

Living Cost Hits Services at Dam

Murray Leaves Residence There As Rent Raised

If there's an emergency at Dewey Lake, or if information of any sort is needed from the reservoir manager at Dewey Dam, don't call after 4 p.m. because nobody is there after that hour to answer either of the two telephones.

This situation, which has disturbed the few who have learned that it exists, arises from the fact that the reservoir manager, Dean Murray, and his wife, who could be depended upon to answer telephone calls and answer to requests of help at any hour, day or night, no longer live in the government-owned building near the dam.

The Murrays last month vacated the residence there which they had occupied all the 19 years of his service as reservoir manager. Why? The rent was too high.

Two attractive dwellings were built near the dam in 1948 for the reservoir manager and his assistant, presumably to make their residence near the dam possible and to have them in position to answer to all types of emergency. But in 1978 the rent jumped 130 per cent. They lived with that raise but when they learned another rent increase of 7.67 per cent would arrive this month, Mr. Murray moved into a trailer on his farm, 17 miles away. His assistant, maintenance man Wade Diddle, moved out earlier—more than a year ago—and now lives at Auxier.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Corps of Engineers' Huntington district office has assigned Lt. Frank Kretschmer to the reservoir as military assistant.

And Lt. Kretschmer occupies one of the vacated residences—rent-free.

Yet the lieutenant cannot answer to emergency calls. His dwelling is on a party line, not on the lines assigned to the dam.

Responding to an inquiry by The Times, Murray admitted he cannot afford to pay the higher rent and utilities which run from $400 to $450 a month. "I just don't make that kind of money," he said.

Asked if he could explain the change in Corps policy, which provides that the Dewey Reservoir project no longer

Valley's Oldest Newspaper Burns

The 95-year-old Big Sandy News, the valley's oldest newspaper, was one of three Louisa businesses which were destroyed by fire between midnight Monday and daybreak Tuesday.

Two persons who were not identified have been arrested on arson charges. There was no estimate of the damage.

The blaze broke out in Cooper's Department Store in the Main Street block which faces the Lawrence county courthouse and spread to destroy the newspaper plant and Hughes Jewelry Store.

Besides its composing and office equipment and old letterpress equipment, the newspaper lost its files of back issues of the paper dating back to 1885. The old files aren't completely lost, however, since they have been microfilmed.

This Town...That World

On Campaign Trail or Trial
Things have come to a pretty pass when a politician can't tell a second-hand joke without getting himself drawn and quartered, as witness the case of poor Ronald Reagan.

We of this section have bristled, fumed and threatened for years about these "hillbilly" jokes till I suppose we should line up with those ethnic groups whose feathers this unwary candidate has ruffled, but I, personally, was ready to forgive and forget until I read his rather lame excuse which ran to the effect that he told the joke, intending it as an example of humor which he finds in poor taste.

While we're about it, we may as well reprint the joke as he told it:

"How do you tell the Polish one at a cockfight? He's the one with a duck!"

"How do you tell the Italian one? He's the one who bets on the duck."

"How do you know the Mafia is there? The duck wins."

It may just be that the world has really gone to pot. There's no sense of humor left, everybody has a chip on the shoulder, and the only safe thing to do is lavish

Petition by 2266 Follows Wreck Of School Bus

"For one dreadful moment when I arrived on the scene I thought, 'My child is dead.'" Fortunately, Sally Adkins' six-year-old daughter, a passenger on the school bus which rolled off the Mud Creek road January 2 with 29 children aboard, was not seriously hurt. "But I knew then that, if she had died, it would have been my fault. I knew about the condition of that road and had done nothing about it."

So did Mrs. Adkins explain this week the circumstances that led her and her neighbors to circulate a petition on Mud Creek that has so far garnered 2266 signatures. The petition, which calls for the widening and repair of KY 979 and the installation of guard rails to keep traffic clear of its many precipitous em-

Home from the Mardi Gras!

This warm embrace was one of many as families welcomed home members of the Betsy Layne High School band, who returned Tuesday morning after participating in this year's Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

The band won first place among bands in the Selena parade Saturday, and was named "outstanding" in the Thoth parade Sunday.

Drum Majorette Jamie Syck described the experience succinctly: "We had a blast!"

Martin Council Votes Action vs. Commission

Stung by the failure of the city's water commissioners to appear before the council as directed, Martin city council voted last Wednesday to take legal action or "other steps" to force the commission's compliance.

"We need to see where the water system's money is going to," said Councilman J.R. Key, who moved that the council "go all the way" in an effort to compel the commission to open its records for the council's inspection. The commission includes Ron Reynolds and Roy Ratliff and is thought to include Denzil Halbert, although the circumstances of Halbert's appointment are not clear.

Also unclear is the legal relationship between the council and the commission. "If the commission is independent of the council," Mayor Larry B. Hall asked, "then how is it that the city gets sued (by the Environmental Protection Agency) for the failure of the sewage system?"

Responsibility for collection of garbage in the city of Martin was also at issue before the council, as residents complained of poor service and asked if they might contract for trash removal with independent haulers. The Martin Sanitation Co. was granted a five-year franchise to haul garbage in the area last May, but some council members this week questioned the legality of the order.

The franchise was never advertised and, after initially trying to prevent others from hauling garbage in the city, Martin Sanitation owners Roy Ratliff and Pete Grigsby, Jr. subsequently admitted they could not do the job alone, said Councilman Raymond Griffith, Jr.

While the city could probably not revoke the franchise on grounds of its failure to advertise it, the contract might be voided on the basis of the garbage company's failure to live up to its terms, opined City Attorney John Caudill. On the recommendation of Mayor Hall, the council voted to have its attorney check into the legal status of the franchise and Hall said that, in the meantime, anyone was free to contract with homeowners for garbage removal.

Council members questioned a number of unanticipated bills incurred by the previous city administration, including $1359 for fire department purchases from Share Corporation. The bill included $593 for "car wash and wax" for use on the city fire truck.

A $50 monthly fee recently imposed by Martin Sanitation Co. on Sandy Valley Senior Citizens, Inc. for trash removal appeared unreasonable, said Mayor Hall, who promised the council's assistance in having the bill adjusted. The non-profit agency provides food and transportation services to the E.P. Grigsby Senior Citizens Center in Martin. Although it generates only one can of trash each pickup, it is being charged 50 percent of the fee for the whole housing complex, said agency director Diane Cooksey.

Engineers responsible for construction of the new KY 80 and its Martin access came under fire again from nearby residents who claimed that the condition of the roads near the worksite damages their cars and obstructs access to their homes. Mayor Hall advised the complainants to submit claims for damages to the engineers, Haworth and Associates.

Flood-damaged lift stations in the city's sewage system have been pumped out and Howard K. Bell Engineers are preparing an estimate of the cost of repairing the system, Hall told the meeting.

Hueysville Home Looted In Daylight Burglary

The home of Mrs. May Turner on KY 7, near Hueysville, was looted by thieves in a daylight burglary Monday while the owner was absent. Entrance was effected by breaking the lock of a rear door.

Missing are a television set, a sweeper, a revolver, a toaster and other items. Interior of the home was left in disarray as a result of an apparent hasty search.

State Detective Keith Scott investigated the break.

Grand Jury Accuses Four of Murder Plot

Before its adjournment last Wednesday, the Floyd circuit court grand jury voted conspiracy to commit murder indictments against four men as a result of trouble between Arkansas Creek neighbors.

Named in separate indictments were Buddy Johnson, Darrell Bentley, James Richard Hunt and Ballard Crum, each accused of conspiracy to commit murder "by agreeing with one another that at least one of them would engage in conduct which would constitute the murder of Leonard Hall."

Hall and State Detective Danny Stumbo were listed as witnesses for the Commonwealth. Arraignment of the four men has been set in circuit court for March 4.

(Separate indictments were made at the request of Circuit Judge Hollie Conley in all cases in which two or more defendants were named.)

Martin Shepherd, Melvin Shepherd and Tim Gibson were named in indict-

TV, Coal, Roads Talked at Meet Of Fiscal Court

After cable TV operators ran into several roadblocks at the Floyd fiscal court meeting last Wednesday, two of them questioned the competence and fairness of the court and its TV franchising agency.

The court's actions—ordering Mike Little to restore to his Weeksbury system the two channels he took off to accommodate satellite signals, blocking the sale of Phil Hamilton's Beaver Creek system to Tel-Com, Inc., ordering Big Sandy TV Cable to serve Little Paint residents, and proposing a rate limit of $7.50 for all Floyd cable operators—drew sharp criticism from the two operators present at the meeting.

"Cable operators are never believed in this building," said Little, owner of the Burton Antenna Co., who complained that the Floyd cable TV commission ignored financial statements he had tendered in support of a recent rate increase application and that both the commission and the court were imposing requirements that are technically impossible to meet.

"No one on the commission is on the operator's side. We are guilty until we are proven innocent," Hamilton said, adding, "This (the regulatory process) is not going to work until there is an independent expert on the commission."

During consideration of a cable TV commission recommendation that Burton Antenna be permitted a $7.50 monthly service fee on condition that Channel 5 (Bristol, Tenn.) be restored to the service, the fiscal court heard complaints from several Weeksbury residents that the Bristol station and a Bluefield (W.Va.) station had been dropped to

Gearheart Tells Plans For Television in Area

There is not a meeting in town calculated to bring out crowds like a discussion of television service. In existence less than a year, the Floyd County Cable TV Commission—the franchising arm of the fiscal court—regularly carries on its deliberations before an overflow and often restive audience.

From the consumers, the agency hears charges of rising rates and declining service. From the operators come charges of arbitrary restrictions, unenlightened by any appreciation of the technical difficulties or the costs involved in the TV business. But, amid the charges and countercharges, one fact emerges clearly: for many Floyd countians, television is a necessity of life.

A harried mother pleading for an immediate hookup asks how she can otherwise be expected to cope with her children. The "right" to TV service in unserved areas is debated with the same solemnity as the rights to drinking water and heating fuel. Images on the television screen are, like bread on the table, no longer a luxury but a staple.

For Paul R. Gearheart, president of

Tel-Com, Inc., meeting that need is the challenge of a lifetime. Providing TV service, he insists, should be seen not merely as catering to people's dependency on the tube but as satisfying their hunger for communication, education and entertainment.

It is a legitimate need, he argues, and one that has been rightly recognized by the Carter administration and the federal agency which guaranteed loans to his firm late last year in the amount of $2.8 million. With the backing of the Rural Electrification Administration, the cooperation of the regulatory agencies, and patience on the part of consumers, this region will enjoy TV service of unprecedented quality within two years, he predicts.

The first phase of his ambitious program, to cost $640,000, will see Lexington signals beamed here from Jackson by microwave and a sophisticated "master head end" at Martin capable of receiving microwave, satellite and "off air" signals with remarkable discrimination. That much is expected to be in place in less than a year.

The second phase of the program, scheduled for the following 12 months, involves distributing the signal to receivers throughout this and surrounding counties.

Among the features of the proposed system stressed by the operator are:

The history of Allen is marred by at least two disastrous fires. The photo above dates from 1924 when the worst of the blazes levelled several houses and commercial structures. Floyd Catholics Set Lenten Activities

Ash Wednesday will be observed in the Floyd County Catholic Parish with the Celebration of the Eucharist and the imposition of ashes on Feb. 20 at the chapel of Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin, at 12 noon, and at St. Theodore Church, Prestonsburg, at 7 p.m. Ash Wednesday marks the beginning of the forty-day season of Lent, a time of prayer and penance.

The Floyd County Catholic Parish will offer three Lenten education programs. The first is a discussion centered on the work of Jean Vanier, including "Evolution of Family and the Modern Crisis," "Love, Presence, and Communion," "Strength Lies in Weakness," "Innocence," "My Flesh for Peace," "The World in Violence." Sister Judy Yunker, of the Blue River Benedictine Foundation, will lead the discussion at a time to be decided by participants.

The second Lenten program will focus on the Pastoral Letter, "This Land Is Home To Me," of the Appalachian-area bishops. This year marks the fifth anniversary of the letter. Leading the discussion (with time to be determined again by participants) is Sister Honor Murphy, chairperson of the Catholic Committee of Appalachia, call 886-8488.

The third Lenten program will be a discussion of the Scripture readings of the Season of Lent and will be held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m. in homes of Saint Juliana Church in Martin. Leading the discussion will be Father James Ryan and Father William Poole, who may be reached at 285-3254 or 285-3634.

The Way of the Cross devotion and Benediction will be held every Monday during Lent at 7:30 p.m. alternating between Saint Juliana Church and Saint Theodore Church.

The film, "Kibbutz On Tall Grass Mountain" (about a missionary working among destitute people in Asia) will be shown after the 5:30 p.m. service on Feb. 23 at Martin and after the 10:30 a.m. service on Feb. 24 at Prestonsburg.

A mass for children will be celebrated on Feb. 26 at Saint Theodore Church at 3:30 p.m. Also, a communal penance service will be held on March 3 at 3:30 p.m.

BLUSTERY MARCH, THE MAN'S MONTH

By NEVYL SHACKELFORD
(UK College of Agriculture)
In Anglo-Saxon folklore, March, the namesake of Mars, god of war, has been called "Man's Month."
Why? We do not know and folklore does not explain. Maybe it is because March is so full of bluster, as some men are. Or maybe, as some menfolk would like to believe there is so much rugged work to be done outdoors that requires a man's muscle.

But be that as it may, March is high time to get out and get going on the farm and in the garden. Remember that your county Extension agent has the latest farming and gardening information from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

It is time to mend the fence and plant hardy vegetable seeds such as beets, spinach, radishes, sallet peas, irish potatoes, and onion sets. It is a good month, too, to set out strawberry plants, azalea bushes, holly trees, and all manner of evergreens. And, if the job hasn't been done already, it is time to finish pruning in the orchard and to apply dormant spray to control scale insects.

During the inclement days of March, and there will be some, it will be a wise and humane thing to do to make some bluebird and martin boxes and put them up in strategic places around the old homestead. Place bluebird boxes on posts around the garden fence and martin boxes in open spaces away from where the family car is parked.

To agree with the declarations of poets, March is the best month of the year in which to get up early in the morning. In no other month are the sunrises more vivid or spectacular or the matins of resident birds more beautiful. These sunrises unhindered by the foliage of trees are all-revealing and symbolize all the wonderful hopes of spring—a season that becomes more evident with each passing morning. Without intentions of getting into the field of metaphysics, it is easy to believe in the Resurrection and all that it involves on a warm morning in March.

As with all other months of the year, many, many superstitions surround the 31 days of this third month. Melted snow water gathered during the month, according to one old medical superstition, makes the best hair tonic in existence. Water from melted snow that falls in March will sprout hair, even on a turnip. Or, so it was said. To be effective, though, this "tonic" must be applied at the time of the rising moon.

Imbibing sassafras tea is another ritual once practiced as religiously during the month as religiously during the month as taking the annual dosage of sulphur and molasses. Sassafras tea during the month guards against "spring fever," a malady that often besets citizens lacking in elbow grease. Stump water gathered and bottled from hollow black oak trees cut down in March for firewood, was deemed a specific for "summer complaints" that often beset folks of the hinterlands in July and August. (For the benefit of those of the younger generation, "summer complaint" was a euphemism for "backdoor trots" which doctors now refer to as diarrhea).

Along with its superstitions and such, March also has its legends and one of the most interesting is this: In Medieval times there was a belief that the 17th day of the month marked the start of the deluge which was the Biblical flood. On this day, says the legend, Noah took his family and all the animals inside the ark. And such, is the portent of March.

The Figures Require Analysis

Television has—for better or worse—become an important part of life for most Americans. To a majority it rates in importance along with food, clothing, fuel.

In fact, meetings in this county of governmental units to consider TV reception and its cost regularly attract heavier public response than almost any meeting held to consider the absolute necessities. Rates for natural gas, electric power, telephone service and the like continue to climb—without any great public protest. But increases in TV costs invariably encounter the stiffest sort of opposition.

It becomes apparent that the Floyd County TV Commission has important and demanding duties to perform in its attempt to claim for the public satisfactory service from franchised television transmission systems and at the same time control the cost of such service without unjustly penalizing the supplier.

The Commission finds itself in the position of a small-scale Public Service Commission. Only, it lacks the fact-finding facilities possessed by the PSC; has no rate analysts, no professional help for the study of the cost and income data submitted in order to determine if, indeed, justice between the parties calls for higher or lower charges.

Those who have invested in these cable systems and who pay for labor and materials at inflated figures cannot maintain their services at the low rates we all would prefer to pay. They deserve a reasonable profit on their investments. At the same time their customers deserve protection from profiteering.

No arbitrary decision for or against the system owners will solve the problem or problems. The facts must be known, then given careful consideration, before action of any sort can serve the purpose for which it is taken.

That would indicate that the Commission—which is presumed to have been created to sit squarely between transmitter and receiver, to deal justly with both—needs impartial professional advice in analyzing the cold figures that, to date, are generating only heat.

—40-channel capability. The single satellite from which the system will receive signals initially boasts 24 channels offering, respectively, full-time feature films, news, sports, religious and cartoon programming. To begin, Tel-Com will be taking Channel 17, the 24-hour Atlanta station, and Home box Office, featuring first-run movies, from the satellite.

—Two-way transmission. This means that the system will be able to take meter readings from individual households for water, gas and electric utilities.

—Emergency override. In the event of a flood, nuclear radiation, or other disaster, the system will be available for the use of civil defense and other emergency agencies.

—A free channel for public use, such as meetings of the fiscal court or city council.

—Availability of channels for local civic or religious groups wishing to air their own programs.

—Televised Congressional debates.

—Provision of an extra Kentucky educational channel.

Gearheart, who received the first REA loan guarantee awarded in the country for rural TV distribution, was one of 300 applicants for the contract. "I guess I was in the right place at the right time," he says of his good fortune.

More than luck appears responsible, however, for the steady expansion of this soft-spoken entrepreneur in the communications field over the past 37 years. Born on Toler Creek 54 years ago, Gearheart bought the Roberts-Olga Telephone Company from his grandmother in 1953. The company—its successor to Mud Creek's original phone company, begun by B.F. Elliott in 1909—then had 67 subscribers. Today, as the Harold Telephone Company, its subscribers number 4800.

Gearheart moved into the TV business with the purchase of Russell Stratton's system, at Betsy Layne, in 1965. It served 22 customers. Other purchases followed over the years—Clark and Ratliff's at Stanville, Inland Steel's at Wheelwright, Homer Cecil's at Harold—until today the Tel-Com network embraces some 20 systems serving 6000 customers in Floyd, Pike, and Mingo (W.Va.) counties.

Gearheart is not without his critics, including those who fear that his talent for expansion carries a threat of monopoly. As many as say his TV system is too big say his phone system is too small. And he is notoriously difficult to provoke, turning aside criticism with docile responses recently characterized by a fiscal court magistrate as artfully "silver-tongued."

He is anything but artful, Gearheart insists. His motivation he says, is uncomplicated. "I have no education, no talents. I'm building a TV system because I want to do it and it needs to be done. And I enjoy working."

make room for Channel 17 (Atlanta, Ga.) and Home Box Office.

After rejecting an offer by Little to restore Channel 5 by dropping yet another channel, the court voted to require the operator to restore the system "the way it was." Despite considerable confusion as to its meaning, and over Little's objection that it ignored the technical limitations of TV transmission, the motion carried on the votes of Magistrates Ed Caudill, Hershel Hamilton and Kenneth Roberts.

(Following the decision, Little immediately discontinued three channels, leaving only enough to satisfy the minimum requirements of the franchise ordinance. County Attorney Turner said this week that he would seek a circuit court order enjoining the operator to restore the services cut off last week, as well as the two channels previously disconnected, and preventing him from charging more than $6 monthly until such time as Channel 17 is restored.)

Roberts led an attack on Tel-Com President Paul Gearheart during consideration of a commission recommendation to approve sale of the Phil Hamilton system to Tel-Com and a request by Gearheart for a $10 fee for customers served by Tel-Com's Martin tower. After hearing one Hamilton customer laud the service of Lowell Conley, who operates a TV system in the Garrett area, the court disapproved the transfer of Hamilton's franchise to Tel-Com, urging the operator to negotiate with Conley instead.

The court voted to instruct the cable TV commission to fix at $7.50 the upper limit of monthly TV service rates in the county, a move that would roll back the present $9.00 charged by Tel-Com and approved by the commission in view of Tel-Com's offering its Martin tower customers three Lexington channels. On the advice of County Attorney Arnold Turner Jr., Tel-Com will be offered the opportunity for a hearing on the proposed roll-back.

Paul Butcher, owner of Big Sandy TV Cable Co., will be asked to serve about 30 Little Paint families presently without TV service. Representatives of Big Sandy TV Cable and Flanery and Dingus will be asked to appear before the court to discuss which company should be responsible for serving Abbott Mountain residents.

To residents of David, who complained to the court of coal trucks speeding through that town and asked that coal carriers be required to cover their loads with tarpaulins, Judge-Executive Bill Wells replied that the legality of such an ordinance is questionable. Meanwhile, the court tentatively approved a proposal by Branham and Baker Coal Co. which would reduce the volume of coal traffic through David.

Coal being mined at the head of Open Fork, tributary of the Left Fork of Middle Creek, which is presently hauled down Brushy Fork and along KY 404 to Branham and Baker's David tipple, could be hauled down Open Fork if the county allowed the company to upgrade and maintain the Open Fork road, company officials said. The court voted to accept the proposal, pending a discussion of the matter with Open Fork residents.

Road concerns were voiced by residents of Stephens Branch, above Martin, the left fork of Big Branch, off Little Mud Creek, Long Branch of Bear Hollow, in the East Point section, and Howard Branch, near Garrett.

The court will further investigate a dispute among Stephens Branch residents, some of whom want the old county road there kept open and some of whom want it closed. An effort will be made to include Long Branch in the county roads program, but the county can do nothing for the Big Branch road unless residents there grant right-of-way, according to Judge-Executive Wells. Claims by Hershel Stone, of Howard Branch, that he has been damaged by county road construction there, are without foundation, according to Magistrate Kenneth Roberts.

Donald Frysinger, of Prestonsburg, was appointed county dog warden and livestock inspector; Mabelene Kingsley, of Toler Creek, was appointed bookkeeper-receptionist for the county roads department; Jesse Wallen was reappointed to the Bull Creek-Water Gap warder district commission; and County Planner Dick Leslie was appointed to the boards of the Floyd County Community Development and Urban Renewal Agency and the Floyd County Health Department.

bankments, is being sent to the state Department of Transportation, state and federal legislators and county officials.

"Concerned Parents of 979," as the group which began meeting regularly at the Adkins home on Branham's Creek calls itself, enlisted the aid of Magistrate Hershel Hamilton, the RDK Coal Company, Sandy Valley Explosives, and other local businesses in spreading their concern about the hazardous road. A few were reluctant to get involved.

"They thought we were a group of hysterical mothers trying to cause trouble," Mrs. Adkins said this week. But most were convinced, she said, that "getting involved makes for better government."

"We're not only concerned about our children, but about our neighbors who have to travel these roads to and from their work every day," she said.

In a related development, Superintendent Pete Grigsby, Jr. this week released the text of a letter which he sent "on behalf of the Floyd County Board of Education and parents and students of John M. Stumbo school" to a number of agencies involved in assisting at the scene of the January 2 accident.

The letter, which was sent to the Left Beaver Rescue Squad, the Mud Creek Clinic, the Mud Creek Volunteer Fire Department, and Pikeville Methodist Hospital, thanked those agencies for "a superb job in handling a very delicate and dangerous situation."

Custody Battle Begun in Indiana Shifts to Floyd

If a district court trial scheduled here Tuesday reaches any definite conclusion it will end for an Indiana man a legal odyssey begun months ago in Ft. Wayne, Ind. and extended to this section of Kentucky.

The plaintiff is Donald D. Clawson, a forklift operator in Ft. Wayne for International Harvester. His trip here this week was the third made to Kentucky, and he has spent more than $2,000, he says, on legal fees and travel.

The defendant is his ex-wife, Phyllis Williams Clawson.

The offense—in legal terms, criminal confinement, but more commonly known as child-snatching.

At stake in the legal battle is custody of their children, Paul Edward, 9, Angelea Renee, 8, and Tina Sue, 6. Clawson says they were taken from his home by his ex-wife or some of her relatives last August, eight months after he won custody of them.

A warrant was later issued for the mother's arrest by an Indiana court. It was sent to this county, but weeks passed and she was not arrested.

Parental child-snatching is not an unusual offense, and officials don't get overly excited about it. But the sheriff's office here denies it has been foot-dragging on the job of serving the Indiana warrant. Deputy Sheriff Randall Lewis said Mrs. Clawson has been moving back and forth in Knott and Floyd counties so much that she has been hard to find. But last week a complaint against her by District Judge Harold Stumbo was served, leading to the hearing date set for Tuesday.

During all this the father has become increasingly frustrated. "I live by the law—why doesn't the law work for me?" he wants to know.

He contacted a Fort Wayne attorney who advised him to employ an attorney here. Assistant County Attorney Eric Hall is representing him in this county. He asked the U.S. attorney in Fort Wayne for help, but that official's office informed him that they don't get involved in domestic matters.

He called the mayor's office at Fort Wayne, the governor's office at Frankfort, the attorney general's office in both states, even the office of Indiana Senator Birch Bayh.

"Sorry, they couldn't help. Clawson has borrowed money from his parents as he continued the fight to get legal help.

Now, if the hearing is finally held here this week, he may be in for a fight. His former wife's mother was quoted last week as saying he daughter will fight the case on the grounds that the children want to be with their mother and that Clawson is an unfit father.

Regardless of what happens, the Indianan vows he won't snatch the children back. "I'm determined to get my children back legally," he said. "I'm determined to do it the right way."

State Divorce Law Amendment Approved

The Senate last week gave its approval to a House Bill which amends state divorce law so the 60-day waiting period for testimony applies only when there is controversy involving minor children.

Current law requires a 60-day wait in all cases involving children, regardless of age.

House Bill 42 was passed in the Senate after a floor amendment was approved. The amendment added the word "minor." Without the amendment the waiting period could be mandatory even if the "child" was 35 years old, said Sen. Clyde Middleton (R-Covington), who made the motion for the amendment.

The Senate also passed House Bill 134 with a floor amendment. The amended bill allows a deputy county judge-executive to preside at fiscal court meetings but prohibits the deputy from voting. Before amendment the bill prohibited the deputy from presiding when the judge/executive is absent.

Statewide Educational Seminar Held at May Lodge

Larry Jervis, guidance counselor, Floyd county schools, with Miss Alice Harris, retired teacher in center, and Mrs. Roberta Davidson, supervisor, kindergarten through 12th grades.

Mrs. Anna Sue Stumbo, supervisor of Floyd county schools, kindergarten through 12th grades, is shown receiving name card and seminar information after registering.

Among those taking part in the meeting were Patricia Hunter, at left, and Janet Akers.

Pictured above are several area residents who attended the seventh of 11 statewide seminars which was held at Jenny Wiley State Park to discuss the role of television as an influencing factor in child development.

The seminar, initiated by the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education with co-sponsorship by the KBA and KET, was underwritten by Turner Elkhorn Mining Company, The First National Bank of Pikeville, Citizens Bank of Pikeville, and the Kentucky Coal Association. Area parents, students, educators and broadcasters met to discuss television's impact, both in and out of the classroom, on the development of children.

Try Greenbo Park For 'Great Escape'

Tired of the snow? The Kentucky Department of Parks is planning a weekend escape that will give participants the illusion of being under the sun-filled skies of Hawaii one day and on a ranch in the American Southwest the next.

The Great Escape Weekend at Greenbo Lake State Resort Park in Greenup Feb. 22-24 will feature entertainment for the entire family at special all-inclusive rates. The lodge is already filled for the weekend, except for possible cancellations, but reservations are being accepted for a Hawaiian luau planned Friday at 5:30 p.m. and a chuckwagon buffet set for 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

Visitors will also be able to take part in other activities planned for the weekend, including a program on John Swift's lost silver mine, entertainment by Kentucky folk musicians Dick and Anne Albin, a slide show on Greenbo set to music by John Denver, a nature walk, bingo, arts and crafts, a square dance and a social get-together.

Shakespeare Plays To Open on KET

"Twelfth Night," William Shakespeare's lyric comedy of misplaced love, mistaken identity and comic revenge, opens the second season of "The Shakespeare Plays," Wednesday, February 27 at 9 p.m. (ET) on KET.

One of the world's most popular comedies for more than 300 years, "Twelfth Night" tells the story of Viola, shipwrecked in the mythical country of Illyria. Disguised as a boy page named Cesario, Viola (Felicity Kendal) enters the service of the Duke Orsino (Clive Arrindell) who is hopelessly in love with the proud Lady Olivia (Sinead Cusack).

Orsino sends Viola in her disguise as Cesario, to woo Olivia, only to have Olivia fall in love with the "page." The plot is complicated by the appearance of Viola's identical twin brother, and by an elaborate practical joke played by the members of Olivia's household on her pompous steward, Malvolio (Alec McCowen).

Other new productions this year include "The Tempest," "Henry IV" (Parts I and II), "Henry V" and "Hamlet." The approximate length of each presentation is two hours, 30 minutes. "Richard II" will be repeated from last season.

Over a six-year span, "The Shakespeare Plays" will encompass all 37 of Shakespeare's dramatic works, marking the first time that the entire canon has been produced on film or videotape.

The series is a co-production of BBC-TV and Time-Life Television.

Obituary of Elder Mitchell Chaffins

By the help of the Lord and the members of the Chaffins family, I will write an obituary of our beloved and saintly father, Brother Mitchell Chaffins.

Mitchell was born in Knott county, Kentucky on April 26, 1913 and departed this life February 2, 1980, making his stay upon God's footstool 66 years, 9 months and 6 days.

Mitchell was born to William Nelson Chaffins and Bessie Handshoe Chaffins. His mother went on to Glory when Mitchell was only six months old. He was raised by his step-mother, Gracie Tuttle Chaffins, who still survives. Mitchell had three brothers and three sisters: Hayes Chaffins, of La Grange, Ohio; Enon Chaffins, of Plymouth, Ohio; Norsie Tuttle, of Minnie, Ky.; Verna Mae Fraley, of Tucson, Ariz.; and one sister, Laura, and one brother, Orville Chaffins, who preceded him in death.

Mitchell was married to Cynthia Mosley in April, 1935. Unto this union was born ten children. They are: Franklin Chaffins, Thurman Chaffins and Aretta Vanderpool, of Ontario, Ohio; Merle Dean Chaffins, of New London, Ohio; Roger Chaffins, of Shelby, Ohio; and Loretta Tckett and Jimmie Darrel Chaffins, of Minnie, Kentucky. Two twins, James Ray Chaffins and Marcetia Faye Chaffins, preceded Elder Chaffins in death. Brother Mitchell was blessed to live to see two of his children join the church and to be baptized by him.

Elder Chaffins joined the Old Regular Baptist Church at Minnie, Ky. in 1938 and entered the ministry in 1939. Brother Mitchell had served his Lord for approximately 42 years. At the time of his death, he was the moderator of the Old Beaver Church of Minnie, Ky. and the Bethel Church at Maytown, or Langley, Kentucky.

After Brother Chaffins retired from the mines, he devoted his life to the up-building of the Old Beaver Church, and the New Salem Association and teaching respect and love one for another.

Since he became Moderator of the Old Beaver Church, its membership has grown from less than 50 members to the present 175. He was a great peacemaker within the church and the New Salem Association. Truly he was the Moses of the Old Beaver Church.

It is chiefly through his untiring efforts, along with a few other God-fearing men, that we now have a permanent building for the New Salem Association. Mitchell always kept saying "where there is a will, there is a way". Praying daily, walking and talking with God, he worked devoutly until this building of worship was completed. He also requested that his funeral be held in this building.

Brother Mitchell had the patience of Job, the wisdom of Solomon, and the faith of Abraham. He often quoted the Psalms of David, especially the 23rd Psalm. "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want."

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

Margaret Ohne Vogt

Mrs. Margaret Ohne Vogt, of Cincinnati, former teacher here, died Sunday, at the Tri-County Nursing Center, Fairfield, Ohio, where she had been a patient for the past several weeks. The body is at the Hodapp Funeral Home, on Vine Street, Cincinnati, where funeral rites will be held tomorrow (Thursday) at 10 a.m. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery, Cincinnati. A special memorial service will be held next Sunday morning, at the Montgomery Memorial Baptist Church there.

Mrs. Vogt, a native of Ghent, Ky., was a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, and had done graduate work at the University of Kentucky, and George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tennessee. Coming to Prestonsburg in 1929, she served as librarian and Latin teacher at Prestonsburg High School for several years. Later, she was employed by the Cincinnati Public Library as children's librarian, and remained in that position until her retirement.

Mrs. Lucy Hall

Mrs. Lucy Hall, 82, of Jeffersonville, Ind., formerly of this county, died Monday, February 11, in a Louisville hospital following a long illness.

She was a daughter of the late Press and Florence Turner Hall and was the widow of Raymond (Barber) Hall. She was a member of the Charlestown (Ind.) Regular Baptist Church.

Surviving her are two sons, Wallace Hall, in Ohio, and Ward Hall, of Jeffersonville, Ind.; Two daughters, Mrs. Alma Jewell, of Louisville, and Mrs. Wilma Mellon, of Lexington; a sister, Mrs. Girie Moore, of McDowell; Seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at 10 a.m. Wednesday, February 13, at the Grayson Funeral Home in Charlestown, Indiana, and burial was made there.

Theodore Vogel

Theodore Vogel, 11-year-old son of Carol Vogel, formerly of Prestonsburg, died Monday, February 11, at Children's Hospital in Louisville, following a year's illness of Leukemia.

Funeral services were conducted at 10:30 a.m., February 14, at St. Joseph's Church at Four Corners, Hayden, Indiana. Burial was made in the Four Corners cemetery.

Friends or relatives who may wish to help defray the excessive medical costs may send contributions to Carol Vogel, 303 South Airport Road, Route 55, Seymour, Indiana 47274.

Ye, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of my enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever".

The love that Brother Mitchell felt for mankind, young and old, was inevitable felt—yes even to the point that love could be felt by people who entered Old Beaver Church's doors. He loved and respected all persons especially little children. He often quoted Jesus as saying "Suffer little children to come unto me." He wanted his congregation to share the vast content and glory that he felt in the Lord.

He preached so many times that the closer home he got, the brighter the light shone; that he had his suitcase packed and his ticket to board that train to glory. So if we could have talked to him during the last few minutes of life, he would surely have said as the poet said:

"He whispers so sweetly of spiritual things
Though weakened in body, my spirit takes wings
To heights never dreamed of when active and gay
He loves me so greatly, He's taking me away."

Although we loved him dearly, God loved him more than we. Truly a Giant Cedar of Lebanon has fallen with a crash and left a lonesome place against the sky. That sadness is felt in the eyes and hearts of all the people who knew Elder Chaffins. He will be sadly missed by all of us, his friends, his family and relatives, especially the 19 grandchildren and two great Grandchildren.

We feel that Brother Chaffins was much like the Apostle Paul who said, "I have fought a good fight and I have kept the faith."

We sincerely believe that God has taken one of his precious and beloved flowers from this earthly garden and planted it around the Great White Throne.

Mom, three years ago 14th of December, you passed away and are gone, but Mom, I won't question god, because He is right and never wrong.

Mom, your home down here is lonely, but your home you have now is beautiful and someday Mom, I will be with and Daddy can see.

I never will forget the last word you said to me, and then I knew God was taking another bud from the family tree. And Mom, I can say you need no marker on your grave for god knows where you lay.

Tailor The Product To Fit The Consumer

By Lynn Varacalli

All of us, at one time or another, feel like we are simply numbers in a world of computers which program our lives for us. We are told to buy this car or that hair dryer. Then we are told that this car is unsafe and is being recalled, or that hair dryer is dangerous and will cause cancer. What's a consumer to do?

Are we humans even considered when a new product is being developed?

Well, we are. In fact, there has been a trend in recent years to make consumer safety and comfort the main objective.

For instance, Renault developed an ad in which a diagram of the human body was the focus. The idea was to show the parts of the body that would ache if you didn't drive a Renault. The car's ride was considered to be its outstanding feature. Everybody must remember Earth Shoes from a few years back. They were supposed to be the best things for your feet since the moccasin. Again, comfort was the focal point.

So the human element is definitely a factor behind consumer products. Comfort, safety, efficiency, health and reliability are of major concern to the designer. In fact, there is a science which is concerned with just these things: ergonomics. Basically, it is the science of making products compatible with the human body.

Human factors efforts in the United States started during World War II to answer questions about equipment use and physical abilities. Behavioral scientists—psychologists, physiologists, biologists—conducted tests at military bases and universities. The work became known as ergonomics, meaning the measure of work.

Basically the same work is being carried on today, but it has been broadened to include a wider range of elements such as consumer products. Kodak became one of the first companies in the United States to establish a human factors group within its company. Initially, Kodak was concerned with the problems created by physically stressful jobs. Eventually, the range of work was expanded to include the human factors evaluation of a number of the company's products.

In 1957, an organization was developed in the United States to concern itself with understanding how humans interact with machines, environments and each other. Called the Human Factors Society, it is still in existence today. The society supports the development of working and living environments which are comfortable and safe.

The National Bureau of Standards (NBS) within the U.S. Department of Commerce is greatly concerned with consumer products. For over 75 years, the NBS has dealt with consumer product safety and product performance.

Their objective is to provide both the designer and the consumer with fair and consistent information. The NBS has a Center For Consumer Product Technology in which engineers, physicists, chemists, operations research analysts, behavioral scientists and other specialists work together to evaluate consumer products. The engineers, for example, are primarily concerned with design—does the product do what it is suppose to do? Behavioral scientists, on the other hand, are concerned with understanding the behavior and physical abilities of product users and the methods of applying such knowledge to product design.

For example, a few years ago, there was question raised as to the portability of portable televisions. If a television has a handle and is considered "portable" under the terms of the product's warranty, why, at times, should it require two persons to carry it? The NBS delved into this problem. They tested people of both sexes at various age levels and came up with a maximum reasonable weight that any portable object (not just a television) should be.

Like it or not, our society is becoming more technological every day. The trend cannot reverse itself. But, ultimately, products are developed for only one purpose—to serve man. With this purpose in mind, we need to design our future around man, taking into account his values, his ideals, his needs. The human factor will never fade away. As long as there is life, there is complaining.

If you would like more information about the Human Factors Society, write to them at P.O. Box 1369, Santa Monica, California 90406 or call (213) 394-1811.

For information on the quality of consumer products, write the National Bureau of Standards, Center For Consumer Product Technology, Building 224, Room A-355, Washington, D.C. 20234 or call (301) 921-3751.

Miss Jarrell-Mr. Davis Wed

The Boldman Freewill Baptist Church was the setting for the candlelight ceremony that united in marriage Miss Belinda Lee Jarrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jarrell, of Dana, and Mr. Michael Gene Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. B.J. Davis, of Meta, Ky.

Vows were exchanged Saturday afternoon, December 29, before an archway entwined with greenery and flanked by two spiraling candelabra, with the Reverend Arnold B. Johnson officiating.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Mrs. Debbie Bradley, pianist, and Miss Johannah Bush, soloist. Selections included "The Wedding Song," "Evergreen," "The Lord's Prayer," and "Follow Me."

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage by her parents, appeared in a formal length gown of white chiffon with an overlay of bridal illusion. The fitted bodice featured a scoopy neckline accented with lace appliques, while gently pleated ruffles edged the sleeves and long train of the gown. Her veil was of fingertip length and was attached to a lace covered Juliet cap.

Mrs. Donna Thornsbury served as matron of honor with Mrs. Sharon Weddington and Miss Marietta Davis, sisters of the groom, serving as bridesmaids. All three were attired in identical gowns of peach chiffon with matching picture hats. The flower girl, Miss Laura Gilmore, wore a white chiffon gown accented with peach.

Mr. Keith Weddington served as best man with Mr. Dwayne Jarrell, brother of the bride, and Mr. Tim Wesley Blackburn serving as ushers and taper lighters. Master Fredrick Conn served as ringbearer.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the social hall of the church, which was decorated in peach and white. The bride's table was covered with white linen and lace overlays with candelabra and a flower arrangement in peachaccenting the tabletop. The four-tiered wedding cake was the focal point of the setting with its flowing fountain and ivy encirclements. Mesdames Bobbi Phillips, Jill Conn, Sandi Brooks, Debbie Bradley and Dorsie Puckett all helped with the reception. Mrs. Puckett also directed the wedding.

Out-of-town guest included Mrs. Ella Jarrell, and Mrs. Pat Miller, both of Detroit, Michigan; Greg Herrick of Houston, Texas; Miss Shirley Walker, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gilmore, all of Lexington; and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Shepherd and Stephanie, of Ashland.

Her theme was, "As water is life-giving to trees, life-giving water comes to us in the form of God's love." The President reported that Bibles purchased by the churchwomen for Mrs. Betty Archer Davis and Jerry Herman to use in their work with persons in the county jail and the juvenile center here, had been delivered, and the secretary, Mrs. Vera Ford, read a letter from Mr. Herman expressing their appreciation for these. Maxey Flats Poses Continuing Problem

About $4 million is being requested for work at Maxey Flats during the rest of this year and over the biennium, according to a budget proposal submitted at a joint Appropriations and Revenue Committee hearing today.

The Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection is requesting $885,000 for the year ending June 30 for the work at the site, with $1,736,000 requested for 1980-81 and $1,379,500 requested for the following year.

The request includes about $380,000 for each year of the two-year budget for Dames and Moore to manage the former nuclear waste disposal site. Bob Berlin, of the consulting company, said that thus far they have raised the height of the dam around the storage ponds holding contaminated water, covered the ponds with plastic sheets, corrected some erosion problems and revegetated some of the area.

A longer term solution for the site, he said, would involve putting contaminated materials in concrete containers and burying them. Currently he said, an evaporator is being used to dispose of the contaminated water, although it would take fourteen years to completely dispose of the water with the evaporator.

Jack Wilson, acting commissioner of the Bureau of Environmental Protection, said that before short-term measures were instituted, ponds at Maxey Flats were about to overflow.

However, he explained, "We're no longer accumulating water for the evaporator faster than we can dispose of it." He said it was unlikely that need for the evaporator would be eliminated in the next few years.

The department's request for work at Maxey Flats includes $1.2 million for concrete caps for trenches containing radioactive materials; $30,000 to repair and overhaul the evaporator; $55,000 for a demineralizer to improve the capacity of the evaporator; $55,000 for a building for Dames and Moore employees to change in; and $1.3 million for capital construction at the waste dump.

Mel Fry, assistant director of the hazardous materials division, warned that there was no short term resolution to problems at Maxey Flats which received nuclear waste from 1963 until May 1977. Even if there were a perfect tent over the nuclear waste dump, there would still be several million gallons of contaminated water at the site, he said. Further, he expected no improvement in the situation during this biennium, although the problem could maybe improve in the next two-year period.

Secretary of Natural Resources Jackie Swigart was equally pessimistic. When Rep. Buddy Adams (D-Bowling Green) asked whether the state would have to spend money for maintenance at the site each year she replied, "as long as we're all around."

The committee also looked at the disposal of other hazardous waste. Roger Blair, director of the division of hazardous materials, said the department was hoping to develop a full-integrated, hazardous waste management program and stated, "We (Kentucky) either get into the business...or else we will get into a valley of the drums situation many times over."

Rep. Pete Worthington (D-Ewing) took exception to the suggestion that the state might allow a hazardous waste dump in its borders. He said he was concerned that the state would "get right back into another Maxey Flats" with chemical rather than nuclear waste.

Blair responded that he was "not suggesting that we as an agency rush pell-mell into waste disposal," but said that the state could not have primacy in administering hazardous waste regulations as long as current law requires legislative approval of disposal sites.

Wilson said what he feared most was that state industries could be damaged if other states refused to accept Kentucky industrial waste and there were no disposal sites in Kentucky.

Currently the state is operating under interim regulations or hazardous waste disposal which expire Thursday, Blair said. He said that Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. would be asked to extend the regulations by executive order until June 13. Proposed permanent regulations would be submitted to the Legislative Research Commission this week, Blair said.

Overall, the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection is requesting about $19.2 million in additional funds over the next two years. For 1980-81 they are asking for $30.8 million and for the following year $33.1 million. This year they are budgeted to receive $22.4 million.

Pressed by legislators to pinpoint what she would cut to stay at the same level funded this year, she said that she would cut all expansion items, keeping all current programs mandated by federal or state law.

Recognition Given Martin Hospital

Our Lady of the Way Hospital has been presented with the American Hospital Association's certificate of recognition acknowledging its efforts to more effectively monitor costs and productivity.

Through participating in a management information program provided by Hospital Administrative Services (HAS), a division of AHA, Our Lady of the Way Hospital is able to compare costs and productivity both internally and with other facilities of comparable bed sizes. "Using the HAS program," Robert Rigel, Administrator, said, "we are able to gauge our own effectiveness and keep costs down. It also gives us a basis upon which future decisions can be made."

Our Lady of the Way Hospital has been utilizing HAS programs for 11 years, and regularly uses the information in its cost containment efforts. They have begun to utilize the newest of the HAS programs, MONITREND, designed to provide even more effective management data.

No More Smallpox?

The Department for Human Resources on Feb. 8 advised health professionals to stop giving smallpox vaccinations. The department no longer will store smallpox vaccine and has instructed local health departments to destroy any current supplies.

The actions were taken in anticipation of an announcement this spring by the World Health Organization that the disease has been eradicated worldwide.

Dr. C. Hernandez said that for the general population there are no current medical indications for smallpox vaccination anywhere in the world. Only laboratory workers exposed to smallpox cultures should get vaccinations, he said. Hernandez is director of the Human Resources preventive services division.

In Kentucky, mandatory smallpox vaccinations for schoolchildren were dropped in 1972, he said. He said that some physicians are giving vaccinations for treatment of recurring cold sores which, like smallpox, are caused by a virus. Hernandez said he believes the value of the practice has not been proven.

Arabian Horses: Pleasure And Investment

By Carolyn Jones

More than 160,000 Americans own 300,000 Arabian and Half-Arabian horses. Although this ancient and refined breed of horse often carries a high price tag, and continues to appreciate in value much like real estate, 60 percent of the Americans who own Arabians are middle class families earning less than $30,000 a year. Such people are often referred to as "backyard owners" and they have found owning Arabians to be an affordable hobby which sometimes becomes a successful small business.

One sound investment most owners of Arabian horses make is in a piece of land on which to keep their horses. Whatever the outcome of their interest in horses, their land and the improvements they have made on it will eventually be worth many times what they paid for it.

Backyard owners sometimes get started by being creative and flexible. Mark Goff of Farmington,

New Mexico, was 19 when he decided he wanted his own Arabian horse. He leased an Arabian mare which belonged to someone else, agreeing to feed and care for the horse for two years while she produced two foals. One foal he would keep, the other would belong to the mare's owners. He then invested $50 in a stud fee.

Out of that minimum investment he acquired a beautiful Half-Arabian filly. ("Actually she is 7/8 Arabian," he explains, "but unless a horse is purebred, it has to be called a Half-Arab.") He raised and trained the horse and eventually she won many prizes at local and regional horse shows. Recently he was offered $10,000 for the horse, which is now 7 years old.

Creativity is apparent in the plan some other backyard owners developed to enable their two children to own and show Arabian horses. They bought a house on five acres, built fences and stalls, and advertised themselves as a boarding stable. The two teenage children do all the work of caring for the 10 horses on the place in exchange for the privilege of owning two horses of their own. The boarding income is enough to meet all the expenses associated with the enterprise.

Some professional Arabian horse breeders eagerly bid against one another at beautifully staged national Arabian auctions to obtain a particular horse with an outstanding pedigree or a prestigious show history. Such horses routinely sell for $15,000 and more. In a Scottsdale, Arizona auction last winter, one horse sold for $160,000.

But even professional breeders are aware that they are more likely to be successful if they pay attention to less flashy horses. One woman breeder who owns 60 Arabian and Half-Arabian horses says she keeps several "bread and butter" mares around. She describes one such mare as a good quality Half-Arab that she picked up for $1000. In eight years she sold the mare's foals for $13,500, and eventually sold the mare for $1500.

Hobby or business, it makes no difference in the amount of appreciation owners of Arabians express about the breed.

The horses are unusually friendly animals, because of their heritage of living within the tent households of the nomadic Bedouins, and their versatility stands out at every Arabian horse show. Often the same horse will compete in such diverse classes as the elegant English high-stepping Park Horse and the Western Pleasure Horse, or even the Working Cow Horse.

The horses particularly seem to enjoy the Native Costume Class, the one class that really sets Arabian horse shows apart from others. In it, the horse and rider are costumed to resemble a scene from the Arabian Nights, with jeweled and tasseled tack for the horse and coordinated flowing robes for the rider. Some of the participants in the native costume classes labor painstakingly to create their own costumes. Some even import authentic Bedouin gear, and some spend up to $5000 having the costumes made by experts.

Arabians are especially successful in events requiring endurance, probably because they are equipped with wide flaring nostrils and a large lung capacity. One southwestern rancher who uses Arabians exclusively says they outlast other breeds consistently, working day after long day during round-ups without a day off to rest.

Owners say there is something magical about an Arabian horse. His distinct arched neck, high tail carriage, small, delicate wedge-shaped head and large eyes set him apart from other breeds and somehow bespeak his proud and ancient lineage. This "drinker of the wind, as his lung capacity and endurance have caused him to be called, has been a noble associate of the human race for a long time

OSM Approves $50,000 Work On Pike Slide

A Pike county mud slide that is threatening a home and apparently was caused by water seeping from an abandoned underground coal mine is targeted for action by the Interior Department's Office of Surface Mining (OSM).

OSM Director Walter Heine has approved spending up to $49,477 to stabilize the area and drain some of the water out of the mine if necessary.

The slide is threatening the home of Mr. and Mrs. Loy Greer on Hurricane Branch, northwest of Pikeville, on the Pike-Floyd county line, about 2.5 miles southeast of Boldman. A slide in the same area two years ago left debris next to the Greer's home, which they removed at their expense.

David C. Short, Region II director of OSM, said other slides could occur in the same area because of seepage from the mine.

Funds for the project will come from the federal share of reclamation fees levied on current coal production to reclaim abandoned mines under the Federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

Tax Plan Said Fairer, Simpler

Two proposals aimed at making income taxes fairer and simpler are the subjects discussed in two studies released this month by the Kentucky Council of Economic Advisors.

The papers provide sound, analytic background on piggybacking Kentucky's income tax to the federal income tax and indexing the state's individual income tax, said Dr. Charles Renfro, acting executive director.

Piggybacking means allowing the federal government to collect and administer the state's individual income tax. "The two primary benefits of piggybacking are simplicity for the taxpayer and cost savings for the state," notes the study, which was written by Ray Ware, a certified public accountant.

Taxpayers and employers would save time by making calculations and filing a single, combined federal and state tax form, the study noted. Piggybacking also would result in lower state administrative costs because the state's need for processing returns, providing taxpayer assistance and auditing returns would be eliminated.

Under a piggybacking agreement, the state would receive collected taxes through the federal government every third business day, unless the state agreed to less frequent intervals.

The study notes that there are several potential problems with piggybacking. The state would lose some of its autonomy, since procedures and rates would have to be adapted to federal standards. Conforming to federal standards would shift some of the tax burden to higher income groups, since the federal income tax is more progressive, and the different methods of calculations might affect state revenues, the study indicates.

There is also a possibility that tax records would be less accessible, Ware wrote.

Indexing the state's income tax would alleviate the inflationary bite on the taxpayer's real income, notes the study prepared by William Stober, chairman of the Department of Economics at the University of Kentucky, and Don Soule, professor of economics at the University of Kentucky.

As salaries are adjusted to compensate for inflation, taxpayers are pushed into higher tax brackets. "Thus, even if a taxpayer's before-tax money income keeps pace with inflation his (or her) after-tax real income, or purchasing power, will be reduced," the study states.

The inflationary impact could be counteracted by relating the dollar amounts of the tax rate brackets, the personal credit or the standard deduction to the inflation rate.

In February, schools throughout the Country will participate in the American History Essay Contest, sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution. The subject is: "Industries and Trades During the American Revolution".

Full indexing, which involves compensating all factors, ideally would keep the percentage of income going to taxes constant, despite inflation, the study notes. However, that situation is unattainable unless the federal income tax is also indexed.

"The reason is that the inflationary increase in income causes a more than proportionate increase in the federal income tax and, as a consequence, the wedge between taxable income for federal tax purposes and taxable income for state income taxes widens," the study states.

The study explains that this would prevent state tax revenues from keeping pace with inflation.

Taxes could also be partially indexed by adjusting one or two of the tax factors such as brackets, credits or deductions. Although a partial index would not give as much protection to the lower-income taxpayer, it would allow state revenues to keep pace with inflation, the study concludes.

The studies were prepared because they relate to important policy issues that are currently relevant to Kentucky and the legislature, Renfro said.

Copies may be obtained for $5 for each study from the Kentucky Council of Economic Advisors, 451 Commerce Building, University of Kentucky, Lexington, KY 40506.

College Tuition To Rise by Fall

There will have to be a tuition increase at Kentucky universities next fall, executive director of the Council on Higher Education Harry Snyder said at a legislative hearing.

After the meeting Snyder said he would ask the council to increase tuition at all state institutions except community colleges. He said he didn't know the exact amount of the increases to be requested, but he would ask that state tuition be brought up to levels of benchmark or comparable institutions.

Speaking at a joint Appropriations and Revenue Committee today, Snyder said most of the increase would come at the University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville. He said the proposed increase could be considered as early as the February meeting of the council and not later than April.

He said the state institutions are in fairly good shape on out-of-state tuitions, but that in-state university tuitions were lower than benchmark institutions. However, he said, tuition at community colleges are above benchmark levels. Up to this point, he said, the council has deliberately tried to keep tuition low reckoning that the best form of student aid was lower tuition.

While he said it was difficult to predict the effect of an increase on revenues, since student aid and enrollments could be affected by an increase, he expected higher tuitions to result in about $10 million in additional money over the biennium. This increased revenue was not reflected in the budget proposal submitted by the council, he said.

Milk-Pricing Law Subject of Debate

A Senate subcommittee Wednesday heard more opposition than support for a bill abolishing the state milk marketing law's prohibition of selling milk below cost.

The measure, Senate Bill (SB) 88, which is sponsored by Sen. Tom Easterly (D-Frankfort), would change the membership of the Milk Marketing and Anti-Monopoly Commission, the six-member panel which regulates the state's dairy industry. It also would end the requirement for retailers to post their milk prices with the commission.

Earlier this week the A & P grocery chain was fined $4,000 by the commission for selling whole milk below the $1.83 minimum price the commission feels is cost level. Such a product sold below cost and used to lure customers into a store to buy other items is called a "loss leader."

According to Easterly, the 20-year-old milk marketing law interferes with free enterprise. "It's wrong for state government to be involved in any respect in the pricing of retail goods," he said.

"We got along very well for 168 years without this (law)," said Easterly.

Easterly said the present milk marketing law prohibits the sale of milk products below cost. The criteria for determining cost to a retailer includes not only invoice cost but every other cost incurred in the operation of a business, he added.

"They put in everything but the kitchen sink when they're talking about cost," he said.

Easterly said the present law is unenforceable since the formula could be devised to figure the cost of milk for different types of stores.

"The law is nonsensical, illogical... You finally end up injuring the consumer," he said.

Easterly said present federal milk laws provide "as much protection as needed for the dairy farmer." The federal milk controls provide an adequate level of return to the dairy farmer and processor, while ensuring there is enough milk on the retail market, Easterly said.

Easterly also attacked the milk marketing commission, which is made up of individuals connected with the dairy industry. "Having people from the dairy industry monitoring milk prices is like having a fox monitor the chicken coop," said Easterly.

Neils Ewing, a member of the milk marketing commission, said the 1960 milk marketing law saved the dairy industry in Kentucky.

"Kentucky was a dumping ground" for cheap overabundant supplies of milk from other states in 1960, Ewing said. Without the law, he added, out-of-state wholesalers could provide low-priced milk to Kentucky stores at a price no Kentucky dairy could meet.

Ewing also said the law ensures competition among the dairy industry. In Indianapolis, he said, where there is no similar law, there tends to be less competition and milk prices run higher.

He supported his claim with figures showing milk from the same processor was being sold recently in Indianapolis for $2.15 and $1.83 in Louisville.

Ewing claimed the milk marketing law prevents the takeover of small dairies by "a few giant firms." He said since the law was enacted in 1960, more dairies have survived in Kentucky than in Indiana, which has no such law.

Paul Alagia Jr., an attorney representing the Kentucky Farm Bureau, who helped write the 1960 milk marketing law, said if SB 88 were passed and milk could be sold below cost, the effect "will hurt Kentucky's productive capacity to produce milk."

Alagia said Easterly's contention that federal laws would protect the dairy farmer is "a lot of poppycock... He's (the farmer) not in the business to sell (his milk) below cost."

Hughes said if Easterly's bill were passed, "You'll crucify the dairy farmer in Kentucky."

William Corum, a Madisonville dairy products processor and distributor, said passing SB 88 and allowing the large chain stores to sell milk below cost would put "us out of business."

More testimony concerning SB 88 will be heard by the subcommittee Feb. 25. According to the subcommittee chairman, Sen. Joe Wright (D-Harned), a "non-binding recommendation" will be made to the Agriculture and Natural Resources Committee based on the testimony.

Miss Prater-Mr. Morgan Wed, Jan. 18

Wedding vows were exchanged by Miss Jolene Prater and Mr. Jerry Morgan, January 18, at the Little Rock United Baptist Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Prater, of Abbott, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Graden Morgan, of Estill.

Abandoned Junker Can Bring Profit

"I can't see any car down there," a worker yelled as he peered through the brush into an Eastern Kentucky gorge.

But his supervisor threw a rock down the hill, and it banged against metal.

Lugging a log chain, the worker cut a patch through the briars toward the noise. A few minutes later, he hooked the chain to the badly rusted frame of an old car and stepped back. The winch on a state truck began to pull the paintless hulk up the mountain.

Similar scenes have taken place in 56 Kentucky counties since 1973 when the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection began its abandoned automobile removal project. Since then, the department has helped remove 24,939 junk cars from public and private land.

Removal of the unwanted vehicles solves more than one problem. The vehicles often serve as a breeding ground for mosquitoes and a home of rats and snakes. Children are sometimes injured by playing in the wrecks. Property is devalued by the clutter of junk vehicles.

"It seems that any time an old car is left along the side of the road, garbage accumulates," said Enlow Cammack, field supervisor of the abandoned auto removal project. "After it fills up, they just keep piling garbage around it. I've never seen a dump that didn't have a junk car in it."

For that reason, responsibility for the program was delegated to the department's Division of Hazardous Material and Waste Management. Lili Palmore, chief of the waste management section of that division explained how the junk car recycling program operates.

"First, a county judge requests that we come in. Then we do a 'windshield survey,' driving around the county to see if there are a lot of junk cars," she said. If there are, the judge appoints a civic group to sponsor the project.

Civic groups, such as the Knott County Athletic Boosters, Wolfe County High School Art Department, Ohio County Band, Harlan County Jaycees, Livingston County Senior Citizens and Hopkins County Kiwanis Club do the legwork for the program and reap the benefits.

Club members locate old or gutted vehicles and hunt the property owners to obtain written permission to haul the cars away.

"Sometimes it takes a week of door knocking to locate a car's owners," Palmore said. "It is not an easy job."

The clubs are required to find a minimum of 150 vehicles before scrap dealers will show an interest in the project. Most have no trouble meeting that goal. For example, the McCreary County Volunteer Fire Department found 750. Daviess County Band located 486. Hickman County High School Athletic Club signed over 438. Bourbon County Band members turned in 180. Mehlenberg County High School collected 751. Floyd County Volunteer Fire Department disposed of 208. In two separate efforts, the Jaycees and the Solid Waste Committee of Pike County removed 2,150.

After the group obtains release forms, it must arrange for a central location to store the vehicles.

"Sometimes they ask a farmer to locate a vacant lot to temporarily stack the cars," Palmore said. "Anyplace out of the public eye and accessible to our trucks can be used."

Once the release forms are signed and a storage place established, the state brings trucks in. State funds pay the costs of vehicle purchase and maintenance, the full-time salaries of three program coordinators and the wages of local people hired to drive the trucks.

Each year about 100 different people are hired for six- or eight-week shifts. They use the 16 state trucks to pull cars out of gullies, off roadides and away from houses, moving them to the central location.

After they are centralized, the vehicles are offered to scrap dealers through a bidding process. The highest bidder brings his equipment in. Tires and gas tanks are removed before each car is crushed to make almost a half ton of steel.

According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, recycling one ton of steel conserves 1 1/2 tons of iron ore and one-third of a ton of coal or coke, in addition to reducing air pollution, water pollution and waste production.

The scrap dealers make their bids based on the current scrap market. Recent markets have ranged from $10-$35 per vehicle. The entire amount of the sale remains with the sponsoring civil organization. Since the program's inception, civic groups have earned $415,700 from the recycling of almost 25,000 vehicles.

That money has been spent for band uniforms, school trips, Christmas parties for underprivileged children, 4-H projects, community beautification programs, construction of fire stations and other worthwhile community projects.

Despite the obvious benefits to the community, some people don't want to cooperate.

"There are people who hope they might be able to get $5 for $10 for an old junker," Cammack said, so they don't let the state haul it away. "when we go back two years later, they are still there, rusting away."

"The state is in a lot better shape than it was," Cammack believes. "In most cases, people aren't pushing cars over the ridge any more."

Rice's Crispies . . .

By KENNY RICE

This time last season, John Martin was planning strategy for Sheldon Clark High's basketball team as the 57th district tournament drew near. Today, Martin is preparing lesson plans for seventh and eighth graders at Wayland Elementary.

The former Garrett High star had a successful record a Sheldon Clark. His two varsity teams had advanced to the semi-finals and finals, respectively, of the 15th region tournament. In two years of coaching the junior varsity and freshmen teams at Sheldon Clark, before taking over the head coaching job in 1978, he had won over 80 percent of his games.

So why did Martin return to his native Floyd county to teach grade school?

"There's a lot of reasons I could give for leaving Sheldon Clark and I guess they probably have some reasons for wanting me to leave," Martin mused as his class was on a recess break. "I think if the former superintendent, Sheldon Clark, had stayed in office I would have still been at Sheldon Clark High and I would be living in Inez now. There was an administration change, new people came in and they wanted new people there in some positions. I can understand that, but I can't understand some of their actions in trying to get that point across."

Martin quit his coaching job at the Martin county school last spring. The "personality conflicts" between Martin and the county board of education played a large part in his decision but there were other influences.

"I don't think it was any secret I wanted to come home and that was a consideration of mine," Martin said. "I like being in coaching but at this time in my life I don't think this (coming back to Floyd county and teaching in the grades) was a bad decision."

Martin has no regrets about his decision, although after talking with him for a few minutes it is apparent he misses the coaching profession. He has been working with the Wayland boys' team but is not their coach. He felt it would be best to take a year off from coaching but he does want back in it.

"Every game I see, I think about what I would do in a situation. I miss it real bad. It's hard to watch and not be involved. I don't know where I'll be but I hope to be coaching next year," he said.

Carter Caves Plans Mountain Weekend

The ballads, folklore and crafts of the Kentucky mountains will be featured in the fourth annual Mountain Memories Weekend at Carter Caves Resort Park in Olive Hill March 7-8.

Folk musicians and craftsmen who are helping preserve the Appalachian mountain heritage will take part in the program, which includes square dances, demonstrations and displays of mountain crafts, and concerts by singers, guitarists, dulcimer players, fiddlers and banjo pickers.

The Mountain Memories Weekend was begun in 1977 by park naturalist John Tierney and musicians Dick and Ann Albin, of Stanton, who will coordinate this year's event. The weekend will be dedicated to the late Hubert Rogers, a dulcimer builder, wood carver and musician who shared his skills with the group in previous special weekends. He lived in the Carter Caves area.

This year's program will open Friday, March 8, at 8 p.m. with a concert by the Albins, J. P. and Annadeene Fraley, Blake Barker and Nancy Johnson.

The Albins are recording and concert artists who give concerts throughout the parks system during the summer months and who have represented Kentucky in the National Folk Festival. The Fraleys are Ashland area musicians who have played at the Smithsonian Institution and for National Folk Festivals. Barker and Johnson, who live in Balltown, have made albums featuring the guitar, autoharp, dulcimer, mandolin, banjo and hammered dulcimer and have performed in Parks Department concerts throughout the state.

Saturday's program includes crafts exhibits and concerts beginning at 10 a.m., a nature walk led by Tierney at 11 a.m., a workshop on dulcimer building, a string band concert, programs by musicians Lily May Ledford and J. P. Fraley and a square dance. The weekend's activities will conclude with a concert at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Ledford, who plays the banjo and fiddle, is a former member of the Coon Creek Girls musical group. She is now serving as an artist-in-residence at Berea College.

Reduced off-season lodge rates will be in effect, and meals will be available in the lodge dining room. Reservations may be made by calling Carter Caves State Resort Park at (606) 286-4411 or by writing the park at Olive Hill, Ky. 41164.

Reservations can also be made by calling toll free, 1-800-372-2961 from any point in Kentucky. For residents of surrounding states, the toll-free number is 1-800-626-2911.

FROM BRUSH CREEK

Allen Central's public address announcer, Rick Hancock, has put something extra into his introduction of the home team to the delight of the players and fans.

Rick introduces the players by their position, number, height, class and hometown. That's right, hometown.

An example of a Hancock introduction: at forward, number 11, a 5-11 senior from Brush Creek, Jeff Bailey. Bailey's hometown (Brush Creek) and 6-4 center Bruce Mullins' hometown (Pageant Hill) are the most popular among the Rebel fans.

ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING

The first organizational meeting of the new area ski club I wrote about on January 30 in this space will take place this coming Tuesday Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of Prestonsburg Community College.

Among the topics to be discussed at the meeting, in addition to setting some basic goals for the club, are selecting an official name for the club and hearing proposals about a ski resort in the Big Sandy area in the future.

A STEPP CLOSER

With only a week and a half of the regular season remaining, Phelps' super-shooter, Ervin Stepp, appears to have all but wrapped up the all-time national season high school scoring record.

Ervin hasn't slowed any over the last month and his 54.7 points per game average looks to be safely ahead of the current record of 50.8 set during the 1970-71 season by Bennie Fuller of the Arkansas School for the Deaf in Little Rock.

Ervin led the nation in scoring as a junior last season with an average just under 50 points per game.

CHANGES

Hueysville's Jimmy Turner has seen a lot of basketball games over the years and this knowledgeable fan thinks there has been some changes in mountain basketball, and these not for the better.

"I don't know whether everyone will agree with me or not but it seems to me that the overall quality of basketball in the 15th region and the mountains as a whole has gone down a little bit. Really, if you stop and think about it, with the consolidation we've had we should probably have stronger representatives. I've seen times in this county when you've had five or six excellent ball clubs but, in my opinion, you don't have that any more."

Jimmy's reasoning has some good support when you look at the 15th region's record in state tournament play in the 1970's. Only one team, McDowell in 1971, made it past the first round. Maytown, in 1969, was the last team to reach the semi-finals as a 15th region representative.

15 Wins, No Losses

The Weeksbury men's independent basketball team won its 14th and 15th games of the season last week. The 14th victory was scored against Pic Pac by a score of 116 to 87. Weeksbury's high scorer was Bobby Hall with 40 big ones. Gene Tackett was next with 23, followed by Johnny Mullins with 21; James Tackett, 19; Buddy Johnson, 13.

Victory No. 15 came Sunday, over Hall's Gulf in a close game and a by a margin of three points, 68-65. High scorer for the game was Greg Ratliff with 35. Buddy Johnson was high point man for Weeksbury, followed by Gene Tackett, 16; Bobby Hall, 15; Johnny Mullins, 11, and Eugene Tackett, 4.

Weeksbury clinched the season weeks ago, and now with 15 wins and no losses, has only one game to go before tournament play begins.

Future Hair Stylists

Jack Benny Richmond, (left), and Jeff Middleton (right) are two Mayo State Vocational-Technical School students who are trying non-traditional vocational training. The two are enrolled in Mrs. Leona Rice's cosmetology class, and are pictured above styling the hair of two student models, Carolyn Slone and Donna Savage.

Richmond has entered the Bluegrass hair fashion committee student competition held in Lexington, Monday. Using Ina Robinson, of Langley, as his model in the competition, he did spring and summer hair fashions. He is a graduate of Sheldon Clark High School and lives with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Richmond, of Inez.

Middleton is a graduate of Rowan County High School. He and his wife, Mildred, reside at Dorton.

Beshear Proposes Steps To Protect Consumers

Attorney General Steve Beshear today outlined an 11-point legislative package designed to protect consumers in the areas of public utilities and insurance.

Some of the proposed measures have already been introduced into the General Assembly by Sen. David Karem (D-Louisville).

Anticipating opposition to the proposals from lobbying groups, Beshear said, "The proposals we are making today are not designed to harm utility and insurance companies."

"These proposals will not put these companies out of business, nor will they place any unreasonable restraints on the conduct of their business. However, for too long the laws in these areas have given an unfair advantage to the companies," he said.

The attorney general said he felt that the proposed laws would strike an appropriate balance between the companies' needs and the rights of Kentucky's citizens.

Nine of these measures unveiled by Beshear dealt with the regulation of utility companies, which he said would "prevent the seemingly uncontrolled cost increases on the monthly utility bills of every Kentucky consumer."

The nine utility measures would: Require all electric generating companies in Kentucky to warn their customers when they are about to reach a peak demand period. This would call for the staggering of electric usage during the peak demand periods, he said.

Require the Energy and Utility

Regulatory Commissions to consider the quality of service rendered as a determining factor in setting rates.

Require companies to state on consumers' bills the rate schedule for the service, the fuel adjustment charges, the meter reading on which the bill was computed and the previous month's meter reading and consumption.

Disallow certain utility expenditures. All costs of construction and operation of power plants are currently paid by the consumer. Beshear cited examples of how some Kentucky utilities have miscalculated their need for expansion, and said legislation will be introduced to require the Energy Regulatory Commission to disallow expenditures of utilities which are connected with such forecasting errors and over-construction of power plants.

Require the Energy and Utility Regulatory Commissions to force the utility companies' stockholders to pay all costs incurred when utility executives do not choose the least costly alternatives.

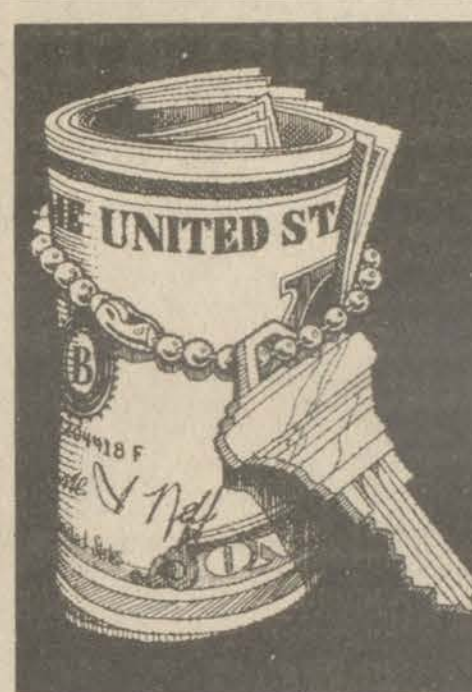

Force regulated utilities to undergo a management audit by an independent management auditing firm every three years. Further, utility stockholders should pay for management errors.

Prohibit a utility from filing an application for a rate increase until six months have elapsed from the date of the company's last rate increase.

All refunds to consumers must include the interest earned by the company on those funds during the time the funds have been held by the utility.

Prohibit a utility from conducting business with any companies or persons owning in excess of five percent of the voting capital stock of that utility, unless approved by the regulatory commission.

Beshear's other two proposed measures dealt with the insurance industry and would require the Insurance Regulatory Board to hold hearings on all requested rate increases and to offset any requested rate increases by the investment income earned the previous year.

Fire Department To Receive Blood

As the Prestonsburg Fire Department is preparing to receive blood from donors at its location in the new City Hall building Thursday, Feb. 28, the importance of the blood program in this county was being emphasized.

In the last two months, in Lexington hospitals alone, it was pointed out, 65 pints of blood have been transfused to Floyd county patients, and the Central Kentucky Blood Center was obliged to rely on donors from Lexington and other areas to provide this blood.

"Many patients from Floyd county receive blood each year, and, although opportunity is often offered for residents of the county to donate blood at scheduled drives in order to protect their families in advance of an emergency, there still are many Floyd county families without blood protection," a blood center spokesman said.

Blood may be donated at the fire department Feb. 28 from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Fiscal Courts Ready To Bite the Bullet?

Kentucky's fiscal courts are "prepared to bite the bullet and face...constituents" by levying special taxes for road maintenance if necessary, according to Hancock County Judge-Executive James H. Fallin in a story from TRANSPORTATION NEWS.

Speaking at the Kentuckians for Better Transportation Annual Transportation Conference as a representative of the Kentucky Association of Counties, Fallin said counties want the General Assembly to restore "the State Road Fund's ability to support county road programs" so that counties can use their road departments to full capability.

"But we're not asking just the General Assembly to raise taxes. We are asking that fiscal courts be given the authority to impose a tax themselves. If the situation in the county demands that more money be generated, then fiscal courts across the state are prepared to bite the bullet and face our constituents."

Fallin said the tax would be used "solely for the purpose of road maintenance"—not new construction. Revenue would be used where existing local, state, and federal funds are insufficient to meet road maintenance needs.

Recent reports by the Kentucky Department of Transportation and the Task Force on Transportation have emphasized the funding problem Kentucky roads are facing. The State Road Fund, according to the Task Force, is facing an average annual $450 million shortfall during the next decade. This problem, Fallin said, should not be worsened by county demands for funds. Yet, he said, the public should realize that county roads must also be maintained and improved.

Fallin spoke favorably of the state's funding formula but pointed out the need for additional funding. Last year, some $58 million in state revenue went to local governments for roads, including special allocations and earmarked revenue. Revenue is presently earmarked from the 9-cent-per-gallon gas tax (rural secondary-2 cents; county aid-9 cents and municipal aid—.5 cents.)

The county-state cooperative road program, Fallin noted, has resulted in the development of "well-trained, well-equipped county road departments." And, he continued, the dwindling Road Fund is hampering the ability of county governments to utilize equipment and manpower to full capability.

Former KyDOT Secretary Calvin Grayson agreed with Fallin's assessment of the problem and said, "The road system that is most important to a Kentucky citizen is the road in front of his house."

Recognizing the need for additional funding for county roads, Grayson has said a matching program similar to the federal-state program should be developed. The matching ratio, he added, should be 80 state, 20 county. Both Grayson and Fallin note that many local governments are already putting up substantial funding and agree that others could come up with additional revenue.

Grayson says the additional funding would increase local responsibility and would result in the development of better local road programs.

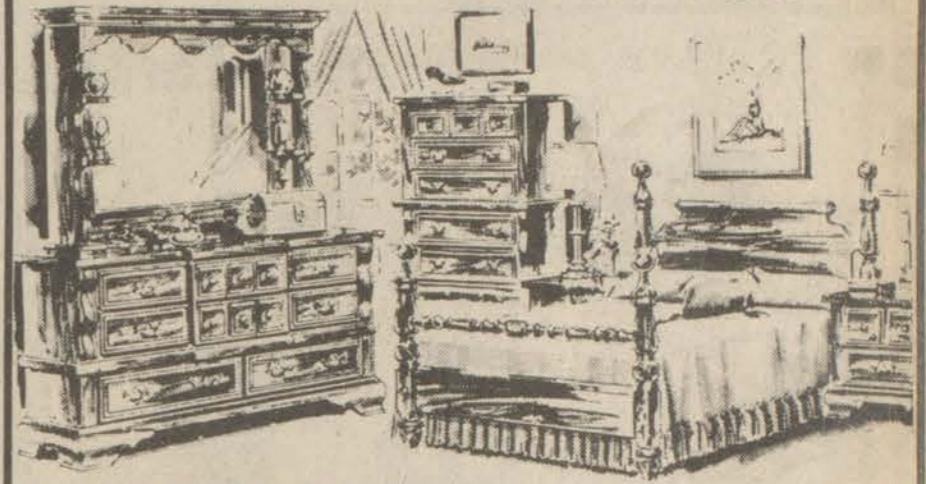

Receipts from local sources for road and street purposes for 1976 (latest year available) amounted to $36.6 million, according to KyDOT records. Local funding has generally been on the decline. General fund appropriations make up the bulk of the local revenue. Other sources are property taxes, special assessments, registration fees, and traffic fines.

State Div. of Water Enforcement Lists New Disposal Rules

The Kentucky Division of Water Enforcement has announced changes in the use of Marine Sanitation Devices (M.S.D.'s).

Dewey and Fishtrap Lakes are classified as non-discharge lakes according to the federal Environmental Protection Agency. On these non-discharge lakes only Type III M.S.D.'s may be used. A Type III M.S.D. is one that has a holding tank which stores raw sewage until it is pumped out at a station on shore.

The pumping station at Dewey Lake, Brandy Keg Dock, should be in operation during the summer of 1980. Porta-pottie devices which use plastic bags to store sewage may be used by those persons who do not wish to go the expense of having a holding tank installed. But, the division advises, Porta-pottie bags must be disposed of properly and the present Type I and II M.S.D.'s must be made inoperative.

Checking of the use of proper M.S.D.'s will take place during regular vessel inspections. Violations of this statute are covered under KRS Chapter 235.440. These new regulations were effective as of January 30, 1980. For a listing of approved Type III M.S.D.'s should be directed to the nearest water enforcement officer: Rodney Holbrook, Box 156, W. Sta. Prestonsburg, KY 41668, or the Division of Water Enforcement, 114 W. Clinton Street, Frankfort, KY 40622.

Senate Seeks Stiffer Corruption Penalties

Two measures that would increase the penalties for state government corruption and allow the attorney general to prosecute such cases were passed out of the Senate Wednesday.

One measure, Senate Bill (SB) 118, sponsored by Sen. Mike Moloney (D-Lexington), would make official misconduct in the first degree—now a Class A misdemeanor—a Class D felony. Official misconduct in the second degree, now punishable by a maximum of one year in jail and a $500 fine, would carry a penalty of up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Official misconduct in the second degree would be punishable by a maximum fine of $500 and possibly one year in jail.

The other measure, SB 119, also sponsored by Moloney, would allow the state attorney general to prosecute cases involving the unlawful obtaining of state funds or property by state employees in the Franklin Circuit Court.

Moloney said the bill would not require the attorney general to prosecute welfare fraud cases.

He said the bill only affects fraud committed in Franklin County. "No venue change is imposed by this legislation," Moloney said.

SB 118 passed by a 31-5 margin, while SB 119 passed 35-1.

The Senate also adopted an amended resolution prohibiting the issuance of permits by the Department for Natural Resources for hazardous waste facilities in the state until the General Assembly can determine that such facilities pose no threat to the state.

The original version of the resolution had asked for a 90-day moratorium on the construction of such sites.

Senate Majority Leader John Berry (D-Turners Station), who filed the amendment, said it would be a "mistake" to call for a 90-day moratorium for hazardous waste sites without seeing other legislation before the General Assembly.

According to Berry, the state has been mandated by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to develop a satisfactory waste disposal plan.

Sen. Nelson Allen (D-Russell), who sponsored the original resolution, said a company recently filed for a permit with the Department for Natural Resources to open a hazardous waste site in Lewis County.

The people there "don't want another Maxey Flats in Lewis County," Allen said.

Other bills passed by the Senate:

—SB 1, sponsored by Sen. Tom Easterly (D-Frankfort), would require a county name to be embossed on motor vehicle registration plates. The bill passed 33-2.

—SB 44, sponsored by Sen. Ed Ford (D-Cynthiana), would create new sections of the state statutes concerning the ad valorem tax. The bill would allow a county clerk to remove a lien from a vehicle transferred to a bonafide purchaser who has no prior knowledge of the lien.

Ford said county clerks had "input" on the drafting of the bill. It passed 36-1.

—SB 147, sponsored by Sen. Bill Quinlan (D-Louisville), would require the Legislative Research Commission to notify members of the legislature about available reports and publications issued by the state. The practice now is to send the reports by mail to all members of the legislature.

Quinlan said the bill would save the state $15,000 yearly on postage and handling costs. The bill passed 38-0.

—SB 76, sponsored by Sen. Joe Wright (D-Harned), would prohibit feeding garbage to swine. Wright told the Senate he sponsored the bill at the request of the Kentucky Pork Producers Association. The bill passed 30-6.

The Senate referred to the Banking and Insurance Committee a resolution introduced on the floor Wednesday by Sen. Georgia Powers (D-Louisville) that calls for the First National Corp. of Louisville to discontinue its loan practices with the Republic of South Africa.

Fighting For The Consumer

By Georgette Wagner

You can't fight City Hall, or so the saying goes. But the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG) has found that not only can you fight City Hall, you can win. In the six years since it was founded, NYPIRG has:

• Researched, drafted, lobbied and put on the books more than one dozen new state laws.

• Fought a gas company price increase, saving western New Yorkers $3 million.

• Checked redlining practices in Brooklyn by securing agreements from savings banks to invest $40 million in mortgages to local neighborhoods.

• Saved New Yorkers millions of dollars by pushing through a generic drug law.

• Helped reform small claims courts from a no-win situation to a sure bet.

• May be your community can do the same.

Are there laws that you think should be changed? Are you, as a consumer, being represented adequately? Do you know of practices that should be stopped? Perhaps a brief look at NYPIRG will give you a few tips.

Primarily a student-run organization with chapters in colleges and universities across the state, the New York Public Interest Research Group was founded in 1973 under the aegis of consumer advocate Ralph Nader. While NYPIRG recognized the potential in student activism, they were equally aware of its pitfalls.

"The NYPIRG organizers knew that to gain respect as a public interest group, they would have to produce results," says Donald K. Ross, NYPIRG director. "To withstand the scrutiny of legislators, industry and the news media, NYPIRG work would have to be no less than outstanding. It would have to achieve the highest levels of accuracy and excellence."

The group assembled a professional staff of over 100 organizers, lawyers, researchers, scientists, administrators, teachers, graphic artists and printers. They are supported by hundreds of student volunteers. During the legislative session in Albany, student interns are hired as full-time lobbyists.

The staff is notoriously low paid. Salaries are one-half to one-third of those available in government and private industry. But low pay has worked as an effective political tool on at least one occasion.

In 1977, Ross testified before the New York City Council's Finance Committee to protest the 50¢ pay hike councilmen wanted to vote themselves. A councilman asked Ross what he earned. Ross, a former Peace Corps volunteer and Nader associate, replied "$9800."

"Well, you're underpaid, too," Councilman Michael DeMarco snapped.

"But I'm not asking for a raise," Ross shot back.

The councilman had no reply. The pay hike was defeated.

Thirty Bags of Garbage

NYPIRG is a multi-issue organization. They are concerned not only with consumer protection, but also with energy policy, environmental preservation, government accountability, political reform and social justice.

Tactics run the gamut from litigation to grass roots organizing. Occasionally their colorful strategy cause some to accuse the organization of reveling in publicity. For example, students at the NYPIRG Buffalo chapter mailed 30 garbage bags of old beer and soda cans—individually wrapped—to protest the governor's opposition to a bill that would require a mandatory deposit on bottles.

NYPIRG's real battles, however, are in the courtroom. Unlike many government groups such as Common Cause or the League of Women Voters, NYPIRG is willing to go to court. They have litigated issues from unit pricing to lulus (stipends legislators receive for holding leadership posts). In 1978, NYPIRG conducted eight major lawsuits. Litigation is costly, particularly for an operation like NYPIRG, whose budget runs about $500,000 a year.

Not everyone would agree that NYPIRG has been completely successful in living up to their goal, as Ross said, of achieving the "highest levels of accuracy and excellence."

"The problem with them is they're superficial," claims one state official involved with NYPIRG litigation. "So many of their lawsuits don't hit the right question or don't hit the question right."

A case in point is a suit challenging the financing of the South Mall, the monumental office complex erected in Albany by the late Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

"They are 12 years too late," protested one state official.

The mall had already been built. To change its financing, some said would only result in even higher costs: such litigation should have been pursued when the mall was first proposed.

Ross disagrees. He believes governors will think twice before trying to avoid the legislature through technicalities to build buildings the legislature clearly does not want.

Research and Education

Besides litigation, NYPIRG also conducts extensive research on consumer issues. Recent pamphlets (available to the public free or for a nominal fee) include guides to the state open meeting law, state freedom of information law and property tax laws.

The organization likes to stress its educational role. Students, with the help of the professional staff, learn research and advocacy skills as they produce the publications, litigation, testimony and other work of NYPIRG.

"The visible end product of most NYPIRG projects is something tangible, such as a booklet, a legal brief or a piece of legislation," states the 1978 NYPIRG Annual Report. "But the learning that accompanies the production, the sense of power that comes when people realize they can make a difference, is also important."

Not only does NYPIRG support a half dozen student interns during the legislative session in Albany each year, but the organization also sponsors courses at dozens of colleges and universities across the state. In some cases, students receive academic credit for their work.

Although it is a statewide organization, NYPIRG in recent years has targeted projects to meet the specific needs of localities: tax assessment procedures in Albany, redlining in Brooklyn and water pollution in Poughkeepsie.

Typical of NYPIRG's work is its battle to make small claims court the "people's courts" they were intended to be.

Your Day In Court

Small claims courts handle thousands of daily squabbles: between consumers and merchants over damaged goods or poorly performed services, between landlords and tenants over unpaid rents or unreturned security deposits. Depending on the state, the cases involve $150 to $3000; lawyers, for the most part, do not participate.

Funded for one year by a grant from Citibank, the Queens NYPIRG chapter monitored hundreds of small claims actions. The study found that while bringing and winning cases was "relatively quick, simple and inexpensive," the victory was hollow. More than 40% of the victorious plaintiffs were unable to collect damages.

Backed with these facts, the lobbyists and lawyers went into action. The campaign netted four new laws to limit counterclaims, to require the court to hold evening sessions and to raise the small claims limit from $500 to $1000. The fourth law permits consumers to sue a business under its common name, squelching tactics by merchants to invalidate a case by claiming the suit did not give the firm's legal — and often difficult to research — name.

Despite these successes, NYPIRG feels more reforms are needed. The battle continues. The group is now lobbying to raise the small claims limit to $2500 in warranty cases. This would permit consumers who buy defective cars or major appliances to sue in small claims courts.

NYPIRG also wants the courts to distribute free pamphlets to any citizen who wants to use the court. The booklet would describe the court and how to use it. This would ensure that small claims courts are truly a court where the average citizen can settle a grievance without a lawyer. In the interim, NYPIRG has published two handbooks that describe small claims courts operations.

Fighting Redlining

One issue that has occupied a major portion of NYPIRG staff time is redlining. Some banks refuse loans in deteriorating neighborhoods, a practice that promotes urban decay. In the last few years NYPIRG has joined other community groups to put anti-redlining laws on federal and state books.

As NYPIRG has learned, legislation is only the first step toward stopping such practices. The results thus far have been mixed.

On the federal level, NYPIRG won a major victory. The Greater New York Savings Bank, considered by NYPIRG to be a major redliner, applied for permission to open a branch in Manhattan. NYPIRG filed suit, charging that the bank failed to meet its mortgage obligations in local Brooklyn neighborhoods. The Federal Deposit Insurance Company apparently agreed: they rejected the bank's application. The action was the first test of whether the federal government would stand behind the laws it had enacted.

The fight against redlining is less encouraging on the state level. Although a redlining measure was passed, the money to enforce the law ($180,000) was slashed from the state budget.

"The Senate is shilling for the banks on this," Ross declared. "Failure to approve the enforcement money is an outrage."

NYPIRG is funded by student members and by government and foundation grants. Door-to-door canvassing, however, produces the bulk of the organization's revenues.

NYPIRG is the largest state group in the country, but organizations can function just as effectively on the local and city level, and the membership need not just be students. Anyone can fight City Hall.

Power Firm Executive

Robert E. Matthews has been elected president and chief operating officer of Kentucky Power Company, effective February 1. Matthews has been executive vice-president and operating head of the company.

W.S. White, Jr., Kentucky Power's current president, was elected chairman of the board of the company. White is also chairman and chief executive officer of American Electric Power Company, of which Kentucky Power is a subsidiary, and will continue as chief executive officer of Kentucky Power.

Similar action was taken by the boards of directors of the seven operating electric utilities of AEP. Including Kentucky Power, they are Appalachian Power Company, Indiana & Michigan Electric Company, Kingsport Power Company, Michigan Power Company, Ohio Power Company, and Wheeling Electric Company.

Matthews is a graduate of the Catholic University of America with a bachelor of mechanical engineering degree and holds a master's degree in business administration from Morehead State University. A native of New Jersey, he started his 29-year electric utility career with the AEP Service Corporation in New York in 1950 as an engineer in the mechanical engineering division.

EPISCOPAL BISHOP IS SEEKING HELP FOR DRINKING PROBLEM

The Rt. Rev. Robert Bruce Hall, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia, is seeking treatment for alcohol dependency and will be away from the diocese for six weeks.

Hall sent a letter Friday informing the clergy and lay leaders in the diocese of his problem.

He wrote that members of his family and a representative group of laity and clergy "alerted me to facts about my drinking of which I was unaware...I have decided to seek treatment for my illness."

The diocesan standing committee and its executive board voiced support for the bishop.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the family of Elder Mitchell Chaffins, wish to express our heartfelt thanks and deepest gratitude to everyone — relatives, friends and neighbors — who helped us in any way or expressed sympathy at the passing of our beloved husband and father. We extend our deepest appreciation to everyone who did any of the following: sent food, gave money, sent floral offerings and shared our sorrow with us by being present during our time of great need and comfort. Special thanks are extended to the ministers of the Old Regular Baptist, the Sardis, the Old Union, the Northern, the Indian, Bottom, and the Philadelphia Associations who visited us and comforted us during our bereavement. We deeply appreciate the love and kindness shown by the young people who loved and admired Elder Mitchell. Our sincere gratitude is extended to our visiting friends from out of the state and to the members of other church denominations who were so kind and sympathetic. We want to thank the Hall Funeral Home for its kind and efficient service.

May God bless each of you who helped us in any way.

Those on Welfare Not Stereotypes

A popular stereotype assumes people on welfare are sometimes lazy, wasteful and not as much in need as they say they are. However, a recent study by the Department for Human Resources disproves that stereotype in one of its assistance programs.

The study is a profile of the state's Crisis Oriented Program for Emergencies. The program helps individuals or couples who face severe financial crisis and have no children under age 21 living at home.

The program's $1.5 million biennium budget was appropriated by the 1978 state General Assembly.

The typical recipient during fiscal year 1979 could be described as white, female and middle age. She probably lived alone and had a small income from Social Security or other federal subsidy. Payment went directly to her, more likely to help pay her living expenses or utility bills. More than two-thirds or $500,000 of the program's yearly budget was used to pay bills in those two categories.

In contrast, the typical recipients in fiscal year 1980 were young, white males who received assistance for general living expenses and also used the aid to pay for shelter.

Roy Butler of the Human Resources Department's Bureau for Social Insurance explained the age shift as a result of change in the state's unemployment rate. "Although the national figures did not indicate a change during 1979, Kentucky experienced a rise in unemployment from 4.6 percent to 5.5 percent during that year. The hardest hit group is usually young males just out of school and looking for work," he said.

As a result of changes in program requirements, the number of people helped increased by more than 5 percent, from 3,192 in 1979 to 3,362 this year.

These changes, which include decreasing the maximum income level allowed by an applicant, slightly lowered the average payment applicants received. During the first year the average payment was $216.93. Payment during the second year was $205.18.

Butler said the difference allowed more people to be served by the program with the available funds.

The concept that welfare recipients are financially better off than they seem is not supported by the department's report. For example, the average monthly income of those helped by the crisis program in 1979 was $108.18. This year's recipient claimed only $33.24 average income. At least 78 percent claimed no income in either year.

Not everyone who asked for help from the program met the eligibility requirements. Such applicants usually were turned down because of their high-income levels. The average monthly income of those applicants was $160. Others were refused help for not meeting the program's definition of a crisis situation. They were referred to other social insurance or local agency programs for possible help, Butler said.

"The information and experience gained from the program," Butler said, "indicates that a large number of needy persons who are usually excluded or ineligible for other programs were helped."

Hypothyroid Testing For Newborn Begins

Hypothyroidism is a condition that, if untreated, can cause mental retardation in its most common victim—newborns.

In an effort to prevent mental retardation, the Department for Human Resources is coordinating the testing of all Kentucky newborns for the condition.

Department Secretary Grady Stumbo announced recently that all Kentucky hospitals have started collecting blood samples. Most of the hospitals will send the samples to the Human Resources laboratory in Frankfort for analysis. Others will analyze samples locally.

"Nationally, one in every 6,000 infants is born with a thyroid disorder," Stumbo said. "A recent study of newborns in Kentucky suggests, however, that thyroid disease may be more prevalent in some areas of the state than national figures indicate."

Passage of a state regulation in January made testing mandatory for hypothyroidism and another condition, galactosemia. Testing for a condition called PKU already had been mandatory. Both galactosemia and PKU can lead to mental retardation.

Emergency Health Care Receives DHR Funding

The Kentuckiana Emergency Department Nurses Association, Inc. has received funds from the Kentucky Department of Human Resources, Division of Emergency Medical Services to provide on-going educational activities for emergency department nurses and those professionals involved in the delivery of emergency health care.

The funds were used to establish the Statewide Training Emergency Program (STEP). The STEP project works with the nine Kentucky regional emergency medical services systems to bring the program of the local areas. Each region has identified certain individuals to serve as contact people in arranging the programs in the local hospitals.

Eastern Kentucky EMS, region IX, has four host hospitals. The teaching sessions are rotated between these four sites, so that emergency care professionals in the area are served, regardless of geography. These hospitals are King's Daughters in Ashland, Louisa Community in Louisa, Highlands Regional Medical Center in Prestonsburg, and Methodist in Pikeville. Continuing education units are awarded from both EDNA and the National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians.

Two programs are scheduled in the near future. Louisa Community Hospital will host "Spinal Cord Injuries" on March 18. This course is designed to give the student a greater understanding of recognition and emergency management of spinal cord injuries. The course will be taught by Joy Curry, R.N., Director of Nursing, Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, Louisville, Kentucky. For further information, contact Betty Sloan, R.N., Inservice Director, 606-638-9451.

"The Crisis of Rape" will be presented at the Methodist Hospital in Pikeville on March 20. This course is designed to update the emergency practitioner's skills in assessment and management of the rape victim. The instructor will be Grace M. Erickson, Director, R.A.P.E. Relief Center, Louisville, Kentucky. For further information, contact Judy Steffy, Director of the Emergency Department, 606-437-9621.

The 1980 census is expected to show a nine percent increase in the U.S. population for the past decade, the smallest in the Nation's history except for the 1930's, the time of the Great Depression.

WE'RE HERE TO HELP

What Should You Expect From Your Bank?

Straight Talk

The key to obtaining reliable financial advice is to first obtain a reliable bank. A bank with good people who are armed with the facts and willing to share them with you. Your bank should serve as a "clearing house" of financial information which is yours for the asking. We call it simply straight talk and to our way of thinking, it is the very least you should expect from our bank.

Bank Services

But in addition to straight talk, you should expect several other things from our bank. For example, there are times when you will need an automobile loan, a home improvement loan, or perhaps a loan for a vacation or travel. Likewise, there are times when you need a checking account, savings account, or safe deposit box. Perhaps a Christmas Club or some other bank service.

Well, that's where we can help. Because our people have the training and experience to help you establish a financial plan so that you can meet your goals. And a well-conceived plan, of course, can provide your family with the peace of mind and security to really enjoy life.

Your Banking Relationship

We believe you have a right to expect all this and more from our bank. If we're doing our job, we should be able to make a significant contribution to your financial well-being.

We invite you to stop by or give us a call and let us help with any of your current financial needs. After all, it's what you should expect from your financial partner.

COONHOUNDS, long maligned for alleged skills in sucking hen eggs, and regarded by many as somewhat below Rin Tin Tin in native intelligence, may not be as dumb as some people think. These fine Walker hounds, for example, obviously realized the value of warm bodies and a dry shelter during last Wednesday's renewed snowfall.

As Unemployed Increase, State Workload Heavier

With unemployment on the rise, the workload for many employees in the state's Unemployment Insurance program is also climbing.

In January 1979, 51,253 persons received unemployment benefits compared with 65,101 during January of this year. This increase is also evident in year-end totals. Last year 351,533 claimants were helped, compared with 265,601 in 1978, according to Department for Human Resources figures.

"Our staff has not been able to expand to meet that increased need," Human Resources Secretary Dr. Grady Stumbo stated. "We're faced with the probability of even more claims being filed," he said.

The Unemployment Insurance program is administered by the Department for Human Resources and funded by the U.S. Department of Labor. The program pays claimants up to $120 per week during periods of involuntary unemployment. Up to 26 weeks of benefits may be received.

Last month the program paid claimants more than $25 million in benefits compared with approximately $15 million during January a year ago.

"We're operating with basically the same number of employees as we had then," said Rick Crawford, program director. "Our staff averages 460 full-time employees with 150 additional part-timers used during peak winter months."

"The staff has been doing an exceptional job dealing with the people who come to us for help," Stumbo said.

"If we have to reduce the number of people presently working with the program, we will lose federal dollars flowing into the state that would mean cuts in our service to the unemployed," Stumbo said.

Crawford explained that the funds for both the program and staff are provided by Kentucky employers under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act with funds channeled through the U.S. Department of Labor.

Kentucky's allocation is determined by a formula which takes into consideration the number of initial claims processed, weeks claimed, non-monetary determination and appeal cases.

"Our expenses are matched dollar for dollar," he said.

Even with the increase in claims over the past year, Kentucky's service ranks among the nation's top 10 percent, Crawford said.

"This wouldn't be possible if we had to reduce our staff," he said.

Presently an application is approved within 24 hours and clients usually receive benefits within three weeks.

HAZARD-WASTE LEGISLATION UNDER STUDY IN KENTUCKY

A number of proposals for hazardous-waste legislation are currently being considered by Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., but so far specific legislation has not been introduced in the General Assembly. While some controversy is expected, proponents feel that opposition to the measure will not be as great as in Congress.

Among the likely bills is one setting up a $15 million to $20 million fund to clean up abandoned toxic-waste dumps, with the money coming from fees assessed on the toxic wastes generated by industry within the state.

Two Gas Company Rate Increase OK'd

The state Energy Regulatory Commission has approved a rate increase for two Floyd county natural gas companies.

Customers of the Auxier Road Gas Co. will pay a monthly rate of $4.21 per 1,000 cubic feet of gas for the first 2,000 cu. ft. A rate of $3.78 per 1,000 cu. ft. will be charged for all amounts over 2,000 cu. ft. The minimum monthly bill will remain $4.

Martin Gas Co. customers will pay a monthly rate of $3.54 per 1,000 cu. ft. for the first 2,000 cu. ft. For all amounts over 2,000 cu. ft. a rate of $4.34 will be charged. The minimum monthly bill will remain $5.50.

The increase for both companies amounts to 27 cents per 1,000 cu. ft. It is needed to offset an increase in the cost of wholesale natural gas supplied by Columbia Gas of Kentucky, the commission held.

Water is the most important component of the human body if actual weight is the basis for evaluation. It makes up an approximate two thirds of our body weight. Some of the main uses of water in the body include being a solvent for many substances. It serves as a vehicle for transporting nutrients and waste materials and aids in the regulation of body temperature. It also acts as a cushion to protect organs from external shocks and serves as a lubricant to ease movement of the joints. It is a fundamental substance in the building and repairing of tissues. A generous intake of fluids every day is important to good health.

Water may be the most important component of the human body, but at COOLEY APOTHECARY INC., No. 2 Town Center Bldg.
