

Daylight Holdup Nets $2,000 Haul

City and state police officers continued this week the search for clues pointing to the identity of the man who last Wednesday afternoon held up a girl-clerk at Cooley's Self-Service Market here and escaped with approximately $2,000 in cash.

One man was questioned by officers, the following day, but was later released. The robbery was staged around 1 p.m. at a time the store was deserted except for the clerk, 17-year-old Kathy Hackworth. Bill Cooley, owner of the business, was ill, a patient in Veterans' Hospital, Lexington, at the time of the robbery.

Miss Hackworth said the robber entered the store while she was on the telephone and that when she turned she saw a man with a ski mask on his head but not covering his face. He had, she said, a white cloth or sheet covering what she thought was a sawed-off shotgun. Whipping off the sheet, he produced the weapon and ordered her to give him the money in the cash register.

"Was I scared? You'd better believe I was," the girl later said. She described the intruder as a white male in his early 20's, of medium height, perhaps weighing 140 pounds, with shoulder-length hair and perhaps a light mustache. "I think," she said, "he was wearing a white T-shirt and blue jeans."

Miss Hackworth said that when she was slow about getting the money from the register the gunman told her to "hurry up." She added that he told her to get the money bag (a bank bag), which was kept secreted away from the cash register, and to put it along with cash from the register in a paper bag.

This knowledge of the whereabouts of the bank bag and of the patrol schedule of police in the area of the store indicated, Chief of Police Dick Campbell said, that the robber was familiar with the store and its area. "He knew exactly where everything was and when to commit the robbery," Campbell said.

Third Suit Filed Against Coal Co.

A third damage suit involving the operations of the Triple Elkhorn Coal Company between Allen and Martin was filed in circuit court last Thursday, the plaintiff, Helen Ison, claiming blasting in the vicinity had damaged her home.

Earlier suits were filed by Everett Akers and the Rev. Dan Heintzleman. Mrs. Ison claims that damages to the walls, doors, roof, ceilings, foundations and other parts of her residence have reduced the market value of the property $25,000. She also asks $5,000 for loss of the use of the property and $50,000 punitive damages.

The plaintiff alleges that the company used an excessive amount of explosives in blasting, failed to use an alternate method of excavation and failed to cease blasting operations when notice was given of harm to her property.

(Damage suits present only the plaintiff's representations in the case.)

Detective Says Witnesses Mum In Hall Slaying

A Jack's Creek slaying was witnessed by perhaps as many as 10 persons shortly before midnight last Friday, but "nobody knows anything," State Police Detective Keith Scott said Tuesday morning.

The slain man is Walter G. Hall, 23, of Letcher county. He was shot one time below the eye as he reportedly was running from the home of Hester Slone where officers were told several people of both sexes had gathered.

Scott said the murder weapon has not been found and that nobody has identified the persons or persons who fired on him. Hall was in the yard of the Slone home when he fell.

Joe W. Lewis, Wheelwright special officer, said Monday, however, that he had received a telephone call from a man who said he and another would surrender after the funeral of Hall was held. The victim's body was returned to Letcher county for burial.

Turner Names Hall Asst. Co. Attorney

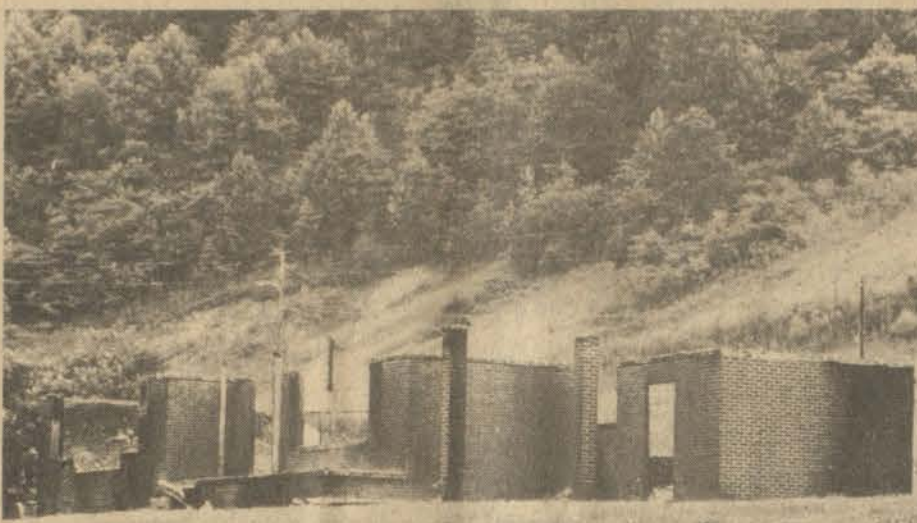

County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. last week announced the appointment of Eric Hall, Allen native, to the post of assistant county attorney. He began work Monday.

Mr. Hall was graduated from the University of Louisville's College of Law in May, 1977 and has been practicing law in Knott county. He is a son of Fred Hall and a grandson of Riley Hall, of Allen.

Mrs. Hall is the former Cara Lyon, and she is employed by the Department for Human Resources.

BURNED OUT WALLS of Floyd Skeans home after fire, early Monday morning, destroyed the brick structure.

Fire Damage May Be $75,000

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the home of Floyd Skeans, off new US 23 on Katy Friend, near here, early Monday morning.

All contents of the three-bedroom brick residence were lost, and an unofficial estimate placed the damage at "not less than $75,000."

Mr. and Mrs. Skeans were vacationing in Florida at the time of the blaze and had not been reached late Monday afternoon. His nephew, Mike Skeans, who was managing the nearby restaurant and service station in his absence, said he was awakened at about 3:15 a.m. by Chester Porter, a passerby who had seen smoke issuing from the building. Skeans said that when he opened the door of bedroom which he occupied smoke billowed about him till he turned to escape through a window. He said the only items saved from the residence were a few pieces of his own wearing apparel.

The Prestonsburg fire department was soon on the scene, but the area is not served by city water, and the firemen had a supply of only 500 gallons in their truck. The roof was burned through and the interior was ablaze when they arrived. Fire Chief Tom Blackburn said an additional 500 gallons of water could have been transported to the scene of the fire but would have had no effect.

Firemen surmised that the fire started in a bedroom, but the occupant of the building expressed the belief that it had its origin in a closet housing the furnace. Walls of the building remain standing.

Am. Standard's Workers Strike; Union Vote Set

The strike at the American Standard plant, near Paintsville, was in its 18th day Tuesday, with no indication of an early settlement, although negotiations continue.

Although neither company officials nor representatives of United Steel Workers' Local No. 7926 are discussing the strike with news media, it was said that wages is the main point of contention. Picketing continues at the plant, but the strike has not been marred by any violence. More than 100 employees are idle, and maintenance operations at the plant are being carried out by salaried personnel.

Meanwhile, employees of Overnight Transportation, Inc. are preparing for a vote to determine if they will be represented by the Teamsters union. Ballots were being mailed to employees Tuesday from Baltimore for a vote by mail by employees of 50 of the company's terminals. Workers at 11 terminals will vote their ballots mechanically at the terminals, it was said. The ballot count will be made Aug. 5.

Overnight, which has terminals in 20 states and the District of Columbia, employs about 100 at its terminal on the Mountain Parkway, on Middle Creek. Approximately 5,000 employees over the country are eligible to vote. Danny Rowe, manager of the Floyd county terminal, said.

Martin Man Victim Of Auto Accident

Injured in a one-car accident at Ivel shortly before midnight Saturday, July 8, Donald Ray Robinson, 39, of Martin, died last Wednesday at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin.

Robinson was a passenger in a car driven by Eddie Duff, of Hippo, according to State Trooper Shelton, the investigating officer. (Shelton said, however, that Duff denied he was driving the vehicle.) Traveling north on U.S. 23, the driver apparently lost control of the car, running off the road with the car overturning. Duff sustained minor cuts and bruises. No charges had been

Martin's Water Troubles Many But Thought Fading

"Everything that could possibly go wrong has happened in the past few weeks," Martin Water System Superintendent Bob Hackworth said Monday, referring to problems with the system which, since around June 20, has rendered water service in the town sporadic at best. And, it appeared this week, new complications had arisen.

It was on June 20 that Martin's 75,000-gallon steel tank began leaking. Although the system remained functional for a few days, the first complete cutoff came on June 25 when a six-foot section of the bottom of the reservoir ruptured. Martin then hooked onto the Beaver-Elkhorn Water District's supply, but, according to Hackworth, an unauthorized person, familiar with the workings of the water system and apparently frustrated by the reduced water pressure, opened completely the valve connecting the two systems, causing a sudden increase in pressure and six breaks in water lines. And so, water service was again interrupted. No sooner were repairs made in the lines and the two systems again recoupled than a 12-inch main of Beaver-Elkhorn developed a major leak, and water service was completely cut off Saturday, July 1. The breakdown of one of two of Beaver-Elkhorn's pumps on the Big Sandy at Allen added to Martin's woes and it was after this that Army Corps of Engineers from Dewey Dam began hauling in water for residents.

Residents were without water for as long as two days at a time, and Our Lady of the Way hospital there was particularly hard hit. All surgery and X-ray procedures had to be cancelled, and patients ate meals from paper plates and with disposable utensils. Martin restaurants were also closed Friday, July 30, after the Floyd County Health Department learned the town was without water.

Martin Mayor E. P. Grigsby said the closing of the restaurants gave rise to speculation and rumors among residents that the water supply was contaminated. "The restaurants were closed because of a potential health hazard," Mayor Grigsby said, "but it seemed that a lot of people disregarded the word, 'potential,' and decided the water was already unfit to drink." The health department's order was cancelled the following day and tests on water samples ruled out the threat of contamination.

While Corps of Engineers personnel provided potable water, the damaged water tank was patched and although the last Corps water storage tanks remained till Friday, the town this week was once again using its repaired tank (at about half capacity) to fill residents' needs.

The most likely solution to Martin's water woes, the installation of a new 125,000-gallon tank which has been purchased with funds acquired through the Big Sandy Area Development District, also appears to have run into problems. According to Hackworth, the site chosen for the new tank is being claimed by a local property owner. "We were ready to begin setting up the new tank when we learned of this new problem with the landowner," he said. Mayor Grigsby said if the problem could not be resolved, an alternate site would be used.

In response to a statement by Nick Johnson, chief of the Division of Sanitation of the state Department of Natural Resources, who expressed hope that Martin might be supplied permanently by Beaver-Elkhorn, Hackworth said, "There's no way."

He explained that Beaver-Elkhorn would ask Martin residents a rate of 90 cents per thousand gallons, a rate, according to Hackworth, that is double that of the Martin system.

Of the extended water crisis Hackworth said, "We did absolutely everything in our power to correct the problems as fast as we could, but you can't pump water that you don't have to start with."

This Town...That World

This oldtimer friend was wondering aloud, the other day, if it was sounds of fall that he was hearing, late afternoons, or was it his high blood pressure setting the alarm ringing in his ears.

Maybe these sounds of darker, colder days to come are here to remind us to shut up when we complain about the heat. One report has arrived that a katydid has been heard, and with it came the reminder of the old saying that hear a katydid and count 60 days till frost.

However we look at it, July is high noon for the year. The rain and the sun and the soil have done their bit for plant and leaf. The crops are "made," if the insects don't get them. Now comes the pause before the harvest. From this time on, till life springs anew next spring we are, you might say, travelling downhill. Even the beauty of autumn passes all too quickly.

As for August...an oldtimer said, "Heck, nothin' moves in August."

HOW HEROES ARE MADE

Lenna dropped by this week to tell me about the oil well fire and the hicktown fire department. Said the blaze had defied the company's most skilled firefighters. The heat was so terrific that men in asbestos suits were driven back. Then some crank called this one-horse fire department, and they came tearing, approaching the burning rig at top speed, sending spectators tumbling into nearby ditches and never stopping until only a few feet from the blaze.

Water Dist. Bids Total At $591,666

Contract Expected Within Sixty Days; Bids Under Review

Bids on construction of the Abbott-Little Paint water system were accepted Friday by commissioners of the water district, and a contract is expected to be awarded within the next 60 days.

The apparent low bid on Contract I of the project—laying of water mains and construction of foundations—was submitted by the G. R. Alderman Co., of Morehead. The firm asked $555,151.48 for that major portion of the overall project. Two other firms submitted bids.

Low bid on Contract II, covering construction of a water tank on Little Paint Creek, was that of the Chicago Bridge & Iron Co., Shaker Heights, O., for $36,465.

The $591,616 total involved in the two low bids is slightly above estimated cost of the project, but John Hill, of the water commission, said bidding included alternates and that the commission feels confident the contract total will be within available funds.

Howard K. Bell, Lexington engineering firm, is making a study of the bidding and will submit its report on alternates, July 25.

Completion of the job is expected within a year from the date of issuance of a work order.

Involved in the construction work is the laying of approximately 17 miles of water mains on Abbott and Little Paint Creeks, construction of booster stations and water storage tanks. The water district already has about 225 customers who have signed for water service.

The next water district construction work is expected to be that of the Bull Creek Water District which has filed final plans and loan and grant applications with the Farmers' Home Administration (FMHA) for $700,000. A revised estimate of costs has been filed, and FMHA is expected to act on the application shortly.

The district has encountered difficulties because of the proposed construction of new KY 80 in the area which it will serve. Approximately 190 residents of the area have already signed for water service.

District Court Sets $500 Fines

Four more drivers have been fined $500 each in district court on charges of drunk driving. Two were convicted at the July 12 court session, the others on Monday of this week.

Those drawing the heavy fines are: Billy S. Stratton, Stanville; Gary D. Varney, who had been arrested at Jenny Wiley State Park; Willis Patrick and Robert Justice who were given trial in absentia when they failed to appear for trial and their bonds had been forfeited.

Two others accused of drunk driving Troy Ward and Franklin L. Woods, were fined $115 each and costs.

John Reynolds and Ronald Barnett each was fined $200 and given a 60-day jail term for possession of marijuana. Wendell C. Goble was fined $200 on the charge of failing to yield to a blue light; Roger Vinson was given a five-day jail term for reckless driving, and Ronald D. Yates was fined $50. Vernon Elliott was cleared on his trial for wanton endangerment. Della Weddington was fined $10 and costs on a drunk count.

THROUGHOUT the period since World War II, the unemployment rate of black workers has remained about twice the level of their white counterparts, according to the 1978 Employment and Training Report of the President.

First Birthday

Aaron Manis Jackson, son of Arlie and Sarah Jackson, of Garrett, celebrated his first birthday, July 7, with an outdoor party. Many friends and relatives attended.

He is the grandson of Manis and Naomi Shepherd, and of Mrs. Ethel Jackson Conley, all of Garrett.

THE DISPARITY between the rate of unemployment for blacks and other minorities and the rate for the general population is a reminder that the legacy of discrimination persists, Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall says in the 1978 Employment and Training Report of the President.

At that moment the wind shifted, and the firemen were not overcome by heat. They unlimbered their 50 feet of hose and went to work, with the miraculous result that the blaze stopped.

The oil company was eternally grateful, and all who saw it marvelled, some wondering why they didn't stop the truck till it was so perilously near the fire. They staged a dinner for the fire crew, and the company presented them with a check for $5,000. The courage of these men who dared to go near the inferno was extolled, long and loud.

Pressed to make "a few remarks," the fire captain rose to speak. Somebody asked him what he proposed to do with all that money.

"The first thing I aim to do," he replied, "is to buy some new brakes for that truck—we dern nigh run right through that fire!"

WHEN FISH WERE FISH

For years now George D. Brown has listened without protest to the fish stories we have told, hereabouts. Now, he tells one or two of his own that lays in the shade anything we unimaginative pikers have been able to drum up. He writes:

When I see pictures of strings of 10-inch or 12-inch bass caught at Dewey Lake I think, "Ah, well, you ain't seen nuthin' yet"—unless you could have glimpsed some of the large catfish plying the headwaters of the U.S. government dam at Chapman, Ky., about the year 1912. These big fish came into the shallow waters at night where the smaller fish on which they fed were easily caught. Groundhog liver was the favorite bait for these big fish, and they were easily hooked, but landing the monsters was another matter and many the fisherman saw hook, line and sinker vanish downstream as the fish swam away.

On one occasion my brother John hooked one of these giants, and as he tried to raise his pole remarked, "She's hooked on a log." Then the two of us gave it a yank. The pole snapped, the fish rose to near the surface and took off downstream, sending waves from bank to bank. The length of this fish we guessed at about four feet.

On another occasion an oldtime fisherman, James Short, persuaded me to fish with him one Saturday night. We baited a trotline all the way across the river, and about 1 o'clock next morning "ran" the line for the last time. About midstream we were hooked on another "log." He began to pull upward, and the fish floated to the surface. It stretched from the bow of the boat to the first oarlock—the largest fish I had ever seen. He attempted to land the fish by slipping his hand into its mouth, hooking his fingers around its gills and then yanking it into the boat. But about the time he was ready to yank, the fish had the same idea, and with a tremendous surge took hook and nib line with it—and also took a good portion of the skin of his hand, even leaving scratch marks on his fingernails.

After this, we decided to call it a night, and Mr. Short remarked that he needed to use the turpentine bottle on his wounds.

Many of these big fish were taken by gaff hook from their nesting places under rocks and logs—a practise which since has been outlawed.

Another large fish then inhabiting these waters was the Red Horse, distinguished by its large, red fins. It was easily hooked but hard to land. I recall chasing one of this species which swam on the surface of the water for possibly an hour. My father said it had been injured by a dynamite blast and was unable to submerge. It, too, was swimming downstream, and we never caught it. The same old story—the big one got away.

Daughter of Pastor In Johnson Slain

The daughter of a well-known Paintsville minister was shot to death Saturday in the lot of a McDonald's Restaurant in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mrs. Debra Lynn Milam Lowe, 28, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Milam, of Paintsville, died at 10:45 a.m. Saturday of multiple wounds in the head and chest, fired from a small-caliber gun.

Her father is pastor of First Baptist Church of Paintsville.

Police in St. Petersburg are looking for a white male, about 30, seen holding a small child near the car after the shooting. They gave no name for the suspect, but earlier said they believed the killing grew out of a child-custody dispute.

Mrs. Lowe had just returned from Kentucky, where she had gone to Louisville to secure custody of a child by a previous marriage. Child custody documents were found in her purse after the shooting, police said.

The victim was in the front seat of her car after having gone inside the restaurant to pick up a sack of food. Another witness said she saw a woman in blue jeans run to a station wagon following the shots.

Mrs. Lowe, a native of West Virginia, had recently taken a job in the jewelry store where her husband, Bruce, is employed. She formerly was a bank teller.

In addition to the three-year-old child over whom the custody quarrel is based, she had two other children, Shauna, 7, and Mike 5.

The body will be taken to Jones-Preston Funeral Home Paintsville.

When the Good, Old Days Return

old great grandchild pulls at her skirt. A number of counties already have held their fairs. Boyd, Metcalfe, McCracken, Barren, Bullitt and Hart, Woodford, Green and Logan, Boyle, Hardin, Henry, Harlan, Muhlenberg, Wayne and Pendleton to mention a few. But many other county fairs are yet to come. Among them are Adair, Allen, Fleming, Harrison, Jessamine, Lincoln and Calloway all set July 10-15.

For those of you who remember the atmosphere of a long ago fair, you can relive some of it at the fairs of today. There are the music makers picking Old Joe Clark and Sally Goodin on banjos just like they used to and some lively old-timers smoothing off a spot for a hoedown or two.

If the atmosphere has fancied itself up a bit, you won't mind. Youngsters who used to race ponies around a field, or the family mare, still do, only today they might wear a classic riding habit and demonstrate considerable skill as they put their animals through various classes at the horse show.

The late Emma Davis of Morgan county once recalled the excitement of those days when her father would hitch up the team to the wagon and call out, "Emma, gal, come on. We're going to Hazel Green. We're going to Hazel Green to take in the fair." It was a few miles from her home near Ezel over the county line into Wolfe, "but oh! how I remember that lovely ride through the countryside, then reaching Hazel Green and seeing all the people and hearing that music." It was a time to build memories for the young girl, and even when in her eighties her eyes would sparkle as she told about those early days when her father called to her, "We're going to Hazel Green to take in the fair." She thought she would have to miss it one year, for there was a new baby. "Mama had her babies close together," she explained, "and I was a help to her. Oh, I was so happy when we climbed in the wagon and started our ride to Hazel Green."

If your county is having a fair or if there is a county fair nearby load the children and the rest of the family in the car or wagon and spend a day or an afternoon at the fair. It can be a time for building happy family memories that might be remembered for many decades.

Spraying for Beetles Begins

Spraying began last Tuesday in an effort to control the Japanese beetle in field crops, according to Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner Tom Harris. Sixteen hundred pounds of the chemical sevin and jeeps equipped with sprayers was initially used to minimize beetle damage and to contain the beetle in its present locations.

Japanese beetles, capable of devastating damage in corn fields, were first noticed this year on June 17 in Madison county. Harris immediately talked with U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) officials seeking federal assistance to supplement his $15,000 appropriation from the last legislature to fight the beetle. The next week, an inspector from the Plant Protection Quarantine division of USDA came to Kentucky to assess the beetle population, and shortly thereafter, an offer of jeeps and some sevin was made by USDA.

At this point, beetles have been spotted in several hundred acres in Madison and surrounding counties, as well as in Boone and Kenton. The area around the Greater Cincinnati Airport has been declared "hazardous" with respect to Japanese beetle infestation, and as of June 26, all planes departing for the West are being sprayed to prevent the spread of the insects.

The beetle spends about 10 months of the year in the ground as a white grub. During this time, the grubs do damage by feeding on roots and underground stems of plants. In early summer, the adult beetles emerge to feed on leaves and fruits. The period of greatest beetle activity lasts from four to six weeks, during which time the females leave the plants on which they have been feeding, burrow down in sod to lay eggs, then return to plants for more feeding. Beetle activity usually peaks about July 15.

As the adult beetles are now emerging to feed, Commissioner Harris hopes that spraying with jeeps on turf around fields, will help reduce beetle numbers. "If we can destroy many of these females before they have a chance to lay eggs, we should be able to reduce the population for next year, and also prevent them from damaging this year's crops in the infested areas," Harris emphasized.

Japanese beetles do their greatest damage when corn begins to silk. The beetles eat the silk as fast as it grows, reducing pollination and subsequent corn yields. When the silk is topped off, the ear is opened to damage by water, birds, and other insects.

Due to inclement planting weather, there is a lot of late corn which may not silk until after the beetle activity has peaked. Silk damage in early corn has already been noted by Kentucky Department of Agriculture officials.

Last year, about 1,500 acres of corn in Eastern Kentucky suffered damage by the Japanese beetle. Corn yield losses of up to 65 percent were noted in some areas. According to Dr. John Shirley, director of farms at Eastern Kentucky University, the beetle has spread about 12 miles since last year.

Current funding for chemical aid is limited to field crop control of Japanese beetles. Various chemicals for control in home and garden is available from local garden supply stores, however.

Non-Computerized Opinion

At hand is a news release quoting Jack C. Lewis, commissioner of the Bureau for Social Services, as saying Kentucky juvenile authorities "are gaining a hold on juvenile delinquency because of assistance provided by the Kentucky Crime Commission." Mr. Lewis also is quoted saying the juvenile arrest rate in Kentucky is about one-third the national average.

Mr. Lewis has the figures. We don't. But if he is trying to say that new laws governing juvenile crime spell out success, we have not statistical information but the comment of those who have a more intimate and real knowledge of the situation than any computer can express to refute his claims.

Ask the man on the street, or the officers who are called to make arrests, or the judges who preside at the trials.

Ex-Sheriff Joe W. Lewis and District Judge Harold Stumbo are among the officials who are unreservedly critical of the "new" method of handling juvenile crime. They cite those "repeater" cases, instances of one juvenile committing a long series of offenses, of the probation to their parents that is required, of the ineffectiveness of state program centers, of those arrested often "beating the officers back home," of the general coddling of juveniles who are becoming more hardened with each experience.

The law, they say, is so weak that it is quite possible that adult criminals are using juveniles to do their dirty work for them, because the law is such that if the juvenile is caught nobody pays for the crime.

It is true, and we are glad to note this, that not every youngster who gets into trouble is a criminal and that first-time offenders deserve a second chance. But any system of alleged law enforcement that by its weakness and permissiveness encourages young people to harass citizens in their homes, steal and loot and rob should be changed.

So say citizens and officials. So say we.

Scott said he was told the shooting followed an argument. Wheelwright Policeman Harold Johnson, first officer on the scene following the shooting, also said persons at the scene refused to supply needed information.

Two other Friday night shootings were reported. Fifteen-year-old Anita Tackett is in a Lexington hospital with a bullet wound suffered at the home of Frank Chitti, on Tinker Fork of Mud Creek. Joe W. Lewis, who investigated the shooting, said Chitti told him the girl shot herself in an apparent suicide attempt. Lewis said the bed in which the girl lay, according to Chitti, at the time she was shot had no bloodstains.

Chitti was arrested by Lewis after the officer found marijuana growing outside his home. He also was charged with keeping wild animals in captivity without license. The animals, two young squirrels, were confiscated.

The third shooting was that of James Butler at Drift. Denzil Ray Martin was jailed after he allegedly fired into the Butler home, a bullet striking Butler. The wound was not serious, it was said. Martin was named on counts of shooting into an occupied house and of shooting and wounding.

Don Taylor, trespass, third degree; Ronald F. Tackett, drunk driving; Elmer G. Wells; Harmon Rogers, drunk driving; John B. Clark, drunk driving, arresting officer unavailable; Mike Little, third degree assault; Claude Moore, criminal mischief, third degree; Martin E. Meeks, criminal mischief, second degree; Carlos Little, terroristic threatening; Terry Rowe, Morrow Endicott; John Weddington, no operator's license; Darrell Keith Stratton, drunk driving; Otis S. Wallen, drunk driving; Andy S. Hall, drunk driving; Marvin Crider, Jr., drunk driving and no operator's license, bond forfeited.

Cases of James Earl Yalder, charged with drunk driving, and drunk charges against James G. Prater and James Prater were continued when the arresting officers failed to appear. Two other public drunk charges against Prater were dismissed on the ground that the original charge was incorrect and a new charge is to be filed.

(It was explained that the recent dismissal of the public drunk charge against Randall Stewart was made because the arresting officer, Ken Hughes, is no longer a deputy sheriff and was unavailable on each of the three occasions when the case was called for trial.)

The terroristic threatening charge against Thomas Rowe was dismissed at the request of the prosecuting witness and on the condition that he execute $500 peace bond.

Once the money was in his possession, the robber ordered Miss Hackworth to walk to the rear of the store and lie down behind the meat case.

"Of course I did what he ordered, but I saw him turn to his left (Downriver) when he left," she said.

One report said a youth playing outside the store said the robber left in a late-model white compact, but Policeman James Laferty, first officer to arrive on the scene after the robbery, said he was not told this. A ski mask was later found by State Trooper Keith Scott at the roadside at the base of Abbott mountain.

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL
Director of Environmental Studies

Morehead State University

Gene Logsdon, a reporter for Environmental Action Bulletin, recently summarized a debate in Indiana between Earl Butz, the former Secretary of Agriculture, and Wendell Berry, a Kentucky farmer-poet who farms his 50 acres with a team of horses. According to Logsdon, the 500 or so people present at the local high school witnessed an unusual performance.

Butz stated there was no agricultural crisis and listed the advantages of modern agribusiness. He said we now worked less at producing our own food and had lots of leisure time to watch one of our two television sets. We export food all over the world, insuring peace between nations, and use it to balance payments from oil importation.

Berry maintained there was a crisis in all our cultural endeavors, including a definite crisis in agriculture. He said the individual had become part of a production machine and was a servant to a technology interested only in money. Berry is obviously a man of the soil; he lives without television, raises most of his family's food, farms with horses, and restores land to productivity. He also discussed agricultural problems in his region: land so expensive small farmers cannot afford it, hillside soil erosion where established farmers have planted row crops for quick bucks, the slow death of local rural businesses, and a lack of help and information.

Butz said Berry was a romanticist who wanted to return to "the good old days that never existed." He also said that without modern farming, many people would starve.

Berry implied that Butz had proven a point: agriculture was in trouble because Butz actually meant we would all starve without oil, a preposterous situation.

Both agreed that any further decrease in the number of farmers would be bad. Butz maintained that the number was about to stabilize (agricultural leaders have been saying this for 25 years); Berry felt that educational and financial programs like the tobacco support system would be incentives for new farmers. Butz did not want more people in farming; he wanted those now in farming to make money.

A questioner asked "why won't people listen to us anymore?" Butz replied he did not know. Berry said, "There aren't enough of you left anymore to make yourself heard. You have become victims of your own technology." That summarized the difference in the two philosophies.

Both men made excellent points during the debate and, according to Logsdon, there was no clearcut winner. Berry surprised the audience with his understanding of farming, while Butz made points on its economic realities. But the Goliath of Agriculture did not vanquish David; instead, he was nearly felled himself.

Letters to the Editor

Progress Report

Knowing your continuing interest in the legislation to provide flood control measures on the Big Sandy and Upper Cumberland river basins, I wanted to give you a progress report. Earlier, I wrote you that the Senate had for the second time passed legislation—H. R. 8309—to authorize $100,000,000 for flood protection in these basins without local participation in cost and without the cost-benefit test. That bill then went back to the House of Representatives.

During recent weeks the House Committee on Public Works has been holding hearings on H. R. 13059, another public works bill. Hearings have been concluded, but mark-up has not been completed. Therefore, I cannot give you the specifics of this bill. Probably the two bills—8309 and 13059—will be combined on the House floor. Then the differences between the bill passed by the Senate and the bill passed by the House will be resolved in conference. I remain optimistic that the provision on the Big Sandy and Cumberland will be retained. The problem will be the President's position on the bill—not necessarily this provision, but the total bill.

I also thought you'd be interested in an update of steps taken to handle disasters in the future. After the 1977 flood, I prepared a report that pointed out major shortcomings in the federal response to the 1977 flood. Included in this report were recommendations for consolidating agencies responsible for disaster aid and for improving federal assistance. Many of these recommendations were incorporated into the President's proposed reorganization of the disaster agencies which was recently forwarded to Congress, and I am pleased to include a copy of the letter I received from the Office of Management and Budget concerning their positive reaction to that report in their review.

Action to provide flood protection to people living in these river basins is vital, and I'll continue to do everything I can to attain passage of the authorization and the appropriation of funds so that work can begin.

WENDELL FORD, U.S. Senator

Thoughts after the 4th

As I try to figure out how in the world I can get out of this traffic jam, I look at all the thousands of people attending this Fourth of July fireworks display and carnival. These people bring their children, fight the mud, the crowds and their nerves while wastefully spending their money trying to win a 50-cent stuffed animal and bring a smile to the face of a loved one.

AND I WONDER! Why aren't our churches as crowded on Sunday morning? Where are all these people? Yes, I know Sunday is their only day to sleep-in, but if they can stay up late on a work-night, why can't they get up a little early on Sundays to worship the One who allows them to continue to live?

You know we all have to die; that's a fact we all must face. People, the salvation of your souls is the most important facet of your life. A carnival may bring a short-lived smile to your face, but Jesus can put a smile in your heart that shines all the time.

Wait a minute, you say, if I become a Christian, I'll have to give up the fun life. Let me tell you all about the fun life: Drunk drivers killing people on the highways, unwanted pregnancies, abortion, divorce, murder, hatred, taking drugs and hating yourself every moment, not trusting your husband or wife out the front door, losing every dime you've got in a poker game, damming the Master's holy name and deep inside feeling guilty, the insecure feeling that you're not as good as everyone else, the lost, frightened feeling when a friend or relatives dies, jealousy, envy, arguing with your neighbors, parents or spouses—and, to me, saddest of all, suicide. That is some life. Think about it.

Happy Fourth of July, Prestonsburg. Everytime you remember the brilliant display of fireworks, just imagine how much more beautiful Jesus' face will be when He comes for his church. I want to be ready—don't you?

Insurance Hoax Again

The old insurance hoax story is rearing its head again, and many papers in this midwestern region have begun to print it.

The story says that Congress passed a bill which gives all World War II veterans a dividend of 55 cents per $1,000 of their GI Insurance for each month of service, and that this is payable whether you still carry the insurance.

The story is completely untrue. There is not now, nor has there ever been, such a dividend, and Congress has never passed such a law.

If you have run such a story, we would greatly appreciate your advising your readers that this is a complete hoax.

Periodically, this story comes to life—it even makes some publications that serve government union groups and veterans service organization publications.

We don't know how it gets started, but it is like a chain letter. Once it gets started it seems to spread and our insurance centers in St. Paul and Philadelphia are inundated with "applications" for the non-existent dividend. It is a disappointment to the veteran to learn that no such dividend exists, and it is a tremendous burden on our work forces to answer each one of the letters.

Thank you for aiding us in stopping this rumor.

To Correct an Error

I need to correct a statement published in The Floyd County Times, Wednesday, July 12, pertaining to the story entitled, "Children's Park Here Slated for Planning Later This Year" which states that the Archer Park project of handball and racquet ball courts were funded through the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

This project was in fact funded through the Floyd County Economic Aid Board.

Commends Hospital Staff

Recently I was admitted to Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin. My experience in hospitals is limited so I have very little with which to compare my stay there. However, I would like to commend the staff and administrators and give my thanks. Without exception the nurses, orderlies, and other staff members were there to give me assistance and support and contributed through my experience there to the healing process. The care I received was personal and gave me the feeling that I was an individual and deserved individual attention.

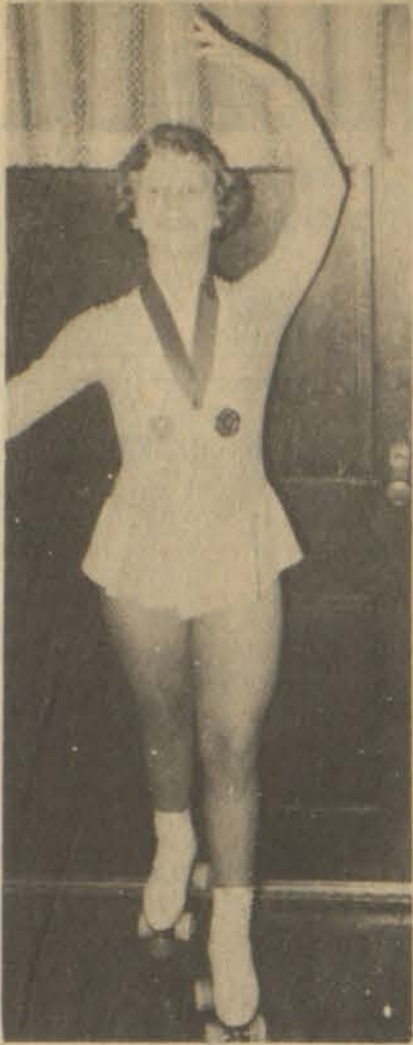

So I want to congratulate all the staff at Our Lady of the Way Hospital and I want the people of Floyd county to know that I am grateful for the concern extended me while I convalesced.

Good News for Ginseng Diggers

Ginseng dug in Kentucky during the 1978 season will be eligible for export, under proposed export findings announced by the United States Endangered Species Scientific Authority (ESSA).

The ESSA ruled in favor of permitting Kentuckians direct access to export markets, based on a monitoring and educational program developed by the Governor's Council on Agriculture and ultimately contained in an Executive Order signed by Governor Julian M. Carroll on May 17.

Without such a program Kentuckians would have been denied access to export markets for ginseng during the 1978 harvest season, according to Susan Alexander, assistant to the executive director of the Council.

"This would have been disastrous to diggers in the state, since approximately 95 per cent of the crop is exported," she said. "We are pleased that the ESSA has found in favor of the Kentucky plan because ginseng constitutes a $4.5 to $5 million annual crop in the state and the loss of these dollars would place an economic hardship on many rural families."

The program will be conducted in two phases, both under the direction of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The first phase will be a voluntary registration of ginseng dealers and an education program for diggers, to be conducted by the UK Department of Regulatory Services, under the direction of Dr. H. F. Massey. Under this program, the University will ask dealers to voluntarily report the number of pounds of ginseng dug, the number of roots per pound dug, where the root was dug and the number of people digging the root.

It will also utilize the UK Extension Service and the department's own inspectors to carry out an education program to help insure that the root is dug at the proper time and that the seeds are replanted.

Both the University and the Governor's Council on Agriculture have been urging, statewide, that no digging of the ginseng root take place until the berries are ripe and the plant begins to turn yellow, usually about mid-August.

The second phase of the program will be conducted by the UK Department of Horticulture, under the direction of Dr. C. R. Roberts. It will involve physical monitoring of the plant population within the state.

According to Dr. Roberts, up to 10 counties and up to five one-acre plots in each of these counties will be involved in the physical monitoring program. These plots will be surveyed at least twice, and in some cases three times before the program ends following the 1979 harvest season.

The counties to be monitored were selected on the basis of a previous study which Dr. Roberts performed for the Governor's Council on Agriculture, in which a statewide survey was made to determine how much wild ginseng was being dug and where it was located. They are Perry, Pike, Cumberland, Hardin, Leslie, Rockcastle, Bullitt, Meade, Letcher and Casey.

The earlier study indicated that nearly 53,000 pounds was dug during the 1977 season and that it grows in at least 96 of Kentucky's 120 counties. The study also showed that most Kentuckians digging ginseng do so at the proper time, a factor which the Council believes also played a role in a favorable export determination by the ESSA.

Funds for the ginseng program were provided through a $17,720 demonstration projects grant from the Governor's Council to the University.

The need for a monitoring and education program arose last year when the ESSA ruled that wild ginseng could not be exported unless the individual states developed management plans to insure that the species would not become endangered.

Crepes Make An Economical Entree

Crepes are thin delicate pancakes which can be stuffed with an infinite variety of savory or sweet fillings. The pancakes themselves are easy to prepare on a conventional range, but time consuming, since they are cooked one at a time. However, crepes freeze well and thus can be made days or even weeks ahead.

Use your microwave oven to prepare the creamy chicken filling and to reheat crepes in seconds. This microwave menu is economical to serve for a festive family dinner or party treat. Crepes are ideal for stretching leftovers. Combined with this tasty sauce two cups of cubed, cooked chicken make a glamorous, low-cost and delicious crepe entree. The smooth sauce made savory with chicken broth, Parmesan cheese and onion powder begins with a base of Blue Bonnet Light Tasty Spread. This economical spread is made with less oil than higher priced margarine and butter and has 25% less fat and calories.

Another budget microwave tip. Don't hesitate to save leftover meals, sauces, vegetables and casseroles in the freezer. They can be defrosted in an instant in your microwave and they don't dry out during reheating.

Suit May Result in Use of Oxygen—Self-Rescuers in Underground Mines

Special mine safety equipment may be required in many underground coal mines if the U.S. Department of Labor complies with a legal action filed in June. The petition was filed by the Council of the Southern Mountains, Inc., District 12 of the United Mine Workers of America (UMWA) and District 17 of the UMWA.

The special mine safety equipment is generally known as the "self-contained, oxygen-generating self-rescuer device." It has been the center of nearly ten years of controversy in the coal industry.

The suit was announced in the July issue of MOUNTAIN LIFE AND WORK, the official publication of the Council of the Southern Mountains (CSM), which is party to the suit.

The oxygen-generating unit has been used in European mines for several years. Many miners and other safety advocates believe that the apparatus could have saved dozens of miners' lives in this country, including five men who suffocated in April in Pittston Coal Company's Moss No. 3 Mine near Frying Pan, Virginia.

Mine safety advocates also believe the device could have saved lives at the Scotia Coal Company mine disasters on March 9 and March 11, 1976 in Letcher County, Kentucky, as well as at Consolidation Coal Company's Blacksville No. 1 Mine disaster in West Virginia on July 22, 1972.

Manufacturers of the mine safety equipment estimate the cost, at $300 - $325 for each miner, or a total cost of "less than three cents per ton of coal mined over the next five years."

The petition is an attempt to require that all miners in a list of specified mines be equipped with the oxygen-generating breathing device within six months of the petition's being granted. Further, the petition asks that each miner be trained in the use of the improved device.

The legal action relies upon a section of the Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969. The petition further points out that the "filter-type" self-rescuers currently in use do not adequately protect miners. These devices do not provide oxygen. They merely filter out carbon monoxide gas, and they are useless against other toxic gases, against carbon dioxide, and against oxygen-deficient mine atmospheres.

The 1969 Act also committed the government to requiring any "improved methods of assuring that miners are not exposed to atmospheres that are deficient in oxygen."

The CSM is a sixty-five year old, community-based organization which includes in its membership many miners and miners' families in the central Appalachian coalfields. J. Davitt McAteer and L. Thomas Galloway, of the Center for Law and Social Policy in Washington, D.C., are representing CSM in the petition.

District 12 of the UMWA represents fifteen thousand miners throughout the state of Illinois. UMWA District 17 is the largest district of the Union and represents twenty-five thousand miners in central and southern West Virginia.

Today is the first day of the rest of your life.
Give blood,
 so it can be the first day of somebody else's, too.

TEACHER TRIBUTE - State Superintendent of Public Instruction James B. Graham and John Pat Hulette admire a new bumper sticker produced by the state Department of Education. Shirley Williamson, the department's communication services officer, said the sticker was designed to "develop the public's appreciation for teachers, schools and education in general."

THIS COULD BE THE START OF SOMETHING BIG.

One man. One match. One small trash fire. It all seems harmless enough. Yet, add to this a light wind. A flying spark. A dry forest ready to explode. And you've got all the makings of one raging Wildfire.

For this reason, unauthorized trash burning is illegal. And dangerous.

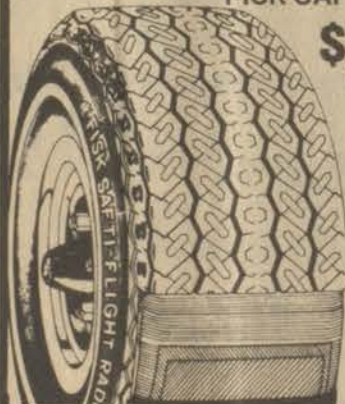

If you plan to burn trash or debris, call your local forestry agent for permission. Before you start something too big to handle.

WILDFIRE. INDIFFERENCE MAKES IT SPREAD.

Service for the Jobless

In the rush for jobs as thousands of high school and college graduates flood area employment agencies and scan newspapers, an all-too-often overlooked option for assistance is the Job Service, according to David T. Duncan, acting regional administrator for employment and training, Atlanta.

Run by the state employment security agencies, under direction of the Labor Department's U.S. Employment Service, 2,500 centers throughout the country serve all who seek employment and all services are without a fee. Kentucky has 24 Job Service local offices with branch offices open on a limited schedule in most counties in the state.

"The aim of the Job Service is to bring people to jobs and jobs to people, and it has a number of programs designed to do just that," James L. Reed, Prestonsburg local office manager for the Kentucky Department for Human Resources' Bureau for Manpower Services, explained.

Upon entering a state Job Service office, an applicant is interviewed to determine the type of work for which he or she indicates an interest and aptitude. The interviewer also determines if the applicant is "job ready," or if counseling or testing services are needed.

Many of the offices have a self-service Job Bank, a computerized listing of public and private sector job openings, that is updated daily. Here, applicants who know what type of work they are qualified for can examine a Job Bank book or microfilm viewer and select job openings of interest to them.

The applicant then sees an interviewer who provides a more detailed description of the job and arranges for an interview with the prospective employer, usually that same day. Referrals are based on qualifications in relation to the job requirements.

Job Service Offices also assist job seekers who are uncertain about their qualifications and the types of jobs they desire. Most offices are staffed with a specialist who furnishes complete counseling and testing services. Counselors help job seekers choose and prepare for an occupation based on their job potentials.

The testing program uses a variety of tests to determine an applicant's skills. The tests measure occupational aptitudes, clerical and literary skills and occupational interests. Testing and counseling prior to job referral ensures a better match between applicant and job.

Each year, local Job Service offices conduct a Summer Youth Employment Program to provide full and part-time summer jobs for youth age 14 through 21. The program, which is designed for disadvantaged youth, arranges for jobs in schools, libraries, community service organizations, hospitals, and private nonprofit agencies.

The Job Service also refers applicants to jobs and training opportunities under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA); Youth Conservation Corps (YCC); National Alliance of Businessmen (NAB); and other federal and community programs concentrating on youth employment.

Mud Creek Citizens See Fire Dept. Need

The Mud Creek community, including the Toler and Little Mud areas, is in the process of organizing a volunteer fire department. Lack of adequate fire protection and higher insurance rates have prompted concerned area residents, including Magistrate Hershell Hamilton, to make an active effort to do something about these problems.

Participation by area residents is considered essential if an active volunteer fire department is to become a reality, and all concerned people living in the area are urged to attend meetings held at 7 p.m. at John M. Stumbo School, on the second and fourth Thursday nights of each month.

Their mother is Mrs. Susan Woods Wackerle, Jaughter of Mrs. Carl Woods, of Prestonsburg, and the late Prof. Woods.

A Raggity-Tag Little Boy

(Excerpted from an article by Cora Fields, published in the Alice Lloyd College Newsletter).

While the small mountain lad played with "Hoppy," Mrs. Geddes' dog, Alice Lloyd sat in the one-horse buggy and made a quick judgement about the youth. "This raggity-tag little boy could someday be a leader in these forlorn hills if only he could be properly educated," she must have thought.

As of this writing, Dan Martin is still an active attorney in the county seat of Hindman, Kentucky, just across the mountain from Alice Lloyd College. His life of service to the mountains represents the epitome of what Alice Lloyd dreamed of for those she helped educate. Influenced by such great men as Felix Frankfurter while at Harvard Law School, Dan put his talents to use not in Massachusetts or Washington, D.C., where he was much sought, but in Knott county, Kentucky where he has gained a reputation as one of the most brilliant criminal lawyers in the state of Kentucky. He says, "I was introduced to drama at Caney and it just naturally followed me in law practice. I love the drama of the courtroom, win or lose."

Dan has given a lifetime of devotion to Mrs. Lloyd and the institution she created. He states, "Mrs. Lloyd was a woman who endeared everyone to her, she was strong, had great intellect and insight as well as horse sense, and you just couldn't say no to the obligation she placed on you. Whether I've ever amounted to anything or not, I'm not sure. But I do know that I've stayed in the mountains to serve, primarily due to this obligation."

Perhaps his earliest efforts to help Mrs. Lloyd were as a student and her adopted son, when the two held long talk sessions on student life and development, and later as a member of the famous "Caney Crusaders" who traveled across the nation to visit friends and help bring support to the campus. He remembers visiting Charlie Adams, president of the Cleveland Hardware Company and coming away with a sizeable contribution for Caney Junior College, now Alice Lloyd College—and in the 1930's! "Seeing the Caney Creek student, the school's product in person, made the difference, even to me," he noted. Dan also has served the college as a trustee, and through his close personal association with Mrs. Lloyd, was the key figure in getting her to agree to be the subject of Ralph Edwards' "This Is Your Life" television program in 1955. When Mr. Edwards asked Dan if he could get Mrs. Lloyd to Hollywood, Dan replied, "I'll get her there if I have to chloroform her!" He also had the foresight to see the Christmas fund-raising possibilities on nationwide television and worked with Paul Phillips and Mr. Edwards to make the appeal possible, which later resulted in hundreds of thousands of dollars for the College.

Dan T. Martin can be characterized as one "from the old Alice Lloyd school" who would prefer to see the college progress evolve on a conservative basis, retaining the creativeness and ingenuity of Mrs. Lloyd. In summarizing his thoughts on Alice Lloyd he says, "I'm sure Mrs. Lloyd would have also made some changes at the college as she believed in constructive progress." He added, "She believed wholeheartedly in creativeness. Now, we all know that God is the great creator, and surely Alice Lloyd helped him a great deal here on earth."

Garfield Place—Part Of Nation's History

The Garfield Place, Prestonsburg's most famous landmark, serves as a focus of interest for the Big Sandy Historical Preservation Society, a group of interested citizens who meet weekly to discuss ways and means to preserve not only this irreplaceable local historical treasure, but other less well-known ones as well. The group has been visited recently by a representative of the Kentucky Heritage Commission, which has voiced great interest and concern in the project which has been initiated by the Prestonsburg group.

The Garfield Place served as headquarters for Colonel James A. Garfield during his Big Sandy Campaign. It was from this house that he directed a military action which so enhanced his reputation that he later achieved the rank of general, with the Presidency of the United States a part of his ultimate destiny. Prestonsburg may well be proud to have shared in this moment of its nation's history.

Religion Means More To Philpot than Golf

By MARLA RIDENOUR
(In The Lexington Herald)

Tim Philpot has been telling people for a long time that his religion meant more to him than his golf. Sunday he had to prove it.

Philpot entered the Men's City Golf Tournament only after a tournament official assured him that the championship flight would tee off on Sunday afternoon—after church. His younger brother Dan was starting a new church, Christ United Methodist at Fayette Cinemas, and Tim was committed to teaching Sunday school at 10 a.m.

A co-leader with John Newton and Danny Miller after the third round of the tournament at Lakeside, Philpot decided to miss the final round when he learned Saturday that he would tee off Sunday morning. But it wasn't an easy decision.

"I hardly slept last night and my wife didn't either," said Philpot. "Dropping out was a tough decision."

"I play in a lot of tournaments but the City is the most important one I'll play in all year," continued Philpot, son of evangelist Ford Philpot. "It's a tournament I especially love."

Philpot wasn't sure why the tee off times were so early, since they never have been that way in the past.

"I wish they wouldn't play on Sunday morning," he said, "I'm sure there were some others that usually attend church. "In the past it's always been in the afternoon."

"I don't want people to get the idea that I don't play golf on Sunday," continued Philpot. "I play just about every Sunday, but always in the afternoon."

Philpot may have lost sleep over the decision, but he has no regrets.

"I feel like I made the right choice," he concluded. "Golf is not the most important thing in my life. I have no regrets—I'll just try to win it next year."

TEACHER QUALITY

A recent New England study of students in 18 colleges who selected education as a major shows that their academic quality, as shown on standardized tests, has declined. At eight of the colleges, the verbal SAT test scores of freshmen education majors had gone down by 50 to 100 points between 1970 and 1975. This decline is greater than the national average. On the ACT math test, the score at all colleges studied had declined 17 percent, compared to 7 percent nationwide.

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON

Some of Kentucky's best deer hunting occurs on military posts, wildlife management areas and other public lands, but several of these areas are, unfortunately, so popular that steps must be taken to control the number of hunters allowed there, both for the optimum utilization of the deer herds and for the safety of the hunters.

Perhaps the fairest way to decide who does and who doesn't get to hunt on these areas is by random drawings. But while it's fair, the process is also time consuming, necessitating much paperwork and, as with most other things, deadlines.

Five deer hunting areas in Kentucky require advance application for random selection of hunters and all five deadlines which those who want to get their names in the pot must meet. So if you're a deer hunter, mark the following dates on your calendar so you won't let the deadline for your favorite hunting area slip by.

One deadline has already passed. Because of the necessity for getting ready for the drawings for waterfowl hunters, the application period for the deer hunts at the Ballard County Wildlife Management Area in West Kentucky ended July 10 and no more deer hunting applications will be accepted there.

The next deadline is at Land Between the Lakes, where applications for gun hunts, the youth hunt (for youngsters between 10 and 15) and for a special archery hunt are due no later than Aug. 4. Applications must be on an LBL form for the computerized selection process.

Forms and complete hunting information may be obtained by writing: Kentucky Deer Hunt, Land Between the Lakes, Golden Pond, KY 42231.

You'll also need a special application form for the gun deer hunt scheduled for Nov. 14-15 on the Higginson Henry Wildlife Management Area in Union county. Write Manager, Higginson-Henry Wildlife Mgt. Area, Route 5, Morganfield, KY 32437 for your application. The completed form will be accepted only between August 19 and noon, Sept. 9—applications received before or after these dates will be discarded. Those whose names are drawn will be notified by Sept. 25 but no notice will be sent to those who didn't make it.

The Blue Grass Army Depot near Richmond will have four days of bow hunting for bucks only (Oct. 14-15 and Nov. 4-5). Applications must be made on a postcard containing the name of the hunter (one person per card), address and phone number. The cards may be mailed between Aug. 15 and Sept. 15. The post charges $10 per hunter, but this is payable only after notification that your name has been drawn. More than one application from an individual will disqualify that person. Send the cards to Chairman, Wildlife Mgt. Subcommittee,

May To Donate Work To Arthritis Auction

Well-known Prestonsburg artist Russell May will be one of 12 Kentucky artists who will donate prints and originals to the Fayette County Campaign Committee of the Arthritis Foundation for a silent art auction to be held at the Lions Blue Grass State Fair, July 14-22.

Robert Powell, arthritis fair chairman, said bids on the painting will take place each night of the fair, and the last night the paintings will go to the persons having made the highest bids.

Bldg. S-14, Lexington Bluegrass Army Depot, Lexington, KY 40511.

At Ft. Knox in Bullitt and Meade counties, applications for the Oct. 1-Oct. 31 bow season will be accepted between Aug. 1 and Aug. 20. For the gun hunts (Dec. 2, 3, 9, 10, 16 and 17) applications must be made between Sept. 6 and Sept. 16. Apply by letter and enclose a $10 certified check or money order payable to the Treasurer of the United States—you'll get your money back if your name isn't drawn. Mail applications to: Ft. Knox Conservation and Beautification Committee, P.O. Box 1052, Ft. Knox, KY 40121.

During the last two seasons, Ft. Campbell authorities have imposed a quota system for weekend deer hunting. But they generally don't formulate their application system until late August or early September. The folks to get in touch with there work for the Outdoor Recreation Branch, Hunting and Fishing Unit, Ft. Campbell, KY. 42223 (phone 502 789-3509).

Three Women Injured In Auto Accidents

Three women were injured, two seriously, on successive days last week-end in wrecks at the bridge connecting the American Standard plant, near Paintsville, with US 23.

Mrs. Maggie Collins, 50, of Daniels Creek, was reported earlier in the week as being in critical condition at the Highlands Medical Center here, with a fractured pelvis and ribs suffered Sunday when her auto was reportedly hit by a truck driven by Tim Caudill, 17, of Leander. Her daughter, Mrs. Daisy Williams, 24, of Oil Springs, was injured less seriously and was admitted to the hospital.

On the preceding day Betty Peters was injured when she apparently lost control of her car as she drove across the bridge. She is in a Lexington hospital, and it is feared she may have suffered a broken neck.

$105 Million Awarded In Highway Contracts

Contracts for highway work worth more than $105 million have been awarded so far this year by the state Department of Transportation, according to transportation Secretary Calvin Grayson.

Compared with last years figures of $138.7 million, contract awards decreased during the first six months of this year by $32.8 million.

Major areas of spending include parkway and KY 80 projects totaling over $26.8 million, and state projects such as resurfacing costing $26 million.

Interstate highway construction contracts decreased from $62 million to $1.2 million, as I-24 in Western Kentucky is the only major interstate project in the state, yet to be completed.

Safety improvements, which include a statewide highway marking program, increased by over $3.9 million to $4 million so far this year.

School Bus Driver Workshops Slated

No driver holds a greater responsibility than the driver of a school bus, according to Paul Jones, director of the Division of Pupil Personnel for the state Department of Education.

Beginning this week, Jones and a select team of experts will barnstorm Kentucky, conducting a series of workshops designed to enhance the driving, social and mechanical skills of school bus pilots.

The workshop to serve Floyd and Big Sandy Valley counties will be held tomorrow (Thursday), at Johnson Central High School, Paintsville.

"Driving a school bus involves much more than merely driving a vehicle on the highway," said Jones. "The school bus driver must also be responsible for the welfare of children, must be a teacher by example, must promote good public relations and must understand how to properly use and care for the school bus, a complex and expensive piece of equipment."

The workshops include presentations by the Kentucky State Police and reviews of state laws and regulations. Instruction is given in maintenance, inspection, accident reporting and emergency procedures.

Combs Objects To AP Story

Former Gov. Bert Combs has taken issue with an Associated Press story which reported he had objected to proposed appointments of two men by the state administration.

The news analysis, appearing July 5, quoted "reliable sources" as saying Combs was among those who opposed the appointment of former Gov. A. B. Chandler to the University of Kentucky board of trustees by Gov. Julian Carroll and the purported plan for Ewart Johnson, of Winchester, to succeed Terry McBrayer as state commerce commissioner.

Chandler now is a UK trustee. No successor to McBrayer, who is resigning soon, has been announced.

Combs said in a statement that the article about old feuds in the Democratic Party "makes interesting reading, but to the extent that it attributes certain statements or actions to me, it is completely and entirely and wholly false."

He said Carroll did not consult with him about the Chandler appointment and "I have never directly or indirectly expressed any displeasure about it." Combs and Chandler were factional opponents within the party.

Combs said he did not know that Johnson, who had been associated with another factional wing of the party unfriendly to Combs, wanted to succeed McBrayer, never communicated with Carroll on the matter and did not hear about it from the governor.

"Moreover, I happen to think Ewart would be a good selection as commissioner of commerce," he added.

The former governor said the "reliable sources" cited "have fabricated this story out of whole cloth."

If this is your only retirement fund you probably can't afford to retire!

An Individual Retirement Account (IRA) will help assure your financial security.

Social Security simply isn't enough to afford a comfortable retirement. It is a semi-fixed income and therefore cannot adequately keep pace with rising prices and unexpected personal needs.

You'll be amazed at how much can be accumulated with IRA. For example: If a 30 year old begins an IRA account now with an annual contribution of $1,500.00, by age 59½ he or she would accumulate $161,968.44 towards retirement.

When you retire, you'll want much more than Social Security can provide. That's why IRA makes so much sense.

We strongly recommend IRA to our customers as a sound investment program. It is safe and prudent. So, if you are not now participating in a pension plan where you work, call a New Accounts Representative at 697-1100 for a complete explanation and everything you'll need to start your Individual Retirement Account, today.

An Individual Retirement Account is long-term, high-interest, high-yield savings account. Each year you may voluntarily deposit the lesser of 15% of annual earnings or $1,500.00. These funds are fully tax deductible.

Harlan Trooper Wins Top Award Nabbing Thieves

The "Screaming Eagle" theft program continues to improve the recovery rate of stolen vehicles in the state of Kentucky. State Trooper William H. Riley, Post 10, Harlan, received the first place award of $1,500 paid vacation for his 24 arrests and recovery of 67 vehicles, valued at $163,520. Detective Phil Woods of Post 11, London, was second with 32 stolen vehicles and 33 arrests.

Post 10, Harlan, won the "Screaming Eagle" trophy for the most stolen vehicles recovered during 1977. Officers assigned to the Harlan Post recovered 270 stolen vehicles valued at $866,177 and made 95 auto theft arrests.

The Independent Insurance Agents of Kentucky joined with the Kentucky State Police in 1975 to form the "Screaming Eagle" Auto Theft Program. The program was designed to increase the officers' awareness of the growing problem in the field of auto theft. State officials ask the officers to make as many NCIC (National Crime Information Computer) checks as possible on stopped vehicles. Officers began to develop more in-depth inspections of vehicles and occupants. Special emphasis was placed on examination of vehicle identification numbers, federal standard stickers, license plates, and ownership papers.

After the officers began to develop experience in auto theft investigations, and the techniques used by professional theft rings, they began to break several large scale rings operating in Kentucky. The program is based on a point system and works this way: 1 point is given for a stolen vehicle recovery without an arrest; 5 points for a stolen vehicle recovery with a follow-up arrest; 10 points for an immediate arrest when the person is arrested in possession of a stolen vehicle.

Points are totaled at the end of each year and the officer with the highest point total is the winner. Eight awards are given for the top eight point totals: First-place award consists of a $1,500 paid vacation.

The eight 1977 award winners combined recovered 184 stolen vehicles, made 114 auto theft arrests, and recovered stolen vehicles valued at $484,930.

Campbell, New Dean Of Alice Lloyd College

Dr. Wallace Campbell, 36, director of Alice Lloyd College's Special Programs Division since 1975, will become academic dean this fall.

"Wally's promotion was an obvious choice for me," said Dr. Jerry C. Davis, ALC president. "He shares with me a deep commitment to the meaning and mission of Alice Lloyd College, and a profound philosophical understanding of Mrs. Lloyd's principle of Leadership Education."

Dr. Campbell was born in Hyden, 50 miles from Alice Lloyd College, and grew up on nearby McIntosh Creek in Leslie county where his parents, Douglas and Nora Campbell, still reside. He graduated from Cordia High School, where he was class valedictorian, and then attended Berea College, where he earned a bachelor's degree in elementary education and won honors as a swimmer. He holds a Ph.D. in the Sociological Foundations of Education from the University of Toledo.

Would Encourage Ridesharing

Employees of the state Department of Transportation try out a new van on the first day of a pilot program to encourage ridesharing. Transportation Planning Engineer E.B. Gaither, left, and Vanpooling Coordinator Darrell Ishmael were also present to help kick off the vanpooling program. Gaither said he expects the program to ease the headaches and expenses of commuting for about 50 state government employees who work in Frankfort. Two vanpools travel from Lexington and one each from Louisville and Shelbyville. A fifth van begins operating from Port Royal in Henry county in about a week.

Miss McNally Selected As Pageant Finalist

Miss Charla Dene McNally, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. McNally, of Prestonsburg, has been selected to be a state finalist in 1978 United Teenager Pageant to be held at the Executive West, Louisville, Ky. at 7:30 p.m. on September 2, 1978. The pageant is the official state wide finals for the United Teenager Pageant to be held in Washington, D. C., in December, 1978.

Contestants from all over the state will be competing for the title. All Contestants are between the ages of 14 and 18 and must have at least a "B" average in school. They are requested to participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program of the United Teenager Pageant. Through this program many youngsters are becoming involved in Community activities by contributing at least 8 hours of time to some worthwhile charity or civic work of their choice.

Among the prizes the winner of the state finals of the Miss United Teenager Pageant will receive are a trip to Europe and an all-expense paid trip to compete in the national finals in Washington, D. C. where she will compete for $15,000 in cash scholarships, a new Thunderbird for her reigning year, a twenty-eight (28) day trip to Europe, $2,000 appearance contract, $2,000 wardrobe and other awards.

Contestants will be judged on scholastic, civic achievements, beauty, poise and personality.

No swimsuit competition is required. Each contestant will write and recite on stage a 100-word "essay" on the subject, "My Country."

Miss McNally is sponsored by Hermitage Coal Co. and is a student at Prestonsburg High School. Her hobbies include swimming, sewing and reading.

TRUCKS BAD FOR MOTORISTS
Collision between an automobile and a heavy truck serves up nasty odds for the motorist, the July Reader's Digest reports. A 1975 North Carolina study found the mortality rate was 14 times higher in a truck-auto collision than in an auto-auto accident. Furthermore, seven out of eight times it was the car occupant, not the truck driver, who was killed.

Camp Receives "A" Rating

Again this year Camp Shawnee, which is operated by Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, has received an "A" rating from Scouting's National Council and has been designated a National Standard Camp. This is the highest rating which is given by the Boy Scouts of America to any Scout camp in the nation and reflects a genuinely high quality of both administration and program with a strong emphasis on safety for the campers.

The camp's high rating is primarily the result of the combined efforts of the entire camp staff which was headed by Camp Director Lowell Parker, of Prestonsburg. Adult members of the camp staff for 1978 included Mark Howson, of Grundy, who served as assistant camp director and program director; Phillip Craft, of Mayking, waterfront director; Roberta Howson, of Grundy, nature ecology director and camp cook; Clyde DeRossett, Jr., of Prestonsburg, camp commissioner, and Steve Collier, of Pikeville, field sports director. In addition to these men and women, considerable camp staff work was contributed by Arthur Leach, of Prestonsburg, who serves as the council's Scouting Committee chairman.

The adult members were assisted in their duties by 14 junior staff members, a large percentage of whom are Eagle Scouts, from all of the districts comprising the council. The successful camping season at Camp Shawnee ended last Saturday, July 15 and included four weeks of Scout camping and two Cub Scout Dad'n Lad Weekends. Many of the older Scouts in the council are now looking forward to a trip to Philmont Scout Ranch near Cimarron, New Mexico, for two weeks of high adventure camping. They will leave tomorrow (Thursday) and will return August 5.

House Passes Perkins' On Education Support

The major legislation continuing federal support for the nation's elementary and secondary education programs, sponsored by Congressman Carl D. Perkins of Kentucky, has passed the House of Representatives.

Under the legislation basic grants will amount to $1,035,000 for Floyd county, plus $176,000 for the special benefit of poor children—in all, an increase of $380,000 over the total received during the current fiscal year.

Most of the funding increases in the bill come under the Title I program of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, which provides federal funds to low income areas to educate disadvantaged children. The Perkins legislation creates a new $400 million program under Title I for additional grants to areas with especially high concentrations of poor children.

This provision could mean a $6.6 million increase in Title I grants for Kentucky next year, with $1.8 million of this slated to go to Eastern Kentucky, Congressman Perkins said.

A major thrust of the legislation approved by the House is to greatly cut down on the paperwork required in all federal education programs, and to make the education laws easier to understand, he said. The House approved Congressman Perkins' amendments designed to reduce the number of applications required for federal aid, to give school districts more lead time in knowing what information they will have to supply, and to better coordinate all education paperwork through a single Federal body. The House also went along with the rewrite of the entire Title I law to make it more clear and understandable, he said.

The House bill extends and increases federal aid for the purchase of library and learning materials and for guidance and counseling programs, Congressman Perkins said. Under the House-approved version, library and media people will no longer have to compete with guidance counselors for Federal funds, since both activities are given separate authorizations in the bill.

The legislation also raises the funding level for the community education program and amends the program to spread the community education concept to more areas, he said.

Congressman Perkins, chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, and the major sponsor of legislation which has helped education at all levels, said the extra funds for Kentucky will help lighten the burden for working people and businesses in the state.

Clinics Scheduled For School Children

That big day is not far away for some children who will be enrolling in school for the first time this fall, and as every parent knows, those last days can go by in a hurry. Before a child is eligible to enroll in school, the Floyd County Board of Education requires them to have a TB skin test, a physical examination by a doctor, and an immunization certificate. This includes all kindergarten students, first graders, and transfer students.

The Floyd County Health Department will be conducting pre-school immunization clinics throughout the county in its mobile van and also at the health department office. Parents may bring their children to these clinics and obtain a TB skin test, immunizations, hemoglobins, and urinalysis free of charge.

The following is a list of these clinics which have been scheduled for the upcoming week:

Wednesday, July 19, Floyd County Health Department, Prestonsburg, from 8-11:30 and 1 to 4; Friday, July 21, John M. Stumbo School parking lot, Grethel, from 10 to 12 and 1 to 2; Wednesday, July 26, McDowell High School parking lot, McDowell, from 10 to 12 and 1 to 2.

The remaining clinics will be published in next week's issue of this paper and will also be announced on your local radio stations.

Amtrack—a Pleasant Traveling Alternative

By EDITH KOUALSKI
If you're planning on traveling to Chicago or Milwaukee for business or pleasure, have you considered taking the train? Yes, I said the train. Amtrack runs from Tri-State Station in Cattlettsburg right to downtown Chicago. Round trip fare is only $49.00. With a connection to Milwaukee, the cost is $61.50. There is also a 20 percent reduction in price for groups of 20 or more, and family fares are available.
Most people don't think of traveling by train anymore, but it is a welcome change from a long drive. It is air conditioned in summer and there are few worries about weather in the winter. It takes more time than flying, but just about as much time as driving straight through.

One may make a reservation by calling 1-800-874-2775 in Kentucky. Your ticket will be mailed to you. Payment can be made by check or any major credit card. Tickets may also be purchased at the station or through a travel agent.

UNDERGOES SURGERY

Mrs. Kathy Ferguson entered St. Joseph's Hospital in Lexington Sunday, July 9, and underwent major surgery there last Tuesday. Her condition is improving, and she is expected to return to her home soon. Mrs. Ferguson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Slone, of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Slone has been with her at the hospital where she is in room 323.

Let me share my own experience on a recent trip to Milwaukee for a conference. I left Prestonsburg at 6 a.m. and arrived at Tri-State Station (which you can see on the right as U.S. 23 North goes through Cattlettsburg). I parked in the free parking lot and walked a few steps into the little station. There was time for a rest and a cup of coffee before the train arrived. It was due at 7:51 a.m. and arrived at 8:02. We were under way in three minutes.
The new Amfleet cars are spacious and attractive. The seats recline quite far and have tray tables on the back, as on an airplane. However, there is much more leg room than on a plane and some Amfleet cars have legrests as well. Each seat back also has a pouch to hold personal items, made of see-through net so that you won't forget you put something in it.

Be sure to sit on the river side as it has the best view as you go northward. At 8 a.m. the sleepy passengers from points East were still quiet, so I settled in for a nap to recover from the early drive. As I closed my eyes, I could hear cards being shuffled, babies stirring, and some women talking. There were some old-timers reminiscing about the good (and bad) old days of trains and how different it is now.

When I awoke, we were along the Ohio River. There were fishing camps and picnic grounds in the lowlands, and some grand old homes and old-fashioned looking towns on the high ground. There were also some deserted old homes (too many floods, I guess) and some pumping stations. Some fields were partially flooded. Barges full of coal were going down the river.

While enjoying the scenery, I ate a snack from the lunch I had brought. Dining cars are only put on the larger trains, but small trains such as the Cardinal (which has two each of baggage cars, sleeping cars and coaches) have a combination snack bar and lounge car. Sandwiches, snack items, cold drinks, coffee, beer, and some alcoholic drinks are available. Prices are fairly reasonable.

Our arrival in Cincinnati was announced with much fanfare and made me think of the grand old days of trains. We crossed the Ohio River on a bridge, right beside another bridge carrying automobiles. The conductors were carrying suitcases to the door for passengers who desired help. They handed them down to the platform, where those who wanted could hail a redcap.

People are happy and relaxed traveling by train. It's fun. As the train passes by people wave at the travelers and they wave back. The whole experience recalls an earlier, less rushed, time.

After Cincinnati we traveled through Indiana, which has typical Midwestern scenery. Then we reached Gary, Indiana with its steel plants and heavy industry. I could hardly believe it but I saw a pheasant flying by on the outskirts of Chicago! We arrived in Chicago at 6:10 p.m.—five minutes early.

Those of us going on to Milwaukee had time to eat and walk around the very interesting Chicago station before catching the 7:45 p.m. train, which arrives in Milwaukee at 9:17 p.m. The underground level contains several restaurants and shops. The upper level has a modern passenger lounge with comfortable furniture and soft lighting. There is also the old vaulted lobby with magnificent polished wooden benches, ticket and information counters and a couple of snack bars.

Taxis wait outside the station and it is just a short distance to all the major hotels.

From Chicago to Cattlettsburg, the train leaves at 9:55 a.m. and arrives at 10:02 p.m. On my return we left and arrived 10 minutes late. At Cincinnati, a fellow traveler and I got out and jogged the length of the train to get a little exercise. A group that was going to Washington D.C. got on at Cincinnati. Seats for them had been reserved, so that they could sit together. I read and napped and watched the scenery during the day. Through the evening I chatted with someone I met in the snack car.

I got off the train at 10:20 p.m. and walked to my car, just a few feet away. I was back home in Prestonsburg by 11:45 p.m. I was relaxed and happy—not hasted and fatigued the way I am after a long drive.

The Cardinal leaves Tri-State station daily for Chicago. You can also take it to Washington, D.C. It leaves daily at 10:02 p.m. and arrives in D.C. at 8:35 a.m. the next morning. Sleeping cars are available. From D.C. it leaves at 9:35 and arrives at 7:51 a.m. (7:21 a.m. in Huntington, W. Va.). This takes longer, but is a better time for viewing the lovely scenery. I take a slightly different route. The return train leaves D.C. at 8:55 a.m. and arrives in Tri-State station at 12:45 a.m. the next morning.

If you're interested in traveling by train, call for the latest fares and schedules. There are U.S.A. rail passes for unlimited travel within the U.S. for 2, 3, and 4 weeks, family fares, kiddies coupons, excursion rates, and group discounts. And if you enjoy your trip, tell your friends. The more people who travel by train, the greater service we'll have.

OUTDOOR LORE

by Neville Shackelford

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

In the opinion of my late grandmother, to be called a goose was more of a compliment than a reflection on the mentality. She always kept a flock of geese during her long career as a farm wife. She kept them to pick for feathers and to weed her strawberry patch and she often said that no other farm creature, not even a dog or a horse had the intelligence of a goose.

She said geese could learn lessons and after a few repetitions could be persuaded to always be on good behaviour. Certainly the flocks she maintained were models of obedience. If she wanted them to pick the crabgrass out of her strawberries, she would lead them to the patch where they pulled the grass and weeds row by row, never touching a strawberry or strawberry plant.

She could bring the geese home from the nearby creek any time of the day simply by stepping outside the house and start calling, "Goosey, goosey, goosey." As soon as they heard her voice they would leave what they were doing, start single file for home, and never stop until the last one had arrived.

The only time grandmother ever had any difficulty with her geese was at feather picking time. The picking, as I recall, was in late summer when the feathers were nearly ready to moult. The geese did not seem to suffer from this operation but they did seem to bitterly resent the indignity. Many a time in helping my grandmother catch and hold the geese, they all but pinched chunks of flesh from my bare legs as I attempted to help her subdue them.

Grandmother's favorite method of picking a goose was to catch the critter, slip an old sock over its head, turn it over on its back on her lap, and either hold its hooded head only by an arm or between her knees. Then while holding the goose with one hand, would pluck the feathers from its breast and under its wings with the other. The feathers came out rather easily and made wonderful stuffing for pillows and mattresses. Nothing sleeps better on a cold night than a bed of goose feathers.

Domesticated geese have long been known for their loyalty and devotion to their owners and to each other. My grandmother's geese actually seemed to love her and would follow her about the farm, seemingly just to enjoy her presence. When she went away from home and returned, they would immediately surround her, uttering loud honks of welcome.

In ancient Greece, maidens made pets of geese and such a devotion developed between bird and girl that if the latter happened to die, the goose would soon perish with a broken heart. Geese are not silly, empty-headed creatures. They are, instead, beautiful, stately creatures of great avian wisdom.

Martin Elderly Would Reinstate Former Director

(Excerpted from The Martin Countian, Inez, Ky.)

Senior citizens cried like babies last Thursday at their center in Inez when director Dixie Slone resigned under pressure from her supervisors.

Mrs. Slone, who has held the job for almost two years, resigned after two supervisors from Prestonsburg told her in a closed meeting in the County Judge's office that she would be put on probation for 30 days.

Mrs. Slone, instead of accepting the reprimand, resigned—effective that day. She cited health reasons.

The director said she felt the probation period was ordered for "political reasons." So she quit.

The two supervisors who ordered the probation period, Phyllis Stanley, Senior Citizens Program Director from Prestonsburg, and Bob Myers, Title VII director, denied that their decision was "for political" reasons.

"I have read Mrs. Slone's letter of resignation, and it has been accepted," Mrs. Stanley said in a telephone interview Friday.

Soon after Mrs. Slone told the senior citizens at the center what had happened, gloom struck.

About 25 of the center's most loyal senior citizens were at the center Thursday when all the fuss arose. They made a special effort to be there because they thought Stanley and Myers would meet with them in the center.

Instead, the meeting was held in the courthouse behind closed doors, and none of the senior citizens were allowed in.

"We never intended to meet with them," Phyllis Stanley said.

"What we had to say to Dixie (Slone) was private," she explained.

Mrs. Slone was accused of not running the local center according to federal guidelines. Recently, a monitoring committee visited her center, and reported their findings.

The report said that the senior citizens "appeared to be rushed in and out," among other accusations.

Mrs. Slone and the elderly who have thought of the center as their second home, denied that.

Several senior citizens have come to Mrs. Slone's aid, and are mounting a drive to have her reinstated.

"This center was being run just the way we wanted it. That's what it's supposed to be for, isn't it? They ought to let us run our center the way we want and do the things we enjoy. Dixie couldn't have been nicer to all of us," Vinie Stepp, one of the regulars at the center, said.

The problem seems to center around what the senior citizens in Martin County want to do, and what the federal guidelines say they should want to do.

"They're just trying to take our center away from us, the poor people," Shirley McCoy, a 72 year-old resident of Meathouse said.

In the meantime, attendance has dwindled to a handful at the center, and Elise Preece has been appointed temporary director.

The Prestonsburg office has begun advertising for a new director.

Plant Site Preference Told

With environmental and socio-economic studies well under way, Kentucky Power Company last week confirmed that the 2400-acre tract of land on the Ohio River at Carrs, about six miles downstream from Vanceburg, Lewis county, is its preferred site for a proposed 2.6-million kilowatt coal-fired electric generating plant.

It had been announced last December that two Lewis county sites were being considered for the project, expected to cost in excess of $1.5-billion. The other site consists of about 1400 acres and is near St. Paul, about six miles upstream from Vanceburg.

O. C. Hall, executive assistant with Kentucky Power, speaking at a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency public meeting last Thursday night at Vanceburg, said it is anticipated the environmental impact statement will be issued in early 1979.

Environmental impact statement will be issued in early 1979.

"Because of the lead time involved in preparing, filing and receiving approval for this multitude of permits," Hall said, "we are at least one full year away from actually beginning construction." Based on a 1979 starting date, completion would be expected during the 1983-1985 period.

The proposed plant would consist of two 1.3-million kilowatt generating units and would burn 7- to 8-million tons of coal per year. Hall said the plant would employ all air and water quality environmental safeguards as prescribed by state and federal standards, including electrostatic precipitators for particulate matter, water cooling towers and cleansing devices or procedures designed to remove sulfur dioxide present when coal is burned.

Japanese Beetles In East Kentucky

Japanese beetles are being found now in ornamentals in Eastern Kentucky. Corn growers should be aware that these beetles may spread to their crop, causing damage to corn in the early silk stage.

"These insects have been found primarily east of I-75 in the state so far this year," points out Chrs Christensen, Extension entomologist in the UK College of Agriculture. "Producers in counties bordering this area should be aware of the possibility that they'll find Japanese beetles in their corn, too."

"The farmer should be concerned if 40 percent or more of his corn field is in the early silking stage and he has a heavy beetle population," Christensen says. "Their feeding on silks in this stage can halt or reduce pollination, preventing kernel set."

This entomologist says that checking your field is the best way to determine whether you have the problem. He recommends choosing five locations at random throughout the field, and checking 25 plants in each location.

Count all Japanese beetles on each ear. If the ears average more than two beetles each, use control measures. As a control in corn, Christensen suggests Sevin 50 percent wettable powder, applied aerially at 2-4 pounds-acre, in a minimum of 5 gallons of water per acre.

"If silks are brown, then pollination has occurred and kernel set has already taken place," he says. "So beetles can feed on the silks in this stage without causing damage to the corn." He says that in this case no control is required, regardless of the number of beetles on the corn.

Christensen says this beetle actually feeds on about 250 host plants, causing damage to ornamentals and fruit trees in particular. Roses, apples, peaches, plums, pears and grapes are some of its favorites. In general, he recommends use of Sevin dust to kill the pest on fruits and ornamentals around the home, but cautions its user to read label directions to determine which plants the substance may be used on.

Says L&N Fails Coal Field

In a June 30 letter to Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) Chairman A. Daniel O'Neal, Kentucky's commerce commissioner has lambasted the Louisville and Nashville Railroad for what he terms "unreasonably poor transportation service being furnished Kentucky coal producers."

Terry McBrayer urged the ICC to take legal action against the L & N because the railroad, he said, has not fulfilled its statutory obligation of furnishing adequate car service to its customers. (The L & N is a subsidiary of Seaboard Coast Line Industries, Inc., of Jacksonville, Fla.)

"The inability of the L & N to move coal from Kentucky mines has reached a critical level from the viewpoint of utilities, producers and the Commonwealth—the threat of depression hangs over the Eastern Kentucky coal field simply because the L & N cannot move the coal being produced," McBrayer stated in his letter to O'Neal.

Citing L & N figures, McBrayer noted that the railroad furnished 49 percent of requested service in February of last year but only 16.5 percent as of April 1978. The commerce commissioner added that the line's road bed and tracks were in poor condition and further stated that personnel problems have permeated the L & N.

McBrayer also questioned the L & N's contention that the line "does not have the resources to deal with these various problems." Quoting figures from the annual Seaboard report to its shareholders, McBrayer noted that the company has about $175 million in nonconsolidated investments and non-transportation services. "It is difficult to understand how the parent company can have sufficient resources to undertake such diversification when the L & N does not have sufficient resources to fill its statutory duties—," McBrayer stated.

Over the past several months McBrayer has called hearings to look into the shortage of coal cars while commerce personnel have also met informally with railroad officials and coal producers.

Urging the ICC to correct "an intolerable situation," McBrayer said, "If you do not, the ramifications for the people of Eastern Kentucky and for the Commonwealth in general are most serious, and the announced policies of the federal government with respect to energy self-sufficiency and air quality control will be severely jeopardized."

Group Asks Panel To Ease Church Signs Restriction

The issue raised in this county last year when highway church signs were first removed to comply with a federal law has spread over the state.

A 25-member delegation urged last Wednesday that a Legislative Research Commission subcommittee ease its restrictions on the size and placement of church signs along Kentucky's federally-funded highways.

But the Administrative Regulation Review subcommittee took no action on the plea at its meeting. Instead, it will write the federal government seeking its opinion on whether an exemption can be made for church signs.

The delegation, headed by state Rep. J. R. Gray, D-Benton, requested that the subcommittee help churches in obtaining exemptions under a plan to beautify America initiated by Lady Bird Johnson.

That plan was aimed at eliminating all roadways signs along federally-funded highways. Kentucky law currently permits church signs to be posted which measure two feet by four feet.

The delegation focused on the situation of one church—the Unity Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Aurora. That church has posted a sign measuring four feet by eight feet two miles away from it at an intersection.

The church was ordered by the state in April to remove the sign within 30 days. But Gov. Julian Carroll later intervened and declared a moratorium on the removal of any church signs. Gray, however, is not certain how committed Carroll is to the group's cause.

According to Gray, the delegation first urged the subcommittee to ease the restrictions on signs for all churches to allow the slightly larger signs. But that request was modified to seek exemptions for rural as opposed to urban churches.

In Switzerland, the temperature falls one degree for every 300-foot rise in altitude.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

The Resource Conservation Act of 1977 provides that public views are to be considered as data and authority to be used to systematically develop, fund, evaluate, and keep current soil and water conservation programs that are in the best long term interest of the nation and its people.

The Act provides that the Soil Conservation Service will have the leadership role but this will be a total effort of the USDA. Soil Conservation Districts have a major role in this effort.

The new Act provides for four things:

1. Appraisal of natural resources on all non-federally owned land.
2. Development of a five-year program to meet needs.
3. Evaluate the programs progress and effectiveness on an annual basis.
4. Public participation and opinion in carrying out the requirements of the law.

The purpose of the meetings is to get the public's views on what aspects of water and soil conservation should get the most attention.

The hearings are the first step in designing what some officials describe as a "master plan" for the nation's conservation efforts, required by the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977. State-level findings will be included in a national report, which SCS must submit to Congress by December 1979.

The public meeting will be held in the Floyd County Library July 21, at 7:00 p.m.

At the conclusion of this meeting we should have identified many of the concerns and problems which the people of Floyd County face as they consider the future of soil, water and related resources.

The general public is invited to participate in this meeting.

Between 1976 and 1985, the U. S. Department of Labor predicts, an estimated 29 million jobs will become available to replace workers who die or retire.

To Host Reading Institute, Aug. 7-9

Morehead State University is hosting an Adult Education Reading Institute, August 7-9 for 25 teachers from Eastern Kentucky including Martin, Floyd, Pike, Lawrence and Johnson counties.

The workshop, sponsored by the ABE teacher training department under the department of Adult Counseling and Higher Education, will focus upon the techniques for teaching reading to non-reading and low-level reading adults.

The workshop is available for one hour of graduate credit. Additional information is available from workshop instructors Sharon Moore and C. J. Bailey, UPO 1353, MSU, Morehead, Ky. 40351 or call (606)783-2289.

Fewer Average Income Families Able to Afford a Home

In a report entitled "The Nation's Housing, 1975 to 1985" released in early March 1977 by the Joint Center for Urban Studies of Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, families of average income are increasingly becoming less able to afford a home. The report charges that, "despite half a century of government support to help American families realize the traditional dream of home ownership, families of average income are now less able to afford a home than 10 or even five years ago."

If the trend of the last five years is projected into the future, a typical new house will cost $78,000 by 1981. If this happens, not only will the poor be priced out of home ownership, but so will the middle class. Then only the most prosperous will be able to afford new homes.

YES WE CAN...build a new home for you with payments you can afford.

It's true! New home prices are higher this year than last... and, if the experts are right, they'll be even higher next year. However, in spite of rising costs, Jim Walter continues to custom build homes that most families CAN afford.

Don't wait! Take advantage of this year's savings. Build now and avoid the rising cost of material and labor. Build now! A new, permanent home built on your property, is STILL today's best investment... an investment that will grow in value year after year.

Build now! Jim Walter has a plan to save you hundreds and hundreds of dollars. Here's how it works: We'll custom build your new home to almost any stage... from the "shell," up to 90% complete. We'll finish the outside from the foundation up, including two coats of quality paint. Then, on the inside, you tell us how much to finish. Where we stop is pretty much up to you, but the more of the inside finishing you and your family do, the less your cost will be. YES WE CAN build together... and you'll have a home you can afford.

To make it even easier for you to buy your new home, Jim Walter offers one-stop INSTANT mortgage financing to qualified property owners. There's no red tape and no "third party" delays because your Jim Walter representative handles all the details for you. He'll also tell you exactly what your monthly payment will be, before construction begins.

Notice is hereby given that the Public Service Commission of Kentucky has scheduled a hearing at 9:00 a.m. EDT on August 2, 1978 at its offices at 730 Schenkel Lane, Frankfort, Kentucky, with respect to the notice by the undersigned that it desires to place in effect the following rates for electric service:

Terms and Conditions of Service

RECONNECTION AND DISCONNECT CHARGES.

In cases where the company has discontinued service as herein provided for, the company reserves the right to make a reconnection charge, payable in advance, in accordance with the following schedule:

- 1. Reconnect for nonpayment during regular hours... $ 9.00
2. Reconnect for nonpayment when work continues into overtime at the end of the day (No "Call Out" required)... $12.00
3. Reconnect for nonpayment when a "Call Out" is required (A "Call Out" is when an employee must be called in to work on an overtime basis to make the reconnect trip)... $25.00
4. Reconnect for nonpayment when double time is required (Sunday and holidays)... $31.00
5. Disconnect trip for nonpayment when the customer pays the bill or signs a Company form indicating payment will be made by the end of the following day and no disconnect is made... $ 6.00

BAD CHECK CHARGES.

In cases where a customer tenders in payment of an account a check which upon deposit by the company is returned as unpaid by the bank for any reason, the customer will be charged a fee of $5.00 to cover the cost of handling such unsecured check in its accounts.

FUEL ADJUSTMENT CLAUSE

To Tariffs R.S., G.S., L.P., C.F.O., L.C.P., H.T.P., T.P., M.W., E.N.S., E.N.G., S.S. AND C.P.

RATE. 1. This rate shall provide for periodic adjustment per kilowatt-hour when the unit cost of fuel (F) used to meet the company's Net Energy Requirement (S(m)) is above or below the base unit cost of 1.200 cents per kilowatt-hour (F(b)/S(b)).

Adjustment Factor (A) = (F(m) - F(b)) / (S(m) - S(b))
In the above formula, "F" is the expense of fossil fuel in the base (b) and current (m) periods; and "S" is the kWh sales in the base (b) and current (m) periods, all as defined below.

2. Fuel Costs (F) shall be the most recent actual monthly cost, based on weighted average inventory costing, of:
a. Fossil fuel consumed in Kentucky Power Company's generating plants and the Company's share of fossil and nuclear fuel consumed in jointly owned or leased plants, plus the cost of fuel which would have been used in plants suffering forced generation or transmission outages, but less the cost of fuel to substitute generation, plus

b. The actual identifiable fossil and nuclear fuel costs associated with energy purchased for reasons other than identified in paragraph (c) below, but including the cost of fuel related to purchases to substitute the forced outages, plus

c. The net energy cost of energy purchases, exclusive of capacity or demand charges (irrespective of the designation to such transaction) when such energy is purchased on an economic dispatch basis. Included therein may be such charges for economy energy purchases and the charges as a result of schedule outages, all such kinds of energy being purchases by the Company to substitute for its own higher cost energy, less

d. The cost of fossil fuel recovered through inter-system sales including the fuel costs related to economy energy sales and other energy sold on an economic dispatch basis.

3. The cost of fossil fuel shall include no items other than the invoice price of fuel less any cash or other discounts. The invoice price of fuel includes the cost of the fuel itself and necessary charges for transportation of the fuel from the point of acquisition to the unloading point, as listed in Account 151 of FERC Uniform System of Accounts for Public Utilities and Licensees.

4. Forced outages are all nonscheduled losses of generation or transmission which require substitute power for a continuous period of six (6) hours. Where forced outages are not as a result of faulty equipment, faulty manufacture, faulty design, faulty installations, faulty operation, faulty maintenance, but are acts of God, riot, insurrection or acts of the public enemy, then the Company may, upon proper showing, with the approval of Public Service Commission, include the fuel cost of substitute energy in the adjustment.

5. Sales (S) shall be all kilowatt-hours sold, excluding inter-system sales. Where, for any reason, billed system sales cannot be coordinated with fuel costs for the billing period, sales may be equated to the sum of (i) generation, (ii) purchases, (iii) interchange-in, less (iv) energy associated with pumped storage operations, less (v) system sales referred to in section (2) (d) above, less (vi) total system losses. Company used energy shall not be included in the determination of sales (S).

6. Sales (S) shall be modified to reflect line losses on the Company's delivery of energy to Kentucky Jurisdictional Customers.

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON I'd imagine that if someone asked Kentucky's fishermen the question, "what's the first fish you ever caught?" the overwhelming answer would be bluegill. Equally at home in the smallest farm pond or the largest man-made lake, this scrappy little fighter is usually willing to oblige any youngster with a cane pole and a can of worms. But like its close relative the largemouth bass, the bluegill can at times be a temperamental cuss. This is particularly true of the larger bluegill—a species this low on the food chain doesn't make it to bragging size by being stupid. So don't dismiss this fish as fit game only for kids and beginners. Catching "bul" bluegill can be a real challenge, requiring considerable angling skill and knowledge of the fish's habits. This is especially true for the fisherman who uses artificial lures on light tackle. Fly fishing is a popular method of taking bluegill, but some fishermen make the mistake of limiting their selection of lures to surface poppers only. Most of the time, large bluegill will be in deeper water where a sinking fly fished slowly near the bottom is required. On light spinning tackle, small do-jigs are also effective. Bluegill fishermen around Kentucky have developed some specialized techniques for taking bluegill. At Dale Hollow, knowledgeable bluegill fishermen concentrate their efforts around weed beds, either drifting over them or still fishing near the edge of the weeds. At lakes with steep banks, such as Cumberland and Herrington, a favorite technique is drift fishing along the rock walls, using either crickets, horseweed worms, or catalpa worms. Once the fishermen locate a school of bluegill, they fish the area thoroughly. But if the first few fish caught are small ones, experienced fishermen will move on to another location, since they know that similar sized bluegill congregate together and that the larger fish are somewhere else. In Western Kentucky, particularly at Kentucky Lake, bluegill fishermen watch for mayfly hatches. As these insects hatch, they land on trees and bushes overhanging the water. Bluegill (and several other species as well) gather under this overhanging shrubbery waiting for an easy meal to drop into the water. Sometimes fishermen encourage this to happen by casting a practice plug or a lure with the hooks removed into the bushes, then giving it a hearty shake to dislodge the mayflies. They then quickly cast (usually with a fly rod) into the feeding spree that results. Several tailwater areas can also be productive bluegill fishing areas. There are some fine fish caught every year below Barkley dam, and the Barren and Rough River tailwaters are also good spots. Then of course there is always a nearby farm pond, a cane pole, and a lazy summer afternoon—and time to be thankful for the bluegill, a fish for both the expert and the beginner.

Encourages Recognition Of Classified Personnel

The Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA) has encouraged all local boards of education, the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education, and the Kentucky Department of Education to designate non-teaching employees as "classified employees" rather than "non-certified employees". The term now commonly used, Classified employees would include bus drivers, cafeteria workers, maintenance personnel, and any position which does not require legal certification. This change is in recognition of the value of these personnel to school operations, according to KSBA. "Non-certified" has a negative sound, and many school employees resent this," says Dr. J. E. Johnson, president of KSBA. "The term 'classified' recognizes the importance of these personnel to the operation of the schools. This suggested change may appear insignificant, but we believe it is proper and that it will please many of our employees." An official KSBA resolution encouraging the new designation is being sent to all local school districts and state education officials.

Babysitter's Guide . . .

When the Kids Get Hurt

Thousands of Kentucky kids are at play, and summer is boom-time for accidents. Many of them happen while Mom's away and a sitter is in charge. A working knowledge of Red Cross-approved first-aid measures should be part of every babysitter's repertoire, according to Karen Hill, 4-H program specialist with the UK College of Agriculture's Cooperative Extension Service.

Teenagers who attend Extension-sponsored babysitting clinics throughout the state learn how to cope with all sorts of situations. They also make sure parents leave written permission that authorizes doctor, nurse or hospital to give any needed medical care to a child. This information should include the name of each child and the name of the sitter.

An article in the July 10 issue of "U. S. News and World Report" noted that most of the thousands of playground accidents every year could be prevented by closer supervision of children.

Some of the ways kids get hurt on play equipment: jumping off swings and climbing equipment, running up slides, walking on horizontal bars, getting hit by a swing or see-saw. They do things they shouldn't be allowed to do.

Babysitting is no time to goof off. Watch those kids with an eagle eye and keep them safe. You can relax when you get home.

First Aid Tips

Small cuts or scratches: Don't touch wound. Wash with warm soapy water. Pat dry with clean cloth and apply an adhesive-strip bandage.

Cut with severe bleeding: Press a thick clean cloth directly over the wound and elevate the cut area above the heart, if possible. For example, prop up the injured arm or leg.

Add another clean pad on top of the first one if it becomes blood-soaked. Apply steady pressure until the bleeding stops or until the doctor or parents you have summoned arrive. Keep the pressure pads in place.

Bee sting, snake or spider bite: Remove the stinger, if it's a bee sting. Apply cold compresses and a soothing lotion or salve.

If you know the child is allergic to bee sting, or if there's a chance the spider or snake was poisonous, call for help immediately. Or if you observe an allergic reaction—such as excessive swelling, difficulty in breathing—call doctor, ambulance and parents immediately. In a child highly sensitive to any of the above bites or stings, delay can be fatal.

Minor burn: Rinse with cold running water. Then cover with a cloth to block out air and relieve pain.

Serious burn: Don't touch it or try to treat it. Cover child with a clean sheet, keep him lying still, and get emergency help at once.

Animal bite: If skin is broken, wash wound with warm soapy water and call the doctor. Get a good look at the animal so that you can identify it if necessary. Be sure to report to parents what happened.

Something in eye: Don't poke around in the eye. Keep child quiet and don't let him rub the eye. If tears don't wash out the foreign object, call parents or doctor.

Nosebleed: Calm the child. Have him sit in a chair with his head back, or lie down with a pillow under his shoulders. Pinch his nostrils together for 4- or 5 minutes. If bleeding doesn't stop, wring out a towel in cold water and put it over his face and nose. Call parents or doctor if bleeding doesn't stop within 5 to 10 minutes.

Choking: If he's coughing, just let him cough. If he's having trouble breathing, turn him upside down and thump him on the back between the shoulder blades. If this doesn't dislodge object, call fire department at once.

If you have already learned the technique for clapping around the victim and under the rib cage and suddenly squeezing upward, do this. But don't try this without knowing the correct way to do it, because injury is possible.

Blow to the head: Keep child awake and watch for signs of unconsciousness. If he won't stay awake, call parents or doctor. Otherwise, be sure to tell parents what happened when they get home.

Poison: Dilute the poison by making child drink milk or water right away. Get the container and call the doctor at once. Tell him what the child swallowed and how much. Do exactly what doctor tells you.

If child is unconscious, get him to hospital or doctor as soon as possible. Take rest of the contents and the label with you.

Sometimes an antidote for a poisonous substance will be given on the label. If so, take quick action in accordance with these directions.

A bad fall: If child is in pain, or you suspect a broken bone, keep him quiet and get help at once. Don't move him or let him try to get up. A broken bone could puncture a vital organ or become displaced and break through the skin. A back or neck injury to the spinal cord could become far more serious.

Shock: This can happen even without serious injury. The skin gets clammy, the child seems faint and weak, may even lose consciousness. Cover the child, reassure him, keep him quiet, and get help immediately. A ditty that some boy scouts learn in treating shock is, "Face is red, raise the head; face is pale, raise the tail."

Heading Off Trouble

Almost no toy, play equipment or play area is 100 percent safe. A child needs to be carefully watched and protected, says Hill.

David Realizes Its Dream

The David Community Development Corporation was formed in 1972 as a result of poor water conditions in the community of David. Soon thereafter, the residents began the battle for clean, safe drinking water and this effort was to continue for five years. With the help of the Appalachian Regional Commission, good water was a reality on December 10, last year. Not only did the people in David want to help themselves, but they also set out to reach and benefit families who were in a similar situation.

Twenty-seven of the lots will sell for less. All of this didn't just happen. Many dedicated people worked hard all over the U.S., as well as in David. ARC gave the DCDC a planning grant so that things could be planned, instead of being left to chance. The staff of the DCDC offers assistance to other communities that may have similar problems. For more information call 886-8508 or visit the community center in David, open 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., week-days.

Through the monthly publication of their hometown newsletter, "The David Voice," people all over the United States are kept informed of the progress made.

The need for sanitary sewerage has been evident for many years in David. When the answer to emptying a sewage collection tank is to hit the tank with a hammer and have it overflow into the creek, you understand the need.

With a grant from ARC and Farmers Home Administration, and a loan from Housing Assistance Council, the DCDC was able to get a contractor started on the sewerage system for David's present residents and the residents in the new Schoolhouse Hollow subdivision. Completion date is approximately three weeks away.

Several subdivisions are planned in David. The new Schoolhouse Hollow subdivision will be a reality. Through the efforts of the Kentucky Housing Corporation and ARC, a site development grant was given to the DCDC. This grant allows: house sites to be prepared, curbs, gutters, storm drainage and paving of the street. This is a HUD-approved subdivision. Work has begun with a two month completion date. Lots with water, sewer, and site preparation that average 70 x 140 feet may sell for about $10,000.

Women Becoming Park Rangers

1978 has and will continue to be a memorable year for the Department of Parks.

After some seven years of planning and construction, Dale Hollow Lake State Park has opened its doors to visitors, becoming Kentucky's largest park. The unique Kentucky State Horse Park in Lexington is already attracting world and national attention well before its official opening this September. And, for the first time, the park rangers are adding women to their ranks.

Col. B.N. "Gim" Dossett is especially proud of the latter feat. Dossett is head of the park system's 148 rangers and, with two other men, supervises the force from his Frankfort office.

Dossett said that the first woman, Ruth Roe, is now at work at E. P. "Tom" Sawyer State Park, near Louisville. A second, Nancy Hayes, has joined the Horse Park staff and a third, Carol Davis, has been appointed at Kenlake State Resort Park, near Aurora.

Dossett stated that while several women in recent years have taken the required state test for the job and made high, qualifying scores, they often have found more lucrative positions and then decided on another career. He added that this hiring problem has not been difficult with men since many are retired police officers or ex-military personnel able to supplement their parks income with pensions.

All Kentucky park rangers, Dossett noted, have full police powers and although their jurisdiction can extend outside the parks, they are asked to limit their official duties to within those confines, except in emergencies.

One of those duties had endeared the rangers to many a small child, that of conducting the junior ranger program. Dossett said the junior ranger program is actually a public relations effort whereby children visiting the park learn about the area's wildlife from rangers on duty or sit in the cruisers, manipulating blue, flashing lights and sirens. Afterwards they are presented a small plastic badge and official certificate designating them as Kentucky junior park rangers.

Dossett said the cost and effort put into the program are minimal but the rewards are significant. He explained that families planning vacations the following year will be reminded by their children of the ranger program and thus decide year after year to visit a Kentucky state park.

More important, Dossett said, the junior ranger program enables the children to relate to police officers as their friends, as persons who should be contacted when help is needed. He cited the all-too-familiar incidences of parents warning their offspring that "that policeman will get you if you don't behave." That threat, he said, instills within the child a unhealthy fear and distrust of police officers.

Kentucky's chief park ranger said the junior program has expanded quickly since its inception five or six years ago at Rough River Dam State Resort Park to its use by all parks today.

MORE CHILD ABUSE

No one really knows how many children are abused or neglected in the U.S. every year, but a survey by the American Humane Association indicates that more cases are being reported, especially by the schools. In over 41 states, educators are required by law to report child abuse and neglect. Reports of abuse and neglect rose from 249,796 in 1975 to 357,533 in 1976.

In the covered wagon days, it was a common practice to cure fresh meat with salt in order to preserve it for later use. It's not surprising then, that the saving of money (in reserve, for later use) is often called "salting" it away. That's precisely what we encourage you to do with our Certificates of Deposit; your best choice when considering long-term investment. "Salt some away" with one of these high-yielding Certificates of Deposit.

Effective June 20, 1978, annual interest rates and requirements payable on Passbook Savings and Certificates of Deposit are as follows:

Attend Summer Keyboard Institute

Carolyn Click, of Garrett, and Karen Frazier, of Paintsville, have recently returned from three weeks of study at the University of Kentucky's Summer Keyboard Institute for high school students. Upon recommendation of their private teachers, students were asked to audition before U.K.'s piano faculty before being accepted. Thirty pianists from Kentucky, Ohio, Louisiana and Florida were selected to attend.

The Summer Keyboard Institute, held annually, required participants to attend daily classes in both music history and music theory; two private lessons and one group lesson were held each week. A student recital was given at the end of the three-week institute. Also, while on campus, students were able to take advantage of many concert artists who came to Lexington especially to perform during the keyboard institute.

Carolyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Click, will be a junior at Knott County Central High School. Karen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Frazier and will be a junior at Paintsville High School. Both Karen and Carolyn are the private students of Nancy Lyon, of Paintsville.
