

Order Bans Franchising TV Service

Akers Action Stops Court Temporarily After Bids Filed

Bids on television cable service franchises were received by the Floyd fiscal court till 4 p.m. last Friday, but their opening scheduled for Tuesday will be delayed.

The court was enjoined Friday afternoon by Judge Calvin M. Manis, of the Perry circuit court, from selling and issuing franchises for cable TV areas in this county, also from accepting bids or otherwise implementing the fiscal court's resolution of May 24 dealing with television transmission franchises.

Judge Manis acted in response to a petition filed by Everett Akers, the Akers Cable System and the Big Sandy Telecasting Co., all of Martin. Floyd Circuit Judge Hollie Conley disqualified in the case, and Judge Reed Anderson, of Pike county, has been designated special judge to preside at the hearing on the injunction.

Franchising of television transmission area has long been disputed in the county. A hearing date on the injunction and restraining order has not been set.

In their petition for injunction the plaintiffs alleged:

—That the fiscal court's order violates their constitutional rights as provided in the First, Fifth and Fourteenth amendments, in that it is "capricious, arbitrary and shows utter disregard for the property rights of people engaged in the operation of TV cable systems in Floyd county."

—That establishing franchise areas discriminates against plaintiffs.

Murder-Suicide Seen in Deaths Of 3 in Florida

The suicide Sunday of a Winter Garden, Fla. man led to the discovery the following day of the bodies of his estranged wife, a former Floyd woman, and her son who, police said, apparently had been murder victims.

The body of Thomas Harry Berry, 51, was found in his Winter Haven motorcycle shop, and a heavy calibre rifle was found nearby. He had been shot one time in his face.

When a brother of the victim went to the home of Berry's estranged wife, Norma Jean Baldrige Berry, 41, in nearby Ocoee, he found Mrs. Berry's body on the living room floor, shot twice in the forehead with a small calibre weapon. The body of her son by a previous marriage, 20-year-old Alan Kyle Napier, was found in the nearby den, shot in the forehead, throat and back. A loaded .22-calibre rifle was found in the home, but police had not determined if it was the murder weapon.

Frazier To End Hospital Work

Chalmer H. Frazier, the former educator who with the late Dr. George P. Archer conceived the Highlands Regional Medical Center here as the first regional facility of its kind in Kentucky and who figured in the planning, financing and completion of the hospital, will retire July 1 as president of the medical center.

The Prestonsburg man's retirement from the hospital post does not mean, however, complete retirement. He will remain on the Highlands board of trustees, and, he said, "I will continue my interest in the hospital."

Governor Carroll (seated, rear of podium) listens as Congressman Carl D. Perkins speaks at National Guard Armory dedication here last Friday. Others on platform include County Judge-Executive Yvonne S. Jones, Lt. Joe H. Cooley, master of ceremonies, Mayor Harold Cooley and Kentucky National Guard officers.

'Light Comes,' Carroll's Theme At Dedication of Guard Armory

"Light Comes to the Cumberlands" was the theme of Governor Julian Carroll's address at the dedication last Friday of the new half-million-dollar Prestonsburg National Guard Armory. The theme, developed as a message of progress and hope for the region in roads, economy and improvements such as the new Armory, was in contradistinction to the well-known book by Harry Caudill, Whitesburg attorney-author, "Night Comes to the Cumberlands."

Governor Carroll expressed his personal pride in the Kentucky National Guard and what it means to the Commonwealth. At the same time he and other speakers on the dedicatory program emphasized the point that the Armory is not a Prestonsburg facility but one for Floyd and surrounding counties.

"We want this to be used as a community building. We want the young people to use it," the governor said.

He spoke of those who had played a part in getting this, the 10th armory to be dedicated during the Carroll administration citing, in particular, Congressman Carl D. Perkins and the late Judge Henry Stumbo as "soldiers" in the fight.

"I have no hesitancy in saying that Carl Perkins is the hardest working, most effective member of the U. S. Congress," he said, continuing:

"When the life of Dr. George Archer (an early advocate of the armory) was snuffed out, Judge Stumbo took up the fight. He is totally responsible for the location of the Armory. That's the kind of leadership you have had and continue to get."

Congressman Perkins had earlier acknowledged the contributions of Judge Stumbo and others, adding that "Governor Carroll, of course, is responsible for this Armory." He said the National Guard is "a necessity for military preparedness but to meet other emergencies."

"You (members of the Guard) have by your service won the hearts of thousands of Eastern Kentuckians," he said.

This service was exemplified here first during the school bus disaster, later during floods and most recently during last winter, and both Mayor Harold W. Cooley, of Prestonsburg, and County Judge-Executive Yvonne S. Jones, in welcome addresses referred in particular to the splendid response made by the National Guard to the county's call for help during flood disaster.

Others who spoke briefly were State Senator Jim Hammond; State Representative James "Jitter" Allen; Adjutant General Billy Wellman, who introduced Governor Carroll; Col. (Ret.) Marshall E. White, state Military Department facilities director; Lt. Com. Leo M. Henderson, detachment commander, and First Lt. John A. Julian, detachment commander, both of Det. 1, Co. B, 1-149th Infantry (mechanized), which is the unit occupying the Armory; James A. Coleman, contractor; Forrest G. McCloskey, architect.

First Lt. Joe H. Cooley, Jr. served as master of ceremonies and introduced the guests. The invocation and benediction were spoken by the Rev. Lloyd Senter, pastor of the Lancer Baptist Church. Asst. Adj. Gen. (Army) Wilbur R. Buntin administered the oath to one new member of the Guard unit, and Asst. Adj. Gen. (Air) Taylor L. Davidson conferred

Stamper Cites Police Report In Dema Wreck

The statement of Roger Dale Watkins, of Wayland, published in The Times last week and laying the blame for a Knott county truck wreck in which a Wayland boy was killed on Eugene Stamper, of Dema, has been challenged by Mr. Stamper.

Stamper says that the report of the accident made by State Trooper J. R. Adams, of the Hazard State Police post, shows that the tire mark of Watkins' truck was one foot, two inches across the centerline of the highway. He also said the trooper reported that the Watkins vehicle had only one seat and that three passengers were on its passenger side with the door open.

The Dema man admitted he was arrested on a drunk charge following the collision of the two trucks but that he entered a plea of not guilty and will fight the case.

He denied that he was driving at excessive speed. He said he was driving at a speed of about 25 miles an hour and that he was driving at this slow speed while following a truck which was travelling at low speed because it had defective brakes.

awards upon the following members of the unit:

Forrest Amburgy, Paintsville; Bill D. Collins and Lloyd Ditto, Prestonsburg; John Carpenter, Jackson; John Pyles, Prestonsburg; John Julian, Lexington; Kenneth Smith, Prestonsburg, and Kenneth White, Paintsville.

The new Armory contains 16,000 square feet and houses two platoons of Co. B, First Battalion, 149th Infantry (mechanized). The federal government contributed to its construction $370,577; the state, $178,539.

Besides its community features and the ready availability of its personnel in emergencies, it has been pointed out that the Armory contributes to the local economy, having a steady payroll commensurate to that of a small industrial plant.

This Town...That World

For a while the weather was too cold.—Now the water is too hot. That leaves fishing for nature-lovers who, without even a shrug, blandly lie about the joys of the outdoors being reward enough.

If this keeps up, I may get into the record books as the fellow who caught the smallest fish ever mounted.

COURTHOUSE NEWS

Wouldn't have been surprised if Governor Carroll had declared the courthouse a "disaster area," had he visited it while here last Friday.

That was the day somebody ended a repair job and left the air-conditioning operating, possibly long enough for them to clear town. Then, as they say, the floods came, if one commode can cause more than one flood. Anyway, the district judge's and the county attorney's offices were flooded. So was the hallway. Both offices operated with most of their staffs looking for higher ground, but there may be better days ahead. The commode has been unplugged, the last of the water mopped up.

That's the situation as of Tuesday noon—now if somebody in the third-floor jail doesn't get the bright idea of turning the water on from the top...

No fifths for the 4th, please—to have a better chance at being around for the 5th.

OUR CONGRATULATIONS

Old timers tell me there was a time when Prestonsburg's baseball team would go down to Paintsville for a game, and would take their bondsmen with them (and vice versa), just to be sure they were "sprung" from durance vile in time to catch the next train home. Those old boys played hard, and fought harder, and even if the visiting team won it stood a good chance of losing.

You might say, there was a hint of bad blood between the two neighbors in those days, and any athletic competition could properly be called a Donnybrook.

But time marches on, instead of stumbles, as some say. Paintsville now has the only professional baseball team in Kentucky, and a lot of the people in Floyd county have had a part in helping the Hillanders get started.

Legislator Says Johns Cr. Route Held Certain

Gov. Julian Carroll made an important announcement during his dedicatory address at the Prestonsburg National Guard Armory last Friday.

Stressing his theme that "Light Comes to the Cumberlands," he said:

"Last week I instructed the Secretary of Transportation to authorize the planning of KY 3."

KY 3 has been discussed as a four-lane artery connecting coal-rich Martin county with the Big Sandy valley.

The route which it will follow has been debated, but State Representative James "Jitter" Allen later told The Times that the road will enter this county via Daniels Creek onto the present Johns Creek road and join US 23 near Auxier.

The direction KY 3 will take from that point is not known, but it is expected to connect with a relocated US 23 when and if that road is built.

Governor Carroll later told The Times that he is ready to open the new state Office of Inter-Agency Relations here when a location for it and personnel are available.

The regional office here, one of five to be established, is to serve as a direct link between the people and Frankfort, Governor Carroll said. "Government is getting too big. To get anything done, you have to go in person to the state capital and follow it through. With this office, we hope to eliminate some of the short circuits," he said.

Anderson Trial Site Changed to Madison

As he had indicated earlier, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley entered an order last Thursday, transferring the trial of Ralph Anderson, charged with the murder of Mack Lewis, to the Madison circuit court at Richmond.

The change of venue order followed the filing by the defense of a petition alleging fear for the safety of defendant, his attorney and friends if the trial were held here.

Judge Conley had earlier said that refusal to change the place of trial after affidavits had been filed alleging threats against those involved in defense of the case would almost certainly result in a state Supreme Court reversal. But his change of venue order stressed only the matter of a fair trial and the effect the labor situation in Eastern Kentucky might have on the trial.

Ex-Sheriff Joe W. Lewis, brother of the slain man, opposed the change of venue and filed a statement in which he denied that threats had been made.

The court, the order said, considered the publicity given the Lewis slaying and pointed out that there appears to be some evidence that the murder charge grew out of a labor dispute during the UMW strike, early this year. Because all ad-

Martin Club Plans 4-Day Fourth

The four-day celebration of July 4th at Martin will begin with a parade at 1:30 Saturday afternoon and end with a fireworks display, the evening of July 4.

The celebration program again is being sponsored by the Martin Woman's Club.

The only other Independence Day celebration in the county will be Prestonsburg's fireworks display, the evening of the 4th, which annually attracts several thousand viewers.

Between the opening parade and the fireworks finale at Martin will be a series of events, including a pretty baby contest, a beauty pageant, street dances, booths and flea market, arts and crafts exhibits and a talent contest.

Roy Ratliff and State Senator Jim Hammond will serve as masters of ceremonies throughout the celebration. Among those expected to take part in the opening parade are Congressman Carl D. Perkins, Senator Jim Hammond, Representative James "Jitter" Allen, State Auditor George Atkins, Clerk of the Supreme Court Martha Layne Collins, District Judge Harold Stumbo, County Clerk C. "Ollie" Robinson, Mayor E. P. Grigsby and his son, Supt. of Schools E. P. Grigsby, Jr.

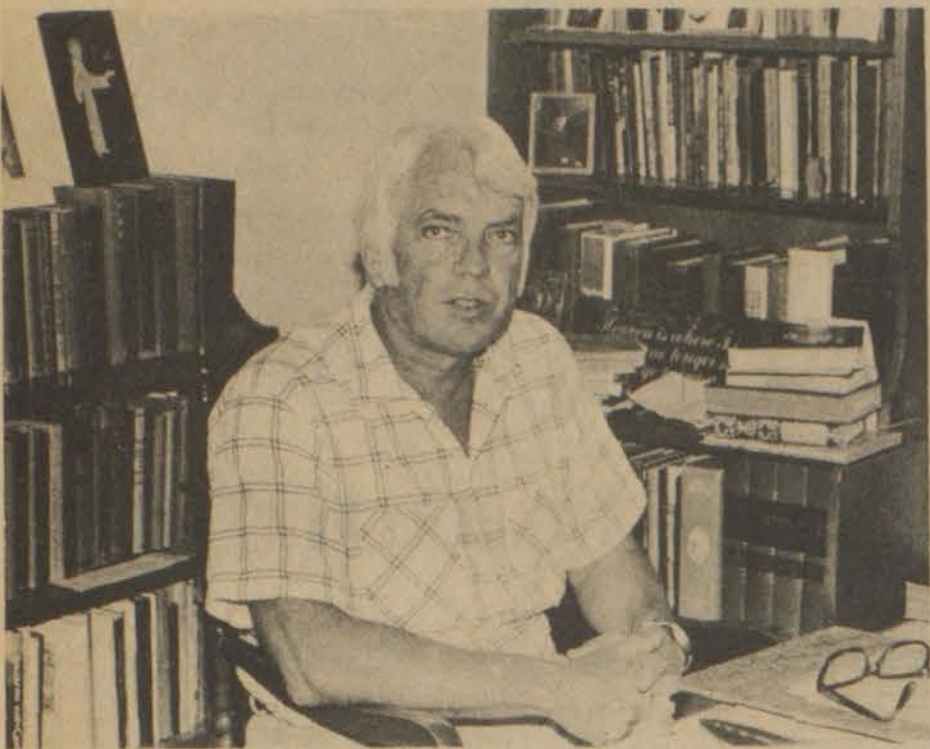

Marlow Tackett will play for Sunday's street dance, and the Band Quatro will perform for the July 4 street dance.

C. & O. Cars Derail at Auxier

Jumbled cars and bowed rail pictured following the derailment Saturday of nine, loaded C. & O. coal gondolas at Auxier. The mishap apparently resulted after an axle broke on one of the cars with the actual derailment occurring after the crippled "gon" had been dragged approximately one-half mile along the track.

Pastor Discusses Alcoholism

"Alcoholics can be helped," says Father Moultrie McIntosh, of St. James Episcopal Church. A native of Summerville, S.C., Pastor McIntosh ministered in Lexington's Christ Church for 10 years before moving here last year.

By A. K. WEBB

Pastor Moultrie McIntosh has abundant perception into alcoholism.

Ministering in St. James Episcopal Church, near Prestonsburg Community College, McIntosh sees alcoholism caused by a combination of emotional, physical and spiritual factors making it "very difficult to help the alcoholic."

"Alcohol can be a spiritual demon," realizes Pastor McIntosh who believes many problems are oftentimes the product of spiritual difficulties.

When counseling, McIntosh says he must dig deeper into the situation, beyond past problems to probe for the primary trouble.

"I've heard ministers say alcoholism is one problem they've had little success with," said the former South Carolina native, adding, "It can get exasperating!"

With an uncle and brother suffering from alcoholism, McIntosh is acquainted with the sabotaging outcomes of unquarable drinking. Ideas on alcoholism jockeyed back and forth through his maturing years and in the ministry where contacts with problem drinkers have occurred, McIntosh says "man has terribly misused alcohol."

"Within our country the tensions are so great it often leads to alcoholism," he remarked.

As a missionary in Central America in years past, McIntosh observed tremendous alcoholism problems within that society where boredom and unhappiness spurred excessive drinking.

"We cannot legislate moral decisions," the clergyman explains, emphasizing that drinking or abstaining is a personal choice, "but in my teaching I try to point out the dangers of drinking."

"Alcohol is a part of life; something not all that exciting and yet not all that terrible. People want to test alcohol—but there needs to be testing with limitations," reflects the minister.

Paralleling discipline to an infant's playpen, McIntosh illustrates: "A child is kept inside the playpen for his own good so as not to cause harm to himself, within the playpen he has enough space to move around, yet he is surrounded by boundaries which allow him growing room."

"We can work together harmoniously and highlight each other, all co-operating in giving the alcoholic support and back-up to stop drinking," he says.

"The church and A. A. can learn from one another," adds McIntosh, remembering his friendship with another Episcopal minister who influenced the beginnings of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Father McIntosh describes his friend, Sam Shoemaker, founder of Calvary Mission in New York City which gave housing, food and bedding for neighborhood drunks and the homeless, as "a most compassionate and spiritual counselor."

It was from this Episcopalian, who was a personal friend of Moultrie McIntosh, that the founder of A.A. learned about God and received the strength to face sobriety.

McIntosh's friend, Sam Shoemaker, who died in 1963, said frequently that "if everyone sitting in the pews of our churches had the same sense of gratitude and the same ability to give of themselves that the A.A.'s have in reaching and salvaging drunks, we would have a very different America."

Prestonsburg's Father Moultrie McIntosh and his famous friend Sam Shoemaker have enlightening and inspiring insight into our volcanic alcoholism problem.

Senior Citizens Mark Flag Day

Wheelwright, Ky.—A cool, windy day helped "Old Glory" wave as Wheelwright area senior citizens celebrated the 199th anniversary of National Flag Day. Amid decorations of red, white and blue a covered dish dinner was prepared and enjoyed by 38 senior citizens and guests. This dinner was also a birthday party for all senior citizens having birthdays' within the past six months.

Lucy Kitchen, a regular guest at the Center here, had her 87th birthday, June 20. Mrs. Kitchen is a storehouse of Appalachian history, including the development of coal mining towns, genealogy of local residents, farming a hill farm, prohibition, the depression, and on and on. She says that the first President that she can recall was, William McKinley. "I was 10 years old at the time; I remember that," she says. She was born to Andrew Jackson Casebolt and Martha Osborne Casebolt at Dema, June 20, 1891, and was raised at the Head of Calab Fork at Weeksbury, in the "flatwoods" on the Pike-Floyd county line by her uncle Sherd (Sherwood) Osborne, surrounded by fruit orchards and the activity of the coal company building the "camp".

Mrs. Kitchen is the widow of John Kitchen and has five children, 19 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. She has been residing at Meade Hill, between Hi Hat and Buckingham, for 11 years.

Escapes Serious Injury in Mishap

Incredibly, the driver of this vehicle, Tim Warrix, of the Auxier road, escaped with nothing more than a couple of scratches when his Blazer overturned near Branham Village near here as he reportedly attempted to avoid striking a stalled vehicle. Although his injuries were slight, the mishap, which occurred Sunday afternoon, caused extensive damage to Warrix's vehicle.

2 Floyd-Knott KY 80 Projects Are Up for Bids

Gov. Julian Carroll last Friday announced that the Department of Transportation is advertising for bids on two new KY 80 construction projects.

Both projects are for construction on KY 80, commonly known as the Hazard-Watergap Road. One calls for grade and drainage along more than three miles, between Ogden Branch and KY 1098.

More than 1.3 miles of KY 80 is also the subject of the advertisement for bids. That section is near the Floyd-Knott line, near Garrett.

The two projects are part of last year's resource recovery road program, sponsored by Carroll. This year's funding for the program, passed by the 1978 General Assembly, is more than $240 million.

The Floyd and Knott projects are among several to be included in bid-letting sessions, July 21. Contracts are expected to be awarded within two weeks thereafter.

Frazier was administrator of the new hospital from the day of its occupancy Jan. 1, 1973 till 1976 when he became president.

A graduate of Berea College, Frazier received the master's degree from the University of Kentucky. He spent 21 years in the schools as coach, classroom teacher, grade school principal and superintendent of city schools. Ten years of that time were spent as city superintendent here, that post ending with the consolidation of the Prestonsburg independent district with the county system.

This merger was preceded by what he describes as "the most unselfish thing a community ever did." He explains: "The people of Prestonsburg voted a tax to build a new gymnasium, even though they were told beforehand that it would be given to the county system through the merger then being planned."

"I think the next few years will be crucial for this county in the development of industry," Mr. Frazier said. That's why he has this new interest, the development of the Chamber of Commerce into a strong, vital force for getting things done.

Until a permanent Chamber office is established, he asks that telephone calls be made to 886-2185.

Adjacent counties—Pike, Martin, Johnson, Magoffin and Knott—are coal-producing areas, with some of the counties prouder and others anti-union, the order pointed out that the court is of the opinion that the trial should be held in a non-coal-producing county "where the chances for a fair trial could most likely be had."

The court pointed out that it is mindful of the fact that, if at all possible, a case in change of venue should be transferred to an adjacent county for the convenience of all parties concerned, but added that "the main question is the closest place where a fair trial could be had."

The defense had suggested several counties outside Eastern Kentucky for the trial, but Madison was chosen from that list after the Lewis family had indicated it would be more preferable.

Anderson was indicted last Jan. 27 for the Lewis slaying. He has been in liberty under $50,000 bond, and for a time was under a court order to remain outside this county. That order later was suspended and he has returned.

The trial date will be set later by the Madison court. The bond set here for Anderson remains temporarily in effect, but issues of the case, including bond, will be matters for the Madison court to handle, according to Judge Conley's order.

Injunction Seeks Mining Company Operation Halt

Joe D. Weddington and Clifford G. Bevins, of Prestonsburg, last Saturday asked the Floyd circuit court to issue a temporary injunction to restrain the F & R Coal Co., Inc. and its president, Frank M. Hurm, of Breathitt county, from operating a coal tippie near David after the company allegedly had violated terms of an operating contract.

They also asked that they be adjudged a lien on all improvements, including equipment and rolling stock, and to recover $32,000 and such other sums that a final accounting may show to be due.

Plaintiffs claim the company entered into an operating contract with them last September to mine a boundary of coal and to use their tippie facility at Permele, near David. They say F & R agreed to pay them $20,000 a month advance compensation through November, 1977, $30,000 a month from that time till May, this year, and $40,000 a month thereafter. These payments were to be recoupable from tonnage mined and run over the tippie.

Besides the alleged $32,000 due them, they claim an undetermined amount is due David L. Francis under a sub-lease agreement.

The suit says plaintiffs notified the company on June 21 that the contract was terminated but that it continues to operate.

A hearing on the injunction petition was set for Tuesday afternoon.

(Claims made in civil actions represent only those of the plaintiff.)

Ten Years Ago

(June 27, 1968)

Creation of one new voting precinct, Arkansas, to bring the county's total to 43 and changes in the boundaries of two existing precincts were made Monday by order of County Judge Henry Stumbo. The flurry of Highway Department firings last week reached into this highway district. Hewie Hicks, 59-year-old Lackey miner, was killed last Thursday when he was caught beneath a slatefall in a mine of the Adkins Mining Co. at Eastern. A nine-member team representing the Office of Economic Opportunity began here Tuesday the study of Appalachian Volunteers' work that Governor Louie B. Nunn requested last April. The Kentucky Court of Appeals last Friday handed down a 4-3 decision in a Knott county landowner's case which held that the "Broad Form" deed permits coal companies to strip-mine for coal without paying the landowner damages. Kentucky State Police troopers have cited 56 persons who were caught in a raid they staged on the cockfighting operation on Doty Creek, near McDowell, the night of June 15. Eighteen-year-old Robert Clemons, of Wheelwright, Sunday became the 15th person to be drowned in Dewey Lake. Three former Floyd countians were instantly killed last Sunday morning when their auto was torn to bits by a speeding passenger train of the New York Central Railway at New London, Ohio. The dead are: Azzie Hall, 39, New London, formerly of Honaker; his son, Edgill Hall, 15, and his nephew, Harold Ballard Hall, 15. Labor's Share: Myth vs. Reality

By JOHN Q. JENNINGS

(President of John Q. Jennings Associates)

President Carter's plea for voluntary wage restraints is doomed by Meany's rejection unless the Administration can "jawbone" the unions into voluntarily accepting pay increases of less than 37 percent over 3 years (with NO increase in productivity and NO decrease in wildcat strikes.) These are the terms which Carter "jawboned" the coal companies into granting to the defiers of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Mr. Carter might well consider the method used by Prime Minister Fraser of Australia who has been extricating that country from an even worse situation than that which now faces our President. In September, 1976, when I was invited to confer with Mr. Fraser, he was faced with the worst strike-inflation problem in the world. During the preceding three years, pay had gone up over SEVENTY times more than the increase in man-hour productivity.

At my suggestion, Fraser and his Administration embarked on a nationwide "educational campaign", during which they "jawboned" employers not to surrender to excessive union demands—quite the opposite from what Mr. Carter did with the coal companies! Instead Fraser urged executives to remove the veil of secrecy from their companies' financial operations and to give their employees in precise, simple and graphic format "the arithmetic" of the business. Over two hundred corporations, in that nation of only 13 million people, complied with this request. As a result, the rank and file employees were able to figure out for themselves that any pay increase in excess of a corresponding increase in productivity would inevitably push up costs and prices, thereby wiping out the purchasing power of the increased pay. At the same time it would also destroy the ability of their employers to compete in Australia and work markets, with a consequent increase in unemployment. (Ed. This is happening to many U.S. industries—radio-TV manufacture is just one example.) So well has the Australian initiative succeeded that now, only about 18 months later, the National Bank of Australia has been able to announce that "...over the last year there has been a significant improvement in the inflation rate, a slowdown in wages growth and an upsurge in private business investment."

Meanwhile, here in the U.S. nothing effective has been done, either by Carter or by most businessmen to correct the monumental disparity between facts and opinions concerning the factors which determine how much pay can increase without pushing up costs, prices, taxes and deficits. This disparity is by no means confined to union workers; it exists almost universally, up to and including the heads of corporations.

In March, I conducted a seminar on inflation during "Private Enterprise Week" at Campbell College in North Carolina, under the chairmanship of Dr. William H. Peterson. Industrialists and businessmen were invited to participate. We conducted an economic opinion survey among these employers, which was a real "eye opener". We found that these business men had a very sketchy idea about business finance. After the educational program in Australia, the workers "down under" know more about basic business money, than do the managers in America.

When the businessmen were asked: "What portion of the entire National Income is received by both public and private employees in total pay plus benefits?" their average answer was 66 percent. The correct answer was 76.2 percent according to the U.S. Department of Commerce. Less than one dollar out of every four went to everybody else, i.e. to investors, to savers, to lawyers, doctors, self-employed businessmen in taxable income, and even to the government in corporate income taxes.

When these employers were asked "What portion of the two-way split of available corporate income do you believe went to employees in combined pay and benefits?" their average answer was 70.1 percent, with the remaining 29.9 percent having gone to corporate net profits, after the payment of corporate income taxes. The facts, according to official statistics of the U.S. Department of Commerce, were that employees of all U.S. corporations got 90.1 percent of this "two-way" split in 1976, net profit taking the remaining 9.9 percent.

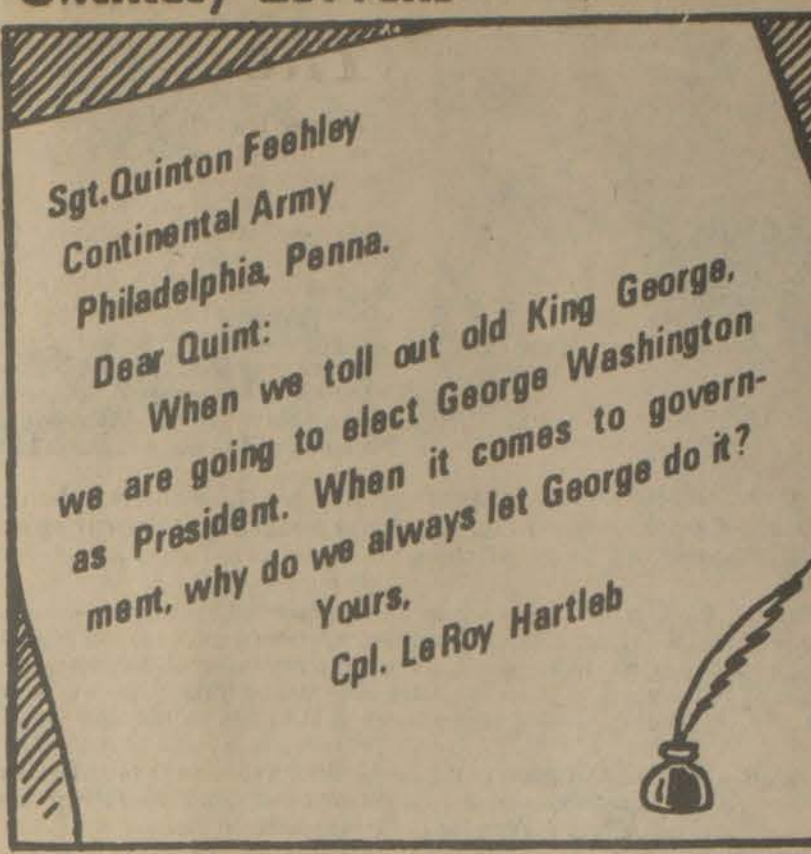

These employers estimated the percent of Profit Margin on Sales, after taxes, in the Food Chains to be an average of 9.4 percent whereas the Conference Board had reported 0.6 percent, i.e. six CENTS profit on each ten DOLLARS of sales. In the Petroleum Production and Refining Industry, they guessed 12.8 percent, whereas the correct figure was 5.1 percent.

Finally, these employers were asked "By what percentage could total pay plus benefits be increased annually on a national average basis without causing pay-cost, price-push inflation?" Their average answer was 5.0 percent. Negotiated wage increases are already twice that amount. Productivity has increased only 1/2 of 1 percent (the businessmen had incorrectly guessed the figure to be 4.6 percent), therefore average pay increases should only have been 1/2 of 1 percent so as to avoid the pay-cost-price spiral.

When a group of top level businessmen and industrialists have opinions so far different from the facts concerning pay, productivity, capital investment, profits and inflation, is it any wonder that the general public, including rank and file union members, and even politicians, can so blithely accept such flagrantly inflationary increases as the coal miners got? Is it any wonder that other union members, in both government and private industry, should make so clear to Mr. Meany that they WANT him to reject the President's plea for "wage restraint"? The Australians have proven that union members will respond favorably and cooperatively when such information is conveyed to them. Isn't it about time that Carter and U.S. businessmen learned the facts and shared them with the workers?

Unlikely LETTERS By Williams

Letters to the Editor

The McDowell School

As the parent starting all the sudden interest in McDowell High School, I feel I must reply to Mr. Miller's letter.

First of all, since we have just been in McDowell the past four or five years, I was unaware of the schools condition the past 20 years. Upon learning, I could not just forget the conditions until something happened and then complain. My child's life is too precious for that. He cannot be replaced.

As to why no one else has ever complained, I do not know. I think it is peculiar that people away from McDowell seem more concerned than parents of McDowell students. Evidently they fear retaliation. We have been told it would happen to our children because we "rocked the boat." We feel the teachers and principals are responsible people. We have been happy with all teachers we have come in contact with.

In my letter, I did not criticize Mr. Grigsby or anyone. I only stated our concern about the condition of McDowell High School. Has any of the accomplishments or projects (we are proud of them all) brought out in Mr. Miller's letter made the high school building any safer? Or has it only covered up a little of it? How much has the years of leaking roof weakened the ceiling beams or done other unseen damage? Of all the things mentioned in Mr. Miller's letter, none concerned the safety of the high school building. This is getting away from my original letter. We don't want blame, we want corrective action.

We have been told that McDowell, Garrett, Betsy Layne and all the old buildings having oil used on their floors for so long are firetraps. The buildings would go up so fast, it would be impossible for the children to get out. If the state fire marshal is willing to take this responsibility, I would like it in writing.

We would like to know if our Board member, Dr. Mary Hall, is concerned enough to go with a group of parents and inspect the building.

We wish to thank the parents calling to offer their support. Also those offering support through their letters. We are glad to know they feel as we do.

Critical of Theatre

For the past two years I have been driving by the Almar Drive-In Theatre on my way to work. During the past few weeks, I cannot help but be shocked at the great decline in the "quality" of pictures showing at this theatre. And if the billboards are shocking, just think of the scenes which are clearly visible from the highway!

I realize that to many people business is strictly a moneymaking venture. But it seems to me that a person who trades moral values and self-respect for cash, is suffering a loss which is not tax deductible.

At the risk of sounding narrow-minded, I think that it is time that (a) parents stop letting their children and teenagers attend theatres which show such garbage and (b) people who have any respect for themselves and their Creator speak out against it.

March-to-December School Term Suggested

I was reading my paper (dated June 14, 1978) and I saw that the school calendar sets Aug. 11 as opening of the school term. Reading down the column you will find all the days set that are to be taken off, and each year the pupils have to make up election days and it is not right, for elections could be set on Saturday, not on Tuesday, and Saturday would cause more voters to turn out, for if they have anything to do on Tuesday they will do it and not go to the election. I also think the school calendar should be set for March 21, or near that date, and go out in December, at Christmas vacation. It would save fuel and winter driving and let the children have their spring vacation about the time miners take their vacation.

Black Lung Injustice

I am writing this letter that I wish you would publish in the paper. We are from Kentucky and proud of it, although we have lived in Michigan for 30 years. I still call Kentucky home. My name is Kathlene Kozee. I know you don't remember me, but you do remember my mother, Mrs. Pearl Bringham.

I would like for the people of the mining industry to know what a dirty deal they have done to my mother about the black lung. You know, and almost every one there knows, her husband, Sam Bingham, worked hard in the mines for over 40 years, and she could never get a thing. They wouldn't even listen to her. I live in Ypsilanti, Mich., and know so many widows and men getting black lung money. I am not mad because they are getting it, but some of them only worked in the mines a few years and they can sit and tell HOW they get it. My mother wouldn't lie to get the money, and I guess nowadays that is what you have to do. She doesn't live in Prestonsburg now but would love to—that was her home.

I have written to the headquarters of the union and also to the Representative, but nothing has been done. I really think she is entitled to something.

Hits Women Libbers

Your readers must have danced with gleeful approval, as did I, over your editorial on mounting taxes ("The Message—Loud and Clear," June 14). I'm sick and tired of keeping Senators and Representatives in luxury, while I hardly know how to make ends meet.

Thank you, too, for "Washington Dateline," by Henry Hazlitt. He's one of the best. It pays to read him.

Now won't you give us some editorials on E. R. A. and Pornography? God knows, someone needs to speak up for the right and not leave our once great land open to "kooks" and the "live and let live crowd" to do all the talking!

I wonder how many of your readers read of the satanic orgy by Women Libbers at the University of California? The Los Angeles Times reported that 400 females danced and frolicked in a form of worship to pagan female goddesses. They danced, bare-breasted; cheering Isis, Astara, Demeter, Artemis, etc. They said they wished to "replace a biblical God with a frankly pagan approach." The Times added that witchcraft is taking a leading role in the E. R. A.

E. R. A. is 100 per cent against God and the Bible. Like it or not,—and E. R. A. does not,—Man is head of the home. A bitter price will be paid by these wretched females and even more wretched males who uphold E. R. A.

The pornographic picture is so vile that only a totally unread or depraved person could uphold it. People like Larry Flynt or Judge Margaret Taylor, of N.Y.C., or the magazine, "Christopher Street," which promotes and advocates sex perversion. The flood of evil engulfing a once-great land is the answer to all people, Christian or not, who wonder about the results of pornography.

God have mercy and pity on the children and teens of America! Adults are selling them, body, mind and soul, into a life of horror and an eternity of hellfire. It's time we live the Word of God, and not by words of men.

More about Roads

We have a question for the leaders of the Ky. Highway Dept. and Floyd county:

Where has the money gone that was meant to repair the roads? The money definitely has not been used for road repair. Unless you call patching the potholes with gravel road repair.

Some roads are so dusted you have to turn your headlights on to see if any other cars are coming, or pull over until it settles down. This describes the Bill Hall Branch road. My son has asthma and has a very hard time breathing with all the dust. Looks like the Ky. Highway Dept. could put some oil or something on the road, to prevent so much dust.

Presley-Anderson

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Anderson, of Dorton, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Cheryl Ann Anderson, to Terry Douglas Presley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Presley, of Dana.

The wedding will take place Saturday, July 1. The couple will be united in marriage by the Rev. Walter Akers at the home of the groom's parents at 2:30 p.m. A reception and household shower will follow. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

The Summertime Charm of Kentucky

Summer is calling and who will answer? Who will leave behind the push-pull, heave-ho, stop-and-go life for a day and a time that awake to silver-taseled grass and sunrises brighter than a bed of old-fashioned pinks? Who will greet summer with a trip to the countryside where sideroads lead to serenity, or who will find a quiet spot in the city with a different peacefulness?

Some of the calm beauty of Kentucky summer is visible from parkways and interstates that thread Kentucky like silver cords around priceless gifts. You and your family can enjoy many packages and gifts of beauty by following, the cords to side roads, lanes, paths and hiking trails.

From the parkway on a bright summer day a farmer is seen looking over a field of corn while his sons work busily in tobacco. From the interstate, green fields are split by youngsters on ponies. Near the river you wave to anyone on a boat and the anyone waves back. You nod a greeting to a driver with his 18-wheeler and he nods back. Near the Tennessee line you see a pioneer village and wonder about a way of life and wish inwardly for some of the old-time slow mountain ways.

In eastern Kentucky sideroads still lead to quiet hollows where families rest on the front porch at noon and evenings. A wave of the hand is answered by a wave, and a friendly 'hello' gets a friendly greeting. In the western section where rivers temper life to the water's flow, the accent might be different but the friendly greeting is the same.

If you are hop-scotching around the state you will note the special warmth of Kentuckinas everywhere—not from the weather that can vary from humid and hot by day to cold and snugly at night, but from an ingrained something that began ages ago.

"We are looking closely at Kentucky as a place to retire," commented a 40-ish New Jersey woman who graduated from Kentucky Wesleyan College when that school was located in Winchester. "When I first came to Kentucky I couldn't get over the warmth and pure friendliness of the people. We're thinking of a small place near Lexington."

The couple nonetheless was side-roading through the state, looking at parks, lakes, recreation developments, tourist lures and even noting public libraries. "The bluegrass is lovely and so are the hills. He likes rivers, lakes and fishing. I like flowers, reading, hiking and nights out for plays, musicals and the like. We know it's all right here in Kentucky."

Travelers this time of year will find deer in many park areas throughout the state. There are foxes, racoons and other wildlife (and some of the animals not so wild). Chipmunks, rabbits and other ground creatures add life to roadsides while birds chatter and sing. Streams wash rocks clean for collecting and add a cool shadows in deep hollows. Green summer makes new and fresh much that was brown and fallow last winter.

Ears hear music from stages in parks, dinner theaters and anywhere people gather. At dusk when Kentucky's regions acquire a magical beauty, human music blends with sounds from a multitude of creatures to perform in harmony. Eyes see trees in silhouette and faces of a happy, contented people. Hands touch in friendship's handshake, then reach to feel the soft down of a mountain magnolia's bloom.

Wafting from a hollow on a Kentucky sideroad is the aroma of fresh coffee, country ham and fried potatoes, maybe the heady fragrance of homemade bread. These smells direct you and other travelers to the nearest restaurant, dining room, campsite or picnic area where the taste of Kentucky foods hits the spot.

Mountain ways and lowland customs, bluegrass beauty and river lore, village charm and city conveniences, border compatibility and hospitality overall—Kentucky is calling you to summer fun.

Carroll Order Results In New Development Group

Gov. Julian Carroll announced last week the formation by executive order of a new Appalachian Development Council.

The announcement was made at the conclusion of a three-day Kentucky Appalachian Development Conference held at Morehead State University campus. The development council will play a major role in putting into action the recommendations resulting from the conference.

Speaking of the council, Carroll said, "They can launch the ideas that have been generated at this conference. That is their purpose."

Carroll further pointed out that the council will be run by the people of Kentucky Appalachia. "That is their most important initiative," he said. The 19-member council will also act as an advisory body to Development Secretary William L. Short, Carroll's alternate representative to the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC), and to the Governor's Economic Development Commission, which is Carroll's main source for development of programs and policies for eventual legislative or executive action.

Kentucky's ARC staff, a division of the Development Cabinet, will provide staff assistants to the council.

In a short organizational meeting following the conference, G. B. Johnson, president of the Second National Bank of Ashland, was elected chairman. Bill Adair, of Rockwell International, Winchester, was elected vice-chairman, and Mrs. Sid (Jeanie) Douglas, the only female member of the council, was elected secretary.

Other members of the council include Charley Kirkpatrick, president, Deposit Bank of Monroe County, Tompkinsville; W. C. Hambley, mayor of Pikeville; James Witten, Paintsville; Wallace Maffett, mayor of Richmond; Pete Worthington, Ewing; Sen. Bert Ed Pollette, Harlan; Bill James, vice president, Bank of Mt. Saving Money When The Wind Blows

The day may be coming when every time the wind blows you save money.

Engineers at a leading industrial research laboratory are helping to develop small wind-powered generators that can supply the electric power needs of an average house.

Harnessing the wind's energy is not a new idea. During the 19th century, tens of thousands of windmills in Europe were busy grinding grain and pumping water. Early in this century, many American farms had their own windmill generators.

But these old-fashioned windmills were not efficient machines. Steam engines, diesel engines, and electric motors eventually took over their traditional grinding and pumping chores. Windmill generators all but disappeared in the 1930s when America's rural electrification program brought inexpensive electric power to all corners of the nation.

The windmill may soon be back, thanks to our national commitment to develop alternative energy sources. Growing concern over the cost and availability of oil and natural gas have prompted researchers to take a new look at wind energy.

One U.S. Department of Energy research program underway at the United Technologies Research Center, in East Hartford, Ct., is using technology developed for helicopter blades to create efficient wind turbines. Gone is the sail-like "fan" of old windmills; in its place are a pair of slender blades that resembles a helicopter rotor.

The resemblance is more than skin deep: the blades are made of the same high-technology materials found in the latest Sikorsky helicopters built by United Technologies.

The full-size version of the new wind turbine will measure 28 feet from tip to tip. When joined to a generator, the turbine will convert a 12-mile-per-hour breeze into 2,000 watts of electric power. A 20-mile-per-hour wind will produce 8,000 watts.

Some animals sleep all summer. This is called estivation and usually occurs in climates where summers are dry and hot and food is scarce.

Closing Arguments Heard In Church Schools Case

Closing arguments in the circuit court case involving the accreditation of Christian schools will be heard by Judge Henry Meigs on August 14. Twenty-nine witnesses testified during the three-day hearing last week at Franklin Circuit Court, which pitted the Kentucky Association of Christian Schools and pastors and parents of children attending those schools against the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education and the state Department of Education.

During the three days of testimony, former Governor Bert T. Combs, representing the elementary and secondary board and the department of education, sought to prove that the state has not only the right but the obligation to set minimum standards for all schools, public and private.

William Ball, a Harrisburg, Pa., attorney representing the Christian schools, argued that the standards set by the state interfere with the mission of the church-related schools and the free expression of religion.

The controversy began in May 1977 when the state board refused to accredit 20 Christian schools for failing to meet minimum standards in such areas as textbooks, facilities and certification of teachers.

Administrators of church-related schools involved in the suit testified that they believed the state should have the right to determine health and safety factors, but they objected to using state-approved textbooks and hiring state-certified teachers.

Witnesses for the state pointed out that even though 19 Christian schools are not accredited, 310 private and parochial schools do have state accreditation.

Multiflora Killer Training Set July 10

Tordon K. training will be conducted July 10, John E. Sparks, Extension agent, announces.

For those who are having a problem getting rid of those pesky multiflora roses. There is a chemical that is available now that has been deadly for them. Because of the toxicity of tordon on tobacco and fish, special training is needed on how to use the chemical safely before you can purchase it.

A multiflora rose demonstration was conducted on the farm of Grace Conley. Different chemicals were used along with tordon K. The results of these chemicals on the multiflora rose will be given at the meeting.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. at the Arts and Music room of the Floyd County Library.

For more information call the County Extension Office at 886-2668. The meeting is open to the public.

OUTDOOR LORE

by Nevyle Shackelford

With foliage resembling that of a fern and small vibrant yellow flowers in a small round cluster, the strong-scented tansy is quite a wildflower.

Planted around doorsteps, it will keep away ants and flies and, according to another old-fashioned belief, a sprig of this weed worn in the hair will cause the immediate departure of unmentionable vermin that will infest the heads of careless and somewhat less than fastidious persons.

An alien plant imported from Europe, it has been used in medicine since the Middle Ages. Old Dr. Gerald recommended it and in more recent times, so did some more enlightened American physicians. In 1875, Dr. O. Phelps Brown of Jersey City, recommended and prescribed cold tansy tea for such diseases as dyspepsia, hysteria and jaundice. He also said it was useful in "convalescence from exhausting diseases."

A warm infusion of tansy, he wrote, was a "good diaphoretic, emmenagogue and tonic."

At one time too, country people gathered the tansy for making a beverage called "tansy wine," which was said to be stimulating, delightfully flavored and good for rheumatism.

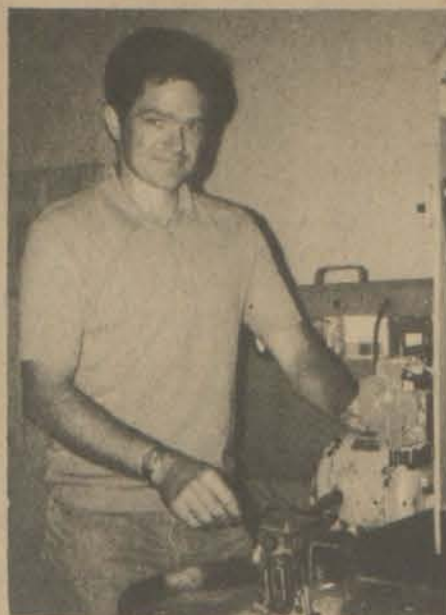

The botanical name for tansy is "Tanacetum vulgare," which comes from a Greek word meaning immortality. This perhaps is the source of the old and all but forgotten superstition that a "tansy button," (tansy flower) carried on the person protected from danger. It is said that in pioneer days when hunters taking off in quest of game always carried a tansy flower in their hunting pouches.

According to the late naturalist and outdoor writer, Mrs. William Starr Dana, the tansy typifies the bitter herbs which in the Roman Catholic church are eaten at or during the Paschal season. Cakes made of its leaves and eggs and called "tansies," are also eaten during Lent. At least this is what Mrs. Dana had to say about this common roadside and hayfield weed.

The tansy is a perennial and as long as it receives some sunlight each day, will grow in about any type soil. Florists find it useful in fresh bouquets and the dried blooms for attractive and colorful additions to herb wreaths and dried floral displays.

Fluid milk and cream are the most consumed foods in the U.S.—291.2 pounds per capita.

Tops in His Class

Ronnie Hall, of McDowell, a student in the mining mechanics program at Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, will be honored at graduation, June 30. Mr. Hall will receive recognition for having achieved the highest grade point average in his graduating class, 2.82 out of a possible 3.0. A graduate of McDowell High School, Mr. Hall has achieved proficiency in the five basic areas that comprise mining mechanics-electricity, mechanics, welding, hydraulics and electronics.

"Ronnie has excelled at Mayo, and he has learned well the skills that are needed in an ever-changing industry," observed Ezra Mitchell, mining mechanics instructor.

The student is the son of Edna Sizemore, of McDowell. He plans to enter the mining industry after graduation.

4 from Area Compete In National Event

More than 100 vocational students from Kentucky will compete in the 13th annual National Skill Olympics, June 27-30, at the Birmingham (Ala.) Civic Center.

Shafer Bailey, director of Vocational Industrial Clubs of America in Kentucky, said the state's 110-member contingent includes winners of statewide skills competition last April and delegates to VICA's national convention, held each year in conjunction with the Skill Olympics.

Among those are Jeff Adams and Erma Ward, Paintsville, and Glen C. Mims and Gary Coleman, Pikeville.

Perkins To Attend Meet at Pikeville On Warning System

Congressman Carl D. Perkins will participate in a meeting on the Eastern Kentucky flash flood warning system at 7:30 p.m. July 6 at the Pikeville High School auditorium.

Others who will have a part in the discussion are Robert A. Clark, assistant director of the National Weather Service, and Herbert S. Groper, acting chief, Office of Disaster Preparedness, both of Washington, D.C.; Charles Knudsen, director of the National Weather Service central region, Kansas City; John Lee, meteorologist in charge, and Dean Braatz, hydrologist, Cincinnati River Forecast Center.

"The establishing of an efficient flash flood warning system is a necessity in our area to protect lives," Congressman Perkins said, stressing the importance of public participation in the Pikeville meeting.

"I will do everything that I can to see that we have a warning system that works," he added.

"Erethizon dorsatum" is the proper name for a porcupine. Not surprisingly, the term means "irritable back." However, the July Reader's Digest tells us, under that prickly exterior porcupines have an essentially lovable nature.

UMWA Funds Claim 11 Coal Companies Owe Them $244,000

The United Mine Workers of America (UMWA) Health and Retirement Funds last week reported that during the months of March, April and May, 1978, complaints were filed against 11 companies signatory to UMWA wage agreements, which are allegedly delinquent in paying royalties to the Funds.

Involved is one Kentucky company, Ken How Corp., also four companies in Alabama, three in West Virginia, one in Illinois and one in Pennsylvania. The amounts believed to be in question total more than $244,000.

Litigation is the final step in the Funds' program of monitoring income to assure that signatory employers pay all monies owed to the Funds. When it appears that a company is delinquent in royalty payments and the amount due is not forwarded promptly, it is standard procedure to enter into litigation to recover all royalties due plus interest, attorney's fees and court costs.

Size Limit Makes For Better Bassin'

BY TED CROWELL

Biologist in charge of Kentucky's bass research programs

If you are catching more bass over 10 inches long this spring but keeping fewer of them, you are seeing one of the temporary effects of the increase in the size limit on black bass which became effective Jan. 1.

More fishermen are catching more bass, but many of these fish are in the 10- to 12-inch size range and must be returned to the water, where they can be and are being caught again.

The increased numbers of 10- to 12-inch bass remaining in the water will also provide an immediate benefit of more spawners, which will insure more stable bass populations in the future.

Although fishermen are presently encountering more sub-legal bass, these fish will reach 12 inches later this summer and we expect to see a noticeable increase in the pounds of bass harvested. Next spring, there should be more legal sized bass in all of Kentucky's waters.

A major stumbling block to quality bass fishing has been overharvest, particularly of bass in the 10 to 12 inch size range. Increasing the size limit to 12 inches will have beneficial effects that could not be gained by restricting the daily creel limit and retaining a 10 inch size limit.

Not only will we have larger bass in the near future, but we should also see, because of the 12 inch limit on bass, an improvement in fishing for other species as well. Bass in the 10 to 12 inch range are efficient predators and should help create a better balance between predator and prey species.

Fisheries biologists have advocated increasing the size limit to 12 inches for several years, since it has been apparent to us that the fishing pressure on our bass populations have been increasing greatly—our creel surveys now indicate that the bass is by far our most sought after game fish. In addition to the increased size limit, another method to help relieve some of this pressure is establishing catchable populations of other large game fish, giving anglers more choice of what to fish for. Our data indicate, for example, that bass populations are increasing in Cave Run Lake because more and more anglers there are fishing for musky instead of bass. We should see, within the near future, increasing interest in the rockfish at several lakes where the populations of this salt-water transplant are now reaching high levels.

Through our bass research project we plan to keep a close watch on bass populations and to evaluate more fully the effects of the 12 inch limit. We have begun a new tagging program and are offering cash rewards from $1 to $1,000 to anglers who return one of orange plastic tags which some 2,500 bass are now wearing.

Should you catch one of these tagged bass, check at a dock or marina for mailing envelopes and additional details on this program.

Blood Center Raises Prices to Hospitals

The Central Kentucky Blood Center last week announced a blood price increase to the 33 hospitals in 40 Central and Eastern Kentucky counties that it supplies with blood and blood derivatives.

Effective July 1, the processing fee for whole blood and for "packed" (concentrated) blood cells will rise 10.1 percent, from $27.25 to $30.

Administrator Tom Watts attributed the increase primarily to personnel costs.

"We're trying to keep above the minimum wage," Watts said in an interview. "We've got to be a little above it to be competitive with the hospitals."

The federal minimum wage, now $2.75 an hour, will rise to $2.90 next January.

The center, in a memo to hospital administrators, also noted that supplies and materials had become more expensive.

Other hikes in processing fees announced by the blood center include: Leukocyte-poor red blood cells (RBCs), $29 to $32; washed RBCs, $52.50 to $55; frozen RBCs, $62.50 to $65; fresh frozen plasma and single-donor plasma, $10 to $15. Fees for platelet concentrate and cryoprecipitate remain unchanged.

In the case of whole blood, packed cells and the three types of RBCs, a $12.50 replacement fee is added to the processing fee, unless the patient is a member of a blood program or later replaces the blood used. The replacement fee will remain unchanged at $12.50.

The increases in processing fees are "directly related" to the cost of preparing the products, said Watts. He noted that the center's last fee hike was in October 1976.

Pupil Personnel Group Honors Richmond Slone

Meeting at Jenny Wiley State Park, the membership of the Eastern Kentucky Association of Pupil Personnel Workers voted unanimously to declare May 12 Richmond Slone Day.

The action was taken. Billie Clayton, of Morehead, reported, "in honor of the exemplary work Mr. Slone has done as director of pupil personnel in the Floyd county schools."

Mr. Slone retired recently.

Remove Ticks Quickly

To Avoid Spotted Fever

With the tick season on in the state, a University of Kentucky entomologist tells how to avoid serious problems that may be caused by the pests.

"Prompt removal of attached ticks reduces the chances of getting Rocky Mountain spotted fever from ticks carrying the disease," says Chris Christensen, Extension entomologist in the College of Agriculture. "However, rough removal may leave mouthparts embedded which may cause other infections."

The specialist recommends that attached ticks be touched with a drop of chloroform, gasoline, turpentine, or a hot needle to cause them to relax their mouthparts. Christensen adds that if these materials are unavailable, a steady, gentle pull with the fingers will work.

Christensen advises that the wound be probed with a sterilized toothpick in carbolic acid, silver nitrate, or iodine. But he adds, "See a physician if mouthparts are left in the skin".

Ticks may be avoided by staying away from heavily foliated areas, and keeping your grass trimmed can cut down the tick population around your home, according to the specialist.

"But the main thing is to be aware that ticks are especially active this time of year," says Christensen. "Check yourself and your children after outdoor activities to be safe."

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL
Director of Environmental Studies,
Morehead State University

In 1974 the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) announced that drinking water contained small amounts of toxic chemicals which could be cancer causing. These carcinogens were found in Mississippi River water; analyzed samples from the New Orleans drinking water supply, for example, disclosed 66 different chemical toxicants.

Shortly after this disclosure, Congress passed the Safe Drinking Water Act, to become effective in the summer of 1977. This law required the nation's independent water supply systems, rural and urban, to adopt the same standards. Some 41 different standards, or parameters, must be measured periodically. These include pH, dissolved oxygen, chlorine content, nitrates, phosphates, oil and grease, and many others. Some parameters must be measured daily, others weekly, and a few monthly. The law does not apply to homes with individual water supplies, but it does apply to any business which has a private water supply and serves at least an average of 25 people daily. Of course, all city and county systems are covered. This means that more than 90 percent of U.S. citizens will be affected.

The law not only covers the standard parameters, it requires that known carcinogens, including aldrin, dieldrin, DDT and other pesticides, chloroform, carbon tetrachloride, and benzene, be trapped and measured. These are difficult compounds to trap and many water plants must eventually have their filtering systems entirely reworked, usually employing activated carbon filters which must be completely changed every two months. New testing machines to record chemical levels must also be purchased.

The necessary filters and machines are expensive and although, in Kentucky at least, state agencies will be performing most of the testing, local water districts must find ways to finance plant modifications. EPA is presently concentrating on cities with populations exceeding 75,000. About 70 of these cities will be required to modify their plants at a five-year cost of more than 750 million dollars, almost all of it coming from strained city budgets because virtually no federal funds are available for this purpose.

The extra expense means that per capita water bills will go up from 5-10 dollars per year, according to EPA. Local politicians and private engineers say this figure is much too low and that 50 dollars is a more realistic figure. Some cities are also stalling, waiting for actual proof that the chemicals, known to be carcinogenic in lower animals, cause cancer in man. Next: wildlife smuggling.

More Explosives Stolen in State, US Agency Says

More explosives were stolen in Kentucky than in any other state last year, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) reported Friday.

It was the second year in a row that Kentucky was awarded that dubious distinction.

According to ATF statistics, 34 thefts of explosive materials were reported in Kentucky during 1977, more than 10 percent of the 327 thefts that occurred nationwide.

A total of 13,803 pounds of explosives and 18,711 blasting caps were stolen in the state, ATF said. This compares with 29 reported thefts in 1976 involving 76,376 pounds of explosives and 10,589 blasting caps.

Although Kentucky and West Virginia led the nation in explosives thefts, they ranked behind other states in bombing incidents.

California led the nation with 166 bombings. Illinois recorded 151 bombings, Ohio 107 and New York 100.

Kentucky was fifth with 65 bombing incidents. West Virginia recorded 12 bombings.

Nationwide, there were 1,377 bombings last year, ATF said.

ATF also recovered more stolen explosives in Kentucky than in any other state last year. Agents made 61 seizures involving 8,301 pounds of explosives and 2,719 blasting caps.

In West Virginia, ATF agents made 34 seizures, involving 6,727 pounds of explosives and 753 blasting caps.

Numerous bombing incidents reported in Kentucky and West Virginia were related to last summer's wildcat strike activities by members of the United Mine Workers.

In one highly publicized incident, a bridge was destroyed in Letcher county last Nov. 1, causing $200,000 in damage. Four persons were arrested on Nov. 16. ATF said two more suspects in the bombing will be indicted.

A small amount will get you started, but the return is sizeable.

A small amount is all you need in the beginning . . . then, some time and patience . . . and, later, the pay-off. Whether you're cultivating a Passbook Savings Account or growing watermelons . . . the principle is pretty much the same. In both cases, the results are sweet.

McBrayer Stresses Need For Diversity of Industry

Kentucky Commerce Commissioner Terry McBrayer said Monday night that Eastern Kentucky must begin to develop a diversified economy by attracting additional industry to the area.

McBrayer's remarks were made before 500 participants gathered at Morehead State University for a three-day Appalachian Development conference last week.

McBrayer noted that while coal will continue to dominate Eastern Kentucky's overall economic development, the region's coal must be better managed to avert a boom-and-bust economy. "The revenue derived from our coal industry—mainly severance tax revenues—must be spent more professionally on regional water and sewer facilities, industrial sites, schools, health services and generally, to aid in more industrial and economic development," he said.

Cincinnati, Detroit and Chicago, sound and substantial employment alternatives must be developed," McBrayer told his audience.

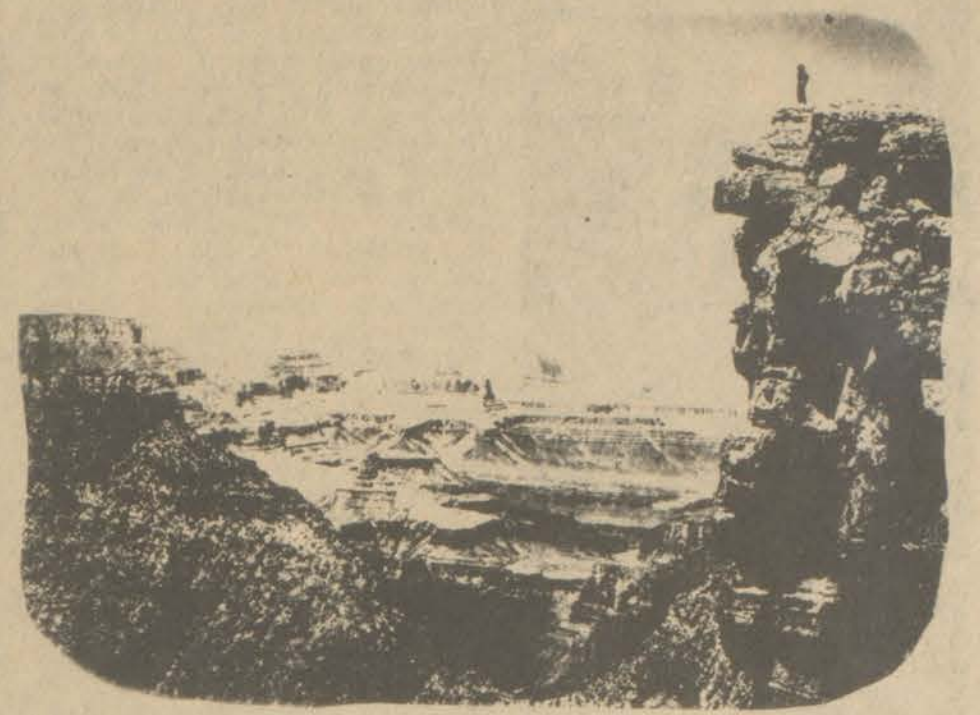

McBrayer added that the people of Appalachia were the region's greatest resource and that the remaining raw resources of the area must be used primarily to benefit those people. "We can determine the future of Appalachia. It is not beyond our grasp," he said.

Earlier, Gov. Carroll told the conference he will form a Kentucky Appalachian commission to help solve the region's problems on a continuing basis. The governor also said the region has "one of the (state's) greatest opportunities for growth," and emphasized the need for economic diversification in the area.

Appalachian conference participants continued meeting in four task forces and plan to submit their final recommendations to Gov. Carroll. The proposals could be presented to the 1980 General Assembly for possible legislative action.

MAN WHO HIJACKS BUS IS CAPTURED
ATLANTA—A man commandeered a city bus Saturday and forced the driver to take him to the Georgia Capitol so he could see the governor. He was captured when the bus arrived, authorities said.

We had to dig deep for the Grand Canyon.

$15,000,000 is a lot of money for a hole in the ground.

But that's what we paid Mexico for territory that included the magnificent Grand Canyon.

Americans had to dig deep for the money. So they invested in government securities. Because they knew they could take stock in America.

You can take stock in America today by buying Savings Bonds.

It's easy when you join the Payroll Savings Plan. That way, a little is set aside automatically from each paycheck to buy Bonds.

It's a great way to save. For a new house. Or your children's education.

Or even a trip to the Grand Canyon. So buy Bonds. It's a savings plan you'll really dig.

ERA To Be Debated on 'The Advocates'

"Should the states ratify the Equal Rights Amendment?" That question has been emotionally debated throughout Kentucky and the nation for almost seven years. It is now being argued on KET by "The Advocates." Airing

Thursday, July 6 at 9 p.m., and Sunday, July 9 at 2 p.m., the program topic is particularly timely since legislation currently before the House Judiciary Committee would extend the ratification deadline of the amendment, if approved.

Advocating the ratification of the ERA is Laurence Tribe, a professor of constitutional law at Harvard. Witnesses against the question include anti-ERA leader Phyllis Schlafly and former U.S. Senator Sam Ervin.

While the question will not be finally resolved in this program, just as it has not in countless other debates before it, the ERA issue is one which will be in the forefront for some time to come. "The Advocates" ask that viewers send in their votes after watching the program, however, to decide the victor—at least for the night!

The address for "The Advocates" is: P. O. Box 1978, Boston Ma., 02134.

Driving is a heavy responsibility that each of us must recognize and be willing to share when we take to the highway. It's not to be treated lightly, for our lives and the lives of our loved ones literally depend on how we handle ourselves behind the wheel.

Last Memorial Day weekend, nine Kentuckians died and another 496 were injured in highway crashes. Every one of those deaths and injuries could have been avoided.

The leading causes of those crashes were alcohol and excessive speed.

If you are planning a trip, don't take unnecessary chances. Don't drink if you are going to drive, obey the 55 MPH speed limit, use your seatbelt and start your trip early enough to allow for rest breaks along the way.

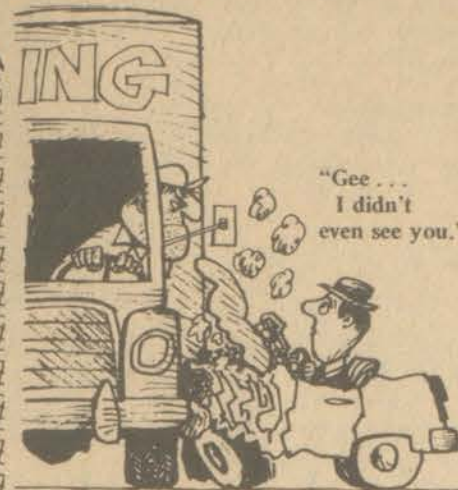

LET'S ALL DRIVE TO STAY ALIVE.

Sincerely,
Julian M. Carroll
Governor

DRIVING IS A HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY

55MPH

DID YOU KNOW???

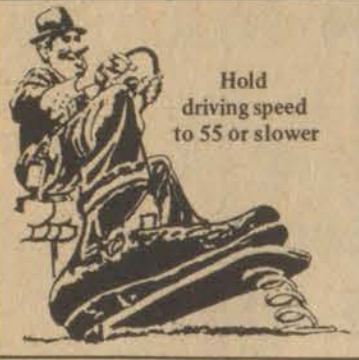

- 25-34-year-old males are most likely to be involved in an accident
- Most accidents occur on country roads
- Speed is the number one killer on Kentucky highways.
- Defective brakes and tires cause most accidents

IN CASE OF EMERGENCY

- Pull off roadway
- Raise hood
- Tie white cloth to radio antenna
- Remain in vehicle
- Use CB Channel 9 (if you have a CB) to call for assistance
- Turn on emergency flashers

INCIDENT REPORTING PROCEDURES FOR CB'ERS (CH. 9 MONITOR)

- WHAT - Nature of incident
 - WHERE - Exact location - Direction of travel
 - WHEN - Time incident occurred
 - WHO - Names or number of persons involved
 - WHY - Reason incident occurred
- Describe any persons or vehicles involved - Time is essential - Be brief

Hold driving speed to 55 or slower

THE BIGGEST PROBLEM on the highway is the "PROBLEM DRINKER" with arrests for offenses involving alcohol. He is responsible for 2/3 of fatalities involving alcohol.

HELPFUL HINTS ON HAVING A Healthy Garden

YOUR VEGETABLES—DO YOU TREAT THEM WELL?

You should have little trouble turning your garden into a movable salad bowl if you sow vegetable seeds once a week over the planting period. Here are some other tips on the tender treatment of your plants.

- Be sure not to crowd your seedlings. Thin most of them while they are still seedlings to give the entire crop room to grow. Remember that radishes, lettuce and other leaf vegetables should be thinned just at the point when they are good enough to eat.

- When sowing seeds directly in the garden, mulch between all the rows, but not on top where the young plants will come up. Wait till the plants are well formed, then weed around them if necessary, and mulch again.

- Be sure to treat your vegetables for soil insect pests before planting. Use an insecticide evenly over the surface of the soil then mix it in. One insecticide is Spectracide® Crawling Insect Control Granules with Diazinon®. This all-purpose insecticide controls many harmful insects that attack onions, radishes, cabbage, carrots and many others.

- Though your vegetables are food for you, they in turn need food, too. Spectrum® Earth Care Professional Plant Food (20-20-20) is now available, which can be used effectively on all growing plants. Mix one tablespoon in every gallon of water for your vegetables. Feed every one to two weeks by drenching the soil thoroughly.

- Remember, too, that your garden should never be located too close to the north side of buildings or too near shade trees or tall growing hedges.

By treating your vegetables well, you'll have no trouble making a grocery list, since many of your groceries may be growing in your own garden.

Do it now...

It's never too late for a soil test

Most home gardeners take a soil sample between November and March, in time to get back the results before spring planting. But C.R. Roberts doesn't know many folks who got the job done this winter before snow storms and frigid weather set in.

"It's not too late," says this horticulturist with the UK College of Agriculture Cooperative Extension Service. "Take that sample in for testing now and you'll know what the soil needs for your late-summer and fall garden."

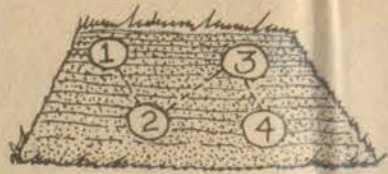

Roberts thinks it's a good idea to test your soil every year or two to find out if it has enough food to grow big healthy garden produce.

"Why not grow your fruits and vegetables in the best soil possible?" he asks, even if you just have a room-size space set aside for a garden patch in your backyard.

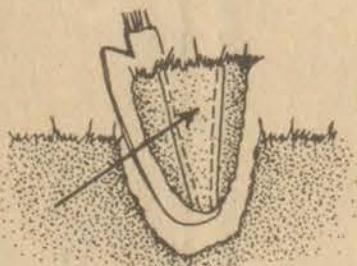

Your local county Extension agent for agriculture will send your soil sample in to the UK soil testing laboratory for you. This service will only cost about $1.00.

Here's the right way to take your soil sample, according to Roberts:

Taking a Soil Sample

1 Pick four scattered spots in your garden and dig up a 6-inch-deep shovelful of dirt from each place.

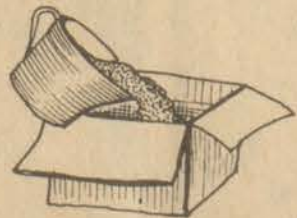

2 Save a slice of soil from the middle of each shovelful.

3 Mix up the four soil samples in a bucket.

4 Turn it out on a piece of newspaper to air dry at room temperature for 2 days. (Do NOT dry it in the oven.)

5 Put 2 cups of the soil sample into a small box.

6 Take the box of soil to your county agent's office. He will get it tested for you. (It won't cost much.)

Agriculture

What to do next

In two or three weeks, your county agent will give you the results of the soil test. He will tell you how much lime and fertilizer to use, if you need any. Or he will tell you how much manure or compost to use if you are interested in gardening the organic way.

manure, fertilizer and lime

garden soil

Spread the fertilizer evenly over the garden area where new plants or seeds are to be set out or sown. Then turn it under 6 to 10 inches deep with a rototiller, spade, or plow.

Contact the county agent for agriculture in your local Cooperative Extension Service office for more helpful information. His services are free, paid for by your taxes.

Ask him for a copy of the new spring home-gardening tabloid, written for you by UK Extension horticulturists.

YOUR ART AT HOME: A GROWING ASSET

Plants die. Popular art seldom remains popular for long. Original oils are priced prohibitively. And posters can fall.

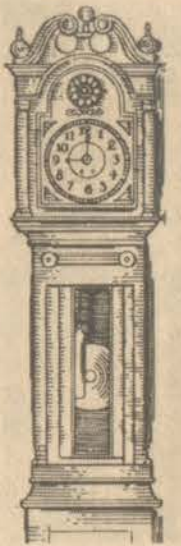

So, it is not surprising that more and more people are turning to collector's plates as investments in decorating. Collector's plates represent affordable art, as well as a chance to see real gain in their market value.

Plates range in topic from Madonnas to ships at sea; they can be made from china, silver, gold, pewter or crystal. While the majority depict paintings, some have raised, sculptural designs. And there's a style for every room of the house, whether the home be contemporary or colonial.

Seasonal scenes, historic sites or reproductions of world-famous tapestries command attention in a living room; charming Mother's Day plates, Rockwell series, or depictions of flora and fauna can add class to a kitchen. Children's rooms become friendlier with Sunbonnet Babies, Peanuts or Disney characters; and Dad's den gains distinction with Father's Day plates or the bicentennial series.

As with any collection, decorative plates display to best advantage when grouped in one area for impact. Light colors will show best against a darker background, gleaming like pearls on velvet, while dark colors are most effective on a lighter ground.

Collector's plates can be displayed dramatically when hung on walls, spaced on shelves, or clustered together on a table top. Diana Gordon, art director for the Bradford Exchange—world's largest broker of limited-edition plates—strongly urges the use of hangers and stands specifically manufactured for the purpose of display. They are generally available through gift shops, antique dealers and interior designers.

The pattern of the display you choose can be as important and personal as the pattern of the individual plates. Arrangements taking the form of filled squares lend solidity, making a bold decorating statement; a vertical rectangle can emphasize the height of a room; a horizontal one helps to visually widen a space.

In contemporary homes, a diagonal display of plates adds drama, as do triangular effects with the single plate equally pleasing at top or bottom point. Old-fashioned motif plates can wind gracefully up a Victorian staircase; while brightly-colored, jewel-toned plates can lend excitement to an oft-ignored corridor.

The most important point about having and displaying a collection of any type, of course, is that it pleases you. That you'll find a collector's plate to do so is virtually guaranteed. For more information, write for your free copy of History of Plate Collecting, c/o The Bradford Exchange, 9333 Milwaukee Avenue, Niles Chicago, Ill. 60648.

The ancient Egyptians had a 360-day year, to which they annually added five more days that did not count as part of the year.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Workers' Wants

Most good business people have found it a big help, if they want to succeed, to have a good understanding of the needs of their employees, including their attitudes towards unions.

The National Labor Relations Act specifically states that employees have as much right to oppose a union as they have to join one, and many workers are doing just that. Throughout the country only a fifth of the labor force is unionized.

At J. P. Stevens, for instance, employees have rejected the union in 11 out of 12 elections held.

Several explanations have been given for the union's loss record. These include community opposition to union organization. There is opposition by the workers themselves... without unions, they consider themselves well off.

Stevens, the nation's second largest textile manufacturer, has found that a direct relationship with its employees works not only to the best interests of the company, but to the benefit and best interests of the employees themselves.

State Pupil Immunization Law Often Ignored in Floyd, Claim

First-grade classes throughout schools in this county could be drastically reduced in enrollment if state law requiring immunization is enforced, and a health department spokesman this week said that every effort is being made to see that this is done.

Although the law requiring immunization against diphtheria, tetanus, poliomyelitis, whooping cough and measles has been in effect for years, it has been ignored in many cases and some children have attended all eight grades and high school without any official school record of immunization. "Last year," the health department representative said, "only one principal that I know of tried to enforce the immunization requirement."
Students in kindergarten, first grade, and all transfer students, according to KRS 158.035, must have a TB skin test, a physical examination, and an immunization certificate. The law states: "The governing body of private and public schools shall enforce the provisions of this section."

The Floyd County Health Department will be conducting immunization clinics in its mobile van throughout the county where parents may bring their children to get TB skin tests, immunizations, hemoglobins, and urinalysis, free of charge. The first series of clinics will be held as follows:

Wednesday, July 5—Floyd County Health Department, Prestonsburg, 8 to 12 and 1 to 4.
Friday, July 7—Floyd County Health Department, Prestonsburg, 8 to 12 and 1 to 4.
Monday, July 10 wayland Methodist Church, 10 to 12 and 1 to 2.
Monday, July 17—Osborne Elementary School, Bypro, 10 to 12 and 1 to 2.

A schedule of the remaining clinics to be held in various sections of the county will appear in future editions of this paper and will also be announced on local radio stations.
Parents are urged to help prevent epidemics of whooping cough, diphtheria, and measles among our school children by having their children immunized.

Martin Co. Road Project Resumed

A road project on Ky. 292 in Martin county halted when local residents blocked the road to protest damage caused by overweight coal trucks, is being resumed.

State Transportation Secretary Calvin Grayson has directed Bureau of Highways contractors to resume work.

Members of the Martin County Better Roads Organization closed off a 3.9-mile section of the highway near Lovely earlier this month to dramatize complaints that heavy trucks were tearing up the gravel and asphalt road and spreading dust.

The chain and fence blockade prevented construction workers working on a $400,000 road base reconstruction project from moving in their equipment.

Transportation officials, concerned about the delay in a project originally scheduled for completion Sept. 1, filed suit in Martin circuit court last week seeking to reopen the road.

Martin Circuit Judge W. B. Hazelrigg said last Thursday the makeshift barricade could remain, so long as Bureau of Highways trucks, construction equipment and school buses are able to use the road.

Stuart Victor, Grayson's assistant, said in a telephone interview Friday that "from news reports and Kentucky DOT personnel present at yesterday's hearing in Judge Hazelrigg's court at Inez, Secretary Grayson understands that local residents are temporarily restrained from interfering with the Kentucky DOT project on Kentucky 292 in Martin county."

Victor said Grayson told contractors to resume work and make every effort to control dust during construction.

"He is optimistic this can be accomplished, while coal truck traffic is not using the road," Victor said.

Transportation officials had not received a copy of the judge's order Friday, but Victor said officials would comply with the ruling.

Local residents' contend they have the legal right to block the road, since state money was not used in construction of that 3.9-mile section. They say that stretch was financed by private contributions and is private property.

However, the state says it has maintained the segment, which connects state-financed portions of the highway constructed in the mid-1960s. The state questions whether residents can legally block the road since public funds have been spent for its maintenance.

The judge scheduled another hearing July 10.

Notice of Intention To Mine

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that: Express Coal Co., Inc., Box 310, Pikeville, Ky. 41501., intends to file an application for the deep mining of approximately 67 acres on Frog Branch of Little Mud Creek, Floyd county. The proposed operation is approximately 1 mile from State Route 2030. The surface of the area to be mined is owned by Kentucky Coal Corporation. A brief description of the kind of mining activity proposed is: deep mine.

The application will be filed at the Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, Pikeville, Ky. 41501.

Persons wishing to file written objections and/or request a formal administrative hearing in regard to the above described deep mine should notify the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection within 30 days of the date of this notice. A copy of the newspaper clipping must be attached to the written objection. The objection or request for a hearing will reference application number 036-0001. Such objection or request must be in accordance with KRS 224.081 (2) and must be forwarded to the Director of Permits, Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

Notice is hereby provided pursuant to 30 CFR 715.13 (d) (10) and KRS 350 that the proposed post mining land use does not constitute a change from the pre-mining land use. Public comment regarding a proposed change in land use may be submitted to the address listed above.

$1,000 Reward Offered After Home Is Burned

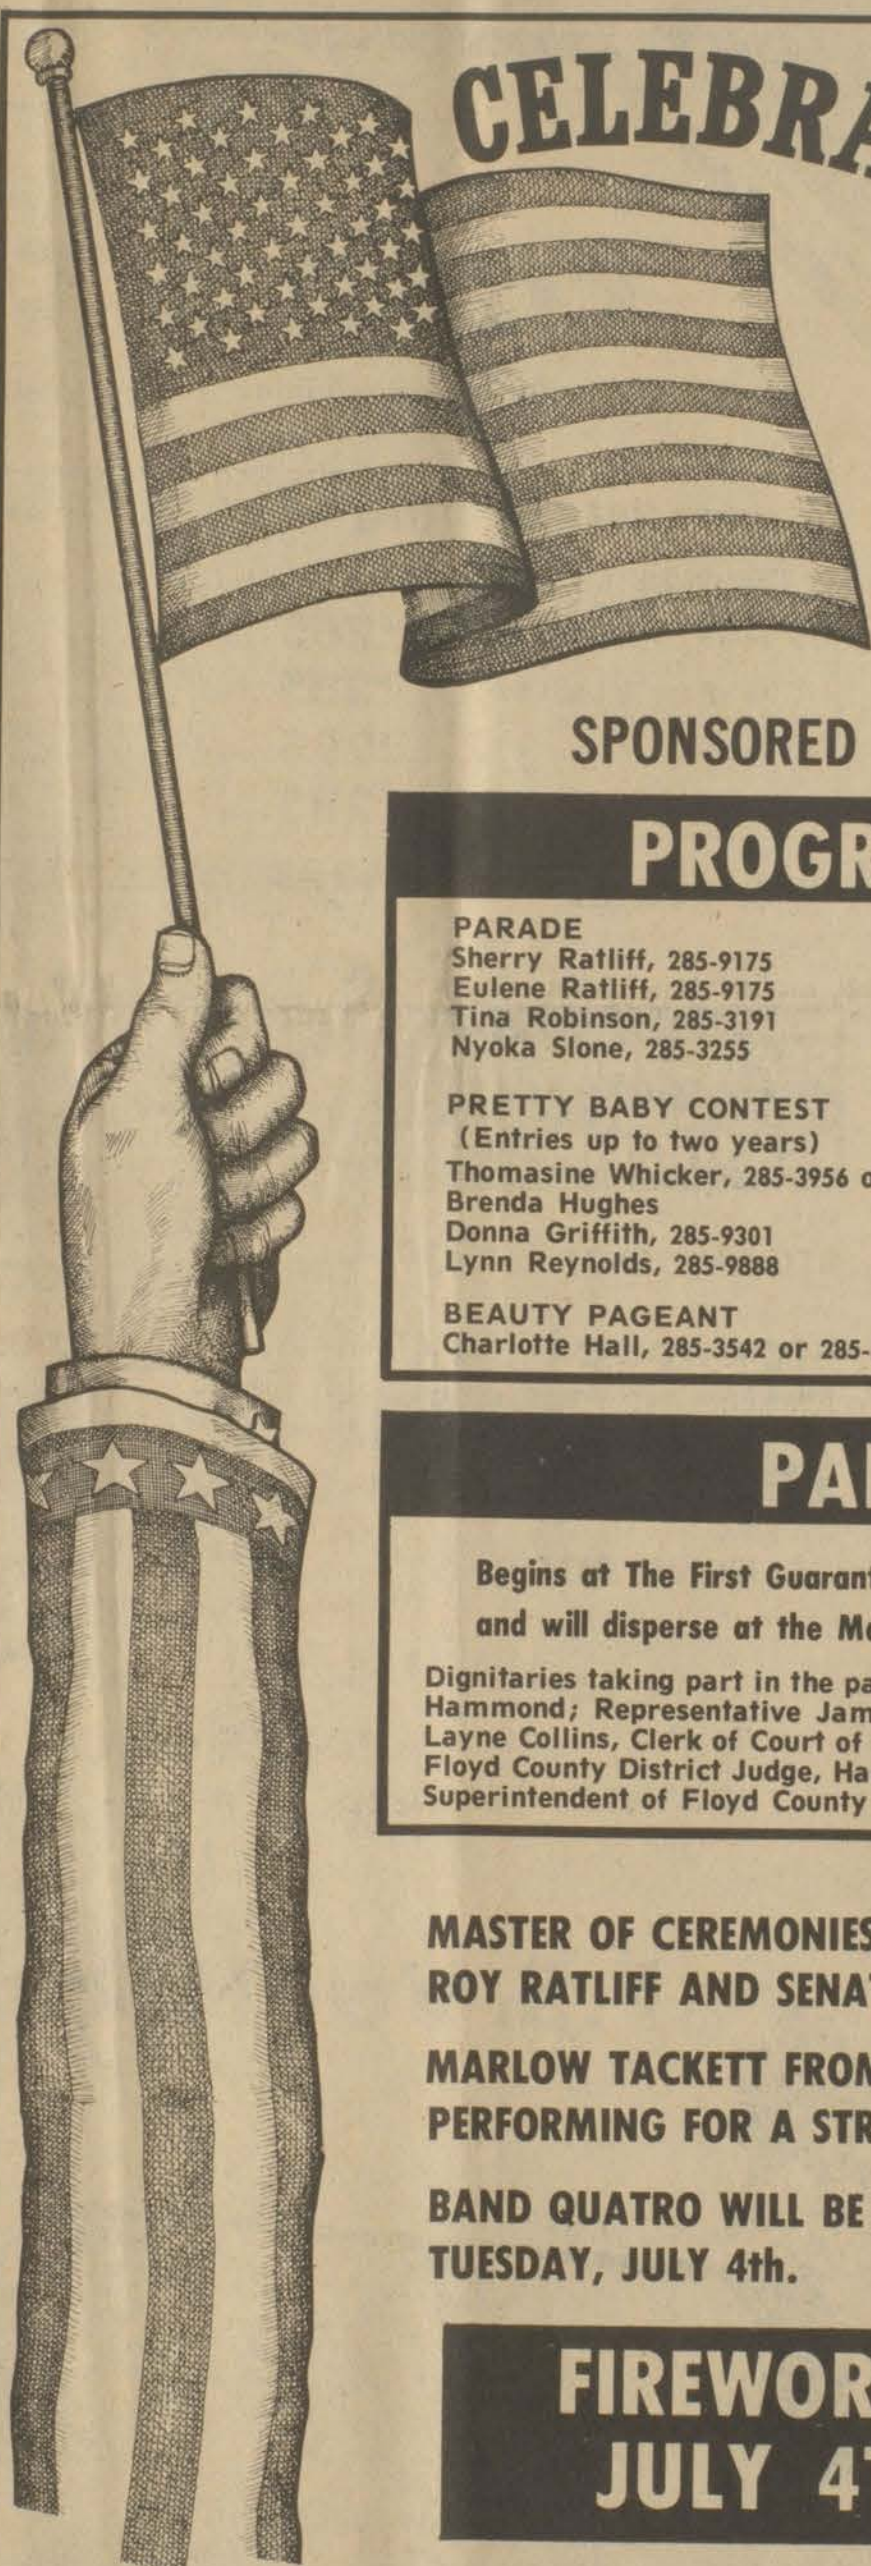

Elder Lee Hamilton announced Monday after his home on Mud Creek had been destroyed by fire that he is offering a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the fire.

The 10-room frame residence burned between 3 and 3:30 p.m. Friday while the family was away from home. A detective investigating the blaze was quoted as saying, "It was an apparent arson."

Hamilton and members of his immediate family have been under restraint since June 9 by district court order from returning to the residence. The order was issued, it was explained, as a protective measure, since Hamilton would have to pass, en route to his own home, that of the late Rev. Hatler Hamilton for whose slaying last month he is under bond.

Nothing was saved from the Hamilton home. Hamilton, who has been a minister of the Regular Baptist Church 15 years, said the home was partially insured.

Eastern Kentuckians Visit European, Russian Mines

Dr. Maurice E. Bailey, chairman of the division of science at Pikeville College and founder of the college's mining technology program, and Burlin Coleman, president of Kentucky Coal Operators and Associates and executive vice president of Pikeville National Bank, were among Kentucky coal people who toured coal mines in England, West Germany, France and the Soviet Union during a three-week visit in May.

The trip was sponsored through People-to-People, a United Nations organization established during the administration of Dwight D. Eisenhower for the purpose of bringing together people of various nationalities on a professional basis. The trip was coordinated by Harrel N. Kirkpatrick, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals.

The Kentuckians who accompanied Bailey, Coleman, and Kirkpatrick on the trip were Harry LaViers, Jr., president of South East Coal Company; Dave Zegeer, an experienced mining engineer and mine consultant and member of the Pikeville College board of trustees and John Stratton, vice-president of Gates Engineering. Coleman's wife and daughter and the wives of Zegeer, Bailey and Stratton also traveled with the group. The women visited hospitals and schools in the mining communities.

Bailey and Coleman were particularly impressed by two aspects of the trip: the cordial receptions they received in each of the countries and the difficulties of mining in each location.

Coal in good mining conditions generally runs in level seams at least four feet thick with solid roof support. The Europeans and Russians have mined most of their "good" coal, and are now operating in much more precarious conditions.

Among the situations the group encountered were: the Russians mining coal in 19-inch seams; the English mining coal under the North Sea; all the countries deep mining coal with temperatures in the 90-degree Fahrenheit range; all mining with pitched and faulting seams, and sometimes with thick partings; and the Germans surface mining coal in which they are leveling and then rebuilding entire villages. "Before the trip, I had no perspectives on European coal mining practices at all," Bailey commented in his office at the college. "At Newcastle in England we went down an elevator shaft about 2,500 feet, then went five miles out under the North Sea. Compared to entering a deep mine in Eastern Kentucky, it was quite an experience."

The coal in the underwater mine was extracted by the longwall system. Bailey said, "In fact, all the deep mines we saw during the trip utilized the longwall method." Longwall mining involves literally shearing coal from the seam in a long, repetitive motion. Most mines in the United States utilize the conventional or continuous system, where coal is extracted from the face making "rooms and pillars." Longwall has a larger initial cost, but can be more economical in the long run, depending on mining conditions.

Costs of mining in Europe and Russia are great, running an average of twice the cost in America, or more.

"We are presently more efficient," Coleman said. They are getting about 1.8 tons per man production, while we are getting about 7 to 8 tons per man. But you have to remember, they have more mining problems than we have."

Bailey agreed. "For the most part, our mining conditions are easier than theirs. Mining has been going on there for decades. In the U.S. we are still mining the level seams, whereas they are going after coal in tougher conditions."

Of the countries visited, only German mines are not completely government owned and operated. There the government owns the mineral rights, but private companies do the mining.

Bailey observed that "in spite of the different forms of government and ideologies, all are operating with about the same level of efficiency and with about the same costs—and are also using essentially the same THODS."

Coleman was surprised at certain safety methods. "We saw virtually no rock dust (an explosion suppression made of limestone) except in France."

The mines tend to favor water in preference to rock dust for explosion suppression. Both men were impressed, overall, with the safety practices.

Bailey thought it interesting that in no country, including Russia, were women allowed to work underground. In fact, the only women allowed in the mines at all were nurses on mission.

Reclamation practices also interested the men. Coleman said, "In Russia, we came to a section that I thought was mountainous. But the mountains actually turned out to be huge gob piles." Bailey added that their former mining sites "are not a particular eyesore. Some of them are landscaped and planted with trees."

The educational abilities of the supervisory personnel impressed Bailey. "All the mining engineers I met were highly competent. The Germans and English have excellent mining education systems. In fact, you see many Ph.D. engineers in coal mines there. A Ph.D. mining engineer is unusual in this country."

After assessing the European coal operations, Bailey feels the world market for U.S. coal will be stronger in the future. This country still has years of good coal in good mining conditions, as compared with the Europeans and Russians, who are mining the last of their quality coal.

Sugar Daddy.

On August 26, 1842, Norbert Rillieux put a patent on a sweet idea.

It was a way to refine sugar. To help the sugarcane juices evaporate more quickly, he enclosed condensation coils in a vacuum chamber. A process that's made things a lot sweeter ever since.

You can make your future a little sweeter, too, by buying U.S. Savings Bonds through your Payroll Savings Plan.

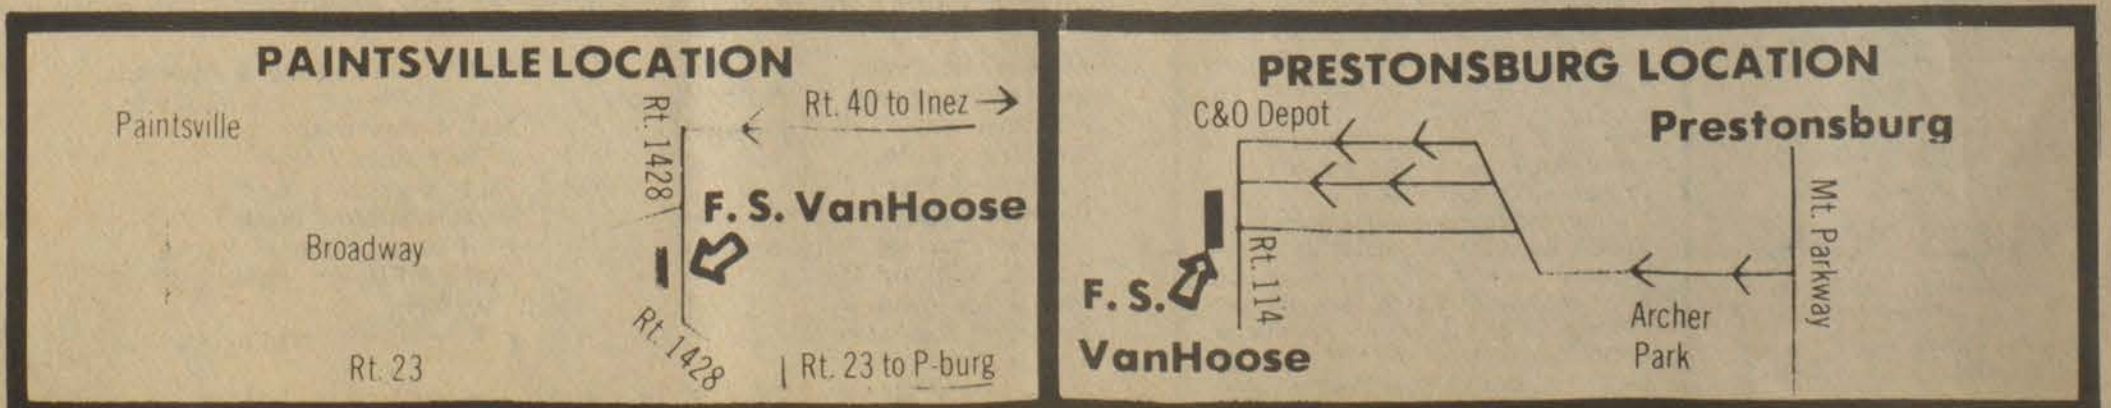

They're the dependable way to save for an education, vacation, or even retirement. Because they always pay off with interest.

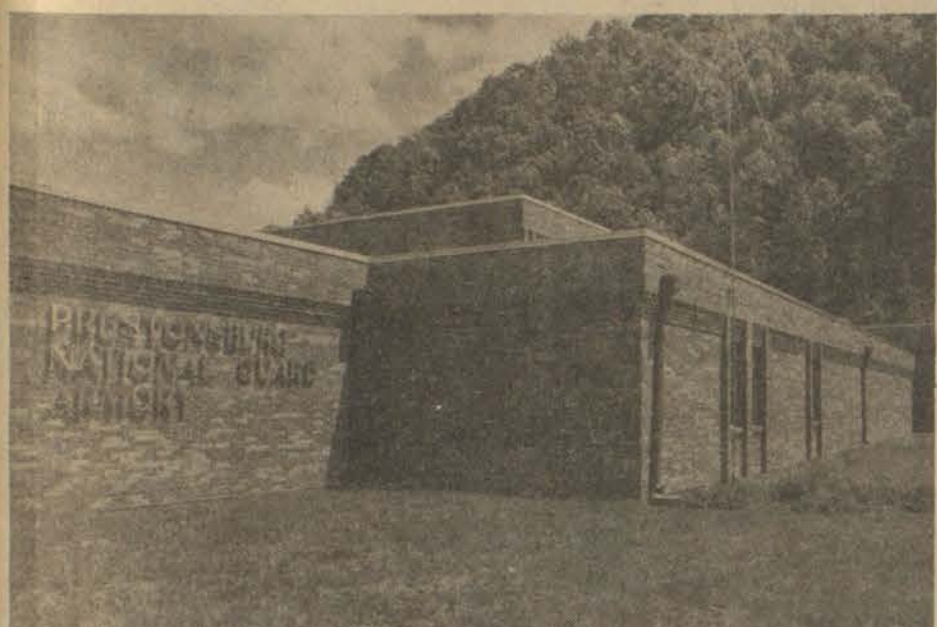

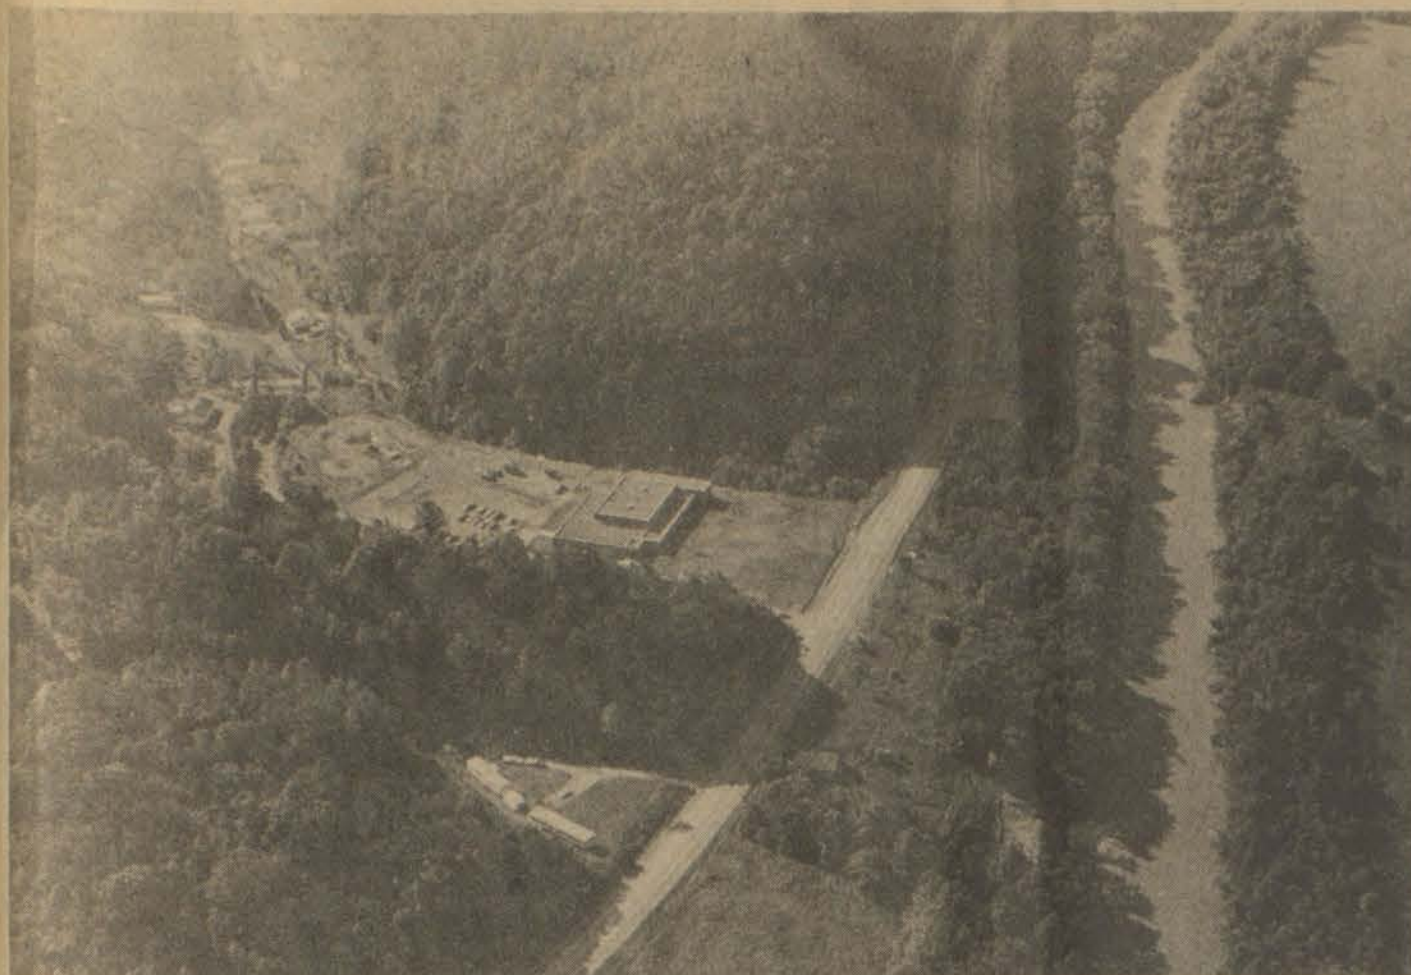

So buy U.S. Savings Bonds. And be a "sugar daddy" in your spare time.

Series E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4 1/2% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Declares War on Illegal Stripmining

Eugene Mooney, secretary of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, last week declared war on illegal strip mine operators in the state and announced that the full measure of new strip mine laws will be brought to bear against them.

"I want to put on notice any persons in the state who have in the past strip mined without a permit or intend to that after June 17 (the date new state strip mine criminal laws take effect) my department will be seeking criminal penalties against illegal operators," Mooney said. "In other words we intend to seek criminal convictions and jail sentences and fines for any person who willfully and knowingly strip mines in Kentucky without a permit."

New strip mine laws taking effect call for fines of not less than $5,000 and not more than $25,000 for each day that a person willfully strip mines without a permit. This new criminal offense is classified a class a misdemeanor which means persons convicted of illegally strip mining may also be sentenced to up to one year in prison.

Federal penalties for illegal strippers call for a $10,000 fine, up to one year in prison or both.

"With the advent of the new legislation in the state, we cannot create and maintain enforcement credibility unless we first pursue and convict the strip mining outlaws that ravage the environment of the state through illegal strip mining," Mooney said. "They perform no reclamation, do not pay either taxes or royalties and impose the costs of their illegal operations on the citizens of Kentucky."

"I want to make it clear today that pursuit of illegal operators and most importantly, their conviction and imprisonment, will become the number one enforcement priority of the reclamation bureau and this department," he added.

Mooney said that in anticipation of the new laws the department had already begun intense surveillance in a number of southeastern Kentucky counties where illegal operations have historically been a problem.

"Since January of this year," he noted, "the department has cited over 150 operators for illegal mining operations in these counties."

In addition to citing them for non-compliance, in a number of cases the department has obtained civil injunctions to stop these operations, according to Mooney. "These enforcement actions do not seem to discourage them," Mooney stated, "perhaps jail sentences will."

Mooney said he intends to create a special unit within the reclamation bureau to deal solely with illegal operations and that professionally trained criminal investigators will be hired to conduct this policing and enforcement campaign.

"At the same time our legal office will begin acquainting itself with criminal procedures of local courts for securing warrants against illegal operators and alerting county prosecutors and district judges that we will begin initiating criminal proceedings in their courts against illegal strippers," Mooney added.

He said that within the department's legal office attorneys will be designated to work full-time on securing criminal convictions and that new inspectors will be hired to "go after" them also. He added that within each of the division's seven field offices at least one inspector will work full-time on illegal operations.

"It is a reflection of the heinousness of the crime, the nature of the people committing it and the seriousness of our intention that we intend to send these inspectors to Eastern Kentucky University's law enforcement school to study investigative techniques," Mooney said.

According to Mooney the state has also been plagued by operators who, under the guise of beginning deep mine operations, obtain underground mine permits from the state Department of Mines and Minerals, but instead strip coal from the surface then leave the area unreclaimed. He said that when cited for this infraction they invariably defend their actions by claiming they were just "facing up" for opening a deep mine.

Mooney said his department will begin furnishing the federal Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement the names of companies and persons guilty of illegal strip mining violations. Federal royalties are due on all mined coal. The department already reports violators to the state revenue department who collect severance tax on coal.

According to Mooney, illegal strip mining under the guise of underground mining should be shut down to a great extent after August 3, the date by which all underground operations must have applied for a permit to conduct surface operations from the department in addition to a deep mining permit.

"The new procedures will allow department to see that environmental degradation in surface areas does not result from underground mining and at the same time we will be better able to see that what is permitted as an underground mine is indeed such and not an illegal strip mine," Mooney said.

TITLE IX RULES CLARIFIED

Students "who demonstrate that their religion prohibits certain co-educational courses" may be excused from them or be offered a course only with students of the same sex, according to one of several classifications of the Title IX regulations issued by the U.S. Office of Civil Rights. The other exceptions to the Title IX requirement for co-educational classes are that students may be separated (1) due to "objective standards of ability" in physical education classes; (2) for participation in contact sports; (3) for classes that "deal exclusively with human sexuality" and (4) on the "basis of vocal range for participation in chorus."

Cub Scouts To Go Camping

Cub Scouts in the Lonesome Pine Council, like their older Scout brothers, will be going to camp this summer.

More than 140 Cub Scouts and dads will be participating in two Dad'n Lad week-end camp programs this year under the direction of Lowell Parker, of Prestonsburg, Camp Director.

The popular week-end camps will be held at Camp Shawnee, the Council's Scout camp located in the headwaters area of Dewey Lake. One of the week-ends is being held July 1 and 2; the other, June 24 and 25.

The program will feature the same things older Scouts do: archery, rifle marksmanship, boating, canoeing, swimming, handicraft, nature lore, and of course hiking and camping. Assisting Mr. Parker will be selected members of the camp's regular staff.

"This is the second year that the Lonesome Pine Council has sponsored a Cub Scout Dad'n Lad week-end camp," Parker said. "Last year, we had to turn Cubs and their dads away, so this year we are conducting two week-end camps. Nearly twice as many Cub Scouts and their dads have already registered than attended last year's weekend."

A few spots remain, and Cubs and dads wishing to register should contact the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America.

In Malaya, it was considered bad luck to bring limes into mines.

Lexington Exclusive Ranch Residence
 East End—Lake Area
 This private residence was designed for family living. Built in 1958 by Versaw Builders, only quality materials and excellent craftsmanship were used.
 Located in a secluded and exclusive area of Lexington, this home is situated on a beautiful and quiet lake, complete with wildlife and privacy in Lakewood Sub-division.
 This gracious home is truly elegant from the entrance foyer to the terraced patio. The accent is on entertainment with a place for everyone to do what they like. This 4-bedroom home is zoned for private family living. The master suite has an alcove with built-in desks and bookshelves, and a bay window overlooking a quiet lake. There is also a dressing room and master bath with tub and shower. Indirect lighting adds to the beauty of this area.
 The formal dining room and living room will accommodate the largest dinner party, and the wood-burning fireplace will accent warmth.
 The modern kitchen includes oven and range, dishwasher, disposal, built-in deep freeze, and combination washer-dryer for kitchen towels. The many cabinets will delight any woman, as will the beautiful breakfast room.
 The paneled family room has a woodburning fireplace, wet bar, stove and refrigerator. Adjacent to this room is a pool room, or office or fourth bedroom.
 The full basement has lots of storage room, laundry services, and even room for a shooting gallery. Also, the basement has access to the garage as well as to the house.
 Among other features in this home are a built-in sewing center with machine, many closets and cabinets, central air, storm windows, a new roof, three baths, draperies throughout, wall-to-wall carpeting, and much desired storage space.
 The attached two-car garage, which provides immediate privacy, has an automatic door opener and storage closets for lawn care tools.
 You will appreciate the fine location of this home nestled in the woods and on a private lake. All inquiries confidential.

Vanishing Natural Resources To Be Topic of Meeting Here

Floyd county residents will be called upon within the next month to voice their concerns over the county's natural resources base, according to L. R. Johnson, Floyd County Conservation District chairman.

"Our vanishing natural resources, are they an American tragedy or an American opportunity?—that is one of the questions we must be asking ourselves today," William J. Cantrell, district conservation supervisor, said.

"We are losing valuable farmland daily, wildlife habitat is disappearing, our streams are being polluted and the problems of roadbank erosion are mounting," he pointed out. "These types of concerns will most assuredly be brought out during these meetings."

The first public meeting to record opinions, trends, and needs for natural resources will be held at 7 p.m. July 21 at the Floyd County Library.

"What we learn at this meeting will help the U.S. Soil Conservation (SCS) direct programs in the natural resource field," Johnson explained. "We can actually help set the needs and establish goals for the Department of Agriculture's programs."

The meeting will be sponsored by the Floyd County Conservation District and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. This opportunity to help plan USDA programs is a result of the Resources Conservation Act of 1977. It requires public participation and involvement in setting the needs and goals for soil and water conservation.

The Resources Conservation Act requires USDA to appraise the natural resources on all private land, develop a five-year program to meet the needs, and evaluate progress every year. The first five-year program with the appraisal must be submitted to the Congress by December 31, next year.

The Resources Conservation Act requires a determination of the quality and quantity of soil, water, and related resources, such as wildlife habitat; the ability of these resources to meet current and future demands; changes in resource conditions because of past uses; the costs and benefits of alternative soil and water conservation practices; and alternative irrigation techniques and their effects on conservation and environment.

"At the July 21st meeting we will gather information, concerns and comments from resource-related groups, clubs and individuals in Floyd county," Johnson said. "Our concerns will then be combined with comments from other counties in the state and sent to the Department of Agriculture."

More information on the meeting and the Resources Conservation Act is available at the Floyd County Conservation District office or the Soil Conservation Service office in Prestonsburg.

To be honored by their deans, students must achieve a high academic standing based on a 4.0 grading system.

Floyd county honor students and their UK colleges are:

Kathy Lea May, Prestonsburg, Education; Beckie T. Little, Beaver, Nursing; Julian A. Deaton, Wheelwright, Engineering; Benita Riley, Wheelwright, Communications; James David Flanery, Allen, and Teresa Pelphrey Gibson, Prestonsburg, Business and Economics; Kelly J. Air Test Under Way

The air above 22 Kentucky counties, including two in the Big Sandy Valley, is being used as a giant test tube for the Division of Air Pollution.

The division is inventorying pollution in these counties to provide a basis for a plan to be submitted to the federal government outlining what the state will do in the future to control air pollution. John Smither, division director, explained that the immediate purpose of the inventory is to determine existing air pollution situations in the state's problem or "non-attainment" areas as they are officially known.

The inventorying process actually does not involve collecting the air in a giant test tube but has or will involve almost every level in the division, and information gathered by the division six years ago.

An initial inventory developed in 1972 provided data for emissions in the state. "Since then any changes made at any plant were inventoried through our permitting section, special updates, or special mailings made to get new information," according to Ed Frazier, chief of the emissions inventory section.

For the new inventory, which is in response to guidelines set down by the 1977 Clean Air Act Amendments—the first inventory resulted from the original Clean Air Act—1972 inventory data was sent to the divisions six regional offices so that field personnel could verify the accuracy of this information.

Inventorying the 22 counties began in mid-October of 1977, therefore the program is aimed at obtaining emissions data for 1976 because it is the most recent and complete year in which the effectiveness of the control strategy can be gauged.

Included in the verification process are any new plans or emission sources which are sent to the engineering section in the division's Frankfort office.

"The responsibility of the engineering group," says Frazier, "is to calculate allowable limits for air pollution in a given source of emissions and simply redefine all information about that particular source into calculations."

Because any process that causes emissions of pollutants is governed by federal or state regulations, the calculations can indicate to the division whether the regulations are working, and if not, the division can determine what should be done to control air pollution.

Officials in the past have indicated the plan generally will mean tightening controls on industry in the state but at this point they can't be specific on whether the plan will mean stricter regulations or a prohibition on new industry which would necessitate offsets.

The target date for completion of the data is June 30. Counties being inventoried are: Bell, Boone, Boyd, Bullitt, Campbell, Daviess, Fayette, Greenup, Henderson, Jefferson, Kenton, Knox, Laurel, Lawrence, McCracken, Madison, Marshall, Muhlenberg, Perry, Pike, Webster and Whitley.

July—Month of Good Eating

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
UK College of Agriculture

That famous naturalist and outdoor essayist, Hal Borland, calls July a season within itself and adds that it is the hope of April, the promise of May and the growth of June, all pushing toward a grand completion.

Mr. Borland is right. It is all that and more. It is the month of blackberry cobbler, boiled, buttered corn, green beans, ripe tomatoes, sliced cucumbers steeped in salt water, and thick brown cornbread. It is the month of garden harvest when, as country people used to say, "Now we can again begin to live high on the hog."

outdoors in protected areas to promote vigorous growth for the winter months. Sow coreopsis seed, secure flowering bulbs for fall planting, and water the lawn thoroughly if necessary and possible. Also water the garden.

Go swimming in the farm pond or the old swimming hole in the creek and by all means attend any farm field day or event staged by the Cooperative Extension Service and other agricultural agencies in your area. These events can be very, very informative as well as a lot of fun.

During the month of July the Old Farmer's Almanac recommends fixing the back porch steps, beating your neighbor pitching horseshoes and getting after crab grass, all of which are worthwhile activities.

In any case, enjoy July. It will come again next year but not this July.

Some have believed that dipping ivory into suspect liquid would reveal the presence of poison.

ATTENDS SPORTSMEN CONVENTION

Bill Pettrey served as a delegate to the League of Kentucky Sportsmen's convention, which convened in Cave City last week. Mrs. Pettrey, Mrs. Rebecca Rasnick and Mr. Pettrey's sister, Mrs. L. L. Nash, of Brooksville who has been their houseguest here for the past few weeks, accompanied him to Lexington, where they spent the week-end visiting Mrs. Rasnick's daughter, Mrs. Don Harris, Mr. Harris and children.

Renamed in honor of Julius Caesar, July was originally called "Quintillis," or fifth month. The Old Saxons, however, had another name for it. They called it "Maedmonat," or mead month. This was because it was the season of the year when they obtained honey from their bee hives and made themselves up a supply of potent beverage called mead.

July has its share of superstitions, two of which still have wide currency among the gentle folk of the land. One is Dog Days and the other is St. Swithin's Day.

St. Swithin was an English saint whose canonization is commemorated on July 15. If it rains on that day, it will rain for 40 days afterwards; alternately, if it is fair, it will continue to be so. That's how the story goes.

St. Swithin died in 862 and was buried in the churchyard of the cathedral at Winchester, England. The legend is that in 971, removal of the saint's body to another spot was halted by a violent rainstorm. The rain continued for 40 days without ceasing. It was therefore inferred that the intended removal of his sacred remains was displeasing to St. Swithin, and the project was abandoned.

Another old belief holds that if it fails to rain on the first three days of Dog Days which begin on July 3, or thereabouts, it will not rain for 40 days. Also if it rains on July 4th, grapes will rot on the vine.

As has already been indicated, July is the month when gardens come into their own. It is therefore time, as the old-timers used to do, to take full advantage of the situation by having fresh vegetables on the table every day and preserving the surplus.

According to University of Kentucky garden specialists, it is also time to plant green beans and sweet corn at two week intervals for late harvest. Also during this month plant seeds of cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower for fall crop transplants.

Sow kale in mid-July, prune climbing roses, divide bearded iris and Oriental poppies, repot houseplants and place

Consumer Comments

Many in Kentucky are facing the task of repairing or improving their homes this spring. Some are rebuilding after tornadoes, others are simply improving upon their homes. Whatever the particular situation, the consumer needs to be very cautious and take steps necessary to insure a professional job. These steps should include:

1. Decide exactly what you wish to have done. Do you really need a new roof? Can the gutters hold up for another year?
2. Decide how you will pay for the job. Borrow the money from the savings and loan? Dip into your savings account?
3. Find a reputable contractor. This step in itself is time-consuming but is probably the single most important thing in the entire decision-making process. When deciding on a contractor, remember to:

- know the contractor's name, address and phone number.
- check the contractor's reputation through the local Better Business Bureau or the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office.
- get a list of previous customers of the contractor and contact them directly for references.
- get several estimates on the job.
- read over the contract before you sign and check the terms pertaining to cancellation and warranty. Never sign a blank contract! Be very skeptical of any high-pressure tactics.
- ask about the type of materials used. Is there a manufacturer's warranty on the materials?
- ask for all oral promises to be put in writing.

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON

After three days of steady rain, it's still cloudy when you decide to try your luck at a nearby farm pond but as you approach the pond you see that something is definitely wrong. The shoreline is littered with dead fish and other fish, still living but obviously in distress, dot the surface of the pond.

Although your first thought is the possibility of some kind of chemical pollution, what has happened to the pond was the result of completely natural forces—the heavy, persistent cloud cover prevented the microscopic plants in the water from producing oxygen. These plants also began to die and their decomposition used even more oxygen.

Finally, there was just not enough oxygen in the water to sustain life and the fish started dying. If the situation is noticed in time, the pond owner can treat the pond with potassium permanganate, a strong oxidizing agent.

This "summer fish kill" is just one of the many problems that can afflict a farm pond, as those who have tried to manage a pond for quality fishing well know. From too many weeds to even too many fish, there are many things that can make a pond less productive than it should be.

If you have a farm pond or are thinking about building a pond, you'll probably be interested in a free publication from the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. This 27-page booklet, "Fish Management, Kentucky Farm Ponds" covers everything from how to get fish to how to make a pond into a money-making enterprise.

For problems that the booklet can't solve, technical assistance is available through the department. In addition, the department will furnish free fingerling bass, bluegill and channel catfish for stocking new or renovated ponds.

The person to see about ponds or pond problems is the county conservation officer. He will have all details on the stocking program and can either suggest solutions to pond problems or arrange for a fisheries biologist to inspect the pond. If you don't know the conservation officer in your county, a quick call to the county court clerk's office should produce his name and phone number.

The deadline for farm pond stocking applications is Oct. 1, but it might be a good idea to start getting the process underway now, particularly if you have a problem pond that needs renovating before it can be restocked.

Social Security Card a 'Must' To Get Kentucky Driver's License

All applicants for driver licenses in Kentucky now must have a social security card.

The new requirement, passed by the 1978 Kentucky General Assembly, makes the card mandatory to confirm a driver license applicant's identity. It will make the number a part of the driver records at the Kentucky Department of Transportation (KYDOT).

Effective June 17, even those who come up for renewal of the licenses must have a Social Security card before the new license is reissued, according to state driver licensing director F. E. Hodges. Previously, applicants were not required to be registered with the federal Social Security Administration.

"We want to publicize the new ruling so that people will be prepared when they come in for their first licenses or the renewal of old ones," Hodges said. He said federal law allows states to pass such legislation for identification purposes. The regulation will help protect the public from becoming victims of false identification, he said.

"In the first place, the social security number offers us a valid means of identification for the Division of Driver Licensing. It also establishes a cross reference so that any driver's record in Frankfort will have virtually no chance of erroneously being picked up on another individual's record," said Hodges.

A driver's official record must be disclosed to insurers who request it, making accuracy in records very important, he said.

Until now, those records showed license numbers which were codes based on drivers' names and dates of birth. In the future, records will include both numbers, according to Hodges.

The new system will offer protection to the public by confirming that the license is issued to the right person. It protects the individual from having his identification "lifted," Hodges said.

In commercial transactions, when a driver needs to establish identification, his license is most often requested by creditors and other business personnel, particularly for check cashing, Hodges said.

"In effect, the Division of Driver Licensing establishes a person's identity when it issues a license," Hodges said. If a false applicant has criminal purposes in mind—such as passing bad checks, obtaining a fake passport, setting up confidence games, etc.—we don't want to help establish the false identity."

One increasing problem is that people use two items to establish a bogus identity: birth certificates (obtained fraudulently from records kept by all states) and driver licenses.

"We have been asking for social security cards for a number of years and we have received good cooperation," Hodges said. "But some people refused to show the cards, he said. Others—especially new teenage driver applicants—had never obtained a social security card.

"The new system won't be a hardship for any valid applicant, since anyone who doesn't already have a social security card can obtain one with a minimum of trouble—and one application lasts a lifetime," Hodges said.

School Theft, Vandalism Cost Set at $1.4 Million

During the school year just ended theft and vandalism in Kentucky schools cost $1.4 million, according to figures released today by the state departments of education and justice.

Justice Secretary John L. Smith and state schools superintendent James B. Graham released the $1.4 million estimate after completing a study of 123 county and independent school districts (687 elementary, middle, and high schools).

A survey prepared by the Office of Crime Prevention and forwarded to all 181 school districts revealed the following information for the 123 reporting districts:

Vandalism is a recurring problem in all but 14 of 123 school districts.

School property damage from vandalism was estimated at $1.2 million. Window breakage, plumbing fixtures, and walls damaged by graffiti, scratching or gouging accounted for a major part of the vandalism cost. In all, 6,783 incidences were reported.

Fifty school districts indicated that vandalism is widespread in one or more schools.

Most schools had serious theft problems during the 1977-78 school year. Theft of school property totaled $176,000; there were an estimated 477 break-ins and more than 1,000 incidences of property theft.

Audio-visual equipment, food, tools, fire extinguishers, gasoline, business machines and cash were most frequently stolen.

Theft of personal property from teachers and students was estimated to have been nearly $40,000.

Both Graham and Smith expressed concern about the problems of vandalism and theft. Graham conceded that "the $1.4 million price tag might be just the tip of the iceberg." Smith said the problem should be viewed as an epidemic and dealt with through an aggressive program of prevention.

"The next step," according to Smith, "is to plan effective strategies to reduce the opportunity for school vandalism and theft." Norman Bryant and Don Dentinger, officials in the Office of Crime Prevention, together with Randy Kimbrough of the Education Department have been appointed to plan basic prevention strategies for next year. A total of 117 local districts have offered to assist in developing a statewide anti-vandalism campaign to begin in the fall.

Dentinger, who designed the survey, said there are no ready-made solutions to curbing vandalism. "We now have some information that will help," he added. "According to the survey, we know when most of the vandalism is occurring: on weekends, at night, and during vacation periods."

Bryant said the Crime Prevention Office will develop security survey techniques for schools, train state and local police officers to examine security weaknesses and recommend security improvements to school principals including the identification of all school property.

Neither Smith nor Graham could say whether school vandalism and theft were more of a problem last year than in previous years. "This is the first time we've asked districts to compile statistics, so there's no basis for comparison with previous years," Graham said.

Kentucky appears to have neither more nor less a vandalism problem than other states, according to statistics. A study conducted by the National Institute of Education for Congress in January of this year shows the annual cost of school vandalism in the U.S. is estimated at $200 million.

The report suggested that middle schools are the most frequent targets of vandalism because the 9-14 group are more vandal-prone. Factors which the national survey study cites as effective are: strictly enforced discipline; physical security and school design, and involvement of parents and community in school programs. The study also gave high marks to school "climate," and concluded that the personal leadership style of the principal and his ability to maintain a firm, fair and consistent climate of school discipline are very important in keeping vandalism down.

Report to The Public

Drunk driving is an offense which concerns many, and in these early months of my work as District Judge I have tried my best to handle these and all other cases as quickly and fairly as I could. It should be remembered that if I as district judge accept a guilty plea I must give the lowest fine.

The record of drunk driving cases brought before me during the period, Jan. 1 to May 31, 1978 follows:

Convictions for DWI with Breathalyzer (BA) reading of 10 per cent, or more—10 for a total in fines of $1,247.50.

Convictions for DWI with BA reading under 10 per cent—none.

DWI amended or reduced, with BA reading under 10 per cent—3, with their fines totalling $212.50.

AMERICA

My country, tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing!
Land where our fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrims' pride;
From ev'ry mountain side
Let freedom ring!

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees
Sweet freedom's song.
Let mortal tongues awake,
Let all that breathe partake,
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

My native country, thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love.
I love thy rock and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills;
My heart with rapture thrills
Like that above.

Our fathers; God, to Thee,
Author of liberty,
To thee we sing.
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God, our King!

AMERICA, THE BEAUTIFUL

O beautiful for spacious skies,
For amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties
America! America!
God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

O beautiful for heroes proved
In liberating strife,
Who more than self their country loved,
And mercy more than life!
America! America!
May God thy gold refine,
Till all success be nobleness,
And ev'ry gain divine!

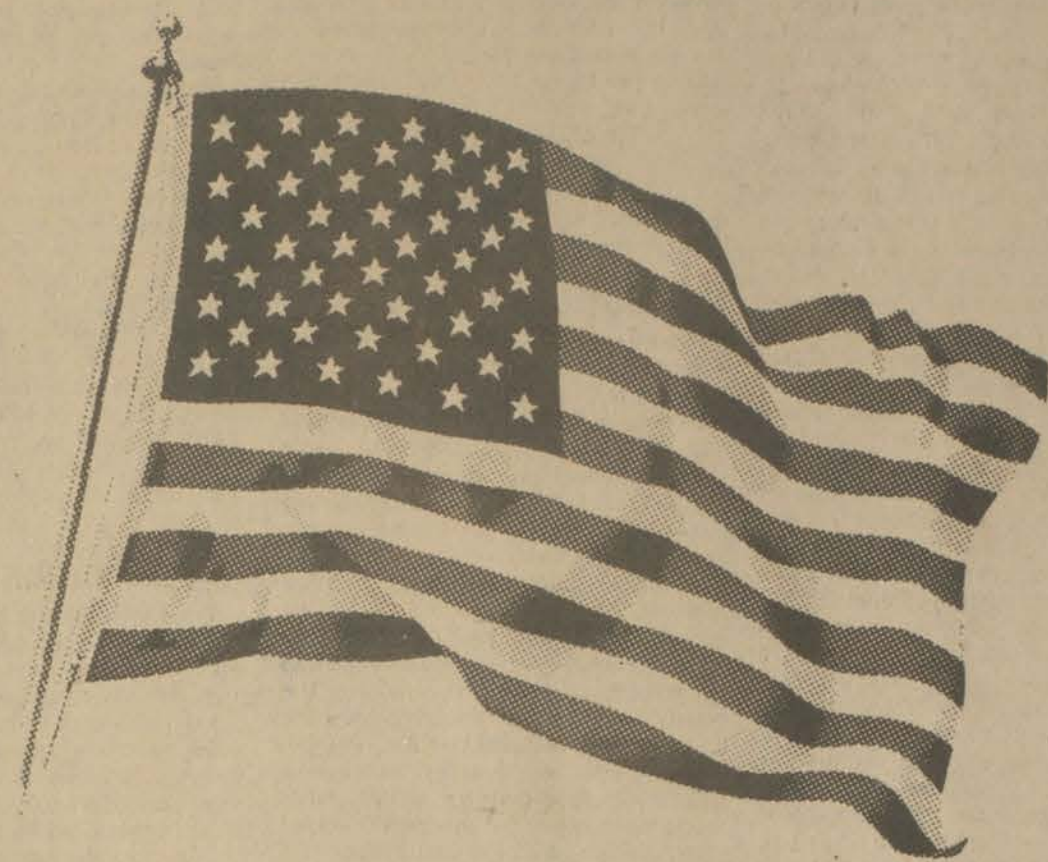

O beautiful for pilgrim feet,
Whose stern impassioned stress
A thoroughfare for freedom beat
Across the wilderness!
America! America!
God mend thine ev'ry flaw,
Confirm thy soul in self-control,
Thy liberty in law!

O beautiful for patriot dream
That sees beyond the years
Thine alabaster cities gleam
Undimmed by human tears!
America! America!
God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood,
From sea to shining sea!

SAVE THESE SONGS, "AMERICA," AND "AMERICA, THE BEAUTIFUL," BRING THEM WITH YOU AND PARTICIPATE IN THE SPECIAL SINGING AT THE CELEBRATION.

Retires from Teaching

Sonia B. F. Greer, one of the best-qualified grade teachers in the Floyd county school system, has retired after almost 40 years in the classroom.

She earned a standard elementary teacher's certificate before beginning teaching in 1934, she received her A.B. in elementary education in 1961 and the M.A. in 1969, both from Morehead State University. She spent one summer at M.S.U. studying Kentucky Educational Television and one summer studying science process approach. During the year 1973-'74 she returned to M.S.U. to study beyond her qualifications in the field of music.

Mrs. Greer began teaching in 1934 under the late Superintendent John Stephens and Principal Haskel Vincent at Martin. Her experience includes one year in a rural school, one year as rural school supervisor, two years at Allen, two years in Louisa, and the remaining 33.3 years at Martin. To be exact, she has spent 39.3 years in the classroom, having experience in all grades from 1 through 8.

She was presented jewelry and a plaque in appreciation of her service, by the Martin luncheon personnel, the present Martin faculty and principal, former Martin teachers, and principals, Alva Davis and Philip Dingus.

Mrs. Greer says she feels it was a privilege to have worked under the following school superintendents: John Stephens, Town Hall, Palmer Hall, V. O. Turner, Charles Clark and the present superintendent, Pete Grigsby, Jr., all of whom, she says contributed something to her as a teacher.

She has been a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for 52 years, in the Martin Branch where she is presently an active member.

Postal Service Begins Losing Best Customers

Congressional insistence that the U.S. Postal System (USPS) become self-supporting by 1984 has doubled the cost of first- and third-class mail and increased second-class rates fivefold. Additional increases seem a certainty. As a result, businesses—which are the biggest users of USPS—are rapidly developing alternatives to conventional mail service, and the Postal System may soon be stuck with the problem of delivering only the low-volume, high-cost traffic that no one else wants.

Writing in the July issue of Reader's Digest, James Nathan Miller points to collective bargaining as one of the main reasons postal rates have escalated so sharply. When Congress set wages (before the 1971 postal reorganization) postal workers were generally underpaid, earning an average of $10,200 a year including fringe benefits. Since that time, Miller points out, "postal workers have used the collective-bargaining process to raise their average salary and fringes to $18,200... as this article goes to press the postal unions and management are beginning negotiations for a new contract which will almost certainly result in still higher costs."

Generally speaking, America is no longer a nation of letter writers. Roughly 80 percent of first-class mail is generated by banks, utilities, government agencies and other businesses. These senders, Miller emphasizes, are the ones who pay the postage. Yet "the Postal Service spends more than $2 billion each year on conveniences that are designed to satisfy the RECEIPTS of mail—mainly households—but which serve little purpose for the business mailers who pay most of the freight." Although fewer mail-delivery days and a cut-back on door-to-door delivery would alleviate some of the increased costs, Congress has firmly rejected these proposals.

Thus users of USPS have looked for—and discovered—other ways of conducting their business. Advertising inserts delivered with the daily newspaper cost about half what it would take to deliver the same message via third-class mail. Last year 19 billion such inserts were utilized.

Similarly, the United Parcel Service is fast replacing fourth-class delivery as a speedy, efficient and low-cost method of shipping parcels.

The magazine industry is gearing up to move its business. Alternate delivery programs (hand-delivery by private firms) are in the experimental state in many publications. The Reader's Digest is now privately delivered to 150,000 California subscribers. When second-class postage rates rise again next year, publishers say alternative delivery will be cheaper.

Some Congressional leaders recognize that these changes spell the end of postal service as the nation expects it to be run. Accordingly, a bill passed by the House and soon to be considered by the Senate, "would instruct the Postal Service to define which postal activities are strictly PUBLIC services, and it would authorize Congress to pay for these services from the PUBLIC treasury," Miller writes.
