

Officials Study Martin Problem

EPA Undecided On Next Action, Attorney Says

State and federal environmental officials inspected the Martin sewage system last week, confirming earlier reports that the plant is inoperative and out of compliance with an administrative order issued by the Environmental Protection Agency June 29, this year.

According to the EPA order, the city of Martin was required to assess the condition of its sewage treatment plant, and to purchase the equipment necessary to rehabilitate it, by August 1; and to submit to EPA a report on the pump stations, copies of the purchase orders for new pumps, and a schedule for replacing the main trunkline serving the city's upper end by August 10.

The city was ordered to "cease discharge of raw sewage into Beaver Creek" by August 10. All repairs were to (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

Prosecution May Ask New Sites for Trials

Told that judges of Fayette county circuit courts have decided not to accept the murder trial of Lee Hamilton on a change of venue from this county, Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen said Tuesday that a motion will be filed in circuit court here Sept. 12, requesting that the case be shifted to a county adjacent to Floyd for the hearing.

The change in trial scene was ordered at the July court term by Circuit Judge Hollie Conley when an attempt at a second trial of the case was halted by the report that a threat had been received by a prospective juror in the case.

Fayette judges were quoted as holding that the change of venue should have been ordered either by the Court of Appeals or by the administrative office of the courts.

They were reported to be willing to let Judge Conley move the case to Fayette for trial if he wants to preside in the hearing of the case there.

Hamilton is charged with the gunshot slaying of Charles (Hatler) Hamilton.

Allen also said he is researching the case of Ralph Anderson, whose trial for the slaying of Mack Lewis, was venue to Madison county and resulted in a "hung" jury, to determine if the next trial can be held in an adjacent county. He pointed to the travel and other expenses incurred in both the Hamilton and Anderson cases when taken to distant counties for trial.

Knott Woman Killed in Church Bus-Truck Collision at Lackey

One of seven occupants of a church bus was killed and three others seriously injured in a collision of the van-type vehicle and a heavy transport truck last Thursday afternoon at the Lackey intersection of KY 80 and KY 7.

Mrs. Norma Jean Hall Back, 65, of Topmost, died at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin, shortly after the accident.

Hospitalized were Jerry Hall, 12, reported in fair condition last week at Good Samaritan Hospital, Lexington; his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, 32, condition reported "stable" at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, and Peggy Jo Greathouse, 36, also of Topmost, in the Highlands Medical Center, condition stable.

The van of the J. S. Bell Baptist Church at Topmost was driven by the Rev. Harve Johnson, pastor of the church, and was returning to Topmost from Prestonsburg at the time of the crash. The truck of Overnite Transportation Co. was driven by Charles Rose, of West Prestonsburg, and was en route from Hindman to Prestonsburg. State Trooper Terry Hall, who investigated the tragedy, said the driver of the van was reportedly following a coal truck and apparently did not see the oncoming truck when he cut his vehicle to the left to turn onto KY 7.

Hall said no charge has been filed in the wreck. The investigation was not complete, last week-end.

The wreck victims were removed to hospitals by members of the Left Beaver Rescue Squad.

The Rev. Johnson suffered minor injuries. Karen Hall, 5, daughter of Elizabeth Hall, and Tammy, three-year-old daughter of Peggy Jo Greathouse, were uninjured.

The church vehicle was almost demolished.

The victim was a daughter of Mrs. Florence Bates Isaacs, of Topmost, and the late Allen Collins. She was the widow of Arthur Hall, who died in 1957, and Patrick Back, who died about three years (See Story No. 7, Page 4)

Parents Here Organize Group To Attack Drug Abuse Problem

Concern about drug abuse among Floyd schoolchildren has led a group of parents here to form a drug abuse prevention committee. The decision came after several dozen parents heard an address on the drug problem by Mountain Comprehensive Care Center staffers last Wednesday.

Committee chairwoman, Mrs. Myrtie Davis, said this week that she hoped the committee could be expanded to embrace a widely representative body of citizens and civic leaders, and that federal funds might be obtained to hire a staff person to set up neighborhood programs to educate children and their parents about alcohol and drug abuse.

Mrs. Davis added that this county might be able to learn from a drug prevention program currently in operation in Martin county.

Steve Knowles, program director of MCCC's Alcoholism and Drug Abuse program, said that the Martin program has won the support of law enforcement, school, church, civic and county officials. Martin fiscal court, he said, contributed $12,000 toward that county's six-month-old program.

The idea behind the Martin program, Knowles said, was to address the problem from as many angles as possible. "We have found that it does little good simply to crack down on drug pushers without offering an effective education program as well," he said.

Knowles said that the found quite credible claims made on the CBS "60 Minutes" program this week that between 50 and 70 percent of high school students nationwide smoked marijuana several times a week, and that 10 percent used the drug daily.

"Our own survey, made three years ago and now outdated, showed that 36 percent of students (in the five-county area served by MCCC) had at some time used a mild-altering drug," Knowles said. A growing concern, he added, was the increasing use here of sedatives, hypnotics and barbiturates.

The mental health agency has recently prepared a set of alcohol and drug curriculum guides suitable for use in the schools, Knowles said.

BRIGHT-EYED and ready for a brisk slide, this little girl is one of hundreds of Floyd countians of all ages who have already begun to take advantage of the many recreational facilities at the new county park at Allen. Official dedication of the park, which has been named the Henry Stumbo Memorial Park, is set for Sunday at 2 p.m.

$649,000 Okehed For Cliff Work

This Town...That World

If you begin now as the dogwoods, sourwoods and maples open the magic show, you'll have a running start on the kaleidoscope of color that—pretty please—is headed our way soon. But you'll wind up happily lost in the maze of color—with the rest of us—we hope.

THAT FEELING AGAIN
Got the feeling, all over again, last Friday afternoon after waiting too long to vacate Dewey Lake for shelter from increasing rain that all about was that Scottish Highlands atmosphere that I sense when the fog shoots up in a dozen little coves and hollows. That's as near Scotland as I have ever been, or am likely to be, but invariably such occasions conjure up pictures of misty glens, lochs and fog-wreathed crags.

Very Scottish. The lake wouldn't give up one minnow. I would have welcomed the Loch Ness monster.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT
For some weeks now we've been tuned in, you might say, to the sights and sounds of fall. But the other afternoon it was all turned around when not one but two mockingbirds brought springtime back again and gave a springtime concert from the trees at the rear of Venelia Rinehart's home. They had been absent for several weeks but, like that, were back and no less happy than when they left on what must have been vacation.

Some may see in their return a sign of a mild winter. There are optimists still around, you know. One has predicted a mild winter, since a hornets' nest was (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

ARC Approves Funds for Road, Other Projects

The Appalachian Regional Commission last week approved grants for the controversial public housing project at Cliff.

A total of $649,000 has been approved for water and sewer pipes, excavation and grading, and construction of an access road to the proposed Cliffside Housing Project, a low- and moderate-income apartment complex sponsored by the Church Housing Association of Prestonsburg.

State Development Secretary William Short said $469,000 will be used to build the access road, a project which has elicited vocal opposition in recent months from some Cliff residents opposed to public housing in their neighborhood. The road grant supplements a $168,000 ARC grant approved in 1977.

A $100,000 grant will be used for sewers and water pipe, a lift station, fire hydrants, and professional fees. The remaining $80,000 will pay for clearing, grubbing, excavation, and grading for the housing project.

To be built are nine townhouse-type buildings, containing eight one-bedroom apartments, 52 two-bedroom apartments, 28 three-bedroom apartments, and six four-bedroom apartments. Total cost of the project is $3.75 million, $3 million of which is coming from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Water System Gets ARC Help On Cost Overrun

A grant of $91,000 toward the $200,000 cost overrun on the Water Gap-Bull Creek water system was approved by the Appalachian Regional Commission last week. The overrun is said to have been caused by higher construction bids resulting from construction of the new KY 80 on Bull Creek. The remainder of the overrun is to be financed by a $60,000 grant and a $49,000 loan from the Farmers Home Administration.

The increased expense brings to $1,076,500 the total cost of the project which will tap on to the Prestonsburg water system to provide water for about 225 families on Bull Creek near Water Gap.

The $91,000 grant supplements an original ARC grant of $390,000. The Farmers Home Administration has previously committed a loan and grant totalling $466,000 for the project.

Court Names Board For Waste Program

The Floyd fiscal court took another step this week in the lengthy process of setting up a county-wide garbage service when it named a board of directors for the corporation which is to manage the service.

Since the county is not permitted to incur debts beyond a year's duration, Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc. is being established as a non-profit corporation for the purpose of applying for a Farmers Home Administration loan and grant.

Named Tuesday to the corporation's board of directors were Charles Clark, of Garrett, Robert McAninch, of Prestonsburg, William D. Music, of West Prestonsburg, Nancy Davenport, of Harold, and Magistrate Ed Caudill, of Hi Hat, representing the fiscal court.

McAninch, Music and Davenport had served on the Solid Waste Task Force which reported to the county earlier this year on the county garbage problems. Articles of incorporation for the new body were also approved at Tuesday's fiscal court meeting.

The approach of winter brought several citizens before the court to request attention to their roads. Sisters Judy Yunker and Eileen Schepers complained of damage to their road at Blue River caused by trucks carrying garbage to the county landfill there. They were told that the county lacks sufficient right-of-way to restore the road. In any case, it was pointed out, the county will soon be required to close the landfill there.

In response to Carole Ganim's request for grading and gravel for Conley Fork of Spurlock Creek, Magistrate Ray Wilcox cited grader breakdowns and the shortage of gravel allocated for county roads by the state. Danny Collins and other residents of Hays Branch, at Betsy Layne, told the court that the Beth-Elkhorn Corporation was prepared to (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Plot To Murder County Resident Claimed in Writ

Arkansas Creek troubles which originally involved members of two families apparently have spread to the point that one warrant alleging a criminal conspiracy to commit murder has been issued, with another possibly pending.

The differences between Leonard Hall and Ballard Crum reached circuit court last year when both drew light penalties. Issuance of warrants was resumed Sept. 7, and three men are under bond.

In one of these Crum named Hall on a wanton endangerment charge, alleging that Hall shot him in the back, side and ear with a shotgun. Hall's bond was set at $1000.

On the same date Hall swore out a warrant for Crum, accusing him of conspiracy by hiring one or more persons to commit murder. In his affidavit Hall added to the charge the statement, "and (See Story No. 6, Page 4)

Drill Tests Rescue Groups

The scene Saturday afternoon at West Prestonsburg was one of apparent tragedy. A school bus lay near the railroad tracks on its side, burning. Fire trucks, police cars and rescue vehicles converged on the area while rescuers placed bloodied victims in a nearby field.

For all the realism and atmosphere of urgency which existed, however, the exercise, which may have shocked some unsuspecting onlookers, was one in disaster preparedness, sponsored and carried out by the area Disaster Emergency Services office and area Civil Defense Director Petty Thompson.

Involving the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad, Prestonsburg Fire Department and its recently formed Squad 6 rescue unit, Prestonsburg Police and Auxiliary Police, P. & B. Ambulance Service, Kentucky State Police, and Highlands Regional Medical Center, the elaborate drill was designed to test the overall effectiveness of Prestonsburg area rescue workers and local medical organizations in reacting to a medium-scale disaster situation.

The scenario for the mock disaster was a school bus struck by a train, with 15 reported injuries of varying severity. As in a "real life" accident of this nature, a resident, Arvel "Mush" Nelson, called in the report of the burning bus at 5 p.m. A detachment from the Prestonsburg Fire Department arrived five minutes later, followed by rescue units, and an opening for removal of the trapped victims was cut through the roof of the bus by workers trained in use of the "jaws of (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Committee OK's Paintsville Bid For Hospital

A certificate-of-need application by the Paintsville Hospital Company will be presented to the Big Sandy Sub-Area Health Council tonight (Wednesday) with a recommendation for approval from the council's project review committee.

The application is for replacing the present 60-year-old Paintsville Hospital with a new facility containing the same number of beds—72—for which the hospital is currently licensed.

After review by the 30-member council, the application will be passed on in turn to the Eastern Kentucky Health Systems Agency (EKHSA) in Winchester next month, the State Comprehensive Health Planning Council, and finally to the State Board of Licensure and Need, where a final decision on the application will be made.

A previous application for replacement of the present hospital with a 94-bed facility was withdrawn by its sponsors after the EKHSA project review committee recommended its disapproval in July.

Paintsville Hospital's bid to rebuild conflicts with an application by Highlands Regional Medical Center to expand its present facility by 47 beds to 184 beds, since, according to an EKHSA staff analysis, only 189 beds are needed in the area served by the two hospitals. The Highlands application was turned down by the EKHSA in July and deferred by the State Comprehensive Health Planning Council in August as being out of conformity with the existing state health plan.

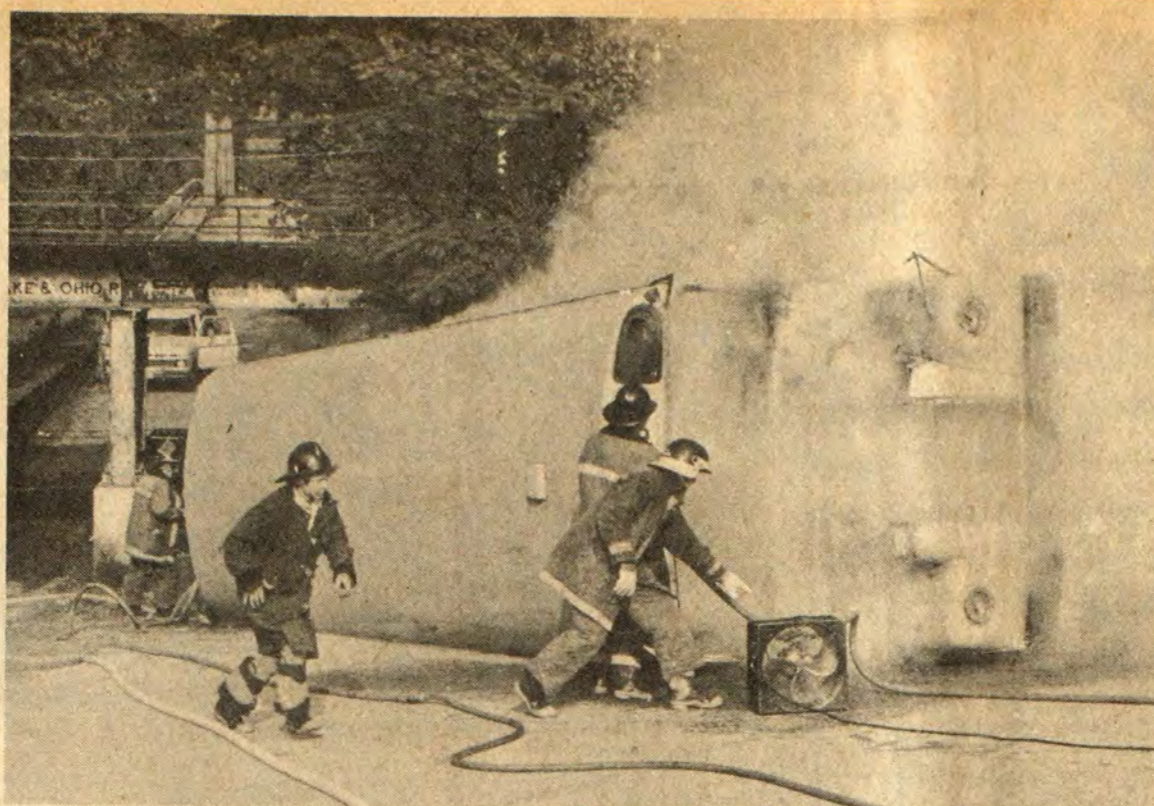

In pressing their case for approval of the 72-bed application before the Sub-Area Council project review committee Tuesday, a spokesman for Hospital Management Associates, the new owners of Paintsville Hospital, cited an analysis putting at 213 the number of beds needed in the area served by Paintsville and Highlands hospitals. Approval of Paintsville's 72 beds would, taken together with Highlands' existing 137 beds, provide for 209 beds in this area.

About 100 Johnson and Magoffin county residents turned out for Tuesday's meeting in a show of support for the Paintsville Hospital application.

Roberts Says Board Action Disappointing

Magistrate Kenneth Roberts, of District 2, expressed disappointment this week that the Economic Aid Board at its recent meeting failed to approve funding of any project in his district.

"I want the people to know that I am not a member of the Economic Aid Board and had nothing to do with its allotment of funds," he said.

Disaster Preparedness Drill Scenes

Saturday's disaster preparedness exercise got under way as Prestonsburg firefighters arrived on the scene of the staged bus-train collision and extinguished the vehicle blaze (top left). After removing "victims" to a safe distance from the wreckage, the skills of Emergency Medical Technicians (EMT's) and others trained in first-aid came into play as the injured received emergency treatment and evaluation (center row). Reaction of Highlands Regional Medical Center staff was put to the test as the injured were rushed from ambulances into the hospital's emergency room for further treatment. (See story, Page 1.)

Nunn To Visit Floyd, Saturday

Gubernatorial candidate Louie B. Nunn will be in Floyd and surrounding counties, Saturday, October 6.

Former Governor Nunn will make helicopter stops at the Potter Clinic, Lackey at 1 p.m., and John M. Stumbo Elementary School, Mud Creek at 2 p.m., after a morning stop at 10 at the Magoffin county courthouse.

At each of these stops he will be discussing the problems of Eastern Kentucky and his future plans for the area.

Further information may be obtained concerning Mr. Nunn's visit by calling 886-1065, 886-1067, or 358-2381.

Professional Offices To Supplant Residences

Two Court street residences, one of which is a community landmark, have been sold and will house professional offices.

The former Ruth D. Sowards home is being remodeled and repaired for occupancy by the law offices of Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen and R. Donald Goble and the office of Dr. William G. Allen, orthodontist.

The nearby Jo M. Davidson residence, which was bought last week by Fred G. Francis, will be razed and a building to house the law offices of Francis, Francis and Kazee will be built on the site.

VISITORS HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Siever, of Evansville, Ind., spent the week-end here, guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Moore.

It's thought bad luck to see the moon over one's shoulder.

Lawmakers Look Over Area Rural Housing

A tour last week by a legislative panel of rural housing construction for low-income families in Floyd and other counties brought praise of the program.

"I am really impressed with the projects that have been started in Eastern Kentucky," commented State Senator Ed Ford, D-Cynthiana, a member of the legislative subcommittee.

The panel was joined by members of the Kentucky Housing Corporation in its visit to this county, Somerset, Monticello, Manchester, Hazard and Winchester, where housing for low-income families and the elderly is being constructed with KHC help.

The town of Wheelwright, which was bought recently by KHC from Mountain Investments, Inc., was one of the stops for the party. KHC representatives explained to legislators that it plans to rehabilitate houses there and sell them to private individuals.

The tour was made to permit legislators, who have been probing KHC lending procedures, to take a first-hand look at its operations in Eastern Kentucky. Legislators had received some complaints about KHC lending policies.

African legend has it that God created the giraffe last of all the animals, using leftovers from the others: skin of the leopard, speed of the antelope, neck and legs of the camel. The October Reader's Digest sets the record straight: the giraffe started out as a kind of a deer, roaming Europe, Asia and Africa 25 million years ago.

$748,000 Is Approved To Correct Mudslide Problem at Tutor Key

Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus has approved the allocation of an additional $748,000 to correct a potential disaster to five homes in Tutor Key, Johnson County.

The funds were made available from fees collected by Interior's Office of Surface Mining (OSM) from current coal mining operations, most of which are dedicated to correcting environmental damage to abandoned coal mine lands.

OSM had previously approved $50,000 from emergency funds to correct an imminent danger to one home near Tutor Key.

"The initial funding prevented a serious disaster," said Region II Director David C. Short. "The additional funding is intended to correct the entire problem."

The major cause of the mudslide was traced to coal surface mining operations which took place in 1972 and 1973 on the Baker Branch of the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River.

"If loosened material still remaining on the hillside broke loose in one massive slide, widespread flooding could occur in the backwaters of Baker Branch," Short added. "A catastrophe of this sort could endanger the lives of at least five families living in the area."

Americans spend an estimated $1,165,000 on drugs for arthritis every year, reports the Kentucky Chapter of The Arthritis Foundation.

Coal Co. Donates Check to Mayo

Scholarship funds at Mayo State Vocational-Technical School increased recently when Island Creek presented the school with a $1,000 donation. Making the presentation was Gil Johnson, Director of Human Resources of Island Creek Division, and accepting are, right, Mayo Principal Jesse Conley and, left, Regional Vocational Educational Director Bronelle Skaggs. The money will be placed in Mayo's general scholarship fund for use by any eligible student enrolled in one of the school's 20 programs.

Headstones to mark the graves of 225,435 eligible beneficiaries were furnished last year by the Veterans Administration's Department of Memorial Affairs. This included over 2,800 which were shipped outside the continental United States.

Grant Made State For Mine Programs

The Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection has received $863,928 for program development under the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act, according to Secretary Frank Harscher.

The money came from the U.S. Department of the Interior, under a grant program administered by the Office of Surface Mining. It supplements the department's fiscal year 1978 award of $1,565,699.

In awarding the additional grant to Kentucky, Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus said, "Kentucky produces 20 percent of America's coal, and the state is progressing well toward creation of its own regulatory program."

According to Harscher, the additional money will be used to develop a system and gather data for evaluating lands unsuitable for mining; to revise the Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's surface mining regulations and program plan; and to develop teaching materials for training new inspectors.

The award will permit the implementation of four major consulting contracts for the planning of programs to determine lands unsuitable for coal mining and other related needs that have been planned for some time, Harscher said.

Exhibit Reflects Mountain Life

Several paintings by West Prestonsburg artist Tim Sizemore, all dealing with scenes of Appalachian life, are currently on exhibit at the Floyd County Library here.

Sizemore, in his twenties, began painting only five years ago after one day deciding "I wanted to be an artist," and his considerable skills have been developed completely on his own.

"I read the diaries of the great masters," Sizemore commented, "and sometimes I'll sit for maybe five hours and look at one picture." Sizemore says he thinks he is on "the right track" in his painting, having developed a distinctive style, but, he insists, "I feel like I won't be a really good painter for another 10 years."

Sizemore's work, all in oil, depicts mountain faces and scenes with much realism. The artist says he thinks recording the vestiges of mountain culture today is worthwhile. "In not too many years," he said, "there'll still be old buildings and barns standing, but the people and their ways will be long gone." Many of his ideas come from old photographs and he never misses an opportunity to observe and talk to older area residents.

Sizemore doesn't actively try to sell his work although he has "when somebody makes an offer." He says he has learned not to try to live as an artist. "I didn't do a thing but paint one whole year," Sizemore said, "and I nearly starved to death."

The exhibit will be at the library through October 13.

State Prison To Resume Manufacture Of Kentucky License Plates

In the next few weeks, the prison industries at the Kentucky State Reformatory at LaGrange will be back in business making license plates for Kentucky automobiles. The prison industries has not made license plates since 1975 when the equipment being used became obsolete.

Inmates at the reformatory are installing the new equipment to be used in making the plates. About 70 inmates will be employed to operate the equipment.

A special appropriation made by the 1979 Special Session of the Kentucky General Assembly provided the prison industries with funds to purchase new equipment.

Lou Breckel, state director of prison industries for the Bureau of Corrections, said the total cost of the project is about $450,000. The John R. Wall Co. of Huntington, Pa., which specializes in setting up prison industries, is furnishing the equipment and supervising the inmates who will install it.

Bill Fowler, chief supervisor of prison industries at LaGrange, said the new equipment will enable them to make a better license plate.

"It will be the Cadillac of license plates," he said. "We're using special quality steel. If Kentucky goes to a five-year plate, we'll be able to make one that will last."

The new equipment is set up so the plates are stamped, cleaned and painted in a continuous operation. The new operation is safer than the old because inmates will not have to handle the plates during the chemical cleaning and painting operations.

An October Celebration

By Barbara Horner

In Munich 150 years ago, Germans celebrated the marriage of Princess Therese of Saxe-Hildburghausen to Bavaria's Crown Prince Ludwig with a horse race and a huge party. It was such a success that the party, called Oktoberfest, has been repeated every year since.

In Munich, site of the original and most elaborate Oktoberfest, celebrants consume 512,573 barbecued chickens, 38 roasted oxen, 364, 234 pairs of pork sausages and 41,244 ham hocks and wash it all down with close to a million gallons of beer.

Festivities begin when the town's mayor taps the first cask of the beer for which Bavaria is famous. On the following day, thousands of people in folk costumes march with bands, floats, and decorated beer wagons drawn by brewery horses to participate in the Trachtenfest parade.

Munich visitors during the Oktoberfest season actually the last few weeks in September and the first week in October can also view folklore music and dance performances, a marksmen's parade, and agricultural shows.

But you don't have to fly to Germany to participate in Oktoberfest; there are similar German-folklore festivals as close to home as Wisconsin and Missouri.

In Hermann, Missouri, you can combine history with your celebrations. This tiny town of 2,650 has no less than 108 buildings on record at the National Register of Historic Sites, built in the early days of the railroad and river steamers when the town prospered. Nature-lovers will also appreciate the town's location at the foothills of the Ozarks on the banks of the Missouri River.

Hermann also boasts what was, until Prohibition, the second-largest winery in the U.S.: the Stone Hill Winery, which participates in the town's Oktoberfest and offers tours and free wine tasting sessions. Visitors can watch the wine-making process and tour the historic main building, which has a restored living area and an attic museum filled with artifacts from the Hermann area.

Other Oktoberfest attractions in Hermann include the annual art fair and bazaar in early October and an antique show and flea market the second week of the month. On the last three weekends of the month, visitors can watch demonstrations of such old-time crafts as buttermaking, quilting and weaving, all to the tune of German music.

In La Crosse, Wisconsin, there is more to Oktoberfest than wine or beer appreciation. Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce with the support of the G. Heileman Brewing Co., Oktoberfest in La Crosse is a multitude of races, parades, exhibitions and celebrations.

Pre-fest activities begin in mid-September, with horseshoe tournaments, a Miss La Crosse/Oktoberfest Queen beauty Pageant, square dances, parties, theatrical performances and the Fest Masters Ball. The festival itself begins in the first few days of October and includes crafts exhibits and entertainment on the fairgrounds. It all winds up with a torchlight parade whose flickering lights reflect the reds, yellows, oranges and golds of autumn leaves.

There are other, briefer Oktoberfests scattered throughout the U.S. In St. Louis, this zesty ethnic festival is held annually on the first Sunday in October at Marquette Park in the heart of the Dutchtown community. The St. Louis Oktoberfest stresses ethnic specialties in food, drink and entertainment brought by the German, Polish and Slavic people who settled and dominated the neighborhood for many years. Popular attractions are the sausage and ethnic pastry booths, beer garden and game booths.

So roll out the barrel and bring out the bratwurst. Raise your stein, blow the foam off your beer, and drink a toast to Oktoberfest.

The Fiddler Was a Patient

September birthday party time was a festive occasion at Riverview Manor Nursing Home as the residents enjoyed the talents of "Fiddlin' Dewey" Shepherd. There was music, dancing, bingo and cake and ice cream. Shepherd was a resident at Riverview at the time, but has since been released to go home.

Two Jailed, Fined As Sellers of 'Pot'

One of two men accused of selling marijuana was given the maximum first-offense penalty by a district court jury last week.

Doug Neeley's jail term was set at 12 months, and he was fined $500.

The penalty for Timothy Slone, given trial on the same charge, was 90 days in jail and a fine of $250. A member of the jury later told County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. that Slone was given the lesser penalty because of his age, 18, and the plea that it was his first offense.

Two juveniles charged with breaking into the Jewel Hardware at Martin were convicted and committed to the Department of Human Resources till they reach age 21.

ATTEND WELLS FUNERAL

Among those who were here for the funeral of Melvin Wells at the Carter Funeral Home on Sunday were his grandsons, Wendell Wells, Mrs. Wells, and children, of Bluefield, W. Va., and Kenneth Wells, Mrs. Wells and baby, of Michigan. While here they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wells and other relatives.

Health Service Survey in Area Ready To Begin

A U.S. Public Health Service team will be in Prestonsburg two months, October 5-December 5, to conduct the Health and Nutrition Examination Survey designed to gather valuable statistical information on the health of the American people. The survey, a program of the National Center for Health Statistics, is part of a continuing national program first authorized by Congress in 1956.

Over a three-year period 28,000 individuals, ages 6 months through 74 years, will be asked to participate in the study. Prestonsburg is one of 65 areas scientifically selected to produce a representative sample of the total population of the United States. Approximately 585 residents of Floyd, Johnson, and Magoffin counties who fall into a statistically representative sample of the area, will be offered a free physical examination.

Next Tuesday, interviews from the Bureau of the Census and the U.S. Public Health Service will begin to call on selected individuals to solicit their participation and arrange an appointment. Examinations will be given in the survey's mobile Health Examination Center, which will be located at the Amphitheater parking lot, Jenny Wiley State Park. Transportation to and from the Center will be provided to participants at no cost. In addition to a general examination and laboratory work-up, participants will be tested for heart and lung conditions, hearing, nutrition, diabetes, hypertension, arthritis and kidney disease. These tests will be administered by the U.S. Public Health Service staff consisting of physicians, nurses, technicians and nutritionists.

Since the first survey in this program was undertaken 15 years ago, more than 40,000 Americans of all ages have participated voluntarily. The information obtained through their cooperation has provided national statistics on the extent of conditions such as heart disease, diabetes, and arthritis in the United States and on many facets of human growth and development. The data are used in medical research and education as well as in planning national health programs.

Jenny Wiley Trail Conference Meeting Set

The Jenny Wiley Trail Conference has scheduled a meeting for Tuesday, October 23, at 7 p.m., at the Jenny Wiley Lodge, to which the public is invited. A backpacking equipment display and presentation will be given and plans to organize an outdoors club in the Prestonsburg area will be discussed. For further information, contact Myra Herbert (886-2711), Sonny Houston (349-6269) or Bryan Mattingly (739-5191).

Fire Threat Season Begins This Week

Floyd county residents are reminded by the Division of Forestry that, beginning October 1 and continuing through December 15, the official fire threat season will be in effect in Kentucky. During this period all burning must be done between 4:30 p.m. and midnight.

The Division of Forestry cites as the two major causes of forest fires in the state the burning of leaves and debris around private dwellings in the late afternoon and evening, and leaving campfires unattended.

"It is not advisable to do any burning while any type of wind exists and it is illegal to burn within 150 feet of any wooded area or fuel lines leading to woodlands," said Forestry Division spokesman Carter Conley this week. During the fire season a Forestry plane will be flying to detect fires and illegal burning. "This plane allows us to know quickly if there is a fire and to spot offenders," Conley said.

Further information concerning burning laws may be obtained from the Division of Forestry District Office, Prestonsburg, 886-8562.

Pvt. Hamilton in Desert Training

FORT IRWIN, California, (AHTNC)—When a Banner soldier stepped into the 110 d. temperature of the Mojave desert this summer, it actually was a relief—because the inside of his M60 tank was 130 d.

Army Private Odean Hamilton, son of Odas Hamilton, of Banner, spent a month this summer at Fort Irwin, California, only 40 miles south of Death Valley.

Commenting upon his experiences in the sand and rock of Irwin's 640,000 acres, Hamilton stated, "It was really nice seeing Death Valley. It was like a picture. All together, it was a challenge."

Hamilton's unit is normally stationed at Fort Hood, Texas. It moved to Irwin on an emergency basis, and was issued tanks and equipment from training stockpiles.

Irwin is a tanker's dream—and nightmare. Its wide open spaces allow training exercises to take place over realistic distances, and with all types of live fire. But those same realistic distances and conditions, make this training as fatiguing as combat. Long hours on the trail, eating dust and being pounded by tank noise is more than even a dedicated off the road enthusiast would enjoy.

Hamilton, who joined the Army to "get a new start on life," commented on his future plans. "I plan to work with heavy equipment when I get out. They are a lot like tanks," he stated.

Hawthorne Classic To Return to KET

"The Scarlet Letter," a major dramatization of Nathaniel Hawthorne's novel of Puritan America, returns to KET Sunday, October 7 at 7 p.m. (ET). The four, hour-long presentations air on consecutive Sundays through October 28.

"The Scarlet Letter," which was first broadcast on KET in April, stars Meg Foster as the adulterous Hester Prynne, Kevin Conway as her vengeful husband Roger Chillingworth and John Heard as the pious minister Arthur Dimmesdale.

The drama focuses on Hester Prynne, who—condemned for a sin of passion—must forever wear the scarlet letter "A" on her breast. Proud, independent and courageous in her defiance of the social values of her time, Hester chooses to assert her self-sufficiency, her motherhood and her love.

Hester endures her public punishment with dignity and grows stronger as the years of isolation and ostracism pass. Her lover, however, lives undetected in the community, tormented and weakened by the burden of an unexposed sin. Hester's husband, deeply hurt and unable to forgive, coldly plots revenge.

Four years went into the planning and research of "The Scarlet Letter," which was shot on location in Newport, R. I. The town of 1642 Boston had to be re-created through a film set of 20 buildings and countless authentic props.

"The Scarlet Letter" was first published in 1850. More than 100 years later, this complex tale is both contemporary and timely. Generations of readers have discovered values to suit every age in Hawthorne's poetic examination of the emerging American spirit.

A baby tree frog only half an inch long can jump over five times its length straight up in the air, says Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine for children. A full-size tree frog can jump even higher—over 20 times its length.

Rabies Outbreak In State Subsides

Kentucky's summer outbreak of rabies apparently has subsided, a Department of Human Resources health official said last week.

Only one case of rabies has been confirmed in the past two weeks, reported Dr. Joseph Skaggs, veterinarian for the department's Bureau for Health Services.

A total of 99 cases have been reported this year, 72 of which were rabid skunks, Skaggs said.

No one in Kentucky has contracted the disease this year, he added. However, Human Resources has distributed vaccine and serum for more than 100 people believed exposed to rabies. The total number of rabies treatments in the state is not known, since private physicians can obtain vaccine and serum from other sources.

While rabies trends are unpredictable, Skaggs said, he hopes the recent downturn signals an end to the current outbreak. However, he warned, wildlife rabies is more common in cold weather, and cases can occur anywhere.

While this year's incidence has been higher than last year's, department records show the current rate is below comparable periods in the past 15 years.

Pikeville Jaycees Open Haunted House

The Pikeville Jaycees are announcing the opening of their Haunted House which is an exciting event for young and old each October. Several thousand people have visited the haunted house over the past five years. The Jaycees have invested many thousands of dollars in money and man-hours in putting together a bigger and better haunted house each year. Professional Hollywood costumes and masks are used for many exhibits.

This year the haunted house will again be in the old bus depot on Caroline Avenue in Pikeville, and it will utilize the complete building, whereas last year only half the building was used.

Money raised from the haunted house is used all year by the Jaycees for community improvement projects. This year in appreciation for what the community has done to support the Jaycees, the Jaycees have given several hundred free passes to WPKE and WDHR radio stations to give away.

The Haunted House will be open nightly beginning at dusk the first two weekends of October, and will be open every night beginning at dusk October 19 through the 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baker were honored by Gov. Rhodes and others at ceremonies in Columbus, O. for their work as foster parents with the Scioto County Children's Service. During five and a half years' participation in the county's foster parent program, Mr. and Mrs. Baker have taken 16 children into their home.

Unemployment Rate 'Holds Own'

Statistics released by the Department for Human Resources last week indicated the state's unemployment rate remained unchanged from July to August, while the number of unemployed persons increased.

The unemployment rate for July and August was 5.6 percent. Unemployed Kentuckians numbered 89,000 in August, up 1,400 from the 87,600 out of work the month before.

Rober MacDonald, chief labor market analyst for the department's Bureau for Manpower Services, explained that the rate remained the same despite the increase in the number of jobless people because the number of working people also increased.

"Through additional job opportunities in August, the civilian labor force increased by 25,600 over the number of people working in July," he said.

The primary cause of the increase in unemployment was lay-offs in manufacturing, trade and mining, said MacDonald. Of those unemployed, 67.7 percent were lay-off status waiting for their original jobs to re-open.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to express my deepest appreciation to all friends and neighbors in West Prestonsburg who were so kind to me upon the death of my son, Donald Gene Shepherd. All those who expressed sympathy by word or deed and those who sent flowers will not be forgotten. Again, thank you.

HIS MOTHER,
FLORENCE ANN NELSON

"The remaining 32.3 percent out of work included persons trying to enter or re-enter the labor force," he said. "Many of them were youths entering the labor force for the first time."

The total number of Kentuckians working in August was 1,494,700, approximately 13,500 fewer people working than in August 1978.

The national unemployment rate for August was 5.9 percent.

Glass—Hazardous Consumer Product

The consumer product most often implicated with injuries is glass, according to Department for Human Resources statistics. Last year there were an estimated 25,000 glass-related injuries in Kentucky.

"This large number of injuries is typical nationwide. Because of this, a federal product standard of identity for certain glass products was created," said Edsel Moore, manager of the department's consumer product safety branch. The standard requires that new and replacement glass used in certain situations must be safety glazed, he said.

Safety-glazed glass panels, when broken, do not shatter into large, jagged, razor sharp pieces like regular window glass, said Moore. Some types of safety-glazed glass have wire embedded in the glass. Others are constructed with alternating layers of glass and plastic or plexiglass.

Moore said the federal standard deals primarily with glass used in shower doors, shower-tub enclosures, storm doors, patio doors and certain glass panels used in or near entrances of domestic, commercial or public buildings.

"Although this standard of identity has been in effect for several years," said

Moore, "Many consumers are not familiar with the guidelines. Through injury reports, we believe there are still buildings being constructed with glass panel materials that do not meet the standard."

More than 1,800 reported injuries in Kentucky last year involved glass which should have contained safety-glazing material, Moore said. "The majority of those injuries happened to children and were much more serious than most other glass-related injuries."

It is very easy for someone, especially a child or person with a vision impairment, to mistake very clean glass for an open door, said Moore. He advises consumers who do not have safety-glazed glass installed in or near doors to do so, particularly when replacing broken glass panels.

However, said Moore, if the cost of installing safety-glazed glass is prohibitive, there are other steps consumers can take to avoid accidents. "Stick-on decorative decals, tape or guard rails (especially on shower or tub enclosures) on the glass will alert people that a window or door is present," he said.

Additional information about safety glazing and the federal product standard of identity for safety glazing may be obtained from the Department for Human Resources Consumer Product Safety Branch, 275 E. Main Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40621. The telephone number for the office is (502) 564-4537.

(Mr. Moore is a native of Floyd County.)

Bookmobiles provide a special public service for Kentucky's citizens. At the 1954 state fair, 80 bookmobiles were presented to the state to provide library service in the counties. Bite Down on Dental Bills

by Paula Stevens

Meridith hadn't visited a dentist for five years. She wasn't aware of any dental problems, and she didn't feel she could spare the time or cash for regular checkups. A friend convinced her to make an appointment with a new breed of dental clinics—department store dental clinics. What convinced Meridith were the prices and the convenient hours—evenings and weekends.

Marlene had long endured life with protruding teeth. It was her company's new dental plan that allowed her to visit an orthodontist to have the problem corrected.

Cora at 82 needed dentures, but on her fixed income she couldn't afford them. Then her state passed a ballot measure that allows a dental lab technician to fit the false teeth. The new law made the dentures affordable for her.

The number of Americans who visit a dentist is growing each year, because of the changing face of dentistry and new ways to cope with dental costs. Since 1970, the proportion of Americans seeing dentists in a year has increased from 58 to 63%, according to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

At least one reason for the increased number of visits, authorities say, is the growing number of department store dental centers. While some customers were wary at first of "bargain dentistry", many tried the service, attracted by the convenience and lower costs, and were satisfied enough to come back.

In the past two years since the first department store dental center opened, there has been enough positive response to inspire their appearance in malls and department stores in New York, California, Florida, Michigan, Ohio and several other states.

In New York, six Universal Dental Centers have leased space in Times Square Stores. In California, another dental organization has opened eight centers in Sears stores.

In south Florida, two Dental Offices operate in Jefferson Stores, a Montgomery Ward affiliate. Dent Care Systems has opened up in Montgomery Ward stores in Albany, New York; Flint, Michigan; Toledo, Ohio and Durham, North Carolina.

Dental care at these centers can cost as much as 65% less than if you went to a private dentist. A silver amalgam filling at a Universal Dental Center office, for instance, costs between $7 and $18 depending on the size of the cavity. A basic examination, including X-rays, costs $12; and a porcelain and metal crown goes for $150. In Hialeah, Florida, Richard Deutch, DDS, who runs a dental office in the Jefferson stores, offers dentures for $190, less than a third of the cost of the private community average price of $600.

Instead of a fee-for-service arrangement, the Prodex Dental Centers in Sears stores in California are offering a $36 annual fee for x-rays, cleaning and diagnosis, and a 20-25% reduction on all other charges.

High volume and cost efficiency are some of the reasons that dental services can be offered at these relatively low rates.

High volume—bolstered by court decisions allowing dentists, among other professionals, to advertise—is possible because they are open seven days a week, often as many as 80 hours. Though appointments are recommended, patients frequently walk in off the shopping aisle on impulse, or rush in for an emergency.

Department store dental centers aren't the only way to bring down costs and make dental care more available.

Dr. Charles Randolph, a Larchmont dentist, spent the last year forming an association of 80 family dentists in the New York metropolitan area. The group reduces the cost of offering quality dental care by buying supplies in bulk as a cooperative. There are no clinics affiliated with the group, only family dentists who feel that discount buying can help them pass on savings to their patients. Patients choose any dentist within the group, and are entitled to two free check-ups each year and reductions of 20-50% on other dental work, including specialties like orthodontia, periodontia, endodontia and oral surgery.

Another trend that is bringing down costs is the increasing use of dental technicians to fill in some of the services that have traditionally been performed by dentists at a higher rate. In Ohio, where laws regarding the use of dental technicians are liberal, trained assistants can fill teeth after the dentist has spent five minutes cutting the tooth. The dentist is able to handle a larger number of patients, and therefore, cut costs.

Another area of dentistry that is starting to use technicians to bring down costs is denturism. A group of 1,500 senior citizens campaigned hard in Oregon to get a ballot measure passed to allow someone other than a dentist fit false teeth. They won. Now dental laboratory technicians are able to take impressions and fit dentures in addition to doing repair and construction work, which greatly reduces the cost of dentures.

Free enterprise is changing dentistry. And the consumer is in line to benefit.

Apple Harvest in Kentucky—a Time For Feasting, Fun and Festivals

Apple pie, apple cake, apple dumplings, applesauce, applebutter. No matter how you slice 'em or mash 'em, apples are a versatile and popular fruit in Kentucky.

Apple harvesting is in full swing across the state, and Kentucky's crop this year is considered outstanding. Production is estimated at 10 percent higher than usual.

But even that increase will not satisfy the hunger of Kentuckians, according to Allan Ramsey, an Extension specialist in agricultural economics at the University of Kentucky. He figures the state would need to produce about five times more apples than it does to meet the demand.

Apple production in Kentucky is spread throughout the state. Casey county markets more apples than any other single county with growers there producing about 16 percent of the state's fresh apples, according to Ramsey.

Another major producer is Johnson county which markets around five percent of the Kentucky crop. Other areas of concentration are around Paducah, Bowling Green and Lexington. Since Casey and Johnson counties do not enjoy marketing locations as advantageous as the other production areas, Ramsey says those counties promote their crops with apple festivals each year.

The Casey county festival is held in late September in the middle of Kentucky's apple harvesting season. The residents bring attention to their crop with the world's largest apple pie, a pie with dimensions of 10 feet wide and eight inches deep. More than 65 bushels of apples are used to make the 3,700-pound pastry.

The Johnson county festival, officially known as the Kentucky Apple Festival of Johnson County, has been an annual event since 1962. This year the dates for the celebration are Oct. 5 and 6. Activities take place in the county seat, Paintsville.

The festival is billed as the state's largest festival, outsized only by the Kentucky Derby Festival in Louisville.

The festivals help make the apple business in Kentucky a $7 million industry, according to Ramsey. He says growers here sell a million or more bushels of apples a year. The prices range this year is $5-8 per bushel, depending on quality.

Although the apple festivals have done much to promote the sale of Casey and Johnson county apples, Ramsey says most Kentucky fruit sells itself easily. Under tight economic conditions vegetable buying sometimes falls off, but fruit sales generally remain good, he added.

COPE Program Pays Third of '79 Funds

About one-third of the funds allocated this fiscal year for a state crisis assistance program have been paid out during the first three months of operation, according to Department for Human Resources figures.

The Crisis Oriented Program for Emergencies (COPE) began its second year of operation July 1 with $750,000. So far the program has paid 2,131 applicants a total of $285,297.

Last fiscal year the department's Bureau for Social Insurance approved 3,672 applications for assistance before funds ran out and the program was suspended.

Operating under legislation from the 1978 General Assembly, COPE offers emergency funds to individuals or couples who face a severe financial crisis and who have no children living at home.

Changes in this year's program allow the bureau to reach more applicants with the same amount of money, explained Jack Waddell, acting commissioner for the bureau.

No longer will the program cover clothing purchases unless the applicant lost clothing as a result of a flood, fire or other disaster. Also, minimum income requirements have been raised for applicants.

"We are in effect stretching our funds in order to reach more applicants," Waddell said.

Ten percent of all men and 8 1/2 percent of all women have permanent disabilities, according to the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped publication "Facts About Handicapped People."

Subcommittee Hears Debate On Comp Care Center Funding

Health officials appearing before a legislative subcommittee recently discussed the pros and cons of the state's formula for allocating state general funds to comprehensive care centers.

The panel also heard debate on methods of caring for mentally-retarded residents.

The issues were aired before a meeting of the budget review Subcommittee for Human Resources of the Interim Joint Committee on Appropriations and Revenue.

The subcommittee is examining the effect of a 1978 law on funding and operation of the state's comprehensive care system.

The law established a formula for distributing state general funds to comp care centers and sought to clarify the authority of local mental health-retardation boards over the centers.

Fifteen regional comp care centers are operating in Kentucky, and each operates local offices in many counties. The centers offer direct mental health and mental retardation services, as well as referrals to mental health and mental retardation facilities.

Bureau for Health Services Commissioner Robert Slaton noted that under House Bill 686, the Human Resources Department allocates state funds for comp care centers under a formula with three elements. Part of the overall allocation is based on per capita income of the comp care region. Another portion provides state matching funds for local money raised. The third element is a discretionary fund maintained by the Human Resources secretary, Slaton said.

Responding to questions by Rep.

Adams, Dr. Richard Heine, director of the department's Center for Comprehensive Care Coordination, said all comprehensive care centers are financially sound, though some have cash flow problems periodically.

Heine said the department has improved its technical assistance to comp care centers and has established personnel guidelines for the centers.

On the issue of funding, Jim Stivers, of the North Central Comprehensive Care Center, said the state formula had created an inequity in the distribution of state money. He said that, as a result, some centers had received increased funding in the past fiscal year, while others had not.

Similar views were expressed by officials of two other centers.

Defending the formula, Dr. Robert Sviley of the Pennyroyal Comprehensive Care Center, said the method was an attempt to be objective in allocating funds.

The issue of care for mentally retarded citizens also came before the subcommittee.

Oliver Barber, a Louisville attorney active in mental health-retardation issues, called on the Human Resources Department to formulate programs emphasizing locally-based care for the mentally retarded. He said pending litigation may result in the moving out of mentally retarded persons from centralized institutions.

His views were echoed by Ron Cutter, director of the Kentucky Association of Retarded Citizens.

Three parents of children in the Hazelwood facility in Jefferson county for the mentally retarded urged legislators to see that such facilities are not closed down and called for salary increases for the staff of such state institutions.

Della West, of Louisville, said Hazelwood is "absolutely essential" for the profoundly mentally retarded.

Stresses Coal Importance

The importance of coal to solving the nation's energy crisis was underscored last Thursday by Under Secretary of the Department of the Interior James A. Joseph at the Fourth Annual Governor's Conference on the Environment in Owensboro.

"It is one of the ironies of our time that coal, the ancient fuel, is on the threshold of becoming coal, the future fuel; that the energy source which powered the Industrial Revolution and propelled us into the twentieth century is also our hope as we look forward to the twenty-first century," Joseph said.

Joseph also underscored the underlying theme of this year's conference when he told the conference participants that in the eyes of the Department of the Interior, the goals of increased production and environmental protection are inseparable.

"We believe that better air, cleaner water and a more attractive landscape after mining are not inconsistent with greater production of coal. Secretary (Cecil) Andrus (of the Interior Department) concurs wholeheartedly with his colleague, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, who said recently there is no inconsistency between increased safety, health and production," Joseph said.

The under secretary said the Department of Interior was disappointed with the Senate's recent action which, he said, would substantially weaken the environmental protections set forth in the Surface Mining Act.

He said if the bill passed the House, Secretary Andrus has indicated he would ask the president to veto the bill. "We believe it is necessary to work within the existing statutory framework for surface mining reclamation and enforcement," Joseph said. "By doing so, we can give the coal industry and all interested parties the assurance they need to make the investments of money and time required to meet national energy demands, while protecting the environment."

Joseph warned the conference participants, however, that coal will not become the fuel of choice by the government edict, nor by industry public relations. "Coal will become the fuel of choice only when it becomes the acceptable alternative," he said.

"To gain the level of acceptability that will spark significant new production, we must find better ways to mine coal, to transport it and to burn it," he explained.

Vocational Education Gets $137,979 Grant

The Appalachian Regional Commission has approved a $137,979 grant for funding vocational education programs in Appalachian Kentucky, according to Gov. Julian Carroll.
 The Bureau of Vocational Education will coordinate the program with schools in Floyd, Rowan, Perry, Bell and Clark counties.
 Development Secretary William Short said the grant would be used to pay salaries of five teacher-coordinators who will help at least 225 vocational school students find cooperative work in business and industry. Students from 20 vocational facilities in the five vocational education regions will be eligible for the cooperative work program.
 The teacher-coordinators will attempt to place at least 55 percent of the students in full-time training-related jobs following completion of the program, Short said.

Map Exhibit At Old Capitol

A unique exhibit of Kentucky map-making will be displayed in the Old Capitol, Oct. 1 to Nov. 12. In conjunction with the exhibit, a reception launching Dr. Thomas Clark's book, "Historic Maps of Kentucky," is planned for October at the Old Capitol.

The display of Kentucky cartography, "A Most Extraordinary Country," was prepared by Bill Long, curator of the Old Capitol. The exhibit includes 49 maps, many of which date from 1790 to 1830.

"This exhibit celebrates the dedicated efforts made by historian Clark to recognize the mapmakers of this state," said Long.

The Kentucky Historical Society and the University Press of Kentucky will host the reception for Dr. Clark in the Old Capitol Friday, Oct. 5, from 5 to 7 p.m. to launch the publication of Clark's book. Copies of the volume will be available at the reception.

Clark's cartographic history includes 10 facsimile maps, nine of which will appear in the exhibit. The earliest original map in the exhibit is a 1720 study by Herman Moll of London.

Another interesting map is an 1845 reprint of a Kentucky map made in 1681. It is one of the early studies by the French explorer Marquette. A 1978 map published by the Kentucky Geological Survey is the most recent one in the collection.

Long worked many months on the exhibit and considers it one of the most comprehensive map displays of its kind ever produced in the state. "Studying the maps of any region gives an overview of that area's history. A map corresponds to reality as seen by its maker at a particular time," Long said. "The study of Kentucky's cartographical development has long been a neglected area, and the purpose of this exhibit is to focus on this vital aspect of our heritage."

The maps in the exhibit are from the Kentucky Historical Society's collection and the collections of the University of Kentucky, Filson Club, Kentucky Library at Western Kentucky University and the Cincinnati Historical Society.

The Old Capitol is open daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m.

DRIVING FORCE in women careers, Anna Southard, foreground, tells of her experiences as a woman in a career traditionally reserved for men. The 34-year-old Louisville resident is a bus driver for Louisville's Transit Authority of River City (TARC). Mrs. Southard and three other women discussed their non-traditional jobs at a meeting of the Southeastern Regional Advisory Committee for Improved Services to Women. The meeting, hosted last week in Louisville by the Kentucky Department for Human Resources, focused on employment and training services offered to women through government programs such as CETA and Job Crops.

Beef Field Day Set In Owen Co. Oct. 18

The practical needs of cattlemen in managing their herds will get top billing at the beef field day at the University of Kentucky's Eden Shale Farm in Owen county, October 18. The farm is located about 5 miles east of Owenton.

Starting at 1:30 p.m., the field day program offers a full afternoon of demonstrations and displays. Sale of 27 performance tested bulls will get underway about 5:30 p.m. A free beef barbecue will be served field day visitors and there will be a drawing for door prizes.

"Practical needs of cattlemen will be emphasized during the field day," said Russell BreDahl, Extension beef cattle specialist in the UK College of Agriculture.

Demonstrations will include preconditioning calves, use of temporary fences to manage grazing for more beef output per acre and branding. Calves will be on display, representing each of the new proposed feeder cattle grades.

Researchers will report on pastures treated with MeFluicide, a growth regulator, in an effort to improve gains of yearling steers.

The bull sale will offer 4 Angus, 12 Charolais and 11 Polled Herefords coming off test at the Kentucky Central Bull Testing Station located on the Eden Shale Farm.

Not Only for the Elite . . .

Janis Argues Case for Humanities

There ought to be more opportunities for housewives to sit down with historians, policemen with philosophers, auto mechanics with political scientists, miners with poets.

The idea of the humanities as the exclusive preserve of academics is no more acceptable than the notion that only a tiny elite should drive cars.

Ordinary people should demand the opportunity and time for the "thoughtful enquiry" usually enjoyed only by intellectuals.

That, in brief, was the pitch of Dr. Ralph Janis, acting executive-director of the Kentucky Humanities Council, who came to eastern Kentucky last week to sell his idea of "humanities with the masses."

The way Janis sees it, the most ordinary human experiences are worth the trouble of disciplined reflection and the most humdrum occupations can take on new meaning from the perspectives of literature, philosophy, religion and history.

He conjures up images of afternoon-TV addicts reflecting on the meaning of the "soaps" with a film critic, bureaucrats working through their negative public image with psychologists, journalists considering their professional options with ethicists, citizens discussing the structure of county government with political scientists.

Fruitful encounters between ordinary folk and specialists in the humanities, Janis points out, are occurring across the nation. He cites instances ranging from sheriffs talking about their job with philosophers in Nebraska, hospital workers enjoying lunch-hour programs with artists and social scientists in New York City, UK medical students pondering ethical issues with moralists in Lexington, and Knott county women studying in their own homes the image of women in Appalachian literature.

For Janis, encounters like these promise benefits for all involved, forcing the academics to relate their expertise to real-life experience and challenging the laity to question things they usually take for granted.

"Consider the difference between the way an auto mechanic looks at an engine and the way the layperson sees it," he offers by way of illustration. What the layperson sees as an undifferentiated jumble of machinery the mechanic sees as a coordinated system, each component having its own recognizable function. This gives the professional a mastery of the machine, an appreciation of its beauty, a range of questions about its design—an experience that is just a closed book for the uninitiated.

The same is true, Janis explains, for the institutions of government. To the ordinary person they are too often an incomprehensible, intractable "given" of life; to be the political scientist they are understandable human contrivances, more or less useful for the purposes for which they are intended.

What the "thoughtful enquiry" of the humanities can bring to the home, the workplace, and the community, Janis argues, is the "distance," the perspective, that enables us to ask questions, see choices, and win a measure of control over our lives. Apart from which, he adds, the exercise can be just plain enjoyable.

The Kentucky Humanities Council has about $140,000 to distribute this year in funds from the tax-supported National Endowment for the Humanities. In seeking out projects for funding, Janis said last week, "our problem is to find meeting grounds for academic humanists and ordinary citizens to get together."

The Indiana-born historian concedes a visionary aspect, an element of faith, in the KHC plan. It is a faith in the capacity of the humanities to transform human experience and an even bolder faith in ordinary people's desire to be so transformed.

"We're not talking about an artificial graft," he explains, "but about a natural re-joining of academic and 'real' life." At heart, Janis believes, we are all Ben Franklins. "So why should a liberal education be a luxury for only the few?"

Akers Family Reunion Held

The Akers family enjoyed a festive day September 1, 1979, when relatives from six states gathered to celebrate the second Akers Family Reunion. A potluck dinner was served at the home of Carmel L. Akers on Branaham Creek at Grethel. Descendants from four patriarchs of the Akers family met for the first time to honor their respective ancestors: namely, Tolbert Akers, Hiram Akers, Daniel Akers and Jonathan Wesley Akers. Those four patriarchs were pioneers of the Big Mud Creek section of Floyd county.

Tolbert and Hiram settled on Branham Creek where they, together, owned about half of the land area of that creek. Tolbert and his wife were buried on the four hundred thirty-seven acre survey granted him by the Governor of Kentucky in 1861. Hiram's land adjoined that of Tolbert and, some of his holdings extended to the Frasure Branch of Big Mud Creek. Daniel Akers lived on Little Mud Creek, a branch of Big Mud, where he owned a large acreage. Jonathan Wesley Akers lived on his large acreage on Toler Creek where he was buried.

Relatives from Kentucky, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, Kansas and Missouri were Travis J. and Eula M. Akers, Kansas City, Missouri; Gary D. Akers, Prairie Village, Kansas; Milton and Rebecca Mae Bentley, Pound, Virginia; Betty McKinney, Barnabus, West Virginia; Gary Dale McKinney and his family, Champmanville, West Virginia; Chloe Maynard and Carl A. Robertson, Williamson, West Virginia; Orris B. Alley, Columbus, Ohio; Timothy and Rhoda Lee Sauer, Patty, Shelley and Timmy Sauer, Cleveland, Ohio; Ijellan and Clara Akers and Amos Akers II, Sarah Akers, Minda Marie Akers, Robert and Debra Boyd and Venessa Boyd, Catlettsburg, Kentucky; Teddy and Kim Akers and Jeffery Akers, Ashland, Kentucky; Elvie and Audrey Martin with Leonard and Ruth Martin, Lexington, Kentucky; Eliza Jane Kidd, Pikeville; Nancy Leedy, Stanville; Ruby Akers and Melissa Akers, Drift, and Edith Hopkins, McDowell.

Other celebrants were Stella Catherine Akers, Virginia Mae Case, Nickie Carol Hall, Toxanne Renne Hall, Glenna Jean and Ronnie Allen, Calveston. Those from Grethel were Carmel L. Akers, Lee and Lizzie Alley, John Alley, Ernest and Bertha Newman, Judy Elizabeth Newman, Carmel Ray Newman, Rutha Tackett, Dora Lou and J. D. Roberts, James Sheldon, Michael Wayne and Jody Dean Roberts, Elma and Elva McKinney, Jimmy Joe and Judy McKinney, Lee and Verdie Akers, Martha Newsome, Berry and Lexie Akers, Oliver and Mildred Newman, Jenny Lea McKinney and Jamie Lenee McKinney. Attending relatives from Harold were Anna Florence Keathley, Hazel Joyce Caldwell, Carl Akers and Laura Akers. Also attending as a relative was Linnie Margaret Akers, of Banner.

Receiving prizes for the oldest persons and the oldest couple attending the celebration were Lee Alley and Lizzie Alley, both aged 86, who have been married almost 67 years. Minda Marie Akers received the prize for being the youngest attending relative. A prize for the youngest married couple was presented to Robert Boyd and Debbie Akers Boyd.

Other cousins meeting one another the first time ever were Stella Catherine Akers, Linnie Margaret Akers and Rebecca Mae Bentley. They were all granddaughters of Margaret Akers, daughters of Daniel Akers, who married Andrew Jackson Newsome, of Biscuit, Kentucky. Having been raised and lived in Virginia, Rebecca Mae had never had a chance to meet her two cousins in Floyd county. It was a happy occasion for them.

Other descendants of Johnathan Wesley Akers who met their cousins from Kansas and Missouri the first time were Eliza Jane Kidd and Nancy Leedy, granddaughters of Nancy Akers and Wilburn "Wilb" Parsons.

Textbook Committee Asks For Books on Grade Level

At its September meeting, the Kentucky state Textbook Commission voted to register its concern over the number of basic textbooks that are being written below grade level.

The commission voted to request that the publishing industry, through the Association of American Publishers, give consideration to writing basic textbooks at grade level in the future.

"There is a need for books written below grade level and there always will be. However, we feel that the great majority of textbooks should be written on grade level," said Martha Ellison, chairperson of the commission.

Ellison said educators are entering a period of revitalized emphasis on the "basics" of education, and on-grade textbooks have become increasingly important. She cited recent reading research which indicates a direct correlation between the use of below-grade level materials and declining achievement scores.

One publisher explained that textbooks with low reading levels were brought about as a response to educational demands in the 1960s.

The commission commended the publishing industry on the quality of the content of textbooks submitted for review. The commission members stated that there has been dramatic improvement in social studies textbooks in recent years.

After reviewing social studies textbooks, the commission selected 10 basic textbooks for each grade level, one through 12. Kentucky school districts will select basic social studies texts from this list made by the state textbook commission.

Texts placed on the list by the commission will be used for a five-year period beginning in the fall of 1980.

When the Landlord Says "No Children"

by Lynn Varacalli

APARTMENT FOR RENT—modern, near transportation, air conditioned, 2 bedrooms, no children

No children? Or, the ad might say "adults preferred" or "working couple preferred" but the message comes through—children are not welcome tenants. It is the newest type of housing discrimination.

A case in point is that of Stephen and Lois Wolfson, who moved into a modern $425-a-month apartment in Los Angeles' Marina del Rey in 1974. By 1976, the Wolfsons had a problem on their hands—their son Adam. He wasn't a problem child, just a problem tenant. Their lease did not allow children, so the landlord gave an eviction notice to the Wolfsons.

The Housing Shortage

Policies such as this are not unusual to "singles" environments such as Marina del Rey. In fact, they prevail wherever a housing shortage creates a seller's market (which happens to be most of the country). Marina del Rey has a less than 1% vacancy rate; families with children are finding fewer and fewer places available to them. In such places, landlords can pick and choose among tenants; increasingly, the choice is "adults only."

Such restrictions make economic sense to landlords, for whom tenants' children create extra maintenance problems. Whether the policies are explicitly detailed or subtly implied, ban-the-children philosophies are not hard to find.

Some states have laws in favor of the landlord on this issue. Others have statutes which bar the discrimination in theory, but in reality are ineffective in discouraging landlords who won't rent to parents or who increase the rental upon learning that a tenant has children. Seven states—New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Illinois, Michigan, Arizona and Massachusetts—have found it necessary to ban housing discrimination against families with children.

As property values increase, buying a house is becoming more and more of a dream. Young families are being forced to live in apartments where a landlord can legally evict them for the crime of "childbearing." Such was the case with the Wolfsons.

Unlawful Discrimination

When their eviction deadline came, the Wolfsons refused to move out and were promptly taken to court. Maintaining that they had a right to have children live with them, they fought the case with the help of private attorneys, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), the State Attorney General, the Fair Housing for Children Coalition and the Fair Housing Council.

They argued that the landlord violated California State civil rights laws, as well as the federal constitution, by unlawful discrimination against children. California generally does not require that a landlord evict his tenants with reason, but unlawful discrimination is a different matter.

The major obstacle in the Wolfsons' case was that the local law provided no explicit ban against age discrimination. There was no proof that Adam was a problem tenant; the basis of the landlord's case was simply that the lease stipulated no children. The trial judge decided the case in favor of the landlord.

The Wolfsons appealed to a higher court, and the Appellate Department reversed the trial judge's decision on the basis that before a landlord can discriminate, he has to show that it is justified. In other words, the state's civil rights law had been violated, since the landlord did not have just cause for banning Adam.

The ACLU, speaking for the Wolfsons as well as the entire country, said that as families with children find it more and more difficult to obtain housing, the very decision to have children is being affected. Single parents who seek custody are also penalized.

Since the Wolfsons are going through further appeals, it is not yet clear what effect, if any, the case will have in other parts of the country. Some states have long prohibited discrimination against children. In other states, young as well as old are protected under the statutes prohibiting age discrimination.

The case could mean a victory for families, single parents, and children in California and the rest of the country. The Fair Housing for Children Coalition, a children's rights organization, has done a great deal in establishing an important ideal—that children have rights too.

Changing the Law

In California, State Senator David Roberti has introduced a bill which would make it illegal for landlords and rental agents to discriminate against minor children. It would impose penalties of at least $250 plus legal fees. The bill is similar to bills passed in the seven states mentioned earlier. Basically, it would make it illegal for a landlord to discriminate against a family solely because they have children.

The bill would not affect housing accommodations such as senior citizen apartments, mobile home parks or college dormitories. Furthermore, the bill does not remove the landlord's authority to take action against an irresponsible tenant. It merely requires the landlord to treat all tenants equally. At any rate, the bill is awaiting action in the California Senate and should come up in early 1980.

As to whether laws can solve all the problems, that is definitely debatable. Subtle discrimination still exists against certain groups, but there is a definite course of action to follow.

If you have been affected by discrimination or would simply like to help, here are some groups to contact:

• For information about organizations near you that are interested in children and housing, write the Fair Housing for Children Coalition, Box 5877, Santa Monica, California 90405. Since this is a California-based organization, the basis of their work thus far has focused on the plight of the more than one million California renters with children. But what they will do is give you the names of people in your area who have contacted them regarding this problem. The phone number is (213) 837-7114 (Los Angeles).

FREEDOM CAKE IN PRESTONSBURG

By HELEN PRICE STACY

It was 10 years ago that the first Red, White and Blue Day was celebrated in Prestonsburg. The salute to patriotism was the dream of Marcella Bailey, of nearby Langley.

"I couldn't take it any longer when I saw how people were not standing up for their country and their flag," said the Floyd county housewife. "My Dad was in World War I. We were all so proud of him and that pride has stayed with me."

She conceived the idea of a special day for patriotism. After much planning and work, the event was a reality and a success.

The 10th annual Red, White and Blue Day in Prestonsburg is Oct. 18-21. American flags will be unfurled, buildings will be decked with bunting and rousing music will ring against the beautiful Eastern Kentucky hills.

The celebration starts Thursday night, Oct. 18, at 7 with the Red, White and Blue Pageant in the Prestonsburg High School fieldhouse. Sunday the festivities end with everyone getting a piece of America's biggest red, white and blue cake.

Official opening ceremonies at 10 a.m. Saturday in the municipal parking lot will start with a flag raising by the Kentucky National Guard. At 10:30 a.m. entertainment will include music ranging from gospel, rock and country to Bluegrass.

At 1 p.m. Saturday MG Billy Wellman, adjutant general of the Kentucky National Guard, will make the traditional patriotic address. A gala parade follows at 2:30 p.m. The parade route goes through downtown Prestonsburg. Bands from various schools, floats and cars from the Antique Car Show are expected. Square dancing in the municipal lot starts at 6 p.m.

Sunday will be highlighted by the first annual "Mack Marathon," a 5,000-meter race to be run through nearby Jenny Wiley State Resort Park. Runners in the Mack Marathon should be at the park amphitheater by 1 p.m.

Everyone is invited to a free Marlow Tackett concert and a slice of the great "Freedom Cake" at 2 p.m. in the municipal parking lot.

"We have a beautiful country," said Mrs. Bailey. "Our state is one of the greatest and prettiest, and our Eastern Kentucky hills are truly magnificent in October. We invite anyone from anywhere to be with us and see what Red, White and Blue Day is all about."

Subcommittee Asks Changes Of Bill Relating to Marijuana

Further revision on the draft of a bill relating to marijuana possession, sale and manufacture has been requested by the Subcommittee on Drug Abuse.

The bill draft originally proposed graduated penalties for possession based on these amounts: less than 30 grams; 30 grams to 50 pounds and more than 50 pounds. One draft change would include two more categories, 30 grams to five pounds and five to 50 pounds.

Additional bill draft changes would set a graduated penalty scale for marijuana sale and manufacturing. The new revision would also remove "first offense" provisions for those convicted of manufacturing or selling more than 30 grams.

The bill draft under study includes a provision requiring those convicted of offenses other than possession to serve at least one-third of their sentence. The percentage may change following release of findings from the state Special Commission on Sentencing and Release of Criminal Offenders.

Subcommittee members let stand the bill draft sections eliminating the "intent to sell" offense. Intent to sell was removed since under the proposed graduated possession scale, persons with large amounts of marijuana could already receive stiff penalties.

Also remaining the same is a bill draft section which would make selling drugs to a minor or using a minor in drug trafficking a Class D felony, which carries a penalty of one to five years or a $3,000 to $5,000 fine.

Currently state law levies the same penalty for marijuana possessors, regardless of amount: confinement in the county jail for not more than 90 days or a fine of not more than $250.

Anyone manufacturing, selling or possessing with intent to sell can be confined for the first offense in the county jail for no more than a year or fined no more than $500, or both. Subsequent offenses can result in confinement in the penitentiary for one to five years, a fine of $3,000 to 5,000 or both.

Faculty Members Earn Masters

Two members of the Associate Degree Nursing Program at Prestonsburg Community College this year added master's degrees to the academic and experiential qualifications that already were theirs. Mrs. Jenny Meece Bottoms (seated), instructor of the freshman nursing class, earned a master's in Adult and Continuing Education, with an emphasis on counseling, from Morehead State University last May. Mrs. Clara Garrett (standing) received the master of science degree in Parent-Child Nursing from the University of Kentucky, in August. She teaches the sophomore class in the PCC nursing program.

Mrs. Bottoms is the wife of William Bottoms, of Prestonsburg, and they have two children, Lee Ann and Billy. She has a diploma from the Louisville General Hospital School of Nursing, a bachelors of science degree in nursing from the University of Kentucky College of Nursing, and has been active in the nursing profession for several years. She has clinical experience in medical-surgical, pediatric and obstetric nursing and has for several years been an active member of the American Nurses' Association and Kentucky Nurses' Association.

Mrs. Garrett is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University with a bachelors of science degree in nursing. She is the wife of Bill Garrett and they reside at Allen. Mrs. Garrett has also had several years of nursing experience and has been active in the Kentucky Nurses' Association.

Consumer Comments . . .

"Shopping for Credit"

As inflation tightens pocketbooks, more consumers are finding it wise to shop for credit as they would shop for anything else.

Shopping around for credit can save you a considerable amount of money. For example, a one-half of one percent difference in the interest rate of a 30-year mortgage for $50,000 can save about $7,000—that's about $20 per month.

There are three main factors to consider when shopping for a loan: the annual percentage rate, the finance charge and the length of the payments.

The annual percentage rate is the cost of credit per year expressed as a percentage of the loan. The annual percentage rate is a good way to compare loans regardless of the amount of credit or the length of the payments.

The finance charge is the total cost of the loan. It includes interest, service charges and other possible costs such as finders fees.

Always consider the length of the payments when borrowing. Low monthly payments may lose their attractiveness when you find they last twice as long as you'd like. If you borrow the same amount of money for twice as long, at the same percentage rate, your finance charge will more than double.

All creditors must state their credit costs in terms of the finance charge and the annual percentage rate. The law says these two pieces of information must be shown to before you sign a credit contract.

Be sure to look at all the credit terms before you make a decision. Read the credit contract carefully. If you don't understand something about the contract, ask someone who does.

Wise credit choices can save you money, safeguard a good credit rating and help you enjoy purchases while you're paying for them. Shopping for credit makes sense.

If you have questions or complaints concerning credit in Kentucky or any other consumer problem, write the Office of the Attorney General, General Consumer Protection Division, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call the toll-free consumer hotline at 1-800-372-2960.

Real-Life 007 Story On KET Next Week

"World" opens its third season with a real-life James Bond story in "Who Killed Georgi Markov?" on KET Tuesday, October 9 at 10 p.m. (ET).

This investigative documentary examines the mysterious events surrounding the murder of a Bulgarian dissident and defector.

Georgi Markov, poet, playwright and novelist, fled his homeland in 1969. In September, 1978 he was killed, the victim of a bizarre plot.

Markov worked for Radio Free Europe, broadcasting a series of exposes about corruption, financial abuses and sexual scandals in the Bulgarian government. He was killed by an extremely sophisticated device—a pinhead-sized pellet containing a deadly poison.

This film, which includes footage shot secretly in Bulgaria, pieces together scraps of evidence about other defectors, but the question still remains: "Who Killed Georgi Markov?" No one can prove it, but investigators are convinced it was someone working for the Bulgarian government who wanted to silence one of the country's most searching critics.

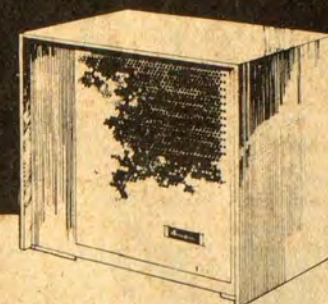

The evidence carefully assembled by the program's producers seems to implicate the political leadership of Bulgaria and possibly Russia. A year after Markov's murder his killers have not been found.

The official Bulgarian denial of the charge calls the accusation "a fantastic James Bond story." "World" allows its audience to draw its own conclusion.

"World" is the only regularly scheduled series of independently produced films on American television covering international subjects.
