

Flood Insurance Act Hearing Set

Lines Are Drawn On Future Work In Flood Areas

The first reading of an ordinance designed to place Floyd county outside incorporated towns in compliance with the national Flood Insurance Program through flood plain management will have its first reading at the fiscal court meeting here next Tuesday at 1 p.m.

It applies to all construction and major improvements in the base flood area identified June 17, 1977 by the Federal Insurance Administration. ("Base flood" is a term used to indicate the flood level which has a one per cent chance of being equaled or exceeded in any given year.)

The ordinance requires that: —All new construction and substantial improvement (improvement costing as much as 50 per cent of the value of the existing structure) to be constructed so as to minimize flood damage, and all new or replaced water supply and sewage systems to be designed so as to minimize or eliminate infiltration by flood waters, and waste disposal systems to be located to avoid contamination from them during flooding.

—New residential construction or substantial improvement to have the lowest floor, including basement, elevated to base flood level, or, with its utilities and sanitary facilities, flood-proofed so that the below-base-flood-level structure is water-tight and its walls practically impervious to the passage of water. A registered professional engineer or architect would be required to certify that these provisions are met for non-residential buildings.

—No mobile home to be located in a floodway, except for mobile home parks and subdivisions now existing; all to be anchored to resist flotation or collapse. For new mobile home parts or subdivisions, the ordinance requires that their sites be elevated on composted fills or on pilings so that the lowest floor will be above base flood level.

Generally, variances will be allowed for new construction and improvements on a lot of half an acre or less which is contiguous to and surrounded by other lots with existing buildings below the base flood levels.

The flood plain administrator will receive applications for development permits and review them to determine if

Urgent Blood Need Cited as Drawing Slated Dec. 20th

Blood donors are urgently needed Wednesday, December 20 at the Highlands Regional Medical Center from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

A Blood Center representative said: "There has been a critical blood shortage situation going on for months now because of a lack of blood donations. If blood is to be available for you or someone close to you during Christmas, should it be needed, then it is up to you and other Floyd countians to donate it. The hard winter weather will be upon us sooner than we might expect. This may be the last opportunity you may have to see that your family is protected with blood coverage until spring."

Nursing Staff Members Resign

Reaction to internal policy changes was given as the cause of several resignations submitted Monday by nursing staff members of the Highlands Regional Medical Center here.

No specifics as to the policy changes were given by the hospital administration in a statement Tuesday afternoon.

The statement released by Russell Dean for the hospital administrator said: "The nursing department at Highlands Regional Medical Center has received resignations from some members of the nursing staff. The administration at the hospital is confident the problems can be resolved. Appropriate action is being taken to insure that there will be no adverse effect on patient care."

The resignations range from aides and LPNs (licensed practical nurses) to RNs (registered nurses). Most of those who turned in their resignations are not members of the union formed at the hospital.

Those who resigned remained on duty Tuesday afternoon and there was no interruption of normal hospital services.

Second Holdup of Elderly In Month Staged in County

The robbery of an elderly Estill couple last Tuesday morning, the second such incident in the county during November, caused officers to sound a warning to the aged and those living in isolated areas to keep their doors locked against possible intrusion by strangers.

The holdup of Wiley Jones, 80, and his wife, Susie, followed a man's visit to their home and his inquiry about the whereabouts of a neighbor who had at one time stayed with them. The man then pulled a gun on the couple, punched Mr. Jones with the weapon and demanded his money. Jones, who carried two purses, gave the intruder one which contained only three pennies. The robber, who has not been identified, then seized Mrs. Jones and took her purse which contained more than $300. The pocketbook which her husband did not present to the robber contained a greater amount, it was said.

Constable Bob Hackworth said he was told the robber fired a shot inside the Jones home before leaving, but he said he and a state police trooper who joined the investigation failed to find a bullethole inside the house.

The Joneses are housebound, and it was not until Jim Jones, a relative who regularly visits them and attends to their needs, went to the house around noon, two hours later, that the robbery became known.

Shelter for Animals Going Up

A modern animal shelter, now well under construction and set for completion by early spring, will represent nearly four years of work, organization and negotiation on the part of the Floyd County Humane Society and the City of Prestonsburg toward alleviating the widespread problem in the county of unclaimed and abused animals.

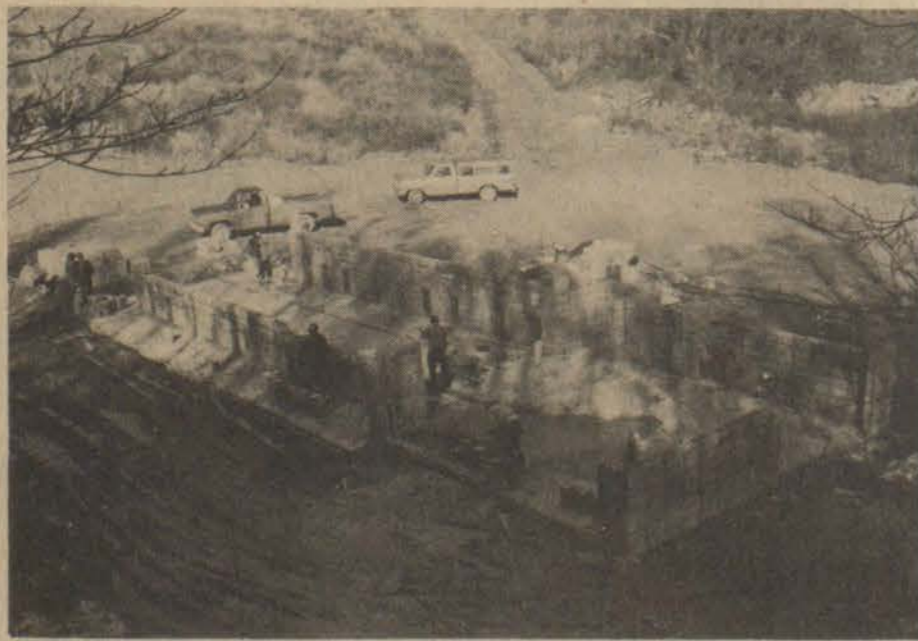

The idea of a humane society-animal shelter came about four years ago when it was learned that $25,000, part of the bequest of a Bell county woman, Susan Hawkins Liebig, had been made available for the establishing of an animal shelter to serve Prestonsburg and Floyd county. Including interest which had accumulated since the benefactor's death, in 1956, the total came to around $40,000 and Prestonsburg officials began a series of negotiations with Mrs. Liebig's trustees who outlined in detail guidelines which the city must meet in order to be granted the money.

At that time the Floyd County Humane Society was formed and meetings were held regularly at Martin, which was considered a central location for the convenience of interested citizens in various sections of the county. John Burke, Jr., of Prestonsburg, was elected president of the society.

The major problem of a location for the proposed shelter was solved when the City of Prestonsburg leased a two-acre site at the city's landfill on Middle Creek to the humane society at $1 for 100 years.

Construction of the facility is being accomplished through the use of city employees and follows plans extracted through several visits by city officials and humane society representatives to animal shelters in various sections of the state. Although Marvin Crider, architect, has been employed as advisor on the construction, the basic plans follow a shelter which serves Frankfort, Ky.

COAL COUNTRY...Fourteen loaded gondolas of a Chessie System train derailed about 2 a.m. Sunday at Wayland, spilling tons of coal dangerously close to several residences which border the track. Although no injuries were reported, the incident, latest in a number of derailments in the county over the past year, points to the danger to life and property which exists with the continuing threat of similar, future mishaps. (The derailment came only four days after a special inspection of tracks up Right Beaver was conducted by several top C. & O. officials.)

Coal Moved By Builders Challenged

State and Federal Officials Disagree At Mining Seminar

Private developers of hillside areas in this and other counties may have difficult days ahead for them if coal is removed in their excavation work.

Eugene Mooney, secretary of the Kentucky Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, said at a surface mining seminar last week at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, that he interprets the federal mine law to mean that private construction projects are exempt if the removal of coal is incidental and a necessary part of the construction job.

But J.T. Begley, regional solicitor for the U.S. Office of Surface Mining, said that Congress did not give the agency authority to exempt private construction projects if coal was removed in the process.

The seminar ranged the legal gamut surface miners must run, and the problems of developers was incidental to the general program of the meeting in

This Town...That World

This weather, as any fool can plainly see, is not all that some of the forecasters cracked it up to be. The evening grosbeaks which stormed us last winter apparently haven't read the forecasts and have decided a trip south isn't worth the trouble. The redbirds are doing so well on their own that they're turning up their bills at feeder fare. And, just outside our window, Mr. and Mrs. George Brown's garden is alive with mustard, kale lettuce and turnips—Still, one week in December does not a winter make.

GOOD ADVICE

Time was when householders used mottoes pretty freely for wall decorations, and I wouldn't be surprised if it wasn't a pretty sound idea, although I've been pretty remiss in the motto department. The ancient Jews used the frontlet and phylactery to good effect, I recall. This motto which hangs in District Judge Stumbo's office would do for a starter: Talent is God-given. Be humble. Fame is man-given. Be grateful. Conceit is self-given. Be careful.

HOT STOVE LEAGUE NOTE

Pete Rose is in Philadelphia. Sparky Anderson is temporarily in limbo. And it's a caution where a lot of fans are saying that fellow Wagner should be.

ANSWER PENDING

Was reminded recently by a friend who for some time now has "followed" my ramblings in this space that he has had enough of reading my confessions that as a fisherman, or salesman, or dancer, or singer, or just about anything else, I'm a No. 1 washout. "You've told the failures—now, what about the successes?" he insisted.

I seem to remember—give me a few months to recall one, and I'll admit it.

ALL MIXED UP

This newspaper does not expect to endorse any candidate for state office next year, and I do not propose to hand out a lot of free publicity to any of them, but we cannot resist this statement by Bill Cox in re the governor's race. Speaking at a fund-raising dinner in his behalf as a candidate for lieutenant governor, Cox said:

"The governor's race is more confused than a family reunion at the dog pound. Nobody knows who belongs to whom."

Knifed in Fight, Paul Hall Dies, Brother Injured

One of the first cases scheduled for investigation by the grand jury when it convened Tuesday morning was the knife-slating last Wednesday night at Garrett's "Baptist Bottom" of Paul Edward Hall, 22, by his brother, Robert, about 25.

The accused man is in Highlands Regional Medical Center here, himself a stabbing victim. He has a punctured lung and is expected to be in the hospital four to five weeks.

The stabbing of the brothers has its bizarre angles, and events of the evening are not clear. For example:

Carroll Adds $35,000 For School Cleanup

Gov. Julian Carroll last Tuesday added $35,000 from his contingency fund to increase to $70,000 the total available for replacement of ceiling at Prestonsburg High School which contains asbestos fibers and has been pronounced a health threat.

The governor's grant matches the $35,000 recently granted by the Big Sandy Area Development District.

The state funds will go to the Floyd County Board of Education as the legal entity acting in the asbestos removal and attendant work which is later to be let to contract.

Governor Carroll commented on his action, saying that he regarded this a pilot program, since the school here is the first in Kentucky with a problem of such magnitude. Meanwhile, representatives from four state agencies are reviewing schools across the state to determine if a similar problem exists in them because of asbestos used in insulation.

Carroll's action followed a conference with a Floyd delegation composed of

Superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr., State Representative James "Jitter" Allen, Marvin Crider, Jr., architect, and Ulysses Horn, maintenance supervisor for the board of education, County Judge-Executive Yvonne S. Jones and Mrs. Joe McCauley, and representatives of the parents' group, People for Better Schools, Mrs. Ann Latta and Mrs. Joyce Everly. (Mrs. Ruby Catherine Clifton, head of PBS, which first raised the question of danger from the asbestos, was unable to be present because of a prior commitment.)

Supt. Grigsby said he was "very elated" by the governor's decision to help. "He didn't have to do it—but he did," Grigsby said.

Mrs. Latta, of the parents' group, said, "We were just very pleased and gratified that the governor recognized the need and the health hazard that the asbestos presented to the students."

The superintendent said last week that the work at the school may require from three to six weeks and that classwork will have to be suspended during that time.

Recent Visitor Here, Champion Of American Folk Tradition

A distinguished visitor was in Prestonsburg for a few days over the past week, although few people knew. Even if the presence of Sarah Gertrude Knott had been widely known, it's unlikely that much stir would have been created—certainly nothing to compare with the visit of a high-ranking official or well-known politician. But as founder and director of the National Folk Festival for 35 years, Miss Knott, who was here visiting her longtime friend and fellow folk collector, Edith F. James, has left a more distinct "mark" on the national scene than most individuals, regardless of rank or title.

It was Miss Knott who in 1934, during the darkest hours of the Great Depression, spearheaded and became director of the first National Folk Festival in St. Louis, Mo. at a time when such festivals just didn't exist and folk singers didn't wear sandals and participate in "hootnannies." From that year until 1969, she served as the driving force behind the huge festival that brought together Americans of all backgrounds and races in a yearly reaffirmation of their folk heritage and cultural roots.

Interviewed here last week, she tried to answer the somewhat overwhelming question of "How did a young woman from Princeton, Ky. (a small town near Paducah) come to organize and direct a project of the magnitude of a national folk festival?"

Miss Knott said some of her earliest and fondest recollections center around the children's games she and other youngsters would play at recess at the one-room school where she learned the three R's as a little girl. "You know, singing games like 'London Bridge' and 'Miller Boy,' and non-singing games such as 'I Spy' or 'Ante Over.'" Miss Knott recalled. Her childhood experiences had a profound effect on her later life.

"Somehow from my earliest memory, it just seems to me I knew that rural people needed more recreational and artistic outlets in their isolated homes," she said.

Trained in drama at Georgetown (Ky.) College, Miss Knott later studied and worked at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where she was one of 10 people there who founded the Carolina Dramatic Association and worked at creating a native American drama in keeping with her concern for the expression of rural values and life styles.

When she moved to St. Louis, she was employed in a program to help the unemployed during the Depression. "You did what you could to help people," Miss Knott recalled. "Nobody laughed—it was a tragic time."

Osborne Elem. Eagles Clip Wasps 52-51

Guard Davy Tackett scored 26 points, while Gerald Osborne grabbed tough, hardworking rebounds to give Osborne Eagles an 52-51 grade school basketball victory over the Wayland Wasps on Novmber 22 in Wayland territory.

The 5' 6" eighth grader Tackett showed his offensive work with 26 points securing the victory for the Osborne Eagles. Tackett made all shots in overtime with 15 seconds left of the 3-minute overtime.

Center Gerald Osborne scored 12 points and consistently recovered rebounds for the Eagles, but in the third quarter, he was in fouling trouble and was taken out of the game. At fourth quarter the Osborne team closed the gap.

Forward Don Hall used his strength to gain eight points for the Eagles. Michael Williams, forward, also added six points. Hall and Williams made some timely baskets that were greatly needed for the bictory.

Guard Kevin Grigsby contributed to defensive effort and helped keep the ball going at all times by throwing passes for the finishing touches of the victory.

Constable Bob Hackworth, first officer at the scene after having been called at 9:15 p. m., said that when he arrived Paul Hall had been picked up and put to bed and that other members of the family, including the wounded Robert, had all gone to bed, apparently thinking that Paul Hall had fallen to the floor, "passed out" from drink. Hackworth said his investigation disclosed that Paul Hall had been dead for some time. He had been stabbed twice.

Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen and State Trooper Terry Hall accompanied Robert Hall to the hospital here, and Allen said the wounded man after having been informed of his rights made an oral statement relating to the stabbing of his brother. According to Allen, Robert Hall said that he and his brother fought over some beer and that hot grease was spilled or thrown onto his body. He said his brother knocked him to the floor and walked into an adjoining bedroom. Robert Hall in this statement said he got the knife, which was described as a fishing knife, and followed his brother into the bedroom. This recital of his statement says that he said he "wanted to cut him a little bit but not bad." The accused man, Allen said, apparently could not explain how he himself was cut.

Officers quoted James Hall, a brother of the two principals in the fight, as saying that Paul had his arm around Robert's neck and that Robert asked him to take the knife from Paul's hand. He was quoted as saying that when he did this Paul dropped to the floor.

Others taking part in the early investigation of the slaying were State Police Detective Delmar Lafferty and Magistrate Kenneth Roberts.

The victim was a son of Mrs. Aileen Wiley Hall, of Garrett, and the late Troy Hall. He was employed by the R. R. Dawson Bridge Company. Besides his mother and brother, Robert Steven, he is survived by another brother, James Arthur, and one sister, Mrs. Kathy Ann Jacobs. All reside at Garrett.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday at 11 a.m. from the First Baptist Church of Garrett, and burial was made in the Cox cemetery, near Garrett, by the Merion Funeral Chapel.

MESSAGE IN BOTTLE FOUND

MELBOURNE, Australia—A bottle containing a message in English, French and Spanish that was thrown into the sea 19 years ago and traveled an estimated 20,000 miles will be returned to the Chilean navy officer who "posted" it on Sept. 9, 1959.

The bottle was found this week on a lonely beach on the southern coast of Australia. The note, written by Chilean Capt. de Corbeta, now a vice admiral, asked the finder to return it to the Navigation Department in Chile.

INJURED IN GUN EXPLOSION

Michael Whitely, of Betsy Layne, suffered a severe hand injury in the explosion of a gun Nov. 19 while target shooting at Jenny Wiley State Park with friends. He was taken to the Highlands Regional Medical Center and sent from there to Jewish Hospital in Louisville for extensive hand surgery. He is out of the hospital now but will return for further treatments. He is the son of Donald L. Whitely and a grandson of Stella E. Akers, of Betsy Layne.

Hammond Says Bill Pre-Filed To End Automatic Fuel Clause

State Sen. Jim Hammond, said Monday that he has pre-filed a Senate bill for the special session of the General Assembly which would prohibit automatic fuel adjustment clauses by electric utilities for residential customers.

The bill does not influence the use of the clause for industrial, commercial and other categories of utility users.

The fuel adjustment clause allows utilities to pass on increased costs of fuel to their customers without going through the normal hearing procedures for rate increases.

Sen. Hammond's bill, Senate Bill 3, calls for revision of basic residential rate schedules, eliminating the automatic fuel adjustment clause. The new rate schedules would have to be submitted to the state Public Service Commission before July 1, 1979.

Sen. Hammond also said that Representative Roger Noe, D-Harlan, has concurrently filed a House bill which is identical to the Senate bill. Hammond and Noe said they have done this so that the legislation can be considered by both the House and the Senate at the same time and speedy action can be had on the legislation.

Hammond said he is in favor of putting a freeze on property tax assessments; increasing the standard deduction for personal, state income tax and making the special income tax benefits now available to persons 65 and older also available to persons 62 and older; and for repeal of the additional $15 court cost which is taxed on each fine that was passed in the 1978 General Assembly, and an overall modification of court fines and costs, with a more equitable distribution to cities and counties of the monies collected through the court system than is presently being done.

"I think we can do this without any cuts in the funds that are allocated in the budget for secondary, elementary and vocational education, and other vital services," Hammond said. The tax cuts to be considered by the General Assembly can be offset from the surplus of revenues collected by the state, which already exceeds 26 million for the first half of this fiscal year, with a projected excess of surplus revenues to be collected for the biennium of more than 78 million, and from cuts in the budget from areas other than education and vital services. Such cuts can be done in capital construction (the construction of new state office buildings, construction of storage facilities, branch government offices on a regional basis, and extensive remodeling of state leased properties); the buying, maintaining and using of state vehicles, including airplanes; for other than official state business; personal service contracts other than those for education and vital services; and elimination of projects undertaken presently by the state which do not have a high priority or real need in meeting present or future vital services to the taxpayers, such as elimination of state government offices outside the state and in foreign countries, and all regional offices which do not provide vital services to the people of the Commonwealth of Kentucky."

He added that with a $7.5 billion budget for the present biennium, there was "plenty room for cuts that would not affect education and vital services and which would more than offset the proposed tax cuts and which would not contribute to the double digit inflation from which we are now suffering."

Missions Constituted As Baptist Churches

Two missions of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church have within as many weeks been constituted as churches.

The first was Benedict Baptist Chapel, which became Benedict Baptist Church at services held Sunday, Nov. 26. Houston Lanier, director of Mountain Missions for the Kentucky Baptist Convention was the speaker. The Rev. Lee Caudill is pastor there.

Last Sunday afternoon Fitzpartick Baptist Church was constituted after having been a mission about 10 years. The Rev. John H. Woods is pastor of the 110-member church. The Rev. John Sammons, of Paintsville, was the principal speaker at Sunday's program, which was attended by a number of pastors of the area.

The first mission of the church here to become an independent church was the Lancer mission.

Blue-Gray Affair Scheduled Dec. 8-10

Nicky Hughes and Mike Housh, curators of the Military History Museum in Frankfort, will present a special Civil War exhibit at the Blue-Gray Affair to be held Dec. 8-10 at Lake Barkley State Park. Held every two years, the event is sponsored by the Kentucky Historical Society, state Department of Parks and the TVA. The seminar on Civil War history will be open to interested adults and children.

Hughes's exhibit will feature the Triplett and Scott rifle invented by two Kentuckians for use during the Civil War. Because of various delays, the rifles weren't made until the war was over and the federal government refused to pay for them. When the state finally recovered the money from the sale of the guns in the late 1800s, the money was used to help build the state Capitol building.

Other speakers at the Blue-Gray Affair include Dr. Holman Hamilton, one of the state's outstanding historians and authors from the University of Kentucky. Dr. Hamilton will discuss "Civil War Leadership at the Highest Levels" at 8 p.m., Dec. 8.

Dr. John David Smith, from the Lewis A. Warren Lincoln Library and Museum, Ft. Wayne, Indiana will open the Saturday session at 9 a.m. Smith will discuss "Kentucky Civil War Recruits: A Medical Profile." Following Smith's presentation, Dr. Hunter Hancock from Murray State University, will talk about Ft. Hindman in Calloway county. A field trip to the fort is scheduled for the afternoon.

Dr. H. Edward Richardson from the University of Louisville will talk about Cassius Clay, Kentucky's famous abolitionist at 8 p.m. The concluding session Sunday, Dec. 10, will feature Dr. James Ramage from Northern Kentucky University who will talk about Confederate Gen. John Hunt Morgan's Indiana-Ohio raid.

Registration for the seminar costs adults $2 and children $1. The field trip costs an additional $2.

More Problems

By WILMAY

Decades past a true-life novel, PAPA WAS A PREACHER, written by the daughter of a Methodist minister, entertained and opened the eyes of readers. It was serious and hilarious, calling to mind a story Mrs. A. B. Brook, then of Garrett, told in the 1930's. The daughter of a "parson" herself, she said once a small boy brought her mother a large bundle. "Mom sent you this ham," the child explained. "She said you folks would be glad to get it, but it's too salty for us." In her inimitable way Mrs. Brook said they were glad, and her mother remembered the excess salt.

On file here is an ancient account of a pastor and wife who had it so rough in one locale that rather than complain, he requested a move, only to learn that his church had "beaten him to the draw." They packed many items prior to conference, left their young daughter with the little boy. On the afternoon the couple was due home several members dropped by to offer help in packing; whereupon, the youthful lass delivered a brimstone sermon on their sins and mistreatment of her parents, quoting Mom and Dad freely! Midway of her "blast" her parents returned, to announce that a last-minute switch compelled them to remain there. The brokenhearted child wept. One man apologized to her father. Another told him her sermon was worth ten of his. Things improved greatly for both sides. Lack of communication causes many difficulties.

Years ago, one conference was so swamped with critiques against its pulpites that it ruled future ones must be in writing and signed by all accusers. The number of criticisms decreased sharply.

In WESTERN RECORDER (11-16-74) Editor C. R. Daley wrote: "Next to believing in God's will, nothing is so precious to a pastor or staff member as knowing somebody loves and cares for him and appreciates his services. Even when we deny we want it, we are often only hiding our deep desire to be complimented and appreciated. The need for affirmation is strong in all of us and especially for religious workers...Generally, to be appreciated one must be appreciative of others. This goes for ministers who sometimes leave the impression their one calling is to roast church members every Sunday. In turn this kind of preacher is often roasted around the Sunday dinner table by many of his members."

Having served the pastorate long years, Dr. Daley should know. Certainly, appreciation does begin in the pulpit and come down the line. It is unfortunate that some clerics and their families express little or no gratitude to members collectively or individually; however, a vast majority do.

While many pastors complain today, others commend worthy members for faithfulness, promptness, love, consecrated service, visiting, witnessing, soul winning, friendship and friendliness, hospitality, cooperation, loyalty, sincerity, consistency, dependability, encouragement, appreciation, understanding, kindness, thoughtfulness, candor, truthfulness; for carrying their share of the church load, always seeing both sides of a question, for greeting fellow members warmly, for tithing, welcoming strangers, upholding truth, for not "latting" (some call it), for willingness to do the little jobs, for growing in knowledge, grace and love of Christ by study and prayer,—multiple traits, some of which are found in each member—all of them in none—for, like the shepherds, we sheep are so human!

In the W. R., G. A. West, Jr. offered suggestions for helping pastors: "Have Pastor Appreciation Week, urge him to take a day off weekly, provide time for special study, give him a book shower, above all assure him of prayerful and loving concern." In W. R. (2-16-74), Albert McClellan outlined 10 ways to ease lay-pastor tensions: "Create among ministers a greater trust of each other, provide more adequate criteria for judging success of the ministry, make available skillful and confidential counseling for ministers," among others. In W. R., Bob Hastings said, "It's unfair to judge your pastor by nickels and noses. Quantity isn't everything. Yet it's possible for a pastor or other leader to use this as a copout for laziness. defending his laziness with the excuse, 'I believe in quality, not quantity...Each of us must keep serving even if unappreciated, unsung, unapplauded; in short we need faith to face failure.' We lay people need it, too.

He could have added that failure is often good for us. We learn far more from the valleys of life than from its mountain tops.

Wheelwright, 5-0, Wins Pre-Season And Looks to Improve Further

By KENNY RICE
Wheelwright used their ace in the hole Saturday night in beating Betsy Layne 70-68 for the championship of the boys Pre-season Tournament, as second year coach Kenny Newman sent in reserve after reserve without any change in the flow of action on the part of the undefeated Trojans.

Entering last night's game against Sheldon Clark in the East Kentucky Mountain Classic, the Trojans sported one of the best records (5-0) in the area. Newman, an advocate of team play, credits team unity for the hot start. "After the first three games of the season, four players were averaging in double figures and two others were averaging nine points a game. Those two, Lanny Paul (Hall) and Tony (Hall) had good tournament games and so I would say they are close to averaging in double figures. I am pleased with our depth and balance. At the first of the season I felt we had ten or eleven players who would see a lot of action. They have and when one comes in they play as well as the starters."

Balance and depth have made it possible for Newman to start five different combinations through the Trojans' first five games. The rotating fives have come about because of illnesses and injuries to various members of the squad. Wheelwright is still not one hundred percent in shape and three of the top players on the squad are battling the flu. But reserve strength has more than compensated for loss of one of the top, if there is such a thing on this team, players.

"Right now we are not physically in shape. There are three or four boys who can go four hard quarters, but again the depth has carried us in the early going," Newman commented.

In defeating one of the favorites for the 15th Regional title, the Wheelwright team members established themselves as strong regional contenders. The win over Betsy Layne in the pre-season finals also added fuel to the fire hot Trojans as Newman explained, "Having the type of ball club that we have at Wheelwright this season, I felt it was important to have a successful early start. This helps build confidence in the team, the fans and the student body."

Wheelwright has been together as a team for just over a month. Basketball practice did not begin until November 1 because eight of the twelve players on the varsity played football this year. Newman did not know how the late start of practice would affect his team against a schedule of schools in the early going that did not participate in varsity football.

"I am very pleased with the early showing especially when you look at the schedule and see there are no slouches on the schedule. We beat Magoffin County and they won the Jenny Wiley Tournament. We beat Knott County Central. We won at Dorton and it is very difficult to win there. The two tournament games were tough. Anytime Wheelwright and McDowell square off (in the first round of the pre-season) you never know what to expect except a hard-fought game. And then Betsy Layne is a highly-regarded team, so I am happy with the tournament win and the season so far," Newman said proudly.

Confidence and pride and team play have made Wheelwright a team with early success and Newman does not see his team reaching their zenith before the first of the year.

"With the late start in practice and with some of the early injuries and sickness, we have not been able to work on the finer points of the game. We had to start with the basics of offense and defense and setting up plays," he continued. "We were not able to work on the stall game and free throws and refine some of the basics. Improvement in the refined areas has concerned me and we are working on them. We have had a team effort and with a continued team effort we will continue to improve. I don't think we will peak by Christmas."

And that is what concerns many teams on the Wheelwright schedule.

Young Deer, Familiar Sight Along Parkway, Felled Sunday By Gunshots

The young deer who thought he was a Hereford, grazing by the Mountain Parkway along with a herd of cattle and charming passers-by with his beauty and almost tame manner, is dead, victim of gunshots fired by one who felled his prey and left him to die.

It was last spring when the young buck, his antlers still in "velvet," came out of the hill and joined the cattle on the farm of H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., and as the months passed he became more like his bovine friends as the herd grazed in the long, protected hollow which makes up a part of the farm. By the time the cattle were moved to low-lying pasture on the opposite side of the highway, the deer had become tame enough to follow.

It was then that motorists who passed near the intersection of the Mountain Parkway and KY 404 soon noticed the unusual "cow" and the animal, by then a four-point buck, became familiar to many area residents who often brought their children to watch as the handsome deer grazed with the rest of the herd.

At least one who saw him, however, regarded the animal not as an unusual and pretty sight, but as a trophy to be claimed when the occasion arose.

The deer was apparently shot about noon, Sunday, and Frank Fitzpatrick, who, with his wife, Kathy, reside on the farm, was informed of the animal's injury by a local youth who saw the deer and told them he "seemed like he was hurt."

Mr. Fitzpatrick immediately went to the wounded animal who lay in a pouring rain, loaded it into a pickup, and took it home where it died about two hours later.

Word of the incident soon spread and many local residents greeted the news with disbelief and anger, and although conservation officers, who routinely came by to check in on the deer, were investigating the shooting, no arrests had been made as of Tuesday evening.

"Everybody's sure going to miss him," Mrs. Fitzpatrick said. "He'd even gotten to where he would rub noses with the cattle."

(Although deer season was officially open in many sections of the state, Floyd county, with a relatively low deer population, was closed to all deer hunting by state law.)

More than 100 nations are observing 1979 as The International Year of the Child, according to The National Foundation-March of Dimes. The voluntary health organization joins 200 other American groups in saluting this tribute to every child's rights.

Hornets Sting, But Lady Trojans Win

Lady Trojans' Janet Little (No. 40) shoots over Magoffin county Hornets for two points.

If there is any truth to songs, the lyrics of "that ain't no way to treat a lady" should have been especially meaningful to the Wheelwright Lady Trojans as they battled their way to a rocky 62-58 win over the Magoffin County Hornets on Monday, November 27, at the community center in Salyersville. The Lady Trojans led the Hornets by 12 points at one phase of the game but the Hornets, a rough and aggressive team, managed to reduce that lead by the 3rd quarter of the game and place the Trojans in game trouble.

The Lady Trojans were in serious foul trouble by the end of the game as four of the starting Trojan Varsity players fouled out of the game and had to watch from the bench as their team mates continued the battle with the Hornets. Starting players Amber Moscrip, Leslie Grigsby, Nunnie Reed, and Kim "Burr" Bailey of the Trojan team were out of the game after connecting four fouls. Wheelwright had a total of 34 fouls called on them by the end of the game and the Hornets went to the line for 42 foul shots.

"The Hornets played an extremely aggressive game. Their potential is good. I just wish that they had used more of their skills and had been less physical in their playing," said Trojan Coach Teresa Brody.

The Lady Trojans should have found their second consecutive victory pleasing but most of the team was dissatisfied with their performance.

"This was the worse game of our season", said center Kim Curry after the game. "We didn't play team ball in the first half of the game. The Hornets did." Coach Brody added, "We just couldn't seem to get our act together at the beginning of the ballgame. Then we ran into foul trouble with 4 of our starters fouling out."

Kim Curry powered in 20 of the points earned by the Trojans and also grabbed 23 rebounds for the Lady Trojans. Janet Little earned 10 points, Amber Moscrip contributed 8, Sabrina Couch 6; Nunnie Reed and Leslie Grigsby both earned six points for the Trojans. ## Wayland Girls Down Eagles, 37-24

By CHARLENE JOHNSON
W.H.S. Jour. Class

The game between Wayland Wasp girls and Osborne Eagles girls November 22, at Wayland was a rough one with fouls occurring for both teams and the game ended with a final score of Osborne Eagles, 24 and Wayland Wasps, 37.

Center Mia Jones was high scorer for the Eagles with 19 points. Jones secured her shots to help the Eagles and at the end of the first quarter the score was 7-8, in favor of the Eagles.

Forward Shawn Curry broke the tie of 10-10 with 21 seconds left in second quarter. Seven seconds later another tie appeared. This time forward Pam Martin broke the tie of 14-14 leaving the half-time score 14-15.

During the third quarter the Osborne Eagles started having a few difficulties in offensive play but Jones hit for three points to help pace the Eagles. But, unfortunately at the end of the third quarter, the Wasps pulled away to a score of 24-18.

Suddenly during the fourth quarter, the Osborne Eagles went cold, scoring only 6 points. The Wayland girls kept up their scoring pace to defeat Osborne.

Girls Pre-Season Final

P'burg Rallies To Down Central

PHS LADYCATS display their winner's trophy after downing a tough Allen Central team in the finals of the Pre-Season tourney, last Saturday.

By KENNY RICE
Prestonsburg rallied to overcome a 32-25 halftime deficit Saturday night in the championship game of the Floyd County Pre-season Tournament in defeating Allen Central, 56-53.

Central's Rebelettes were in command early in the contest after starting fast and leading 15-8 at the end of the first quarter. The second half was a reversal of the opening sixteen minutes. Prestonsburg's Lady Cats outscored Allen Central, 17-8 in the third quarter and held of a late surge by the Rebelettes to preserve the victory and win their second tournament of the season (Prestonsburg won the Betsy Layne Invitational in November).

Even with the win over one of the better clubs in the 15th Region, Prestonsburg Coach Charlie Collins said, "I wasn't completely satisfied with our effort. The offense didn't stay in their patterns. Allen Central did a good defensive job on Dee Dee. (Music) and when our girls couldn't get the ball to her they sometimes got impatient and hurried some shots."

Collins also praised the opposition, "Allen Central played a real good game. They surprised me with their fine overall play. Their bench did a good job. I think they had two girls off the bench combining for about twelve or fourteen points. They are a good team and as I've said all along, I think it is important for us to play the good teams to prepare for the tournaments in March."

Music's 22 points led all scorers, but it was still below her thirty points plus scoring average. Prestonsburg's backcourt of Sherry Allen and Brenda Wright supplied scoring punch in key situations during the Cats' second half comeback. Allen finished with 21 points and Wright was the third Prestonsburg girl in double figures with 10 points. That trio made the all tourney team along with Cindy Wells who scored three against Central.

"Sherry Allen and Brenda Wright hit some key shots for Prestonsburg as they gained the lead," said Central Coach Judy Eversole. "I thought Tammy Martin did a good defensive job on Dee Dee, even though she scored twenty-two points."

Central's second half lapse was disappointing to Eversole as she felt, "We built a seven-point lead at halftime and the girls might have been overconfident entering the second half. The team played well in spots, but they got caught standing."

Both coaches agreed Prestonsburg's strong third quarter helped rejuvenate Prestonsburg and dishearten Allen Central.

Central's Martin and Carol Shepherd led the Rebelette scoring with 18 and 10 points apiece. Toby Spradlin, Becky Collins and Kristi Frye scored 6 each and Tammy Francis tossed in 5 with Trena Hensley adding 2, Martin, Shepherd and Spradlin were selected to the all tourney team.

Collins was happy with the second tournament championship in as many tournament appearances this year, "Playing in tournaments is the best thing for the girls. They get use to pressure by getting to play in front of big crowds. There are more people at a combined tournament, with boys and girls playing. This tournament and conference games (where the boys and girls also play on the same night) give the girls a chance to get use to a lot of people watching," he added "At regular season games, there aren't that many people out to watch the girls."

Prestonsburg and Central could meet again this week if both teams win their first round games in the Prestonsburg Invitational Tournament (formerly known as the Tom Wiley). Central plays Sheldon Clark at 7 p.m. Friday and Prestonsburg plays McDowell in the second game. The Saturday night consolation game begins at 6:30 and the championship game follows at approximately 8:15.

Plymouth Rock wasn't always as solid as it looked.

When the pilgrims first landed here from jolly old England, things weren't so jolly. There was sickness and disease. Starvation. And rough winters to fight.

But it was worth it because those early Americans were planting the seeds of freedom in this new land.

Today you can help those seeds continue to grow by buying United States Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

All you do is arrange to have a little set aside from each paycheck to buy Bonds. It's safe, automatic, and no struggle at all.

Buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's one investment that really is as solid as a rock.

14K GOLD HOOKERS WITH CHARMS

With its brilliant red topknot flashing like the pennant of a bullfighter, and with nimble, witty ways, the great pileated woodpecker ably qualifies as a harlequin of the woods.

About the size of a crow and twice as interesting, this wonderful bird is a self-appointed guardian of the woods and an accomplice of conservation officers. It is thoroughly hated by most poachers who swear that as soon as they enter the woods, especially out of game season or without a hunting license, one of these big birds will spot them and follow them about the woods uttering loud cries of alarm. Aware of this peculiar habit of the birds, some game wardens say they always investigate their cries and by doing so have apprehended illegal hunters.

The pileated woodpecker has several names. In some places it is known as the "wood hen." In other localities it is called the log cock. Sometimes it is called the "Good God" bird. This last appellation stems from its staccato warning cry which, by exercising the imagination a bit, does sound like "Good God! Good God!" repeated over and over again. Still another name is the "12-stroke woodpecker." This comes from its habit of landing on the side of a dead tree and whamming the wood exactly a dozen times, no more and no less. The name, "pileated," comes from the Latin, pileus, which means crest.

But by whatever name it is called, this great black, white, and red-feathered bird is a valuable creature to have around. It not only protects squirrels and other small game animals of the woods from illegal hunters, but it is also a protector of the trees. Each year it consumes hosts of beetles and carpenter ants that would otherwise do great damage to valuable timber. With a strong, heavy bill shaped at the end like an old-fashioned screwdriver, it bores deep into the trunks and limbs to snare and withdraw insects chewing on the wood.

The big woodpecker's excavations also serve as homes and nesting sites for countless downy woodpeckers, bluebirds, nuthatches, chickadees and screech owls. Flying squirrels and gray squirrels likewise use the holes as dens and places of refuge when danger threatens.

The woodpecker's ringing call is untamably wild and is described as "closely akin to human laughter as any other sound in the forest."

A naturalist "trespassing" the bird's abode and hearing the untamed laughter, has only to remain still and in a moment the big bird will "show," speeding in for a much closer look at the intruder.

Martin Men Named In Stabbing Case

Four Martin men were named Tuesday in warrants charging them with first degree assault in the stabbing of a Williamson man Sunday night at a Turkey Creek home, near Langley.

Constable Bob Hackworth, who said he was called to the home, listed the defendants as Johnny Peters and Tom Bartram, both in their early 20's, Randy Stumbo and Bob Bailey. The wounded man is David McCullum, 20, of Williamson, who, according to the officer, was cut nine times. McCullum's condition was described Monday at a Williamson hospital as "fair." Hackworth said Anna Mae Branham, at whose home the incident occurred, told him that McCullum was cut as he and another Williamson man, Gary Perdue, were being introduced to four young men from Martin. He also quoted Miss Branham as saying that Perdue was thrown through a window of the home, suffering cuts.

Others booked at the county jail over the past week, charges against each, and arresting officers follow:

Randell J. Burke, forged insurance and hit and run, by State Police Detective DeBord; Wayne Martin, drunk driving, by State Trooper Hall; Dennie Hall, theft by unlawful taking, by State Trooper Castle; William Collins, resisting arrest, by State Trooper Stephens; Irene Johnson, drunk driving, by State Trooper Bevins; Larry Slone, wanton endangerment in second degree, by Wayland Policeman Norm Thornsberry and State Trooper Williams; Randell J. Burke, theft by deception, by Jailer; Jimmie Fairchild, drunk driving, by State Trooper Bevins; William Blackburn, attempt to elude, by Deputy Sheriff Chuck B. Akers, Larry Goble and Dennis Crisp; Rick Stevens, theft by unlawful taking, by Prestonsburg Policeman Darrell Conley; Charles Lemaster, Jr., drunk driving, by Sheriff Doug Lewis; Gary R. Ferguson, drunk driving, by Deputy Sheriff Chuck Akers; Arnold Dickerson, drunk driving, by Prestonsburg Policeman J. Wright and Craig E. Kilgore; John H. Hunt, drunk driving, by State Trooper Sizemore; Lee Cannon, drunk driving, by State Trooper Shelton; William B. Clarkston, drunk driving, by State Trooper Hall.

Guard To Pay New Enlistees

Adjutant General Billy G. Wellman has announced that Det 1, Company B, 1-149th Infantry (Mech) located here has been selected as one of 40 units in the Kentucky Army National Guard to begin paying cash payments for enlisting or re-enlisting persons in the Guard.

The program which can pay a new enlistee $1500, or up to $1800 for a re-enlistee, became effective December 1. Also, a new enlistee may elect to accept an educational bonus of $2,000.00 in lieu of the $1,500 cash bonus.

In making the announcement, Wellman explained the funds are entirely federal monies and the Guard units were selected on the basis of mobilization priorities.

For several years, Kentucky, along with most other states, has had a problem recruiting for many reasons.

When appointed adjutant general a year ago, Wellman made his top goal to bring Kentucky from 79 percent to full strength. By using new recruiting techniques, making the public aware of the strength problem and beginning a reorganization of Kentucky's Army Guard, that strength has been raised to 86 percent. In fact, Kentucky has made recruiting gains for each of the past nine months.

In announcing the new program, Wellman said, "The cash bonus coupled with state benefits granted by the legislature should help bring our strength picture closer to the 100 percent mark." State benefits for guardsmen include 50 percent tuition for college or vocational schools, reduced license plate fees, and a state tax credit.

(For more information interested persons should contact their National Guard Armory.)

UNIMPORTANT DATE

LONDON—July 4, 1776, is a day all Americans remember, but in his diary on that day King George III of England wrote, "Nothing of importance happened today."

Are we approaching a traffic jam in outer space? According to a report in the December Reader's Digest there are approximately 4500 pieces of human engineering sailing around up there—900 of them satellites, the rest spatial debris.

School Vandalism Cost $1.4 Million Last Year

Gov. Julian Carroll has proclaimed last week School Crime Prevention Week, and Justice Secretary John L. Smith said he hopes "the effect will be to help end the 'crime in the schools' problem before it gets out of hand."

Smith cited the $1.4 million it cost Kentuckians last year to pay for damage done to schools by vandals and the estimated $176,000 in stolen items as a major thought behind School Crime Prevention Week.

He said, "A recent report released by HEW (the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare) said it's costing U.S. schools approximately $200 million a year. We need to stop these expenditures and put the money in areas of public education that are crying—things like teachers' salaries and the education basics."

That same HEW study also reported that 94 percent of all crimes in the schools are committed by the students at that school. Smith said that, together with Kentucky Department of Education figures, prompted him and Lt. Norman Bryant, director of the Office of Crime Prevention, to request that the governor make the proclamation.

"The Office of Crime Prevention has materials in schools already," according to Smith. "By setting aside a special week, we hope to make an all-out effort to inform students and parents about what problems school vandalism and theft really are and how we can fight them," he added.

School Crime Prevention Week began Monday and will run through Friday, Dec. 1.

Only East Kentucky Had October Drop In Unemployment

Eastern Kentucky was the only area in the state where unemployment decreased in October.

The unemployment rate in this area dropped from 7.1 percent in September to 5.9 percent in October. The number of unemployed persons fell from 21,647 to 17,662 in the same period.

"The decrease in unemployment in the area was caused by people being called back to jobs from layoffs caused by the railway strike during the summer," said Robert MacDonald, chief labor market analyst for the Department for Human Resources.

Lee county had the highest rate in the area for October at 9.6 percent while Greenup county was lowest with 2.9 percent. Floyd county's was at 5.7 percent, 1 per cent above the state average.

Kentucky's overall unemployment rate for October was 4.7 percent and the national rate was 5.4 percent.

A thick wad of plastic credit cards carried in the hip pocket has given rise to a new medical malady called "wallet sciatica," the December Reader's Digest reveals. The wallet puts extreme pressure on the sciatic nerve, causing thigh and lower back pains. The cure? A walletectomy—removing the offending bundle from the sensitive spot.

Rate Correction By PSC Upheld

The Court of Appeals last Friday upheld a Franklin circuit court ruling that allowed the state Public Service Commission to amend a rate adjustment order after discovering a clerical error.

The Mike Little Gas Co., Inc., of Melvin, contended that the PSC's modification was a retroactive order affecting utility rates without notice or hearing.

But the appellate court said it is "well settled that administrative agencies, as well as courts, have sufficient authority to correct obvious clerical errors in their orders."

The court said that, if the error had been allowed to stand, it would have meant a windfall profit for the gas company at the expense of customers.

By LARRY BURKE

In a remote section of Italy there was a small village that was known for its prized possession an active and elegant aqueduct which wound its way down the mountainside. For centuries it had stood and served... carrying water from the pure mountain pools to the little village below.

Modernization came to the village... a modern water system was installed, and the old aqueduct was no longer needed to bring in the precious mountain water.

The townspeople decided to keep their much-loved aqueduct as a memorial... and to preserve it as a famous landmark.

"It has served long... let's cut off its supply of water, so we may keep it forever," they said.

The water was diverted from its source... and the aqueduct was given, what they thought to be, a long-needed rest. In a few days the sides began to split... and as the moss and the ancient stones dried in the sun... the wonderful old aqueduct began to fall apart. In a very short time it was almost completely destroyed. What centuries of service had failed to do... idleness had accomplished in a few short weeks.

The Economy and You

(Dollar Snaps Back)

The U.S. dollar, an internationally accepted currency, has suffered greatly in the past year on foreign exchange markets. Simply stated, the dollar has lost value when compared to other world currencies, such as the Japanese yen and the German Deutschemark. This decline in the value of the dollar has come about because of foreign countries' confidence in the United States ability to cope with its inflation problem. When this confidence is shaken, exchange markets in Europe and Asia see a movement of heavy seller or exchanging dollars for other foreign currencies. Since values of currencies are based on the supply and demand of each currency, a heavy selling or exchanging of dollars means other currencies are in demand. When the demand for other currencies increase, the price of that currency also increases; likewise, when the demand for holding U.S. dollars decreases, so does its price or value.

When President Carter recently announced his policies on controlling inflation, some confidence in the dollar was established in the eyes of foreign money markets. The value of the dollar has begun to increase when compared to other foreign currencies. An example of this can be seen when on November 16th, the dollar reached its highest value in three months against the Japanese Yen. If the U.S. can continue to control or moderate domestic inflation, the dollar should continue to rise in value against foreign currencies and confidence in U.S. economy and the dollar will become greater.

Prepare, Serve Holiday Foods Safely

By FRANCES H. PITTS
County Extension Agent

If you complain of "virus" or "flu" symptoms during the holiday season, you may be suffering from old-fashioned food poisoning.

Party foods and holiday meal leftovers cause almost as many cases of food poisoning as summer picnics. Common symptoms of foodborne illness include stomach cramps, diarrhea, nausea and vomiting. Headache and fever accompany some infections.

The term food poisoning is used loosely to indicate any illness or disease caused by eating food contaminated with bacteria. In some cases, the bacteria grow and produce a toxin in the food before it is eaten.

Food poisoning is more likely during the holidays for several reasons. To serve large crowds you'll probably be handling larger amounts of food and crowding the refrigerator. If you prepare food early store it properly.

Don't keep party foods on the table for hours. Bacteria grow best at room or warm temperatures.

Be especially careful with highly perishable foods; they are more likely to become contaminated. Meat, poultry, dressing, gravy, seafood, turkey and chicken salads, deviled eggs, cream pies, pudding, and dishes made with eggs need special care. Care, cleanliness and refrigeration immediately after cooking prevent bacterial growth.

To keep foods safe, follow these rules:

- Keep hands and work areas clean.
- Scrub and sanitize cutting boards and knives before using them to cut or chop foods. The boards and knives may harbor Salmonella bacteria from raw poultry and red meat.

- Do not leave turkey or chicken, dressing or gravy in the oven after a meal to keep warm. Eat or refrigerate them promptly because the warm temperature of the oven favors bacterial growth. Reheat thoroughly before using again.

- Refrigerate pies and puddings made with eggs, cream or cream fillings.

Putting hot foods in the refrigerator will not cause spoilage unless the refrigerator is overloaded with such a large quantity of hot foods that it gets warm.

—Pour liquid hot foods into shallow containers to allow quick chilling. These include soup, stew and spaghetti sauce.

Remember: Food does not have to look, smell or taste bad to be contaminated with food poisoning bacteria.

The gift of sight is our most precious possession, but glaucoma can steal it away slowly and painlessly until blindness results. For every month a glaucoma victim postpones treatment, he may lose a small but priceless percentage of his sight—a gift he may never reclaim. Yet a simple, painless test can detect glaucoma and early treatment can control it. There will be a glaucoma clinic held at the Floyd County Health Department Monday, December 11, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The community health nurses urge all persons over 35 to take a few minutes from their busy schedule to be screened, free of charge, for glaucoma. For more information about glaucoma, contact your eye physician or the health department.

On Monday, December 11, the regularly scheduled Wayland outpost clinic will be conducted in the basement of the Wayland Methodist Church from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Services at this free clinic will include immunizations, TB skin tests, diabetes screening and blood pressures.

Road Equipment Doubled In This Area, Weinberg Says

State Rep. Bill Weinberg, D-Hindman, said Thursday the state Department of Transportation has more than doubled its equipment in District 12 of Eastern of Kentucky.

Weinberg said, "It is gratifying to me to see the department respond in a positive manner to the constructive criticism which I and others have been providing."

Earlier this year, Weinberg successfully pushed for a legislative investigation of DOT's maintenance operations.

Stuart Victor, executive assistant to DOT Secretary Calvin Grayson, confirmed that the amount of equipment for District 12 was more than doubled this fiscal year.

Victor said $5.6 million has been allocated to the equipment budget to purchase additional equipment throughout the state before winter. He said the new equipment will improve snow removal and other winter maintenance work. A list of equipment for the Pikeville-based District 12 which Weinberg released shows the district will have six snow plows and one "V" plow this fiscal year. It has none the previous year.

Victor could not immediately confirm all the new equipment listed by Weinberg but said a spot check showed that the list of winter equipment was essentially correct.

Weinberg has previously sharply criticized DOT for not providing local maintenance garages with enough equipment.

Thursday he praised the department for increasing its equipment in Eastern Kentucky.

"It is apparent to me by their action," Weinberg said, "that they agree with my oft-stated contention that the equipment which has been provided to Eastern Kentucky maintenance garages has been inadequate and needs to be beefed up."

"This action by the department is a necessary first step. I hope it will be followed by salary increases for maintenance garage personnel, a more efficient system for setting priorities in determining which road work is to be done and a better organization management of scarce resources by district offices and by Frankfurt."

Last August the Legislative Research Commission assigned the investigation of DOT's road maintenance operations to the Interim Committee on Highways and Traffic Safety. Weinberg said at the time the investigation should include an examination of the methods used in allocating equipment to the districts, the reasons for a decrease in the cleaning of ditch lines, the procedures for hiring and firing maintenance personnel, the system's relationship to contractors and suppliers and the financial needs of the maintenance program.

1977 Law To Make Food Stamps Free To Low-Income Families Qualifying

Effective Jan. 1, Kentuckians using food stamps no longer will be required to buy the coupons each month. Peter Conn, secretary of the Department for Human Resources which administers the Food Stamp program, says a 1977 federal law will make food stamps free to low-income families who qualify.

Up to now, food stamp recipients were required to buy a certain amount of food stamps to qualify for "bonus" stamps at no cost. It is the bonus stamps that provide extra purchasing power for those on food stamps, Conn explained.

As of Jan. 1, food stamp recipients will be issued only bonus stamps each month, without charge.

"The impact of this change of food stamp recipients will vary according to the family situation," Conn said. "Eliminating the purchase requirement will mean that more people with very low incomes may apply for food stamp coupons. But the stricter income limit may reduce benefits for some recipients with higher incomes, and disqualify other higher income families from receiving food stamps at all."

The new method is one of several significant revisions in the federal food stamp program resulting from the Food Stamp Act of 1977. Other changes will go into effect early next year, Conn said.

"Elimination of the purchase requirement should make food stamps more readily available to Kentuckians on fixed incomes, such as elderly and disabled citizens," said Gail Huecker, commissioner of the department's Bureau for Social Insurance.

She added that the revision should help eliminate fraud in the food stamp program, such as illegal resale of coupons.

In changes to be implemented next year, certification of food stamp applicants will be simplified, a lower income limit will be used to determine eligibility, and ceilings on household assets will be increased.

Huecker said the bureau now is striving to implement new regulations stemming from the legislation. She said the regulations were developed only within the past few months.

Huecker said an information campaign has been undertaken to explain the change. The publicity effort includes brochures, posters and radio and television public service announcements.

Gardening Tips from Extension Specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Symbolic of autumn and furnishing a pie ingredient older than American history, Pepo, the common field pumpkin, takes its name from the Greek word "Pepo" which means "cooked in the sun." It is a plant supposedly to be of the gourd family and according to specialists in the field of agriculture, now naturalized and cultivated in almost, if not all the civilized countries of the world. The pumpkin vine often grows to great length (up to 20 feet or more) and oftentimes produces fruits weighing up to 100 pounds.

The flesh of the pumpkin has long been considered good and nourishing food for both man and livestock. Its seed, however, has been an important part of folk medicine for centuries past. Formerly the seed of the pumpkin was used in compounding remedies for expelling tapeworms and effectively treating urinary disorders. Recently, however, medical researchers have isolated a plant hormone in pumpkin seed said to be of considerable value in the treatment of prostate gland difficulties. This hormone affects human hormone production in part by substitution, in part by proliferation, but in making the research the researchers came to the conclusion that pumpkin seed were more effective as a preventive than as a cure. They came to this conclusion after studying people that ate large quantities of pumpkin seed such as those living in the Balkans and Eastern Europe. Among these habitual pumpkin seed eaters there were practically no incidence of prostate gland problems.

And something else about these pumpkin seed eaters: There was evidence sufficient to cause the belief that eating pumpkin seed slowed down the advance of old age. With this in mind it is no wonder that it says in Genesis 47:19, "... and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate."

Pumpkin seed have been mentioned by many medical sources as being an inexhaustible source of vigor. They have, according to some physicians, scientifically determined effects on the human metabolism and diuresis and are of secondary importance on the regenerative processes of the body.

An analysis of pumpkin seed turns up no miracle ingredient. Along with an abundance of B vitamins and small amounts of calcium and Vitamin A, the seed are about 30 per cent protein and 40 per cent fat.

Pumpkin seed are also extremely high in phosphorus, but unfortunately no one as yet knows exactly which or how many of the ingredients listed are responsible for the beneficial results ingesting them has on the health.

So much for the significance of the humble field pumpkin and its seed.

As a harbinger of frost, the katydid enjoys quite a reputation. As the old folk tale goes, six weeks after it first starts fiddlin', a killing frost will sear the land.

The fact that this rarely happens, especially here in Kentucky, makes little difference. Hundreds of naive citizens still put stock in the katydid forecast anyway.

The katydid connection with frost is well known, but a piece of information that isn't so widespread is another folk tale to the effect that by lurks and you can almost be assured of having fresh fish for the skillet.

This is a fact pretty well known, especially by live bait fishermen, but as indicated before, a third distinction (that of a winter prophet) is not so common. So whether you are inclined to put any stock in it or not, here's what the old folk tale holds:

During the last days of October, go into the woods, catch as many katydids as you can find, put them in a minnow bucket, then find a quiet spot and sit down and observe their color.

Some of these katydids will be bright green, some brown, and some of a purplish tinge. If the majority of the insects are bright green, the winter will be open and mild with petunias blooming outside at Christmas. On the other hand if the greater number are brown, the winter will be average with no extremes of snow or cold.

But if more katydids are of a purplish cast, look out. A real swinger of a winter with winds sharp enough to shave whizzer briars off a worn out hillside and cold so intense as to cause maple trees in the woods to crack and pop like firecrackers.

Now don't blame us if this folk tale proves invalid or valid as the case may be. We are only passing along for reader edification what was told by a 96-year-old rustic weather sage of much distinction.

examining the color of one of these creatures, the extent of cold and the length of the impending winter can be foretold. We always thought this to be the forte of the woolly bear, but now it seems the same applies to the katydid.

The katydid most people know is a green, hump-backed grasshopper with a built-in fiddle. Outside of its strident nocturnal music, it was formerly supposed to have only one other distinction. In the fall of the year it makes the finest black bass bait that ever was. Drop a hook baited with a green katydid in a leaf-flecked autumn pool where a bass

Perkins Says Entire Area Housing Needs Must Be Considered

In a statement before the Eastern Kentucky Task Group on Housing in Lexington, Congressman Carl D. Perkins urged that the critical housing needs in all of Eastern Kentucky not be ignored. Congressman Perkins emphasized that it would be a mistake to focus on only one portion of Eastern Kentucky.

"Despite the prosperity engendered by recent growth in coal production, there are many low-income households," Perkins said. "Even for those families receiving average incomes, little affordable and decent housing is available."

"Last winter I conducted housing meetings for local officials and other interested people at Morehead, Jenny Wiley State Park, Hazard and Pikeville. This year Congress appropriated an additional $1.3 billion for housing in 1979, and Carl Perkins will do everything humanly possible to insure that the Seventh Congressional District receives its fair share. By and large, the housing will be constructed under the Section 8 program."

NOTICE

Legal Notice to families who lived in public housing projects operated by the Housing Authority of Martin, Ky. or lived in public housing projects in any other city between March 16, 1971 - September 26, 1975.

If you rented a house or apartment from the Martin Housing Authority or any other Public Housing Agency (PHA) during the period between March 16, 1971, and September 26, 1975, you may be eligible to file a claim for a refund of part of your rent during that period if:

1. The wife or husband of the head of the household was present and dependent upon the head of the household for support and/or;

2. A dependent member of your family household was employed.

If you believe your family falls within one of the categories described above, you may wish to continue reading this Notice in order to determine how and under what circumstances you may file a claim.

On July 7, 1978, the District Court of the District of Columbia entered a Stipulated Order providing that the definition of family income for purposes of computing maximum rentals for public housing, as contained in a HUD Circular, which excluded spouses from the $300 deduction for each dependent and excluded dependents from the $300 deduction for each secondary wage earner, was invalid and violated the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended. The effect of this determination is that certain families who lived in public housing during the period from March 16, 1971 to September 26, 1975, may have been charged too much rent. Therefore, the District Court ordered HUD to establish a one million dollar fund for the payment of claims which current or former tenants of public housing may submit for a refund of any overpayments.

The District Court's Stipulated Order provides that, if valid claims exceed one million dollars, HUD has the option of having the Order dissolved in which case NTO and HUD may negotiate a modified settlement or proceed with further litigation. Thus, claimants should realize that the submittal of a claim determined valid by a PHA may result in full, partial, or no payment, depending on the total amount of valid claims submitted to HUD, or the final outcome of any further litigation. Any person wishing to receive a copy of the Stipulated Order or a claim form may do so by making their request known to a local PHA.

Individuals wishing to submit a claim must fill in the claim form made a part of this Notice and must submit it to the Public Housing Agency's address indicated on the claim form, or such other appropriate Public Housing Agency if different from the address indicated, within 120 days from Dec. 6, 1978. No claims will be accepted after the end of the 120 day period, April 5, 1979.

Information provided by the claimant on the claim form must be specific as to the time period between March 16, 1971, and September 26, 1975, for which the wife or husband of the head of the household was present and was a dependent and/or a dependent in the household was employed.

Lexington Task Force Meet Eyes East Kentucky Housing

A task group on Eastern Kentucky housing took initial steps in Lexington Monday toward a coordinated housing plan involving governmental agencies, local residents and private enterprise.

The session at the University of Kentucky's Carnahan House was called by Fred H. Poterfield, Louisville area manager for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Ralph Coldiron, representing Development Cabinet Secretary William Short, told participants that the formation of such groups as the Appalachian Development Council and the new housing task force is helping to end "the long night of darkness" in Eastern Kentucky.

Poterfield said the task force to be formed as a result of the two-day session which began Monday "should represent the best possible example of how government and private enterprise work together to solve problems."

Coldiron, executive director of the Appalachian Development Council formed earlier this year by Gov. Julian Carroll, announced that Janie Douglass, a Harlan community worker, will act as liaison between the council and the housing task force.

Coldiron said one of the goals of the council is to introduce a legislative package to the 1980 General Assembly. Douglass, who heads the council's committee on the quality of life, will take the recommendations of the new task force to the full council for their approval and possible submission to the General Assembly, he said.

Poterfield said past efforts at improving housing eastern Kentucky have been "reactive and rather piecemeal. HUD has often been frustrated in its efforts by the hilly topography of the area and other problems in developing housing there, he said.

The HUD Louisville Office and the other participating federal and state agencies hope the conference and the resulting task force will be "the first step in developing an integrated strategy for new and rehabilitated housing in eastern Kentucky," said Poterfield.

Poterfield said the task force will concentrate initially on 16 counties making up the Big Sandy, Kentucky River and Cumberland Valley area development districts. "Although all the Appalachian counties in eastern Kentucky suffer some degree of community underdevelopment and shortage of adequate housing, it is our intention as a first priority to focus attention on those counties in which high coal producing activity and restrictive topography combine to make the demand for housing a critical issue," he explained.

The solutions found "in these most difficult counties" may be transferrable later to other Kentucky Appalachia counties and elsewhere in the country, Poterfield added.

Coldiron described the formation and purposes of the Appalachian Development Council and said the council will have a close working relationship with the housing task force.

He said the council, made up of Appalachian residents from various walks of life, is seeking to solve a wide range of community and economic development problems in Appalachia Kentucky.

"The creation of the eastern Kentucky task force on housing here today is another encouraging step at positively approaching the housing problems of eastern Kentucky," Coldiron said.

At the task force meeting Mrs. Pat Gish, head of the Eastern Kentucky Housing Development Corp., and wife of Tom Gish, Whitesburg newspaper editor, cited repeated instances of red-tape snarls and bureaucratic delays.

Mrs. Gish, for her part, said she thinks it is "unrealistic to expect the coal companies to do it all," and suggested that a larger portion of the coal severance tax be returned to mountain communities for housing and schools.

"It's high time energy began paying the cost of its extraction, including its social costs," she said. Leadership, she added, could come from the governor, who could "call together the resources that are available and say, 'Let's do something!'"

The Appalachian Development Council, appointed earlier this year by Gov. Julian Carroll, said Mrs. Gish, "doesn't have any authority—they can sit up there and plan forever."

Coal Firm To Tell Mountaintop Plan For Housing Work

Island Creek Coal Company will host a press conference Monday to announce plans for a major housing development to be built in Buchanan county, Virginia.

The conference will begin at 11 a.m. at the Buchanan County Y.M.C.A. building, one mile east of Grundy on Route 83.

The housing project, to be known as Buchanshire, will consist of 1,223 acres of land atop Keen Mountain, Virginia. When completed, Buchanshire is scheduled to have 1,000 homes, 350 trailer pads, and 200 to 400 apartment units. Land will also be reserved for school sites, church sites, a fire station, park areas and a commercial zone.

(Wheelwright High Journalism Class)

The grand opening of the new Wheelwright youth center was held Nov. 27, with more than 150 interested persons from Wheelwright and surrounding communities attending.

For the opening the center hosted the Free Pentecostal Church of God of Burton, whose singers sang a selection of songs for the youth attending the center. The Rev. Gordon Stacy, of Cincinnati, was the guest-speaker. After the service, refreshments were served. A ping-pong tournament was held, and other games such as billiards were also available to the young people.

Gary McCoy supervises the center.

Work Begins on Jenkins Project

Work has begun on what has been called one of the most significant eastern Kentucky housing projects ever undertaken.

The Jenkins Housing Project, being developed on an unclaimed strip mine bench in Letcher county, is in the beginning stages of development, according to Secretary William Short, whose Development Cabinet has been involved with the growth of the project since its beginnings in 1977.

The project marks the first time the Appalachian Regional Commission has worked directly with a private coal company to improve land for housing and community development.

The Development Cabinet houses Kentucky's Appalachian Regional Commission staff, and ARC grants to eastern Kentucky are channeled through them.

Ground was broken for the Jenkins project last February.

The 92-acre site, located at Burdine east of Jenkins on US 119-23, was provided by Beth-Elkhorn Coal Corp. at the nominal price of $8,600. The land at that time was valued at around $155,000.

The project will provide 144 dwellings of low and moderate-income housing.

"The Jenkins project will provide adequate housing for many of Letcher county's residents," Short said, adding that adequate housing has traditionally been beyond the means of three quarters of that county's population.

Short called the project "an excellent example of what can be achieved when all levels of government and the private sector work together toward a common goal."

"This project is a model of what can be done nationwide to improve housing in coal mining areas," Short said.

The Jenkins Housing Project is part of a special $2.3 million program directed at providing housing in communities heavily affected by coal production.

Through this program, the ARC is working to stimulate low and moderate-income housing construction in areas of Appalachia facing housing shortages caused by increased mining activity.

The ARC provided an initial $541,500 grant which was part of the $2.3 million, then later supplemented that amount with another $787,000, approved by Gov. Julian Carroll from Kentucky's regular ARC allocation.

Additionally, $210,000 in ARC rural access road money was matched with $90,000 in state funds from the Commonwealth's Appalachian Program.

Also supporting the project are the Kentucky Housing Corp., which administered site planning and development contracts for the Kentucky Appalachian Program; the Kentucky Department of Transportation, which is providing access to the site, and the Letcher fiscal court, which provided $55,000 of coal severance tax funds.

Ky. Energy Supplies Called Ample But Conservation Still Stressed

Kentucky's energy supplies are in "ample supply" for the upcoming winter, according to the state's deputy secretary for energy.

Damon Harrison said today that a recent Energy Department survey of Kentucky's major energy suppliers has found "generally adequate" supplies of natural gas, fuel oil, propane and coal.

However, Harrison said problems could arise concerning transportation of fuels such as propane and fuel oil to points of need. He noted that the cold temperatures of the winter of 1977 and the abnormal amounts of snow last winter caused transportation problems that delayed deliveries of propane and fuel oil, causing short-term shortages in some areas of the state.

"Natural gas this winter will be in adequate supply, but adequate supply does not mean that some (business) firms, because of their contracts (with suppliers), will not be cut off from gas for short periods of time," Harrison said. "These firms, by and large, have installed standby facilities for other fuels while they are cut off."

"Natural gas prices can be expected to continue to rise," Harrison said, "so although there seems to be an ample quantity for the winter, this is no excuse—and in fact, it would be foolhardy—not to use it wisely. Efficient and wise use will save the consumer money in addition to saving energy."

Harrison said supplies of fuel oil and propane are also adequate, but pointed out deliveries of those fuels can be hampered by the transportation problems created by inclement weather.

Supplies of coal for generating electricity "will certainly be ample," Harrison said. "However, the Tennessee Valley Authority has already announced that they have the possibility of being in a fairly tight supply situation."

Harrison noted that TVA serves 26 western Kentucky counties, and that the energy supplier's problems could affect that section of the state. "However, with TVA interconnections with other utilities, my guess is that if this winter is near normal and consumers conserve intelligently, TVA will come out all right."

Harrison repeated this urging that consumers use wisdom in their use of electricity, although the energy form is in adequate supply. He said rising costs of electricity, as well as other fuels, should encourage efficient use.

The Department of Energy has developed various guidelines as contingencies for dealing with whatever weather conditions arise this winter, Harrison said. The department will work with the transportation department and the office of Disaster and Emergency Services to solve problems with movements of supplies, he said.

He further said the energy department will encourage the Department for Human Resources to expedite processing of unemployment insurance checks, should the weather force lay-offs by industry.

Harrison said the energy department's first priority in fuel distribution aims at protecting human health and safety, with secondary but strong emphasis placed on supporting the state's economy at the highest possible level. Most of the state's industrial firms have developed standby systems, should natural gas again become in short supply. "This is an important factor in protecting Kentucky jobs," he said.

"The real key to Kentucky's success with getting through difficult winters has been the fact that we have approached the problems on a partnership basis between government and the private sector, including the major energy suppliers. We have relied on voluntary cooperation, rather than attempting to tell people on a mandatory basis what they must do. I think this has paid off, and will continue to be our philosophy as long as it works," he said.

Harrison said mandatory measures would be adopted only if the health and safety of Kentuckians are clearly threatened.

Carroll Proclaims 'Year of the Child'

Gov. Julian Carroll has proclaimed 1979 as "The Year of the Child" in Kentucky.

In his proclamation, the Governor notes there are more than one million children under the age of 18 in Kentucky. "All have special needs, but in many cases these needs are not being adequately met," said Gov. Carroll.

Through the proclamation, the Governor urges "all Kentucky citizens and organizations to focus on children and promote lasting action to improve the lives of children in Kentucky."

International Children's Year is the 20th anniversary of the United Nations' Declaration of the Rights of the Child.

Why is one child in 50,000 born with "brittle bones" (Osteogenesis imperfecta)? The Easter Seal Research program seeks the answer.

State Trains Mine Inspectors, Federal Government Gets Them

The big gap between state salaries for mine site reclamation inspectors and federal salaries for similar positions prevents the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection from retaining qualified personnel, according to Frank Harscher, deputy secretary of the department.

Testifying last Wednesday before the Interim Joint Committee on State Government's Subcommittee on Cost and Efficiency, Harscher said keeping qualified reclamation inspectors is a major problem for the state, and is caused by the great disparity between what the U.S. Office of Surface Mining is willing to pay inspectors after they have been on the job with the state for a year or more, and what the state can pay them after that time in service.

Harscher said the state starts inspectors with no experience at $728 per month, a 10 percent increase from what the figure was a few months ago. "Then, after a year or so, the federal government can pay them $16,000 to $17,000 a year," he said. Entry level pay for federal inspectors is $15,000 or $16,000, but more experience is required than for initial hiring by state, Harscher said.

"Individuals who do have the technical background, who work for two or three years and get to a place where they want a little latitude, leave" he said.

Sen. Ken Gibson (D-Madisonville) said he and his constituents worked for years to get a program in reclamation technology at Madisonville Community College, but now few of the program's graduates find continuing employment with state government. "I don't think the state's in the position to hire any of them," Gibson said.

Gibson, a subcommittee member, agreed with Harscher that the state's reclamation enforcement arm has become something of a training ground for federal inspectors.

The Subcommittee on Cost and Efficiency in State Government is hearing testimony from state government departments concerning spending, particularly with respect to such areas as hiring practices and personnel management.

6 Architects Named To Design Building

Six architects have been chosen from the 12 semifinalists in a contest to select the designer for a new state courts and justice building.

Chosen to receive a $20,000 stipend to design the building were:

Ryan, Cooke & Zuern Associates Inc. of Louisville, a joint venture; Edward J. Beiting Jr. of Newport, a joint venture with Maxfield, Edwards & Baker of Covington; Hitchcock & Associates, of Owensboro; Bennett & Tune Architects, Inc., of Lexington, a joint venture; Arrasmith, Judd, Rapp & Associates of Louisville, a joint venture with Lois & Henry, Inc., also of Louisville; McLoney & Associates, of Lexington, a joint venture with a Lexington firm, Omni Associates Architects.

Clark Beauchamp, commissioner of the Bureau of Facilities Management in the finance department, said the stipend will help offset the cost of preparing a proposal for the building. He said the procedure used is similar to federal procedures in such competitions and estimated that it would cost the firms as much as $30,000 to $50,000 to prepare the models, plans and drawings needed for a structure as complex as the new justice building.

Courthouse Use By State Courts To Cost $64,030

The Administrative Office of the Courts announced last week that Floyd county will receive an annual compensation of $64,030.85 for the use of facilities here for circuit and district court.

Legislation providing for a cost-related basis of compensation was enacted by the 1978 General Assembly. Under the provisions of the act which became effective July 1, 1978, counties and cities providing space for the use of the court system will be reimbursed in accordance with the percentage of square feet in the existing structure which is used by the court system.

There are two major components in the determination of compensation. Floyd county will receive 56 percent of the total operating expenses of the courthouse, such as utilities and maintenance. It will receive, in addition, a 4 percent use allowance as an annual return on capitalized expenditures, which is also based on 56 percent of the total square feet in the existing structure.

Payment of $32,015.42 for the first six months of the fiscal year, covering the period July 1 through December 31 has been made to the fiscal court.

To Exhibit Whitaker Works

An exhibit of the art works of Tom J. Whitaker, Prestonsburg Community College art instructor, will be held in the college library, Dec. 6-30. Library hours are from 8 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and 8 to 4:30 p.m., Fridays.

Approximately 30 works will be on display including landscapes, portraits and flowers.

"An artist must paint what he knows and feels or the work will say little," Mr. Whitaker comments. He feels that the key to drawing and painting is not talent but lots of work. His summers are spent working on location.

A reception will be held in the college library, with the artist present, Wednesday, December 6, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. The public is invited.

West Virginia Driller Killed in Rig Collapse

Williamson, W. Va.—A Jenny's Creek man was killed early Friday morning when the top of a drilling rig tower fell at an Appalachian Drilling Co. site north of here.

Richard May, 25, died of multiple injuries when a 30-section of the tower fell at about 1 a.m. and crushed him.

Glen W. Baisden, 21, of Kermit, W. Va., was on the tower and rode it to the ground, according to reports. He was listed in stable condition at Appalachian Regional Hospital.

Chafin said the accident is under investigation by West Virginia Department of Mines' oil and gas division, but apparently the tower's drill became stuck as the workmen were bringing it to the surface.

The men may have been bringing it up too fast, and the resulting wedging may have caused the tower top to cave in, Interim Coroner Gerald Chafin said.

The drilling site is about 10 miles north of Williamson at the head of Miller's Creek.

What's Better Than Money In The Bank?

Well, when you consider that no bank is permitted by law to pay you as much interest on savings as Floyd Federal can, the answer is simple. A Passbook Savings Account at Floyd Federal in Prestonsburg pays 5¼% interest. The highest rate any bank is allowed to pay you is only 5%. So, if you have a savings account at a bank, it's costing you money. While you may feel that it's convenient to save at the same place you do your checking, remember this: That so-called 'convenience' is expensive. What's better than having money in the bank? The answer is: having money in a Passbook Savings Account at Floyd Federal in Prestonsburg. The choice is up to you!

Handmade Quilt, a Cherished Gift

A Kentucky-made quilt is a most cherished possession. What a Christmas gift! For generations, women and even young girls have cut tiny shapes from tiny scraps to make a big cover-up—a quilt. These quilts at times have been the only legacy of a woman, proud of her handwork, giving something of herself to last after she is gone.

The Commonwealth is big on promoting handicrafts and as a result many people this year will receive a lovely gift made by hand as a gift.

The making and giving of quilts at Christmas time is nothing new in Kentucky. "I've give every one of my children a quilt," said a mountain woman, "and now I'm startin' with my grandchildren. Mine was a big family, so I guess I've gifted about 15 already."

Take a Kentucky evening, surround it with rain, just cold enough for a fire in the fireplace—and it's time for quilt-makers to reach for their scrap bag to start work on a bed covering that in recent years has become a status symbol.

Always proud of her talents with a needle, the quiltmaker at last has found a market for her Lone Stars, Dresden Plates and Wedding Rings. She is adept enough and determined enough to make sure she wastes no material big enough for a quilt pattern. She can make more quilts than she knows what to do with. She stores them in old trunks downstairs and upstairs. She gives them to loved ones. Today, she makes some to sell.

Since the weather for outdoor festivals is gone till next year, quilts for Christmas should be in good supply. It is true that in some places a well-made quilt will sell for $1,000; it is just as true that by a little searching and asking about, quilts just as lovely can be found for a much, much more modest price.

For those who can't locate a quiltmaker, then there is nothing to stop them from making their own. The pattern choice is a wide one.

A crazy quilt can be stitched together from various shaped bits of cloth. An especially lovely effect can be had by briar-stitching around the peices. "Some call the trim stitch turkey tracks," a hill woman noted, "but in my neighborhood we called the outline embroidery rail-fencing the peices."

A postage stamp quilt can utilize the least bit of cloth. In pioneer times, an inch of calico was saved to become part of a quilt.

Quilts—the pieced ones—are made in "squares." Strips of solid color fabric are used to link the squares. Like a frame around an original work of art, solid material is used along the sides of the quilt to enhance the effect.

For the novice, a visit to the quilt-maker would simplify the work.

"I used bleach to back my nice quilts," said Mrs. Sarah Ingram of eastern Kentucky. "Bleach gets prettier each time it's washed. I was considered a good sewer in my day. I sew eight stitches to the inch. Anything else was sloppy work. Counted them a time or two—no less than 70 stitches to the foot. Sometimes I make 12 squares to a quilt, sometimes more.

Why, when I was a girl, every female made quilts. It was the thing to do."

Patchwork was a creative outlet for women in years past. It was a way of expressing themselves in pleasant, satisfying hours of working with their hands.

Quilt pattern names have a way of forming pictures in the mind. Some patterns to search for are Kentucky Rose, Charm, Moon Over the Mountain, Wild Rose, Lone Star, Fan (also called Flirtation), Sunflower, Blazing Star, Pocket Full of Patches, Kites, Seabells, Spiderweb, Storm at Sea, Goose Tracks, Friendship, Drunkard's Path, Indian Meadow (also called Queen Charlotte's Crown), Whig Rose, Clay's Choice, Lincoln Blocks, Star of Bethlehem, Bear Paw, Joseph's Coat, Shifting Block, Smoothing Iron, Dutch Doll, Basket, Bow Tie, Tulip, Wedding Ring, Diamond, Pinewheel, Chimney Sweep, Baby's Blocks, North Star, Sawtooth, Snowflakes, Bachelor's Puzzle, Nine Patch, Wheel of Fortune, Garden Path, Flower Garden, Gardener's Pride, Young Man's Fancy and on and on and on.

A finished quilt makes a handsome bedcover. Quilts now are being used for tablecloths, curtains and wall hangings. If a beginning quiltmaker tries, then remember two squares make a pillow, half a dozen a sofa throw, even one square will make a placemat.

KET To Cover Legislature

KET will provide same-day coverage of the special session of the Kentucky General Assembly when that body convenes in Frankfort next Monday. The educational television network will air portions of each day's events beginning at 7:30 p.m. Coverage will continue on an "as needed" basis up to 9 p.m. daily.

Virginia G. Fox, KET associate executive director for broadcasting, said the format of the coverage will be similar to that which the network used when it covered the regular 1978 meeting of the legislature but with some small adjustments.

"KET will attempt to provide more explanation of what is happening such as procedural technicalities or complicated bill processes. Comments after the last session indicated that the only area of dissatisfaction by viewers was that they sometimes had trouble following the legislative activity. We hope somewhat more comment will rectify that."

While the network covers the General Assembly, "Kentucky Now," KET's weekly public affairs program, will be temporarily removed from the broadcast schedule. Members of the "Kentucky Now" team will provide the transitional information on legislative proceedings requested by viewers.

Twenty Nobel laureates have been associated with The National Foundation-March of Dimes, since the voluntary health organization was formed 40 years ago.

Colorful Lawmen Kept the Peace In the Early Days of Wheelwright

Family and friends pay their last respects to "Bad John" Hall in 1931 at the Branham cemetery, Wheelwright. The widely known Wheelwright officer died of natural causes at a Martin hospital.

Lawless? Is that what they call our end of the county? Do they call us savage, cruel creatures who only know how to fight and kill? Well, our end of the county has been given these harsh names by our peers in this county and by newspapers. The reason for this name-calling has sprung from our recent history of arson, shootings and explosions.

But has anyone ever thought about our older history? Are there still people who can remember the almost weekly killings in the lawless 1920's of Wheelwright? Has anyone ever thought about how some people made it through Prohibition days with something to warm their insides and make their heads light? Bootlegging, of course.

Still, there were law-enforcement officers, and what officers they were! These men were often as tough as the men they arrested. For a man to survive as an officer, he had to be just as feared as the law-breaker he hunted. "Bad Talt" Hall is a good example of this type of individual. These men were called

By THE JOURNALISM CLASS
Wheelwright High School

Law, not law officers or representatives of the law and constitution, and the name was correct because these lawmen were often a law unto themselves. They usually knew little about the law itself; instead, they followed their own beliefs about what was right and wrong.

One of the more colorful early lawmen was "Bad John" Hall. Bad John was appointed peace officer of Wheelwright after he had killed two men when he was only 18 or little older. He was probably appointed because of his feared name or perhaps because the city elders wanted to keep him busy and on the side of the law.

While Bad John and his peers were a rough, tough crew, they were efficient in their jobs. That might not sound right, considering the large number of killings at that time. In order to understand why, one should know that the people of Wheelwright and Eastern Kentucky were clannish and often took the law into their own hands. The majority of people killed were "foreigners" who had no family connections locally and only strange customs.

With all this trouble, these lawmen could still be called efficient because they held down the killings to one a week instead of a possible 10. Another reason for their being called "good lawmen," even though they were quick with the gun and fists, was the statement made by a person who grew up in the 1940's of Wheelwright:

"I can't call my childhood years in Wheelwright lawless because I felt safe to walk down the streets." While this resident was born a few years after Bad John Hall's "reign" as an officer, the influence left by these men was still respected. Yet try as they might, they could not stop everything that went on. While many younger people will quickly point out the penalties for murder enforced today and how they believe such stories of the past untrue, these were the conditions then, and the law of today is not the law of yesterday. While the crime of murder was treated with the death sentence and was enforced wholeheartedly, a person first had to be captured before he could be punished. The law lacked modern transportation, communications and manpower to capture suspects who had gone into hiding. Drinking and gambling were thought of as commonplace. Several things now considered illegal were very "legal" back then.

This heritage might be a partial cause why we are called lawless now. While this end of the state is mostly dry, people still buy liquor from bootleggers. When they do so, it is called illegal. Maybe we are doing the things our fathers did but now there is a law against it. Still, there is no doubt that the number of violent crimes committed in Floyd county has decreased quite a bit. If we are to be called lawless in our time, we must point to the fact that most crimes committed in our area are non-violent and very few are violent to the point of death.

We do not think of ourselves as lawless and wish others would not say so.

★ Kentucky Afield ★

By JOHN WILSON

The proverbial "man who has everything" isn't a hunter or fisherman—there probably isn't a sportsman alive who has everything he needs (or thinks he needs) to help him enjoy the out-of-doors.

But this doesn't necessarily make it easy to select Christmas gifts for outdoorsmen, since most have very definite ideas about what equipment they want.

Patrick McManus, writing in Field and Stream magazine, said that there should be a law prohibiting anyone who tells a sporting goods clerk "I want a present for an outdoorsy person" from actually buying gifts for outdoorsmen.

McManus, as usual, was being funny, but there's more than a grain of truth in what he says. Even trying to buy something as seemingly simple as a box of shotgun shells or a packet of fish hooks can become amazingly complicated, particularly for the person who doesn't know the difference between high brass and low brass or between Aberdeens and Mustads.

If the sportsman on your list shops regularly at a certain sporting goods store, the clerks there may have several suggestions. Or a fishing buddy or hunting partner may be able to help with the selection.

Often the proposed recipient takes matters into his own hands, dropping numerous not-so-subtle hints about exactly which boat, motor and trailer combination he'd like to find under the tree Christmas morning. Or he leaves catalogs opened to certain pages lying around with specific items (like $1,000 shotguns) circled in red ink.

But the gift-giver who has a more modest present in mind might have to settle for purchasing a gift certificate or even giving the sportsman cash and telling him to pick out his own present. After all, half the fun of a new purchase is shopping for it, examining all the various items and swapping a tall tale or two down at the store.

A welcome gift for almost any sportsman is a new hunting or fishing license. All sport licenses expire Dec. 31, so the new one will be needed for the first trip of 1979 season. There's no problem about size or color and the license will be good for an entire year.

But you'll find that the cost of licenses, like the cost of everything else, have gone up this year. In the face of rising inflation, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has been forced to increase license fees effective with 1979 license sales.

A resident statewide annual hunting or fishing license will cost $6.50 (up from $5) and a resident combination hunting and fishing license now sells for $12.00 (as opposed to $9).

A trout stamp has gone from $2.25 to $3 and the deer permit will remain at $10.50 for both residents and non-residents.

Sportsmen from out of state will now have to pay $12.50 for a three-day small game hunting license and $35 for an annual license (required to hunt deer). Non-resident fishermen will pay $4 for a three-day license, $5.50 for a 15-day license and $14 for an annual license.

There have been corresponding increases in commercial licenses, tags and permits, with all revenue from these sales going toward the operation of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

If you're searching for a small gift, an excellent bargain is a subscription to the fish and wildlife department's bi-monthly outdoor magazine, "Kentucky Happy Hunting Ground." Six issues cost only $1 and this magazine is a good way to keep up with conservation happenings around the commonwealth. Send subscriptions and payment to: Division of Public Relations, Dept. of Fish and Wildlife Resources, 592 East Main, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

DOE'S SYNTHANE PLANT TO CLOSE

One of the Department of Energy's (DOE) experimental pilot plants for converting coal into synthetic gas will shut down next month due to lack of funds to continue the testing program.

Effective Dec. 1, operations will cease at the Synthane Pilot Plant located in Bruceton, Pa., outside of Pittsburgh.

The pilot plant was designed to test an advanced process for producing a clean-burning gaseous fuel which is interchangeable with natural gas. At full operation, the plant, which cost about $17 million to build, could convert 72 tons of coal per day into 1.2 million cubic feet of methane gas. It began operating in July 1976.

America has a higher rate of infant deaths than 15 other countries, says The National Foundation-March of Dimes. One of the reasons may be our nation's incidence of low birthweight. It is 15 per cent higher than in Great Britain, 27 per cent higher than Japan, and 61 per cent higher than Finland.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our parents, Isaac and Geneva Boyd Conn. Dad passed away December 15, 1962. Mother passed away June 5, 1968.

No one knows the silence and heartache, for only those who have lost can tell.

For we miss you both so dearly, since you have gone away. Thank God that we can meet you both in that bright home above. Our eyes have shed many tears since you both have gone away. But someday we shall see our Lord, and we will understand, why Jesus takes our loved ones to the promised land. So let us all be thankful, and bow our heads in prayer, to thank Christ for the blessing awaiting us up there.

Sadly missed by Jenny Ratiff and all my brothers and sisters.

Both attend services each Sunday at the church here, driving from Paintsville where they reside. 40,000 Population Per Judge Suggested by Chief Justice

Ideally, the number of district judges assigned to an area should be based on population, not on the caseload, John S. Palmore, chief justice of the Kentucky Supreme Court, said Monday.

Palmore had been asked by the prosecutors' subcommittee of the Task Force to Study the Commonwealth's Legal System to comment both on a proposal to change the number of district judges and a proposal for a single prosecutorial system as opposed to the present dual system.

Although the U.S. Supreme Court has stated that it is not mandatory that "one man, one vote" be carried over to "one man, one court," that is still a fundamental principle, Judge Palmore said. He suggested that 40,000 people per court would be a good rule-of-thumb if it did not mean cutting across county lines.

In any event, each county should have at least one court, he added.

Palmore said the present number of judges is close to the number of district judges "that the job calls for," and any inequality in caseload could be adjusted by judges with lighter schedules assisting in areas with heavier caseloads.

Judges "moving back and forth" when necessary to share heavy caseloads in certain regions would be cheaper than adding a second judge when only one and a half is needed, Palmore said. In addition, there would be another advantage in that judges would often be holding court in neighboring counties where they would not be subject to political pressures present in home counties, he said.

Opinion on this varies from some people who feel each county should have a judge to those who feel there should be fewer district judges and more trial commissioners, he said. In the final analysis, the General Assembly will have to examine these varying philosophies and make the decision, noted Palmore. The chief justice cautioned against redistricting as an alternative. Redistricting is "a can of worms...trouble for the legislature...trouble for anybody..." he said.

Under the new Judicial Article which went into effect in January, a four-tiered unified court system was created which included a supreme court corresponding to the old court of appeals; a new, intermediate court of appeals; the pre-existing circuit court which continued as the court of general jurisdiction; and the new district court. The legislature decided during the December 1976 special session concerning the Article that there would be 113 district court judges with exclusive jurisdiction over misdemeanors.

Concerning the second proposal, Palmore said he favors one fulltime prosecutor who is free from ties with anyone, and responsible only to the people who elected him. There are several ways this could be accomplished, he said.

Presently, Kentucky has a dual system of local prosecution with felonies prosecuted in the circuit court by Commonwealth's attorneys, and misdemeanors and felony preliminary hearings prosecuted in the various lower courts by municipal prosecutors and by the elected county attorneys, who also have extensive civil duties. It has been suggested that this dual system be unified into a single office.

In another matter, a subcommittee member asked the chief justice what he thought was the greatest weakness in the criminal justice system.

"At the risk of sounding facetious, the men sitting in nine chairs in Washington, D.C. (are the greatest weakness)," said Palmore. For example, a decision by the U.S. Supreme Court that state-funded attorneys must be provided for if necessary even in a traffic ticket case will be expensive both in time and money, he said.

The subcommittee plans to hold meetings early next year to hear presentations from representatives of both commonwealth's attorneys and county attorneys.

Suit May Affect Care For Retarded

Members of the Legislative Research Commission's subcommittee on health and welfare toured two Louisville institutions Friday.

Acting chairperson Rep. Gerta Bendl (D-Jefferson) described the tours as an on-going effort by the committee to look into both institutional and community-based problems for Kentucky's mentally retarded children.

The committee visited the Roberta B. Tully school for handicapped children in Jeffersonton and Louisville's Central State Hospital for mentally retarded people.

Committee members heard reports on the status of a class action suit brought against the Department of Human Resources by the Kentucky Association for Retarded Citizens and five current or former residents of Outwood, a residential mental retardation treatment facility operated by the department. The suit, filed in May 1977, asks the court to forbid the construction of the proposed replacement facility at Dawson Springs for the mentally retarded and to declare that institutional services for the mentally retarded are unconstitutional because they are not the least restrictive alternative treatment.

Rep. Thomas Birch (D-Louisville) said some of his constituents were concerned that the residents of state institutions might have to be returned to families unable to give them adequate care if the association wins the suit.

Rep. Bendl said that assumption was being perpetrated by the Department for Human Resources to influence their case. She said reason dictates that institutions could never be done away with completely.

"There will always be people who are at the physical or emotional point where they will need institutionalization," Bendl said. "What the KARC is saying is that there could be more viable alternatives for those who are capable of accepting them."

Bob Russell, acting director for Human Resources' division for mental retardation, said the department's major aim is to develop a variety of options to serve mentally retarded people according to individual needs.

Russell said the department is moving toward the establishment of smaller residential units that can be integrated into the community with the help of existing or anticipated supporting services.

Legislators also heard proposals for alternatives to institutional care from members of the Jefferson County Council for Retarded Citizens.

"Deck the Halls"—But with Caution

With Santa Claus coming soon, Kentuckians are busy "decking the halls." With proper precautions, the decorations can add beauty to the season. But when such decorations are improperly used, hazards can occur.

Christmas trees with electric lights are the most popular decorations and statistically the most hazardous, according to Edsel Moore, manager of the Department for Human Resources, consumer product safety branch.

Evergreens that have been cut and harvested are especially dangerous, said Moore. Most cut evergreen trees that can be bought at Christmas tree stands have been cut from one to two months. Even though many such trees may have been sprayed with a flame retardant green dye to make them more appealing, they can be very vulnerable to fire, he said.

Aluminum trees may also be hazardous, said Moore. The trees' capacity to conduct electricity may cause serious shock if the aluminum "needles" are caught in Christmas tree light sockets.

Hazardous situations can occur, he said, when proper precautions are not taken. He listed some preventive measure rules to follow:

—Christmas tree lights should not be left on while the family is asleep or away from home.

—Stand cut trees in water and keep water replenished.

—Never use a string of Christmas tree lights as an extension cord. It is easy to overload a string of lights.

—Before placing lights on the tree, check wiring for frayed wires, loose connections and broken light sockets. Lights showing any of these characteristics should be discarded.

—Never set up a Christmas tree near a fireplace.

—Do not rely on the flame-retardant chemicals with which a Christmas tree might be treated. Flame retardant does not mean fireproof.

—Never light a Christmas tree with candles.

—Avoid smoking around flammable decorations.

—Keep a fire extinguisher handy and know how to use it.

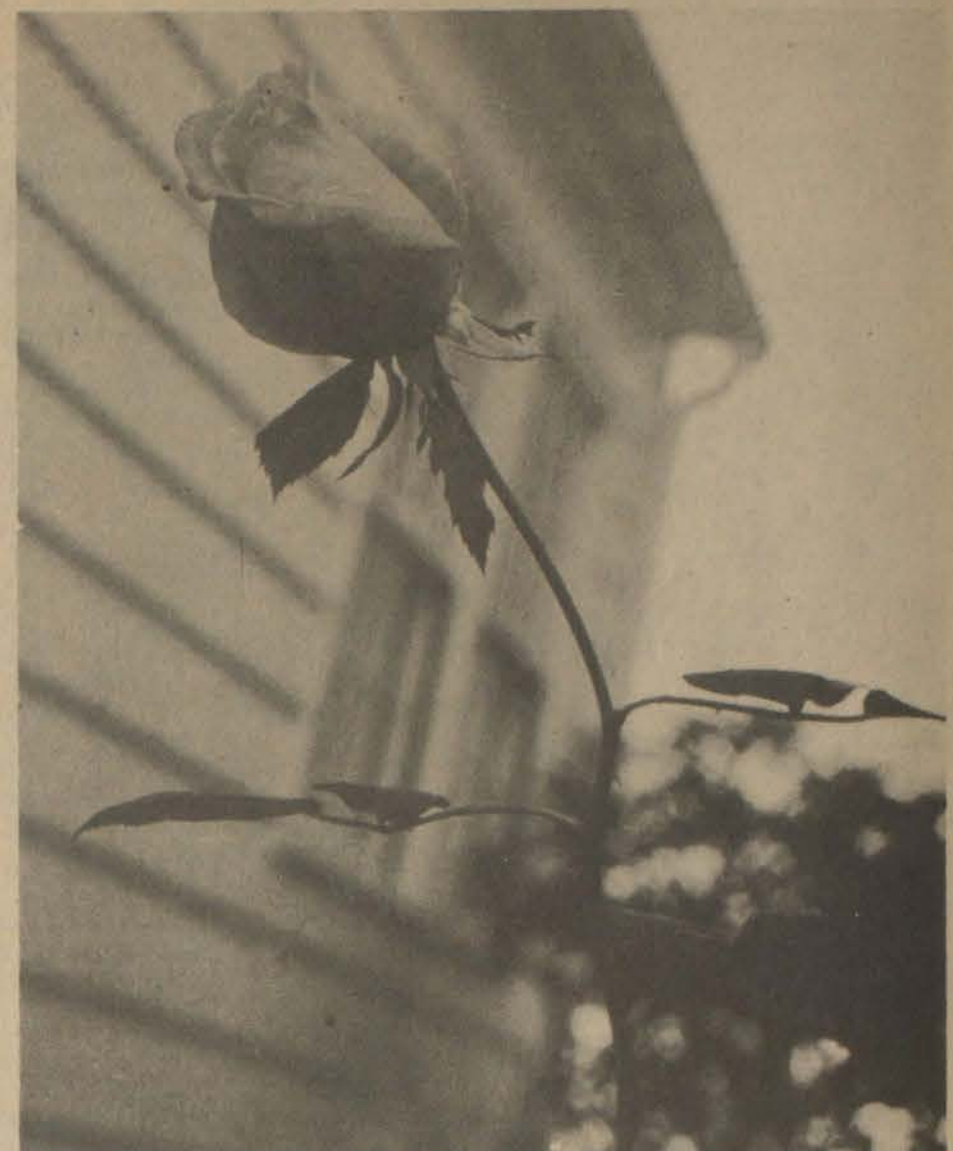

—Always use a screen to enclose burning logs in a fireplace.

—Avoid wearing loose, flowing clothes around lighted candles and open fireplaces.

—Never use indoor lights to decorate the exterior of a house or a tree that is outside; outdoor lights may be used indoors but indoor lights may not be used outdoors.

—Outdoor electrical decoration should not be installed in wet weather.

(Mr. Moore is the son of Mrs. Ida Moore, of Prestonsburg, and the late Earl Moore.)

ONE PERFECT ROSE, at least, is still thriving this week in Prestonsburg as the mild autumn weather continues into December.

ALC Eagles' Coaches For Both Men, Women In Optimistic Mood

Alice Lloyd College Eagles Coach Dan Wilson is predicting his team's first winning season in three years. At the end of last week the team record stood at four wins and two losses, with wins against Cumberland, Shawnee State, Ohio Valley and Southeast Christian, and defeats at the hands of Elizabethtown and Lindsey Wilson.

The team is 1-1 in its conference, the Kentucky Junior College Athletic Association, and Wilson has not ruled out the possibility that the Eagles may win the conference title for the first time in history.

The team will play its next four games on the road against St. Catherine, Lees, Pikeville and Sue Bennett. Also scheduled is the Knights of Columbus Classic Tournament in Cleveland, Tenn., Jan. 5 and 6. The team will return home Jan. 12 in a game against Paducah.

The college women's basketball team is scheduled to play two games at home the first at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, this week, against Spaulding College, the second at 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday against Georgetown College.

At the end of last week, the lady Eagles had won three and lost one in their season which began Nov. 19. The only loss was to Cumberland on Nov. 22, the second game of the season. Early season victories were scored against Shawnee State, Elizabethtown and Union.

"Prospects look good," says Coach Charlie Whitaker, "with seven returning sophomores and four new freshmen giving the team greater depth than it had last year."

Observes 82nd Birthday

Mrs. Millie Hall, of Orkney, was belatedly honored with a buffet lunch, an afternoon church service, and the presentation of numerous cards and gifts, Sunday, October 1. The occasion was in honor of her 82nd birthday and was sponsored by four generations of her immediate family.

Mrs. Hall was born September 30, 1896, to the late Richard and Darcus Gayheart. She is the widow of Elisha Hall.

The sponsors of the birthday celebration included the following daughters, sons, grandchildren and great-grandchildren:

Mrs. Edith Hall Lawson, Mr. and Mrs. Rondall Lawson and children, Amy and Crystal Lynne, Mrs. Janice Lawson Henson and children, Jennifer and Shelia, Mrs. Gerald D. McBrayer and children, Jan and Kim Moore and Jerry Alan McBrayer, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William (Gail) Flannery and daughter, Janice Lynne, of Prestonsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hobson, children and grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Hobson and children, Cara Lee, Melissa, and Bobby Darrell, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Frasure and sons, Randy and Tim, and Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Campbell; Elmer Hall and grandchildren, Sherry, Brian, and Palma, of East McDowell; Mr. and Mrs. Dee Howell, Jr., daughter, Mrs. Connie Stumbo, and grandsons, Jonathan and James Scott Stumbo, of McDowell; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Ray Hall and son, Alvin Ray.

Haskell Hall, son of Mrs. Hall, resides at home and was also a co-sponsor of the birthday celebration.

Mrs. Hall's surviving brother, Lem Gayheart, Mrs. Gayheart and several members of the immediate family also attended the celebration as did her brother-in-law, Isom Hall, of McDowell.

The Hall family entertained approximately 106 guests from several Kentucky counties and surrounding states as well as the immediate area.

Also included in the guest list were several elders of the Regular Baptist Church, of which Mrs. Hall is a member. Those included Elders Woodrow Pack, Mitchell Chaffins, Clinton Moore, Andy Hamilton, Walker Hamilton, Woodrow Dye, Paul Dye, John Cephus Frazier, Homer Howell and their families.

BIG EXPLOSION

Ninety years ago, a volcanic explosion equivalent to a hundred hydrogen bombs almost entirely destroyed the Indonesian island of Krakatoa. What portions of the island that did not sink into the sea, the December Reader's Digest relates, were covered under a blanket of ash 200 feet thick. But in just two years' time, vegetation had reappeared: 15 species of flowering plants, 11 of ferns and 2 of mosses.

Highway Agency Tells Plans To Fight Construction Cost

Following Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams' announcement last week of a vigorous anti-inflation fight against escalating highway construction costs, Federal Highway Administrator Karl S. Bowers called in state highway department officials and leaders of the highway construction industry to discuss efforts to slow down the rate of cost increases.

Bowers explained to the state government and industry representatives the Federal Highway Administration's current plans and efforts and asked for their advice and support.

Bowers told the group the latest FHWA figures show that highway construction costs during the third quarter of 1978 had risen an exorbitant 14.7 percent over the previous 3 months, and that FHWA was determined to work closely with state and industry highway interests to get this problem under control.

"We don't believe that inflation is responsible for all of the price increases," Bowers said, "And we intend to redouble our efforts to reduce the many kinds of costs that can't be blamed on inflation." According to Bowers, last week's meeting was significant in at least two ways—the group assured him of their strong approval and support and they also contributed substantive suggestions of ways FHWA can wage its cost-cutting campaign even more effectively.

Two of these suggestions have already been incorporated in the FHWA effort. In response to the first recommendation, Bowers has established new policies which will permit little or no retention of contractor progress payments if construction work is proceeding on schedule. Bowers acted on the second suggestion by adopting new policies that will further encourage contractor organizations and labor unions to follow the President's voluntary wage-price guidelines when negotiating their new labor agreements.

These latest elements augment the overall plan of the cost-cutting campaign announced by Secretary Adams last week. Highlights of the overall plan are:

—Liberal policies which will encourage quick progress payments to contractors and pay for materials stockpiled both on and off construction sites, thus reducing contractors' needs to borrow

—Policies for granting more realistic time extensions when temporary material shortages occur at no fault of the contractor

—Contract incentive clauses where appropriate to take advantage of contractor initiative and innovations to reduce costs

—Mechanisms to encourage states to incorporate voluntary wage-price guidelines into their highway construction programs in further support of the President's anti-inflation efforts

—Limits to size and duration of contracts where possible to allow completion of a project within one construction season by "staging" or "phasing" large projects or by letting smaller projects

—Provisions for increasing the use of alternate designs to provide more flexibility to contractors and ensure the lowest cost method is used for construction

—Scheduling of advertising periods and project lettings so as to attract the most competition available

"In view of the fact that contractors sometimes have difficulty in obtaining long-term quotes for materials and supplies, we are asking our FHWA field office people to consider including price adjustment or actual-cost provisions in new large contracts whenever they think this might be a problem," said Bowers.

"We're also asking them to take a very close look at any potential cost benefits that might be derived from the use of recycled materials.

"Beyond this," Bowers concluded at last week's meeting, "We shall continue to look for new and better ways to battle this cost escalation problem in highway construction, and we will certainly welcome the suggestions of everyone involved in the highway industry."

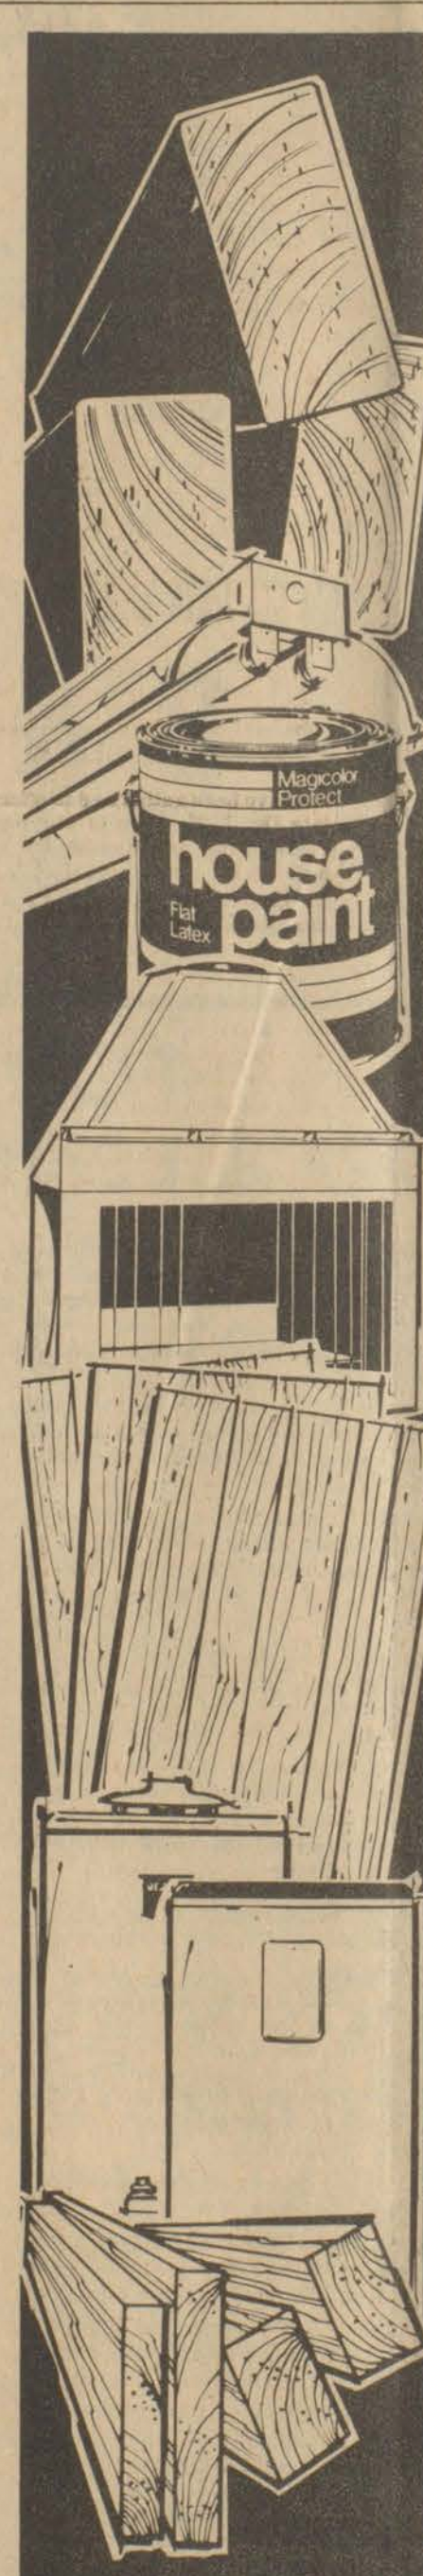

Magoffin Boy Treated Here after Bus Wreck

A young boy was slightly injured when a private school bus careened over a hillside early Friday morning, Magoffin county school officials said.

Gary Helton, 7, of Maggard, suffered a broken collarbone and was treated and released at the Highlands Regional Medical Center here.

The bus was on its way to Millard-Hensley Elementary School when the mishap occurred. The shoulder of the road near Maggard apparently collapsed and sent the school bus tumbling over at least three times before it finally came to rest.

Three adults and eight children were aboard the small bus. The others were treated for minor injuries and released.

CARING FOR POINSETTIAS

Many of you ladies will receive poinsettias for Christmas this year, and you should remember that poinsettia plants can bloom next Christmas again, if they're given a good deal of proper care. Here are some suggestions for care of your plant.

After Christmas, continue to keep the plant in a sunny window and where the temperature stays 65-70 degrees. Whenever the soil feels dry, water the poinsettia thoroughly but never let it stand in water.

Around March 1, gradually reduce watering until the soil is very dry, but not so dry that the stems shrivel. Then store the plant in an airy place where the temperature remains about 60 degrees. In mid-April, cut the stems back to 6 inches above the soil and replant the plant in a container 1-2 inches larger than the original container. Use a good potting soil mixture such as 2 parts soil, 1 part coarse sphagnum peat moss, and 1 part medium to coarse perlite by volume.

Water the plants thoroughly and put near a southern window in a 70-75 degree temperature. Water the soil surface whenever it feels dry. When new growth appears, begin fertilizing every two weeks with a complete analysis water soluble fertilizer, using the rate recommended on the label.

Move the plant outdoors in early June to a location that is lightly shaded and continue watering and fertilizing. Between August 15 and September 1, cut the stems back, allowing three to four leaves to remain on each shoot. Bring the plant indoors and put it near a window where it will get southern exposure. Keep it in a 65-70 degree temperature and continue watering and fertilizing.

Poinsettias flower about 10 weeks after the length of daylight shortens to 11 hours and less. So, to have the plant in full bloom by Christmas, it must be kept in complete darkness from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. starting the first part of October and continuing until Thanksgiving. Flowering will be delayed if plants are exposed to any kind of light during the 5 to 8 period. You can put the plant in a closet or cover it with an opaque box or cloth to keep it in the dark. In the daytime, the plant must be near a sunny window. Continue fertilizing until mid-December.

For best results, follow the directions carefully making sure you water the poinsettia correctly, give it enough sunlight at the right times, and cut back the stems when specified.

CUT FLOWER CARE

Christmas bouquets last longer if you know what to do. When you first receive the flowers, remove about one-half inch of stem with a sharp knife and douse the stem in a vase of warm water at 80-90 degrees. If a preservative has been enclosed, add it to the water.

Each day cut off about one-half inch from the stems and replace in fresh cool water. It is not necessary to change the water if a preservative was used. When the stems have been cut almost to the flower, you may want to float the flowers in a bowl or dish of water to have an attractive arrangement for several more days.

New Bills Name Former Sheriff Of Magoffin Co.

A former Magoffin county sheriff who earlier this year was convicted of a federal court charge and two others were indicted Friday by a federal grand jury at Frankfort which charged the three with conspiracy and extortion.

Ben Patrick, who was sheriff of Magoffin county from 1974 through 1977, was charged with one count of conspiracy and seven counts of extortion. The indictment alleges that he used his office as sheriff to extort from Raleigh Barnett, a former Floyd county man, a total of $2,900 on five occasions in 1974 and 1976.

(Patrick was convicted earlier this year of selling union labor cards, or referral slips, to construction workers and is now serving a two-year term in a federal prison.)

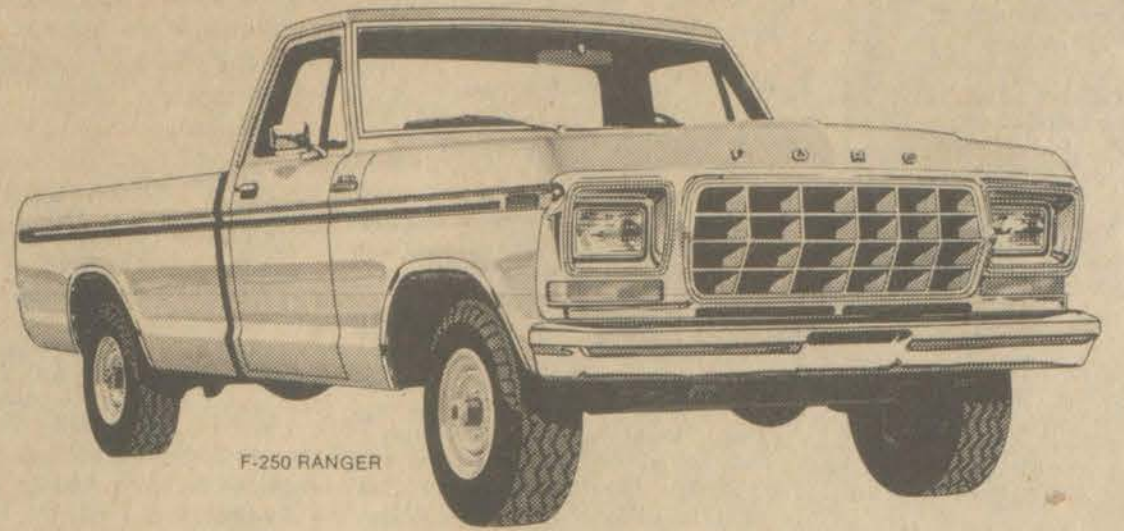

The others indicted are Lum Patton and his wife, Linda, who were charged with conspiracy as Patrick's agents. Two extortion indictments accused Mrs. Patton of delivering beer and whiskey to Steve and Sandy Wright in Magoffin county and collecting money from them. Her husband was listed in one extortion indictment.

GARDENING IN THE SOUTH

PLANTS FOR THE CHRISTMAS SEASON
By Frank Hanlon, Horticulturist Callaway Gardens

Soon it will be Christmas again and time to decorate your home for a bright and festive holiday season. To make your house come alive with color plants are a must and there are many suitable ones to use during this season.

In North America the plant closely associated with Christmas is the poinsettia. A native of Mexico, this winter-flowering plant had religious significance among the ancient Aztec Indians and Spanish settlers found it to be a colorful addition to the Navidad or Christmas pageant.

The poinsettia derives its name from Joel Poinsett, the first American ambassador to Mexico and an amateur botanist, who sent plants to his home in South Carolina for study and distribution among his botanical associates.

The poinsettia as we know it today is a technically altered and hybridized plant. Its size has been radically reduced to fit comfortably into contemporary homes, and the bracts (the colored leaves we often confuse for flower petals) are larger and more complete.

Poinsettias are available in the three basic colors, red, pink, and white. A number of bicolors are also available with "Jingle Bells" perhaps being the most unique. The "Annette Hegg" varieties hold their colorful bracts well into spring with occasional, light fertilization. Do not be disturbed when the small yellow florets (the actual flowering part of the plant) fall off. This is a natural occurrence and should happen two to three weeks after Christmas.

Purchase your poinsettia plant early in December for best selection and enjoyment.

Another popular Christmas plant which provides months of enjoyment with a little care, is the cyclamen. This bulbous plant is a perfect mount of leathery, green foliage offset with dark gray markings. The wing-like flowers stand well above the foliage on strong stems. This is a tough plant that prefers cool homes and ample moisture. Cyclamen are available in red, salmon, pink, and white. Cyclamen prefer filtered light away from heat sources and drafts. If you remove old wilted blooms they are quickly replaced by new ones.

Kalanchoes and Christmas cactus are succulent plants that add vivid color to any home. The colors are less subdued than the other mentioned plants and go more to violet, orange, buck-red, and all the colors of a painted desert. Kalanchoes remain in bloom for a long period and also provide an attractive foliage plant once the blooms are gone. Keep them evenly moist while in flower, but gradually withhold water so they are reasonably dry if you wish to keep the plant. None of the plants do well if they sit in water, so drain off any excess if the plants are placed in a decorative container.

Chrysanthemums are attractive year round, but white are especially enjoyable at Christmas and fit in well with traditional greenery and holly. Azaleas likewise make a vibrant splash of color when worked into seasonal greenery. Usually the azaleas used for Christmas are the "Indica" species and should not be planted outdoors until early March for best transplant results. These plants are often grown in pure peat moss and are best watered by submerging the pot portion of the plant in a sink for several minutes to thoroughly wet the root ball. Some general tips on care of all these Christmas plants are: avoid drafts and heating ducts, keep all flowering plants moist, but not sitting in water, and above all make sure the plant is properly protected from freezing temperatures.

Enjoy Christmas this year by decorating with beautiful holiday plants. (PRN)

'New' is the word in Nursing

By BETTY TEVIS

More than the building is new at the University of Kentucky College of Nursing.

One hundred thirty licensed and experienced nurses—including both men and women from their 20s into their 50s—are enrolled in UK's new Bachelor of Science in Nursing degree program.

Another 70 nurses are students working for their master's degree.

All attend classes in the new College of Nursing/Health Sciences Learning Center, and are taught by a nursing faculty of 46 persons described by nursing Dean Marion McKenna as "dedicated and committed."

UK's new nursing curriculum is up to the minute, reflecting recommendations of the state Council on Higher Education and the National League for Nursing, as well as the changing nursing needs of the Commonwealth.

The new degree program, says Dean McKenna, is not chiefly preparation for acute care. UK nursing students already know about that, and much more, since they're already licensed as registered nurses and experienced in their profession.

Trained for many specialties

At UK nurses are being trained to fit into the health care delivery system, to run clinics, to teach prevention, to plan health campaigns, to apply crisis theory and grief theory, to operate intensive care units, to offer primary care and care in industry.

At the UK College of Nursing, the baccalaureate graduate in nursing is seen as a professional practitioner who functions in collaboration with the physician.

Classes are taught in the evenings as well as the daytime and each class is offered every semester to accommodate students.

In addition to its teaching function, the College of Nursing is doing research funded by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, by the National Institute of Mental Health and by the United States Public Health Service.

And the College is continually seeking ways for its department of continuing education to take more teaching to nurse practitioners in the field. Currently, it is devising programs to be aired via educational satellite.

Dr. Juanita Fleming, a former American Council on Education fellow and now assistant dean for graduate studies, believes graduates of UK's master's program in nursing will be prepared to assume leadership roles and "contribute to the changing health care system."

Four graduate specialties

Graduate students specialize in one of these areas: nurse-midwifery, adult nursing (medical-surgical), parent-child nursing or community mental health.

Susan Bobek is in the community mental health sequence. She's from the Chicago area, chose UK for its curriculum and the opportunity for rural clinical experience (she spends two days a week in Frenchburg and Mt. Sterling) as well as for the compactness of the master's program (one calendar year).

The work is demanding, Ms. Bobek says, and the faculty helpful while "treating you as a mature adult."

She's pleased about the "ladders and lattices" within nursing education which allow a nurse to "branch out" into pharmacology, for example, or into psychiatric nursing.

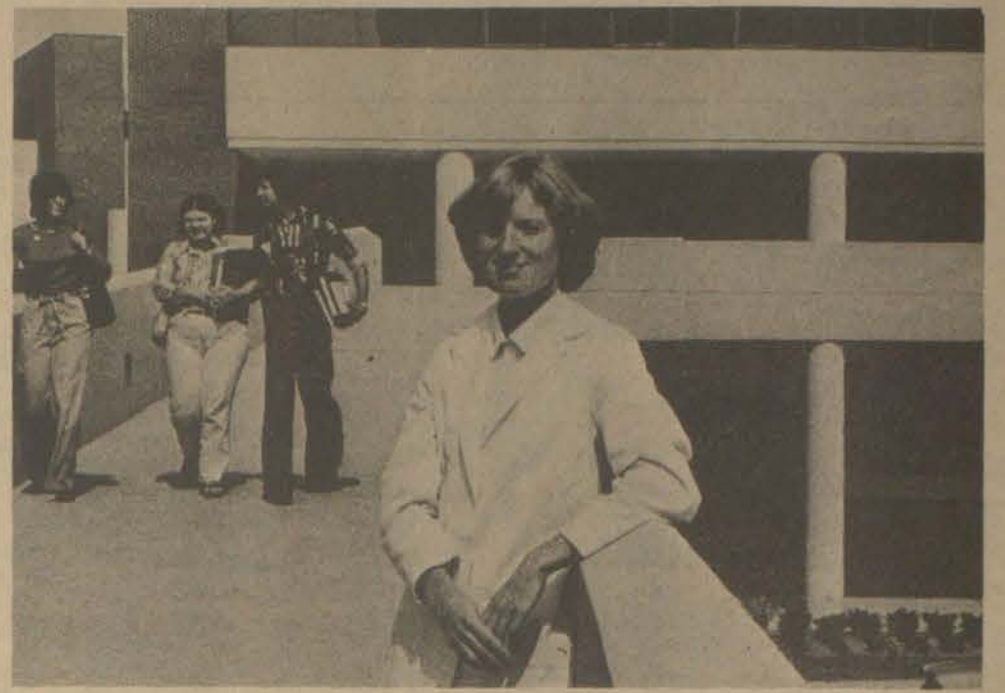

Ms. Bobek, who already has a master's degree in education, hopes to teach.

So does graduate student Antoinette Duvall, also enrolled in the community mental health sequence. She has a B.S. degree in nursing from UK and last semester was a part time teacher for the College of Nursing. She's 24 and from Louisville, and recently married a Lexington resident. She works at the Central Kentucky Blood Center one day a week while also attending UK.

Student quality and motivation have impressed Louise Stone, who directs the very active and thorough student services division in the College of Nursing.

This year every qualified Kentucky nurse who applied was accepted, she says. Students range in age from 22 to 54 and include 11 per cent blacks and 11 per cent males. "Our students are very, very motivated and self-directed," she adds.

Many UK undergraduates found their nursing vocations quite by accident; for some, a job as an aide awakened a desire to learn more and to serve better as a professional nurse.

Student Elizabeth Holloway, right, with new nursing building in background, calls nursing program "extremely demanding." She's working on bachelor's degree.

Or a two-year nursing degree, after a few years of work, was found inadequate to the student's talents and interests. So she or he returned to school for a higher degree.

Laura Payton, of Lexington, was an aide for seven years, earned an associate degree in nursing at Lexington Technical Institute and now wants a bachelor's degree. "I'll be able to give a better quality of patient care," she says, "and there's more chance for advancement with the B.S. degree in nursing."

She's working part time in University Hospital and taking care of her family while in school. "The faculty are very supportive," Ms. Payton says. "They don't hover over you but when you need support, they're there."

James E. Botkins first worked as an orderly in his hometown of Maysville, and then earned an associate degree in nursing from Maysville Community College in 1974. Now employed by a home care unit in Ohio, Botkins commutes 122 miles several days a week to UK nursing classes, working toward his bachelor's degree.

"I need to be able to assess a patient's condition; I need to know more," he says. "I believe in keeping people out of the hospital, out of nursing homes."

The juggling of school and job, Botkins says, are "overwhelming, mind-boggling." But, he adds, "UK faculty and staff are willing to help you, to sit down and talk with you."

A job as surgical technician in a Lexington hospital introduced Elizabeth Holloway to the "trifurcation of helping people in the medical area."

She earned an associate degree in nursing, worked three years in critical care and now has returned to UK for the B.S. degree, which she calls "an extremely demanding program with high expectations for classwork, participation and self-teaching."

She finds the faculty and staff "tremendously helpful to us."

'You want to help . . .'

Beatrice Burton found herself a few years ago the divorced and relatively uneducated mother of six.

Energetic, hard-working, single-minded and highly intelligent, Mrs. Burton sought help and was awarded tuition and became a nurse. Now she's remarried and enrolled in the nursing bachelor's degree program at UK and hopes to work in the rapidly expanding area of geriatric care.

Elizabeth Holloway describes a process common to most of these UK nurse-students. "You discover an area of sensitivity in yourself, and when you want to help people medically, you find you need and want more expertise."

Energy Plantings

UK researchers experiment with black locust as fuel source

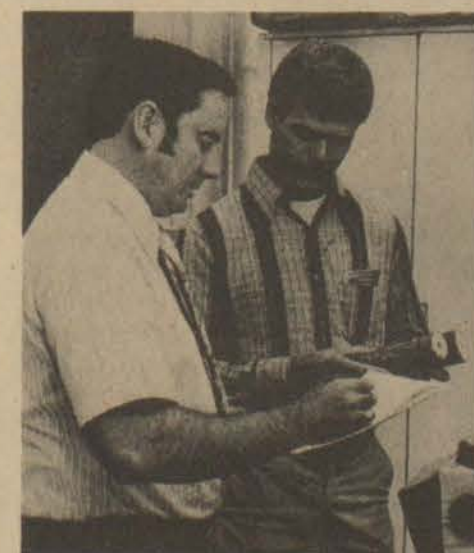

By AVERY JENKINS

Concern over the diminishing supply of coal and natural gas has prompted a new look at wood fiber as a fuel source, says a University of Kentucky associate professor of forestry.

Dr. Stan Carpenter will use a recent grant of $317,656 from the U. S. Department of Energy to do research on production of wood fiber from trees on reclaimed land at strip mine sites.

Carpenter and his associates, Dr. Don Graves and Dr. Robert Wittwer, UK department of forestry, will be experimenting with "energy plantings" over the next five years. The project is divided into two parts: studying the existing growth of trees on reclaimed land, and planting numerous kinds of test plots to learn the optimum conditions for growing black locust trees, hardy trees that do well under less than ideal conditions.

"Black locust has been used very little as a commercial product, other than for farm fence posts, and the metal post has taken over much of that market in recent years," Carpenter said. "As a source of heat, however, the black locust does well."

Dr. Stan Carpenter, left, and research associate Bob Eigel, are researching wood fiber as a fuel source.

It grows rapidly, reaching as high as 10 feet in two years, and its potential Btu output is high."

After the root system has been established, crops can be harvested every few years. When a tree is cut, the stump is left to produce secondary growth that can be harvested in a few years. The regenerative factor gives wood fiber a unique advantage in relation to other fuel sources, such as coal and natural gas.

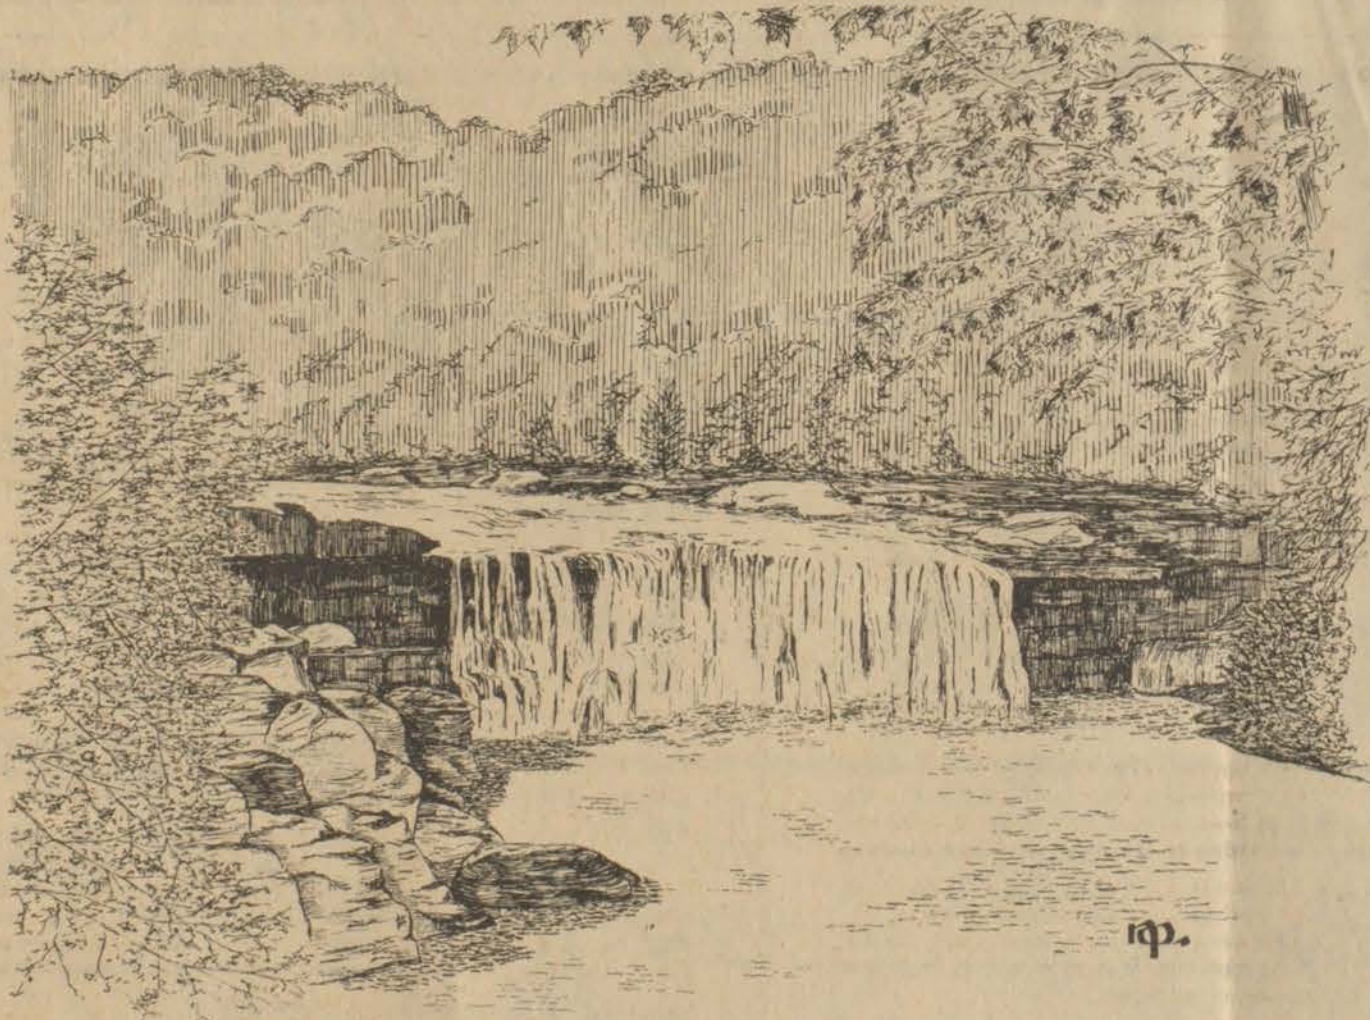

Wood harvested from the energy plantings would be sold as chips rather than wooden logs. Whole trees, seasoned or unseasoned, can be chipped into small particles by huge machines. The wood can be burned while still green if placed in especially adapted furnaces that remove the moisture content as a part of the burning process.

The green wood fiber is sometimes mixed with coal and burned as a fuel, Carpenter said. Experiments at coal-fired steam plants (for generating electricity) have shown that mixing wood fiber with coal helps to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions. (Under certain conditions, sulfur dioxide can seriously damage crops in fields near generating plants.)

Carpenter and Bob Eigel, a research associate, are supervising a team of graduate students in forestry who are taking test samples from 72 mining sites where black locust trees are now growing. They will determine the amount of dry weight in tons per acre that can be produced on strip mined land. Some sites will produce approximately 1.2 tons per acre annually, Carpenter said.

Samples of the tree trunk, leaves and branches are ground up and checked in a laboratory analysis for Btu potential. Soil samples will also be collected from each of the two sites, Mountain Drive Coal Co., near Middlesboro, and the Falcon Coal Co., near Jackson.

Two energy plantations will be established this fall at the mining sites.

Cumberland Falls

Whitley - McCreary Counties

In the rugged foothills near Corbin, where the Cumberland River cuts its way over a rocky course through the mountainous country, is Cumberland Falls.

The falls, 68 feet high and 125 feet broad, has an average flow of 3,600 cubic feet of water per second. Immediately behind the curtain of water is a recess in the rock wall. This makes it possible to go almost across the river through an arch formed of rock on one side and flashing water on the other.

Below the falls are many whirlpools and rapids in the river as it flows for seven miles through a boulder-strewn gorge, whose cliffs are 300 to 400 feet high.

A winding trail leads from Cumberland Falls half-a-mile down the river to Little Eagle Falls—small but picturesque. It is said that this spot was regarded as a sacred place by the Indians, who guarded it day and night and even fought a battle (the Indian Battle of Shiloh) in its defense.

A cliff walk is on the south side of the river, on a narrow ledge high above the water which winds around the shoulder of the hill.

The steep slopes and ravines of the area consist of a great variety of forest growth: hemlock, tulip, magnolia, oak, sweet gum, dogwood, yellow pine and large holly trees. Azalea, rhododendron, spicebush, Stewarta, blueberry, St. John's-wort and strawberry bush are among the many plants.

Perhaps the most unusual and famous feature of Cumberland Falls is the magnificent moonbow. In the full moon, a spectrum formed in the mist of the falls is more beautiful and visible than a rainbow. It is the only moonbow to be seen in the Western Hemisphere.

DuPont Lodge, named in honor of T. Coleman du Pont, stands on a ridge overlooking the Cumberland River, one mile from the falls. It is the lodge for the state park, which consists of 500 acres of virgin forest given to the State by Du Pont.

The 900,000-acre Daniel Boone National Forest surrounding Cumberland Falls State Resort Park, contains thousands of acres of timber and a variety of wild game including deer and black bear.

The Cumberland River was named by Thomas Walker in honor of the Duke of Cumberland, son of King George II. The forest was Cumberland National Forest until it was renamed in honor of Daniel Boone a few years ago.

Trojans Win Pre-Season Tourney

Tom Hunter (No. 33) muscles his way up for important points in Wheelwright's close win in the Pre-Season Tournament. (Photo by Jeff Damron)

By RUDY LITTLE
(Wheelwright Journalism Class)

Wheelwright won the Pre-Season Tournament 70 to 68 in a barn burner over Betsy Layne on December 2, at the Prestonsburg Field House. Wheelwright and Betsy Layne have played many great games and this was no exception. Wheelwright led during the last three quarters of the game and at one point had an 11 point lead. Because of Wheelwright trouble going inside, pressure was put on the guards.

Junior guard Monroe Jones picked up 29 points in a five game. Tommy Hunter scored 11 points; Strawn Berger 8; Lanny Hall, 5; Danny Smith and Henry Isaac had 2 points, and contributed a great deal to defense. The only two seniors that played for the Trojans in this game were Lanny Hall, a 5' 11", 165 lb. guard and Tommy Hunter, a 6' 4", 230 lb. center.

R. Ferrell of Betsy Layne scored 27 points; R. Akers, 14; D. Layne, 12; D. Newsome, 5; and M. Williams, 4.

During the first half there was little scoring with each team taking their time trying to find a weakness in the other team's defense. The Trojans couldn't get to the net for the easy inside shots. At half time, Wheelwright led 29 to 25.

The turning point of the game occurred in the third quarter. The Trojans got the ball at half court and Jones completed a fantastic jump shot. Wheelwright led at the end of the third quarter 47 to 42.

The fourth quarter was the most exciting of the game. With 4:10 left in the game, the Trojans had their highest lead with 60 to 49. But this lead was short-lived because with 1:19 left, the Trojans' lead was diminished, 65 to 63. At :07 Tommy Hunter was fouled and Wheelwright won 70 to 68 over Betsy Layne in a heart-breaker.

Four of the Wheelwright Trojans made the All-Tournament Team: Lanny Hall (Sr.), Monroe Jones (Jr.), Tony Hall (Jr.), and Strawn Berger (Jr.), who also won the free-throw trophy. Betsy Layne had two on the All-Tournament Team: R. Akers and R. Ferrell. Prestonsburg won the Sportsmanship award. The Cheerleading trophy was given to Prestonsburg, and Allen Central was runner up.

Georgia Honey Okeh Says State Laboratory

The Kentucky Department for Human Resources announced today that extensive sampling and laboratory testing of honey packed by J.W. Parrish of Homerville, Ga., has revealed that the product is in compliance with Kentucky's Food, Drug & Cosmetic Act and does not contain corn syrup as was previously suspected.

In October, one small lot of the honey was found to contain extraneous matter. That lot was removed from the market and later disposed of.

Numerous samples were collected in November by the department's food control branch and the federal Food & Drug Administration and were sent to an out-of-state laboratory used by the FDA and other states for confirmatory testing.

John Draper, food control branch manager, said today that all J. W. Parrish honey being withheld from the markets in Kentucky is being released for sale. Letters authorizing the release will be sent today to Kentucky wholesalers holding the honey, he said.

State Climate Study Next

It has been said "If you don't like the Kentucky weather where you are, travel 50 miles and it will change."

This diversification of climate in the Commonwealth causes problems for industry, construction and agriculture and makes disaster and energy planning difficult.

To help resolve these problems the Department for Local Government has secured a grant for Western Kentucky University to provide a detailed climate study for each of the 15 Area Development Districts.

Information will be assembled on a regional basis with special data provided where Area Development Districts have identified specific needs.

Farmers will be able to ascertain growing seasons on a regional basis, and contractors will be able to plan working days based on weather data.

Portions of the study dealing with heating and cooling degree days will help in planning natural gas allocations, if needed, and gas and electrical usage. This portion of the study is based on the normal temperature plus the degrees that must be added or subtracted to bring a residence to 68 degrees or an industry to its necessary temperatures for operation.

Industries have requested climate studies for the various areas of the state, not only from an energy viewpoint, but often from a humidity anticipation that might affect certain types of production.

Western's Department of Geography and Geology, under the direction of state climatologist Glen Conner, will be utilizing the past 20 years of weather station data in preparing the specific studies for each Area Development District.

Funds were provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Data will also be utilized by the Kentucky Department of Housing, Buildings and Construction in planning its insulation standards for Kentucky's new building code.

Precipitation data, including snow statistics, can be utilized by State Disaster and Emergency Services in planning and will help local governments in anticipating problems.

Anticipating exactly what the weather will do is not yet possible, but this overview of climate conditions should provide help for Kentuckians in coping with the elements.

Miss Ratliff-Mr. O'Gorman Wed

The marriage of Miss Valerie Joyce Ratliff to Mr. John Farrell O'Gorman was solemnized in Ypsilanti, Michigan at the First Freewill Baptist Church, Saturday, November 18, at noon, by the Rev. Curtis Beculhimer.

The traditional wedding march and Hawaiian wedding music prelude were presented by Mrs. Dorothy Owens at the organ, and Mrs. Marie Manwiller who sang "Wedding Song".

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. Wells, of Ypsilanti, Michigan, formerly of Prestonsburg, and the granddaughter of Cecelia, of St. Mary's, Ohio, formerly of Martin.

Mr. O'Gorman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Clark, of Honolulu, Hawaii.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white silk and Chantilly lace with train and long sleeves of Chantilly lace. Her lace veil was waist length and the bridal bouquet was of daisies and baby's breath.

Miss Melanie C. Ratliff, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length pleated forest green dress and carried a bouquet of small yellow carnations.

Miss Jennifer Simmons, bridesmaid wore a floor-length pleated yellow dress and carried a bouquet of small green carnations.

Acting as best man was Mr. Carl Mahoney, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, and ushers were Mr. F. Blake Ratliff, Jr., brother of the bride, of Southgate, Michigan and Mr. Ralph Daggs.

The guest book was supervised by Mrs. Lynette Viers and the carpet was rolled out for the bride by her grandfather. Hostesses for the church reception were Mrs. Cleo Deck, Miss Karen Daggs and Mrs. Becky Sims. The three-tiered wedding cake was decorated with yellow roses, adorned with bride and groom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Wells chose an off-white floor-length dress and wore a white and green double carnation corsage.

Mrs. Clark, mother of the groom, chose a blue floor-length dress and wore a white and blue double carnation corsage.

After a wedding trip to New York City, the couple is residing at 2680 International Drive, Ypsilanti, Michigan.

Students To Present 15th Century Play

A Christmas play dating from the 15th century, titled "The Second Shepherds Play," will be presented by Alice Lloyd College at 2:30 p.m. Saturday and again at 7:30 p.m. Sunday (Dec. 10) in Cushing Hall on the ALC campus. Both performances are free and Sunday's performance includes a program of Christmas music by "The Voices of Appalachia," the ALC choir.

The play is directed by Terry Cornett, college drama instructor, who says "the play is the second about shepherds in the Wakefield Cycle, a group of English plays from the 1400's. It is typical of both secular and religious dramas from the medieval period. It is boisterous and comic, while at the same time noble and high minded."

The language of the production has been somewhat modernized for the sake of clarity.

Students working on the play include Timothy A. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Moore, of Garrett.

NOTICE

Legal Notice to families who lived in public housing projects operated by the Prestonsburg Housing Authority or lived in public housing projects in any other city between March 16, 1971 - September 26, 1975.

If you rented a house or apartment from the Prestonsburg Housing Authority or any other Public Housing Agency (PHA) during the period between March 16, 1971, and September 26, 1975, you may be eligible to file a claim for a refund of part of your rent during that period if:

1. The wife or husband of the head of the household was present and dependent upon the head of the household for support and/or;

2. A dependent member of your family household was employed.

If you believe your family falls within one of the categories described above, you may wish to continue reading this Notice in order to determine how and under what circumstances you may file a claim.

On July 7, 1978, the District Court of the District of Columbia entered a Stipulated Order providing that the definition of family income for purposes of computing maximum rentals for public housing, as contained in a HUD Circular, which excluded spouses from the $300 deduction for each dependent and excluded dependents from the $300 deduction for each secondary wage earner, was invalid and violated the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended. The effect of this determination is that certain families who lived in public housing during the period from March 16, 1971 to September 26, 1975, may have been charged too much rent. Therefore, the District Court ordered HUD to establish a one million dollar fund for the payment of claims which current or former tenants of public housing may submit for a refund of any overpayments.

The District Court's Stipulated Order provides that, if valid claims exceed one million dollars, HUD has the option of having the Order dissolved in which case NTO and HUD may negotiate a modified settlement or proceed with further litigation. Thus, claimants should realize that the submittal of a claim determined valid by a PHA may result in full, partial, or no payment, depending on the total amount of valid claims submitted to HUD, or the final outcome of any further litigation. Any person wishing to receive a copy of the Stipulated Order or a claim form may do so by making their request known to a local PHA.

Individuals wishing to submit a claim must fill in the claim form made a part of this Notice and must submit it to the Public Housing Agency's address indicated on the claim form, or such other appropriate Public Housing Agency if different from the address indicated, within 120 days from Dec. 6, 1978. No claims will be accepted after the end of the 120 day period, April 5, 1979.

Information provided by the claimant on the claim form must be specific as to the time period between March 16, 1971, and September 26, 1975, for which the wife or husband of the head of the household was present and was a dependent and/or a dependent in the household was employed.
