

Oil Spill Hits Floyd Consumers

Corps of Engineers Hauls Drinking Water To Affected Sections

The oil spill in the Big Sandy river which last week contaminated the Pikeville water supply brought a water famine of longer duration in upper Floyd county than it did to Pikeville.

Water service at Pikeville ceased last Tuesday when the upstream oil spill was discovered. Next afternoon, it was briefly back in operation but the plant closed down at 6:30 p.m. when oil again was discovered in the system. But on Thanksgiving Day water service there was at least partially restored, and normal operation followed soon thereafter.

All the area north of Pikeville, however,—including Harold, Betsy Layne, Stanville and the entire Mud Creek section of this county—continued to have its water problems.

Water service was not restored at Betsy Layne and Stanville until Sunday morning, and Monday morning Mud Creek still was without water.

The Floyd county shortage resulted from the fact that the Sandy Valley Water District, which serves all the river section from Coal Run to Mare Creek, buys its water, wholesale, from Pikeville, and receives the water the Pikeville system is able to afford after first serving its own customers. And Mud Creek is in worse straits, since it gets the surplus water left after the Pikeville system has supplied Sandy Valley.

The situation was particularly discouraging, Thanksgiving morning, in several hundred Floyd county homes where holiday dinners were to be cooked, with no water supply.

"The Corps of Engineers was a real blessing to us," Jack Branham, of Betsy Layne, chairman of the Sandy Valley Water District, said. "We contacted County Judge Stumbo, Thanksgiving morning, and by that afternoon Corps of Engineers personnel from Dewey Dam had tankers with water for drinking purposes only, and from the First National Bank parking lot at Betsy Layne the people carried water home in gallon-size milk cartons."

Branham added that that was not all—that the Corps was back again on Friday with more water.

Water quality control officials are still investigating the source of the oil. Elmer Ray, Pikeville water plant superintendent, said the spill apparently originated at the Shelby yards of the C. & O. Railway Company, but this has not been admitted by Chessie officials.

Library Dedication Slated Here Sunday

Dedication of the Floyd County Library at the Emma Wells May Cultural Center at 2 p.m. Sunday will be attended by representatives of the state Department of Libraries, Homer Lee Hall, regional librarian, said this week.

Librarians and library board members of other counties in the area, as well as the public, have been invited to attend.

The dedication will be in honor of the Prestonsburg woman who was for years chairman of the Library Board and under whose leadership the library developed in both facilities and services.

Columbia Gas, Workers Talk Pact Terms; Coal Strike Near

Results of contract talks now under way in Charleston, W. Va. will decide if some 1500 union employees of the Columbia Gas System will continue to work or go on strike at midnight Wednesday.

The negotiations at Charleston are between company representatives and those of two local unions—No. 372, based at Kenova, and No. 1628, in the Charleston-Clendenin area. Company employees in Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio are represented by the locals.

The two-year contract covering work classifications, benefits and the like and the one-year wage contract negotiated a year ago expire at midnight tomorrow (Wednesday).

Meanwhile, both the United Mine Workers and the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association appeared to be resigned to failure of all attempts to reach agreement on a new contract in time to prevent a nationwide soft coal strike at 12:01 a.m., Dec. 6.

The coal strike, it is predicted, will be a long one, but most heavy users of the fuel, including electric power plants, say

New Decorations Added for '77

The Yule season's arrival was marked by the erection, late last week, of Christmas decorations along Prestonsburg streets. The city purchased $1,500 of new decorations for the 1977 season using funds solicited from downtown merchants, and, although $1,050 of that amount has been donated, City Manager Curtis Clark pointed out that some merchants were "holding out." He expressed disappointment in those who have failed to help in the purchase of the decorations which he said "play a big role in attracting visitors to the town."

Jury Begins Deliberating Workman Case Late Tuesday

A jury of four women and eight men began deliberations early Tuesday night which will decide if the slaying of James Chaffins on Arkansas Creek is to remain an unsolved mystery or if Bobby Workman was the slayer.

The case went to trial without the murder weapon or any fingerprints on the automobile of the victim.

Patty Branham identified one of two photos of Chaffins and said he was the man who slashed Workman's arm with a knife, the night of Dec. 27, 1968. She testified that on the night of May 4, 1969, when Chaffins' body was found at the roadside on Arkansas Creek, shot five times, she was in McKenzie's restaurant on KY 80, near the mouth of Arkansas, and that Workman and Mickey Porter later left the restaurant with Chaffins, in Chaffins' car, and drove up Arkansas. Later, she testified, she and Gory Porter, Jr. went up Arkansas and came upon Workman and Mickey Porter standing beside Chaffins' auto but Chaffins was not visible. From there, she claimed, she and Mickey Porter drove back to the restaurant and about an hour and a half later Workman and Gory Porter, Jr. arrived there in Chaffins' car.

The woman's testimony was attacked by the defense, which showed that the fiscal court had offered a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person guilty of the slaying, by inference indicating that her testimony was given in order to collect money.

Mickey Porter testified that he was in a booth at the restaurant with Workman when Chaffins and Gory Porter, Jr. entered and that Workman said, in ef-

Injured Driver Faces Charges As One Killed

Warrants charging reckless driving, eluding a police officer and improper passing were issued over the past week against 18-year-old Terry Rowe, driver of the car in which Edward D. "Papoose" Allen, of Langley, was killed and Rowe himself and two passengers were injured late Thursday night.

The accident, which occurred about a mile north of the Floyd-Knott county line, near Wayland, resulted when Rowe, reportedly traveling at excessive speed, failed to negotiate a sharp curve and plunged over an embankment. Rowe was reportedly being chased by Wayland Policeman Normes Thornsbury.

Allen, 55, was pronounced dead on arrival at McDowell Appalachian Regional hospital. He suffered a broken neck. Ricky Manuel, 18, of Langley, was transferred to Highlands Regional Medical Center where he remains in serious condition, and Rowe was listed in satisfactory condition Monday at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Lexington. Another passenger, Barry Robinson, 19, of Langley, was treated and released from Our Lady of the Way hospital, Martin.

DAFFYNITION
THANKSGIVING FEAST: Gobbler gobble.

TIMES OF THANKSGIVING
Whatever we who eat too much, watch too much football and generally make ourselves useless may say about holidays in defense of ourselves, let's never downgrade Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Both are times for counting our blessings. Somebody has suggested that if we didn't have so many we would do a more accurate job of counting. In any event, they're more than times of feasting and bowing to creature comforts. These are times of reunion. The children come home. The lights may be no brighter but they glow, somehow, just a bit more glowingly. And recollections of those missing, of other occasions such as this abound, and the deeper reasons we have for being thankful to God, family, friends come to mind.

And before I forget, neither has been firmly fixed for a Monday, even if this Christmas will be observed on that day.

Fiscal Court Delays Award Of Span Work

The Floyd fiscal court opened bids for contractors on construction of the bridge connecting the present KY 40 with the Allen recreational complex at a long session Monday but awarding of a contract was deferred till today (Wednesday) at 1:30 p.m. Formal acceptance of a bid was delayed in order for the architect to meet with the court.

Lowest of four bids submitted on the project was $268,719.

The court session was not over till 4 p.m., and almost all the morning session was devoted to hearing of cable TV petitions.

Auxier CableVision won a stay of the recent court order which would have terminated its franchise tomorrow. The delay was voted after the TV system

W'wright Replaces Fire-Ruined Equipment

Fire protection was restored at Wheelwright Tuesday afternoon for the first time since Nov. 21 when the building housing the fire department and city hall there was burned in a series of crime outbreaks.

A new fire truck was due to arrive in Wheelwright during the day. It will be used under lease or purchased, outright, Delbert Davis, chairman of the town's board of trustees, said.

More than 300 Jobs To Be Lost In Plant Closing

The Prestonsburg Shoe Company, operated by the United States Shoe Company, will close its plant next month, officials of the company announced Monday.

The decision was made public after U.S. Shoe officials had conferred with Mayor Harold Cooley and City Manager Curtis Clark.

Work at the plant now in process will be completed toward the end of next month, said the announcement which carried no note of Christmas cheer for the plant's more than 300 employees.

A four-paragraph statement issued by company officials attributed the decision to quit the Prestonsburg plant to "lack of profitability of plant operation and the need to meet competitive requirements."

Prestonsburg's, however, is the only plant owned by U.S. Shoe in Kentucky to be scheduled at this time for closing.

The shoe manufacturing industry is known to be in trouble, nationally, and Bob Stix, vice-president of U.S. Shoe, said it and steel and other industries are having "a difficult time" nationally.

Foreign-made shoes selling in this country at low prices have contributed to industry woes.

"We will do everything in our power to see if some other operation can be attracted to our facility here," Mr. Stix said. Discussions are expected to begin soon with community and state Department of Commerce officials to determine if the plant facilities may be put to other use.

U.S. Shoe began operation of its plant here 11 years ago. Its plant covers an area of approximately 60,000 square feet. Most of the employees facing the December cutoff are women.

May, project director. Funds for the 80-unit, four-story structure are being provided by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Appalachian Regional Commission. Funding of the project was facilitated through the combined efforts of the Church Housing Association, Prestonsburg Housing Authority and other city agencies. Further aid for the complex came last spring when representatives of the Lexington Diocese of the Episcopal Church presented housing officials here with $50,000, part of the bequest of Mrs. Ethel Cheairs, of Winchester.

Chorus To Present "Messiah" Dec. 4th

The Prestonsburg Community chorus will present "The Messiah" Sunday, December 4, at 3:30 p.m. at the Mayo Methodist Church, Paintsville.

Soloists for the performance will be Don Fernandez, tenor; Doug Smith, bass; Dee Dee Kalos, soprano; Garnett Fairchild, soprano. Mary Grace Garland will accompany the chorus and soloists. The performance will be under the direction of Gus Kalos, head of the music department at Prestonsburg Community College.

"The Messiah" was completed by Handel during the 24 days between August 22 and September 14, 1741. It was performed for the first time at a charity concert held at Dublin. The public is invited to attend the program.

Fiscal Courts Cannot Permit Sales on Sunday

Since the "home rule" legislation enacted by the last General Assembly session has been held unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court, fiscal courts are without authority to authorize Sunday sales by retail stores. Asst. Attorney General Charles Runyon said in an opinion given last week.

State law, he said, permits a "legislative body" of a city or county to enact such legislation, but the Supreme Court ruling held that fiscal courts are not legislative bodies, although city councils hold that position under state law.

The Supreme Court, however, has agreed to reconsider its decision on home rule and will hear oral arguments, early in December.

In an other opinion, Runyon outlined the duties of the office of magistrate, beginning next Jan. 2.

Under the judicial amendment to the state constitution, the office no longer will have any judicial functions.

A justice of the peace may exhume a body to determine cause of death under certain circumstances and may solemnize marriages. No fees are provided in the law for the latter function.

Other than those duties, a justice of the peace in a county without the magisterial form of government is "virtually barren of duties, powers and compensation" as concerns the fiscal court, Runyan said.

He said the office, like that of the county surveyor and constable, in counties with a commissioner form of government is like an empty shell.

However, justice of the peace is a constitutional office, and is envisioned by the constitution as a member of fiscal court in counties choosing the magisterial form of government, Runyan said.

GI Home Loans For 1977 High

GI home loans reached levels in Fiscal Year 1977 that haven't been seen in more than two decades, the Veterans Administration reports.

VA received over 711,700 appraisal requests during the year, the third highest in the program's history. Only fiscal years 1955 and 1956 were higher. The FY 1977 total was 13 per cent above the total received a year earlier. A VA appraisal of a house is a first step to applying for a VA guaranteed loan.

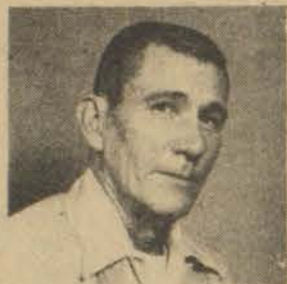

Applications for GI home loans followed the trend for appraisal requests. VA received 457,700 applications in FY 1977, exceeded only by the peak years of 1955 and 1956.

VA loan guaranty officials attribute some of the new business to a 1975 law that eased GI loan eligibility. Prior to Jan. 1, 1975, a veteran who had once used his GI loan eligibility could have it restored only under special circumstances. VA had to be relieved of liability and the property had to have been disposed of for "compelling reasons." Congress removed this restriction, allowing entitlement to be restored if the property has been disposed of and the loan satisfied. As a result, most veterans with service since Sept. 19, 1940, are potentially eligible for a GI loan.

The law also provided the original veteran's liability be removed and eligibility restored for a new loan if another veteran purchases the property and substitutes his VA loan eligibility for that of the seller.

The benefit is available to veterans and active-duty personnel with at least 181 days service. Also eligible are unmarried surviving spouses of these veterans, and spouses of service members listed as missing in action for more than 90 days.

Phone Rate Hearing Ends at Frankfort

The Kentucky Public Service Commission last week concluded its public hearing on South Central Bell Telephone Co.'s rate increase.

The company is seeking a 5.5 per cent overall rate increase that would amount to an increase of its annual income of about $54.2 billion.

Commission Chairman Barkley Sturgill said the commission will render its decision in the case as soon as possible after the first of the year.

Among the material introduced at today's hearing were the signatures of more than 2,000 petitioners asking the commission to deny the proposed rate increase because of the hardships they said would be placed on the aging and handicapped.

The Negative Side

By WILMAY

The two last columns praised the medical profession highly. Those failing to read them should skip this. It gives the other side to help explain mounting criticism of medicine, aside from costs.

"Dr. Berman said, 'Medicine is going down the drain. Too many doctors overcharge, do unnecessary operations, are not caring about patients, turn the telephone off on week-ends and cannot be reached. There are too many doctors more dedicated to the dollar than the patient!'

"Dr. Berman also blasted the American Medical Association as the 'great protector' of doctors for failing to 'clean out the frauds and incompetents,' in the medical profession.

For years other notables have shared this dismal view, more or less, as shown by quotes from covers of Look Magazine, here listed: 2-3-59: A Searing Report on Hospitals Suppressed by Doctors Who Found It 'Too Hot To Handle'.

All of us are human, and have a tendency to be subjective when our own is the target, whether profession, occupation, family, denomination, political party, et cetera. But it is time to be objective when eminent people on the inside speak out as some are doing today in practically all professions, etc. Only victims or loved ones of sufferers from medical negligence or mistakes can appreciate such accounts, regardless of who or what was responsible.

Though numerous complaints are true, many are unfounded. While residing in another state we heard much criticism of the hospital most residents there patronized.

The chief point of current medical articles is that all responsible for the health, recovery and life of people should exercise the utmost caution. Human life is too precious to risk carelessness.

Invitation to Fraud

Floyd county apparently had no abuse of the absentee ballot at the recent general election, since only 3 per cent of the total vote was absentee, but the invitation to vote fraud was there and will stay there till the law is revised.

Some counties are not as clear of fraudulent use of the absentee ballot. Leslie county, where roughly 25 per cent of its 4,000 voters cast their votes as absentees, in an alarming example.

The invitation to fraud is too tempting to be resisted forever. Eventually, the state will have a case of widespread election theft on its hands.

Various county clerks, those charged with issuing the absentee ballots, have expressed concern about the situation. It is time now for legislators to have enough concern to change the law and to safeguard, as far as possible, the integrity of the ballot.

As the law now appears on the statute books, all that is required of a voter to procure an absentee ballot is to state—simply to state, not to swear as was formerly required—that he or she "expects" to be out of his or her voting precinct on election day. The absurdity of such a shadow requirement of law should be obvious.

The list of those entitled to an absentee ballot should be narrowed to include only those too old or too sick to go to the polls and those taken from their precinct by circumstances beyond their control. And the names of every person who has procured an absentee ballot for a given election should be posted at the voting places for all, including election officials and candidates and their supporters, to see.

We differ with those who would make voting easier, and that includes President Carter's proposed voter registration on election day at the polls. We subscribe to the theory that every American of voting age is entitled to a vote, but we also recall that that privilege was not won "the easy way." That being true, we who enjoy this right of suffrage need to be interested enough to take the trouble to register as voters at prescribed times and places and to go to designated places and cast our votes.

All this sketchily portrays the situation faced by Floyd county water customers of the Pikeville system—but the Sandy Valley Water District chairman said Monday that the situation in his district and on Mud Creek is under normal conditions near-critical.

"Under normal circumstances," Mr. Branham said, "water service is down to zero, sometime every day, in 25 per cent of our homes," Mr. Branham said. "Simply because Pikeville doesn't have enough water to serve a fast-growing area after meeting its own needs."

He told of householders rising from bed at midnight, or later, to do the family washing—because it is at that time that water-usage is least and the supply naturally greatest.

And, he said, the "normal" situation promises to become even worse. When developers of a proposed mall in the Coal Run area which will embrace more than 70 shops conferred with Sandy Valley district officials about an adequate water supply they received no assurance in view of the water shortage existing without the addition of other consumers, Branham said.

"We have no quarrel with Pikeville—they're doing all they can with what they have—but this is the sort of thing that discourages development," the water district head commented.

He said a separate water plant adequate to serve the district, including Mud Creek and projected additional industry, is the sensible solution to the problem, and that the district is working toward that end.

Thoughts for the Week

By DR. RICHARD D. HOWARD

- THURSDAY: Only great people can become great. (Put your trade or profession in the blank.)
- FRIDAY: Don't whitewash the pump in an effort to purify the water.
- SATURDAY: You can't pray aright if you're all uptight.
- SUNDAY: Each 60 seconds over 200 babies are born. Only 40 of them will be white. If you love not the black, brown, red, and yellow man, your circle of love is entirely too small and it will choke you to death.
- MONDAY: A man who has not directed his life as a whole toward a definite goal cannot possibly set his particular actions in order.
- TUESDAY: Most of us know how to say nothing, but few of us know when.
- WEDNESDAY: What made us friends in the long ago when first we met? Well, I think I know. The best in me and the best in you hailed each other because they knew that always and always since life began our being friends was part of God's plan. Douglas

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL
(Director of Environmental Studies, Morehead State University)

The honeybee has had its share of troubles lately. Apiculturists, people who keep bees, have recently been concerned about the numbers and kinds of honeybees in the world.

Ward Stanger, a prominent University of California apiculturist, has maintained that there are simply not enough bees to pollinate enough crops. More than 100 different commercial food crops, including some vegetables, fruits, and berries, depend directly upon the honeybee for pollination. In addition, some livestock forage crops, such as alfalfa, must have the honeybee to survive and dozens of other crops, such as soybeans, produce more when bees are present. Some wildflowers, trees, and clovers, not necessarily human food species, but definite assets to mankind, also depend on bees. So despite its 50 million honeybee colonies, the world faces a shortage because of the necessity for more and more pollination for an increasing world food supply.

Recently, there have been several pressures exerted against the honeybee. 1977 was particularly damaging as the worst weather in at least 50 winters killed millions of honeybee colonies worldwide and some apiculturists lost as many as 80 per cent of their hives. Surviving colonies were weakened and their pollination effectiveness was diminished.

Pesticides have been a major problem for bees. Very few colonies are purposely sprayed, but accidental killings have sometimes been very high. For example, California farmers and ranchers killed nearly 90,000 colonies in 1977, but this loss, coupled with natural decimations, has put a strain on the bee population. Chemical fertilizers have also contributed to honeybee problems. Older farming methods dictated the planting of a variety of nectar-producing crops, such owner, Jim Daniels, appeared at the court meeting and promised improved services. Several residents of Auxier and vicinity protested any delay in ending the Daniels franchise, but the court voted to allow him 60 days from Dec. 1 in which to provide service to all the franchise area in the Auxier vicinity. If he fails to provide such service, the court order specified, his franchise will be cancelled. The court also directed that persons in the area who have paid a hookup fee shall not be required to pay another such fee.

A petition signed by more than 200 persons, asking that Boyd Thornsbury be granted the TV franchise in the Melvin-Abner Fork-Hen Pen area was denied. The franchise for the area was previously granted Mike Little.

Also rejected was the petition of Bessie Dingus and Dingus Cable TV for a franchise to serve the Buck's Branch section, near Martin, at a per customer charge of $4 a month. The petition was signed by 51 area residents. Akers Television Service has the franchise in that area.

Everett Akers, head of Akers TV, suggested that the court readvertise all television franchises but added that, if the present franchise system is to stand, he protested the Dingus petition. Akers also told the court that its $5-per-month ceiling on charges per customer fails to recognize increased costs to cable firms of materials and wages.

The Parkway Plaza, proposed shopping center to be located near the US 23-Mountain Parkway interchange at Katy Friend, was granted permission to enter on county right-of-way to install water and sewer connections at the site, and the Bull Creek Water District also received permission to lay water line over and along county road right-of-way.

Other items of business transacted: —Authorized advertising for bids on a new car for the sheriff's department.

—Allowed Ernest Meek to install a drain pipe under the street, near Betsy Layne High School.

—Directed moving of the county-owned backhoe to Allen Branch to clear the branch and widen the road a distance of three feet for a ditchline.

—Directed the county attorney to negotiate with landowners for right-of-way at Meadows Branch, near the mouth of Bull Creek.

Magistrates Kenneth Roberts and Leroy Akers were not present at the meeting.

as clover and other legumes, which were then turned over to build up the soil. The widespread use of chemical fertilizers has decreased the number of these crops and made life harder for the honeybee. The increase in the number of monocultures, or large fields of the same plant species, has also been a detrimental factor because many of these fields offer little nectar for the bee.

The impact most difficult to measure, but perhaps the most detrimental of all, is land conversion. Expanding suburbs, industrial sites, superhighways and shopping centers take land out of production and although some efforts have been made to plant species helpful to honeybees in and near these areas, the net effect has been negative. Concrete does not provide nectar or pollen.

The honeybee does not face extinction, but there is cause for concern.

fect, that he "would get even" with Chaffins.

Rafe Lafferty testified that Mickey Porter told him that he was near enough to be powderburned when Workman shot Chaffins, and an affidavit of Harold Nelson to that effect was entered as evidence.

Lafferty's testimony was attacked by the defense on the grounds used in assailing the statement made by Patty Branham.

Mickey Porter denied that he had made such a statement.

The defendant denied any part in the slaying of Chaffins and said he did not know who cut him at the restaurant prior to the date of Chaffins' death.

Workman testified that he was not at McKinney's, the night of the shooting. He said he was with Gory Porter that night and that they were on Arkansas but that he went directly home from there, spent the night at home with his mother, and knew nothing of the shooting till later.

Former State Police Detective Chester D. Potter testified that he thought robbery was the motive for the Chaffins slaying and told of the discovery of bags from the Chaffins car on Middle Creek. He also told of the late Alka Davis telling him of meeting a man coming from the hill where the bags were found.

The Commonwealth showed that there were two $20 bills on Chaffins' person when he was found.

Mickey Porter, who was crippled by electrocution after the Chaffins slaying, was brought here by ambulance to testify. His brother, Gory Porter, Jr., could not be located by the Commonwealth.

Gory Porter, Jr. was named in the murder indictment with Workman, but the charge against him later was dismissed on the grounds that evidence was insufficient to convict.

The trial of Edd Hall, Jr., accused of the slaying of Larry Spencer, is docketed for Thursday. It is the last criminal trial expected to be heard here till the January court term.

Says Children Share

Attitude Toward Nature

What do Appalachians and Japanese have in common? For one thing, a similar attitude towards nature, according to Dr. Joe Flory, chairman of the English Department at Lees Junior College.

Flory, who taught three years in Japan, spoke at a meeting of English teachers from mountain colleges held November 12 at Pikeville College.

Like Appalachian children, Flory stated, Japanese children learn many of their values from close association with nature. This closeness encourages children to appreciate natural beauty and "to reflect on their own lives in relation to natural cycles."

Such contemplation creates, in turn, "an inner peace or tranquility."

Another speaker at the meeting was Dr. Harold Branham, chairman of Pikeville College's department of languages and religion. He explained the English proficiency examination that students in freshman composition must pass at his school.

Other topics discussed at the meeting were the use of motives in English classes and the thriving literary culture of contemporary Appalachia.

Martin Co. Jury Says Voting Violations in the Hundreds

A special grand jury investigating widespread vote-buying in Martin county at the Nov. 8 election reported Monday: "The law was broken in hundreds of different cases in the past election."

But nobody was indicted. The jury noted, however, that those involved "have been put on notice that this type of activity will not be tolerated in the future."

Homer F. Marcum, editor of The Martin Countian, who editorially urged action on suspected election fraud, said in last week's edition that he proposes to publish the names of every person who asked assistance in voting and also the names of all who gave such assistance.

The grand jury reported that 10 per cent of the approximately 4,000 who voted sought assistance in the operation of the voting machines and that this was taken as an indication that vote-buying was a common practice.

Most of the 414 Martin county voters who were helped had illegally claimed they didn't understand how to operate the voting machine, the jury reported.

"Excuses such as 'cannot operate machine' . . . obviously constitute a pattern of vote buying which would appear to provide a much simpler and easier method of buying votes than the old chain ballot, which voting machines attempted to displace," the report said.

"A candidate or a campaign worker . . . can purchase and make sure his vote is delivered by taking the voter in and voting him the way he is paid and then paying him off when they are outside," the report said.

The grand jury made two recommendations for the next election:

—Representatives from the attorney general's office should monitor precincts where large numbers of voters sought assistance.

—Any future violations should be prosecuted by the commonwealth's attorney.

Paul Deaton, Martin county commonwealth's attorney who worked with the grand jury, said he was pleased with the report, even though there were no indictments.

Deaton said, "This type of thing has gone on for years, and no one has said anything about it. So we wanted to give these people notice that they wouldn't be able to get away with it any more. We called several people before the grand jury, and they know that we're aware of what's gone on."

"If the names come up again, we will prosecute," he said.

Martin County political observers agreed that Deaton's aggressive attitude played a big part in forming the report. Deaton was sworn in as commonwealth's attorney for Martin, Johnson and Lawrence counties Nov. 14, the day the grand jury was empaneled.

Deaton said that a post-election editorial in the newspaper, The Martin Countian, demanding an investigation of voting practices, also helped bring the report about.

"And we had a courageous, bright grand jury," he said. "They were willing to investigate something that has gone on for probably 100 years. They live in the county and that's hard. A lot of people were saying, 'They've always bought votes. Why start investigating now?'"

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON

We all know why a turkey is the traditional Thanksgiving main course. The Pilgrims, back at the first Thanksgiving, served turkey, so we've been doing it ever since.

But did you ever wonder why a turkey was the featured item on that first Thanksgiving menu? Very likely, because it was really available—some pilgrim father just opened his cabin door and shot one in his garden.

But that situation didn't last long. The wild turkey, a bird once seriously considered for our national emblem, could not tolerate the influx of settlers, the clearing of the forests and the rise of towns and villages. With wholesale habitat destruction and unregulated hunting, this magnificent bird virtually disappeared from the eastern half of this country, and by 1900 most naturalists believed that the wild turkey was doomed to extinction.

But the 20th century, while it ushered the whole new set of environmental problems, also saw the rise of sportsman-financed fish and wildlife agencies on both state and federal levels, the development of modern, scientific wildlife management and the return of the wild turkey, along with several other species which, if there had been endangered species lists 100 years ago, would surely have been included.

While flocks of wild turkeys will never roam the countryside in the numbers they once did, the progress in restoring this fine game and table bird to huntable numbers has been gratifying. One of the largest drawbacks to these restoration efforts is finding areas of proper habitat. Turkeys seem to require rather extensive tracts of unhabited forests and they are rather intolerant of human intrusion.

Another problem is that pen-reared turkeys are poorly equipped to cope with the wilds, as years of experimental stockings (with very poor results) of artificially raised birds have proven. The current, more successful technique is to live-trap wildbirds, then transport them as quickly as possible to the release site and turn them loose.

The only known native flock of wild turkeys in Kentucky is in Land Between the Lakes in the western part of the commonwealth. These birds, with some additions from other states, have formed the nucleus of flocks in several portions of the Daniel Boone National Forest in eastern Kentucky and, more recently, in several counties in west and west central Kentucky.

Wildlife biologists estimate that there are now about 2,200 turkeys in the state, up from an estimated population of 1,600 two years ago. With a new project now underway, biologists hope to learn more about the survival, movements and habits of wild turkeys by tracking them with radio telemetry equipment.

In addition, other areas of the state will be investigated to see if they contain suitable turkey habits. When good habitat is found, biologists will attempt to establish turkey flocks there. In a large measure, the success of these projects will depend upon the cooperation of the citizens of the areas where the birds are stocked.

With support and cooperation, we can have wild turkeys in Kentucky. Although we will probably never be able to count on harvesting one on Thanksgiving morning for an evening feast, we should, in a few years, see a marked upturn in turkey populations, along with increased hunting opportunities for this most wary of big game birds.

Consumer Comments

By ROBERT F. STEPHENS (Attorney General)

The Christmas season is a time for giving to others. Charitable organizations will be making their appeals for funds during this upcoming holiday season, and will hope that you will be filled with the Christmas Spirit and donate to their worthy causes. Last year alone, over $29 million was given to charities in the United States.

However, this fund-raising season can also bring imposters. These persons collect monies for organizations that do not exist, or are claiming to be a member of a local organization when they really are not a member. Therefore, consumers should be cautious before making contributions to charitable organizations this holiday season.

If a solicitor comes to your door collecting money for a local organization, ask the person for identification and the name of the group and the sponsor who has the fund raising project. Then call that organization, your local community service organizations or the nearest Better Business Bureau to check out the charity's reputation before you make a donation. You can mail a contribution directly to the charity if you decide you want to participate. Should you discover that the solicitor is an imposter or is collecting money without the organization's permission, then contact your local police department and report the imposter.

A great deal of fund-raising from out-of-state organizations takes place through the mail. If you receive literature from a charity asking for money, examine the materials closely to see how your donation will be spent. Check out the reputation of these organizations by writing the National Information Bureau, a non-profit organization that has established ratings for fund-raising organizations based upon examinations of their solicitation practices, management of funds, and yearly audits. The National Information Bureau can provide you with a booklet entitled "Wise Giving Guide" that will detail their evaluations of three hundred (300) charities. Request the book by writing 419 Park Avenue South, New York, New York 10016.

The Philanthropic Advisory Service of the Council of Better Business Bureaus also keeps records on over eight thousand (8,000) charitable organizations. If you write their headquarters at 1150 17th Street N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036, they will provide you free of charge with up to three reports on specific charities.

NOT THE SAME MAN

The Bernis Spears listed in the arrests column of the November 9 issue of The Times is not the Bernis Spears who resides on Toler Creek.

If you have a question concerning a charitable organization and need assistance in locating information about the fund-raising group, contact the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. Our office has found it can most effectively deal with written complaints and encourages you to write if you have a consumer complaint. However, if you have an emergency situation, call the toll-free consumer hotline which is 1-800-372-2960.

Severance Tax Funds Move Slowly to Counties' Benefit

More than $10 million of the $37.4 million the coal-producing counties of the state were to receive under the old 1974 two-year severance tax program remains unspent and still in state hands, a recent review of the revenue sharing program shows.

Floyd county's allocation for the two years, with interest accrued while it remained unspent, was $1,510,123, and all of this except $300,607 has been dispersed, according to this source.

Rowan county with an allotment of $120 was the only county in the group to have received all its funds.

Time-consuming steps which must be followed before the state may disburse the money to the counties is given by state officials as part of the reason why the $11 million remains unspent.

But these officials also cite instances where projects have been approved by the legislative committee, but the counties haven't acted on them.

The latest available breakdown on the projects approved by the six-man legislative panel shows roads and bridges led the projects funded in terms of money and the number of projects approved.

A grand summary provided by the state Department for Local Government (DLG) shows 249 projects totaling $14.8 million were approved under a category classified as "other." (DLG officials say most of that money is for road and bridge projects).

The summary revealed that $9.3 million in funds was recommended for 203 projects involving acquisition and/or development of recreational facilities; $7.4 million for 111 supportive projects relating to the acquisition and/or development of industrial sites) $3.3 million for 22 projects of industrial site acquisition and/or development and one $75,000 project for drainage control and land reclamation.

Asked why $11 million of the funds has not been dispersed yet, state officials who administer the program cited a number of reasons, mostly relating to the time-consuming approval process and inaction by the counties.

First, the nature of the program required a one-year lag.

The 1974 law, nicknamed the "mountain amendment," provided that the coal counties receive one-half of the severance tax revenues above budget estimates for the 1973-'74 and 1974-'75 fiscal years. This amounted to $6.2 million and $27.3 million respectively.

The fiscal year ends June 30, so the calculations couldn't be completed until the summers of 1974 and 1975.

But the allocations, these officials explain, are just the initial step before funds are disbursed.

Each coal-producing county must determine how it wants to spend the money and then must submit project applications.

Next, the legislative committee must review the projects to see if they meet the law's intent and recommend to Finance and Administration Secretary Russell McClure that he give his final approval. The committee has little power except to delay projects not considered appropriate for funding.

Only after the committee gives its okay may the counties advertise the projects for bids. And only after the bidding is completed does DLG recommend to McClure whether to approve disbursement of the money.

The state distributes the money directly to the vendors. The money is not sent to the county governments.

Counties may switch funds not yet distributed for other projects, but in such a case, they must submit the new projects for review by the legislative panel.

The original severance tax program was replaced for the 1976-78 biennium with Gov. Julian M. Carroll's severance tax package—a complex system of revenue sharing with state restrictions and controls governing the uses which may be made of the money.

The package approved by the 1976 legislature also included funds for the reconstruction of Ky. 80 in Eastern Kentucky.

Paintsville Company Receives Permission To Erect Antenna

The Kentucky Airport Zoning Commission (KAZC) approved 21 construction projects during the Commission's bi-monthly meeting in Frankfort, Nov. 16.

All but one of the construction applications were approved as presented to the commission. The exception was Christian Broadcasting Association's proposal to build a 319 foot antenna near Versailles. The KAZC would only approve a 279-foot construction.

The KAZC has statutory responsibility to regulate the height of any structure which might intrude dangerously into Kentucky's navigational air space.

Among the projects approved was a 419-foot antenna tower to be erected by the Paintsville Broadcasting Co., Inc., near Combs Airport.

Tax on Unmined Coal Seen Five Years Away

By MIKE WINERIP
(In The Courier-Journal)

Hazard, Ky.—A new state program that would make coal-producing counties less dependent on severance tax revenue is five years from full implementation, a state official says.

The 1976 General Assembly, in an attempt to get more property tax money for the coal counties, assigned the problem of assessing unmined coal to the state.

Property taxes traditionally have been the backbone of local government and school budgets.

Before the 1976 legislature, counties had handled the assessments.

But because it was very complicated to estimate the worth of unmined coal, and because many officials did not want to lose favor with coal interests, the coal property often was underassessed greatly, according to Tarleton Rogers, director of the state's general property tax division.

Rogers' office was given the assignment of assessing all coal property in the state by the start of this year. But it won't be able to complete the program for at least five years, Rogers said.

Several problems have plagued the statewide effort, he said.

All the maps identifying the coal seams have not been completed.

And the division was badly underfunded by the 1976 legislature, Rogers said, adding that he has only four people working full time on the assessing.

Also, because salaries are so low, Rogers said, he is not able to attract and hold geologists and engineers.

As a result, the best Rogers' office could do was to mail out questionnaires to coal owners, asking them how extensive their coal reserves are.

About 35 per cent responded. Using this as a basis, the state reassessed property upward and anticipates generating an additional $500,000 to $600,000 in coal property tax revenues this year, Rogers said.

It is a very modest amount, he said, especially compared with West Virginia's effort.

The West Virginia state tax department began its coal assessment program in 1970. When it is completed in two years, state officials expect to collect an additional $27 million in property tax revenues.

Last year, West Virginia assessed coal values in Wyoming county, the first of the 44 coal counties handled.

In that county, the state added about $45 million worth of property to the tax rolls. About $600,000 in new revenues was generated—about the same that was added for all of Kentucky last year—according to John R. Melton, director of West Virginia's local government relations division.

Melton said the state's calculations—based on seam thickness, heat content and outcrop information—actually were conservative.

The West Virginia Geological Survey and the Keystone Coal Industry Manual figure 1,724.4 tons of coal per acre-foot (an area of one acre by one foot deep). The state used a 1,500-ton figure.

Most coal land was valued between $200 and $270 an acre, Melton said. Previously, it had been assessed at between $5 and $10.

While the West Virginia program drew some protest from coal interests, it was less than would have been expected, Melton said, despite the influence of the industry in the county. Coal accounts for two-thirds of the jobs in Wyoming County and 80 per cent of total income.

C.B. Club News

By HOMER DOBSON

This year, as in previous years, helping the needy children at Christmas time is a project of the Right Beaver C. B. Club.

The Right Beaver R.E.A.C.T. and the Right Beaver C.B. Club are sponsoring this project and have combined efforts to raise funds to finance it.

Working faithfully on the project have been "Ky. Varmit" (Clero Williams), "Red Pick-Up" (Marion Huff), "Little Red" (Arbie Layne), "Widow Maker" (Eugene Stamper), and other members of the club and R.E.A.C.T.

Auctions were held Oct. 5 and Nov. 3 at the Hippo Barbain House and another auction is planned for Dec. 5 at Dorothy's Auction House at Clear Creek.

A Country Music Show was sponsored by the club and R.E.A.C.T., Nov. 26, at the old gymnasium at Pippa Passes. Proceeds from this show and proceeds from the auctions will go toward buying presents and baskets of fruit for needy children of the area, this Christmas.

The Right Beaver C. B. Club and the Right Beaver R.E.A.C.T. wishes to thank each and every one that helped make this project a success.

We would like to especially thank those who donated to the auctions, the people who bought from the auctions, the groups and individual performers that volunteered this time to the Country Music Show and the people that come to see the show.

Our deepest sympathy and condolences goes out to "Lightening Rod" whose wife "Weeping Willow" passed away Nov. 15.

By LARRY BURKE.

"Out of every inconvenience comes something worthwhile." Now, the above is a pretty broad statement, and I'm sure that all of us have had our doubts about its truth.

However, there are some people who have the attitude that good will come from bad—that pain is a forerunner of glory—and every cloud has a silver lining. These are, without question, the finest people who ever lived. If there is anything important to our world today—it is people who have an optimistic outlook.

Many years ago in Dalton, Georgia there was a poet who wrote these words:

"It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining daffodils.
With every dimpled drop I see,
Wild flowers on the hills."

Robert Loveman saw something good in everything. Maybe we should all look forward to the wild flowers beyond the gloomy rainy days.

Reminiscence of Years Past

Roxie and Charlie Horton, who were married 50 years ago by the Rev. Linzie Moseley on a day in late autumn, 1927, this week sent along some reminiscences of the past years.

Of their first home on Shop Fork near Wayland, "The rent was $13 per month and the electricity was $2.58."

Their first son, Clyde Oscar, was born here, delivered at home by Dr. M. V. Wicker. The next child born was Claude. They were now living on Stephen's Branch. "Charlie walked in the snow from there to Martin to get the doctor."

After this, the mine shut down. Charlie and Roxie moved back to Wayland where their first daughter, Sharlene, was born. "She was delivered at home by a midwife who cost the couple five hens and a rooster." Another daughter, Mary was also born at Wayland. "She cost $7 or $8 for the house call."

Their next child was Carl, born on a Saturday night. Then was born Franklin Delano, delivered at home by Dr. Donahue. He was named after the famous president who was then in office. The next son born was John Garner, always called Bobby, because his mother said she never had a chance to name any of her children and wanted a son named Bobby. Mr. Horton also recalls how Bobby got his given name. The doctor called out and asked him what he wanted to name his new son. He replied, "John Garner Roosevelt Dillinger after the three biggest men in the country."

Their last child was Manda Ella, named after both her grandmothers. Mr. and Mrs. Horton moved from the Wayland area to Nolan, W. Va., where he worked in the mines for a year.

At about this time, Mr. Horton decided he didn't want his children to grow up in the mines. It was war time, and he signed up in 1943 with the Navy shipyard in Norfolk, Va., after settling with his family in Alexander Park. He worked here for three years until he suffered a broken back and spent almost a year in the hospital. After he had recuperated he joined the Merchant Marine in 1950 from which he retired in 1970.

Mr. and Mrs. Horton are now both 72. Mrs. Horton is an active gardener and is able to fish all night. Mr. Horton, who reports that he was a miner for 30 years, adds in a note about their children, "Thank the good Lord all are living and in good health, and home for the first time in 28 years."

AMBASSADOR BUNKER TO SPEAK IN LOUISVILLE, LEXINGTON

Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker will speak to a group of Kentucky businessmen in Louisville next month as part of a White House campaign to win public support for the Panama Canal treaties.

The Louisville and Kentucky Chambers of Commerce and Gov. Julian Carroll have invited 900 business executives and several government officials to hear Bunker, the chief negotiator of the pacts, at a luncheon briefing Dec. 5 at the Commonwealth Contention Center.

Gene Preston, a state department official, said Bunker will appear the next day at a similar event sponsored by the Lexington Kiwanis Club.

Leonard T. Kernan, coordinator of the Louisville appearance, said the "idea is to hear an explanation of the Panama Canal treaties from someone who helped draft them."

In the Public Trust

By George Atkins, State Auditor of Public Accounts

THE TAXPAYERS HAVE A RIGHT TO KNOW

Our office has recently concluded a study of the system for auditing state government. As a result of our review we have released a program, coupled with our budget request for the next biennium, which will guarantee the people of Kentucky a complete annual audit of the expenditures of state government at no added cost to the taxpayer.

Our review showed the job of auditing state government's expenditure of tax dollars is not being done.

Each year in the Commonwealth of Kentucky over five hundred million dollars of the taxpayers' money is going unaudited.

The state cannot produce an annual audit report of its consolidated financial statements.

There are tens of millions of dollars worth of capital construction projects that have never been audited by an independent auditor.

The federal revenue sharing trust fund for the Commonwealth of Kentucky has not had an independent audit since its inception in 1972.

State agencies are currently being audited by the department of finance which does not meet the independence requirements of state law or federal guidelines for audits.

The law clearly requires annual independent audits of the accounts of all state agencies yet our office and CPAs hired under personal service contracts are together providing only audit coverage for fifty per cent of the state's expenditures.

We feel that complete auditing of all state agencies, boards and commissions could be accomplished at no extra charge to the taxpayers if the funds and personnel now earmarked for internal auditing in the state department of finance were shifted to the state auditor's office, and if many of the personal service contracts to CPA firms were eliminated.

The problem is not one of inadequate funding for auditing. The state is already spending enough money to provide 100 per cent audit coverage. It is the system, where and how it is being spent that is the problem.

The finance department's auditing of state agencies does not meet requirements for independence. Their auditing state government is like the fox guarding the henhouse.

It makes sense for our office to audit state government. We are independent. I was elected by the people and we are required by law to do the job. I ran for office on a platform of 'it's the taxpayers' money and the people have a right to know.' We have spent the first two years strengthening our audit system for county governments and we have been able to guarantee an annual audit in every Kentucky county, with a standard procedure to assure accountability.

In the two years that remain in my term, I want to see the function for auditing state agencies strengthened to insure all state government is audited annually. This will take proper financing, but we are not talking about new money. We are talking about a readjustment of present audit expenditures and new priorities.

We are talking about being in total compliance with the law. We are talking about annual independent reports on the state's financial condition so the people of Kentucky will know for sure where their tax dollars are going.

GEORGE L. ATKINS STATE AUDITOR

Traffic Mishaps Claim Three, One In Floyd County

At least three persons including one in this county, died Thanksgiving week-end in separate traffic accidents around Kentucky pushing the state toll for the year to 853 fatalities, 68 more deaths than recorded by State Police through a similar period last year.

Thirteen persons died over the same holiday week-end last year and 13 also died during the Thanksgiving week-end of 1975.

State Police said a traffic accident on Kentucky 15 in Wolfe county, near Campton, Thursday left two hunters hospitalized and a motorist arrested for leaving the scene.

Police said the two pedestrians, who had been coon hunting, were in process of loading their dog in their parked vehicle when a car, driven by Silas Noble, of Knott county, ran over both men and their dog. They said the motorist was later arrested by troopers in Knott county.

The victims were identified as Donald Noble and Fred Babb, both of Ervine. Babb, brother of State Police Lt. Col. Lewis Babb, who works in Frankfort, was placed in the intensive care unit of St. Joe Hospital, in Lexington, with severe head injuries. Noble was admitted to the University of Kentucky Medical Center with head and stomach injuries.

A traffic accident in Lawrence county early Thursday killed Jerry B. Adkins, 18, of Louisa. Police said his auto collided with another vehicle on U.S. 13, south of Louisa.

Edward D. Allen, 54, of Langley, was killed late Wednesday night when his car ran off a road near the Knott county line.

Marshall W. Boone, 23, of Lebanon, was injured fatally before dawn Thursday when his out of control auto veered off Kentucky 55 in Marion County, north of Lebanon.

Mr. Coleman also related some of his own as well as those of fellow amateurs' experiences during the April 1977 flood while operating their amateur radio stations.

Program from Lincoln Box Among Mrs. Combs' Gifts

A blood-stained theatre program, or bill, from the Presidential box occupied by Abraham Lincoln on the night of his assassination at Ford's Theatre, Washington, D. C., was among the Lincoln memorabilia recently presented by Mrs. Stanley A. Combs, of Prestonsburg, (left) to the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Receiving the program on behalf of the state, with original Lincoln letters and other items, was Mrs. Louie B. Nunn, who led the renovation of the Mary Todd Lincoln home in Lexington to become the only national shrine to a woman.

The letter and other memorabilia presented by the Prestonsburg woman from her collection of Lincolnia will be on display in a room above the room occupied by the martyred President and Mrs. Lincoln when they were guests at the home of her father, Robert Todd. Bloodstains are clearly visible on the old theatre program, but the blood is not Lincoln's, Mrs. Combs says. The program was picked up from the Presidential box by an actor, Tom Eyck, whose wife later gave it to Mrs. Combs' father, Lincoln's wound bled little, and the blood on the program is said to be that of Major Rathbone, Lincoln's guest at the theatre, who grappled with the assassin, John Wilkes Booth, as Booth dropped his derringer and transferred his dagger to his right hand. Tom Eyck, who was hovering in a stage wing, entered the box and retrieved the program, it is recounted.

The connection of the theatre bill with the assassination has been authenticated, and the Louis A. Warren Lincoln Library and Museum at Fort Wayne, Inc. terms the play bill "a rare gift, indeed."

Mrs. Combs' great-grandfather, David Allen Smith, shared in 40 law cases with Lincoln, and she and her father continued that early family association by collecting a library on Lincoln—all of which are now a part of the Mary Todd Lincoln home.

Address by Melvin To Conclude Study

By A. K. WEBB

(Public Information Specialist)

Ending the four-week study on alcohol at Pikeville College Tuesday, December 6, at 7 p.m., Jim Melvin, Alcohol Program Treatment coordinator at Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, will speak on prevention and behavioral aspects of alcoholism from a professional counselor's viewpoint.

With more than five years of working with alcoholics, Melvin is somewhat of an expert in dealing with the problem drinkers in the Big Sandy area.

He adheres to the philosophy that alcoholism is a treatable disease, believing that a man who has been a heavy drinker for any length of time can arrest or decrease the severity of his drinking situation with help.

"As a counselor, I measure success individually. If a client has decreased the amount of his drinking to one drink a week when he used to be an every nighter, I'm encouraged with the improvement," explained Melvin.

"Working in alcoholism gets depressing at times because immediate breakthroughs are seldom seen," added Melvin. "It could take years of intervention before a client even cuts down on his drinking."

"Basically, our job is to let problem drinkers in these five counties know that services are here and that our staff is willing to help with their problem," Melvin said.

As MCCC's Alcohol Program Treatment Coordinator, Melvin supervises alcoholism counselors throughout the region and spends much time in the Layne House here, handling alcohol and drug clients in crisis situations. It is common to find Melvin after working hours talking at Layne House to drinkers about their problem.

"Support and kindness is important when dealing with alcoholics," stressed Melvin, "most of these men have lost respect through years of alcohol and are very receptive to friendship. I encourage people to compliment an alcoholic when he has done something worthwhile. "It might even be a pat on the back for a commendable grass mowing."

A native Johnson countian, Melvin began his career in the field of alcoholism when he was working in Magoffin county with an alcoholism counselor who was also a recovering alcoholic.

"I had a drinking problem at the time I began counseling," he remembers, "it hit home as I learned more about the disease that I was falling into the trap of alcoholism."

"The more I helped others, the more I began to help myself until finally I decided drinking wasn't for me," Melvin said.

Melvin's home is in Morgan county with wife Debbie and small son Jeremy.

Heritage Staff Thinks School Founded in 1913 Is 'Historic'

Can a 24-building rural educational community founded in Kentucky in 1913 be accepted as a listing on the National Register of Historic Places? The staff of the Kentucky Heritage Commission believes it can.

Gloria Mills, a historian with the commission, explained, "The Pine Mountain Settlement School, located near the junction of Greasy Creek, Laurel Fork, and Isaac Creek in north central Harlan, is the second and largest such institution to be established in the state. The school, which grew from the social reform movement of the late 19th and early 20th centuries in America, performed an invaluable service by making schools and medical assistance available to the local people."

Although the complex consists of 800 acres including forest and farmland, the nominated area encompasses only 54 acres and includes 24 structures, of which 17 are over 50 years old. The school has a dining hall, conference rooms, a 56-bed dormitory, and recreational areas. These have sometimes been used for functions held by community, church, civic and youth organizations. The school now serves as an environmental education center.

According to Mills, Bert Ed Pollitte, a state senator representing Bell, Harlan, and Whitley counties, notified the Heritage Commission of the significance of the settlement school as a unique state landmark. "Two commission staff members, Mrs. Paris E. Hopkins and Marcia Richmond, accompanied me," she said, "to evaluate the historical significance of the buildings for the consideration of the state Historic Preservation Review Board members. They approved the site as a nomination to be forwarded to the National Register of Historic Places in Washington, D. C., for its consideration."

Pollitte explained, "The Pine Mountain Settlement School was an innovative school, which introduced many programs such as cultural recognition and appreciation, which have since been used in the public school systems. It has long been recognized as a local landmark because of its contribution to the education of Harlan county's young people, and has been nationally recognized for its role in the early 20th century progressive movement, a period of reform in which settlement institutions were established in the nation's urban and rural areas."

"The settlement institution was begun in 1884," Mills explained, "with the founding of Toynbee Hall in England. A parish vicar used the term 'settlement' to describe a group of trained and sympathetic professional men and women who would live in a working class neighborhood and identify themselves with its everyday life in order to understand and improve it. The idea came to America in the late 1880s and early 1900s and was adapted to the crowded city slums."

Mills continued, "The settlement concept rapidly outgrew its urban setting in which many of the programs focused on education for immigrants living in the cities. Settlements were established in the Appalachian region in the late 19th century. There the purpose was to aid people with problems—problems associated with cultural isolation and poverty—similar to those of the city immigrant."

Pine Mountain Settlement School was established with the help of Katharine Pettit, of Lexington member of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, in 1913. She had founded the first rural settlement school in Kentucky in Hindman, Knott county, in 1902. William Creech, a Pine Mountain resident, asked Pettit in 1913 if she would set up a similar school in Harlan county to provide education for his grandchildren. He offered her 136 acres of land on which to build the school.

The early curriculum of the settlement school was varied and could be adapted to local needs. It included not only academic subjects and agricultural studies, but also furniture making, home nursing, weaving, dairying and stock raising. A special emphasis was placed on knowledge of and respect for the mountain heritage, preservation of old ballads folksongs, and folk dances.

THE FIRST UNION of federal employees was formed by New York City letter carriers in 1863, according to "Labor Firsts in America," published by the U.S. Department of Labor.

State Students Prep For Math Bowl

With algebraic equations and geometric figures floating through their heads and pencils in hand, junior high school students across Kentucky are gearing up for MATH BOWL '78.

Competition was keen in last year's contests when Lexington's Southern Junior High School defeated the team from Danville Bate Middle School to win possession of a silver Revere bowl for the year.

According to Lydia Wells Sledge, math consultant for the Kentucky Department of Education (KDE), competition will be even more keen for the second annual junior high math bowl.

Some districts are already holding local contests to select their teams. Last year one-third of Kentucky's school districts participated in the math bowl and even more are expected to join the competition this year, Sledge said.

Any school district in Kentucky may participate in the math bowl, but they must select their team and register for MATH BOWL '78 by February 1, 1978. Participants in the state contest will be selected during regional run-offs.

THE FIRST COURT decision that labor combinations were not illegal as long as their objectives were not harmful was Commonwealth vs. Hunt by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in 1842.

IT REALLY HAPPENED!

One night, when famed actor John Barrymore was playing Shakespeare's "Richard III," he shouted his agonized plea, "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!" A cougher in the balcony came in on cue and threatened to steal the scene. Barrymore added, without missing a beat, "Make haste and saddle yonder braying ass!"

Another time, during a flu epidemic, when coughing in the theater reached beyond an actor's wildest nightmare, Barrymore took a five-pound sea bass from beneath his cloak and flung it at the audience. "Busy yourself with this, you walruses, while the rest of us proceed with the libretto!"

Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, once programmed a performance of Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" which climaxed with the firing of 105mm howitzers, the ringing of eight amplified English chain bells cued in by walkie-talkie from a nearby belfry and the explosion of 200 titanium firecracker salutes. It was rumored that it was a conductor's revenge for coughers in Boston's Symphony Hall. An easier way to stop the coughing could have been to pass out Halls Cough Tablets, which almost half the people who buy cough tablets prefer for temporary relief of minor throat irritation and for making nasal passages feel clearer.

Barrymore threw a fish.

One time, when the renowned maestro Arturo Toscanini was conducting Verdi's opera "Otello," a bomb was thrown on stage, reportedly by a singer he had dismissed for incompetence. You must admit, that makes a coughing fit seem mild by comparison.

FOAM CUPS SAVE ENERGY

That the foam cup that keeps a serving of coffee hot for up to half an hour is also storing energy in another way?

The expandable polystyrene foam used to make the cup can be burned at an extremely high BTU level. That means that its heat output is about the same as fuel oil.

Constructive Criticism.

In 1833, people thought the idea of a "balloon frame" house was full of hot air. Back then, houses were built with massive beams by skilled craftsmen. But Augustus Deodat Taylor had a new idea. Just build a cage-like frame of two-by-fours and nail the siding and roof right to it.

"A house like that would be picked up and blown away by the prairie winds like a toy balloon," the critics cried.

Not so. For it turned out the "balloon frame" house was even stronger than conventional models.

Taylor's new idea made quick and easy settlement of the West a reality. And helped build a strong, new country.

Today, the building goes on, thanks to over 9 1/2 million Americans buying U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

They know while they're looking out for their future, they're looking out for America's future, too.

So buy U.S. Savings Bonds. When it comes to saving, they're mighty constructive.

Series E Bonds pay 8% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4 1/2% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Three ADD's To Get Comprehensive Disaster Preparedness Plans

The state Division of Disaster and Emergency Services and the Department for Local Government (DLG) have entered into an agreement that will result in comprehensive disaster preparedness plans for counties within three area development districts.

Wilbur R. Buntin, Jr., executive director of the state's disaster response agency, said that the $112,000 contract will fund planning efforts in the Cumberland Valley, Kentucky River, and Barren River Area Development districts (ADDs).

Buntin explained that all of the money is being provided by the federal Defense Civil Preparedness Agency under a prototype arrangement. Bardyl Tirana, who was appointed by President Carter to head the agency earlier this year, became interested in such a project after visiting Kentucky several months ago. Buntin and Ivan Potter, representing DLG, worked with federal and other state officials to negotiate the contracts. Buntin said that if the program proves successful, the federal government may fund similar projects throughout Kentucky and expand it to other states.

Planners from the ADD staffs will work with county and city emergency preparedness officials to develop the plans.

This program represents a significant achievement for Kentucky, Buntin explained. "We know that disaster planning has often been fragmented and incomplete," he noted, "because we have ordinarily had to work with counties as funds have become available. The results have not always been satisfactory and many of our counties have suffered from inadequate planning."

"We're very optimistic about this program," Buntin continued, "because professional planners will be working directly with the people who will eventually be carrying out the plans. We think that this will result in a high-quality product that can help save lives and property during an emergency situation."

HOME FOR HOLIDAY

Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Midkiff had the following members of their family with them for the Thanksgiving holidays: Mr. and Mrs. Steve Midkiff, of Mt. Vernon, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Ackerman and children, of Jackson, Mich., and Miss Stephanie Midkiff, of Lexington.

DINNER GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. James Carter, II, and children, Susan, Rebecca and James, III, had as their Thanksgiving dinner guests her mother, Mrs. Josephine Howard, her aunt, Mrs. Martha Spradin, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Carter, Sr.

Workshop To Stress Fun for Children

With the Yule season approaching, young children quite naturally receive much attention, and so the Parent and Child Organization, in cooperation with Prestonsburg Community College's Community Service Program, is presenting a workshop for parents with young children entitled "Fun Activities for Infants and Children."

Led by Clea Wells, Director of the Arnold Avenue Day Care Center here, the workshop will deal with things parents can do at home to work with their young children. Mrs. Wells will emphasize how parents and their young can have fun together by planning their own activities and will show mothers and fathers how to make toys and prepare games for the small ones. Included will be techniques in story-telling to keep the attention of the child.

The workshop will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, December 8, at the First Presbyterian Church. The Prestonsburg High School Future Homemakers will make baby sitting available for a donation of $1. There is no charge for the workshop.

Unusual Thanksgiving For Corps Personnel

Corps of Engineers personnel whose normal duties are performed at Dewey Dam spent a different kind of Thanksgiving this year. While most of the citizenry took a day off with too much turkey and a surfeit of TV football, Corpsmen Bill Calhoun, Claude Allen, Bob Beverley, Mike Smith, Wade Diddle, Pete Current, and Dean Murray were hauling water to the towns of Pikeville and Betsy Layne where an oil spill had contaminated normal sources of drinking water.

Water donated by the city of Prestonsburg was transported in water trucks on loan to the Corps of Engineers here by an Army Reserve Unit in Lexington for just such emergency use.

Dean Murray estimated that 8,000 gallons of water were transported between Wednesday evening and Friday afternoon with 4,000 one-gallon containers distributed at Betsy Layne; 1,500 gallons to Methodist Hospital, Pikeville, and the remainder to the Pikeville Fire Department where it was made available to the public.

ENTERTAIN AT LEXINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. Bill G. Rhodes, of Lexington, had as their guests for Thanksgiving dinner Mrs. Eva Allen Horn, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Allen Horn and daughter, Elizabeth Ann, all of Prestonsburg, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moots and children, Donnie and Teresa, of Bowling Green.

The War of the Parts Against the Whole

by John W. Gardner

Every President at the beginning of a four-year term will be given his moment of national goodwill. But will he be given the chance to govern? For a wonderful moment there will be the sense of a new chapter, a chance to begin again. But will he then be caught in the same web of special interests that has closed in on his recent predecessors?

The answer is that he stands a fighting chance of exercising leadership—but only if he acts to gain command of his own administration. Let's look at a monumental problem he faces. We'll call it the Special Interest State.

During and after World War II there occurred an explosive growth in the number of special interests seeking to influence government. Most people hold a vastly oversimplified view of those interests. "There's business," they say, "and then there's labor." But beyond those are the agricultural interests, the maritime interests, regional interests, religious interests, just about every profession (doctors, trial lawyers, accountants, pathologists, and so on) and almost every institutional category (hospitals, junior colleges, etc.). The organized groups number in the thousands.

According to current mythology there exists a domineering entity called The Federal Government which is always at odds with a wholly separate entity call The Private Sector.

In fact, a large part of what is called The Federal Government is not a coherent entity at all, but a collection of fragments under the virtual control of highly-organized special interests in the private sector. In the Special Interest State that we have forged, every well-organized interest "owns a piece of the rock."

Instead of the United States being run by a well-knit behind-the-scenes power group—as the conspiracy theorists would have it—it is whipsawed by a great multiplicity of special interests. The result is paralysis in national policymaking.

All too often each special interest has veto power over one essential piece of a solution, and no one has the power to solve the problem—as in the case of New York City. No one wants to make the problem unsolvable, but collectively they paralyze policymaking. The rule applies to every complex problem we face—inflation, energy, tax reform, transportation: the list is endless.

The special interests are not sinister forces. They are all of us. Yet we are seeing a war of the parts against the whole. Everything is so interrelated today that our capacity to frustrate one another through non-cooperation has increased dramatically—as the air traffic controllers have discovered.

What can a President do? He can win any specific fight with the bureaucracy if the bureaucracy is his sole foe. But he can't win out over many hundreds of alliances in which the bureaucrats, supposedly under his command, have hidden links with Congress and outside lobbies.

Every legitimate special interest from General Motors to the Americal Medical Association has a constitutional right to try to influence government. But they should not be allowed to operate behind a veil of secrecy, nor to use money in ways that corrupt the public process, nor to paralyze the system.

While we have already made significant progress in remedial measures, much remains to be done. Public financing of political campaigns will go a long way to free our elected officials from bondage to the special interests. Conflict of interest statutes, including personal financial disclosure, will diminish the likelihood that officials will be influenced by their personal financial interests.

Another set of remedial measures focuses on "open government." Openness ranks next to the rule of law as a fundamental ingredient of self-government. Power exercised in secret breeds corruption.

With the game being played out in the open, less at the mercy of hidden influences, and a Congress that has not been bought and paid for, our system has a chance of working.

PART ONE ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS CONTRACT I—SANITARY SEWERAGE SYSTEM CONTRACT II—PHASE ONE DEVELOPMENT SCHOOLHOUSE HOLLOW DAVID COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CORP., INC. DAVID, KENTUCKY

Sen Ford Hails Inspection Plan

Senator Wendell Ford has called the Interior Department's decision to begin immediately a program for inspecting and regulating abandoned coal-waste disposal sites "a long-needed major safety initiative that will mean increased protection for the lives and property of individuals who live in communities near these sites."

The Interior Department, which earlier had indicated it did not possess legislative authority to undertake such a program, reversed itself after an October 20 letter from Ford pointed out that the new Surface Mining Act specifically called for these sites to be subject to federal inspection and regulation.

As a result, the Interior Department has begun a nationwide survey to determine the location and size of abandoned refuse sites, the nature of any corrective action necessary and cost estimates for eliminating potential safety hazards. Funds for the necessary repairs would come from the Department's Abandoned Mine Reclamation program.

The new surface mining law creates an Abandoned Mine Reclamation fund to be financed by a coal production fee of 35 cents a ton for surface coal, 15 cents a ton for underground coal, and 10 cents a ton for lignite. The fee is expected to produce an estimated $140 million in the first year.

Ford said regular inspections of abandoned waste sites are a necessity in order to prevent future disasters, such as the one that occurred in 1972 at Buffalo Creek, W. Va., where an improperly constructed dam broke, killing 125 people.

"Most of these structures are to be found in Appalachia," Ford said. "These impoundments deteriorate over the years, posing a very real danger to life and property. Unless regular inspections are conducted, the possibility of another tragedy such as the one at Buffalo Creek will continue to exist."

THERE ARE approximately 2,400 sheltered workshops in the United States, 2,000 of which have been issued certificates under the Fair Labor Standards Act to pay sub-minimum wages; the Act is enforced by the Wage and Hour Division, U.S. Department of Labor.

Corporation, Inc., David, Kentucky, in an amount not less than five per cent (5 pct.) of the base bid. No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of Ninety (90) Days after the date bids are opened. He may, however, withdraw his bid at any time prior to the time and date scheduled for opening of same or any authorized postponement thereof. Any bid received after the time and date specified shall not be considered and will be returned unopened to the bidder.

The Contractor's attention is called to the fact that funds will be made available through a DHUD Grant, an ARC Grant, a FmHA Grant, and a loan from the Housing Assistance Corporation for the construction of this project.

Work to be performed by Contractors involved in this project is subject to the minimum wage rates established by the U.S. Department of Labor under the provisions of the Davis-Bacon Act and the Kentucky Department of Labor, as set forth in Chapter 337 of the Kentucky Revised Statutes (per amendments adopted by the 1970 General Assembly.) Contractors will be required to pay whichever minimum wage rate is higher for the individual crafts.

Both Federal and State wage rate determinations will be incorporated into the specifications by an addendum issued prior to the scheduled bidding date.

Bidders must comply with the President's Executive Order Nos. 11246 and 11375, which prohibit discrimination in employment regarding race, creed, color, sex or national origin. Where the President's Executive Order No. 11246 is shown, Executive Order No. 11375 also applies.

Bidders must comply with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Anti-Kickback Act and the Contract Work Hours Standard Act.

NOTICE OF REQUIREMENT FOR CERTIFICATION OF NONSEGREGATED FACILITIES

The Bidder will submit, as a part of the Proposal Form a Certification of Non-segregated Facilities. New Art Exhibit on Road

Paintings by Kentucky artists at their imaginative best are featured in "Fresh Paint," a new touring exhibit put together by the Kentucky Arts Commission.

The exhibit represents a selection view of contemporary work being done in Kentucky, according to Al Sperath, director of traveling exhibitions for the arts commission. Sperath chose the 30 paintings for their imaginative approaches from the works of 100 Kentucky artists.

The first exhibition of the paintings will open Dec. 3 at the Northern Kentucky Arts Council Galleries, 1028 Scott St. in Covington. The paintings will be on display there for approximately one month, said Sperath.

The exhibit is also scheduled for display in Owensboro, Paducah and Murray next summer. The paintings will be returned to their artists when the tour ends in September 1979, said Sperath.

This particular exhibit is available only to galleries or museums which have high security facilities. An attendant must be in the gallery when it is open to the public, emphasized Sperath. Museums or galleries which meet these requirements and are interested in exhibiting "Fresh Paint" should contact Sperath at the Kentucky Arts Commission, 100 West Main Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, telephone 502-564-3757.

The arts commission also has other touring exhibits which do not require such tight security, said Sperath. Artists whose works have been selected for the "Fresh Paint" exhibit are: Peter Bodnar III, Anchorage; Joyce Williams, Ashland; Jim Cantrell, Bardstons; Neil Di Teresa, Berea; Cathy Henders, Chris Kakas and Ivan Schieferdecker, all of Bowling Green; Joan Gallagher, Covington; Raymond D. Huelsman, Fort Mitchell; Howard Storm, Fort Thomas; Michael Deane Mooser and Evalyn Ver Hey, Frankfort; Priscilla Bain-Smith, Joseph E. Burks II, Gerald Ferstman, Marilyn Hamann, Carolyn Young Hise, Judith Kuehne, Lewis Crews McCulloch, Robert Tharsing, Gloria Thomas and Ann Tower, all of Lexington; Dale Bratcher, Nancy Comstock, Mary Spencer Nay and Cathy Shepherd, all of Louisville; Ellie Samuelson, Murray; Jerry Watson, Paducah; Darryl Halbrooks, Richmond, and Edward Cade Knippers, Jr., Wilmore.

Center Cites Donor Need

The Tri-State Red Cross Blood Center announced recently that 1,500 blood donors will be needed weekly during the holiday period. This is the number of blood units (pints) that the 92 hospitals in the region predict will be needed. They indicated the holiday period begins with Thanksgiving and continues past the New Year.

The number of patients needing blood primarily remains at a constant level, it was indicated by officials in local hospitals. Emergencies occur at about the same rate but could increase because of holiday traffic accidents.

Blood shortages occur only when the number of donors decreases. Bloodmobile visits in small and large communities must each provide 100 blood donors.

Bloodmobiles are rotated throughout 53 counties in the region. Each Red Cross Chapter plans the visit and secures the number of volunteer workers needed to assist donors. And each chapter has endeavored to make it easier to give blood by scheduling donors in specific time slots.

Each year blood recruitment staff increases their efforts to keep up with the demand but it is the responsibility of the individuals in every community to give blood during the holiday season.

Johnson Grass—a Problem Weed

Johnson grass has been a problem weed in Kentucky since before the turn of the century, but it has only been in the past decade that its spread has reached alarming proportions. In a weed survey conducted recently by the University of Kentucky, johnson grass was overwhelmingly rated the number one weed problem in the state. It is estimated that one-quarter of the state's corn and soybean land is infested sufficiently to reduce yields 30 to 50 percent or more. This represents a state loss of production for these two crops of over 40 million dollars.

If proper control measures aren't used against johnson grass, this perennial weed can take over a crop within three years causing sufficient damage to cut yields in half. In some severe infestations, growers find their crop not worth harvesting—because of weed density, harvesting is an impracticality. It is commonly believed that there are more croplands abandoned because of johnson grass than any other single weed.

For this reason there is an intensive effort now underway in the state to check the spread of the weed and reduce infestation levels. Current recommendations call for an integrated program of cultural and chemical control techniques.

The first step to johnson grass control is to identify the weed early, then treat it promptly to prevent spreading. It is relatively easy to recognize since it usually towers about crop plants. Johnson grass typically grows to a height of ten feet, has a seed head one and a half feet long and produces root-like reproductive rhizomes often as thick as a man's thumb.

In cropland, fall and winter tillage by plow or disc is recommended to break up the rhizomes and bring them to the surface where they are subjected to winter-kill from drying and cold temperatures. If not broken up by tillage, the rhizomes (which serve as the weed's food storage organs) can remain dormant in the soil, resistant to chemicals and capable of sprouting new shoots and rhizomes.

In heavy infestations or for spot treating, Kentucky weed specialists recommend a foliar spray application of a contact herbicide such as Dowpon, Basfapon or Roundup to destroy existing johnson grass plants and rhizomes. Foliar sprays have no effect on later germinating seedlings, however, so they must be followed by preplant seedling control herbicides. Those currently recommended include Sutan+ and Eradicane in corn, and Tolban, Treflan and Vernam in soybeans.

Eradicane and Sutan+ at high rates also give rhizome suppression in corn, and a double rate of Treflan has been fairly effective for rhizome control in soybeans. Prior to applying preplant herbicides, it is important to chop up rhizomes and get the ground in good till to facilitate incorporation.

"Dedicated to Serving You Better"

Master Charge PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY BankAmericard
'Directly Across From Prestonsburg Drive-In Theater'

Some 40 years ago about every weed field in the eastern half of Kentucky was the home of a covey of that most wonderful of all game birds, the quail. Each spring and summer, the whole countryside resounded to the cheery "bob whites" as rooster birds announced their presence from the tops of fence posts or the lower branches of trees.

Unfortunately, only rarely does one hear the nostalgic whistle of a bob white and it is even more rare to flush a covey from an eastern Kentucky weed field. Colinus virginianus, the quail is about gone from most areas of this region and so has a lot of interest and hunting pleasure. Now, Kentucky quail hunters have to go to Georgia.

Many reasons have been given for the disappearance of the quail from this part of the country. Some have voiced the opinion that foxes, stray housecats, skunks and other predators are responsible. Others have placed the blame on quail hunters who once came from far and near to hunt down these very tasty birds. Insecticides have also been accused of having a part in their decimation, but after long years of observation, study and pondering the subject, it is firmly believed that neither predators, hunting pressures, nor insecticides are responsible for diminished quail populations. What is indicated and what is believed is that modern farm practices are the main culprits.

At one time, just about every farmer had a sorghum patch which, when harvested, left a residue quail dearly loved. Corn was cut and stacked into shocks and left standing in the field well into winter, furnishing both food and shelter for quail and rabbits. Then numerous cropfields were permitted to "oay out" for a year or so to recuperate their fertility. These fields soon reverted back to weeds and sawbrirs that provided excellent food and shelter for the birds.

Now all this has changed. Few farmers grow sorghum anymore. Fence rows and weed fields are all but nonexistent on most farms. Corn is no longer cut into shocks and left in the fields until late in the season.

With this being the case, there is no longer good, shelter and suitable habitats for the quail and rabbit populations that once provided a plentiful supply of game for autumnal hunting.

Sportsmen and sportsmen's clubs have restocked quail and rabbits in certain areas. Wildlife plots have been established and restocked with considerable success. Birds released otherwise have failed to survive. Without changed farming practices, the evidence is the springtime whistle of a quail may soon be heard no more.

Hallowe'en "Costume" With Mountain Flair

When Hallowe'en rolled around this year, James Douglas DeRossett, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank DeRossett, Jr., of the Goble-Roberts Addition here, decided to pass up the "store-bought" masks and go on the annual candy collection dressed in a costume with a real Eastern Kentucky theme—that of a coal miner. Coal dust was smeared on the youngster's face to provide an added touch of realism.

JAPAN PACKS FIVE times California's population into less space. No wonder the Japanese look for every space-saving device they can find. The December Reader's Digest points out that in Japan, doors slide, instead of swinging open, and fire hydrants are buried under sidewalk covers.

Shades of Santa Claus...

THE ENGLISH Parliament got carried away in 1647 and outlawed Christmas. They thought it was just a shade too pagan. According to the December Reader's Digest, churches were stripped of ornamentation, organs were carted away, and religious singing was restricted to the Psalms. While the ban didn't last very long, it nearly spelled the end of English Christmas carols. Fortunately, such famous carols as "God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen" and "The First Nowell" survived in the memory of tenacious wassailers.

Back House Version Of Black Lung Bill

The Kentucky Black Lung Association, along with other State Black Lung Associations, traveled to Washington, November 14, for the purpose of trying to get Senator Long to accept the House version of the Black Lung Bill.

About 41 members of this group met with Congressman Carl Perkins, and he assured us that everything that he could possibly do was being done. The Conference Committee will meet together on the Black Lung Bill, November 29 and 30.

Among those from this area who were in Washington were publicity committee members Carolyn McKinney, of Martin, Nick Frasure, of Harold, Otis King, of Harlan, Lynn Sullivan, Marie Long, Ruth Bartley, and Doug Senter, all of Pike county.

The group expressed appreciation for all donations which made it possible to send the delegation.

Judge's Decision Blocks State EWS

Frankfort, Ky.—Construction of the $10 million Kentucky Emergency Warning System (KEWS) has been temporarily blocked by Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs.

A temporary restraining order was issued in a lawsuit filed by Motorola, Inc., which was unsuccessful in bidding to provide equipment for the system.

The system will allow statewide microwave transmission of warnings in event of storms or other disasters. It also will allow for improved communication during rescue and relief operations.

The state's Executive Department for Finance and Administration on Oct. 10 awarded KEWS contracts of $10,141,704 on combined bid by Farion Electric and GTE Lenkurt, Inc., both of San Carlos, Calif., and General Electric Corp. of Lynchburg, Va.

Motorola's suit alleges that the finance department "permitted favoritism at the public expense in awarding the KEWS contracts at substantial variance from the specifications advertised."

Inclusion in the KEWS system of some items bid improperly will mean added costs to the state and will cause the total cost of the system to exceed Motorola's bid of $10,391,294, the suit alleges.

Motorola claims it spent more than $250,000 to comply with all of the KEWS specifications. The suit says the firm analyzed proposals and on "numerous occasions" met with finance officials to protest bid proposals submitted by the winning firms.

The department refused to allow Motorola to review its bid file, and informed it that formal bid protest procedures did not exist, the suit claims.

The suit alleges that the finance department "negotiated" with Farion, Lenkurt, and General Electric concerning Motorola's objections, but excluded Motorola from the negotiations.

Motorola also alleges that the finance department ignored the advice of Kessler and Wilhelm, telecommunications engineers hired to evaluate the highly complex system.

Defendants in the suit are the finance department, the three winning firms and the consultants.

Claims made in filing a lawsuit give only one side of the case.

To raise the sum of $19,309.58 with interest amounting to $762.47 accrued through November 29, 1976 and accruing thereafter until judgment at a rate of 8¼ percent per annum, or $3,8354 per day, with interest from date of judgment at six per cent (6 percent) per annum until paid, together with costs expended herein, pursuant to Judgment and Order of Sale being Civil Action 77-93 on the Pikeville Docket of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky entered on November 1, 1977 in the case of United States of America vs. Clinton J. Lafferty and Evelyn C. Lafferty, I, or one of my deputies will sell the following described property at public auction to the highest and best bidder at the front door of the Floyd County Courthouse, Prestonsburg, Kentucky on the fifth day of January, 1978 (January 5, 1978) at the hour of 1:00 p.m., local time, on terms of one-third (1-3) of the bid price on the day of the sale with good and sufficient bond for balance, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent (6 pct.) per annum until paid, due and payable in six months, and said bond having the effect of a judgment, or purchaser may pay cash at the time of the sale. Such sale shall be made subject to the ad valorem taxes, city, county and state, payable in the year 1977.

A certain lot or parcel of land lying and being in Floyd County, Kentucky, and more particularly described as follows: Being Lot No. 29 of the Jeff Wells Subdivision, Auxier, Kentucky, as shown by plat filed June 6, 1973, by Plat File No. 460, in the office of the Floyd County Court. Being the same (or part of the same) land conveyed to Clinton J. Lafferty and Evelyn C. Lafferty, his wife, by deed from Col. Thomas Montgomery, et al, recorded in Deed Book 215, page 381, Floyd County Court Clerk's Office.

Such sale shall be in bar and in foreclosure of all right, title, interest, estate claim, demand or equity of redemption of the defendants and of all persons claiming by, through, under or against them. Billie Lykins, United States Marshal, Eastern District of Kentucky. 11-23-4t.

Morehead, First Ky. City To Use School Buses for Public Transit

Morehead is the first city in the state to expand its use of school buses, thereby creating a public transit system, Transportation Department Secretary Calvin G. Grayson announced today.

The new bus service is to be called Morehead Area Transit and will begin operation Thursday Dec. 1, Grayson said. The move to use local school board buses to create a city transit system marks the first time a Kentucky city has taken advantage of legislation passed by the 1976 General Assembly allowing such use of the vehicles.

"I hope this new system will demonstrate that school buses which usually sit in parking lots during the day can make good public transportation affordable for cities like Morehead," said Grayson.

The Morehead Area Transit System is made possible through cooperation of the Rowan County Board of Education, the city of Morehead, and the Department of Transportation (KYDOT). According to KYDOT planners, the system will use but one school bus and will cost $26,000 to operate for one year. As much as $6,000 is expected to be collected in fares.

The 24-passenger bus, with "Morehead Area Transit" on its side instead of Rowan County Schools will begin running hourly between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. week-days, along a seven and one half mile sweep through Morehead. On Saturdays, the bus will run from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

KYDOT planners said the route, including 15 marked stops may be altered if sufficient demand for the service is indicated elsewhere. Riders may hail the bus driver at any point on the scheduled route.

Rowan County School Board Chairman John Brock said, "We (the school board) think this is an excellent way to provide transportation for the community, especially since it eliminates the capital costs required to purchase other buses."

A 25-cent flat rate will allow riders to travel anywhere on the route, Brock said. The route stretches from South Tolliver Road at Main Street to Clearfield Road and then circles back to South Tolliver Road.

The bus will pass through the entire downtown area, Morehead State University, and other heavy traffic areas.

Morehead Mayor-elect Crayton Jackson said the new bus service "has tremendous potential to alleviate the extremely severe parking problem we currently face in the center of town. I expect it to be a convenience for senior citizens and the entire community."

Both Brock and Jackson said they expect the Morehead Area Transit system to help riders save fuel while stimulating trade for downtown merchants.

Brock said suggestions to improve the new transit service are welcome and fare and schedule information are available by calling 784-8928.

Phone-Computer Helps Keep Tab On State Streams

The WATS line in the Division of Water Quality is constantly being used during all hours of the night and no one will own up to it.
That's because a computer system is using the WATS (wide area telecommunications service) phone line. A Storet computer continuously receives water quality readings from monitors on Kentucky streams. Every hour the temperature, amount of dissolved oxygen and electrical conductance is sent from the Mississippi, Ohio, Tennessee, Cumberland, Green, Big Sandy and Kentucky rivers by phone. If an overabundance of any of these factors appears on the read-out, there is a possibility that the streams are carrying pollutants.
According to Shelby Jett, an engineer for the division, by detecting an increase in the amount of conductance in the Kentucky River a few weeks ago, large amounts of chlorides were found. With the help of Storet, the presence of chlorides was traced to an oil spill, possibly from a plant located on the river. The division can now further its investigation by researching all plants near the oil spill to trace its origin. This process which would normally take weeks to accomplish manually, will take hours with the help of Storet.
Storet is also helpful in issuing permits for plant construction on river banks. By reviewing data concerning the stream characteristics, engineers can tell how much treatment would be needed in order to protect it from extreme organic loading. According to Jett, this takes "busy work" away from the engineers.
There is a close link between the divisions of water resources and water quality in determining whether or not a plant can be constructed in a river basin. The Stream Mile computer system used by the Division of Water Resources contains facility numbers for all dams and water plants located on Kentucky streams. By feeding data from the Stream Mile system into the Storet system, engineers can be sure that the organic loading of a facility will not interfere with water plant intake.
Jett said the computer also can be helpful in keeping a facility file. Complete data can be stored on every waste facility stating who owns the facility, who operates the facility and whether or not the operator is certified.
In the future, Jett hopes that the Storet system can be programmed with Land Stat data from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Land Stat provides satellite photographs of river basins indicating the type of soil available and its use. In studying the type of soil and vegetation in each basin, various organic elements in the streams can be detected.
Jett would also like to see the Storet system being used in administrative work dealing with bookkeeping, employee statistics and purchasing. However, this operation depends on whether or not the program would be economically feasible.
Regardless of the numerous ways computers can be used for maintaining statistics and calculating technical problems, Jett, like many other computer operators, holds the theory that they are merely helpers in his work.
"Computers don't do the job for us, they just do the computation," said Jett.

Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Don B. Bush, of Harold, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary, November 5. In honor of this occasion, a dinner party was given for them by their three children at the Landmark Hotel, Pikeville.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hagans and Mr. and Mrs. H. Hagans and daughters from Louisville, Mr. and Mrs. Ned H. Bush and son, of Harold; grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hagans, David Hagans, Kathy Hagans, all of Louisville, Ned H. Bush, II and John Joseph Bush, of Harold, E. F. Hagans, of Pikeville, also was a guest.

Scouts—Supersleuths of Sports

All-Star catcher Johnny Bench might never have made the major leagues if a scout for the Cincinnati Reds hadn't hung around a double-header to see the high-school pitcher-third baseman relieve a tired catcher. Dave Concepcion was considered too scrawny for the big leagues, but another scout for the Reds learned why: a poor diet. One Boston Celtics scout faked out his competition by walking purposefully away from the action when Florida State's Dave Cowens made an untypical error.

The undercover world of professional scouts—the really secret weapons of successful sports teams—gets unusual limelight treatment in the December Reader's Digest. Sportswriter Bill Surface reports that scouts for the Dallas Cowboys "rate football players on no fewer than 40 characteristics—including nine 'types' of hands alone, and 12 kinds of thighs." Kansas City Royals scouts give every top prospect a "motivation test." And Celtics scouts study the last minutes of lopsided games—to find out if a player on the losing side is a quitter.

Scouts not only keep an eye on players and the ball; they watch each other like hawks, too. "Top scouts are secretly followed, are hired away, or plied with drinks in attempts to learn their discoveries," Surface writes. "The Dallas Cowboys call their scouting department the War Room."

To keep the competition from signing a promising player, scouts have been known to plant false stories about a player's health or habits. To ferret out talented "sleepers," scouts must overlook nothing. Ron LeFlore was signed by the Detroit Tigers the day he was released on parole from prison. The Reds found Ken Griffey in a cold mountainous town with so little baseball that no one else bothered to look.

Unproved rookies may get more money than scouts, but Surface says that scouts find great personal satisfaction in their jobs. One spotter for the New York Rangers, who tours icy western Canada for likely prospects, says: "When I read how many goals my guys put in the net, I'm not cold anymore. I'm hot as a pistol!"

THE FIRST NATIONAL black labor organization was the Colored National Labor Union, formed in 1869, according to "Labor Firsts in America."

Miss Liz Hamilton, of McDowell High School, was named Miss Red, White and Blue 1977 at the eighth annual Miss Red, White and Blue Beauty Pageant held Oct. 22 at the Prestonsburg Grade School. Miss Hamilton is the daughter of Pay Hamilton, of McDowell, and Dorothy DeRossett, of Prestonsburg.

PITY POOR TWINS! Their harried, hassled parents don't spend the time on them that single children of the same age get. The result, says the December Reader's Digest, is that twins in their early years tend to develop intellectual and language skills more slowly than non-twins. A little more tender, loving care, experts feel, would remedy the situation.

Parental Involvement Needed

By LOUELLA FONG, Ph.D.
 (Associate professor of Child Development and Family Living, Western Kentucky University)

no more than 10 percent of parents are able to help their children develop as well as they should between the child's most critical years, which is between 8 and 36 months of age.

In order for parental involvement to occur, communication between the school and home must be open and frequent. If effective communication between the schools and home can be established, if effective parent education programs can be implemented, and if an alliance between the home and school can be formed for the purpose of providing the best experiences possible which will promote development of the child, then parents will want to become involved.

Traditionally, parents have been excluded from decision making about the education of their young children. Schools and centers, both public and private, have been guilty of promoting the attitude that the "professional" staff will tend to the business of educating children without interference from parents since the "professionals" are the most qualified. Similarly, parents who have been convinced that they lack the necessary knowledge have allowed this practice to continue.

Your corporation can buy your life insurance with tax deductible dollars.

Advantages both ways. It's good for the corporation regardless of size, because the premiums for life insurance on corporate-owners, executives, key employees... all employees... are tax deductible as a business expense under a recent government regulation. So the employee gets the benefit of increased compensation, up to $50,000 in term life insurance purchased by the corporation, with no current income tax liability for either party! The employee can even have permanent life insurance, retain the cash values and benefits, and pay only the tax on the premium. It's a good concept.

Now, all you need is a little help to do something about it. Kansas City Life, The Lioness, would like to introduce you to one of our people who knows the ins-and-outs of this new concept.

Our people have a Concept 79 Planning Kit which provides you with an easy way to understand and plan this new benefit program for you and your employees.

It is time that both the professionals and parents recognize that children are being shortchanged by these attitudes and practices. A child's development can only progress in a positive manner if the important persons in his or her life are cooperatively working toward his or her well being. The goals for a child must be consistent between the home and the school, or only chaos and confusion may result.

Parents and teachers need to recognize that they are members of the same, not opposing, teams. For those professionals who believe it is their sole task to educate a child, the realization must come that the home is the only relatively stable and consistent environment the child will experience. The school environment will change from year to year as the adults change, but the home will remain relatively stable if it receives the necessary support.

Parents must realize that they are the ones responsible for providing the emotional support their children will need to develop. Teachers are primarily responsible for making sure that children are equipped with the skills and information they will need to adequately deal with problems they will encounter. If a child does not receive the necessary emotional support and guidance from the home, the teacher will be unable to accomplish his or her task of adequately preparing the child to deal with a complex world.

Parents will not be committed to supporting policies and decisions of the schools which they have not helped to make. Parents need to be helped to feel more secure about their own roles and responsibilities if they are going to be expected to participate fully in the education of their children. Parents need to learn how to provide the experiences their children will need in order to be able to develop into alert, inquiring, competent and adjusted adults. Browning's Sabre Model 40-Channel CB

The following is quoted from an exclusive lab report from the January-February, 1977, issue of the Elementary Electronics:

"Ever since the FCC announced that the CB band would be expanded to 40 channels, there have been a lot of questions to answer. Would it lessen the crowding on 23 channels in the big-cities? How would 40-channel CB transceivers be built? Would the channel numbers be so narrow the RF power on Channel 1 would be much lower than Channel 20, 30, or 40? Or would the receiver be hot as a firecracker on Channel 40, near dead as a doornail on Channel 1?"

"These suggest some of the problems expected to be found in the finest models of 40-channel transceivers." Browning's Sabre has proved "it's possible to make one heck of a 40-channel transceiver first try, for the problems anticipated are non-existent in the Sabre."

"If the photographs of the 40-channel Sabre look familiar it's because it is basically the well-respected high-performance 23-channel Sabre, upgraded with a PLL (phase-locked loop) frequency synthesizer and additional harmonic suppression to give full 40-channel coverage with minimal TV interference." On the front-panel is a selector switch with an LED channel indicator, each LED numeral a half-inch high—easily seen by the driver, even if the rig is on the passenger side of the dash. Along the bottom edge of the front panel are concentric volume control, a continuously variable Delta tuning control concentric with a Calibrate control for a built-in SWR meter, a continuously variable automatic noise limiter. (ANL) control, and the usual squelch control. The microphone plugs into a jack on the left (driver's side) though provided with a stand and mobile U-mounting bracket, the unusual attaching screws are actually an anti-theft device.
