 10 Vulcan hillside plow there is nothing better.

One way or the other, just about everybody loves beans. They can be roasted, baked, boiled, fried, stewed and are good in all forms. The Indian loved them, so did the Pilgrim, the Chinaman, Turk and Hottentot. George Washington ate them at Valley Forge, Zack Taylor at Buena Vista, Black Jack Pershing at Argonne and maybe Eisenhower ate them somewhere.

Beans have sustained butchers and bakers, soldiers and sailors, slave traders, preachers, politicians, debutantes and Kentucky hillbillies. They know no international boundaries and can be found mentioned in all literature. Thoreau wrote essays about beans and Shelly wrote odes to them and small boys have used them to a stinging advantage as ammunition for bean shooters. They are also badges of learning because to "know beans" is to be a person of erudition.

Few other foods are as delectable as a bowl of well-cooked beans. They are a joy to the nose, a delight to the palate and a pleasure to the stomach. They stick to the ribs, fill out the muscles, add gloss to the hair and bring sparkles to the eyes. Such is the wonder of the bean.

Mining-Flooding Subject of Meet

Berea, Ky.—An all-day symposium on "Strip Mining and Flood—Cause and Effect?", sponsored by Scientists and Engineers for Appalachia in cooperation with Berea College will be held Thursday, Nov. 10 beginning at 9 a.m. in the Berea College Alumni Building.

Scientists will discuss relationships between surface mining and the floods of April 1977, when flooding of major proportions struck parts of Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Participants in the symposium include: Gene Brandenburg, newly appointed commissioner of the Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, moderator; Dr. Donald Batch, professor of biology, Eastern Kentucky University; Willie Curtis, research hydrologist, Northeastern Forest Experiment Station, U. S. Forest Service; Jim Lee Crawford, editor, Corbin Times-Tribune; Tom Duncan, president, Kentucky Coal Association; Jim Everman, district economist, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Huntington, W. Va.

Along with these speakers, Dr. Bruce Tschantz, consultant to President Carter and authority on engineering problems of dams and impoundments will be the luncheon speaker and be present at all sessions. He is professor of civil engineering at the University of Tennessee.

Luncheon tickets may be obtained from Dr. Paul Hager, president of Scientists and Engineers for Appalachia, at Berea College Box 2315 or by telephoning 986-9341, ext. 256. The symposium itself is free of charge and registration begins at 8 a.m. next Thursday.

Besides the heavy rains, various other factors have been blamed for the heavy flooding in April—highway building, logging, forest fires, construction of houses and other buildings on the flood plain, and surface mining. The symposium was organized as part of the Scientists and Engineers for Appalachia's continuing efforts to present the public with factual information on matters pertaining to the region.

More KY 80 Bids To Be Let

At least another 4.4 miles of KY 80 in Eastern Kentucky should be under contract before the end of this month.

According to State Transportation Secretary Calvin G. Grayson, two grade and drainage projects for the new, four-lane, Hazard-to-Water Gap road are included in a bid-letting now scheduled for Nov. 17 at Frankfort.

Both projects are located in Knott county and will bring to nearly 10 miles the total mileage placed under construction since Governor Julian M. Carroll traveled to Hazard Oct. 10 to break ground for the new road.

Transportation officials are predicting that the entire 43.1-mile route will be under construction by next summer and should be ready for traffic by 1980.

Carroll, who called the groundbreaking "one of the most exciting days in my administration," has repeatedly emphasized the new road's importance to the future development of untapped coal reserves in Eastern Kentucky coalfields.

It also is expected to improve greatly the flow and safety of traffic through Floyd, Knott and Perry counties by replacing an old, winding road that has been unable to accommodate growing demands for a more effective means of transportation.

Construction is being financed through a $212 million bond issue made possible when the 1976 General Assembly approved Carroll's recommendation that state-levied coal severance taxes be used to pay off the project. Repayment of that bond issue is expected to take 40 years.

Engineering Made It Happen. Now, A Car With A 110-Inch Wheelbase With A Superb Luxury Car Ride.

Beauty? Yes. Versailles' elegant proportions are impressive from any angle. But more than that, Versailles is also a luxury car that behaves beautifully. Its pleasing road manners were brought about by careful engineering of its body structure, suspension system and, perhaps most strikingly, by the engineering of vital connections within its drive train—the system which transmits motive power from engine to rear wheels. Selected elements of the drive train are precision-balanced with the elements next to them. Each engine is hand-matched to its Select-Shift automatic transmission. The driveshaft, the rear axle, the brake rotors, each wheel and its tire all are matched for balance to help minimize any interior disturbances that may originate in the drive train.

The result is an automobile surprisingly free from vibration; one reason why, on the road, Versailles feels like a much larger car. The quality of its ride is, of course, best evaluated through your personal experience.

Declares War on Abuse Of State Welfare System

In a "declaration of war on those who would abuse our welfare system," state Department for Human Resources Secretary Peter D. Conn announced Monday a crackdown on welfare cheating. The first phase of the crackdown, he said, will be a "major, intensive investigation of welfare fraud in Jefferson county."

Conn said the investigation will be directed by the department's new Office of Inspector General. He announced that the director of the office will be William T. Burkett. The office, organized within the Department for Human Resources (DHR), will consolidate DHR's auditing, licensing and investigative functions.

The welfare crackdown will be statewide but will begin with Jefferson county, Conn explained. The error rate in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program, a leading indicator of possible fraud, was 22.2 per cent in Jefferson county between Jan. 1 and June 30, 1977. The statewide AFDC error rate for that period was 13.2 per cent.

Welfare fraud often is higher in urban areas, Conn said, because of the greater concentration of low-income people, the higher caseload levels per welfare worker and other factors. "Despite all these factors," he said, "the 22.2 per cent error rate is much, much higher than it should be."

Conn added that approximately 200 cases of possible fraud have been identified for investigation in Jefferson county. "On Dec. 1," he announced, "working with the local officials, we will begin to ferret out and bring to justice those who are using improperly the welfare system."

Burkett, 32, has been director of DHR's Division for Licensing and Regulation since 1974. The division licenses public facilities and services throughout the state, including health and social services programs. He holds a Master's Degree in social work. From 1970-1974, he was a visiting professor at Morehead

State University and executive director of the Cave Run Comprehensive Care Center at Morehead.

Conn said the new office of Inspector General will contain three major divisions. Two of them will be made up of existing units: the Audits Branch and the Division for Licensing and Regulations. A third division, the Division for Special Investigations, will contain a staff of trained welfare-fraud investigators.

The current Audits Branch director, Clyde A. Adkins, will head the new Division for Audits. Directors for the other two divisions will be named soon, Conn said.

Conn announced that he and Burkett will be visiting soon with the Inspector General for the U.S. Department of Health Education and Welfare (HEW), to implement HEW's "Project Match" in Kentucky.

"Project Match" is a welfare inspection program that matches names of federal, state and sometimes local government employees with the names of those on welfare rolls, to determine if any government workers are receiving welfare benefits illegally.

The state's office of Inspector General will be working with officials in adjoining states to develop interstate agreements for identifying and prosecuting welfare fraud and with the state Attorney General's office to develop legislation creating stronger penalties for fraud.

Lester Wallen, of Willis, Mich., formerly of Floyd county, was recently promoted to the Detective Bureau of the Washtenaw county Sheriff's Department, Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he has been employed for the past six years as road patrol deputy and in the K-9 Division of the department. He is the son of Less and Jenny Wallen, of Water Gap.

Past Decade Marks Genealogy Upswing

During the past decade genealogical research has been on the upswing throughout the United States, and especially in Kentucky. Both pride and curiosity bring around 500 researchers to the Kentucky Historical Society genealogical library each month, according to Linda Anderson, assistant librarian.

The library staff also receives innumerable telephone calls and an average of 500 letters per month. "Each letter receives an answer, but our staff is too small to give in-depth information," Miss Anderson explained. "We prefer that researchers do their homework by collecting some dates of births, deaths and marriages, and then come to the library. With this basic information, we can guide them in their research and suggest appropriate sources."

What has caused this growing interest and enthusiasm for tracing family histories?

"One reason is that the world is changing and growing at such a rapid pace that many people feel a little lost at times. They are looking for something to hold onto—something that does not change, like their roots," the assistant librarian says. "Genealogical research can be reassuring, especially when one finds that ancestors were people with similar traits, ideas and problems."

During her eight years with the historical society, Miss Anderson has noticed that genealogical research has become a hobby of very young people, even teen-agers and children. "At one time our visitors were primarily older persons, but now genealogical research has an ageless appeal," she commented.

Another interesting observation is that almost half of the library's visitors are from other states, particularly Texas and California. "Perhaps one reason that Californians visit our library is because of the large Mormon population in the state," said Linda. "The Mormon religion requires its followers to trace their family trees."

Besides having relatives in Kentucky, out-of-state visitors are attracted to the library because of its cataloging system and vast collection of resources. "All information in the card catalog is categorized and listed by county," explained Linda. "In addition, to the 50,000 volumes and microfilm section, the library has over 1,200 files of manuscripts." The manuscript section contains letters, diaries, journals and military war records.

According to Linda, one of the diaries is now being prepared for publication. "It is a fascinating account of the experiences of Capt. John W. Tuttle, of Wayne county, who fought in the Union forces during the Civil War," said Linda. "The book will not only be invaluable to Civil War buffs, but to Wayne countians doing research as well."

Individuals with old documents, letters, family bibles or diaries may not want to part with them, but can still help the library expand its manuscript collection. "Any of these items can be microfilmed, usually in one day, by the society's micrographics department and can provide a missing link in someone's family history," Miss Anderson said.

She is available to speak to groups on how to trace family histories and explain what resources are available in the library. She recommends that the beginning researcher use the surname files, card catalog, tax lists and census records on microfilm.

Along with genealogy, she is also knowledgeable about folklore, which she calls, "the oral expression of our thoughts and being passed down through the ages." She belongs to the Kentucky Folklore Society, Tennessee Folklore Society and American Folklore Society.

To schedule Miss Anderson or others from the society staff for speaking engagements, contact the Kentucky Historical Society at (502) 564-3016.

School Board Rejects Bid Of Builder on Bus Garage

A second attempt by the Floyd County Board of Education to get construction started on its central school bus garage at Hite failed last Tuesday when the board rejected the lone bid offered on the project.

The basic bid of $232,720.63 submitted by the P. & M Engineering Co., Martin, was rejected, Supt. of Schools E. P. Grigsby, Jr. said, "simply because we don't have the money to do the job at that price."

Bids by Tom O. McGuire and Akers & Akers were rejected earlier in the month. Plans then were revised in the hope of reducing the cost to a figure within the board's financial reach, and the project was readvertised.

New bids will be asked again later, the superintendent said. Cost of the garage must be paid out of the school system's capital outlay funds.

The board responded to the "crack-down" initiated against the threat of fire in schools and other public buildings by the state fire marshal's office as an aftermath of the Beverly Hills Supper Club tragedy. Every possible measure will be taken to correct safety deficiencies, it was said, monthly fire drills will be held in all schools, and exits and exit routes will be clearly marked. Supt. Grigsby said the number of safety deficiencies in schools was reduced from 400 to 300 last year and that immediate attention will be given to further reduction.

The board extended to Nov. 30 the deadline for all kindergarten and first-grade children to be immunized as required by state law. The extension was made after the two school health nurses administering the program reported that most pupils are now in compliance but that a few remain to be immunized.

On advice of the state auditor that the school system has a sufficient average daily attendance and enough basic units to justify the addition of a third instructional supervisor, Mrs. Roberta Davidson, of Prestonsburg, was employed for that position.

Teachers employed: —Randal Patton, physical education teacher at Prestonsburg Elementary. He fills the vacancy created by the transfer of Sam Eversole, Jr. to Martin Elementary to replace Raymond Griffith who resigned.

—Anna Ruth Thornsbury, teacher at Drift, replacing Judith Gibson who resigned.

—Billie O'Quinn to replace Shirley Stewart who retired at Maytown Elementary.

Resignation of Ann Pafunda as teacher at Prestonsburg High School was accepted.

Certified substitute teachers employed: Rosie Hamilton Brown, Beaver school; Frances Yvonne Hall, Martin; Freda Tackett, McDowell; Shirley Stewart, Maytown.

Four emergency substitute teachers also were hired: Gwendolyn Miller Hall at Martin, Carolyn Ford, Prestonsburg, and Janice Brown, Wheelwright.

Cooks employed: Lula May Slone as replacement at Clark Elementary for Glenna Slone until further notice; Edna Music, part-time at Auxier Elementary;

Arlene Hall, substitute at McDowell; Betty Keathley, at Harold, and Mary Coleman to replace Jo Ann Meade at Harold until January.

Substitute bus drivers hired: Adrian Bentley, Kenneth Berger, Tommy Boyd, Pauline Burchett, Ned Bush, Tommy Cecil, John Clark, David Chaffins, Emma H. Collins, Gary D. Insurance Board Slates Hearings

The Kentucky Insurance Regulatory Board will conduct a series of hearings in mid-December to review present insurance rating standards.

Insurance Commissioner Harold B. McGuffey, board chairman, said the purpose of the hearings is to determine ways of improving rating standards for property and casualty insurance so that the public will be better served. The board has no jurisdiction over life insurance rates.

The hearings will begin at 10 a.m. Dec. 13 in Room G-2 on the ground level of the Capital Plaza Tower in Frankfort and will continue for as many days as necessary, McGuffey said.

"We want to consider if proper standards are being used by the Insurance Regulatory Board in approving rate increases for various lines of insurance," McGuffey explained. "We want to eliminate or avoid excessive, inadequate or unfairly discriminatory rates."

The executive order which created the board last June gave it authority to establish insurance rates. The order also directed the board to make an in-depth study of existing laws and procedures and to determine their effectiveness in regulating insurance companies.

"These hearings will fulfill the board's obligation to make the in-depth study directed in the executive order," said board member Robert Preston, of Lexington.

The hearings are open to the public, including business, professional, trade and labor associations and their members, all insurers authorized to conduct property and casualty insurance business in the state, and all insurance rating and advisory organizations representing property and casualty insurers in making rates for use in Kentucky.

"We will be examining workmen's compensation, homeowners and fire insurance, automobile liability and physical damage insurance," he said.

The board will receive for the record oral testimony and written documents.

Six Fined $500 Each For Illegal Hunting In National Forest

Six men, four from Frenchburg, and two from Dayton, Ohio, were arrested on the Daniel Boone National Forest recently and fined $500 each for illegal hunting.

The six were arrested shortly before midnight October 22 at the Twin Knobs Recreation Area on Cave Run Lake.

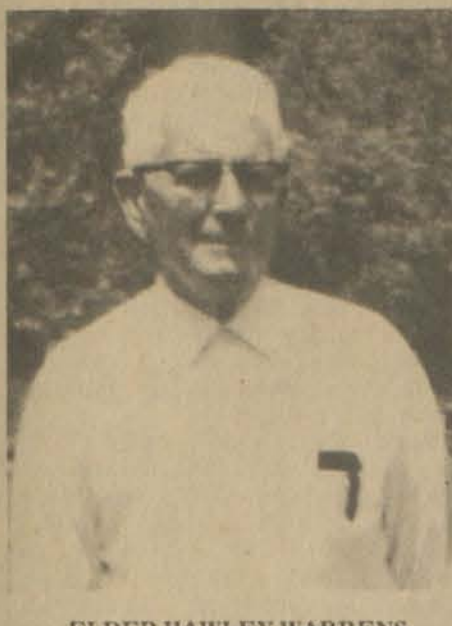

After accepting guilty pleas October 31, Rowan County Judge Otis Caldwell imposed the maximum fines on two brothers, Gearl Nester, 41, of Dayton, and Mearl Nester, 40, of Frenchburg; Thomas G. Pugh, 20, of Dayton; and William Jones, 59, David L. McKenzie, 24, and Roger D. Moore, 30, all of Frenchburg.

Besides paying the fines, the six also lost rifles and other equipment, which were confiscated. The men were cited for jacklighting, casting a ray of light with firearm in possession.

The Twin Knobs campground on the Morehead district of the Daniel Boone National Forest which closed October 31, will be reopened from November 11 through November 15 and from December 2 through December 6 for the convenience of persons taking advantage of the split deer hunting season this year.

Sportsmen are reminded, however, that hunting is not permitted in the area between Kentucky Route 801 and Cave Run Lake from Kentucky Route 826 and the Licking River dam to the Warix Run boat ramp. This includes the Twin Knobs Recreation Area and Scott Creek boat ramp.

OBITUARY

ELDER HAWLEY WARRENS

By request of the family, I will write an obituary of Elder Hawley Warrens. He was born November 28, 1889, at Turkey Creek, Ky. He was the son of Whitt Warrens and Nance Moore Warrens. He deceased this life November 2, 1977, making his stay on earth 88 years. Brother Hawley was married to Caroline Moore and unto this union was born eight children, five boys and three girls. Boys as follows: Hershel Warrens, Prestonsburg, Woodrow, of Wayland, Foster, of Cleveland, Ezra, of Columbus, and Ellis, of Shelby, Ohio. Girls are Dallis Crisp, of Allen, Audrey Slone, Detroit, and Geneva Reviere, of Columbus. Caroline preceded him in death. Later he was married to Mandy Layne who also preceded him in death.

On Sept. 19, 1962, he was married to Dorothy Little Warrens. Brother Hawley's step-children are as follows: stepson, Carlos Little, Huntington, W. Va., Oliver J. Little, of Illinois, Mike Little, of Prestonsburg, Paul Little, of Livonia, Michigan, Larry Jack, of Ashland, Ky. Stepdaughters, Myrtle Dorton, of Hager Hill, Aileen Luxmore, of Hi Hat, Helen Turner, of Fraser, Mich., and Rosemary Reed, of Hi Hat.

Brother Hawley leaves one sister living, Gurvy Warrens Moore. He leaves 32 grandchildren, 48 great-grandchildren and 5 great-great-grandchildren. He was blessed to see five generations. He also leaves many brothers and sisters of the church, a great host of friends and neighbors to mourn his passing.

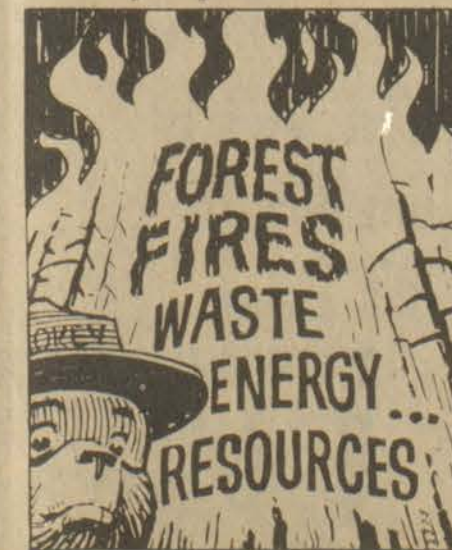

Brother Hawley joined the Old Regular Baptist Church in the year of 1914. He has been a member and a defender of the Baptist Church for 63 years. Brother Hawley was ordained a minister in the year of 1919. For 58 years he went through the heat and the cold to proclaim Salvation is of the Lord. He was a well-gifted man in prayer. Many petitions went up to God in the behalf of all his friends, relations, and children. He was so faithful to his calling and obedient until death. Brother Hawley was the Moderator of the Steel's Creek Church for the last several years.

Brother Hawley was a well loved brother and minister throughout the Regular Baptist Church and elsewhere. He was dearly loved by all who knew him. He lived a humble and consecrated life unto Christ. He will be greatly missed by the many friends and relations, brothers and sisters and most of all by his children and sister Dorothy and her children and also the Steel's Creek Church. As much as we loved Brother Hawley, we had to give him up. We feel that God has seen fit to call him home. We deeply feel that his soul is now at rest in the Paradise of God. For the Bible says therefore now remains a rest to the children of God. I wish to say to the children, dad's prayers have now ceased for you, but I trust you will treasure up the many ones he has prayed in your behalf, and that you will take heed to his teachings. I could go on and on telling the good things about Brother Hawley but time and space won't permit.

We want to thank each and everyone who participated in helping in any way and also for the beautiful flowers that were sent. I will close this obituary by saying, let us sorrow not as others do which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, to them that sleep in Christ will God bring with Him when He comes again. So let us all be ready for that great day of the coming of the Lord. When he shall change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto His most glorious body. Brother Hawley will be laid to rest at the Turner cemetery until the coming of the Lord. My prayers ascend to God in the behalf of all the family and relations of Brother Hawley.

Bureaucratic Gobbledegook Translated by DRH Group

Interpreters usually translate French to German or Spanish to English or Polish to Portuguese. In Kentucky's Department for Human Resources, there are six "interpreters" who translate English into English.

These six people turn the language of "bureaucratic governmentese" into plain-and-simple, American everyman English. And they often turn problems into solutions. They work in the Bureau for Social Insurance complaint review section, a special unit which answers inquiries about welfare programs, medical assistance and unemployment insurance.

The office rules are strictly enforced: no form letters, no unintelligible government jargon and no delays. Mrs. Phyllis Warren, director of the unit, feels that clients appreciate the individual attention and the direct, "plain-language" replies they receive from the unit.

"We receive about 500 letters and 300 phone calls a month," Mrs. Warren said. "Some are complaints, some are questions. We answer every one of them as quickly and as simply as we can." In some cases an inquiry can be answered with a brief letter. But sometimes, "we may have to make 10 phone calls to handle one request."

Inquiries come to the unit from clients directly or through welfare caseworkers across the state. Clients often write to the governor or to their congressmen to complain about welfare eligibility or some other phase of social insurance services. These letters, Mrs. Warren explained, usually are forwarded to her unit.

The unit was established approximately four years ago at the request of social insurance commissioner Gail Huecker.

"It is so important for people to understand what services our bureau can and cannot provide," Mrs. Huecker said. "But the programs are really complex. I work with these services every day—but before this unit began handling the complaint and query letters, I couldn't even understand some of the replies we were sending out."

In addition to responding to complaints, the unit acts as the bureau's "troubleshooter," seeking assistance for people whose problems are not covered by social insurance programs.

"One of the first things we did," related Mrs. Warren, "was to find help for a little girl who had lost an eye in an accident. Her family's medical card would not pay for an artificial eye. So we called the Lion's Club. They provided the help she needed."

Mrs. Warren also told of an elderly woman who needed a specific medication in treatment of a kidney disease. The medication was not on the list of drugs approved for payment by the Medical Assistance Program. She could not afford to pay for the medicine herself, and her physician advised against using a substitute drug. The unit contacted the state chapter of the National Kidney Foundation, which provided the vital medication.

"Our unit has the time to look for these resources and to help people on an individual basis," Mrs. Warren said. The staff members, she added, have backgrounds in several areas of social insurance and social services and "know where to start looking for answers."

Mrs. Warren emphasized the confidentiality of the inquiries and the responses. "If someone writes to ask about a relative's problem with food stamps, for instance, we reply directly to the relative and let the person who wrote to us know that the matter is being taken care of."

The unit investigates anonymous letters about welfare cheating, helps elderly citizens understand and obtain Social Security benefits, and untangles computer mix-ups.

Not all complaints can be settled to the clients' satisfaction. "The answers they get cannot always be the answers they want," said Mrs. Warren. "But I can promise that clients won't get 'the runaround' from this unit. I think they appreciate that."

'Starvation Poles' Are Still in Demand

By GEORGE L. MOORE

Around the turn of the century in the rural counties of Appalachia the farmers had a difficult time of making both ends meet. I have never considered them poverty-stricken as they had plenty of everything except money. They always had food, clothing and shelter. The housewife always dried, canned, and pickled vegetables and fruits to last from one year to the next.

But there was one period of the year, usually in the late fall, when the farmer was in a bind for ready cash. Most of the groceries were obtained by means of barter. Chicken and eggs were taken to the country store and exchanged for salt, sugar, soda, and the like. The man of the house would shell a turn of corn and take it to the grist mill to have it ground into meal for making corn bread and poor-do. Many farmers grew their own wheat and had it converted into flour at the flour mill.

But there had to be additional amount of cash raised than that provided from the sale of farm animal and produce raised on the farm.

The farmer could always rely on making crossties, hand hewn with a broad axe, and selling them to the railroad for cash. In the fall of the year, when you heard the resounding sound of the axe and the short choppy whine of the crosstie saw in the woods, you knew that the farmer was engaged in making crossties. I recall that in Jess Stuart's book "Beyond Dark Hills," he tells about going into the woods, chopping down the trees and hewing 22 crossties in a single day. He commented, "And that is a day's work if you know anything about timber."

Since so many farmers had to rely on crossties for ready cash, they began to jokingly refer to them as starvation poles. In my lifetime nothing has gained more respectability than the lowly crosstie. From less than fifty cents each after the turn of the century, they have reached an all time high of $8.75 at the present time. A tie tree is the king of the forest now. Buyers are scouring the country to find any kind of hardwood that will make a tie.

It would seem that no satisfactory substitute has been found for the wood crosstie. As old-timers made them, there were two people involved. The tree was notched with an axe in order to make it fall in a certain direction; then two men would take a crosstie saw and by a laborious process of pushing and pulling the saw to and fro would cut down the tree. The next step was to score the tree its entire length or as far up as it was big enough to make a tie. A first class tie was 7 x 9 by 8 1/2 feet long. It weighed from three hundred to three hundred and fifty pounds. Some people developed great skill in the use of the broad axe in hewing smooth surface to the sides of the tie. The railroad preferred the hand hewn over those manufactured at the saw mill as they shed water better and did not decay as fast.

Making Life Easier In Wildlife Country

How do you cook fish in a paper bag? Is there more than one way to use a compass while hiking? How do you signal for help? Can you start a fire with eyeglasses? How do you build a blind to get close-up photographs of wildlife?

These and hundreds of other questions of concern to campers, hikers, mountain climbers, skiers, canoeists, and nature photographers are answered in a new 208-page picture book, Wildlife Country: How To Enjoy It, published by the National Wildlife Federation.

These "secrets" of the outdoors, combined with light, modern equipment, have made the enjoyment of nature in the wild much easier for today's outdoors people than it was for their grandparents, the book says. Illustrated with 155 drawings and 285 color photographs—some of them contrasting old and new camping techniques—Wildlife Country includes six "how-to" chapters of recipes, tips, advice, and admonitions.

Geographically, it covers family experience in the outdoors from the Grand Tetons to the Adirondacks and describes ten "great wildlife watching spots" from the Florida Everglades to the Monterey Peninsula.

One of the first secrets of enjoying the outdoors is proper gear. Wildlife Country shows how to select, or make at home, clothing and equipment for all sorts of weather and excursions. It also tells how to care for that equipment both on the trail and at home. It suggests repair kit items to carry along in case a sleeping bag zipper should break or a tent should tear.

Secrets of making an outdoors adventure a family affair are described at first hand by the father of five who, with his wife, took their young—aged nine months to eleven years—on a 40-mile hike into the Grand Canyon. "We've found that kids have far more hiking stamina than we think they do. The trick is to make (the trip) interesting enough for them," he says.

The secret to eating well in the wilds is planning, according to Wildlife Country, which offers 60 trail recipes for everything from "gorp" and "freakies" to baked ham with cheese buns and charcoal grilled pizza.

One of the secrets to relaxing in the outdoors is knowing that you can find your way through a maze of trails or waterways. One chapter of Wildlife Country tells how to read a topographic map and a compass and provides some problems to solve at home to gain confidence before going into the wilderness.

Another secret to relaxing is being prepared for the unexpected, so Wildlife Country provides a brief course in first aid, shows how to recognize weather warning signals, and tells what to do when caught unprepared in all kinds of situations.

The secret to enjoying an outdoors experience over and over again is in good pictures. More than 30 pages on photography tell how to select equipment and take professional pictures of insects, plants and wildlife. Experts tell how to set up a "candid camera" in the midst of nature and how to be prepared for the unexpected "great shot" as well as for unexpected conditions.

What are the other eight best wildlife-watching spots—in addition to the Florida Everglades and the Monterey Peninsula? Wildlife Country lists Bonaventure Island, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; Cape May, New Jersey; the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge in Texas; Carlsbad Caverns National Park in New Mexico; Ramsey Canyon in Arizona's Sonoran Desert; the Platte River in central Nebraska; Colorado's Rocky Mountain National Park; and the Tule Lake in the lower Klamath National Wildlife Refuges along the California-Oregon border.

Boyer Says Energy Costs Could Hit Education Hard

Rising costs of energy could have a "devastating effect on the cost of education in this country," according to Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

Speaking from the United States Office of Education (USOE) in Washington, Boyer said he has watched energy costs in the schools escalate year after year. "The more money we put into energy, the more we are taking out of classrooms and instruction," he said. "We must keep the limited education dollar from being drained away by the escalating costs of energy."

Earlier in the year, the Kentucky Department of Education received a $407,000 grant from the Federal Energy Administration for use in an energy conservation project that will span three and one-half years. The department added a division of energy conservation to its organization.

Boyer pointed out that if President Carter's energy bill is passed, $300 million a year for three years would be allotted to a federal grant program to make schools and hospitals more energy efficient.

USOE is also seeking funding for programs on energy education. Curriculum plans and instructional approaches could then be developed which would make children more energy conscious.

"Children need to be taught increasingly about energy, the limits of energy and the need to economize," Boyer said.

Dwale Man Struck By Car Near Here

Keith (Bucky Calhoun) Elliott, 33, of Dwale, suffered multiple injuries Sunday after being struck by an automobile while walking across the Lancer-South Gap road (KY 3) about three miles south of Prestonsburg.

According to State Trooper Terry Hall who investigated the accident, Elliott, who was walking north along the right-of-way, was struck as he started to cross the road, apparently without looking and into the path of a northbound car driven by Billy J. Justice, of Pike county. Elliott attempted to cross the highway where a church bus was parked, it was said.

Elliott was taken to St. Mary's hospital, Huntington, W. Va., where he is being treated for a broken leg and head lacerations.

Official Praises Mt. Manor Here

Mr. Strong pictured with, from left, (standing)—Eleanor Robinson, administrator; Rita Ramler, director of nursing, and Patsy Evans, activities director. Seated are residents, Julia Holbrook (left) and Maranda Hopson.

Walter Strong, D. D., of Beattyville, Ky., coordinator over 28 counties of Eastern Kentucky, Office of Aging, visited Mountain Manor Nursing Home in Prestonsburg, Monday, October 31. His remarks were, "I'm pleased beyond words with the adequacy of this facility and even more so with the efficiency of the wonderful staff. I am sure there would be no way to improve in the quality of service supervisor Eleanor Robinson and her staff are rendering there.

You may or may not know that before I took the position of Coordinator of Eastern Kentucky, Office of Aging, I was State Senator of District 28 and was chairman of Health and Welfare Committee. That position took me to many parts of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, including Louisville, where I visited many facilities for the aging, including the High Rises of Louisville. But I can honestly say I have never seen a program better implemented or a place better kept than the Mountain Manor Nursing Home of Prestonsburg. The people of Floyd county should be very proud of this wonderful facility."

The first competition she entered was held at Waterford, Michigan, Oct. 23. She received a first-place trophy in special Queen-for-the-Day competition for girls, ages to seven years. The contest was judged on beauty, poise and costume. She also placed first in special beginning fancy best appearing; second in special beginning solo and best appearing majorette overall, and third in beginning solo.

Edon, Ohio was the location of her second competition where she placed first in best appearing fancy majorette and beginning solo twirl. She also received three second-place medals and one for fourth place.

On November 5 Charlotte's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Goble, of Prestonsburg, traveled to Georgetown, Indiana to attend her third competition. Charlotte modeled fall fashions and appeared in twirl and fancy strut competitions to place second in an overall contest for Miss Fall Twirl Queen. She also won second in three and third in three individual competitions. To date, Charlotte has won 12 trophies and six medals.

According to folklore, you can tell how severe a winter is coming by checking how thick a coat woollybear caterpillars grow in the fall. Or, some say, it's the width of the black bands on the caterpillars body—the more black, the colder the winter.

Either way, local weather prognosticators have an abundance of help for making their winter forecasts this fall.

There is an unusually large crop of orange and black caterpillars that you may have seen on walls of buildings, in yards, on sidewalks and crossing roads. They are larvae of the Isabella Moth, more commonly known as Banded Woollybears, seeking a place to overwinter. These larvae will pupate into moths next spring.

Unless you are looking for signs of what kind of winter to expect the caterpillars are more of a nuisance than anything else. But what are the woollybears preparing for? A severe, cold winter like last year, or a milder one that's more like normal for this area?

"Make your own interpretation of whether the caterpillars are putting on a heavier or lighter coat than usual. Or, ask somebody who has observed the winter-weather signs of the caterpillar for a number of years for an opinion of what they mean this fall."

Ward and Kelley, Rawson, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Freed, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Woodford, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Lambert and Heather, Mr. and Mrs. Randy Ward, Shawn and Shannon, Findlay, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Cordle, Kathy and Debby, Bluefield, Va., Robert Mann, Fred B. Mann, Ricky and Ann Mann, Wilton Jct., Iowa, Rev. and Mrs. Larry Mann and Rebecca, Buckingham, Va., Mr. and Mrs. John Milton Caudill, John, Jr. and David Caudill, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Caudill and Edna, Louisa, Mrs. Susan McDaniel, Ashland.

The Kentucky Education Association (KEA) has announced a "Back to Basics" conference for Saturday, November 19 at Louisville's Executive West Motor Hotel.

Sponsored by the KEA Committee on Instruction and Professional Development, the conference seeks to bring together 100 persons representing a broad spectrum of concern for education to formulate a position paper that will express what people mean when they say "back to basics."

Teachers, school administrators, parents, university specialists, legislators, state officials, and special interest groups have been invited to attend or send representatives.

Mrs. June Lee, of Louisville, committee chairwoman, said, "This is an extremely important project for all of us. So many people use the phrase in so many different contexts that we think it is time to sit down and really define it in a way that all views can be represented."

All participants have been asked to file a written statement that can be distributed to others at the conference, set for 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. (EST) at the Executive West's Queen Room.

TALKING ABOUT ALCOHOL

A Public Service Feature Presented by Mountain Comprehensive Care Center

ALCOHOL, MOST-ABUSED DRUG
By A. K. WEBB

Alcoholism has been called many things by many people for countless numbers of years. It is not a new or recent problem but one that goes far back into the history of mankind. We need only read Proverbs 23:29-35, which describes in vivid detail that abusive use of alcohol was quite common even then. It is believed that the Book of Proverbs was written some 1,000 years before Christ.

So the problem has been with us almost since the beginning. But, again, alcoholism is many things to many people. Many mental health clinics call it "symptomatic of other deep-rooted underlying psychological problems." In other words, we learn through habit and repetitious drinking to become alcoholics.

The Fellowship of Alcoholics Anonymous holds the view, generally speaking, that alcoholism is a two-fold disease; a physical addiction coupled with a mental obsession and that the disease cannot be cured but can be arrested to the point where the alcoholic person can live a comfortable, happy, and productive life without the use of the drug, alcohol.

And make no mistake about it—alcohol is a drug. It is not something apart from other drugs such as heroin, barbiturates, amphetamines, etc. It is a drug—and the most-abused drug in Floyd county today. By whatever standards we weigh the drug situation—number of users, abusers, availability, dollar value, death, destruction, and shattered lives—alcohol is number one. We should plainly see that whatever alcoholism is: symptomatic of other problems, learned behavior, moral weakness or disease—it is a problem; a tremendous problem of which many Floyd countians are suffering. They need help because, due to the nature of alcoholism, they need help to help themselves.

Local alcoholism counselors agree that it is a disease. There is something in the alcoholic's makeup that is different from other people. It may be physical, it may be psychological. It may be a combination of both from point A to point B in the alcoholic's life. Point A being the time he or she takes the first drink, usually as a teenager to experiment or due to peer pressure to point B when they cross that invisible line from heavy drinking into alcoholism. This can occur at different ages with different people. Before crossing that line the alcoholic may have had the choice of drinking or not drinking. We don't know. But we do know that once that line is crossed the choice of will is no longer there. The alcoholic now must drink.

This is why the often heard statement, "if he just had will power he could stop drinking", is not valid. That is the whole point. The alcoholic no longer had the choice of will power. He is far beyond that point. He has become powerless over alcohol.

But with proper help and understanding he can come to grips with his problem. First, he must recognize that he has a problem, become aware of exactly what that problem is and then become willing to go to whatever lengths necessary to solve that problem.

For information or help, write or call Front Avenue, Prestonsburg, 1-800-422-1060.

Nobody Knows When Man First Discovered Coal

The exact date of man's discovery of coal has been lost to antiquity, but Kentucky has charted the evolution of its No. 1 industry in the new Kentucky Historical Society Historymobile.

The discovery that a certain black rock would burn probably occurred many times in different parts of the world when early man attempted to build campfires. The Bible noted that Solomon was familiar with coal in what is now Syria, and the Chinese recorded the use of coal 1,100 years before the Christian era. Along with ancient references, there is evidence that the Indians used some coal before the pilgrims came to America. But the first recorded usage was in Virginia in 1702 where a French settler was granted permission to use coal in his blacksmith shop.

Earliest recorded commercial mining was in 1750, from the James River coalfield near Richmond, Va., and the coal was used to make ammunition during the Revolution.

During that same year, Dr. Thomas Walker, a surveyor from Virginia, came to Kentucky to start a settlement and noted in his diary, "We found very good coal." Walker used coal to start his first campfire in Kentucky near the Cumberland Gap in Bell county.

"Although we are not sure about the exact date that coal was first mined and produced for transportation and other uses, research indicates that Kentuckians were becoming interested in coal production as early as 1810," said Tom Gatewood, curator of the new Historymobile. "In 1820 William D. McLean opened what became known later as the 'McLean drift bank,' on the Green river, and this mine is regarded as the first commercial operation in the western coal field.

Gatewood said that statistics are available which show that 328 tons of coal were mined and sold in Kentucky in 1828. By 1830, the volume of coal produced had grown to 2,000 tons, and in 1837, to 10,000 tons. Today Kentucky is the single largest producer of coal in the United States. According to Department for Natural Resources figures; Kentucky produced 142,593,562 tons of coal in 1976.

The coal exhibit is designed to give visitors a historical perspective of the theme, "Kentucky Coal: The Emergence Of An Industry, 1840 to Present." Divided into three stages, the exhibit depicts the small father-son operations which existed from 1840 to 1880; the company owned operations from 1880 to 1940; and the growth of large corporations from 1940 to the present.

"The history of the coal industry in Kentucky has been one of change from a simple pick and shovel operation to mechanized production with widespread impact on the traditionally agrarian culture of the coal bearing communities," said Gatewood. "Their adaptation to the complexities of an industrial age is closely related to the experience of many rapidly industrialized countries in this century."

Despite setbacks like the Depression in the '30s and the post-World War II switch to gas and oil, the organic compound has become the building block of an endless number of materials used in everyday life, Gatewood noted.

Included in the coal exhibit are around 250 photographs, 20 artifacts, models of conventional mining and modern strip mining operations and diorama of an early coal barge. There is also a slide presentation with the comments and voices of old timers and modern miners, along with ballads that were written as coal was industrialized, according to Gatewood.

The new Historymobile has a minimum of script and labeling, but a traveling historian will be available to answer questions and talk about the exhibit. Both the Historymobile on Kentucky's pioneer era and the new one will be available for scheduling next year beginning in March. For more information on the society's Historymobiles, contact Tom Gatewood at (502) 564-3016.

Natural Resources Dept. Collects $66,000 from 12 Coal Companies

The Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection collected $38,000 during October from 10 coal companies for violation of state strip mine regulations and $28,000 from two coal companies for coal-related water quality violations.

The largest penalties were paid by Blue Diamond Coal Co., of Leatherwood, Perry county, which was assessed $25,000 for discharges of black water from its coal preparation plant, and Cairnes Coal Co., of Middlesboro, which paid $18,000 for violations on strip mine violations on four permits held by the company near Davisburgh in Bell county.

Other companies fined were: —S. & J Coal Co., $5,000, of which $3,000 was assessed for not maintaining silt structures and failing to backfill, grade and seed the company's site near Cranks in Harlan county. The company agreed to backfill and establish silt control. A civil penalty of $2,000 was imposed on the company for not maintaining silt control and failing to maintain an access road on the company's site near Shelbyana in Pike county. The company agreed to clean out silt structures and to construct a dike across the access road to prevent material from washing onto a highway adjacent to the site.

—Buckhorn Mining Co., $2,000 for working a site near Buckhorn in Breathitt county prior to certification of silt structures by a registered engineer and using an access road not included in the company's strip mining permit. The company agreed to have silt structures certified and not to haul coal on the unpermitted access road until either a permit is applied for and issued by the department or until a reclamation plan is submitted and approved.

—Mary Beth Coal Co., $2,000 for allowing material from deep mining operations to slide from an access road to the site causing environmental damage to Raccoon Branch near Cinda in Leslie county.

—Ace Mining Co., $2,000 for mining in an area without proper silt control near Beautyville in Lee county. The company agreed to submit silt control plans for approval and have structures certified by a registered engineer.

—Tesoro Coal Co., $2,000 for allowing improper drainage on the company's site near Hoskinston in Leslie county. The company agreed to restore the solid berm (natural barrier of trees rimming strip mining operations) and to direct water drainage to areas where there are silt control structures.

—R & J Coal Co., $2,000 for not following the method of operation outlined in the company's permit application, not maintaining an access road to their operation and stripping on an expired surface mining permit near Shelbyana in Pike county. The company agreed to make corrections to the access road, have silt structures certified and not operate until a permit renewal application is approved by the department.

—Bell County Coal Co., $3,000 for constructing and operating a coal preparation plant in Bell county without an operational or construction permit from the department's Division of Water Quality. The company has since made proper application to the division and will finish the plant in accordance with plans approved by the division.

—Pioneer Coal Corp., $3,000 for not following the method of operation and allowing excessive spoil material over the outcrops of their operation near Volga in Johnson county. The company agreed to remove as much of the spoil as possible and dress down the affected area.

—Watts and Cole Mining Co., $2,000 for excessive spoil over the outcrops of their operation near Cope Fork in Breathitt county. The company agreed to make corrective measures. Cairnes Coal Co. was assessed an $18,000 civil penalty as a result of strip mining outside the area permitted for surface mining, placing spoil in unpermitted areas causing slides and failing to maintain backfilling and grading on two permits held by the company. Penalties were assessed the company on two other permits for not having a registered engineer certify silt control structures and working prior to issuance of a surface mining permit. The company agreed in all instances to make corrective measures.

EMPLOYERS WHO violate the Fair Labor Standards Act's child labor provisions or any regulations under the provisions may be fined up to $1,000 for each violation.

The heat pump.

An energy-saving idea a lot of people are comfortable with. Even Uncle Sam.

The heat pump is a device that heats and cools your home. When it cools, it works like any air conditioner. But when it heats, it works more efficiently than any other electric heating system around. It captures the heat that exists in outside air, even on cold days. As a result, you can heat your home using up to one-third less electricity than other electric heating systems.

This more-for-your-money, energy-saving feature has made the heat pump very popular with a lot of people. Including the federal government, whose energy agencies recommend it over other types of electric heat. Actually, we don't sell heat pumps. But, the way we figure it, every bit of electric energy that can be saved these days helps all of us.

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON

With Kentucky's small game and furbearer seasons opening Nov. 17 (the traditional third Thursday in November) now is an appropriate time to review some of the rules and regulations which, if not understood, sometimes cause hunters to end up on the wrong side of the law.

Kentucky's conservation officers write more citations for hunting without licenses or with improper licenses than for any other infraction. The commonwealth has required resident hunting licenses since 1913, but there are apparently still a lot of slow learners around.

All residents not hunting on their own lands or lands where they reside as tenants must have a license if they are under age 65. Up to age 16, a junior license is available and is issued only with parental approval. Kentucky residents 65 or older should pick up a free card certifying age and residency at any county court clerk's office. Once obtained, this card does not have to be renewed.

The immediate families of landowners and tenants may hunt without licenses on their own or rented lands. But if your second cousin twice removed owns or rents some land out in the country, you'd better have a license before you go hunting there.

Licenses are required for non-residents of any age. Out-of-staters have a choice of a year-round license ($27.50) or a three-day license ($10.00). Nonresidents wanting to hunt deer must purchase the year-round license and, like residents, must also have a $10.50 deer permit.

Once equipped with the proper license, the next step is to ask permission if you are to hunt on private lands. Ignoring this common courtesy is not only illegal, but is also one of the most common reasons for the proliferation of posted signs in rural areas. Only those hunting deer with a .240 caliber or larger rifle need written permits from landowners; oral permission is all that is required by law for other hunters.

Except for raccoon and opossum hunters, who may hunt any time of the day or night, small game hunters must

Mountain Manor News

The past month has been a very busy time at Mountain Manor. The home participated in the Floyd County Fair, with crafts items on display. A number of blue ribbons were won. A group of young people from Fitzpatrick Baptist Mission have begun visiting Mt. Manor each month and have taken special projects to do. Nov. 10 through Nov. 14, the Kentucky Health Care Association Annual meeting was held in Louisville at the Bluegrass Convention Center. The following attended: Eleanor Robinson, administrator; Rita Ramler, director of nurses; Goldia Rorrer, administrative assistant; Patsy Evans, activity director.

The residents participated in an old-time foot-washing. Rev. John Frank Ratliff did the preaching. Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Evans showed slides from their tour of the Land of the Bible, Oct. 30 at the First Church of God. The residents enjoyed a Hallowe'en party, Oct. 31. Refreshments were served. They were entertained by a very clever clown.

The staff also during this month honored Mrs. Robinson with a birthday party. Gifts were presented and refreshments served.

Miss Susan Vaughn Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Martin, of Prestonsburg, has been elected to a post in Transylvania's Student Government Association. Miss Martin holds the office of SGA senator as a result of recent fall elections at the school. She is a junior majoring in biology.

confine their activities to one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset, local prevailing time. Dove and waterfowl hunters work under different shooting hour rules, so be sure to check the complete regulation.

Squirrel hunters can't use breech loading rifles of .240 caliber or larger, but there are few other firearms restrictions on small game hunters, who may use either breech or muzzle-loading rifles, shotguns or handguns (again, check the deer and waterfowl regulations for specific requirements for hunting these species). Small game hunters may use archery equipment, and there are some bow and arrow experts who are quite good small game hunters.

Shotguns must be plugged to hold no more than three shells (two in the magazine and one in the chamber). The only species which may be hunted with unplugged guns is deer, and if you remove your plug for the Nov. 12-14 gun deer season, be sure to put it back in before taking to the woods on the 17th.

Small game hunters cannot legally carry buckshot or slugs in the field while hunting. This regulation was adopted because a few irresponsible individuals couldn't resist taking a little deer ammo along, just in case.

Remember too that all wildlife (with the exceptions of English sparrow, starling, groundhog and gray fox) is protected unless a specific open season is established. All hawks and owls are under the protection of both state and federal laws and may not be taken at any time. So don't take "pot-shots"—know which species are legal and confine yourself to them.

Hall Joins ALC Staff

Adrian Hall, who worked in the Floyd county school system for almost 32 years until his retirement, has joined the Alice Lloyd College admissions staff.

He has worked in the school system as a teacher, supervisor, athletic coach, and, most recently, as guidance counselor.

Hall is a 1939 graduate of McDowell High School, a 1941 graduate of Alice Lloyd College, and holds a bachelor's degree from Morehead State University and a master's from the University of Kentucky. He served four years in the Air Force, and in Europe with the Third Infantry Division during World War II.

At ALC he will work as an admission's counselor.

Annual Fruit Sale
By Catholic School

Our Lady of the Mountains Parent Teachers Organization is now conducting its annual Florida-Indian River citrus fruit sale. The sale is scheduled to run through December 2 with two delivery dates during the first and second weeks of December.

Five kinds of fruits are available in 2-5 or 4-5 bushel sizes. They are pink grapefruit; white grapefruit; Hamlin Oranges; Tangelo oranges; Naval oranges.

The fruit sale is conducted yearly to supplement Our Lady of the Mountain with much-needed additional operational funds for materials and equipment such as the new school bus which the school has recently purchased.

Mrs. Jan Cook, chairman of the citrus sale, said recently, "We have a large number of well satisfied customers from former years. It seems that our efforts to make sure our people get only top quality fruit and our efforts to make sure we deliver on schedule is paying off. We have already had inquiries from old customers and some from new ones. As a result, I expect our sales this year to be significantly greater than last year's."

Anyone wishing to place an order for fruit may do so by calling either Mrs. Barkley Sturgill or Mrs. Ernest Holbrook in the Floyd county area. In Johnson County, call either Mrs. Gary Rubado or Mrs. Wade Burchett.

Martin County Experiment
To Seek Deep Shale Gas

A gas well is scheduled for an experimental treatment in Martin county next Tuesday as part of a program in which Columbia Gas and the federal government are trying to develop economically feasible techniques for freeing gas trapped in dense shale formations.

The test will involve a method known as cryogenic fracturing, in which large amounts of liquefied gases, mixed with sand, are pumped into an underground area at high pressure. The objective is to create new fractures in the shale and extend existing fractures. The sand is intended to prop open the fractures so the gas can flow to the well hole.

The Devonian shale formations that underlie about 100,000 square miles of the Appalachian region are known to contain very large amounts of gas. But the shales, formed from mud deposits some 350 million years ago, are so finely grained that the trapped gas cannot easily move through the formations.

In cooperation with the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration, Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. and Columbia Service Corp. have carried out a number of fracturing tests in the past 16 months in West Virginia, Ohio and Virginia. The experiments will run several more months, after which the results will be evaluated.

The Martin county well is one of two test wells, about six miles apart in the Big Sandy field, that will receive two treatments each in the Columbia-ERDA program.

Floyd Career Soldier Now a Major

IT'S MAJOR BRADDOCK NOW . . . A career soldier from Martin has been promoted, the oak leaves designating the new rank of former Capt. William Robert Braddock affixed to his uniform by his wife Joanne with an assist from Col. Donald W. Reeves.

William R. (Bud) Braddock, son of Bill and Grace Braddock, of Martin, has been promoted to the rank of major in the U.S. Army. Major Braddock, a career soldier, is currently assigned as physical security officer at the sprawling Defense Mapping Agency Topographic Center complex in the Washington, D. C. suburbs.
Major Braddock, whose speciality is military intelligence, is charged with security responsibilities at the facility whose 3,000 Federal employees map the land areas of this plant other than the United States. The center is headquartered at Brookmont, Maryland, edging the nation's capital.
Major Braddock, 35, is a graduate of Martin High School and has a bachelor of science degree in law enforcement and corrections from the University of Nebraska. He was awarded his initial commission, that of a second lieutenant, upon graduating from the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Georgia in 1967 and has taken both the counterintelligence special agent course and the military intelligence officer advanced course at Fort Holabird, Maryland.
Major Braddock saw service in Vietnam and, more recently, in Korea, and his decorations include the Bronze Star, the Joint Services Commendation Medal and the Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster. He has also presented the Staff Honor Medal by the Vietnamese government and wears the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Palm.

The Secret Tax Windfall

Former Director of the Office of Management and Budget James T. Lynn says that the U.S. government "since 1971, has raked in a secret tax windfall of $36 billion. This year alone, it has quietly taken an extra $6 billion out of our paychecks and, by 1980, it will gobble up $40 billion more."
Writing in the November issue of Reader's Digest, Lynn points out that these tax grabs go largely unnoticed by the taxpayer. Raises given to counteract inflation systematically push Americans into higher tax brackets, where they must pay more dollars at a higher percentage than before. "The federal income-tax tables are inflexible, oblivious to inflation," he remarks. "Since the last revision of the tax brackets took place in 1964, the real value of the dollar has been cut almost in half." Thus, for several years American taxpayers have seen their paychecks increase without gaining—and in fact, sometimes losing—any real after-tax income.

At a time when the Carter Administration is moving toward tax reform, Lynn and many major economists believe the most effective reform would be "indexing" the dollar amounts specified in the tax code—exemptions and deductions—to the Consumer Price Index.
If the cost of living goes up ten percent in a given year," Lynn explains, "the indexed tax brackets would be adjusted accordingly by the Internal Revenue Service, and a family whose increase in income merely kept pace with inflation would continue to pay the same tax percentage each year as long as its real income (measured in constant dollars) remained the same."
Indexing is already in practice in Canada, France, West Germany, Brazil and Denmark. It has been a stabilizing influence on their economies.
Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman approves of it not only because it would immunize the income tax from inflation, but because it would "reduce taxation without representation"—higher taxes imposed on the citizenry year after year without legislation.
While the idea of indexing is not new, Congress remains strangely apathetic to the concept. For one thing, it would reduce the government's annual intake and put a serious crimp in big spending. In the past 15 years Congress has been able to double the federal budget without having voted a single permanent tax increase.
Secondly, it would deprive Congress of one of its favorite vote-getting activities: legislating illusory "tax cuts," which never go deep enough to affect real income.
"The public deserves better than tax-cutting charades," Lynn concludes. "Indexing is a simple measure that will redress a subtle but monstrous imposition on the American taxpayer."

Layne's Work in Alcoholism Continues with State Task Force

By A. K. WEBB

The Big Sandy area is a better place because of Frank Layne. The lives of many area alcoholics have been helped by this 72-year-old Prestonsburg native.
The newest outlet in which Layne helps the alcoholic is through his recent appointment to the State Alcohol and Drug Advisory Task Force, a group of citizens selected to advise the alcohol and program branch at the state level. To be chosen, an individual must be open-minded and have some knowledge about the alcohol situation in his or her area, as well as the overall view of alcoholism throughout the state.
Frank Layne knows as much or more about alcoholism than anyone around. A recovering alcoholic, Layne hasn't taken a drink in almost 30 years. But, as he candidly responds, "I drank enough for two lifetimes before quitting!"
Layne says, "Once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic," stressing that alcoholism is a fatal disease which may be controlled but always lurks beneath a sober exterior. "It's deadly for the alcoholic to take the first sip," says Layne, "because he can't stop at the first. He just can't quit at the opening drink."
A major pitfall in the alcoholic's life, according to Layne, is trying to drink with moderation. "A mark distinguishing the problem drinker is that he can't drink a little. It won't satisfy him, so the first drink is that slide into another drunk," says Layne.
It is commendable of Layne that he had the gumption to stop drinking after he was 40 years old. What is most praiseworthy of the man is his utmost concern in strengthening others in their fray with alcoholism. He understands the feeling of not being strong enough totally to resist the urge to drink. In fact, understanding of the alcoholic seems to be one of Frank Layne's biggest assets.
Through the State Department of Health and Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, he has helped develop numerous local programs and services for the alcoholic in Floyd county and surrounding counties. He has 25 years of working experience in treatment for the alcoholic, over half of which were given voluntarily. In 1967, MCCC's alcohol and economic development in Appalachia. The Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) proposals will be presented formally during a January 1978 White House Conference, at which time regional delegations across the country will make known similar packages.

Conference Deals with Coal's Importance to Energy Crisis

Charleston, W. Va.—The importance of Appalachian coal as an answer to the nation's current energy crisis dominated discussions here during the Oct. 27-29 Appalachian Regional Conference on Balanced Growth and Economic Development.

Other ARC proposals that emerged from the conference include: —A recommendation that a national set of regional organizations similar to the ARC be formed. The commissions would include state, local and federal governments and would be coordinated overall at the Presidential level.

—Establishment of state corporations to obtain long-term leases from large, privately-owned land holders for housing developments.

—More emphasis on basic educational programs and less spending on buildings.

—Establishment of hospitals in smaller, fast-developing communities.

—Recommendations that government standards protecting the environment and the public should not be relaxed during the current quest for solutions to the energy crisis "except in an unusual case."

—Wood as an energy resource should receive more attention.

The proposals emerged from five task forces of the conference and were presented during a formal session Saturday, Oct. 29, at which time Gov. Julian M. Carroll noted that Kentucky already has a coal severance tax.

Carroll further stated that the conference has overlooked a major source of energy—the use of grain alcohol from corn for automobiles.

The Governor's Council on Agriculture earlier this month forwarded a resolution to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Robert Bergland urging grain alcohol studies. "Grain alcohol when mixed with gasoline in limited quantities has been proven to provide an adequate fuel for automobiles without alteration to engines and to reduce pollution from exhaust," the resolution noted.

Governors from the 13-state ARC will give further consideration to conference proposals during a December meeting in Washington, D. C.

Geneological Society To Meet in Frankfort

If you are interested in tracing your family tree, get some tips from an expert at the Nov. 14 meeting of the Kentucky Geneological Society. This month's meeting is being sponsored by the Kentucky Historical Society and will feature Noel Currer-Briggs, a geneological and historical research consultant from England, who has worked on President Jimmy Carter's ancestry.

The annual election of officers and general business meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. in the Farmer's Bank building in downtown Frankfort. Following the business meeting, Briggs will lecture at 7:30 p.m. in the Old Capitol.

The public is invited to attend the meeting. For more information, contact Anne McDonnell, librarian at the Kentucky Historical Society, 502-564-3016.

Perkins Urges Aid To Flood Victims

Congressman Carl Perkins last week urged state and federal agencies to assist flood victims in eastern Kentucky to acquire mobile home sites out of the flood plain.

Perkins said he was particularly concerned about families who were provided a mobile home and utility hookup by HUD and anticipated being able to purchase it but have now found that in order to purchase the mobile home they must acquire a site and bear the expense of utility connections and mobile home relocation.

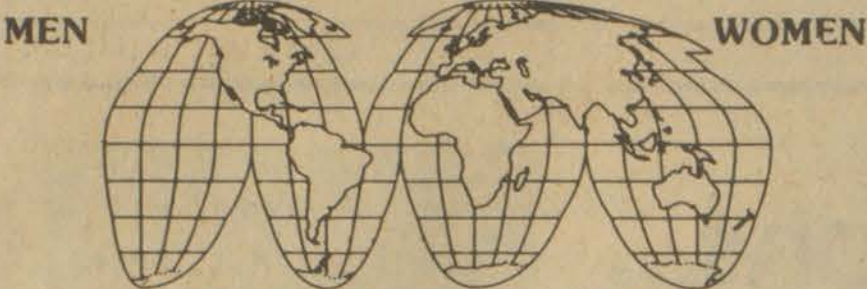

Perkins said that on September 30 the Department of Housing and Urban Development had allocated $5,267,165 for Kentucky to extend additional assistance to victims of the disastrous April 4 flood. Perkins said he would continue to press for additional help to all victims whose needs are not yet met.

MCCC Offers Help to Area Alcoholics

What can the Floyd county alcoholic do if he wants to change his unruly drinking habits?

There are a number of choices. First and foremost, he must realize, then admit to himself, that he does have a drinking problem. He can't drink liquor like other people because alcohol extends a disruptive grasp which he will have a hard time shaking.

He is alcoholic and the struggle against the disease will be difficult. A major start of truthfully facing how alcohol affects you shows a firm beginning.

Now we look for help. Support for the Floyd county alcoholic is available at close range. Alcoholism counseling services, provided by Mountain Comprehensive Care Center and similar health facilities, give guidance to alcohol stricken persons. Local outreach workers, trained in dealing with alcohol problems, work with alcoholics when they ask for help.

The Helpline (toll free 1-800-422-1060) stays on 24-hour telephone duty handling emergency needs. It's free to Floyd countians and offers invaluable information for drinkers who ask for help.

If the problem drinker wants to talk with other alcoholics who are recovering from the drinking disease, he may get involved in Alcoholics Anonymous (A.A.) who hold weekly Saturday night meetings in Prestonsburg. It is possible for Floyd county drinkers to unite and develop their own A.A. group. In essence, it's where people who have been through the war endeavor to aid others in conquering their battles. You help yourself by helping others.

The family of the alcoholic can receive assistance through the same channels. Alcoholics are sick, and their families have been injured in the boozers' lifestyle.

Need counseling? Write Alcohol, Front Avenue, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, 41653, or call 1-800-422-1060.

FULLTIME students may be paid 85 percent of the minimum wage prescribed under the Fair Labor Standards Act for up to 20 hours of work a week during the school year, provided special certificates are obtained by the employer from the U.S. Department of Labor.

He is one of more than 7,000 men taking part in the 13-day exercise, which includes 60 ships and 250 aircraft from the United States and seven North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) nations. Scalf-Simonson Vows Spoken

Miss Sally Jean Scalf, of Miami, Fla., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wallace Scalf, of Harold, Ky., became the bride of Alan Simonson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Simonson, also of Miami, Sunday afternoon, September 18. The double-ring ceremony took place in the Venetian Pool Gardens in Coral Gables, Florida, and was solemnized by the Rev. Charles Mory, of the Presbyterian Church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown and carried a bouquet of red roses. Mrs. Nancy Coates, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and wore a peach Quiana knit gown and carried a bouquet of pink roses with matching streamers.

Mr. Erik Simonson, brother of the groom, served as best man. Robert Preston Coates, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer. Flower girls were Veronica and Vanessa Valone, of Miami. Linda Schaut, of Milwaukee, Wisc., sister of the bride, helped with the guest register.

The mother of the bride attended the wedding in a mint-green gown of interlocking polyester knit with white accessories. Her shoulder corsage was a white double orchid. The groom's mother, Mrs. Kitty Simonson, wore a floor-length multicolor knit gown of pastel colors with matching accessories. Her shoulder corsage was a double white orchid. Receiving guests in line was Mrs. Ellen Eriksten, grandmother of the groom.

The reception was held in the Venetian Pool Garden hall.

The bride is a graduate of Man. W. Va. High School and attended Old Dominion College, Norfolk, Va. She is now a stewardess for National Air Lines, based in Miami. Mr. Simonson attended the University of Florida and is employed by the Dade County (Fla.) school board.

After a two-week honeymoon in Hawaii the couple will live in Coconut Grove, Florida.

Burden on Coal To Prevent Stricter Legislation, Ford Says

Kentucky's coal industry has a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity not only to make a positive contribution toward solving this country's energy problems but also to demonstrate its commitment to civic responsibility in communities across the state, according to U.S. Senator Wendell Ford.

Speaking at the Kentucky Coal Association annual convention Friday (Oct. 28) in Lexington, Ford warned that if the coal industry failed to exercise "foresight and leadership" in all its activities, it could expect more stringent legislation from Congress in the years ahead that could have a negative and far-reaching impact.

"The new surface mining bill, tougher mine safety standards and the multitude of new state and federal environmental restrictions all were drafted in tones aimed at getting the message across that the American people will no longer tolerate reckless disregard for environmental degradation of our land," Ford said. "If the coal industry fails to exercise foresight and leadership, these laws can—probably will—be written in even tougher language in the years ahead."

Ford said he did not want to see that happen.

"I know the importance of this industry to the economic well-being of our state," Ford said. "I also know it has the leadership, the technical and financial expertise, and the resources to exercise the necessary foresight and responsible leadership to meet increased production demands as well as ever-growing civic concerns and responsibilities."

Ford declared that the coal industry needs to take steps to eliminate recurring problems such as road damage from overweight trucks, inadequate reclamation practices, the wanton dumping of overburden down mountainsides, and the indiscriminate disposal of refuse in streams.

To end these situations, Ford suggested creation of an active advisory commission to work on behalf of the state's coal industry in finding new ways to help and better serve those communities of which they are an integral part.

Ford said such a commission, after a sustained dialogue with local officials and community leaders, could then report back on what course of action the Association might want to take.

"Countless ways exist for you to make beneficial and permanent contributions to community betterment," Ford said. "You can be a driving force in encouraging new industry. You can take an active role in promoting industrial diversification. Most importantly, you can share your collective talents to help meet crucial community needs."

Ford told the Association that it would probably be the middle of November before Congress finished action on legislation establishing the nation's first comprehensive energy policy.

Ford said that the eyes of the nation will be on Kentucky, which is the largest coal-producing state in the country.

"Kentucky has the potential to become the Saudi Arabia of the United States," Ford said. "But, where Saudi Arabia has brought this nation to its knees, Kentucky and the coal industry can make this land stand tall again."
