

Judge Sets Jury 4 Specific Tasks

Conley Suggests Grand Jury Quiz Election Board

When Circuit Judge Hollie Conley reconvened the grand jury Monday morning, he set the jurors specific tasks which may run into more than the usual three days of work.

He pointed to one homicide, the slaying of Larry O. Johnson, near here recently, and the skull fracture death of Orville Clifton, of Prestonsburg. Closing of the Eagles Club, outside which Clifton was arrested, was suggested. Testimony relating to the death of Johnson was heard Monday, and it was hinted that an accomplice may be named.

He asked that the county election commissioners be called before the grand jury to explain, if possible, why at some polling places at the May primary too many election officers were present, at others not enough and at still others officers appeared who were not duly appointed.

Commonwealth's Attorney J.R. Allen later commented that the jury will certainly honor the judge's request and will interrogate the commissioners.

Judge Conley also called for inspection by the grand jury of public buildings and records, including those of the county, incorporated towns and the county school system. Questioning of some school employees about the explosion which demolished the Prestonsburg High School kitchen was begun Monday.

The judge then turned to a discussion of the integrity of the jury system, pointing to two recent occasions when jurors were spoken to, one allegedly threatened, by persons interested in cases at trial. The reported threat to one juror, he noted, resulted in four days of time wasted in preparing for the trial of a murder case. Judge Conley suggested that if the jury cannot make an indictment, the county attorney should go to district court. Strangely enough, he said later, the statute covering this offense classes it only a misdemeanor.

"This is a silly law that I intend to ask the next legislature to change," Judge Conley said recently.

He also suggested to the grand jury that it might discuss with the fiscal court the solid waste situation in the county and see if it might contribute helpful input.

The same grand jury that was empaneled in January continues to serve, with James Bailey its foreman.

Mental Patients Have Friend In Onetime Soviet Prisoner

If it is now part of the conventional wisdom that, other things being equal, mental patients generally do better outside rather than within institutions, one man responsible for the change is Dr. Jerzy Wysocki.

For the past 25 years a psychiatrist at Eastern State Hospital in Lexington, Wysocki was one of the first to bring mental health care to eastern Kentucky. "We always had patients from the eastern counties," he said recently, "whom we would treat and send home, only to have them hospitalized again in six weeks."

What was needed, Wysocki saw, was a local network of mental health workers who could provide patients with the support they needed in their own communities—support for them on their return home from Eastern State, support that might even obviate the need for hospitalization in the first place.

This Town...That World

It was plumb discouraging around these premises, Monday afternoon. The place was so hot that the cats left.

But rest yourself outside after sundown and as dusk gathers listen to the sounds of fall. Then think ahead a matter of less than 90 days and you may begin to cool off a degree or so.

CONFESSORIAL

Orville Clifton, who died the other day, has attained an importance in death that he never approached in life. A harmless little man, he made no great splash. It is not likely that he had any enemies, but neither had he a wide circle of friends. Orville rode his bicycle, did his work, spoke when spoken to, generally behaved himself. How he lived, where he stayed, how he fared concerned few of us.

His death has made him more important. His utter aloneness touched the hearts of those who had known and merely tolerated him over the years. Many of us contributed to his funeral expenses. It may have been that some of us were trying to expiate for our failure to be more to him while he was alive and really needed us.

It is good that we paid a little tribute of a sort to Orville after he died. But it would have been so much better, and would have meant something to him, if we had cared a little more while he was with us.

While we were celebrating the tenth anniversary of the Moon Shot which

Aerial Survey Mounted To Aid In Oak Disease Investigation

Oak trees are dying in eastern Kentucky, and the Kentucky Division of Forestry personnel does not know why. "For the past few years," forest pest control specialist Richard Dorset said last week, "there has been a noticeable increase in dead and dying trees in this part of Kentucky." The usual causes of oak death—oak wilt, shoestring root rot, and soil disturbance due to stripmining—are known to be at work. But these, according to Dorset, do not account for the recent upswing in oak mortality.

Whatever the cause, it affects red and white oak species equally, killing some trees in as little as a year or two. One theory is that the ill-fated trees have been weakened by adverse weather conditions, leaving them vulnerable to attack by secondary pests.

To get a better idea of the scope of the problem, forestry personnel conducted an aerial survey of more than 681,000 acres here recently, covering about a quarter of Floyd, Martin, Magoffin and Johnson counties. The aerial survey is being followed by a ground check of the worst-affected areas, with a view to calculating the timber loss, identifying its causes if possible, and making appropriate forest management recommendations.

Grand Jury Receives School Blast Report

An engineer's report on the cause of the Prestonsburg High School kitchen explosion last week and conditions existing thereafter suggest that the steel framing supporting the adjoining cafeteria floor slab and the remainder of the school structure are suspect because of possible corrosion.

But Supt. of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr. said Tuesday that the school board's architect, Marvin Crider & Associates, has already been directed to inspect the entire structure and to direct Barco, contractor on restoration of the kitchen, to do any work necessary to make the building structurally sound.

The engineer's report was subpoenaed and, together with the state fire marshal's report, will go into the grand jury record. The jury was investigating the blast this week, and Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen said the testimony heard, together with reports made, will be a matter of record for public information.

J. Roger Craddock, senior project engineer for the Versitech Corp., which studied the blast and made its report to the Big Sandy Claims Service, wrote in his summary of findings that the gas explosion at the high school was accidental and resulted from corrosion of unprotected pipe. The corrosion resulted, he said, from flooding of the pipes and the moisture-laden atmosphere in the crawl space beneath the kitchen floor where the gas line was located.

The suspicion of structural weakness elsewhere in the school building was suggested in these two paragraphs of the report:

"Structural damage was limited to the exterior walls of the cafeteria in the proximity of the kitchen area. The kitchen area, including floor slab and structural bar joints, was destroyed.

"The remaining structural integrity of the steel framing supporting the first floor slab of the cafeteria and probably the rest of the school structure is suspect, due to corrosion attack on the structural members. This structural system should be checked prior to the continued use of the system."

Supt. Grigsby said the architect's instructions are to inspect the structure closely and to do whatever is necessary if

Schools To Open Monday Morning

Upwards of 10,000 Floyd county youngsters will return to the classroom next Monday morning in an early school opening designed to offset later interruptions by wintry weather.

Actually, the new school term will begin Friday, this week, but only principals and teachers are to be at school that day for a time of preparation. State law requires both the opening and closing dates of the term be attended only by the school staff, not by pupils.

The term apparently is set to open with no unusual problems, except Prestonsburg High School where the kitchen and cafeteria are not expected to be in operation until sometime in September.

Blanche Dingus, lunchroom supervisor, provided bag lunches for students after the kitchen blast last May, and the same procedure is expected to be followed till the facility is in operation.

Deficit Reduced, Decision Voted After the Fact

In an after-the-fact decision the state Board of Education last Wednesday approved an emergency declaration which permitted the Floyd county school system to end its 1978-'79 fiscal year legally as of July 31, although it ended the year $208,452.96 in the red.

The emergency status was granted after it was shown that the county school system had reduced its deficit during the last fiscal year by $455,917.92—"better than we pledged ourselves to do and better than we anticipated," said Supt. of Schools E. P. Grigsby, Jr.

Grigsby said Dr. Graham, state superintendent of public instruction, and state board members were "happy about the improved situation."

"And, of course, we are," he added. "I acknowledge the help of all who work with us in getting the debt reduced," he added.

State law prohibits a school district from operating with a deficit, unless the state board declares an emergency. Although the emergency status is usually requested during the fiscal year in which the deficit is expected, an opinion from the attorney general's office held that in the Floyd county situation the state board could grant the declaration after the fact.

Grigsby repeated his claim that the Floyd school system has been running in

Martin Meeting Held To Discuss Trash Problems

Two dozen residents who crowded into Martin's city hall last Thursday had an opportunity to vent their frustration at their trash collection company, and won at least one concession from its owners, but otherwise found little reason to hope for any immediate improvement in the situation.

In response to a long litany of complaints about uncollected trash and the resulting health hazards, Roy Ratliff, part-owner and manager of Martin Sanitation Co., listed some of the reasons for the company's problems as being employees, the Floyd fiscal court, and the U.S. welfare system.

It was not possible to keep his employees, Ratliff explained, when they could draw more in welfare than he was able to pay them in wages. The problem will not be solved, he added, "until the country gets rid of welfare and food stamps."

Ratliff said Floyd county officials refuse to cooperate with private trash collectors. "They won't make the system mandatory. They won't raise our fees," he said, adding, "I've been to three meetings of the (Solid Waste) Task Force, and the results have been nil."

Housing Body Votes To Buy Wheelwright

Wheelwright's long dream of renewal took on a new air of reality last week, when the Kentucky Housing Corporation (KHC) agreed to buy the town from Mountain Investments, Inc., for $1,275,000.

The money will buy the houses, commercial buildings, vacant lots and utility systems—much of the property in considerable disrepair—held by the Florida-based investment firm since its purchase of Wheelwright from Island Creek Coal Co., 12 years ago.

In addition, $3 million in grants for rehabilitating the property is anticipated over the next three years from the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Of that sum, $752,000 is expected to be available this year, mostly for the rehabilitation of homes in Branham Hollow and the construction of a playground in Hall Hollow.

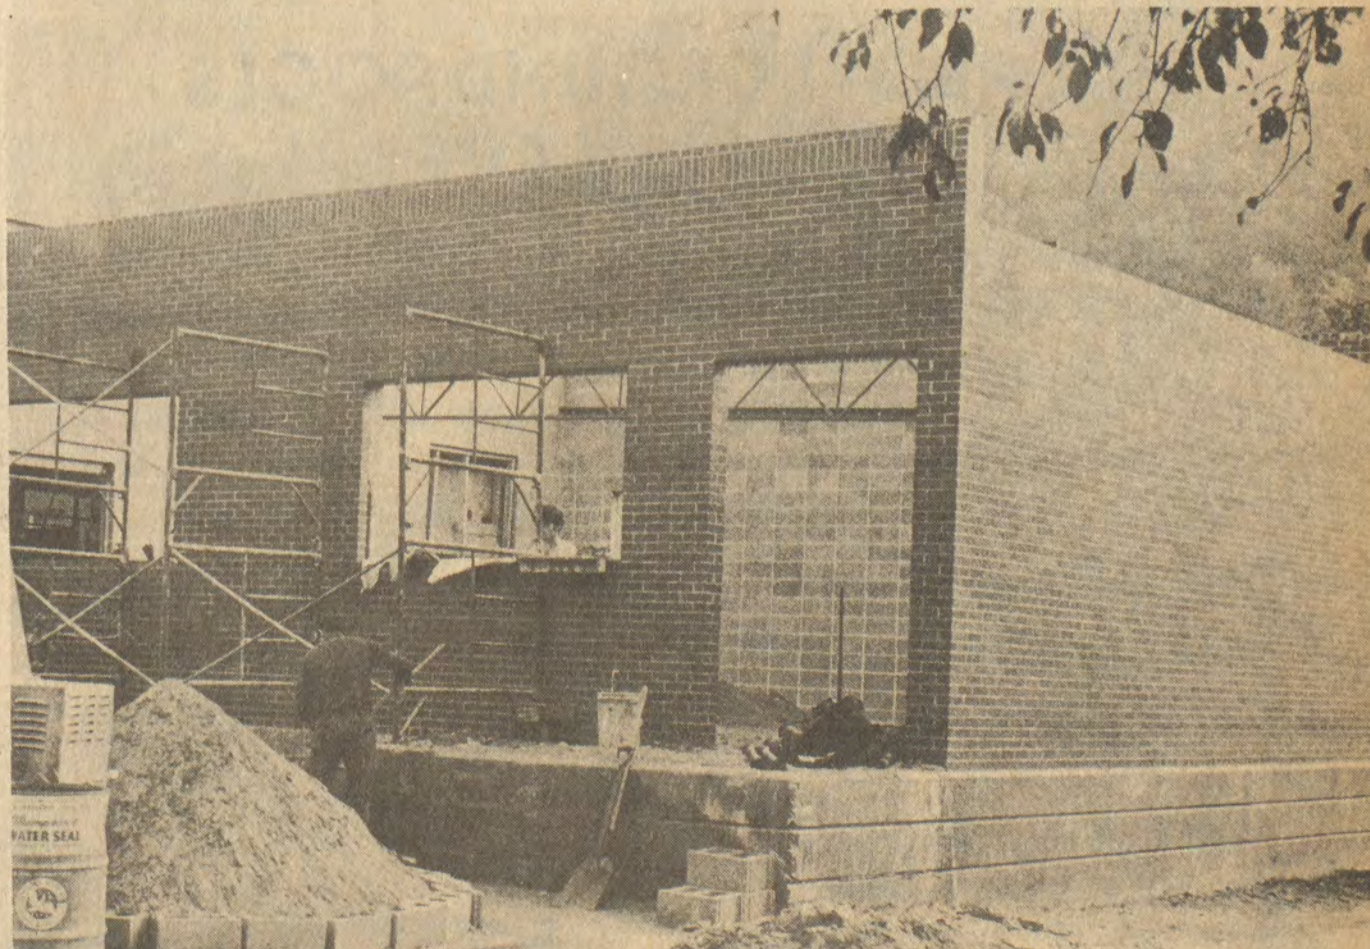

Restored homes are to be offered for sale at low cost to the 79 families presently renting them. The town's approximately 120 vacant lots will be sold to local residents or developers for new home construction. The commercial buildings will be sold to businesses or developers. The city's utilities, gas, water and sewage lines are to be restored and made over to the city Board of Trustees for a nominal fee.

Mountain Investments' management of the town has come in for increasing criticism in recent years. In particular, the $80,000 to $90,000 taken annually by the firm in utility fees is said to have done nothing to halt the rapid deterioration of the town's utilities.

The $1.275 million purchase price falls considerably below the $2 million reportedly sought by Mountain Investments, a figure that KHC negotiators are said to have characterized once as a "get rich quick" scheme. After paying off existing debts, including $23,000 in city taxes and $7000 in county taxes, the firm stands to clear about $35,000 on the deal, according to the reported estimate of one KHC official.

Anna Jean Tackett, coordinator of the Floyd Urban Renewal and Community Development Agency, which will be responsible for administering the $3 million in HUD funds, said this week that cooperation among various government agencies was the key to the successful negotiation of the Wheelwright purchase. Ella Jane Hall, chairwoman of the Wheelwright Board of Trustees, had done "a fabulous job" during the negotiations, she said.

WITH THE EXTERIOR WALLS IN PLACE, workmen continue this week to rebuild Prestonsburg High School kitchen, destroyed by a blast earlier this year. The work is expected to be completed in September.

Governor Promises Help For Jesse Stewart Project

Gov. Julian Carroll has promised $25,000 in state funds to be made available to the Kentucky Nature Preserves Commission for the Jesse Stewart matching funds project. The commission plans to submit the state grant for matching federal funds by August 10.

Announcement of the grant was made July 27 at the meeting of the board of directors of the Jesse Stewart Foundation at Morehead State University.

Kentucky author, educator and conservationist Stuart is donating half of his 1,000-acre Greenup county estate to the Commonwealth to be used as a nature preserve. A cultural, recreational and educational center also is proposed on the estate.

To Wed August 11

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Newsome, of Teaberry, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Karen, to Keith Duane Henry, grandson of Mrs. Jim Henry, of West Liberty.

The wedding will be solemnized at the First Presbyterian Church in Prestonsburg at 2 p.m., Saturday, August 11. The gracious custom of open church will be observed.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The regularly scheduled meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education has been re-scheduled for Wednesday, August 8, at 7 p.m. at the Floyd County Board of Education building, Prestonsburg, Ky.

Alien Ownership of Ky. Land Concerns New Subcommittee

A new subcommittee on Foreign Acquisition of Kentucky Farmland last Thursday began its study of whether state statutes should be passed limiting alien ownership.

Since passage of the 1978 federal Foreign Investment Disclosure Act, there have been 3,400 acres in Kentucky transferred to foreign ownership, according to a preliminary report presented by Tom Harris, state Department of Agriculture commissioner. Harris said that report was received recently from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Harris said a state disclosure law would be useful but care should be taken that all "loopholes" are closed. Disclosure is not disclosure unless information is useful in identifying the actual people involved, he explained. Two difficulties encountered are people having to travel to Frankfort for information, and companies owned by a string of companies, he said.

The eleven Kentucky counties cited in the Talmadge report were:

Bourbon, 1,117 acres to a U.S. corp. with French investor; Boyle, 258 acres, two transfers to the Church of Christ Development Co., Alberta, Canada; Breckinridge, one transfer to Australian family for residence; Grant, 150 acres, to Netherlands family for residence; Jefferson, 400 acres, two transfers to foreign nationals living in Kentucky; LaRue, 81 acres, one transfer to foreign buyer; Logan, one transfer to British resident for residence; Oldham, 320 acres to Canadian buyer; Shelby, 600 acres, two transfers to Rhodesian buyer; Simpson, 40 acres to British owned corporation, and Casey, 367 acres, two transfers to foreign buyers.

Jack Scott, director of the division of marketing development, state Department of Commerce, said Kentucky is working with several foreign companies. The state is looking for companies which want to come to Kentucky with their capital, expertise, and technology, said Scott.

"These companies are primarily family-owned companies who would like to bring a part of the operations to this country on a permanent basis. They would make good citizens and good employers for our workers. One successful example of this has been the purchase of a cheese company in Leitchfield," said Scott.

Ted Sauer, assistant director of the Commerce division of international trade, said there are approximately 25 manufacturing companies in Kentucky with foreign interests. The term, "foreign interests," would include U.S. companies with foreign investors. These companies represent $616 million invested in Kentucky, said Sauer.

The commerce department would be "supportive" of obtaining more information about foreign interests, said Sauer, but the department feels a federal effort would be more successful than a state effort.

George Marsh, legislative representative with the Kentucky National Farmers Organization, said alien buyers have inflated farmland prices out of reach of some young farmers.

Marsh said there is concern all over the nation about the 700 disclosures of foreign investments in the United States. He said nine states have passed strict laws discouraging foreign investment and 25 states have some law on the books concerning this issue.

Publication Says Highway Funding at Critical Level

Kentucky highway funding has reached a critical level, and the impact is already being felt, according to the current issue of Transportation News.

During the next two years some 87 projects will not advance to construction because the state will not have $467 million to meet project costs. The projects are throughout the state. They include 25 primary; 8 secondary; 24 urban, and 30 Appalachia projects.

Some $3 billion in additional revenue—an average of $300 million per year—is needed during the next decade to meet identified needs and simply maintain the current system that carries 92 percent of the state's traffic volume.

The problem is that revenue growth is simply not keeping pace with highway needs. Highway revenue will reach $400 million by 1980 but the state will need more than $200 million in additional revenue just to continue present levels of service and maintenance and continue meeting routine construction needs.

Resurfacing—already at a bare minimum and leaving many highways in danger of damage to base and loss of initial investment—will begin to drop in 1981 and be cut by one-half by 1984. Resurfacing by 1988 will be completely impossible.

The Kentucky Department of Transportation projects that the road fund will increase by only about two to three percent annually over the period from 1978-90. For the period 1973-78 the average annual rate of growth in the Road Fund was 7 percent. The reason for the slowdown are increasing gasoline prices, which will result in less vehicle usage, and better vehicle gas mileage.

The road fund for the fiscal year ended in June was down $7.3 million from the estimate by the Kentucky Department of Revenue. The fuel tax shortfall was $2.1 million and the vehicle usage shortfall was $5.2 million.

Debt service accounts for more than one-fifth of Kentucky's Road Fund expenditures, the publication adds.

This year, payments on interest and principal for the state's bonded indebtedness for highways include $15.6 million for resource recovery roads, $18.3 million for general obligation bonds, and $55.9 million for toll roads (revised from $54.5 million when the budget was prepared).

A portion of the toll road indebtedness is offset by tolls. Some $17.5 million in toll collections is expected this year. Toll road maintenance and administration is budgeted at $9.7 million, so the net deficit for the toll roads is just over $48 million.

Other major expense categories of the road fund are maintenance, $99.9 million (24 percent of the road fund) revenue sharing with cities and counties, $78.8 million (19 percent); state funds to match federal funds, $56.9 million (14 percent); non-federal aid projects, $46.9 million (12 percent); and administration and overhead, $38.8 million (9 percent).

Kentucky's transportation fund is composed primarily of revenue collected from highway users on the state and national levels. It also includes general fund dollars and funds from the sale of revenue bonds.

The largest single revenue source on both the state and national level is the tax on motor vehicle fuel—presently, 9 cents per gallon, state and 4 cents, federal. (Trucks with three axles or more that are registered to operate on Kentucky highways are required by statute to pay the equivalent of 11 cents per gallon state tax for fuel they use on Kentucky highways.)

The next largest source of state revenue for the fund is the vehicle usage tax—the sales tax paid on new and used vehicles.

General fund dollars that are included in the transportation fund are appropriated by the General Assembly and for the current year include $13 million for resource recovery roads, $5.9 million for air, public, rail, and water transportation, and $4 million for the operation of the Bureau of Motor Vehicle Regulation. Other than the resource recovery road appropriation, no other general fund monies go directly for highways.

A portion of Kentucky's coal severance tax is dedicated to retiring the $250 million resource recovery road bond issue. This year, as noted, the bonds will require $15.6 million of severance tax revenue. With the sale of all the bonds, the requirement next year will be approximately $33 million.

(TRANSPORTATION NEWS is published by Kentuckians for Better Transportation, a private, non-profit association dedicated to providing better transportation in the state.)

KET's 'LIVES' TO PROFILE HEART TRANSPLANT PIONEER

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the first man ever to transplant a human heart, feels that the experience of holding a live, beating heart in his hands has given him a new perspective of life and an altered perception of death.

"Dr. Christiaan Barnard: A Free Horse," the second segment of the "Lives" documentary series on KET, presents a portrait of the man who not only performed, but conceived of, the world's first heart transplant as a means of extending life and improving its quality. "Lives" airs Monday, August 20 at 8 p.m. with a repeat Sunday, August 26 at 7 p.m. on KET, The Kentucky Network.

The world's foremost pioneer in the field of heart surgery, Barnard was born in Beaufort West, South Africa, in 1922. His father was a preacher who taught him love and humility. His mother, a stern woman, taught him that love alone will not bring success. The influence of this combination, says Barnard, helped him to achieve the professional accomplishments he enjoys today.

Barnard was drawn to the practice of medicine by the antiseptic smells of the hospital that drew his father from near death back to vibrant life, and by the slow, tortured death of a brother with heart disease.

As a student, Barnard's greatest fear was that of failure. He studied extremely hard during his doctoral education and later did his internship in gynecology. Gynecology did not appeal to him, however, because of the disfigurative surgery sometimes involved.

Heart surgery showed him how he could provide an improved quality of life, and he pursued this interest vigorously at the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis where he completed the six-year course of study in two years.

Barnard returned to South Africa, taking with him a heart-lung machine. He soon made headlines by transplanting a human heart in Louis Washkansky's chest.

With "Lives" host Robert MacNeil, Barnard discusses his experiences and the controversies still confounding his peers: active and passive mercy-killing, disfigurative surgery and the implications of professional misjudgment.

Dr. Barnard's personal philosophy evolved from his determination to preserve the dignity of life. Today, he openly condemns his colleagues who enjoy removing parts of the body, thereby diminishing the quality of a patient's life.

Has First Birthday

Jan Moore, of Paintsville, was hostess for the first birthday party of her cousin Janice Lynn Flannery, daughter of Dorlas and William Flannery, of Cliff. Cousins and friends present to help celebrate the baby's birthday included Brenda, Jim and Jeff Conley, Jerry McBrayer and Anthony Castle, Tammy Lafferty, and her maternal grandmother, Edith Lawson. Janice Lynn received a special gift from her sister, Heather. Ann, Allen and Ralph Davis, Janice, Sheila and Jennifer Henson brought gifts, although unable to attend the party.

Miss Gearheart Named Arthritis Drive Head

Miss Burieta Gearheart, of Prestonsburg, has been named 1979 Arthritis Campaign chairman for Floyd county. The appointment was made by the Executive Committee of The Arthritis Foundation. The state campaign is scheduled for the month of September, with a goal of $271,300.

The campaign in this county will have the support of Mrs. Barbara Heinze, publicity chairman, Highland Ave., Prestonsburg; Mrs. Jerry Lafferty, chairman for Allen; Mrs. Ganel Clark, chairman for Betsy Layne; Miss Ruby Akers, chairman for Drift-McDowell; Mrs. Bonnie L. Walters, chairman for Emma; Mrs. Jerry Banks, chairman for Maytown, Eastern, Langley and Hueysville; Mrs. Eulene Ratliff, chairman for Martin, and the Allen, Drift and Maytown Woman's Club.

TO HEAD LANCER BIKE-A-THON

Wm. Stephens has accepted the chairmanship of the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital Bike-A-Thon in Lancer, to raise funds to support the hospital, according to William J. Kirwen, director of development at the internationally recognized hospital.

The funds raised in the Bike-A-Thons this fall will assure the continuation of the life-giving work at the hospital.

Mayo Students Win In Skill Olympics

During the week of July 23-27 students of the Kentucky VICA Association participated in the United States Skill Olympics that were conducted in the World Congress Center in Atlanta Georgia. The Olympics were sponsored by National VICA (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) which is the organization for vocational students enrolled in trade, industrial, technical, and health occupations. More than 4,500 students from all over America attended the five-day event to compete for occupational and leadership honors.

State winners in occupations and leadership areas completed for national honors.

Eastern Kentuckians who gained national recognition included Jim Conley, Rita Kidd, Doug Belcher, John Burchett, Helen Tackett, Debbie Scott, Steve Pruitt from Paintsville (Mayo) in opening and closing ceremonies, Certificate of Accomplishment; Elaine Gibson from Paintsville (Mayo) in practical nursing, Certificate of Honor.

DIETETICS TRAINING—Phyllis Adams, Morehead State University senior from Salyersville, is spending 15 weeks this summer getting on-the-job training in dietetics at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Weinberg Says, "Yes," Ingram, "No" . . .

State Should Be Responsible For Work on County Roads

(From Transportation News)
Total road repair in Kentucky will cost billions of dollars and millions of man hours. Report after report shows the extent of work needed, not only on the major highways, but also on the country roads and city streets. Everyone from the KyDOT officials to the magistrates will agree on that.

Not everyone agrees, however, on who should do this work. Presently there are state maintained roads and county and city maintained roads and streets. The state aids most counties in their road repair through the "co-operative maintenance" program.

In all, 92 counties are in the cooperative maintenance program. In the program, the county has its own foreman and workmen and county road-aid money is spent by KyDOT at the county's choice to purchase material, rent equipment, or let contracts. KyDOT's responsibility is limited to general oversight, ensuring legality, and management of paperwork.

Several states in the U.S. have changed to that system, turning total maintenance and funding over to the state. Darrell Manning, past president of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials and director of Idaho's transportation department, said of the full-state-service system: "There would be some efficiencies in having a full-service system, but there would also be political repercussions." It would become more difficult, Manning suggested, to get low-service roads paved and maintained.

There are others who claim the system would result in the dispersion of tax revenue, or too much being spent on low-service roads to the detriment of high-traffic volume areas.

Bill Weinberg, KBT Trustee and state representative for the 92nd District, believes strongly that the good points of the full-service system outweigh the bad. According to Weinberg, one agency should have responsibility for the roads. "The present cooperative maintenance program between county and state," Weinberg says, "does not work" in the eastern Kentucky counties with which he is the most familiar.

According to Weinberg, "The average citizen cannot determine who is accountable. Even a state legislator has to go through a lot of red tape and hassle to find out."

Efficient use of funds is one of Weinberg's main reasons for a full-service system. "There would be savings of funds in that there would be one garage, one level of management, and one set of equipment," he says. Duplication adds to the abuse and waste, according to Weinberg.

It is important in this full-service plan, Weinberg says, to allow those counties wanting to maintain their own roads to have the alternative, through local option, to do so. Counties opting to maintain their own roads would keep the funds presently being filtered back to the state fund. This would allow for a more efficient use of funds by the counties maintaining their own roads.

Total state control is not the answer to efficient funding, according to Otto Ingram, KyDOT's deputy director of rural roads. "A tremendous expense would be incurred immediately," Ingram said, "if the state takes over all roads." He said these expenses include additional equipment, housing for that equipment, and employees.

Ingram, a former judge of Menifee County, strongly opposes a full-state-service system. He said the state cannot pay the wages that the county government can pay, nor can they (the state) buy materials at the same price. County officials, according to Ingram, can buy from local suppliers for less because the suppliers know the local officials and are interested in helping to improve their own communities.

"The government closest to the people should be able to do the best job," said Ingram.

Presently there are four states with a full service system: West Virginia, North Carolina, Texas and Pennsylvania. All but two counties in Virginia are under the full service system.

Development Council Advises Legislation For Revenue Bonds

The Rural Development Council recommended legislation to permit local governments to issue industrial revenue bonds for agriculture and tourist-related projects at a meeting last Thursday.

The council, which is attached to the Governor's Economic Development Commission (EDC), also recommended legislation to speed up the collection of delinquent property taxes, to increase the level of state aid to local governments to compensate for inflation and to continue state funding for rural and secondary roads at the present level.

The council completed its proposals for legislative actions to promote the economic growth of rural areas at today's session. The recommendations will be submitted to the EDC and Gov. Julian Carroll for consideration as a legislative package to be presented to the 1980 General Assembly.

In other action, the council declined to propose legislation permitting local governments to establish pooled insurance trusts but recommended that Carroll present the issue to the Legislative Research Commission for study and possible legislation.

The council also asked that a statewide conference be held to look at problems relating to water and sewer systems because of their importance in economic development.

Members of the state Development Cabinet's Office of Developmental Planning, which provides staff support to the council, said the Utility Regulatory Commission is working out details for such a conference, but that no date has been set.

The council approved a recommendation from Gilbert Sears of Paducah that the appropriate agencies in state government look at the commuting situation throughout Kentucky and devise or expand mass transit and other programs to relieve the burden on commuters.

Sears, a University of Kentucky agriculture extension specialist, said approximately 40 percent of the state's workers commute outside their home counties. The cost and availability of fuel should be considered both in transportation planning and economic development strategy, he said.

Floyd 4-H Members Named Champs

Phillip Bush won the overall senior championship making a clean sweep of the trophies given in the senior division with first place awarded him in seed identification, insects, diseases and vegetable placing. He is the 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Fred Bush, of Harold, and is a member of the Betsy Layne 4-H Club.

Rondal Martin won second place in the junior division, and was the winner of the insect division of the contest. He is the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chalmer Martin, of Langley, and is a member of the Garrett 4-H Club.

Todd O'Brien was fourth overall in the senior division and was third in insect identification and fourth in disease identification.

Mike Bentley was seventh overall in the senior division and fourth in both vegetable placing and seed identification.

Troy Samons finished eighth in the junior division and was third in disease and fourth in insect identification.

Kentucky Takes Extra Time On Surface Mine Program

Kentucky has decided to take advantage of a seven-month filing date extension ordered by a federal judge and did not file its actual submission of proposed surface mining regulations and permanent program last Friday, as originally planned.

Secretary Frank Harscher, of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, said the filing date extension will give Kentucky valuable time to secure additional public comments on the proposed regulations and the program plan; meet with representatives of industry, labor, environmental groups and consumers of coal; and to make substantial, additional changes in the state's original draft proposal.

Until the court action, states were required to submit their program plans and proposed surface mining regulations to the federal Office of Surface Mining by August 3. But, because of a delay in the preparation of the permanent federal regulations, the filing deadline was challenged in court by the states of Illinois and Virginia. U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery ruled July 25 in Washington that "the delay, perhaps inevitable, in promulgating the final federal regulations has deprived the states of much of the year that Congress intended them to have."

Judge Flannery said, "to deprive the states of this time would be to abuse their rights in the federal system. It would also, by depriving them of adequate time to prepare a viable state plan and to consider alternatives, subject them to the possibility that the secretary would reject their plan," Flannery wrote. "This would be a grievous loss to the states, depriving them at least for the indefinite future of the ability to regulate surface mining within their own boundaries."

Harscher said the Natural Resources Department understands, from informal contacts it has made in Washington, that the Department of Interior does not plan to appeal the federal judge's decision so the seven-month extension apparently will stand.

The condition of Mrs. Olga Latta, who was injured in a fall shortly before Christmas, continues to show improvement.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY SUMMER STUDENT

A 1977 Allen Central High School graduate is presently involved in a summer course of studies at Oxford University, England.

Kelly Joe Dings, a University of Kentucky student for the past two years, is one of a hundred U.S. students to be accepted for the 1979 summer session at Oxford.

British Studies at Oxford is a continuing summer school conducted annually and is held under the auspices of the Southern College University Union and Oxford University. Each year, the program concentrates on a different period of British history.

Dings is participating in the current program, Britain in the Renaissance Period, which extends from July 8 to August 14. The course involves the arts, customs, history, literature, and ideas of the British people.

The Floyd student is the 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Dings, of Martin. Co-valedictorian at his graduation from Allen Central High, he is an English major at the University of Kentucky and has been named to the Dean's List each semester since his enrollment.

New Store Opened Here Last Week

Mrs. Susan Maloney, whose husband founded the company, cuts the ribbon to open the new Maloney's store here last week.

GASOLINE PRICES INCREASE MORE THAN A PENNY—AGAIN

A dollar a gallon for gasoline was even more evident at service stations last week than a week earlier—and motorists can expect this to become the rule during the next few weeks.

The average price of gasoline in central and eastern Kentucky rose 1.1 cents over the preceding week at full-service pumps and 1.4 cents at self-service pumps, according to the Blue Grass Automobile Club's (AAA) weekly fuel gauge report.

★ Kentucky Afield ★

We have funny attitudes about people who make their living by fishing. If the particular individual is a tournament professional, a lot of us look up to him as a hero.

commercial fishermen play, says Charlie Bowers, the director of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife's fisheries division.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

FLOYD CIRCUIT COURT CIVIL ACTION NO. 78-CI-741 The First National Bank of Prestonsburg, Ky.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Floyd Circuit Court rendered at the June 14 term, 1979 in the above styled cause I shall proceed to offer for sale at the courthouse door in Prestonsburg, Kentucky, to the highest and best bidder, at public auction, on the 24th day of August, 1979 at 10:30 o'clock a.m., same being a day of the regular term of the Floyd Circuit Court, for cash or upon a credit of six months, the following described property to-wit:

That certain tract or parcel of land, lying and being on the waters of Clear Creek in Floyd County, Kentucky, and being the same property conveyed by Cola Vance and Judy Vance by deed from James Tackett and Elma Tackett, dated May 29, 1976, and recorded in Deed Book 225, page 443, Floyd County Clerk's Office, and more particularly described as follows, viz:

Beginning at the creek at Bill Hunt's line; thence up the hill to twin poplars; thence up the hill with Bill Hunt's line to the top of the hill; thence down the hill with said line to Lee Mathew's line; thence down the hill with Mathew's line to Odie Miller's line; thence around the hill with said line to a sugar tree marked; thence down the hill to an Elm and Clear Creek; thence down the creek to the beginning, so as to include all land in said boundary.

For one thing, it creates less competition for the living space in the lake. Only so much habitat is available in a body of water. If this space is filled with large carp or buffalo there is not as much room available for crappie or bass.

In the second place, Bowers says, removing large numbers of rough fish will encourage these fish to spawn more than they would if their population was high. Not only does this create a future crop for the commercial fisherman, but the millions of young carp and buffalo resulting from a heavy spawn provide food for game fish, food which can increase both numbers and growth rates of sport fishes.

Because of the high number of large rough fish in Barkley and Kentucky lakes, the fish and wildlife commission approved opening these bodies of water to carefully controlled netting (gill and trammel nets are banned on most waters in Kentucky).

Netting will be allowed only from Nov. 1 through March 1, when most sport fishermen are off the lakes. The gear used will be such that buffalo will be the primary species taken. Permits (at $500 each) will be issued, and each permit holder will be allowed only one assistant.

Court Employs Firm To Handle Landfill Survey

With an air of determination and a flurry of metaphors, the Floyd fiscal court made a concrete move last Thursday toward solving the county's chronic garbage problem.

Ken Virons and Associates, a Frankfort engineering firm, was instructed to begin work on the survey and testing of landfill sites immediately.

Virons and Associates were recently successful in obtaining preliminary state approval for an unreclaimed stripmine in Pike county as a landfill site.

With the purchase of an approved site, the county would be in a position to float a $520,000 bond issue to finance the establishment of a mandatory, county-operated solid waste disposal system.

In other business, the court, which was meeting in special session, awarded an $88,062 contract to Murray Construction Corp., of Paintsville, for construction of a security building at the new county park at Allen.

Eagles Club Closing Studied by Officials

The circumstances under which Orville Clifton suffered the skull fracture which resulted in his death July 28 in a Lexington hospital are still under investigation, but whatever the probe uncovers, the Eagles Club here again is under attack.

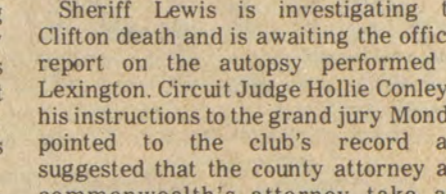

But the death of Clifton has recalled to official minds that it was at the Eagles Club where, Sheriff Doug Lewis reported to county officials after his visit there the evening of July 31, there have been "two murders, two stabbings, several fights and several arrests made here on these premises."

Lewis added that the Eagles Club is in violation of the law because it is open on Sundays, has been the scene of fighting involving the club trustees, "the people charged with seeing that there is to be no fighting there," and a man (Orville Clifton) "was drunk here...the victim of a possible homicide case..."

Sheriff Lewis is investigating the Clifton death and is awaiting the official report on the autopsy performed in Lexington.

Shane Eric Hall celebrated his third birthday, Saturday, July 21, at his home at Bypro. He is the son of Verlis Hall, Jr. and Patricia Hall, and the grandson of Minnie and Alva Martin, and Dosta Hall, all of Bypro and Verlis Hall, Sr., of Hall, Ky.

Gas Passes $1 Mark, Priced at Half-Gal.

In Prestonsburg this week premium gasoline hit a new high at some stations at 53½ cents per half-gallon. The price was placed on the half-gallon, because the pump meters will not register above 99.9 cents.

Full-service stations report an average price of 96.5 cents for regular, 99.9 cents for premium, 99.3 cents for no-lead, and 95.3 cents for diesel.

A spokesman for the Left Beaver Rescue Squad this week said steps were being taken to halt an increase in "prank" calls which have resulted in several false alarms in recent weeks.

Assistant Fire Chief Gary Compton said two calls this weekend to the squad's dispatching station at McDowell Appalachian Regional hospital which caused trucks to be sent needlessly to the Weeksbury section in both instances were typical of similar calls which have been received by the squad.

"This kind of activity is expensive and dangerous," Compton pointed out, "and there's always the possibility that somebody might cry wolf one too many times."

Compton said in the future the squad would not respond to emergencies unless callers leave a return number and their name so that the call could be verified.

A special thanks to the Regular Baptist minister, Bill Wells, of Prestonsburg, and the Merion Funeral Chapel.

A HEARTBROKEN FAMILY

'Pippin' Hailed: Pippin of a Show

By JACK WICKER

"Pippin," the current production of the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre, is the story of one young man's aspiration to greatness and his ultimate realization that true happiness and self-realization are not always accompanied by the magic and miracle shows that we all would like to believe is our due. If we were all extraordinary people, the show suggests, it would indeed be a very ordinary world.

Pippin is played to perfection by Keith Caldwell, a newcomer to the Jenny Wiley Stage. His voice is superior to that of John Rubenstein, who played Pippin on the Broadway stage, and his characterization is nearly flawless.

Leading Player, or the Narrator, is energetically portrayed by Emerson Green, Jr. Mr. Green is a superb dancer, and any vocal shortcomings are compensated for in his dance routines.

This could be the first of many performances of "Pippin" to have as its highest professional point zesty number called, "Spread a Little Sunshine." Delightfully sung by Tina Delafield as Fastrada, wife of Charlemagne, and adroitly danced by Tina and her real-life husband, Dan Delafield, this minute segment of the score provides an infectious zest generally missing from even the most professional of productions.

The audience has a superb time with Gail Harris, as Pippin's grandmother, Berthe, and when she invites the audience to sing along, you can hear the voices all the way to the boat dock.

Plaudits are due Tom McClary as Charles, who did a most admirable job as a last minute replacement in the role. He is a true professional, rarely flustered by lack of rehearsal, and establishes excellent rapport with the audience. Patricia Turney as Catherine, the widow who "adopts" Pippin, is excellent, as are Stephen Kean's orchestra and Howard Cooper's sets. Special recognition should also be allotted to the excellent dancers and chorus.

The show will continue its run at the amphitheatre through August 19. Advance reservations may be obtained by calling 886-9274.

Jenny Wiley Pageant Next Monday Evening

Response to the Miss Jenny Wiley Pageant to be held at the amphitheatre Monday, August 13, is thus far encouraging, a member of the pageant organization said this week.

Some 40 contestants have registered for the competition, and it is hoped that about twice that number will enter before the registration deadline Sunday, August 12.

The pageant is being sponsored by the Jenny Wiley Drama Association in conjunction with the Pike County Jaycee wives and the Floyd, Pike and Johnson County Jaycee-ettes in an effort to put the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre on a sounder financial basis. It will begin at 7 p.m. Monday, August 13, with competition in four age groups. These are Tiny Miss Jenny Wiley, ages three through kindergarten; Little Miss Jenny Wiley, first grade through fourth grade; Junior Miss Jenny Wiley, fifth grade through eighth grade, and Miss Jenny Wiley, ninth grade through age 18.

Contestants will compete in dress and sportswear and will be judged on beauty, charm and poise. All judges will be from out-of-state with no local connections.

C. Ollie Robinson, County Court Clerk, will emcee the event, and supper club owner, Marlowe Tackett, and his Southern Comfort band will provide entertainment, with Mr. Tackett crowning the pageant winner. Awards and prizes will be presented to winners in each of the age groups.

One of the pageant organizers, Peggy Arnett, said that the cooperation of merchants who have given donations, and others who have volunteered their services, has been outstanding.

4 Firms To Get Higher Gas Rate

The Kentucky Regulatory Commission has granted rate increases to four Floyd county natural gas companies because of the rising cost of wholesale natural gas.

The companies are Auxier Road Gas Co., Martin Gas, Mike Little Gas Co. and Mountain Utilities.

For Auxier Road, the increase is necessary to meet a $6,165 annual increase in the cost of gas supplied by Columbia Gas of Kentucky. Customers will now pay almost $3.39 per 1,000 cubic feet of natural gas a month for the first 2,000 cubic feet. For amounts of more than 2,000 cu. ft., they will pay about $2.96. A minimum monthly bill will be $4.

The Columbia Gas increase to Martin Gas amounts to $4,497 annually. Martin's customers will pay a rate of $2.83 per 1,000 cu. ft. for the first 2,000 cu. ft. A minimum monthly bill will be $5.50 which entitles the customer to less than 2,000 cu. ft.

Mike Little and Mountain Utilities are supplied by Kentucky West Virginia Gas Co. Kentucky West Virginia's increase to Mike Little amounts to $19,998 annually. The customers of Mike Little Gas will pay a monthly rate of about $2.32 per 1,000 cu. ft. for the first 2,000 and almost $2.12 per 1,000 for the next 28,000 cu. ft. For amounts of more than 30,000 cu. ft., a rate of around $2.07 will apply. A minimum monthly bill of $4.20 entitles the customer to less than 2,000 cu. ft.

The annual increase being passed on to Mountain Utilities amounts to $29,894. Mountain Utilities' customers will pay the monthly rate of about $2.58 per 1,000 cu. ft. for the first 2,000 and around $2.07 per 1,000 for the next 48,000. Amounts of more than 50,000 cu. ft. will be paid for at a rate of almost $1.95 per 1,000. A minimum monthly bill will be $3.64 when less than 2,000 cu. ft. is used.

Another guest was a friend of Mrs. Vicki Fields, Clinton Ratliff, of Wayland.

Knott Strip-Mine Site Proposed For Huge Housing Development

Plans were announced Saturday for the construction in Knott county of what may be the largest housing development ever built on a Kentucky strip-mine site.

The Lexington Herald-Leader's Sunday edition said in a news-story by Byron Lutz that Citizens for Social and Equal Opportunity is the moving force behind the plan.

It is proposed that a subdivision to provide housing for 210 families is planned at a site three miles north of Hindman. According to the Herald-Leader story:

The houses, single-family, duplex and fourplex, would line a bench, an area left flat by strip mining. The bench is about 1.5 miles long and averages 86 feet in width, for a total of about 86 acres of land.

The development group is a Hindman-based, non-profit organization that was incorporated about 18 months ago. This is its first major project.

The announcement came Saturday at the annual meeting of the Council of the Southern Mountains, a sister organization which supports the effort.

Carl "Jake" Ritchie, president of the citizens group, calls the project "one of the greatest things to happen in Knott county. Forty percent of the houses in this county are substandard," he adds, "but you can't even find a substandard one (for sale or rent)."

The group, which received a loan from the Kentucky Housing Corp. for preliminary site planning, awaits approval of a $748,000 grant application from the Farmers Home Administration.

"The grant looks favorable," says Ben Poage, executive director of the Human Economic Appalachian Development Corp. in Berea. "And everybody says it looks good because it's right off the main highway, just two or three miles from Hindman."

The site is near new Kentucky 80, now under construction.

But the project has already hit one snag, a dispute with Highland Coal Co., which continues to mine a portion of the property.

Ritchie and the development group, who disagree with the manner in which the company is restoring some of the bench area, were served with a court order Saturday.

They were ordered to stay off the property because the coal company claims Ritchie and the group have harassed the firm while it was performing its operation.

Poage said all indications are that the grant will be approved. The critical need for housing in Knott county and the lack of suitable, flat land for construction make the project attractive, he said.

Ritchie said it is hoped that the first home would be completed next June with the project finished in five years. Low-income citizens, who make up the development group, plan to build many of the homes themselves and to encourage private builders to construct other houses. Some of the homes would be available as rental property.

Low-cost Farmers Home Administration loans would be provided for needy persons to purchase homes. Some multi-family homes would be constructed, but the proposal calls for most of the dwellings to be for one family.

Arrests Listed

A listing of persons booked at the county jail over the past week, charges against each, and arresting officers follows:

Carl Fletcher, Ronnie Perkins, John Robert Baldrige, and A. G. Cole, 1st degree burglary, State Detective D. Stumbo; Charles Perkins, theft, Deputy Sheriff P. Neeley; Willis Tackett, reckless driving, Allen policeman Virgil Conn; Bobby J. Short, drunk driving (DUI), no insurance, State Trooper Bevins; Jim Stumbo, DUI, no operator's license, State Trooper T. D. Belcher, DUI, State Trooper West; Edgar Tackett, DUI, no insurance, Deputy Sheriff Gillis Conn; Paul Howell, reckless driving, Deputy Sheriff P. Neeley, Prestonsburg policeman J. Wright; Earl Walters, DUI, reckless driving, Prestonsburg policeman D. Conley.

Local Foresters Fight Montana Forest Blaze

Three foresters from the Division of Forestry's eastern district were among the 100 state and federal forestry personnel flown to Montana Sunday to help control a forest fire there.

Joe Ferguson, Chris Shepherd, and David Johnson went from here to join 31 other Kentucky state foresters and three crews of U.S. foresters from the Daniel Boone National Forest, to help fight the 2000-acre fire burning in Deer Lodge National Forest, near Butte, Mont.

The men have been dispatched as part of a cooperative arrangement among the various state and federal forestry services, which enables firefighters from areas where fire danger is low to reinforce areas where the danger is acute.

Peak danger periods for forest fires in this area are spring and fall. In the western states, fire danger peaks during the summer.

"The world in the end will follow only those who have despised as well as served it."

Psychologists Say . . .

PASADENA, Calif. —Christians who participate in glossolalia—speaking in "unknown tongues"—are taking part in a legitimate religious experience, says the report of a study by psychologists at Fuller Theological Seminary.

Tests used were designed by the seminary's clinical psychology department to determine whether tongues-speakers were stable people or were exhibiting signs of instability.

Psychologist H. Newton Maloney said findings were that glossolalia did not indicate instability and had no more effect on personality integration than participation in any mutually supportive group.

"Glossolalia," he says, "must be viewed as a valid form of religious expression and not as a psychopathological symptom."

A Movie about Movies on KET

James Garner narrates a two-hour look at the pioneer days of movie-making in "When the Movies Were Young," Thursday, August 9 at 10 p.m. (ET) on KET.

The nostalgia, adventure and fun of those free-wheeling days recaptured once again through the memories of directors who lived them and the old-time film-clips that preserved them.

The documentary, written and directed by film historian and producer Bill Gleason, traces movies from their infancy to maturity. By the end of World War I, some 25 million people a day would pay 735 million dollars a year at the box office, and motion pictures would become America's fifth largest business after railroads, textiles, steel and oil.

The documentary highlights rare, 60-year-old film footage never seen by the public since it was originally shot. The directors featured include Allan Dwan, George Marshall, Henry King, writer Adela Rogers St. Johns and others.

Samons Family Reunion

The family of the late James and Sarah Frazier Samons will hold its annual reunion at the Stratton Branch picnic area, Jenny Wiley Park, Saturday, Aug. 25. All relatives and friends are invited to bring a dish and come and spend the day.

GOSPEL SING-PRAISE SERVICE AT 1ST CHURCH OF GOD HERE

There will be a Gospel Sing and Praise Service at the First Church of God, Prestonsburg, Saturday, August 18, at 7 p.m., featuring The Singing Browns and Johnsons from Camden, Ohio and Prestonsburg's own Singing Sammons Family. Other singers will include The Glory Tones and Mary Elizabeth Bumgardner, singers from the church. Everyone is welcome to come out and join in the singing and praise. Anyone not attending any church as a regular member is invited to come and meet the church and become a part of the congregation. There will be refreshments served in the basement after service.

Law Changes Proposed On Child Abuse-Neglect

Alternatives to terminating parental rights and simplification of juvenile dependency proceedings are among changes in legislation proposed by the Task Force on Child Abuse and Neglect.

The 16-member task force has drafted proposed changes in Kentucky Revised Statutes (KRS) 199, dealing with termination of parental rights, and KRS 208, concerned with dependency proceedings. Most of the recommendations simplify language, place more emphasis on the family units and spell out the legal rights of parents, children and the Department for Human Resources, the state agency responsible for the care of dependent and neglected children.

The recommendations have been submitted to Human Resources Secretary Peter Conn for review. They are to be presented to the 1980 General Assembly.

Overall, the recommendations give priority to the family unit, except when a child's welfare is endangered, according to task force chairman Julia Tackett, Lexington district judge.

"The proposed changes suggest the Human Resources staff work with the family through alternative means, like counseling, to encourage family habilitation," Tackett said.

The new legislation will enable department staff "to follow more closely the problems of a family to see if a family can work the problems out," she said. "If not, the staff can offer more services to assist the family and keep the family unit together. The main emphasis of the statute is still focused on the best interest of the child."

Lynn Mitchell, an attorney for the department and a member of the task force, said the major changes proposed for the termination statute provide a clearer understanding of judicial procedures and legal rights for persons involved in an involuntary termination of parental rights. "We have set up more detailed grounds for involuntary termination," he said.

The recommendations also would change the criterion the department must meet in order to prove a parent's rights should be terminated.

"The standard of proof that the department has to meet has gone from preponderance of evidence to clear and convincing evidence," Mitchell explained.

Preponderance of evidence, he said, "is anything more than 50 percent certain," while clear and convincing evidence is about 75 to 90 percent sure. "Our present standard of proof has been under attack," Mitchell said. "The proposed change makes it constitutionally more certain."

The task force has suggested a temporary removal order be included in the juvenile proceedings statute. Mitchell said such an order "provides for the temporary removal of a child from a home when it would be in the child's best interest, but gives the parents an opportunity to be heard."

The present legislation provides only for an emergency custody hearing, which has immediate effect and can be done without parental voice. The temporary removal order is designed to protect children from homes where abuse or neglect is suspected.

Also, the task force proposed emergency custody order in effect no longer than 72 hours be included in the statute. Mitchell said the present legislation provides no time limits on emergency orders.

The Task Force on Child Abuse and Neglect was formed last September as a result of House Resolution 130. Members include foster parents, representatives of advocacy groups, attorneys, district judges who are directly involved with termination cases and personnel of the Human Resources Department's Bureau for Social Services. The commission for the task force expires in October.

Accurate Records Useful to Taxpayers

Taxpayers who keep accurate financial records have an easier time completing their income tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Although taxpayers are not required to use a specific record-keeping system, receipts, cancelled checks, bills, old returns, and other written documents are essential in providing their expenses, the IRS said. By law, records must be kept three years after the return was due or filed, or two years after the tax was paid, whichever was later.

A major exception to the retention rule, involves records on property transactions. These records should be retained for as long as they are helpful in determining the basis of original or replacement property.

IRS Publication 552, "Recordkeeping Requirements and a Guide to Tax Publications" gives more information and can be obtained by calling 584-1361 in Louisville or toll-free 1-800-292-6570 elsewhere in Kentucky.

FBI Arrests 12 for Attempting To Close Mine

Twelve men were arrested last Thursday by FBI agents and charged with conspiring to interfere with interstate commerce by forcing Falcon Coal Co. to close a surface mine in Breathitt county, the FBI said.

A statement from Carl F. Freeman, special agent in charge for Kentucky, said the 12, all from Breathitt county, would be arraigned before U.S. Magistrate David Irvin in Lexington.

The defendants were lodged in the Fayette County Detention Center Thursday afternoon.

The FBI identified them as Jeffrey Lee Campbell, 32; John Hardin, 32; Charles John Landrum, 27; Jerry Wayne Hudson, 27; Ralph Clemons, 29; Robert Clemons, 22; Frank Clemons, 20; Ike Mann, 19; Don Lawson, 31; Estill Miller, 23; Troy Hudson and Ernest Combs.

The FBI said the 12 allegedly threatened to close the mine forcibly unless they were given jobs. They allegedly used picket lines, threats and violence to interfere with the company from at least July 17 until last Wednesday, the FBI said.

The agency said the mine, which normally produces 27,000 tons of coal daily, was closed completely for one week.

A foreman's car was fired upon July 27, but no injuries were reported, the FBI said.

Mrs. Taylor Among Local Craftsmen To Show Work During Folk Festival

By MARY PINEAU

Nestled back in the quiet hills of eastern Kentucky one can still find a persistence of the arts and crafts indigenous of the area if they just know where to look. Insufficient exposure is the leading factor in keeping the makers and the buyers apart. Consequently, most craftsmen and artists are forced to make their living at something besides their art or craft.

Susan Taylor is one of these craftsmen. She teaches school. But, fortunately for her, she considers her craft of pottery making to be her "fun thing." If she doesn't sell what she has fun making her family uses it. Susan belongs to the Appalachian Guild of Artists and Craftsmen and the fruits of her talent are on display for sale at the Bush Art Gallery here.

Susan likes to "throw" her pots and vases with an eye for a graceful line. The hand-painted and hand-etched designs she finishes them with are a delight for the pottery connoisseur. But all this gracefulness and delight for the onlooker is accomplished with "mud, sweat, and tears."

We found Susan bent over her pottery wheel, dripping with sweat and liberally splashed with clay. The tears come when the pot collapses before it is finished because the clay got too wet.

On September 8, Susan will be demonstrating with her pottery wheel and selling her pots at the Arts and Crafts Show held at the Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheater parking lot as a part of the Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival. Along with her will be demonstrations of broom-making, woodcarving, knitting and crocheting. There will be exhibits of ceramics, painting, leather work, quilts, and an old-fashioned mill will grind fresh corn meal for sale.

The public is invited to come and enjoy this fine sample of the talent the hills have hidden in them, from 10 a.m. until dark. Any artist or craftsman in the area who has not been contacted and who wants to exhibit their work should write: Judith E. Carr, Flat Gap, Ky. 41219, or phone 265-3245.

VISIT PARENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Hart and children, Heather and Charlie, of Anchorage, Ky., were here during the weekend, for a visit with her parents, Atty. and Mrs. Woodrow Burchett, and other relatives.

Library Installs Detector

Call it what you will—unauthorized borrowing, or outright stealing. At any rate books have been disappearing from the Pikeville College library at such a rate that a new security system has been installed to catch the book-nappers.

Book losses, which have been steadily mounting, now cost the library thousands of dollars a year, according to William Aguilar, library director.

The book detection system "sensitizes" library materials to activate an electronic detector if patrons attempt to leave with material which has not been properly checked out. An audible signal sounds and the exit gate locks.

"The great percentage of patrons are honest, and would not intentionally take an item without checking it out," says Aguilar. "In most cases it's just a matter of being forgetful."

Unfortunately, Aguilar says a great deal of material removed by forgetful patrons seldom, if ever, finds its way back to the library.

Attend Preparedness Seminar

Representing Floyd county at a Disaster and Emergency Services advanced emergency preparedness seminar held recently at Jenny Wiley State Park were, from left, David Leslie, county planner, and Petty Thompson, Floyd county coordinator.

Key emergency preparedness and response officials from across Eastern Kentucky met at Jenny Wiley State Park recently to participate in an advanced emergency preparedness seminar. The program was sponsored by the State division of Disaster and Emergency Services.

The seminar, which is the only one of its kind offered in Eastern Kentucky during the year, focused on emergency operations centers. Following a discussion of operating concepts, an exercise tested the ability of those attending to make realistic decisions. The exercise also tested the officials' knowledge of emergency plans and procedures.

The second day of the two-day session included presentations on financial assistance to local governments, disaster planning, rescue operations and other related topics.

A spokesman for the state agency noted that preparedness is particularly crucial in this part of the state because of the tremendous vulnerability to floods and other types of emergencies, including transportation incidents.

PUBLIC NOTICE

There will be a public meeting of the Floyd County T.V. Cable Commission, to be held on August 10, 1979 at the hour of 5:30 p.m. in the Floyd County Courthouse Annex Conference Room.

7-25-3t.

WEDDINGS REMEMBERED

The August Reader's Digest reminds us of a couple of notable weddings: Blondie Boopadoop married Dagwood Bumstead on February 17, 1933; and in March 1952, Daisy Mae Scragg and Li'l Abner Yokum were joined in wedlock.

Dulcimer Meet Set in Pineville

Performers and fans of traditional mountain music will gather at Pine Mountain State Resort Park in Pineville Sept. 28-30 for the third annual Great American Dulcimer Convention.

Jean Ritchie, who is internationally known as a dulcimer player and folk singer, will take part in the convention. It is one of the largest gatherings of dulcimer players and builders in the country.

Ritchie, who grew up as a member of a Viper, Perry county family known for their performances of old Kentucky songs and ballads, has performed with her dulcimer around the world. She has produced books and records featuring Kentucky's musical heritage.

Her sister, Edna Ritchie Baker, of Winchester, will also take part in the program along with folk musicians Dick and Anne Albin, of Stanton. The Albins developed the annual event.

The weekend, sponsored by the Kentucky Parks Department, will include concerts, dulcimer lessons by Kentuckians Nancy Johnson and Blake Barker, demonstrations of dulcimer building, a square dance and other activities.

A special concert is planned for children, who will also have the opportunity to help make and eat ice cream and to go on trail hikes.

Other performers will include I. D. Stamper, John McCutcheon, Fred Meyer and Paul Van Arsdale. Music for the square dance will be provided by the Pine Mountain Drones. Also scheduled is a discussion of wood carving by Ken Snyder, crafts coordinator at Fort Boonesborough State Park.

Dulcimer builders on hand to discuss their craft include three Kentuckians, Warren May, of Berea, Chet Kramer, of Red Bird Mission and James Miracle, of Pineville, and Peter Cooney, of Indiana.

The dulcimer is a unique musical instrument that is held on the lap and played either with the fingers, a pick or a feather. The instrument was developed in the Appalachian Mountains, and much of Kentucky's folk heritage centers around it. Another form is the European or hammer dulcimer, which will be demonstrated by McCutcheon and Van Arsdale.

Reduced off-season lodge rates will be in effect. Further information on the convention can be obtained by contacting Barry Howard, park naturalist at Pine Mountain State Resort Park.

Reservations can be made by calling Pine Mountain State Resort Park at (606) 337-3066 or by writing the park at Pineville, Ky. 40977. The toll-free reservation number from any point in Kentucky is 1-800-372-2961. Persons in surrounding states can call 1-800-626-2911, toll free.

... about your Social Security

By JOHN FAULKNER
 Manager of the Prestonsburg Social Security Office

Q—My wife died just a little over a month ago. A friend told me that my children and I can get social security payments. Is he right? My wife only worked 4 years.

A—Survivors benefits can be made to deceased worker's children and their mother or father even if the worker had as little as 1½ years of work under social security in the 3 years before death. Benefits can be paid to unmarried children who are under 18 (under 22 if full-time students) or who became disabled before 22 and remain disabled. You may be eligible for checks, too, but the amount of your check could be affected by your earnings. You can apply at any social security office.

Q—I get monthly SSI checks because I'm disabled. A friend has offered me a part-time job doing paperwork for him. It won't pay much. Do I have to report it to social security?

A—You must notify social security immediately if you begin working while you are receiving disability benefits under either social security or SSI.

Q—I've heard that I'll have a redetermination of my SSI payments. What does that mean?

A—The SSI law requires that each person's case be periodically reviewed to make certain that he or she is still eligible for SSI and that his or her payment amount is correct. This review is called a redetermination. In some instances, the redetermination can be conducted by telephone. But, in most cases, the recipient has to visit the social security office for an interview. The local social security office will notify you when it is time for your redetermination.

TOKYO—Heavy rains that lashed southwestern Japan for five days eased Saturday, leaving 22 people dead, five missing and 27 injured, police reported.

Police said most of the casualties occurred in northern Kyushu, Japan's southernmost main island, where the heaviest property damage also was reported.

Fifty-two houses were destroyed, 87 were badly damaged and more than 24,000 were flooded, police said.

Leave it to us.

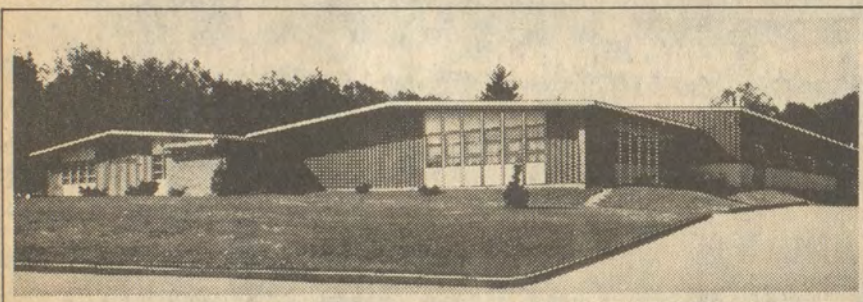

Building a building can be a unbelievably complicated process.

And if you're not careful who handles your project, you'll end up with a good percentage of the complications and hassles on your hands.

Not with us, however. It's our standard practice to handle all the details all the way to a project's conclusion.

The hardest job we want you to perform is turning the key.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, ENERGY GROWS ON TREES?

Buck Stove Owners Know It Does.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if energy grew on trees? Every morning the sun could come up and, from sea to shining sea, America could sprout a little more energy.

Naturally, energy does grow on trees. Trees, in fact are our only expandable energy source.

The only problem with using energy from trees has been that the sun does a great job of packing energy into trees, but people do a poor job of getting it out again.

Until Buck Stove, that is. Buck Stove is almost as good at getting energy out of trees as nature is at getting it into them. Buck Stove is the wood stove for modern America.

How well do Buck Stoves work? Well, a recent owner survey uncovered the fact that 96% of the families surveyed used their Buck Stove as their primary heat source. Doesn't that tell you something?

Another interesting fact came to light during this survey. Of all the really great reasons for buying a Buck Stove (like saving 50-80% on your heating bills, as a majority of our customers do), fully 48% of the customers surveyed listed outstanding quality as their number one reason for buying a Buck Stove.

Of course, this didn't surprise us. We know all about that quality; which is why we can conditionally guarantee your Buck Stove for the lifetime of the original owner.

Buck Stoves are safe and easy to install, too. These all-steel, heavy-duty stoves meet the strict safety standards set by the National Fire Protection Association and Underwriter's Laboratories. And every Buck Stove dealer has trained, certified installers who assure you of the safest, most effective installation. Or, you can even do it yourself.

Because energy grows on trees, and money doesn't, Buck Stove is the sensible alternative for the American homeowner.

KET Airs Film On Quilting

For some mountain women, quilting is a way of life. "Quilting Women," an Appalshop film, airs Saturday, August 18 at 6:30 p.m. (ET).
 The film traces the process of quilting from piecing a traditional pattern of brilliantly colored fabric to the finale of a quilting bee. It also conveys the sense of satisfaction derived by the women who maintain and pass on this female craft form.
 "Quilting Women" is a production of Appalshop, Inc., an independent media center based in Whitesburg. The company produces films, recordings and publication about Appalachia.

Children Victims Of Car Crashes

Parents spend a lot of time protecting their children from daily dangers—sharp objects, illnesses, the bumps and traumas that accompany childhood. But many parents are not protecting their children from the greatest threat they face everyday—automobile accidents.
 Statistics have shown that children are 40 to 50 times more likely to die from auto accidents than from rubella, diphtheria, polio, measles, tetanus and whooping cough.
 However, 93 percent of Kentucky children under the age of four are not being buckled into child restraints while traveling in cars and almost half of those that are using the restraints have been found to be using them improperly, according to Bennie Maffet, safety coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Transportation. Yet studies prove that correctly used child restraint systems can reduce the chances of death by more than 90 percent and serious injury by almost 80 percent.
 Maffet recommends that parents select a child restraint system suitable to their child's age and weight. The three main types of child restraints are the infant carrier, child seats and the harness.
 The infant carrier is for children weighing less than 15 pounds. This tub-shaped restraint cradles the child in a semi-erect position, is designed to face the rear of the car and must be secured to the seat by the adult belts already in the car.

Child seats are to be used for children weighing more than 15 pounds who can sit up by themselves. There are two basic child seats—the shield type which provides a padded impact shield in front of the child and the harness type which secures the child to the restraint with several harnesses.

The harness restraint is only for the larger child and secures him to the seat without a protective car seat.

Whichever type is chosen, the restraint should be crash-tested or dynamically-tested, according to Maffet. These approved restraints have proven effective in tests made by the government and private agencies. "Unless the restraint is crash-tested, it can't really protect your child at all," Maffet said.

If you are not sure if a particular child restraint system is correct for your child or whether it has been proven crash-tested, you can write for a pamphlet listing the accepted brands, type, cost and where you can locate them. The address is: Traffic Safety Institute, College of Law Enforcement, Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky. 40465.

An exhibit of accepted, crash-tested child restraints will be on display at the Department of Transportation's booth during the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville, August 9-18, in the East Wing Exhibition Hall.

Folk Doctor Shares Secrets

An Appalachian folk doctor shares his secret remedies in the documentary film-portrait, "Catfish Man of the Woods." The half-hour program airs Saturday, August 11 at 6:30 (ET) on KET.

"Catfish Man of the Woods" is the work of Appalshop, the Whitesburg media center which records a wide range of Appalachian folkways through films, plays and television documentaries.

The film focuses on Clarence Gray, a fifth generation practitioner of folk medicine, who sells a mixture of roots and herbs called "bitters" for all types of ailments from rheumatism to heart trouble.

In addition to his medicine, Gray shares his philosophy of life and his opinions about sex, religion and the way of the woods.

In addition to his medicine, Gray shares his philosophy of life and his opinions about sex, religion and the way of the woods. "Catfish Man of the Woods" is the first of three Appalshop films airing on KET during August. Subsequent presentations include "Quilting Women" (August 18) and "Sourwood Mountain Dulcimers" (August 25).

Railway sleeping cars were first operated in the United States in 1837.

Hearing on Budget Slated at Pikeville

Gov. Julian Carroll announced last week a series of 17 public hearings throughout Kentucky during August and early September to allow citizens to comment on their priorities for the 1980-'82 state budget.

The hearing for this area will be held Aug. 27, beginning at 3 p.m., at Pikeville College.

This effort by state government will allow citizens an opportunity to comment, to make suggestions and to have input into decisions on how their tax money is spent.

Representatives of the governor's cabinet will attend the hearings and will be able to incorporate suggestions made at these hearings into the executive branch hold at least one public hearing on possible use of revenue sharing money. The hearings which Gov. Carroll is announcing today go beyond the federal requirement, in that there will be 17 hearings and they will cover the entire state budget, not just revenue sharing funds.

PUBLIC NOTICE SECOND READING

The Floyd County Fiscal Court, at its regular meeting commencing at 1:00 p.m., Tuesday, August 14, 1979, to be held at the Floyd County Courthouse Annex Conference Room, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, will call for a second reading and then consider same for passage of the following Ordinance:

SECTION ONE: The annual budget for Fiscal Year 1978-1979, is amended to: (a) Increase receipts of the General Fund by $63,650.60, to include unanticipated revenues from the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

With surgery in between.

It's called outpatient or same-day surgery. And it's one of the many programs Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky support to help keep health care costs down.

You just schedule your surgery, have your operation, and go home the same day.

Compared to inpatient surgery, you spend less time away from your family and job. And best of all, outpatient surgery saves money by eliminating the hospital stay. 25% to 75% of the expense can be saved.

Outpatient surgery is not just for minor problems either. Thanks to improved surgical techniques many operations that once involved several days in a hospital can be handled on this same-day basis. And you receive the same professional, quality care as you would on an inpatient basis.

So, if you need surgery, check with your doctor to see if your procedure can be handled on an outpatient basis. It'll save you time and help hold down health care costs for all of us.

With the many advances in medical technology... today would be a good time for you to check your health care benefits to see if they will help meet today's costs. Write for information. 9901 Linn Station Road, Louisville, KY 40223.

JUST A COINCIDENCE?

Orthodox science views coincidence as just a chance happening, a shuffling of the probability tables. But some experts who have studied this maddening phenomenon see more far-reaching possibilities, according to an article in the August Reader's Digest.

To the great mathematician John von Neumann, it was "black magic." To psychotherapist C. J. Jung, it was the influence of the unconscious that caused coincidentally paired events. And to Arthur Koestler, author of The Roots of Coincidence, these "puns of destiny" may suggest a sort of psychomagnetic field that surrounds us and influences certain actions.

Such theories, according to author Edward Ziegler, can't be tested scientifically, since "coincidences leave no laboratory residue that can be measured and analyzed." But they do account for startling occurrences that seem to defy the explanation of sheer chance.

One case, relates Ziegler, involved the London author George Feifer. In 1971, a friend borrowed Feifer's only copy of his just-published novel, The Girl From Petrovka, and then lost it in Bayswater. Repeated searches and offers of reward proved fruitless. Over two years later, however, when Feifer had gone to Vienna to write about the novel's filming, he was told a remarkable story by Anthony Hopkins, one of the film's leading stars.

Hopkins had signed to do the film and went to London to buy the book. Having no luck in the bookstores, he was leaving the city when he noticed a book on a subway bench in Leicester Square. He turned it over and read the title: The Girl From Petrovka. Feifer's own notes were in the book.

A simple stroke of luck? Perhaps. But as Ziegler points out: if we believe, as Koestler does, in the fundamental tendency of nature to create order out of disorder, then "something beyond known influence is at work."

Rod Bussey (right), executive director of the Berea College Alumni Association and a Floyd county native, discusses fund-raising results with Ed Ford, associate director of the Association and editor of The Berea Alumnus magazine. Ford is the son of Carl G. Ford, a Prestonsburg native, and grandson of the late Grace Dingus Ford, also of Prestonsburg.

Berea Alumni Set New Records

The Berea College Alumni Association surpassed two goals and set three records during its 1978-79 fund-raising year.

According to Rod Bussey, executive director of the Association, all-time highs were reached in number of alumni donors—3,755—and amount of unrestricted money raised through the Alumni Fund, $162,000.

The Association goals for the fiscal year were to raise $135,000 for the Alumni Fund and increase the percentage of alumni donors to 25 percent.

"The Alumni Association is tremendously pleased with this response and the interest alumni have shown in helping Berea," Bussey said. "Many of our donors were from the Prestonsburg-Floyd county area and, certainly, I'm very proud of and grateful to all of them."

Since he assumed leadership of the Alumni Association four years ago, fund-raising totals have increased from 2,333 donors, 16.5 percent participation and $100,615 for the Alumni Fund to the current record-setting levels.

Bussey, a Floyd county native, is the son of Mrs. Nova Bussey Oberle, Tutor Key, Ky., and the late Dawson Bussey. He was graduated from Prestonsburg High School in 1959, where he lettered in basketball, football and baseball and was the recipient of the Reatherford-Salyers Award during his senior year.

He was graduated from Berea in 1963 and received his master's degree from Eastern Kentucky University in 1974. Prior to joining Berea College in July, 1975, he spent 11 years in independent school work in St. James, N.Y., and Lexington, Ky., as a teacher and administrator.

Bussey is married to the former Helen Adams of Max Meadows, Va., and has two daughters, Kelly, 14, and Kim, 12.

Economist Expects Recession Not Too Severe in Kentucky

Less growth in the Kentucky economy can be expected in the remainder of the 1979-'80 fiscal year due to impending recession, according to economist Larry Lynch.

Lynch also gave estimates on tax revenues for fiscal years 1980-'81 and 1981-'82, along with predictions last week of the state's economic health in the near future before the Interim Joint Committee on Appropriations and Revenue (AR).

He said there would be some improvement in growth in the next couple of years, but "nothing like we've had in the last several years."

Lynch added that because of inflation, ironically, the short-range outlook on tax revenues is somewhat brighter than before.

The recession should help inflation, he said, because of a cooling of demand for commodities.

He predicts a "four or five quarter recession" and adds that it should not be extremely harmful or long-lasting. Lynch sees an end to the recession by "the middle of next year." The effect should be more moderate in Kentucky than in some other states, he added.

In his report to the committee, he said President Carter's new energy policies will likely "have a persistent, long-term beneficial effect on the Kentucky economy."

Lynch said that the decline in the Gross National Product indexes alongside the apparent contradiction of a ballooning 13 percent inflation rate "is hard for economists to explain."

In other action, the committee failed to pass a motion accepting a report from the subcommittee on the Falmouth Lake Project. Gov. Carroll had asked the full committee for guidance and recommendations on the U.S. Corps of Engineers project. The four-member subcommittee met earlier and approved by a 3-1 vote a report recommending the state not participate in costs of recreational facilities for the proposed project.

The committee also heard testimony from state librarian Barbara Williams concerning problems with a twice-rejected personal service contract which would convert hard-copy card catalogues to computerized form. Mrs. Williams contends the system is endorsed by librarians across the state and would save storage space, supply better materials and also save money.

The committee questioned her on the payment of $50,000 to a Minnesota firm, Library Interface Inc., to replace the card catalogues only one day after the contract was initially appropriated. She said she "didn't dream there would be any problem because it (the payment) was just a fraction of the total contract (totaling $265,000)."

Are Your Sunglasses Safe?

By Mary Schantz

Have you purchased a pair of sunglasses for this season in the sun? If not, don't wait much longer. All those super shades of gray and green aren't just for the glamorous or the famous—they're for everyone, including you.

With so many shapes and shades on the market these days, which pair is for you? Amber? Gray-green? Or purple-pink? Wraparounds or wire rims? In a round, square, or oval shape?

Unfortunately, too many people select their sunglasses solely on the basis of their fashion frames or kooky color. They lose sight of the real function—to protect the eyes. So shop for style second. Put quality of eye protection first. Make sure those "funlasses" are safe sunglasses, too.

Just as your skin needs protection from the damaging effects of the sun, so do your even more sensitive eyes. A good pair of sunglasses shields your eyes from brightness, reduces glare, and filters out the sun's harmful ultraviolet and infrared rays. If you're going to be out in the bright light, give your eyes the protection they deserve.

Tips About Tint

While all sunglasses make the world look darker or different colored, not all give adequate protection from the potentially harmful rays of the sun. In fact, some tinted glasses can actually do more harm than good.

For example, those rose-colored glasses may cast a warm pink glow on your world, but they also alter your color perception and offer you no protection against glare or infrared heat rays. For this reason, the pink, rose, light yellow and orange tints are especially harmful to those who are exposed to the sun's glare for long periods of time, such as boaters or beach bathers.

Wearing blue or purple tinted glasses can be even more dangerous than wearing no sunglasses at all. Not only do they seriously distort perception of the color red (making it difficult to distinguish traffic lights), but they also allow ultraviolet light through. Overexposure to ultraviolet radiation can result in temporary impairment of vision, something skiers know as "snow blindness."

What is the best color for lenses? For greatest protection against both infrared and ultraviolet rays with the least amount of color distortion, optometrists recommend medium or dark gray lenses. Shades of green and brown are almost as good, but do alter color perception slightly.

Density of the color in the lenses is as important as the color itself. Sunglasses should be dark enough to screen out about 80 percent of the sun. Those soft pastel tints that allow others to see your eyes through the lenses screen out only about 20 percent of the sunlight. For proper glare protection, choose strongly tinted glasses that don't show your eyes clearly.

Glass Versus Plastic

Should you choose plastic or glass lenses? There are advantages to either, so it all depends on what you want in a pair of sunglasses. Glass is heavier and, if it has been properly ground and polished, will be more expensive than plastic. High-quality glass lenses will give you the least amount of distortion and provide the best screen against infrared rays. Unless they're specially treated, plastic lenses don't cut infrared rays.

Pros and Cons of Polarization

Do you want polarized lenses? Polarized lenses, designed to cut glare almost completely, are available only in plastic. They are especially popular among fishing and boating buffs, sun worshippers, and skiers—all those who need to cut the reflected surface glare from the water, sand or snow. These lenses have one drawback. Their effect is diminished when the head is tilted at certain angles. For casual use, most people find that strongly tinted gray or green sunglasses cut glare sufficiently.

Photochromic Lenses

Can one pair of photosensitive glasses serve all your visual needs, both indoors and out? No! The light-sensitive photograys and photobrowns, available only by prescription and meant for indoor use, don't get dark enough to be used as sunglasses. Photosun lenses, which darken enough to block out about 75 percent of the sunlight, are too dark even at their lightest for safe indoor use.

Taking the lens test

Wearing poor-quality lenses that distort your vision can be more harmful than wearing no sunglasses at all. Inspect the lenses carefully for defects and distortion when buying nonprescription sunglasses. To test for distortion, catch the reflection from an overhead fluorescent light on the inside of the lens. Watch for any wiggles, waves or other faults in the reflection as you move the glass slowly. Imperfect lenses will cause eyestrain and fatigue.

Choosing the proper frame

Finally, choose the frame that's right for you. When trying on sunglasses, test for fit, comfort and frame durability. Make sure the glasses stay in one place when you turn or bob your head. Preferably, they should have stems with a metal core to permit adjustment in fit, and the stems shouldn't be more than half an inch wide or they will obstruct your vision. To avoid side glare, choose frames with lenses that are large enough to cover the whole eye area of your face. But don't overdo it—be wary of those wraparound lenses because there's a big risk of lens distortion.

Wear with care

Once you've selected the sunglasses that are right for you, be sure to wear and care for them sensibly. To avoid scratching your lenses, keep your glasses in a protective case when they're not on your nose. Never rest them lens-down on any surface. Don't wipe them without using water or lens cleaner. And never use silicone tissue cleaners on plastic lenses.

Wear your sunglasses to shield your delicate eyes whenever you're out in the sunlight or bright haze, but don't wear them indoors or at night, no matter how good you look in them! Besides making it difficult to see clearly (a real hazard when night driving), wearing your shades when it's not necessary to do so makes your eyes overly sensitive to normal light. Don't lose sight of the fact that the primary purpose of your sunglasses is to protect your sight, not to promote your image!

State Crime Up—But Not Much

State police reported Monday that Kentucky's crime rate went up last year, but not by much.
According to the 1978 Uniform Crime Report, which was released by State Police Commissioner Kenneth E. Brandenburg, the increase amounted to only a bare four-tenths of one percent. But that rise, while slight, did appear to put a crimp in the sharp downturn which Kentucky's crime rate took just one year earlier.
In 1977 the annual crime rate, which is measured in terms of the number of offenses committed per 100,000 residents, dropped 8.4 percent, achieving the first recorded downturn in major crime for Kentucky since 1972.
The 1978 crime turnaround was chiefly attributed by state police to an increased number of rapes, auto thefts and burglaries. Forcible rape, up 8.3 percent, had the heaviest impact on the overall crime rate figure for the past year.
Auto theft and burglary, up 2.1 percent and 1.4 percent, respectively, were next. Although state police also reported more robberies and larcenies where the value of the goods stolen was $50 or more, the rate at which they increased was a barely noticeable one-tenth of one percent for each.

Of the seven major offenses watched by state police to determine how much crime is committed in Kentucky annually, only murder and aggravated assault resisted the latest upward shift in the state's crime rate. During 1978, there were 9.9 percent fewer killings and 8.9 percent fewer assaults involving threats or actual acts of serious physical injury.
The report also showed a 12 percent decline in the number of state, county and local police officers assaulted during the year.
And while residential burglaries were down somewhat from a year ago, state police said that private homes still account for 60.3 percent of all reported burglaries. The total dollar value put on property lost through both residential and non-residential burglaries was more than $16.8 million.
Auto thefts cost Kentuckians another $21.6 million in stolen vehicles. The overall loss figure for robbery and larceny was an additional $16.5 million.
Almost half of the reported robberies took place on the street. However, the biggest factor behind larceny involved the taking of articles from automobiles, followed by thefts of auto parts and accessories.
A breakdown of arrested offenders by age groups further revealed at least one-third of all those persons arrested last year for major crimes were juveniles. The biggest percentage of the juvenile offenders were held for burglary and larceny.
The overall number of offenses reported for the year was 105,697 or about 3,021 crimes per 100,000 residents. Individual offense totals were for rape, 725; for auto theft, 8,765; burglary, 30,925; robbery, 2,844; larceny, 58,203; murder, 318, and for aggravated assault, 3,917.

By comparison, the 1977 crime total was 104,127 offenses or 3,011 crimes per 100,000 Kentuckians.
State police confirmed an earlier unofficial count which put the number of persons killed in traffic accidents on Kentucky's highways during 1978 at 893.
That total represents 65 fewer deaths than were reported over the same 12-month period in 1977.
The report also listed another 44,480 persons as having been injured. The estimated total economic loss to Kentucky, as a result of fatal, non-fatal and property damage accidents, amounted to more than $436.2 million, the report shows.

College Credit for TV Courses

College credit is as close as your television set. This fall 23 Kentucky colleges and universities will offer one or more of seven college-level courses designed especially for television. The courses can be seen on KET channels.

The courses range from Shakespeare to social sciences and cover business, education, composition, history, technology—even inventions. They include:

"The Ascent Of Man," an interdisciplinary course that combines science, history and the humanities as it traces man's history through his greatest achievements; "Writing For A Reason," a basic college composition course which stresses basic writing skills; "The American Story," an introductory course in American history which emphasizes the uniqueness of the American experience; "It's Everybody's Business," an introduction to business, surveying a wide range of operations in the modern business world; "Connections: Technology and Change," a look at 6,000 years of invention and technology from ancient Egypt to the Mar's probe; "The Shakespeare Plays," A study of six outstanding plays by the great English author produced especially for television; and, "Values And Morality In Education," a course designed specifically for teachers emphasizing that social and ethical values held by society are keys to the educational process.

Individual schools decide which courses to offer, how many credit hours will be given, and what tuition fees will be.

Colleges offering the courses include Ashland Community College; Eastern Ky. University; Elizabethtown Community College; Hazard Community College; Henderson Community College; Hopkinsville Community College; Jefferson Community College; Kentucky State University; Lexington Technical Institute; Madisonville Community College; Morehead State University; Northern Ky. University; Paducah Community College; Prestonsburg

Community College, contact Admissions Office, 606-886-3863; Somerset Community College; Southeast Community College; Spalding College; University of Kentucky; University of Louisville; Western Ky. University; and Murray State University.

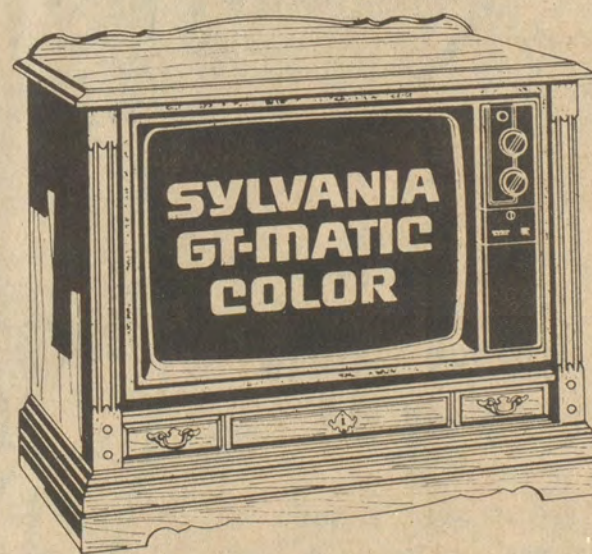

Courses for the year were previewed and selected by a statewide committee of college educators and administrators. Deadlines for fall registration vary with the institution.

Book Depicts Life before Electricity

The carved oak chairs that once seated 12 around the big table in the kitchen now are eagerly sought by today's young marrieds. The oak school benches, some with carved initials yet, are collected for end tables or magazine holders. Even the old pig trough, dug from the mud of a country hog lot, now is used as a book case in a fine home.

If you are one of the many who used these articles years ago or if you are a young housekeeper who wants to decorate with nostalgia pieces, "Six Years Before Electricity," by Howard Fain could be your memory encyclopedia or guide to decorating your home in the eclectic mode.

Friends of Fain know him as a Nicholasville artist whose paintings and reproductions depict life as it was back then. His 175-page book will introduce him as a writer as well as illustrator.

"My parents were farm people," Fain says. "My childhood was shared by Pa, my grandfather, who liked to fish and hunt. I really liked this, being able to go along to run traps, rob a bee tree or hunt squirrels. Pa lived in a cabin on Kentucky River but was with us on weekends to go to church with us."

His childhood school had one room, a coalhouse, two outhouses and a cistern in the back yard. He had the same teacher for all eight grades. As he progressed in grades, he moved closer to two high windows in the room. "When you got over to the windows, you knew your grade school days were about over."

The New York Aquarium boosted attendance markedly when it launched a search for a "bargain monster," reports the August Reader's Digest. The aquarium wanted a creature that was both unusual and economical to catch. The answer: a giant sea roach called Bathynomus giganteus, a common monster 60 million years ago but comparatively rare today. After a search team delivered six of the creatures to the Aquarium, admissions soared.

One page of the book is a Fain sketch of the interior of the school, pot-bellied stove and all. Another page shows the school on Valentine's Day.

He also remembers tobacco-stripping days when his Dad toted a sack of coal for a fire near the stripping room. "Mom grabbed up a pot which had beans in it and a sack of bowls and spoons and cornbread. It would take all morning for the beans to cook. The morning seemed three days long, especially after smelting them beans cook. Mom turned the pot lid over and laid the cornbread on it so it would warm up, then after we carried lots of tobacco and stripped it, we'd finally get around to eating. Oh, they sure tasted good."

Another illustration shows the Fain family spring. "I think I musta carried every bucket of water we used. Water to drink, water to wash with, water to can with, water for this and that. About the time I'd reach over to fill a bucket, a doggone frog would leap in and about scare the daylight out of me. We usually kept an empty bean can there hanging from a piece of balin' wire. Dad always said water tasted better out of an old tin can."

Fain majored in art at the University of Kentucky and later earned a commercial art degree from a Pennsylvania school. He has worked with engineers and as an interior designer. The past four years he has been a full-time artist and owns and operates the U.S.A. Gallery, 302 West Maple, Nicholasville.

Must 'Pre-Apply' For ARC Funds By September 3

Organizations or groups seeking funds from the Appalachian Regional Commission for development projects in Kentucky Appalachia must submit preliminary applications by Sept. 3, Development Secretary William Short said today.

The projects to be included in the state's ARC investment package for the 1980 fiscal year will be selected from these applications, he said.

Short said notices explaining the requirements for these pre-applications have been sent to the nine area development districts in eastern Kentucky, the Kentucky Housing Corp. and the state Bureau of Vocational Education.

Kentucky's ARC program is administered by the Development Cabinet through its office of community and regional development. Ralph Coldiron, executive director, said the ADDs act as clearinghouses for projects in their area and work with applicants seeking ARC funds for various projects.

Projects selected for funding are expected to follow the philosophy and investment strategy outlined in the Kentucky Appalachia Development Plan for 1978-80, he added.

The state's ARC allocation for 1980 will be determined at a later date, Coldiron said. The allocation for the current fiscal year is $9.9 million.

When Alcohol and Gasoline Do Mix

By Bryna Brennan

Well, who would have guessed—alcohol in the gas tank? You bet! Looking down the road, the future of gasohol, which derives its name from alcohol and gasoline, is looking rather bright.

Already gaining national and international popularity, gasohol, which can be made from wood, corn, grain, potatoes, beets or manure, is proving economical at a time when gasoline prices continue to rise and supplies are becoming scarce.

Although only recently publicized, gasohol usage actually dates back to before the turn of the century with the birth of the first combustion engine. In 1876, when the engine was created, it was designed to run on either alcohol or gasoline. Later, in the 1930s, alcohol plants opened specifically for the production of fuel for automobiles in the mid-West.

During World War II, alcohol was needed for synthetic rubber production, and alcohol fuels disappeared from the market. It wasn't until after the 1973 oil embargo that interest in gasohol renewed.

Gasohol is actually made up of 10% alcohol, either ethanol or methanol, and 90% unleaded gasoline. The alcohol is produced in the traditional manner. The organic raw material, such as grain, is soaked and allowed to ferment. Then, traveling through a distillery, the excess water is removed through a heating process, leaving almost pure alcohol.

Pros and Cons

Some of the advantages of gasohol are that it can be added to your car without adjusting your carburetor, ignition timing or fuel lines. It has a higher octane rating than regular gasoline, and it's said to reduce engine knocks while giving you a cleaner, smoother-running engine with lower exhaust fumes. Although statistics vary, you can get more miles to the gallon by using gasohol, clearly a prime consideration these days.

Availability of the alcohol needed for gasohol should never be a problem. There's no dependence on foreign exporters, just on a fresh crop of grain which can be harvested each year by U.S. farmers.

Opponents of gasohol tell a different tale. They maintain that the fuel is too expensive (slightly more than premium unleaded gas), will cost billions of dollars (to build needed new distilleries), will require adjusted carburetors, and will cause stalling, vapor lock and hesitation. Car manufacturers, however, don't seem to see any dangers in the new alcohol mixtures. Several of the auto makers, in fact, have already added gasohol approval to their new car warranties.

The federal Department of Energy and the Department of Agriculture have already invested millions of dollars to study projects involving gasohol. A flurry of congressional legislation, involving gasohol in one form or another, has been introduced. Some early statistics show that if gasohol replaced gasoline, as much as 10% could be cut from the nation's oil import bill, which last year reached $40 billion.

Congress has already approved a 4¢ per gallon exemption from Federal tax on gasoline for fuels containing at least 10% alcohol produced from agricultural products or waste.

The Future

It may still be quite a while before we see cars solely operated on alcohol fuels. Experts believe that gasohol can help stretch our petroleum supply, but not supplant it. Anything new always takes time to catch on and to work all the kinks out.

Much of the big push for gasohol come from the corn-producing states. They see gasohol as the answer to economic prayers, but it takes an awful lot of corn and energy to produce the needed amount of alcohol. Research continues and each day more and more gasohol pumps are being installed at local service stations throughout the nation.

Weighing the good (a cut in oil imports) against the bad (new distilleries to increase output of alcohol) and considering what has become another fuel crisis, it looks like gasohol is here to stay.

You Watch the World Go By Or You Get in There and Fight

Watch Jim Brunotte take his horse, Golden Boy, through his paces, and you'll see a remarkable story unfold. Here's a man who's won a trophy-casual of horsemanship awards, and who almost single-handedly works his 360-acre ranch near San Luis Obispo, California. But that's just the beginning of his story, told in the August Reader's Digest. Jim Brunotte is a triple amputee.

This Hillsdale, Ill. native was an army military police driver during the Vietnam War. He was on jeep duty near Long Binh in October 1968 when a hidden charge exploded underneath him. He lost both legs, his left arm, and his right eye.

But Jim had learned a lesson early in life. At six, he was paralyzed with polio from the waist down for 18 months. As he struggled to regain mobility, he learned one essential truth: you either watch life go by, or fight to embrace it.

His outlet, writes author William Ellis, was the same he pursued as a young boy: horses. He designed a saddle with a seat belt and special pouches for his leg stumps. He bought a broad-chested Morgan named "Can-Can" and began riding in shows and benefits for the handicapped. And he took a caretaker job on a 3000-acre ranch outside Denver and bought more horses.

One day his father brought a young man to the Denver ranch. Nineteen-year-old Jerry Schultz was a victim of cerebral palsy and hadn't walked since he was seven. But when Jerry saw Brunotte boldly astride Can-Can, the boy was transfixed. Brunotte soon had him mounted and riding. After two weeks, Jerry Schultz had discovered within himself a whole new potential—and Jim Brunotte a new life's work.

There would be a new ranch—called Kumbya—which Brunotte purchased in California and still maintains. There he trains the foals of Can-Can to give other handicapped the chance to better themselves. And he makes his home with Jeryl Clark Brunotte, who arrived at Kumbya three years ago to teach swimming and is now Jim's wife.

Last May, Jim Brunotte was awarded the country's highest honor for the physically disabled—The Handicapped American Of The Year Plaque, signed by President Carter. And for that proud moment, Jim credits the simple lesson he learned as a child: "Either you stand by the roadside and watch the world go by, or you get in there and fight."

Shakespeare Plays To Encore on KET

William Shakespeare's delightful comedy, "As You Like It," and the less frequently seen tragicomedy, "Measure For Measure," encore on KET consecutive evenings Tuesday, August 7, and Wednesday, August 8, at 9 p.m. (ET).

Videotaped entirely on location in and around Glamis Castle, Scotland, "As You Like It," stars Helen Mirren as Rosalind, Brian Striner as the love-smitten Orlando, Richard Pasco as the world-weary Jaques, Angharad Röss as Rosalind's best friend Celia, and James Bolam as Touchstone the Clown in this Shakespearean fairy-tale about love in the enchanted forest of Arden.

Clifford A. Ridley, of the Detroit News, said this production of "As You Like It," widely considered Shakespeare's most potentially perfect play, "is a sun-dappled, impressionistic production, a feast for the eyes, the intellect and the heart. Especially the heart."

"Measure For Measure," set in the heart of corrupt and brawling Vienna, tells the story of a peculiar attempt at moral reform undertaken by Duke Vicentio (Kenneth Colley), Vienna's ruler.

After appointing Angelo (Tim Pigott-Smith), a supposedly upright man "whose blood is very snow-broth," to rule in his place, the Duke pretends to leave for a journey. Instead, he assumes a friar's habit and stays in Vienna, observing the actions of his subjects.

One of Angelo's first acts is to enforce an ancient law that ultimately leads to his own downfall. "Measure For Measure" also stars John McEnery as Lucio, a cynical man-about-town who manages, eventually, to talk his way into jail by unknowingly slandering the Duke to his face.

Both "As You Like It" and "Measure For Measure" are repeated from "The Shakespeare Plays," which aired this spring on KET. All 37 of Shakespeare's plays will be produced and aired during the next six years.

POTATO CHIPS

Next time you reach for a handful of potato chips, give a nod to George Crum, an American Indian without whom the snack would not be melting in your mouth. According to the Reader's Digest it was Crum who in 1853 momentarily lost his temper and thereby added a chapter to America's food lore. A chef at a posh resort in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Crum became annoyed when a fussy guest kept returning his french fries because they were too thick. The Indian grabbed a potato, scalped it into paper-thin pieces and plunged them into boiling fat. The resulting golden, curling chips were proclaimed delicious by the stubborn diner, and by untold millions after him.
