

Half of Indictments Are for Cold Checks

Jury Suggests Drug Education; Files 48 Bills

Of the 48 indictments reported to Circuit Judge Hollie Conley by the grand jury at its adjournment last Wednesday, exactly half accuse defendants of "theft by deception," which is usually synonymous with the offense formerly labeled "cold check."

So numerous were these charges that the grand jury in its final report suggested that persons guilty of the offense "should be dealt with justly but firmly."

Again the grand jury came and went without a murder case to investigate. One indictment, however, named a Left Beaver Creek man on an attempted murder count. The defendant, Woodrow Shepherd himself was wounded when the trooper returned the fire but made no charge against the officer.

Two first-degree wanton endangerment charges involved use of weapons. King Solomon Osborne was charged with shooting at Ronald Vance, and William E. Buffalo was accused of shooting a schoolchild in the head with a pellet gun.

Six persons were named in indictments alleging arson. Five of the indictments stemmed from severe fire damage to an unoccupied house owned by Grant D. Newsome. Accused of second degree arson were Grant Duke Newsome, Estallene, and Larry and Danny Newsome and Randy Tackett.

Maurice Ray Collins was accused of first degree arson after he allegedly had thrown a container of ignited gasoline at a dwelling, last June 8.

This Town...That World

GOOD AT LONG RANGE

Ever since I saw the white stuff falling Tuesday morning, I've been casting about for—but, as usual, not finding—"Dick" Frymire's prediction of the date of the first snow. Don't believe he missed it much, though his prediction was made a matter of two months ago. But I'll lay a wager he couldn't tell us what the weather will be tomorrow.

QUESTION

Understand that the Ten Commandments are engraved in the marble of the Supreme Court building in Washington. If this is true, what will the court do about separating church and state on its own premises?

DIRTY TRICKS DEPT.

At the request of Tom Loftis, Frankfort bureau chief for the Kentucky Post, a Kentucky Colonel's commission was recently issued from the governor's office to one Waldo Wecker. Loftis described Wecker as a security guard. "Although he may never become famous," wrote Loftis in stating why the honor was deserved, "Waldo brings security and goodwill to residents of the Seminary Square neighborhood in Covington."

Forest Fires Sweep 90,000-Acre Area

The first significant rainfall in a month began as a drizzle Friday, and continued through the weekend, at last putting a halt to a week of devastating forest fires which burned approximately 90,000 acres of Floyd county woodland.

"We're in pretty good shape now," said District Forester Arthur Leach as he reviewed the recent burning, the worst since 1963 in the Eastern Forestry District which includes Pike, Martin, Magoffin, Johnson and Lawrence counties as well as Floyd. "No new fires have been reported since Friday," he added.

Leach estimated that 150-175,000 acres had burned in the six-county area since around Wednesday, Nov. 6, when the district office here began to be deluged with reports of fires in a wide area of Floyd county and the district as a whole. "In terms of damage," Leach said, "this has been just about as bad as it was in 1963 except that last week's burning blew up a good deal faster." Fires burned over a 15-day period in '63, the forestry official pointed out, while the biggest

2 Communities' Housing Plans Eyed by Board

Public housing projects, including a 100-family facility proposed for Martin and a 68-family facility planned for Warco, were among the applications for federal funds reviewed by the board of the Big Sandy Area Development District Monday.

The Martin facility, to be built on a 21-acre site created by highway fill southwest of the city, awaits transfer of the site from the Transportation Department to the Department for Local Government. The plan, which appeared likely to lapse before being revived by Mayor Larry B. Hall earlier this year, calls for 24 one-bedroom, 40 two-bedroom, and 26 three-bedroom family units, with an additional 10 units set aside for the elderly.

The $2.1 million project intended for Warco, near Maytown, will include 36 two-bedroom, 18 three-bedroom, and 14 four-bedroom units.

About 20 projects seeking a total of $1.2 million in Area Development Fund monies have been received, it was reported. The fund contains only $515,000, however, and ADD staffers have urged that a good part of that be set aside for emergencies.

Among the applicants for the money: the Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin fiscal courts, seeking $200,000 toward the proposed Big Sandy regional airport; Our Lady of the Way Hospital, at Martin, $40,000 for an emergency connection with the Beaver-Elkhorn water system; Floyd fiscal court, $35,000 to build golf course greens at the Floyd County Park and $30,000 for a tractor-mower at the

Highland Terrace Dedication Set

Formal dedication of the Highland Terrace apartment complex at the mouth of May's Branch, here, will be held this Sunday at 2 p.m. Congressman Carl D. Perkins and other officials will participate in the ceremony which is open to the public.

The four-story structure which was developed and built at a cost of $2.8 million, provides 80 single units for elderly and handicapped housing.

"IF I NEVER SAW NOBODY, it would be all right with me," said Dennis Morgan, of Price, pictured here by the derelict van he calls home. He may have to forego the solitude he desires, however, if he is to survive the coming winter.

An Old Man, His Home and Pride

An old man has a right to his pride and the habits of a lifetime die hard. But one old man on Left Beaver Creek may have to sacrifice both if he is to make it through this winter.

Dennis Morgan has lived his 72 years at Price, until this year in his boyhood home. He mined a little, hunted a lot, never married and, since the death of his parents "a long time ago," has grown to like the solitary life.

An accident last spring challenged all that. The family home burned, and he was lucky to get out with his life.

Not that Morgan felt he was lucky. Brought by relatives to a Prestonsburg nursing home, he asserted he would rather be dead. After a couple of forlorn months there, he made his way back to Price.

A Jack's Creek man sold him a decrepit van for $75—"I got cheated bad," he says of the deal—which is now degrading further amid scattered refuse above the tippie on Route 122. For Dennis Morgan, it is home.

Bond Financing Of New School Completed Here

Closing of the $3.9 million bond sale to finance construction of Betsy Layne High School in a new location at Stanville was effected here last Friday, and groundbreaking for the venture will be done shortly after Thanksgiving, it was announced.

The bond issue, in which the Floyd Fiscal Court serves as fiscal agent for the Floyd County Board of Education, sold to Seasongood & Mayer, Cincinnati bond firm, at 8.85 per cent interest.

Joseph Sachs Reis, of the bond firm, commented on the comparatively low interest rate at which the Floyd school bonds sold, pointing out that bonds sold by the Logan county schools recently were at nearly 10 per cent, although Western Kentucky counties normally enjoy a bond advantage over counties in this part of the state.

The new school, designed to accommodate 750 pupils, will be built on an above-flood site of almost 87 acres

Petitioners Ask Action on Water

It was Friday in Martin, the end of another bad week. Distracted for months by the construction of the new KY 80, choked with smoke from the fires burning all around, frustrated by delays in repairing the city's broken water system, plagued by daily interruptions in the water supply, and weary of the bickering among city officials, many residents were wondering when it would all end and some were circulating yet another petition.

By Monday, more than 600 signatures had been gathered. The petition asks Martin city council either to require the city water commission to "upgrade water and sewer facilities" or to take over operation of the system itself. The petitioners say they intend to file the document in circuit court here, along with a writ of mandamus already on file, in an effort to force the water commission to provide better service.

Indications are, however, that getting to the bottom of the city's water and sewer woes will be no easy task. While Mayor Larry Hall accuses the water commissioners of incompetence, Commission Chairman Ron Reynolds pleads water theft, line ruptures and overworked pumps as the cause of the water outages.

But a major part of the problem, in the view of Big Sandy ADD Director Joe McCauley, is chronic feuding among the city officials themselves.

For Mayor Hall, the reason for the feuding is obvious: he is a Republican trying to survive among Democrats. But others say the mayor's abrasiveness is more of a problem than his politics. And McCauley points out that ADD staffers work well enough with Republicans in other counties.

On the delay in repairing the flood-damaged sewer system, which lies near the Martin connection to the new KY 80, the engineers in part blame the highway contractor. In a letter to Mayor Hall last week, John Wesley, Jr., of Howard K. Bell—the Lexington firm in charge of repairing the sewer system—noted that fill for the new highway has extended further than the highway plans indicate and now lies over both the existing and planned sewer lines. The changed site conditions mean that changes will have to be made in the engineering plans, he added.

The engineers also think they have discovered new breaks in the sewer line, possibly caused by the highway construction.

And a Martin water commission employee is said to have revealed yet another break—in an 80-foot section of the main line near the sewage treatment plant. The eight-inch cast iron pipe is on concrete piers and is said to have ruptured when the pump station downstream broke down, causing sewage to back up in the line and freeze.

"We were unaware of the break until now," the engineer reports.

The engineers are "inept," Mayor Hall has charged, and are deliberately stalling for time. At a meeting of the Big Sandy Area Development District board Monday, he called on the ADD staff to press Howard K. Bell to get on with the project, a proposal that drew support from Pike Judge-Executive and ADD Board Chairman Wayne T. Rutherford.

McCauley protested that the ADD had done all it could to advance the project and cites Martin city officials' failure to inform the engineers of the 80-foot sewer line rupture as an example of their unwillingness to cooperate on the project.

The ADD official has agreed to meet

Officials Here Still in Dark About Retrial

Although John Henry Newsome two weeks ago won from the Kentucky Supreme Court a reversal of his 15-year pen term and was granted a new trial of the charge lodged against him in the 1976 knife-slaying here of Gerald McBrayer, court officials here are in the dark as to the next move in the case.

They expected him to enlist the services of a legal representative, and after that a possible move to effect his release from prison under bond till a new trial is held, but no such action is known to have been taken.

The high court ordered a retrial of the case because Circuit Judge Hollie Conley failed to instruct the trial jury on the possibility of returning a second degree manslaughter or a reckless homicide verdict.

"We may have no alternative but to try him again," Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen said.

He added that a new trial could be averted by a guilty plea from the defendant.

Newsome has already served more than three years of his sentence and is eligible for parole, even if convicted again. But it was said here that he has refused to admit guilt in the slaying and that this refusal has precluded his release under parole.

Court Ruling Could Remove Commandments from Schools

The plaques containing the Ten Commandments that have been placed in many Floyd county schoolrooms may have to be hauled down.

The U. S. Supreme Court in an unsigned 5-4 decision Monday declared unconstitutional the 1978 Kentucky law providing for their posting in schoolrooms, with the cost of the plaques coming from private funds.

The number of classrooms in which the Ten commandments had been placed in this county was not available, Tuesday. Woman's clubs, church groups and other organizations had worked with the Kentucky Heritage Foundation toward supplying each school. Cost of each plaque was about $10.

The court decision does not mean that the plaques will be removed from schoolrooms immediately. Ray Brackett, assistant superintendent of Floyd schools, said Tuesday that a legal directive from the office of State Supt. Barber will be awaited before any action is taken.

"It's a shame" was the general reaction of those who had been most active in this county in placing the Ten Commandments in the schools. Some hope that the issue will be fought further and that the Commandments will be permitted to stand, not as religious tenets but as "a part of our cultural heritage."

"The Ten Commandments is undeniably a sacred text in the Jewish and Christian Faiths and no legislative recitation of a supposed secular purpose can blind us to that fact," the court said in deciding that the state law violated constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state.

The court also said using private money to buy the plaques "does not matter" because posting the plaques would take place "under the auspices of the Legislature" and was therefore unconstitutional.

In the U.S. Supreme court's ruling was a sharp dissent from Justice William Rehnquist, who chastised his colleagues for their "cavalier" decision and added that the Constitution "does not require that the public sector be insulated from all things which may have a religious significance or origin."

VISIBILITY WAS POOR and a breath of fresh air was next to impossible to find Thursday and Friday as smoke from a week of forest fires settled into the valleys and hollows as a result of what your local TV weather person might call an air inversion. This photo of motorists driving with lights on was taken at around noon, Friday.

BIBLICAL MOVIE SCHEDULED
 "A Thief in the Night," a new color film, will be shown at Middle Creek Baptist Church, Blue River, on November 11 at 7 p.m. "A Thief in the Night" is a motion picture about Bible prophecy. It was given the "Best Film of the Year" award by the National Evangelical Film Foundation of Valley Forge, Pennsylvania. The lead actress, Miss Patty Dunning, was given the "Outstanding Female Actress" award at the same time.

Travelers Warned To Exercise Special Care at Thanksgiving

Many Kentuckians may still go "over the river and through the woods to grandmother's house" on Thanksgiving, but things have changed.

Chances are they must travel on a four-lane bridge to cross the river and on a highway to pass through the woods, and they will not be alone.

The roads will be especially crowded during the Thanksgiving season and Department of Transportation officials warn travelers to be extra careful on the trip to grandmother's house this year.

A safe trip involves planning ahead, said Bennie Maffet, transportation safety coordinator. "Checking to make sure the vehicle is safe is an important part of any trip," he said.

The tires, brakes, exhaust system, windshield wipers, cooling system and lights should all be in good condition before starting a trip.

Once a driver is on his way, precautions should also be taken. "The driver and all passengers should wear seat belts at all times," Maffet said. "Families with children too small to wear regular seat belts should make sure they have an approved child restraint system and they use it correctly."

Statistics show that almost 70 percent of children's fatalities in car accidents could have been avoided if a child restraint device had been used or used properly.

Maffet advises motorists to obey all posted speed limits to make the trip safer for them as well as other families.

Drivers should stop occasionally for breaks or to change drivers. At times, motorists tend to travel when they are really too tired to drive. "This is especially true of the trip home from grandmother's because many people have a deadline to get back and they wait until the last minute to leave," Maffet said.

Motorists should be aware of changing road conditions that may affect them. Drivers should make accommodations such as reducing speed when approaching wet pavement, Maffet said.

During the 1979 Thanksgiving season, 1,827 accidents occurred in Kentucky. Eight of the 648 people injured were fatalities.

More than half of the reported accidents last year happened at night. Maffet cautions drivers to make sure headlights work and windshields are clear for the best visibility possible while driving at night.

If mechanical problems occur while out on the road, Maffet advises motorists to get the vehicle off the road as quickly as possible and use some type of warning device, flares or flashers, to warn other cars.

While trying to get help, all passengers should stand away from the car in case an accident occurs. "Cars parked on the interstate are allowed six hours before they may be towed away by the police. Seven days are allowed on other roadways," Maffet said.

Only 4 percent of all the accidents in Kentucky during the last Thanksgiving season were on the interstates. The majority were on U.S. highways, other state routes and local streets.

"On the interstate, drivers have a greater chance to recover from a mistake because of the design of the road, but the slightest mistake on other roads can cause an accident, Maffet said.

Spreader of goodwill though he may be, Waldo showed no appreciation whatsoever of the honor.

Waldo happens to be the sheep dog of David Wecker, Covington newspaperman.

The trick left officials in the governor's office almost literally foaming at the mouth, and it unleashed the ire of the commanding officer of the Order of Kentucky Colonels.

My friend, Richard Howard, of Winchester, is pretty well recovered from a recent heart attack. I find proof of his improved condition in the fact that he was up to forwarding me the yarn which follows:

This farmer was approached by "furrin" hunters, accompanied by their well-trained pointers, to ask permission to hunt quail on his property. A friendly soul, he readily agreed but with one condition: they must take his mule along. Old Sam, it appears, was a "pointer mule," and he loved to hunt but had of late had to forego his favorite sport for the more exacting business of hauling in corn from the fields and firewood for the winter.

The hunters thought they had encountered, face to face, that legendary crazy hillbilly, but, anxious for the hunt, consented to the annoying request and between snickers and snide remarks about the old farmer led the mule off with their dogs.

To their amazement, they did bag their limit in the shortest possible time—but it was Old Sam that beat the dogs to the covey, every time.

Now thoroughly ashamed of their comments about the farmer and his mule, they returned and immediately began negotiations for the purchase of the mule. They wound up trading their dogs for Old Sam and throwing in some "boot" in the form of cash.

As they were departing, the farmer stopped them. "Hey," he said, "here's somethin' I forgot to tell you about the mule. When you get down to the creek you'll have trouble gittin' him cross the bridge."

Thoughts of a crazy man popped into their heads again, but they inquired why this might be a problem.

"Because," the farmer replied, "that mule would rather fish than hunt, any day of the week."

Some years ago, I printed another version of this story. It told of the hunters returning to the farm, the next season, knowing they could get the mule for another hunt but finding Old Sam strangely missing.

"Where's Old Sam?" they inquired. "Up there on the point." "Can we get him for another hunt?" "Nope." "Why not?" "He's dead. Took to chasin' rabbits, and I flew mad and shot him."

Compete In Soil Judging Contest

Members of the Prestonsburg Chapter of the Future Farmers of America recently competed in the regional soil judging contest held at Montgomery County High School. Eliminations on the local level enabled those boys to participate on the regional level. The team competed against 24 other teams.

Members who participated are, from left, Dewey Hackworth, Patrick Hunter, Curtis Branham, and Tim Hubbard, who ranked first on the team and will receive a trophy at the awards banquet to be held this spring.

"I like it like this, just to myself," Morgan said last week. "Anywhere I'm alone, I can pray to the good Lord...tell him I'm happy with the pain...happy to know I have one friend anywhere in the world...I have Jesus."

A stroke suffered some years ago has left him subject to dizzy spells, however, and his left arm, paralyzed by an accidental gunshot wound, hangs uselessly by his side. And, inevitably, winter's first frosts are taking their toll even of his wiry independence.

"I'm freezing up," he confesses.

A cousin, Burbage Howell, stops by of the morning to set a fire in the small stove beside the van and to fix the old man's breakfast of oatmeal and coffee. Beyond that, he is alone.

A social worker with the Department of Human Resources said this week that arrangements have been made with Meals on Wheels to provide him a hot meal daily, and efforts are continuing to find him decent shelter.

Not many are willing to take in a sick recluse whom many regard as eccentric and some as dangerous. And there are even fewer with whom Morgan could feel at home.

He has so far resisted efforts by social workers to place him in a "mini-home"—a private family sheltering him with state support. But light snow shrouded the green van Tuesday. And even an old man's pride has its limits.

TO UNDERGO SURGERY

which was purchased by the Board of Education from the state.

Barco Construction Company has the contract on the single-story structure. Exterior of the school will be composed of pre-cast concrete panels, with insulated metal siding and a 24-gauge standing seam roof. Preparation of the site is a part of the contract and, besides landscaping, will provide a football-baseball field, complete with lighting, bleachers and backstop.

The 61,000 square feet of floor space will house classrooms, office-staff areas and separate areas for band, chemistry, physics, home economics, study hall, art, physical education, dining and kitchen facilities, library, agriculture and industrial arts.

When a survey of school building needs was made in 1975 by the state Department of Education, the Betsy Layne school was given top priority in this county, school officials say.

CHURCH MARKS ANNIVERSARY

Members of the Bonanza United Baptist church observed the 113th birthday of the church with services there from Saturday through Sunday. Ministers and members from other United Baptist churches throughout this area were there to share in this celebration with the large number of local members in attendance. The Rev. Lemuel Williams is the pastor there. Following church services on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Gale Music served a pre-Thanksgiving turkey dinner to several members of visiting churches. Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Branham, and Mrs. Docia B. Woods, of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Grace Conley, of the Abbott road, Mr. and Mrs. Music also had as recent Sunday dinner guests Mrs. Myrtle Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Grant, of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Grant's daughter, Mrs. Julia Henry, who was here for a visit from her home in Florida.

Letters to the Editor

A Plea To Parents

I've set back as long as I can with my mouth shut and listened and watched the things taking place in and around our schools.

I'm not referring to the teachers. I'm talking about the parents and children.

When it gets to the point at ball games and other activities that ball teams and cheerleaders are referred to as the "poor" teams or the "rich" teams, it makes me sick to my stomach. Mothers sitting on the sidelines and referring to children as belonging to the poor or rich team or the group of cheerleaders as being the poor group. My God, people, what's becoming of us!

No wonder children have the attitudes they do.

Parents, before its too late, teach these children not to measure a child by what his father does for a living or how much money he's got.

Children aren't born with these ideas and attitudes, they are taught them in the home by their parents' values and ideas.

Put the blame all along where it should be, not on the teachers but on the parents. I still say we have more delinquent parents than delinquent children.

Christianity, decency and fair play seem to be a thing of the past.

The idea today with children is destroy, abuse, get your way. Mother and Daddy will replace anything I destroy or if I get into trouble they'll get me out, they can buy me out of anything.

A good example: Last winter I was teaching a 10th grade class at the local high school. A boy was causing trouble in class. I corrected him and right away he asked me "If I knew who his father was. I informed him I wasn't interested in his father, his father wasn't in my class. I was told later that his mother would probably be down to see me, that they didn't want anyone talking to their baby that way. I said, and I still mean it, "I'm not hard to find; I'm listed in the telephone book."

My God! People, these are our leaders of tomorrow. Is this what it's all about?—who can spend the most money, drive the finest cars, wear the best clothes, take the most expensive vacations!

Before it's too late, stop and look around and take stock of the kind of values you are instilling in your children and other people's children by your attitudes.

My father was not a rich man, money-wise, but as far as the important things in life he was the richest man on earth. He taught me about God, friends and other people's feelings. Their property and rights were important, too.

Thank you, God, for giving me the parents you did.

Parents, please help the teachers. In a few short hours during the day they cannot undo what you are doing in the home.

RUTH PATTERSON Prestonsburg

Critically Speaking

With all due respect to Carson Akers, Dr. Hall, and our School Board members and their families, I read in genuine amazement, in last week's Floyd County Times (quote, unquote), "Some people just can't take it when they get beat."

Is this reference to school children or their parents? I now understand why this person's nickname was Runner-Up Pete. He never learned how to win or lose. Perhaps some day he can be just as gracious when he loses.

LARRY B. HALL Mayor, City of Martin

with Hall and Water Commission Chairman Reynolds to advise them on how to proceed with the project, but made it clear this week that his main advice will be that the city officials begin talking to each other.

$113,000 has already been set aside for the sewer system repair, but the engineers now advise that, with new plans needed and the discovery of the additional line damage, that sum will no longer be enough to do the job.

One proposal would have Martin, or at least Our Lady of the Way Hospital, connected directly to the Beaver-Elkhorn water system. Officials of that system are reportedly willing to supply water to the hospital but say they are unable to meet the needs of the entire town.

Meanwhile, the patience of some Martin residents is wearing thin. A nurse seen at the hospital last week, bent over a tub in a janitor's closet and repeatedly pleading, "Please stay on," is symbolic of what many in the town feel reduced to—a desperate hope that the water will stay on long enough to wash the soap out of their hair.

Some are also fearful of their health—not only at the hospital, where water is essential to the control of infection, but also in the community at large where, even when it is available, the water is often so discolored and dirty that some are afraid to use it.

A rumor circulating last week that a case of hepatitis had been reported in town was unfounded, according to Health Department Director Earl Compton. But some are asking, with its water and sewage systems in such disarray, how long the city can hope to be spared a serious public health problem.

A Plea For Water

We are desperately concerned about our water situation in Martin. Six-hundred and ten other people have signed a petition demonstrating that they also share our concern. The problems have become extreme in the past five months. Water service is constantly interrupted. It is often off for hours at a time. When on, it is frequently discolored and full of sediment. Fears of fire and contamination have heightened our concern. Citizens are paying for services not rendered.

We want to believe that this crisis is not simply a political maneuver. The response from any persons or agencies we have approached has not been sufficient to resolve it. This letter is an appeal to restore safe, clean, readily available water to the citizens of Martin.

GWENDOLYN C. HALL, ALMA KEY, LOU ANN HUTCHINSON, JANIS HALL, BETTY K. HALL.

Objects To Road Signs

I think its an outright disgrace for our State Department of Highways to make new roads and remove our road signs like they did at the mouth of Little Mud, Route 23 at Harold, Ky. has a sign up, "JCT 979" and 979 has a sign up at the forks of the road which reads, "Grethel and Dana."

Dana is on Prater Creek and 23 at Banner, Ky. has a sign for Dana.

Concerned citizens are asking the Highway Department to remove the sign at JCT 1428 Little Mud and replace it with one which would read, "Grethel, Ky. and Honaker, Ky."

MACK KIDD, JR Honaker, Ky.

Victim Of Crib Death

I wish to thank all those who offered me their sympathy and concern at the recent death of my child, Eric Todd Miller. For those of you who may be interested in details of Todd's death, I would like to share with you the following information:

On October 30th, I received a letter from the Department of Human Resources in Frankfort. Part of that letter states the following:

"Examination findings showed that Eric Todd was well cared for and well nourished. No infection was found that might be a hazard to other members of your family. The result of the examination indicated that Eric Todd died of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS), a disease commonly called "Crib Death." SIDS is not suffocation or choking; nor is it due to neglect. It is a disease. It is the sudden death of an infant which is unexpected by history. It is the most common, single cause of death in infants between four weeks and one year of age. Death usually occurs during a sleep period and there is no evidence that babies suffer or cry out in distress. To date, medical researchers are unable to determine what causes this disease but are learning more about it each year."

This letter was signed by Ida Lyons, RN, coordinator of the Sudden Infant Death syndrome.

QUESTION:

"I turn my thermostat down, but our gas bill still goes up. How come?"

ANSWER:

"Most of the increase comes right from the well—the higher prices Columbia has to pay."

Most of Columbia's natural gas supplies do not begin as ours, but must be purchased. And since passage of the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act, which allows gradual lifting of wellhead price controls to encourage gas exploration, the price Columbia pays for gas has been steadily increasing.

Added to that are the rising costs of maintaining and improving pipelines, storage facilities and services.

So rates have been going up. However, at Columbia we're doing all we can to hold down costs. We're investing in more efficient equipment and streamlining operations. Bi-monthly estimated bills are one savings you're probably familiar with.

In short, we're cutting where we can to keep your gas bill increases to a minimum. And though your gas bill may be higher than you or we would like to see it, natural gas still costs you less than other energy forms.

For ideas on ways to make natural gas work even more efficiently for you, ask for our free pamphlet, "The Everyday Energy Saver's Guide".

COLUMBIA GAS Still your best energy value. And we want to keep it that way.

12 Counties Win Tax Case

Commissioner of Revenue Robert Alphin has announced that the Department of Revenue will not at this time appeal the two Kentucky Court of Appeals orders in the Alphin v. Butler case. Therefore, the Department of Revenue will not appeal the mailing of tax bills but will pursue its case on its merits.

The orders, issued Nov. 3, require the Department of Revenue to certify the county clerk's recapitulation of the tax roll so tax bills may be prepared and mailed.

Alphin said he has been advised by his legal division that orders of this type are not appealable at this time.

"The Kentucky Department of Revenue will therefore comply with these orders while continuing to pursue the case on its merits," the commissioner said. "It has been, and continues to be, the department's position that all counties must be assessed at fair cash value."

Pursuant to the Court of Appeals' orders, Alphin said the Department of Revenue will certify these counties' assessments, although they have been determined to be at less than fair cash value Barren, Bath, Bell, Boyd, Grant, Jefferson, Logan, Morgan, Nicholas, Pendleton, Shelby and Simpson.

The commissioner pointed out that all transportation property owned by railroads in these counties will have to be factored downward by the prevailing local sales-assessment ratio. This must be done to comply with the federal Railroad Reorganization and Revitalization Act, Public Law 94-210, which provides that such property must be assessed at the same rate as other local commercial property.

Alphin also said, in regard to another property tax case, that the Department of Revenue will ask the Kentucky Supreme court to review the Court of Appeals' decision in Parrent v. Fannin, rendered Oct. 31, wherein the court held that 1979 assessments should be used for 1980 property tax purposes.

"We feel that this decision represents a step backward from the 1965 Kentucky Supreme Court decision Russman v. Luckett, which requires that each county's assessment be at fair cash value," Alphin said.

Only One Feared Moth Found

State foresters are puzzled over the results of their summer gypsy moth survey. Only one of the voracious insects has been found in Kentucky.

That is great news for owners of forestland in the commonwealth because the insects' favorite food are oak and hickory trees, said Richard Dorset, forest pest control specialist for the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

The news, however, is puzzling because gypsy moths have been found in every state surrounding Kentucky. Illinois, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and North Carolina have reported small isolated infestations of the moths, Dorset said. One infestation was within 50 miles of Kentucky, he reported.

The moths travel by "hitchhiking" rides on trucks, buses and travel trailers, he said. Kentucky has 7.5 million acres of very susceptible oak and hickory forests and an extensive park system which could lure the insects here, he said.

More than 3,000 traps were set across the state this summer in an attempt to detect visiting moths before they infest the commonwealth, Dorset reported. Only one gypsy moth has been found here, he said. The male moth was trapped in 1973 near a campground in Meade county.

The traps have been set since 1972, and every year the number of traps set has been increased. The small, brown insects in the caterpillar stage are capable of defoliating entire forests, Dorset said.

Annual Choral Clinic Slated at Paintsville

The ninth annual choral clinic, sponsored by Eastern Highland Music Educators Association, will be held in Paintsville November 21 through November 23. Students from Floyd, Johnson, Lawrence, and Martin county schools will participate in the clinic. Doug Smith, president of the EHMEA, said that the annual concert will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Paintsville High School gymnasium.

Guest clinician for the junior high school chorus will be Rebecca Haywood, choral music instructor at Southern Elementary School in Falmouth. A native of Prestonsburg, Miss Haywood is well known as a soloist both here and in northern Kentucky.

Accompanist for the junior high school chorus will be Judy Young, private piano teacher in Paintsville.

John Stegner, director of choral music at Montgomery High School, Mt. Sterling, will be guest clinician of the senior high school chorus. Well known in music circles throughout the state, Mr. Stegner is serving his second year as chairman of the All-State Chorus, sponsored by the Kentucky Music Educators Association. Accompanist for the senior high school chorus will be Susan Hubbard, private piano teacher in Paintsville.

Two Tons Down and Still Churning

Since he left school at 16, Jack Hicks has had responsibility for the Hereford herd and the two Guerneys kept for milking on the Middle Creek farm of his parents, Joe and Ocie Hicks.

The Herefords have won for him repeated honors at the county fair. But it is another skill that has earned him the wider reputation. Every week, for more than 40 years, Jack has made butter. Not a whole lot—maybe two pounds a week on average—but that adds up to better than two tons over the years.

And every pound has been churned by hand—on the same churn, in fact, with which he began his butter-making career as a lad of 10.

Not that efforts haven't been made to coax him into the technological age. A Middle Creek neighbor, Richard Shepherd, gave him an electric churn about a year ago, but it is gathering dust. "I just enjoy churning with my old stick," Jack explains.

Some have advised he would do well to go into business, too—there still being quite a few nostalgic folk around who pine for a pad of country butter—but Jack figures enough is enough.

"I still love to churn," he will tell you. "But I wouldn't want to sit and churn all day."

Consumer Protection Number Changed

The toll-free Consumer Protection Hotline number has been changed, according to Attorney General Steven Beshear. The new phone number is 1-800-432-9257.

The hotline is being housed at the University of Kentucky where students and faculty are participating in a venture to identify consumer problems and aid in their resolutions. The Consumer Protection Division has recently begun to utilize existing networks for the implementation of educational programs.

As a result of the change, the division is expected to increase the level of service it provides the taxpayers of Kentucky without increasing its budget.

This program utilizes students at the University of Kentucky as the operators of the consumer hotline. The hotline project will allow the students to learn about consumer problems and how to most effectively resolve them, Beshear said. After training by the division's staff, and with supervision of the division, students will be able to aid consumers who call the hotline seeking assistance.

Consumers who experience problems in the marketplace are encouraged to call the hotline and request a complaint form. The mediation process which resolves disputes between businesses and consumers will be handled in the same manner as before—the attorney general's consumer protection division will contact the business and work with both parties to facilitate resolution.

WHAT BRINGS OUT THE CHEESE IN MACARONI AND CHEESE?

What can evaporated milk do for macaroni and cheese? Just what it does for all foods—brings out the special flavor you want to taste most. Try this recipe and see.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1 pkg. (7 or 8 Oz.) elbow macaroni | 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese |
| 1 teaspoon salt | 1 can (13 fl. oz.) evaporated milk (1-2/3 cups) |
| 1/4 teaspoon pepper | 1 tomato—cut in wedges |
| 1/4 teaspoon oregano, crumbled | 1 tablespoon butter, melted |
| 4 thin slices onion | 2 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs |
| 1/2 pound sharp cheddar cheese, shredded (2 cups) | 1/8 teaspoon sweet basil, crumbled |

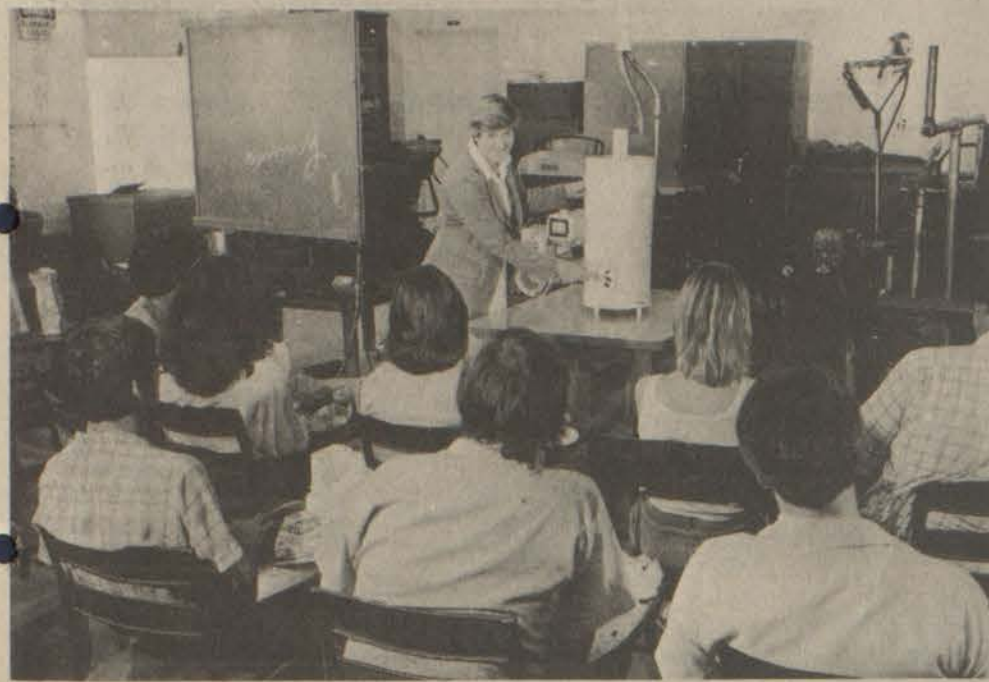

Drop macaroni gradually into 3 quarts briskly boiling water to which 1 tablespoon salt has been added. Cook until macaroni is tender, about 7 minutes. Drain. Place half the macaroni in a well buttered 1-1/2 quart baking dish or casserole. Mix salt, pepper, and oregano. Sprinkle half over macaroni in dish. Break two of the onion slices into rings over macaroni. Layer half the cheddar cheese over, then sprinkle with half the Parmesan. Pour about half the evaporated milk over. Repeat. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350°F) for 30 minutes. Top with tomato wedges. Mix butter, crumbs and sweet basil, then sprinkle over top. Continue baking 10 minutes longer. Four to six servings.

With Energy Costs on the Rise . . . Saving Money is Object of "PACE Break" Program

TAKING A "PACE BREAK"—An Extension home economics specialist conducts a "PACE Break" for a group in an industrial plant. At the moment she is discussing economical use of a water heater, using a miniature heater to demonstrate a point. PACE Breaks are designed to help people save money by informing them on ways to conserve energy.

"You deserve a break today," says a current TV commercial—and Kentuckians are getting a "break" in learning what to do about natural energy resources.

A lot of Kentuckians are being exposed to a "PACE Break"—something they certainly "deserve today"—telling them how they can save energy and thus save money on their utility bills.

A "PACE Break" is one of a series of mini-sessions to "Plan And Conserve Energy"—from which the term "PACE" is derived, according to Sandra Holland, Extension energy conservation specialist with UK's College of Agriculture.

"PACE Breaks" were launched recently by the Cooperative Extension Service of the college as part of the state's energy conservation program—with the overall goal of conserving energy—but with an added goal for the average householder to save money.

The PACE Break mini-sessions were developed to be presented in factories and other industrial plants, in schools, business houses, before civic and professional groups, 4-H and other youth groups, Homemakers Clubs—anywhere there's a group of people," says Holland.

"We're out to reach new audiences—of any size—with information on how to conserve energy and to help people save money in cutting energy uses," the energy conservation specialist added. "The PACE Break is designed to demonstrate simple methods that can be used by the individual to conserve energy—without having to spend a lot of money. We're providing the very latest information on energy conservation materials, telling how they can be used—all aimed at encouraging people to practice energy conservation.

"Of course, the big thing for the individuals is that we're showing them—giving them information—on how to save money and to spend less money for energy," she pointed out.

The PACE Break idea has been piloted in three Kentucky counties—Allen, Logan and Barren counties. Holland and Extension home economics agents in those counties teamed up to present the sessions primarily in industrial plants located in the three counties. Arrangements were made with plant officials to present the "breaks" during lunch hours and rest periods. "We were more than pleased with the success of those 'pilot' sessions," Holland said, adding, "People are wanting to know how they can save their energy dollars."

The format of the PACE Breaks is for six mini-sessions, each lasting only 15 minutes. Or, if preferred, the sessions can be combined into one session of about an hour and a half duration.

"We present information on such things as saving money on energy bills, keeping out winter winds, stopping hot water heat losses, comparing home heating systems and how to make them more efficient, affordable solar hot water heating systems—and using home energy audits," Holland said.

The "home energy audit" is something designed by energy conservation specialists in the Department of Agricultural Engineering of the UK College of Agriculture. It's in the form of a questionnaire that gets information about a home—its size, number of rooms, how the home is heated, how many windows and doors, if there are storm windows and doors—a lot of things like that. That information is compiled so that it can be run through a computer. The computer comes up with recommendations that tell the home owner what can be done to save more energy—and money. The audit was dubbed the CHEAP program—the designation stemming from the program's full name of "Computerized Home Energy Analysis Program."

The PACE Breaks bring out a lot of ways to save energy—through caulking, weatherstripping, insulating walls and ceilings, insulating water heaters, stopping air leaks, and the like. Holland explains.

She said since a large portion of the state's industrial plants are located in Louisville and Jefferson County, plans are to concentrate the offering of PACE Breaks in that area at the present. For that reason Michele Milne has been employed as an Extension energy conservation specialist to conduct PACE Breaks in plants in the Jefferson County area to get things underway.

Milne is stationed in Louisville, her office being in the downtown Extension office, one of two Extension offices in Jefferson County. She is making contacts with industrial plant officials and has already begun setting up PACE Breaks in and around Louisville.

"Plant officials have been wonderfully receptive to the idea," Milne said. "They realize the importance of energy conservation to their employees—and how much money their employees can save if energy conservation is practiced in the home."

"And when you show people how it can effect their pocketbooks—they're interested. After all, who doesn't want to save money?" Milne asked.

Special informational material has been developed to help Extension people other than energy conservation specialists to present the mini-sessions. The materials are placed in the hands of county Extension agents and the specialists brief them on how to plan and conduct PACE Breaks.

Right now Louisville is the prime target area, but the entire state has been declared "wide open territory to help people save those energy dollars," Holland and Milne declare. "So if you hear of a PACE Break in your area—make an effort to attend. After all—you deserve a 'break' in learning how to save money."

KENTUCKY AFIELD

By JOHN WILSON

Since Kentucky's small game hunting seasons open Nov. 20, let's review some of the commonwealth's hunting regulations.

First, you'll need a license—either a hunting license or a combination hunting and fishing license. The only exceptions are (1) landowners, their spouses and dependent children hunting on lands they own, or tenants and their dependent children hunting on lands where they reside; (2) Kentucky residents 65 years of age or older, providing they are carrying a card (free from any county court clerk) showing age and place of residence and (3) servicemen on furlough or more than three days, providing they hunt only in the county of legal residence before joining the service and carry identification proof of furlough status.

Kentucky residents under 16 years old must obtain a junior hunting license, which is issued only with written permission of the child's parent or guardian. Out-of-state children must purchase the appropriate adult license.

Two non-resident licenses are available—a three-day small game license ($12.50) and an annual license ($35). (Non-resident deer or turkey hunters must purchase the annual license and a deer or turkey permit.)

Shotguns, rifles or handguns may be used to hunt small game. The only size restriction is that squirrel hunting rifles must be less than .240 caliber and that shotguns used to hunt everything except deer must be plugged to hold no more than three shells (two in the magazine and one in the chamber).

It is illegal to have buckshot or slugs in your possession while small game hunting.

Small game may be taken by bow and arrow (longbow or compound bow) but not by crossbows. The only place crossbows may be used for small game hunting is on the Pioneer Weapons Wildlife Area in Bath and Menifee counties.

The shooting hours for small game (except raccoons and opossums) is from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset.

The following bag and possession limits apply this year. Remember that the possession limit is the maximum number of each species which may be possessed after two or more days of hunting. No more than the daily limit may be possessed by a hunter in the field.

Squirrels, six daily and 12 in possession; rabbits, four and eight; quail, eight and 16 and grouse, four and eight. There is no possession limit on raccoon, but there is a daily limit of one raccoon per person or three maximum for a party of three or more hunters.

Finally, remember that small game seasons will be closed during the Dec. 6-8 gun deer hunt. Squirrel season will run through Dec. 31.

New Doors Installed at PGS

After four decades of use, the front doors at Prestonsburg Grade School were replaced last week to comply with fire code requirements. Les Wallen, Charles Crum and Ray Turner, Board of Education employees, are shown above installing the new doors.

Replacement of the doors was made on the recommendation of Chief Tom Blackburn, Prestonsburg Fire Department, following a regular fire drill inspection. The fire alarm system at the school was found to be inoperative at that time, but Chief Blackburn said that necessary repairs were made promptly, and the system is in working order now.

Principal Thomas Tackett commended both the fire department and the Board of Education for their concern in getting these improvements made without delay.

At the high school here, re-wiring of the home ec room was being done last week after an inspection by the fire department had found defective wiring which threatened closing of the room to classes. Work is also under way on exit doors at the high school.

Women Urged To Share Info, Skills

Eli Whitney did not invent the cotton gin. Catherine Littlefield Greene did.

More than 375 Kentucky women revised their mental history books Tuesday night after hearing about Greene and other early American women. The speaker was Sharon Lord, nationally-known author and private consultant on women's issues. She was a featured speaker during a communications skills conference sponsored by the Kentucky Commission on Women at Lexington's Transylvania College.

Lord said "Kitty" Greene invented the cotton gin but, because married women in those days were denied legal identity and the right to sign contracts, she could not obtain a patent in her own name. She asked Whitney to get the patent. The rest is history—inaccurate history, according to Lord.

Many more accounts of women's contributions to the development of America have only recently come to light through private papers and journals, she said. However, she added, those accounts have not yet made it into history books.

"Because women have no understanding of who we have been, we don't know who we can be," she said.

Lord's theme emphasized effective use of women's personal power. Carolyn Bratt, a member of the University of Kentucky law faculty and the executive board of the commission on women, focused her speech on women's "networking," the sharing of information and skills to help support each other.

"Women have had informal but effective means of helping each other and providing emotional support to each other for centuries," said Bratt. "The challenge is to bring our experience in networking into our new roles, that new situations in which we find ourselves."

Molly Cone of the women's commission told conference participants more than 250 women who wanted to attend had to be turned away because of space limitations.

"The response to this conference tells us Kentucky women are eager to know about networking," she said.

Participants attended several workshops on aspects of networking. Subjects included goal-setting, competition and conflict in the work situation, and mentors and role models.

A wine and cheese reception was provided by the Bank of Lexington, which co-sponsored the conference. Other co-sponsors included Transylvania University, Ashland Oil Inc., and the University of Kentucky office of community education.

The event was endorsed by almost 40 women's organizations in the Bluegrass area.

★ CONSUMER ALERT ★

Consumers throughout Kentucky purchase new automobiles each day with the hope that these vehicles will operate correctly.

However, new automobiles do not always function adequately and require repairs. These are commonly referred to as warranty repairs, which are generally made by the dealership from which the automobile is purchased. In turn, the dealership is reimbursed for the repairs by the manufacturer, assuming the problem concerns a factory defect.

Attorney General Steve Beshear has several recommendations for consumers who experience problems with their new car warranties:

If you should have problems with your new automobile, it is important that you, the consumer, exercise the following steps to receive prompt attention to your problem.

Step 1: Return the defective automobile to the dealership which sold you the automobile and request their services. This will not be an unusual occurrence for the dealership since any assembly-line product will contain small defects.

In most instances the problem is fixed under warranty (generally, 12,000 miles or 12 months, whichever comes first). If such is not the case, ask to speak to the dealership's service manager regarding the facts behind your continued problem. He or she may be able to assist in the proper handling of your trouble or answer any questions still on your mind.

If you still feel dissatisfied with the handling of your matter advance to Step 2.

Step 2: Locate the appropriate regional office for the manufacturer of your new car. This information can be found in your owner's manual, at the local dealership or by contacting the attorney general's office, consumer protection division at (502) 564-2200.

After obtaining the address and phone number of the regional office, write the regional zone office detailing the information regarding your complaint. The owner relations manager will then proceed to investigate the matter.

Generally, a district zone representative is sent to the dealership in question to meet with the consumer and review the facts in the matter. In most instances this will resolve the issue to the satisfaction of the consumer.

However, as stated before, if you still feel dissatisfied with the outcome, a third step can be taken.

Step 3: As with any other consumer problem, consumers should contact L. V. Turner at the attorney general's office, consumer protection division, 209 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky., 40601. Consumers also may call our toll-free hotline number: 1-800-432-9257 to request a complaint form.

After receiving the written complaint, we will contact the dealership and manufacturer in an effort to reach an acceptable solution to the problem. Through this mediation process, our office has resolved approximately 75 percent of the complaints we have received. If, however, our mediation service is not successful in resolving the matter, consumers may still pursue the matter through private legal channels.

Homestead Exemption
Raised to $12,900

The homestead exemption allowed for qualifying Kentuckians over the age of 65 has been increased to $12,900 for 1981 and 1982.

According to the state Revenue Department, the adjustment was made to account for the changes in the consumer price index over the past two years. The new exemption rate reflects a 98.5 percent increase since the implementation of the Homestead Exemption Act in 1972.

The homestead exemption was enacted to provide tax relief to qualifying persons over 65. It exempts a portion of the value of their residence from property tax levies.

State law requires the exemption to be adjusted every two years by the Department of Revenue to reflect changes in general purchasing power which exceed 1 percent. The original exemption allowed by law was $6,500. By 1980 it has grown to an allowable exemption of $10,200 of the total value of the property.

Persons over 65 who qualify under KRS 132.810 for this exemption, and who have not already applied for such treatment, should contact their county property valuation administrator for assistance in filing the proper application in time for the Jan. 1, 1981, tax year. Such applications must be filed no later than March 1 of the year.

Honored on 50th Anniversary

Lawrence and Artie Amburgey, of Bypro, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary October 4, at a surprise party held in their honor at the Wheelwright High School cafeteria.

On hand to help them celebrate were their 10 children, 11 of their grandchildren, their first great-grandchild, and many relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Amburgey received many lovely gifts and a good time was enjoyed by all.

ALLEN FIRST BAPTIST WOMEN MEET, NOV. 10

The women of the First Baptist Church of Allen met Monday evening, November 10, at the home of the Baptist Women President, Mrs. Pearl Watts. Mrs. Watts opened the meeting with prayer and then expressed her appreciation for and welcome to all her guests, especially the speaker of the evening, Mrs. Glenda Hunt Penix, of the First Baptist church, Paintsville, her two children, Krista and Bryan, and the ladies of the First Baptist Church of Maytown, Mmes. Inez Moore, Wilma Wallen and daughter, Alice Baldrige, Evelyn Patton and Mary Webb.

The study of the evening was conducted by Mrs. Penix who gave a very interesting, informative and spiritually challenging presentation concerning Southern Baptist involvement in "Missions for Tomorrow." Everyone present received a blessing from Glenda's program and the women from Allen were especially thankful for her as had been a member of the Allen Baptist Church from childhood until she married and moved to Paintsville.

Mrs. Ruby Imes and Mrs. Susan Barnett conducted the prayer for the missionaries and announced that the week of prayer for foreign missions will be observed the first week in December highlighted by a churchwide prayer meeting-supper Wednesday, December 3, at which time each organization of the WMU and Brotherhood will bring together offerings for foreign missions.

Everyone present joined in singing "Happy Birthday" to Mrs. Penix' daughter, Krista, who was celebrating her sixth birthday and all enjoyed a time of fellowship as Mrs. Watts served her guests from Paintsville and maytown along with members: Opal Martin, Sylvia Hall, Alta Malone, Bonita Porter, Tamyra Prater, Bonita King, Bernice Porter, Flora Hunt, Ruby Imes, Becky Watts, Mary Jo Waugh, Rena Smith, Irene Campbell, Rosemary Frasure and Sheba Prater.

HOMEMAKERS MEET

The Prestonsburg Day Homemakers held their November meeting last Tuesday afternoon, at the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church, with the president, Mrs. Phyllis Herrick, presiding. The devotionals were given by Mrs. Eleanor Horn, who based her topic, "A Time of Thanksgiving," on Psalm 107, and ended her discussion with the poem, "Let Me Live for Today." Mrs. Becky Short introduced Kentucky State Troopers, Dennie Williamson and A. C. Cantrell, who talked with the group on "Operation Identification," and distributed information on how to use engravers for the purpose of placing Social Security numbers on household, and other items, in an effort to prevent thefts. Mrs. Frances Pitts, home economist, announced that dues are payable at the December meeting. The president, Mrs. Herrick, discussed with the group the Christmas bazaar, to be held at the Mountain Manor Nursing Home, Friday, Nov. 21, and she and Mrs. Dorothy Stover displayed several gifts donated by members of the club.

Following this display, Mrs. Pitts showed the film, "Christmas at Williamsburg." Mrs. Pitts announced that a workshop for the making of wreaths from fresh greenery would be held soon, and that the details for this would be in the Homemakers' next newsletter. A "get-well" card, to be sent to Mrs. Margaret Alley, was signed by those present.

The hostesses, Mrs. Minnie Grace Sutherland, Miss Alice Harris and Mrs. Fannie Rannels were assisted by Mrs. May K. Roberts in serving pumpkin cake, apple cider and coffee to members and guests, Mesdames Phyllis Herrick, Eleanor Horn, Becky Short, Mary Sue Moore, Frances Pitts, Mabel Donahoe, Katherine Stephens, Kay Bates, Dorothy Stover, Docia Woods, Dorothy Sturgill, Rebecca Vaughn, Gladys Blackburn, Mary Jane Brown, Dorothy Burke, Joyce Everly, Betsy Rennick, Beatrice Collins, Dorothy Osborne, Nancy Webb, Virginia Goble, Ethel Chaffin, and Ruth Moore. The next meeting will be the Christmas party, at the same location, Tuesday, Dec. 9, at 12:30 p.m.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Mrs. Audrey Holbrook Belcher wishes to thank everyone for their kind expressions of sympathy, the Rev. Frederick, Brother Greene, Holbert Holbrook and singers, and friends and neighbors. We would also thank the pallbearers, Mark Stephens, Tony Stephens, Marlowe Tackett, Dennis Hicks, Randy Hall, Mickey Bentley, and Keith Caudill.

Doors Make Fireplace More Energy Efficient

A warm glow from a fireplace is cozy and romantic, but a fireplace is not an energy efficient way of heating your home.

To get the most energy efficiency from your fireplace, use it in early fall or late spring when you aren't using the furnace to heat your home.

About 10 percent of the energy from the wood-burning enters the room, the remaining 90 percent is lost through the chimney. An air-tight wood-burning or coal-burning stove is a more energy-efficient alternative you may want to consider.

If you insist, however, on using your fireplace on cold, winter evenings, cut down on fireplace costs by using glass doors.

Leave the glass doors open when you are in the room enjoying the fireplace. When you leave the room, close the doors so that warm air from the furnace is not drawn up the chimney.

Also, when using the furnace and fireplace together make sure to turn down the thermostat. The room that has the fireplace will be very warm, but the other rooms will cool down kicking on the thermostat.

The type of wood you use also affects the energy efficiency of your fireplace and hard woods and dry woods are best. You will get more Btu use from these types. Avoid using wet or green wood.

Glass fireplace doors are available almost anywhere in a wide range of costs depending on construction and size.

Food $'s May Not Buy Enough Nutrition

Americans spend an average of $1,200 per person for food each year, but they may not be buying their money's worth in nutrition.

Americans have changed both where and how they spend their food dollars during the last 15 years. They are eating out more, and spending a greater share of the food budget at the restaurant than they did in 1965.

Of weekly food expenditures, averaging $23 per person, $17 or 73 percent goes for groceries, and $6 or 27 percent for meals and snacks away from home. In 1965, Americans spent an average 17 percent of their food budgets for restaurant meals.

The groceries they bring home have changed as well. A recent USDA survey shows Americans are buying less milk, dairy products, breads and cereals, eggs, fats and oils, sugar and candy, and vegetables—especially potatoes. They are buying more beef, poultry, fish, nuts, fruit, soft drinks, desserts and alcohol, especially beer and wine.

The supermarket food dollar now consists of 38 cents for meat, poultry, fish and eggs; 20 cents for fruits and vegetables; 12 cents for dairy products; 12 cents for breads and cereals; seven cents for sugar, candy, soft drinks and desserts; four cents for beer and wine; and the remaining seven cents for fats, oils and other foods.

Not all the changes in eating and buying habits have brought nutritional benefits. Studies continue to show people in this country are not as well nourished as they might be. Americans still consume too many calories, and too much fat, cholesterol, salt and alcohol.

Sugar and alcohol consumption has increased dramatically since 1965. Americans are drinking 38 percent more alcoholic beverages, mostly beer and wine. And although they buy less sugar and candy, they actually consume more sugar—largely in soft drinks, punches and desserts.

Use of soft drinks and desserts has jumped a whopping 155 percent in 15 years. Per capita consumption of soft drinks is now 33.8 gallons per year, and that amount contains 34.4 pounds of sugar. That is the equivalent of each American drinking a 12-ounce can of soda every day, and consuming more than three tablespoons of sugar in that 12-ounce can.

As Americans buy more beer, wine, soft drinks and desserts, they may short-change themselves on nutrition. Alcohol and soft drinks provide calories, but few nutrients. Buying more of these takes away from money available for nutritious foods.

Eleven cents of every grocery dollar buys beer, wine, soft drinks or desserts. Money spent at the supermarket for beer and wine—four cents of every dollar—does not reflect how much people spend for alcohol. Most money for alcohol is spent at the liquor store and for drinks at bars and restaurants.

Does eating more meals out encourage people to spend available food money for high-calorie, low-nutrient food and drinks? Not necessarily.

If people choose well, they can get nutritious meals when they eat out. Even the fast food places are becoming more nutrition-conscious, and are offering more vegetables and salad bars.

Turkey Treats

Cranberry Relish

- 1 pound fresh cranberries
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 cups water
- 2 packages unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup apple sauce
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 2 to 4 T. prepared horseradish
- 1/3 cup fresh lime juice
- Lime slices for garnish

Bring the cranberries, sugar and 1 cup of the water to boil in a saucepan, and simmer for 5 minutes. Meanwhile, soften the gelatin in the remaining 1/2 cup water and stir into the hot cranberry sauce to dissolve. Cool. Fold in the remaining ingredients except the lime slices. Pour into a 5 cup mold and chill. Unmold onto a lettuce-lined plate and serve garnished with lime slices. Serves eight to ten.

Cranberry Popcorn Balls

- 2 cups sugar
- 1 10-ounce package (1 cup) frozen cranberry-orange relish
- 1/2 cup cranberry juice
- 1/2 cup light corn syrup
- 1 t. vinegar
- 1/2 t. salt
- 5 quarts unsalted popped corn

Combine all ingredients except popcorn in a heavy saucepan and bring to a boil. Lower the heat and cook to 250° on a candy thermometer. The mixture will bubble up in the pan, so watch to keep it from boiling over. Pour slowly onto hot popcorn and mix until well coated. Let stand 5 minutes or until mixture can be easily formed into balls. Butter hands and form into 3-inch balls. Makes 18 balls.

Select an oval basket or baking dish. Fasten a long wooden or metal skewer at one end in an upright position. Arrange the popcorn balls in the dish. Secure 3 or 4 balls on the skewer to form the neck and head. Decorate the top ball with cranberries for eyes, raisins on string or wire for wattles and candy corn for beak. Form a tail at the other end of the container with pineapple leaves.

NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS OF DAVID WATER DISTRICT DAVID, KY.

The Utility Regulatory Commission has scheduled a hearing on the 4th day of December, 1980, at 10:30 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, in its offices at Frankfort, Kentucky, for the purpose of receiving testimony and comments with regard to the establishment of appropriate tariff provisions by water utilities whereby increases in the cost of purchased water would be passed on to customers without notice and hearing upon the filing of an application with the Commission and approval of revised rates by the Commission. This procedure would avoid delays which could affect the financial condition of the utility and its services. The Utility Regulatory Commission will examine each filing to determine whether all or part of an increase in the cost of purchased water could be absorbed by the utility.

The David Water District intends to be represented at the hearing and urge adoption of such a procedure.

It's Time To Think Turkey

Early settlers didn't know too much about the technology of nutrition, but their experience at home in Europe taught them that turkey, both domestic and wild, was a tasty staple food.

Miles Standish couldn't have cared less that myosin is the chief protein of meat and that it breaks down into a whole series of amino acids used by the body as cell-building blocks as part of overall good nutrition. He and other settlers found that turkeys were plentiful and they soon became a major source of food.

The medical profession has become increasingly concerned about the tendency of overweight people to develop coronary disease.

Turkey is a natural for maintaining a high-protein, low-calorie meal sequence. The breast meat of roasted turkey ranks higher in protein than any of the other cooked meats.

More important, turkey meat contains significantly less fat than most popular cuts of red meat.

Turkey yields significantly higher amounts of the important B vitamins, niacin and riboflavin, than most other cooked meats. It also serves as an important source of calcium, iron, vitamin A and ascorbic acid, as well as a generous portion of myosin, meat's chief protein.

Nutrition tests conducted at Cornell University show that a turkey sandwich, made with a two-ounce portion of turkey, two slices of enriched white bread, one small leaf of lettuce and two teaspoons of mayonnaise and served with an eight-ounce glass of milk, furnishes the following percentages of the daily recommended food allowances for a 25-year-old male adult:

Protein	45%	Thiamine	20%
Calories	16%	Riboflavin	49%
Calcium	43%	Niacin	27%
Iron	33%

The percentages recommended per day would be slightly higher for children and slightly lower for older persons.

How Much to Buy

The kind of turkey you choose for your holiday feast—whole or parts, stuffed or unstuffed, fresh or frozen—depends largely on personal preference and the size of your family.

These days, all turkey is tender because tenderness depends on the age of the bird and most turkeys are marketed young—anywhere from three to eight months.

The only question when you shop is how much turkey to buy to have enough on hand for a fine dinner but not so much that you're faced with days and days of leftovers. Here's help:

Ready-to-cook weight (pounds)	Number of servings
Unstuffed turkey
6 to 8	6 to 8
8 to 12	8 to 12
12 to 14	12 to 16
14 to 16	16 to 20
16 to 20	20 to 28
20 to 24	28 to 32
Frozen stuffed turkey
5 to 8	3 to 5
8 to 12	5 to 8
12 to 16	8 to 11

Larger turkeys have more meat in proportion to bone. So, if you buy unstuffed turkeys 12 pounds or less, allow about one pound per serving (ready-to-cook weight).

For medium or heavy birds over 12 pounds, allow 3/4 pound per serving. If you buy frozen stuffed turkeys, allow about 1 1/2 pounds per serving.

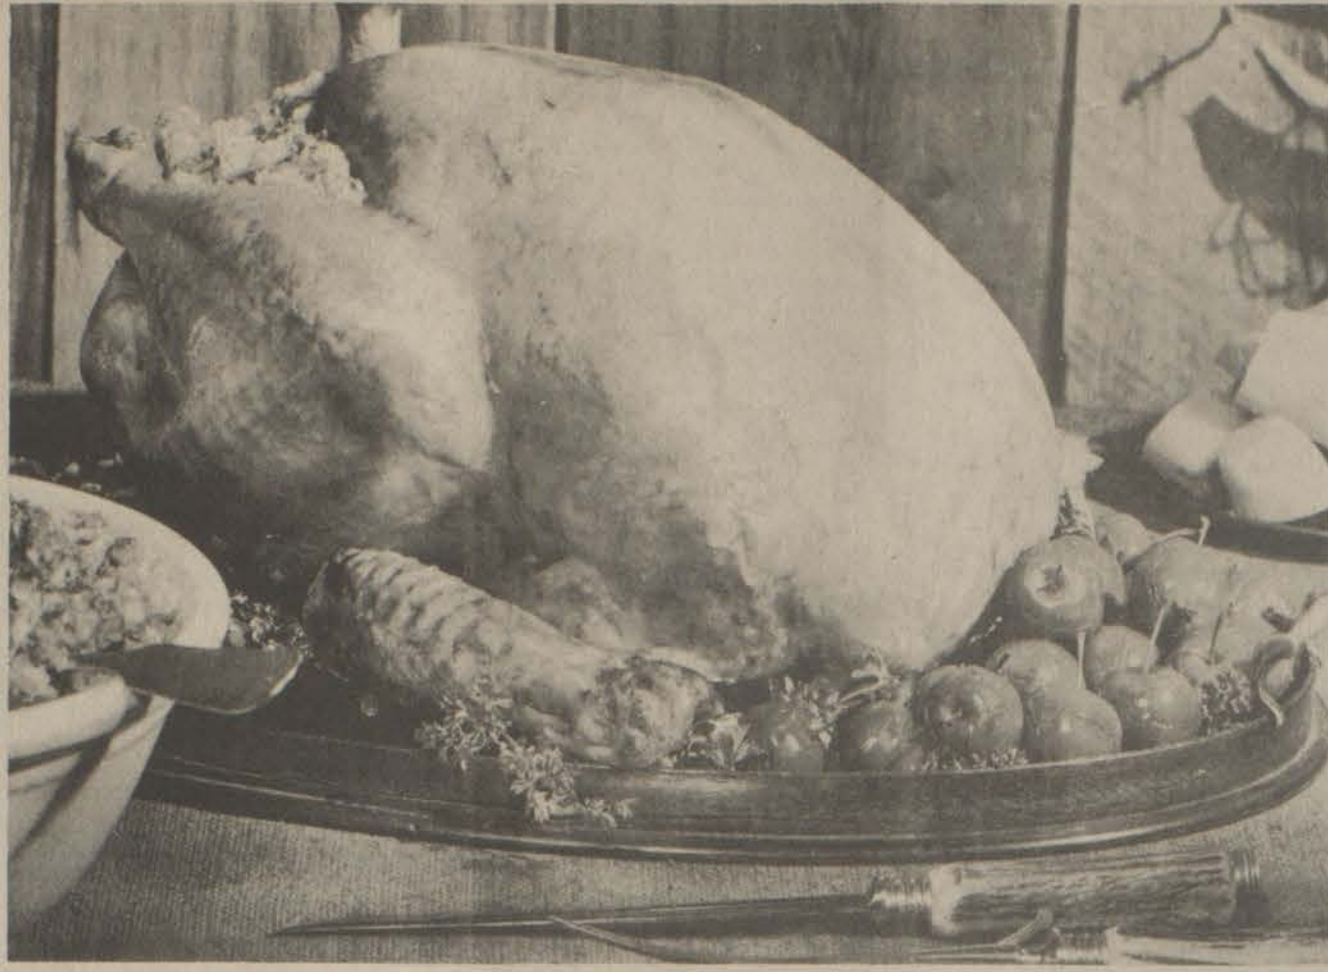

Turkeys should be stored in their shipping containers.

To Thaw The Turkey

Leave the turkey in its original bag and use one of the following three methods:

- No hurry—place on a tray in the refrigerator: 3 to 4 days.
- Faster—place it on a tray at room temperature in a closed grocery bag. The bag prevents the skin of the turkey from becoming too warm: 1 hour per pound of turkey.
- Fastest—cover it with cold water, changing the water occasionally: one-half hour per pound of turkey.

Refrigerate or cook your turkey as soon as it is thawed. If you plan to stuff the turkey, do so just before roasting.

To Roast The Turkey

Remove plastic bag, remove the neck and the giblets from cavities, rinse turkey and pat dry. Cook neck and giblets for broth and for flavoring dressing and giblet gravy.

Fasten down the legs by tying or tucking under skin band and skewer the neck skin to back. Twist wings akimbo under bird.

Brush the skin of the bird thoroughly with cooking fat. Rub the inside cavity with a mixture of salt, pepper, poultry seasoning and onion salt. This permeates the meat during cooking.

If a roast-meat thermometer is used, insert it into the thick part of thigh.

Roasting the whole turkey may be accomplished in slightly varied ways. One of the most common is to roast the turkey unstuffed in an oven of 325° F. on a rack in an open pan.

Low oven temperatures assure higher yields of edible meat with better flavor and greater succulence. Low roasting temperatures assure excellent drippings, unburned or dried in the pan.

Place the turkey breast side up on a rack at least 1/2 inch high in a shallow open pan.

If a V-rack is used, place the turkey breast down. Fat from the back tends to permeate the breast meat to keep it from drying.

No initial searing or cover is required. However, some chefs prefer to cover the bird with aluminum foil. This helps to hold in the moisture.

Although most conventional roasting is done without water being added, some chefs find that a little water in the roasting pan, well below the rack which holds the turkey, helps to retain the moisture and makes the turkey cook more uniformly with less shrinkage of the legs and wings.

Drippings from the bird do not hit onto a hot, dry pan and evaporate. They are protected by the shallow water for gravy and for helping to moisten the turkey meat. Care should be taken to assure that no part of the turkey is resting in the water, which should measure in the pan no more than 1/4 inch in depth.

The oven should be preheated to the desired cooking temperature.

The turkey is done when the meat thermometer placed in the center of inside thigh muscle registers 185° F. If no thermometer is used, test by pressing the fleshy part of the drumstick with your fingers, protecting them with cloth or paper. If the meat feels soft, the turkey is done. If, upon moving the drumstick up and down, the leg joint gives readily, or breaks, the turkey is done.

Remove your turkey from the oven and keep it on a warm platter until served. Where individual portions are served, the entire bird is carved and kept hot, servings being removed from the platter as called for. For larger groups, birds may be roasted, carved cold, portioned out by weight, reheated, and served with equally good results.

Roasting Times for an unstuffed turkey wrapped in aluminum foil and cooked in a conventional oven at 450° F.

14-16 pounds	3-3 1/2 hours
18-20 pounds	3 1/4-3 1/2 hours
22-24 pounds	3 1/2-3 3/4 hours
26-28 pounds	3 3/4-4 hours
30-32 pounds	4-4 1/4 hours
34-36 pounds	4 1/4-4 1/2 hours

★ Cancer Hopeline

Q.—My mother has just had a mastectomy. She understands that this was necessary to save her life, but she is very depressed. Is there anything we as family can do to help?

A.—Try to be extremely patient. Don't just expect her depression, tears, or anger; accept them. Then look for the cause. It may be a side effect of medication or a natural emotional reaction to what has happened to her. After all, she has lost a portion of her body which is very important to her image of herself as a woman. She is entitled to a period of mourning.

When she is blue, recognize the fact and accept it, and also recognize the positive progress she is making. It is beneficial for any patient and her family to balance realism and hope.

Of special importance in these early weeks following a cancer diagnosis and surgery is the family's willingness to be available. Patients often feel that no one else knows just what it's like. Be there to share the feelings she chooses to express.

Some relatives, and they are well-meaning, tell the patient to forget about their illness and not discuss it. No one who has cancer can simply forget it. Indeed, they don't want to. Forgetting their cancer and never discussing it is telling others that this disease that has attacked them is unimportant, when they know better.

It is much more realistic and honest to say, "This is a terrible thing that has happened to you. How can I help you?" This approach tells the patient she's important, that you care and that you accept the changes the disease has brought about and want to help her through them.

Above all, touch the patient. The loving human touch is often more comforting than medicines: a quick hug, a lingering embrace, a kiss, just holding hands. Cancer patients need these touches and enjoy them as much (or more) when they are sick that they did when they were well. Your ability to express love even during the patient's anger and depression will do much to help her surmount negative feelings.

To sum up: remember that your mother is still the same person you've always loved. She has a new experience with which she needs help. It may take a long time, but understanding and support can result in an even deeper relationship.

Cancer attacks a whole family and puts new strains on relationships. If you need help with how to handle cancer and what it's doing to you and your family, call the Cancer Hopeline. Trained counselors are there for just one reason: to help you cope better. Call toll free 1-800-432-9321 or write to 915 S. Limestone, Lexington, KY 40536.

Assets include (a) cash on hand or on deposit, (b) fair market value of stocks, bonds, mutual fund shares and other securities, (c) value of equity in real estate, and (d) gifts, earnest money deposits or contributions made by others on behalf of applicant.

Best Care For Tennis Injuries

At least one-third of America's 40 million tennis players have experienced an annoying, often debilitating, condition known as tennis elbow. Results from the most comprehensive study ever conducted on tennis elbow shed light on what may cause tennis elbow and what methods may help treat and prevent it.

The study found that players with tennis elbow were older and heavier, had played longer and more frequently and were at higher skill levels than those players who did not experience elbow pain. Players experiencing elbow pain also reported a higher incidence of other tennis-related injuries.

The study also found that age and frequency of play were the most significant factors associated with tennis elbow. The incidence of elbow pain was five times greater for individuals who played daily than it was for those who played only once a month. The incidence of tennis elbow increases almost in a straight-line fashion from ages 21 through 25 to ages 51 through 55.

"One of our major conclusions," says Dr. James Priest, co-author of the study, "is that tennis elbow appears to be a cumulative process associated with age, frequency of play and level of ability. This contradicts the theories that it's an ailment of beginners and weekend players."

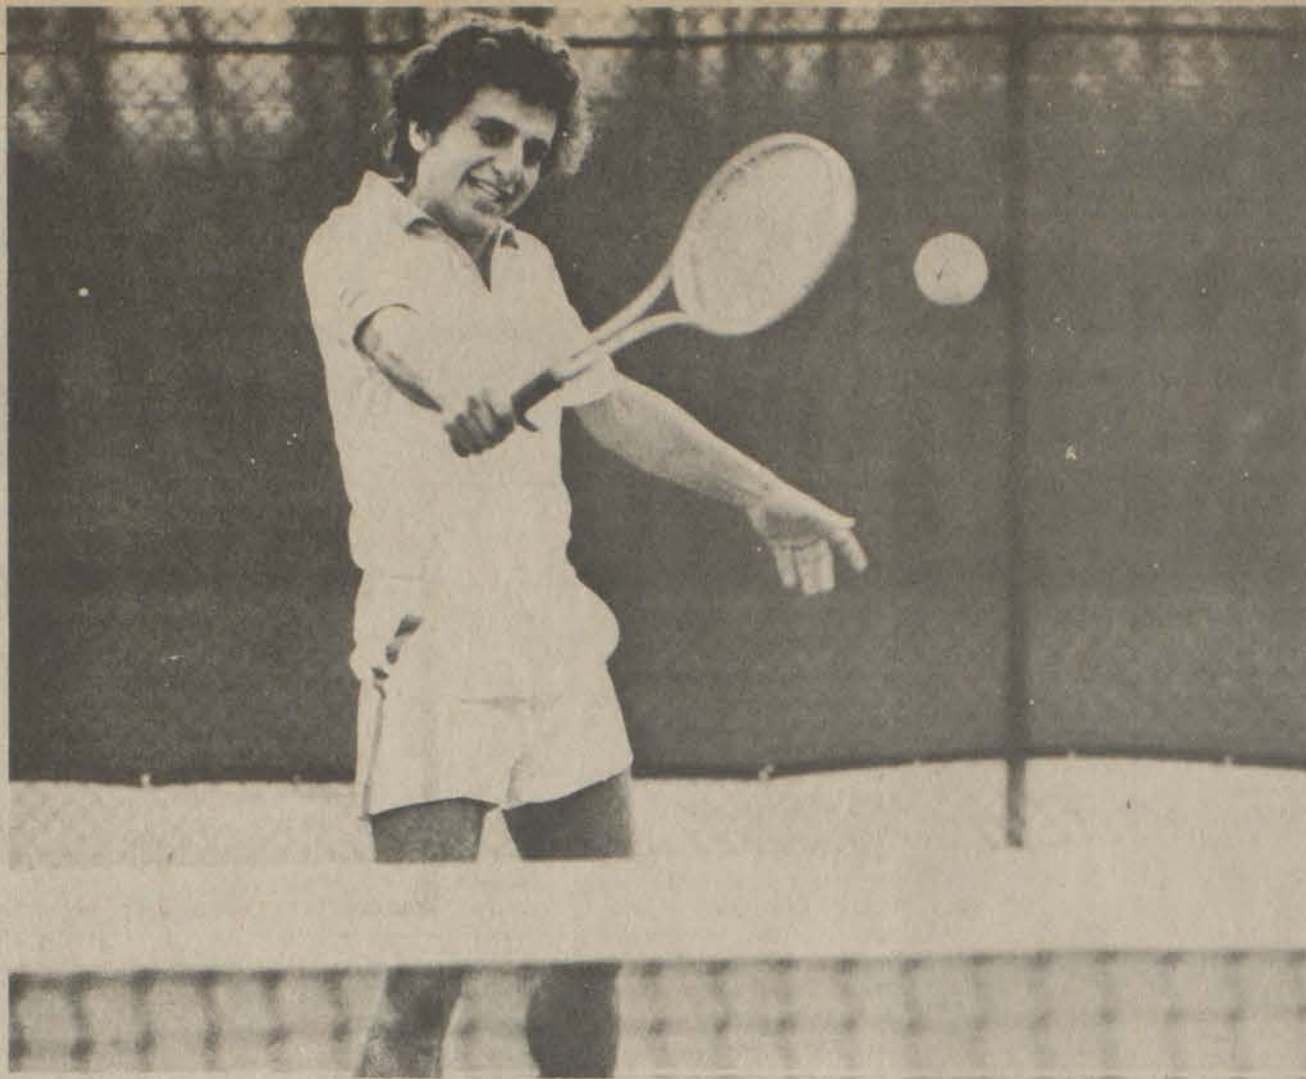

The research was conducted by Priest, associate director of the Institute for Athletic Medicine at Fairview Hospital in Minneapolis; research consultant Susan Goodwin Gerberich, also of the Institute; and Vic Braden, internationally known tennis professional and founder and president of the National Foundation for Tennis Research. The results were released to the medical community this spring in "The Physician and Sportsmedicine."

More than 2,600 students at Braden's Tennis College in California completed questionnaires in 1976 and 1977 which became the data base for the study. Thirty-one percent of the men and women reported they had experienced or were currently experiencing elbow pain.

When examined, the most common site of pain among the respondents was the outer bony prominence of the elbow, the classic location of tennis elbow syndrome.

According to Priest, himself a tournament tennis player, there has been surprisingly little medical research conducted on tennis elbow and its treatment. With the recent surge in the popularity of tennis, the medical community, he says, has become more interested in tennis-related injuries.

Of particular interest to players, pros and physicians is the study's finding that alteration of strokes was the most successful treatment for tennis elbow symptoms. This provided relief for all the players who tried it.

"Based on this finding," says Priest, "persons experiencing tennis elbow might benefit by consulting a tennis instructor to learn how to alter the painful stroke."

Exercise was the second most successful treatment, helping 89 percent of those who tried it, closely followed in effectiveness by supports or braces, aspirin and rest. Cortisone or steroid injections, heat and phenylbutazone were successful for about three-quarters of the players who tried those methods.

Of the 10 most common methods named, the use of cold applications or ultrasound appeared to be least effective. In all, the players identified 37 different treatments they had tried, ranging from the mundane (rest, aspirin) to the more exotic (acupuncture, alfalfa tablets).

The study also found that 70 percent of the players with tennis elbow had changed racquets since experiencing tennis elbow, with 69 percent of that group reporting an improvement in their condition. Priest and his colleagues are currently analyzing data on different types of racquets and their potential effects on elbow pain. That information will probably be available next year.

"There is a real need for a study like this," says Priest, "so many people are involved in tennis today and tennis elbow can have such an adverse effect on their daily lives—not simply as tennis players, but as dentists, carpenters or homemakers. This study gives us statistically meaningful answers about many factors involved with tennis elbow."

The tennis elbow study was sponsored by the Institute for Athletic Medicine; Orthopaedic Consultants, P.A.; Coordinated Management Systems, Inc.; and the University of Minnesota Computer Center, all of Minneapolis, and by the National Foundation for Tennis Research in California.

Election Reflections

By ROBERT McANINCH

As it became apparent in 1973 that President Nixon was in serious trouble, someone from Massachusetts printed and distributed bumper stickers that read, "Don't blame me, I'm from Massachusetts!" Massachusetts was the only state in the Union to vote for McGovern in the 1972 election. As the Reagan administration unfolds someone may have to print and distribute stickers saying, "Don't blame me, I'm from Floyd County!" Floyd County went for Carter by a larger margin than any other county in the Commonwealth.

The country goes through this great political spectacle of electing a President once every four years. A month or so before an election everyone becomes interested in politics, and speculation as to who is going to win becomes the major subject of conversation. As a professor of Government, I am not afforded the luxury of an occasional interest in political happenings; instead, I have to pay attention to politics on a day-to-day basis. It became clear to most observers that the President was in serious trouble in February, 1980, when the inflation statistics went over 18 percent.

The President's political and economic strategists had told him in December, 1979 that by February, 1980, the country would be in a mild recession. The resulting unemployment caused by the recession would slow the inflation rate and bring inflation under control. The President could slowly expand the economy during the summer months and have everyone working by the November election, while keeping the inflation rate under control. It was a good plan. However, the President's advisers turned out to be wrong.

The February, 1980 inflation statistics went skyrocketing through the roof and the President had to put the country into a recession as fast as possible in order to get the country out of the recession by election day. He submitted a revised balanced budget in February, he drove up interest rates to over 20%, and he pushed unemployment up to 8.5%. The country went into one of the shortest recessions in history. The President brought inflation down to 7%, but the plan was still three months behind schedule and he was faced with a 7.5% unemployment rate on election day. No President should have 18% inflation, 20% interest rates, and 8.5% unemployment in an election year and expect to win. What this meant was that he would be in political trouble in the big industrial states of the Northeast. States like New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania would become doubtful. States like Ohio and Illinois would become nearly impossible. The election showed the effects of unemployment in the Northeast. The President lost Massachusetts by 3,000 votes out of nearly two and one-half million cast in that state.

The Midwest is a Republican area of the country, so the President was not expected to do well west of the Mississippi. Nevertheless, there are some states, such as Iowa, that a Democrat might carry. The President's grain embargo against the Soviets as a response to their invasion of Afghanistan, without some other form of compensation to the farmers, insured that the farming states would be lost by President Carter.

The President's most solid political base was the South. In 1976 the South went for him as the home town boy. However, the Panama Canal Treaty, which affected southern cities such as New Orleans, Mobile, Houston, Tampa, and Miami, plus a general lack of concern for the South allowed Reagan, who was already popular in the South, to make inroads on Carter's vote.

The President could not seem to please anyone. He did not push hard enough on civil rights to please blacks and he did not drag his feet enough to please those who oppose civil rights. He did not allow farm prices to go high enough to please farmers, and he did not hold them low enough to stop inflation. He did not respond to the Soviets hard enough to please those who thought something should be done about Afghanistan, yet what he did looked foolish to those who thought we should do nothing. On every issue he tried to split the difference and keep everyone happy, but wound up pleasing no one. His fence straddling and poor economic timing cost him the Presidency.

One factor that cannot be ignored was John Anderson. Anderson's ability to attract liberal Democrats cost the President over one hundred electoral votes. As it turned out, one hundred electoral votes would have made little difference, but if President Carter had had his political act together and the election had been the cliffhanger that the media was expecting, Anderson would have probably made the difference and thrown the election to Reagan anyway.

Another factor that doomed the President was poor organization. The President simply did not get his campaign organization rolling fast enough. In addition, the lack of knowledge about the importance of local politics and programs offended many local party organizations. Floyd County went Carter overwhelmingly in spite of, rather than because of, the national Carter organization. Reagan's victory showed President Carter's national organization's inability to read the thinking of Democrats. Floyd County voted for Carter by 71.4%, second only to its sister county of Knott. The voted margin, 6,799 more for Carter than for Reagan, was the biggest in the Commonwealth. (Louisville went heavily Democratic, but when you add in the rest of Jefferson County, Carter carried the county by only 176 votes). Forty-three out of forty-four precincts in Floyd County went for Carter.

So, if the Reagan Presidency turns the nation sour, Floyd Countians may rightfully say, "Don't blame me, I'm from Floyd County!"

New Clergy Service Offered By Hospital

A non-denominational clergy service to provide spiritual counseling for patients has been announced by Clarence Traum, administrator at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Fred Holbrook, a student from Asbury Theological Seminary in Wilmore, Kentucky will serve as HRMC chaplain. Holbrook will work at the hospital one semester as part of his graduate studies in theology. He will establish ministry programs at the hospital which the hospital plans to continue with local clergy.

"We are applying a 'holistic' approach to healing and the needs of patients," explained Holbrook. "We want to provide for the total needs of the total person."

Holbrook is also working with the Johnson and Floyd county ministerial associations, and with pastors from Martin and Magoffin counties, to organize another new program. The "chaplain-on-call" service would provide access to a pastor 24 hours a day for patients who request spiritual counseling. "Local pastors are the key to this program's success. While many have been cooperative, we'd like others who are interested to contact me," said Holbrook.

Future plans for the HRMC chaplain are to videotape various local clergyman conducting special worship services for the hospital patients. The programs will be shown on closed circuit television in the patients' rooms.

"We have been wanting to implement counseling programs of this nature for quite a while," says Traum. "We know that spiritual healing is vital in the overall healing process. I believe the new services will be of real benefit to our patients."

Cold Water Presents Hazard For Boaters

Hypothermia, the lowering of the body's temperature, is a special hazard to fishermen and boaters this time of year.

According to the state police water safety section, the temperature of Kentucky's lakes and rivers has dropped below 50 degrees. The low temperature increases the risk of dying from accidentally falling into the water.

"Although there are fewer people on the water this time of year, the hazards to those on the water are greater," said Doug Shoulders, commander of the water safety section.

"The cold water greatly reduces survival time and there are fewer people on the water to assist if an accident occurs," he said.

When a person falls into the water, the water immediately begins cooling the body—the colder the water, the more rapid the cooling of the body. Activity, especially frantic movements, can accelerate the cooling by as much as 35 percent, Shoulders said.

As the body temperature drops, the victim loses consciousness and the pulse slows. Eventually, all body systems shut down.

With proper treatment, hypothermia victims have a greater chance of revival than drowning victims, he said. "But prevention is a whole lot better than the remedy."

He emphasized the necessity of wearing a life jacket or float coat when on the water. "These should be of bright color or have reflective strips or patches sewn on them," he said. "This will help anyone trying to rescue you."

Layers of clothing, especially wool, tend to hold in more heat than one heavy garment. If a person falls into the water, no clothing should be removed. The clothing, even rubber boots and waders, will hold heat and trap air to help keep the victim afloat.

Activity should be kept at a minimum, he said. Attempting to swim to shore, unless it is very close, cause hypothermia to set in more quickly.

First aid for hypothermia victims involves getting the victim to shelter, removing wet clothing and apply heat to the head, neck, sides and groin. Warm moist towels, hot water bottles or electric blankets should be used if available.

If no heat source is available, place the victim in a sleeping bag and have one or two persons remove their clothing and use their bodies to warm the victim.

If the person appears dead, mouth to mouth resuscitation should be started. All hypothermia victims should be taken to a hospital as soon as possible.

A hypothermia victim should not be given a drink, especially not alcohol. Also, don't apply heat to or massage the victim's arms and legs. This can cause cold blood in these parts to circulate to the vital organs and further lower the body's core temperature.

Shoulders said persons interested in learning more about hypothermia and boating safety should write the water safety section for a home study course. When completed, the course may qualify the boat owner for reduced insurance rates.

The water safety section is located at 114 West Clinton Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

MANPOWER OFFICES TO RECRUIT FOR STATE

Kentuckians seeking jobs in state government and state agencies looking for qualified applicants now are linked through local Department for Human Resources offices.

The state Department of Personnel has agreed with Human Resources' Bureau for Manpower Services to recruit state employees through 24 regional Manpower Services offices.

According to the agreement, the Personnel Department will notify the Manpower Services offices of job vacancies within state government. "This program will have no effect on the current hiring freeze in state government," Personnel Commissioner Dick Robinson said. "Only state positions in critical need areas will be referred to Manpower Services through this program."

Among critical need job classes in state agencies are geologists, emergency warning system technicians, reclamation inspectors, nurses, nutritionists, dental hygienists, physical therapists, dieticians, speech pathologists and licensed psychologists.

The LaFollette Seamen's Act of 1915 regulated conditions of employment for maritime workers, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Inquire About Survivor Benefits, Social Security Director Advises

Whenever a family member dies, one of the survivors should inquire to see if social security benefits may be payable on that person's record, Jim Kelly, Social Security Director for the Big Sandy area, said recently.

"It is important to apply promptly, because in some cases benefits cannot be paid for months before the month of application," Kelly said. This pertains to widows and widowers who wish to start benefits before they reach 65.

If the worker had credit for enough work covered by social security, benefits can be paid to:

- Unmarried children under 18; 18-22 if full time students; over 18 if disabled before 22.
- A mother or father caring for a child under 18 or disabled.
- A widow or widower 60 or older.
- A disabled widow or widower 50 or older.

-A dependent parent 62 or older.

A survivor's divorced wife can receive the same benefits as a widow if the marriage lasted 10 years or more. This time limit does not apply to a divorced wife caring for an eligible child under 18 or disabled.

In addition, there is a $225 lump-sum death payment that can be made upon the death of a person who worked and earned enough credit.

When applying, the person will need certain proofs, including: worker's social security number, proof of age for applicants, proof of marriage for widows or widowers, children's birth certificates, income tax forms or returns for the two years before death, and proof of divorce for prior marriages. Do not delay applying if all of these are not available. People at the Social Security office may be able to suggest substitutes.

For more information about social security survivor benefits, call the Prestonsburg social security office, located between Prestonsburg and Paintsville on U.S. 23. The telephone number is listed in the local directory.

Many people with diabetes occupy important positions and take part in nearly every phase of life in our country today. Doctors, lawyers, political leaders, businessmen, professional athletes and laborers are represented over and over again. However, it has been only since the discovery of insulin in 1921 that effective treatment has been attained. Diabetes, however, remains as a major health problem in the United States. Researchers at the Joslin Clinic in Boston and others are in the process of developing a type of insulin that can be taken in tablet form.

At COOLEY APOTHECARY we welcome all third party insurance plans. And we would like to remind you that prescriptions are tax deductible. For insurance and tax purposes, as well as for a medical history, we keep a family health record for you, which lists all your prescriptions. This is just one of the services we offer to make good health easier for you. See us in 2 Town Center Building, 886-8106. Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30; Sat. 9-5.

Diet: What's Safe, What Works?

An estimated seventy million of us are overweight. "Overweight" has been defined as being up to twenty percent over the recommended weight for your sex, height, bone structure and age. Obesity is being twenty percent or more above the recommended weight. Obesity is often associated with such medical problems as high blood pressure, gout and high levels of blood fats.

People overeat for reasons other than physiological hunger; very often the reasons for overeating are frustration, boredom, nervousness, or to receive pleasure through taste. Dieters should examine their reasons for overeating and be aware of their eating habits.

Crash dieting is usually not effective for long-lasting weight reduction. Medical experts maintain that weight should be lost the same way it is gained: slowly, pound by pound. To maintain your weight, you must eat about fifteen calories per pound each day. Each pound of stored fat contains about three thousand, five hundred calories. To lose weight, you must cut your caloric intake so that the stored fat will be burned off by your body.

Caloric needs change with age. If your diet and exercise habits remain the same after about age twenty five, you would still gain slightly as you grow older, since your body requires fewer calories to maintain its weight.

Exercise with a diet will help to burn off stored fat. It will also help to tone muscles, often making you look and feel better while you are in the process of losing weight. Walking as an exercise can be a good part of a weight loss program, but it must be extra walking, above and beyond what walking you normally do in a day. When beginning any exercise program, it is advisable to begin slowly and gradually increase the amount of exercise you are getting. You should not feel exhausted following exercise.

Two Pounds Per Week

The American Medical Association's (AMA) guide to losing weight stresses not only weight consciousness, but general health consciousness, exercise, as well as nutrition and diet. The guide remarks that inactivity, as well as overeating, contributes to being over-weight.

Each pound of fat contains about 3,500 calories.

The AMA recommends weight loss of no more than two pounds per week.

When starting a diet, always consult your doctor. Your doctor can help you to find a program suitable for you, and will determine what weight is best for you. He or she will also point out any health problems which might constrict your exercise program or which might point to a specific weight loss plan which is suited to your body's needs and limitations.

Obtain a calorie counter, and keep records of your caloric intake and your daily weight. A person who weighs one hundred and fifty pounds would need 2,250 calories to maintain their weight (fifteen calories per pound, per day). Each pound of stored fat contains 3,500 calories.

By Jillian Taylor Ross

To lose one pound per week, the daily caloric intake for this patient would have to be reduced to 1,750; to lose two pounds per week, it would need to be reduced to 1,250.

Plan an adequate breakfast and lunch to help avoid snacking later in the day. A good diet is reduced in calories, but has sufficient nutrition supplied by the four basic food groups—the milk group, meat group, bread and cereal group, and the fruit and vegetable group. Sensible snacking may help you to stay on a weight loss program. A cup of popcorn, unbuttered and unsalted, only has about fifty calories and it is high in bulk and fiber.

Raw vegetables are another low calorie snack; in addition to the traditional carrot and celery sticks, try zucchini slices, broccoli flowerets, bell pepper rings or cherry tomatoes. Devise your own low calorie dips to serve with them. Low calorie soft drinks or unsweetened coffee or tea might help you get through to your next meal, or chew sugarless gum for a change of flavor.

Support groups such as Weight Watchers, or dieting with a friend can be helpful to a dieter. Joining an organized exercise program can help you get the exercise to burn off a few additional calories, but you can certainly exercise at home, with similar results.

Quick Loss

Quick-weight loss programs are ketogenic diets. They are based on high-protein, low-carbohydrate intake. The body is deprived of carbohydrates on this type of diet. Carbohydrates are the body's normal main "fuel," and if deprived of carbohydrates the body must burn protein. One of the side effects of the burning of protein is rapid water loss. This accounts for the greatest part of the weight loss on a ketogenic diet. Weight loss on this type of diet very often proves to be only temporary.

Low-calorie protein diets are usually based on the use of powdered or liquid protein products, or on protein capsules or tablets. Some of these products come with no directions for use; some suggest that the product replace one or two meals a day. Many dieters have been using these protein products as their only source of nourishment. If used this way in the recommended quantities, the caloric intake for one day is three hundred to five hundred calories. Nutritionists maintain that this is an amount which is insufficient for good health.

The Food and Drug Administration has received reports of death and illness in which the use of protein products has been suspected of being a contributory factor. Users have complained of vomiting, diarrhea, faintness, cramps, constipation, fatigue and hair loss.

An FDA panel of medical experts concluded that such protein products should only be used under the supervision of medical personnel who have been trained in the use of these products. This type of diet is still considered experimental and is being developed for use by extremely obese patients.

The FDA has proposed that protein supplements intended for use in weight reduction should be required to have a warning on the label which would state that the product is only for use with medical supervision and not for use by infants, children, or pregnant or nursing women. Additionally, these diets could prove dangerous to people taking prescription medications, or those with kidney, liver or heart disease, or those with high blood pressure, and by the elderly.

Chemical Diet Aids

In 1979, the active ingredient Phenylpropanolamine (PPA) was recommended to be placed in Food and Drug Administration (FDA) category #1, "generally recognized as safe and effective within prescribed limits," as an aid in weight reduction. The announcement came from a special advisory panel to the Food and Drug Administration, the Advisory Review Panel, with regard to over the counter miscellaneous internal drug products.

At about the same time, the FDA proposed withdrawal of its approval of amphetamines for use in weight reduction. The FDA based the proposal for the withdrawal of their approval on evidence showing that amphetamines are abused considerably more than other drugs used in the treatment of obesity. The use of amphetamines has a potential risk of dependence as well as other harmful effects and there are other drugs available which are equally effective and have less risk. Amphetamines are, however, approved for two medical purposes, the treatment of hyperactivity in children and the treatment of narcolepsy, a rare disease causing excessive sleepfulness.

The dangerous side effects of amphetamines, including central nervous system stimulation and the increasing of tolerance levels, are not produced by PPA. New Jersey, Maryland, and Wisconsin have banned the use of amphetamines in weight control and several state drug enforcement agencies have categorized them as controlled substances.

PPA reportedly controls appetite, giving dieters more willpower, enabling them to develop better eating habits. PPA products have been sold at drugstores and supermarkets under such trade names as Dexamtrim and Prolamine. PPA, an appetite suppressant, is said to reduce the desire for food. Precisely how this happens is not known, but it is believed to act through the lateral hypothalamus gland, which controls the senses of smell and taste.

One of the nation's leading marketers of non-prescription weight reduction aids voluntarily provided the panel with fifteen research studies on the effects of PPA in weight reduction programs. In one test of PPA, physicians gave the drug to one group of seventy-seven overweight patients and a placebo was given to a second group of seventy-seven patients. Both groups were advised to eat sensibly. The physicians and the subjects did not know whether the drug or the placebo had been prescribed. After four weeks, the weight loss was compared. The patients on PPA lost an average of one pound a week and the other patients lost an average of one half pound a week. Other studies done with animals showed that the intake of PPA caused weight reduction.

Benzocaine is another drug that was also found to be "safe and effective" by the advisory panel to the FDA. It is a mild topical anesthetic which temporarily dulls the sense of taste. It is often supplied in the form of gum or candy.

THE MEDICAL LETTER, a non-profit publication which provides critical evaluation of drugs for physicians, maintains that PPA and benzocaine are not effective in weight reduction and that PPA may be dangerous to some users. It reports that the advisory panel found the studies submitted were not identified by author and were defective in some areas, but the panel concluded that these same studies, taken as a whole, showed the effectiveness of PPA.

PPA is not recommended for patients with hypertension, heart disease, diabetes or hyperthyroidism. It has also been shown to have detrimental effects for some patients when taken in conjunction with other drugs. THE MEDICAL LETTER asserts that "the only satisfactory treatment for obesity is a life-long change in patterns of food intake and physical activity."

Thanksgiving and History Go Together in Old Washington

By HELEN PRICE STACY

At a time when most Kentucky settlements still were trying to establish a blacksmith shop or grist mill or even locate an everlasting spring to serve pioneer families, Washington in Mason County was a flourishing commercial center.

"People from Lexington came here to shop at the 20 merchantile houses," said Phyllis Helphenstine, of Washington, "and travelers on the Maysville-Lexington Road found lodging at our two inns."

In addition to the merchantile houses and inns, by 1797 Washington already had 10 handcraft shops, three rope walks and three churches. Twenty-two wells were dug in 1798 to provide water and fire protection giving the city the first public waterworks west of the Alleghenies.

"We had the first house of worship in northern Kentucky, the Limestone Baptist Church," said Helphenstine. "The first Mason county courthouse was here, and the first library in the entire area was built in 1810. The first dramatic performance west of the Alleghenies was presented by the inhabitants in 1797."

In 1794 David Broderick was master at Broderick's Tavern. The village postmaster Thomas Sloo was part owner and together the two men established the inn as a place of hospitality and fine Kentucky dining. Travelers knew they could stop at Broderick's and enjoy the ultimate cuisine. The inn's French onion soup and hearty vegetable soup became trademarks as the first course of a delicious meal—topped off with Kentucky transparent pie.

Since the turn of the century Washington has changed little. In 1969 the entire historic district was named to the National Register of Historic Places.

"Visitors may browse through our many antiques shops and craft shops and may take in a traditional meeting-house service," Helphenstine said. "They may take walks through historic streets and look at buildings as old as the settlement. As early as 1790 there were 119 dwellings in Washington."

"Thanksgiving was one of the most important holidays of early America," Helphenstine said. "It will be celebrated fully in our old historic village."

The highlight of the Thanksgiving holiday in Washington will be a sit-down feast at Broderick's. On the menu will be turkey, country ham, Chase Kennedy's famous oyster dressing, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, corn pudding, broccoli and cheese, baked tomatoes, green beans, peas, baked potatoes, homemade yeast rolls, pumpkin pie, cherry and apple cobbler, vanilla and chocolate puddings, and transparent pie.

For those who might want an extra flip to their holiday meal, the inn also specializes in frog legs and turtle.

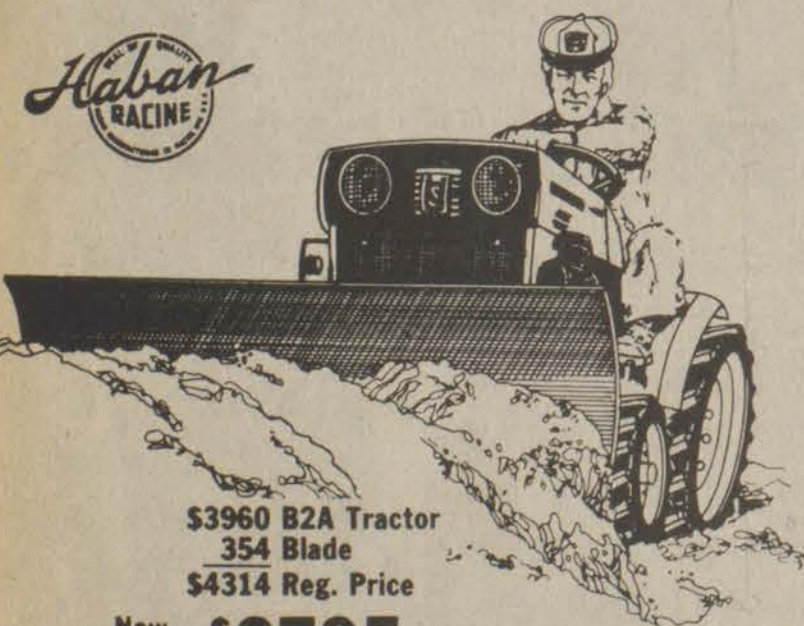

Good Kentucky food and hospitality served with generous dollops of true thanksgiving joyed where history still is being made! Travel the parkways and interstates to U.S. 68 and old Washington. If more information is needed contact Chase Kennedy at Broderick's (606) 759-7934.

Complaint Points To Discrimination In State Road Work

Eighteen organizations promoting job equity for women have targeted the state's road building agencies and private road contractors for failure to meet affirmative action goals after documenting what they say is a "blatant pattern of sex discriminatory hiring and employment practices" in a complaint filed before the Department of Labor, and the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) in Washington last week. Named in the Complaint were the Kentucky Department of Transportation, Ashland Oil and Refining Company (Warren Brothers Division) Ashland-Warren, Incorporated, and five of Kentucky's leading road construction contractors.

Southeast Women's Employment coalition, a Kentucky-based coalition of women's economic rights advocacy organizations, led the action after conducting an intensive investigation into the hiring and employment practices of state departments of transportation, and private road contractors.

Eat. Drink. And be wary.

We're not going to suggest that people stop drinking. But let's face it. Drinking too much, like eating too much, is bad for your health. What's more, it can lead to an alcoholic dependency. And that's bad for you, your family, and everybody around.

Here are some tips for sensible drinking. Eat something first to slow alcoholic absorption. Dilute high-proof drinks with water or fruit juice to slow the rush to the brain. Sip your drink, don't gulp.

Remember, moderation in food and drink will help you lead a longer, healthier life. Staying healthy is the best kind of health care—and the least expensive. You can help by taking care of yourself.

At Blue Cross and Blue Shield and Delta Dental of Kentucky, we're concerned about rising health care costs. That's why we're working with consumers, dentists, physicians and hospitals to find ways to hold costs down.

Write us for information on enrolling in quality health care prepayment plans. Blue Cross and Blue Shield and Delta Dental of Kentucky, 9901 Linn Station Road, Louisville, KY 40223.

Power Rate Hearing Set

Hearings on a proposed $26 million rate increase by Kentucky Power Co., based in Ashland, will be held at 9 a.m. Nov. 17-18 by the state Energy Regulatory Commission in Frankfort.

Cross examination of the company's witnesses will be on Monday, while intervenors' witnesses will be questioned Tuesday. Kentucky Power's requested increase would result in an $8.94 monthly increase in the average residential electric customer's bill.

Also in November, the commission will hold a hearing at 10 a.m. Nov. 24 concerning a case dealing with Kentucky Power's capacity and emergency control program. The company filed a motion to amend the commission's Oct. 3 order.

Hearings scheduled in November will be held at the commissions' offices at 730 Schenkel Lane, Frankfort, with the exception of Goshen Utilities. Among these will be:

FLOYD: Auxier Road Gas Co., Nov. 6, 10 a.m. The company wants to increase its rates from $5 for the first 1,000 cubic feet of gas and $4.25 for each additional 1,000, to $6 for the first 1,000 and $5.10 for each additional 1,000. This will produce a 20 percent increase in total sales.

DAVID WATER DISTRICT: Nov. 18, 2 p.m. The district wants to increase its water service rates from $1 per 1,000 to $1.70.

JOHNSON: Foothills Rural Telephone Cooperative Corp., Nov. 26, 1 p.m. The cooperative wants to increase its telephone rates in Staffordsville from a minimum monthly residential bill ranging from $6.30 for a four-party line to $7.80 for a single-party to a flat $12.60 for a single-party line. The utility is eliminating multiple party lines.

MAGOFFIN: Magoffin Gas Co., Nov. 20, 9 a.m. The utility wants to increase its $2.50 rate for zero to 2,000 cubic feet of gas and 75 cents for each additional 1,000 to $7.50 for zero to 1,000 and $5 per 1,000 for each additional 1,000.

Railways Said Safer

Rail safety in Kentucky has improved over the past three years under increased federal inspections, according to federal officials.

Charles Meyrick, federal railroad administration rail safety official, told members of the state interim committee on transportation today that rail accidents in Kentucky have decreased from 440 to 1978 to less than 250 estimated for 1980.

This was done, he said, with the assistance of federal inspectors in Tennessee and Virginia. Kentucky has only three inspectors for nearly 3,000 miles of rail. Individual railroads have their own inspectors Meyrick explained, and are required buy federal regulation to maintain a regular inspection program.

Still, in 1979 there were 317 rail accidents reported, 49 of which involved hazardous materials. A majority of these accidents did not present a threat to the community, he said.

Railroads are required by federal law to report any incident causing damage or loss totaling $1,200 or more.

Meyrick said Kentucky's railroad system was "largely-basically sound."

Floyd Had No Surface Permits in September

Of the 235 mining permits issued in September, 154 were for surface mining but none of these were for Floyd county. This county, however, did have nine of the 66 underground mining permits issued during the month.

Permitting activities for September authorized the disturbance of 6,711.1 new acres of land and resulted in the collection of $339,550 in fees.

RFH Coal Co., 2 acres; Ligon Preparation, 1.9 acres; Spencer Branch Coal Co., three permits for a total of 14.3 acres; Melana Coal Co., 1 acre; Triple M Mining, 3.35; Newman Bros. Mining, 1.7.

In area underground mining, Johnson county had two permits covering 15.72 acres; Knott, five permits, 28.42 acres; Magoffin, two for 6.5 acres; Martin, four for 42.9 acres; Pike, 20 for 227.8 acres.

A preparation plant permit was granted Bailey Mining in this county.

Surface mining permits included two in Johnson county for 328.4 acres; nine in Knott for 1218.27 acres; four in Pike for 204.9 acres.

The cost of electricity may be less in this area, but it, too, has increased during the past seven inflationary years and is too valuable to waste. Conservation and proper energy management procedures can make the home use of electricity an even better value.

Call any of our offices and ask about the energy management programs we offer, including SAVE booklets, electric thermal storage space and water heating system with time-of-day rates, home insulation financing and Equal Payment Plan.

Same survey reveals that Kentucky Power is also lowest in industrial power costs to customers.

WILD AND THE FREE

'The Wild and the Free,' a new motion picture-for-television starring Granville Van Dusen and Linda Gray (pictured) as scientists involved in chimpanzee research, will be broadcast on 'The CBS Wednesday Night Movies,' WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26 on CBS-TV. The often comical adventure develops when a group of American-trained, home-raised chimps, whose ability to communicate and comprehend makes them seem almost human, comes into contact with a band of wild chimpanzees in the African jungle.

The comedy-drama, which reunites producer Paul Radin and director James Hill for the first time since they collaborated on the motion picture 'Born Free,' was filmed entirely on location in Tampa, Fla., and in a dense jungle area of Florida's Hillsborough State Park.

Reprints Book On Appalachian Lore

By DR. LEONARD ROBERTS
An important Appalachian book of folklore has been reprinted according to Dr. Leonard Roberts, director of the Pikeville College Press. Colorful as well as factual, the title is "Sang Branch Settlers: Folksongs and Tales of a Kentucky Mountain Family."

Dr. Roberts studied a mountain family of long standing in the counties of Harlan and Leslie in the 1950s. Travelling the region with pencil and tape recorder, he collected a large mass of oral tradition, including lives of hard work in the coal mines, farming, logging and sawmill operations up and down the branches of the Kentucky River.

Sections of the material were put in order in the early 1960s and published in magazines and in books. Afterward Dr. Roberts presented the entire study to an editor of the American Folklore Society who found it an outstanding folk and cultural history of the region, and presented it to the University of Texas Press for publication as No. 61 of the Society's Memoir Series. It was released in 1974.

Dr. Roberts presented 86 pages of interviews and oral traditions from members of the Couch family, telling of life in a rough and tumble section of eastern Kentucky and describing their home, work and play, and with tales and ballads performed by the old folk in a gnat smoke in the yard, or by a log burning session at night. The men of the house tell of their hunting of bear, deer, foxes and all manner of fur-bearing animals. The family is involved in school and church going, going over the gap for salt in Virginia, making tools and coffins, and sleds and wagons, and a good many details are brought forth on moonshining: hiding it and selling it in mining towns and at roadside stands.

The next section of the volume, the richest and most valuable for the oral historian, is entitled "Folksongs and Hymns." Here are 100 songs with music, including some of the oldest English ballads, many broadsides, and American hymns and folksongs. Here are found not only Barbara Allen, but Lord Bateman, The Hangman, Rich and Rambling Boy, the Wagoner Lad, Wild Bill Jones, Glory Land, Climbing up Zion's Hill, and many jigs, dance pieces, humorous and satirical numbers.

The second section contains 60 folktales and 40 riddles. Some of the finest texts of Old World tales are told by the mother of seven Coughs, such as Little Black Hunchety Hunch, The Bull Strap, Irishmen and the Gun, Tailpoe, and funny animal tales such as: Rat or Mouse, I Up the Chimley. There are two tales not found in America before: Nip, Kink and Curly, and The One-Eyed Giant. The first one about Nip has been found in eastern Europe; and the One-Eyed Giant (from the Arabian Nights) has been found in oral tradition in Scotland.

Greenland is the biggest island on earth, but less than 15 percent of its 840,000-mile expanse is habitable. The rest is too mountainous or buried under the icecap. If the island were ever to melt, a September Reader's Digest article notes, all the oceans on earth would rise 21 feet.

Seminar Talks of Turn To Sun for Future Energy

"SOLAR ENERGY is a resource almost too good to be true," Oscar Bloch, president of Kentucky Solar Coalition, told the group of homeowners and builders at May Lodge seminar last Thursday. The seminar, one of a series sponsored by Prestonsburg Community College, was designed to promote greater awareness of the potential of solar energy for home heating and cooling.

While many in these parts are still waiting for the nation to switch to coal for its energy needs, there was a group in town last week trying to sell the notion that the future lies with the sun.

Much of the technology needed to harness the sun's energy is already available, they argued, and now the cost of using fossil fuels for energy makes the switch to solar energy economically sensible, too.

In fact, houses heated and cooled by fossil fuels will be widely recognized as wasteful anachronisms 10 years from now, some predicted, and will be discredited as surely as the gas-guzzling automobiles which only a few years ago were an unquestioned feature of the American lifestyle.

At a May Lodge seminar sponsored last Thursday by the U.S. and state Departments of Energy, Prestonsburg Community College, the Kentucky Solar Coalition, a citizens' group, and Appalachia—Science in the Public Interest, a non-profit research group, solar advocates told an audience of about 50 people of the potential of solar energy for water and space heating, and even for generating electricity.

Solar-powered homes of the future may actually put electricity into the system rather than drawing it from the system, one intimated.

Another spoke of the need for legislation guaranteeing individuals access to the sun, giving tax credits for homeowners converting to solar, and protecting consumers of the many products now appearing in response to the new energy consciousness.

Bob Meyer, a local builder and a seminar speaker, though clearly uncomfortable with his new status as an "expert" on solar energy, has pioneered the use of passive solar systems in home construction here. With Tony Bentley, Meyer formed Appalachian Housing Industries two-and-a-half years ago, to build low-cost, energy-efficient homes.

They have built four homes—in David, Auxier, and Blue River—using such passive systems as double-glazed windows facing south and stone masses inside to absorb heat by day and release it at night.

Passive solar systems—essentially, design and construction features—are distinguished from active systems, which use such hardware as copper plates, pumps and fans. Because Kentucky has a relatively high number of cloudy days, a combination of the two systems is generally recommended here. Some solar advocates, moreover, promote solar energy not as a competitor with fossil and synthetic fuels but as one component of a balanced system using all available energy sources.

Building a low-cost home has proven more difficult than he had anticipated and market demand is still overwhelmingly for conventionally heated homes, Meyer conceded. Nor is he as convinced as some other seminar participants that the nation is about to make a serious bid for solar energy.

Other speakers boosted solar as a means to achieving energy independence—much as coal is promoted—but also for merits to which the fossil fuel industries can lay scant claim. Using the sun for energy, they argued, decentralizes the energy industry, giving homeowners new control over their lives and keeping energy dollars in the local community. What is more, it is clean. And it results in no monthly bill.

"When you depend on a centralized power source like Kentucky Power," said Larry Strange, a designer of community solar-use projects, "you're exporting your money—for constructing a plant in a remote place, for hardware made in a distant state, for labor far removed from the local community."

"Invest $20 million over the years in your own community and the money is multiplied," Strange said. "Send it away to the power plant and it's gone."

Using solar energy makes no sense unless houses are energy-efficient, it was pointed out. Solar houses need to be so designed as to demand half as much energy as houses commonly do, said David Ross Stevens, of the Kentucky Solar Coalition. And Kathy Dahl, of Alternate Energy of Kentucky, Inc., described a number of techniques for reducing heat lost through windows and hot water systems, which she described as two of the most common sources of heat loss in homes.

NEKRCDA Meet Held at Thelma

The Northeast Kentucky Rural Community Development Association's quarterly board of directors meeting was held at the Thelma Community Center November 7.

Eight communities in this county are members of the NEKRCDA which was established to promote an improved quality of life in rural Northeastern Kentucky. One proposal considered by the group was adding a fourth category to the organization's program, the Service Organization Category. In this category almost any organization involved in public service and community development, other than community development clubs, associations, corporations and official units of government, would be eligible for recognition with the stipulation that they be located in towns of 5,000 or less population.

Attending from here were County Agent John Sparks, Everett Dotson, and Mrs. Otela S. Smiley.

Landscape Architecture Has Bright Future

By Paul Owens
UK Information Services
So you want to build a monument? A reminder that you once passed this way. Footprints on the sands of time.

Or paint a city scene, where once a building stood. Painted with the mighty brush of nature.

There are many reasons for wanting to become a landscape architect.

Then there's the very fact of partnership with Mother Nature herself.

The 1980-81 Occupational Outlook Handbook of the Bureau of Labor Statistics places the number of practicing landscape architects in the country today at 14,000. Also, the handbook states that the average annual openings in the field to 1990 will be 1,100.

Those 1,100 will be employed by landscape architectural design firms as well as agencies involved with resource management, planning and zoning, recreation planning and residential development. At least half will go to work for the U. S. Government, many of those with the Army Corps of Engineers and the U. S. Forestry Service. Many will work in engineering offices. More and more engineering firms are adding landscape architects to their staffs.

It is obvious that the world is reshaping itself. Cities move out to accommodate the demand for housing for a growing population. Such expansion must be done with a sensitivity for the land and the eco-systems it supports—it is the only way future generations will survive.

The rebuttal to concrete and pavement: Gardens built on rooftops; factories planned with existing trees incorporated into the landscape design; parking lots enhanced by trees, shrubs and earth forms.

The landscape architect must be ready to address these challenges with an expertise which is ever increasing and which demands new and creative solutions.

Where will they come from?

There are only 40 accredited landscape architectural programs in the U. S. Many of those have some form of enrollment restriction, adding to the challenge of becoming a landscape architect. The University of Kentucky, for example, admits only 25 students a year to its program.

Horst Schach, who heads the UK program, says 200 to 250 prospective students come in for interviews, then "70 or 80 show up for the examinations," and the number is finally scaled down to 25.

A series of aptitude tests are used as a gauge to predict potential success.

And before the interviews, before the tests, before anything, the prospective student must compose a letter of intent. Of the approximately 100 students in the four-year program at UK, about half are women.

Schach describes UK's four-year program as "one of the most demanding on campus. A student must have a tremendous amount of motivation to survive academically."

But if they survive, he adds, "they are eligible to enter a dynamic profession where every day holds a new excitement."

After graduating from an accredited college, and obtaining a professional license, a landscape architect can expect to receive an average beginning professional wage.

After a few years' experience, a salary of about $25,000 can be expected. Some landscape architects can expect incomes of $100,000 a year or better (about two percent earn this much). Licensing is required in 38 states, including Kentucky.

One practitioner recently was quoted in a national publication: "There is no better way to learn landscape architecture than by keenly observing nature."

Also, professionals agree that a practitioner would need acceptable speaking and writing skills since so much of the practice requires the "selling of its services to planning boards and others."

To earn a Bachelor of Science degree in Landscape Architecture requires a bit more than the average devotion to academics. At UK, for example, the student must have 132 credit hours with at least a 2.0 grade point standing. The four-year program consists of two pre-professional years followed by two years of professional training. The program at UK is fully accredited by the American Society of Landscape Architects.

In an informal setting these UK students are engrossed in a discussion of landscape architecture.

BOOK PUBLISHED
A book based on the tapestry made by the Kentucky Homemakers, depicting scenes and the history of the state's 120 counties, which was recently hung in the State Capitol, has been published. The title of the book is "A Labor of Love," and it may be purchased by calling the local Extension office before December 10. Mrs. Mary Sue Moore, a member of the Prestonsburg Day Homemakers' Club, furnished Floyd county's design for the plaque.

Local Bank To Offer Low-Interest Loans

The Bank Josephine has been named as one of 34 statewide lending institutions to receive 10.875 percent mortgage loan funds backed by the Kentucky Housing Corporation. The 10.875 percent interest rate is substantially lower than the current 13 and 14 percent interest rates that have pierced many borrowers out of the home-loan market in recent months. For example, a 13 percent $40,000 loan written for 25 years would carry a $451 monthly payment on principal and interest. A 10.875 percent loan of the same amount would cost $338. The program requires that all funds be committed before December 31 a spokesman for the bank said, early reports and customer inquiries indicate that all allocated funds will be used prior to that date. Applicants are urged to act now to insure availability.

VIEW OF WAYLAND, sometime in the early 1920's, shows a thriving coal community with neat rows of company houses, a large company store building, and, at extreme left, the foundation of a hotel-boarding house under construction at the time. At its height, Wayland was the most populace town in the county with more than 3,000 residents. (Photo provided by Mrs. Judy Music.)

Historical Society In Annual Meeting

Former Frankfort Mayor Frank Sower was elected president of the Kentucky Historical Society at the organization's annual meeting in Frankfort, Nov. 7.

Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, former Kentucky adjutant general, was elected first vice-president and James Ware, former state senator, was chosen second vice-president. James C. Thomas, president of Shakertown at Pleasant Hill, was elected third vice-president.

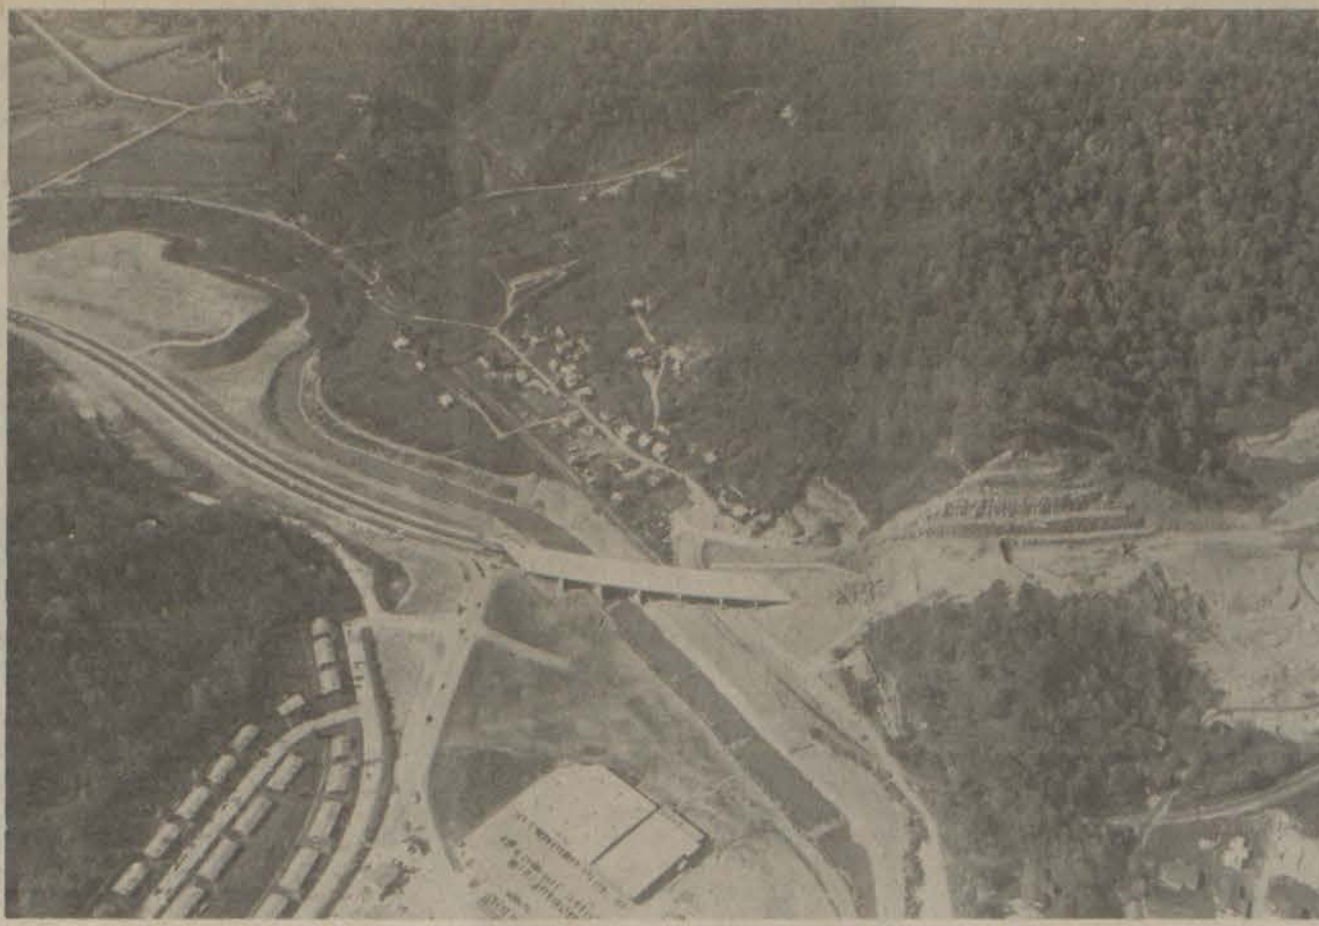

During its annual meeting, the historical society also honored two men who have devoted much of their life to Kentucky history. George Chinn and Dr. Hambleton Tapp received proclamations and awards from the group for continual dedication to Kentucky's historical heritage.

Chinn is deputy director of the society and served as its director from 1960-1973. He has written several books on Kentucky history and is recognized as an international authority on armaments.

Tapp, a past history professor and executive assistant to the president of the University of Kentucky, is general editor and historian for the Historical Society. He has also served as director of the Kentucky Life Museum at Waveland and has worked with numerous groups interested in Kentucky history.

In other business, society members were told that the Diary of Capt. John W. Tuttle could be ready for purchase by the end of November. Tuttle was a civil war soldier from Wayne County, Kentucky, and the publication is an account of his life from 1860-1866.

The Kentucky Historical Society was established in 1836 and has one of the largest memberships of any organization of its kind in the United States.

Broadway Routine Goes to Miami

By KENNY RICE
Eleven pretty girls from Allen Central High have this off-Broadway routine that they have been polishing up since a successful run at Morehead and now they are hoping it will be good enough to take them to Florida after they go to Miami this weekend. That's Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

The Allen Central cheerleaders are participating in the National Cheerleaders Tournament this Saturday (Nov. 22). It is a regional tourney this weekend that could lead to a chance for the national title later. The winner of this regional will automatically advance to Florida for the national finals. A squad that does not win the regional but is impressive in its routine could still be invited to the nationals.

Central's cheerleaders are the first Floyd county group to be invited to the competition. They earned the invitation after winning the pom pom routine at the Universal Cheerleading Association camp held on the Morehead State campus this summer.

The routine the girls used at Morehead will be the one they will display at Miami U. They have trimmed it down a bit to fit the three-minute time limit for their combined cheer and pom pom exhibit.

This pom pom-dance routine comes via Broadway to Allen Central. When cheerleaders Lynn Collins and Myra Martin went with the Central Beta club to New York City last spring, one of the places they visited was Broadway to watch a play. The play they saw was Neil Simon's "They're Playing Our Song."

Very impressed with a stylish dance number in the play, Lynn, Myra and former cheerleader Lisa Spradlin made mental notes and upon their return to Floyd county relayed the dance number to the cheerleaders who did not make the excursion.

Since late September, the girls have been putting the final touches on this routine in the Allen Central gym at Eastern, which is very off-Broadway. For two hours a day, four days a week, they have been preparing for the upcoming cheerleading season and devoting time to the competition at Miami.

Lorena Hall, their sponsor, and Lynn, Myra, Kathy King, Sheila Duff, Carla Hayes, Jodi Hayes, Denise Bush, Mary Click, Angel Lazar, Valerie Hughes and Angie Osborne will make the trek to Oxford this Friday. On Saturday morning, they will attend a cheerleading clinic with squads from this state, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and possibly a few others.

Saturday afternoon, the girls will put on some music from "They're Playing Our Song" and will perform a routine that has been a smash hit in Eastern and Morehead.

Here's hoping it will continue to bring raves in Miami. That's Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. And best wishes on going all the way to the nationals in Florida. That's Florida as in sunshine and pretty girls.

DISTRICT OUTLOOK

The majority of 15th Region coaches, including those in 58th district, label Allen Central on overwhelming favorite among the girls with McDowell and Betsy Layne vying for the second spot. Most coaches feel Prestonsburg and Wheelwright are still a year away from making a serious threat to advance to the regional tourney.

HOSPITAL PATIENTS

Among the local persons who are patients at the Highlands Regional Medical Center are Mrs. Sally Goebel, Mrs. Ethel Heinze, Mrs. Olga Latta, Mrs. Alice Ball, Graham Porter, Sherman Prater and Willard (Goat) Burchett. The Real Tournament Winners

The Allen Central Rebelettes

The Times recently made a grievous error when it reproduced a picture of the Betsy Layne girls' team and listed them as winners of the Betsy Layne Invitational. The fact is, the Allen Central Lady Rebels won the tournament, defeating Betsy Layne, 32 to 30.

William Tussey, of Middle Creek Road, took this record eight-point buck while hunting in Lawrence county, November 8. It field dressed 225 pounds.

15th Region Basketball Preview

By KENNY RICE Here's a look at the other three districts in the 15th Region as the high school basketball season gets ready to open. In the 57th District, Johnson Central will improve on their 16-14 record a season back. Alvin Ratliff moves into his second year of directing the Golden Eagles. He has Tim Branham (5'10, sr.) returning. Branham has started in each of his four high school seasons, his first at Allen Central. He averaged 28 points per contest last year and is close to becoming the all-time leading scorer at Johnson Central by the first of the year. He has help with two other starters from last year, Gary LeMaster (6'2, sr.) and Dickie Crum (6'1, jr.), improved from '80. LeMaster grabbed 10 rebounds and tossed in 13 points a game last season, and Crum hit a 14-point an outing clip. A jayvee team with four over 6'4 will be an asset. Johnson Central was disappointing in their regional tourney loss to Elkhorn City last season. They have the talent to win their district for a third straight season, and they have a good shot at winning it all. Paul Williams is in his third season at Paintsville. he has brought enthusiasm to a school that did not know a sport where the ball could be bounced was worth participating in. He has four seniors, Darrell Pugh (6'2), Mark Baldwin (5'10), Jim Dials (6'2) and Eric Charles (6'4), he is counting on for leadership and scoring punch. Pugh and Baldwin combined for an average of 31 points per game last season. Dials and Charles bring strength underneath. Sophomore Scott Daniel (6'3) and Tony Mayes (6'1) could crank the starting five. They will be top reserves for certain. Sheldon Clark and Magoffin County will tangle for third place in the 57th. Sheldon Clark gets the nod for that spot at this stage. In the 59th District, the regional favorite Virgie continues its dominance. Coach Bobby Osborne has four starters back from a 26-6 club that reached the regional finals. Todd May (6'8, jr.) and Rodney Rowe (5'7, sr.) totaled 41 points a contest last season. They will probably equal that this season. May also grabbed 16 rebounds a game last year and Rowe handed out 12. That's right, 12 assists each game. Byron Johnson (6'2, sr.) and Greg Napier (6'3, jr.) combined for 14 points and 18 rebounds per game as the starting forwards last season. Osborne's biggest problem is getting a guard opposite Rowe. He has the region's second best jayvee a year ago, behind only Betsy Layne, to select from. If there is a sure thing in sports, Virgie is to win the district again. They will be the team to beat in the other tourney that always follows the district.

Danny Adams, Pikeville's second year coach, has six key players returning from a 10-19 squad. The Panthers should top those 10 wins, although with most of the team playing football they will start slow. Seniors Steve Prater (6'10), Mark Littrell (6'3), Bob Shurtleff (6'3) and Jimmy Branham (5'9) combined for 33 points a game last season. Juniors John Venters (6'1) and Gale Taylor (5'7) combined for 13 points a game. A nine-point average led the team in scoring. They need to come up with at least someone who can hit the double figures consistently. They have a good chance of making the regional, if they can stay out of Virgie's bracket. But then, the other three teams in the 59th feel the same way. The Panthers are number two for now. In the 60th District, Tommy Runyon's Belfry club set a school with their third consecutive district title. They should make it four in a row with seniors Gary Smith (6'2, 21.6 ppg) and Brian Marcum (6'1, 16.4 ppg) back in the starting lineup. Jimmy Bevins (5'11, sr.) dished out 11 assists per game last season, and he is the third starter back from a 23-7 team. Troy Rutherford (6'3, sr.) has been a fine part-time starter for two seasons. He is ready to become a fine full-time starter. Ken Blackburn (6'4, so.) is getting better with playing time and could help by mid-season. Johns Creek and Elkhorn City will play for second place in the 60th. It's too close to call. For the girls in the 57th, Sheldon Clark goes after their seventh consecutive district title. They should get it rather easily. Lori Mills (5'5, so.) and Angela Fields (5'6, jr.) return to Don Ward's backcourt. They totaled 22 points a game last season and that will probably improve. Pam Evans (5'11, sr.) gets help on the front line from Betty Crum (5'9, so.) and Jessica Sizemore (6'1, so.) Martha Goble (5'7, jr.) will play forward and guard. The Lady Cards have five players 5'9 or taller. Johnson Central has a fine player in Karen Pelphey (6', jr.) who averaged 24 points and 12 rebounds. They are one of the six best teams in the region but they are number two in their district. In the 59th, Pikeville will have their string of two regional titles terminated. They were hit hard by graduation and will find the going tough in their district with Virgie and Collette Jarrell (6', sr.). Millard could also figure in the district race but this is the weakest of the region's districts this time. In the 60th, Belfry has Janice Twoles (5'9, sr.) who scored at a 20 ppg clip last season and collected 10 rebounds a game. Tammy Dearfield (5'10, sr.) scored 15 ppg. Two other starters return for Paul Dotson. Seniors Pam Scott (5'5) and Terry Blackburn (5'7) combined for 15 points per game. Belfry can go five deep on their bench and be effective. They will contend with Allen Central and Sheldon Clark for the regional crown. The Francisco sisters, Carmella (5'10, sr.) and Melanie (5'8, so.) totaled 34 points and 20 rebounds for Feds Creek last season. They make Feds Creek the second best club in the 60th and a sleeper in the regional.

McDowell Boys, AC Girls Win Pre-Season Tourney

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON The McDowell Daredevils won the annual Floyd County Pre-Season Tournament for boys by defeating the Allen Central Rebels, 57 to 55, in an overtime, and the Allen Central Rebelettes won the Pre-Season Tournament for girls by downing the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats, 70 to 40. Coach David Turner's Daredevils moved into the championship game by defeating the Betsy Layne Bobcats, 57 to 49. The Bobcats led for three quarters but the Daredevils rallied and won. Chester Newsome took scoring honors for both teams by firing in 20 points, Roger Moore had 14 points and Stuart Osborn connected for 13 points. Jimmy Turner had a good night on the boards and scored 4 points. Sophomore Dwight Newsome led the Bobcat attack with 16 points, and Dwayne Lykins had 14. The Bobcats, now 1 and 1, are in the rebuilding stage, losing 10 players from last year's regional championship team, but the future looks good for Coach Wm. Newsome, Jr. and the Bobcats.

The Allen Central Rebels reached into the championship game by defeating the Wheelwright Trojans, Wednesday night 65 to 64. Coach John Martin's Rebels were led in scoring by their two big men, Randy Conley with 20 points and Bruce Mullins with 18. Coach Danny Johnson's Trojans were led in scoring by Mark Curry with 20 points, David Tackett with 15 and Gilford with 12. Freshman Gerald Osborne picked up 8 points but fouled out in the third quarter. The Rebels disposed of the Prestonsburg Blackcats, 65 to 39. Randy Conley missed the game due to an injury, but teammate Bruce Mullins controlled the boards and racked up 21 points. Ted Nairn led the Blackcat attack with 8 points in a game in which both coaches played their entire rosters. In the boys championship game the Daredevils rallied in the fourth quarter after trailing by 8 points. The Daredevils caught up and went out in front by 5 points only to have the game tied at 51 all on a shot by Randy Conley in the overtime. Each team scored two baskets and with 18 seconds remaining in the game Pete Grigsby on the give and go scored the winning basket and gave McDowell the championship game, 57 to 55. Hugo Miller, McDowell High School Principal, presented the trophies. First place cheerleaders' trophy went to the Prestonsburg High School Blackcats; the second place trophy, to Betsy Layne High School. The team free-shot trophy was awarded Betsy Layne High School. The individual free-shot trophy was won by Randy Conley, of Allen Central, with 8 for 8. The sportsmanship trophy was won by Wheelwright High School. The Allen Central Rebelettes reached the fifth game by winning over the Wheelwright Lady Trojans, 80 to 40, and on Friday night Coach Judy Eversole and the Rebelettes won over the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats by a score of 65 to 39. The Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats moved to the championship game by defeating the McDowell Daredevilles, 71 to 39. Lila Layne led the attack with 15 points while teammates Shelia Johnson had 14, Lecia Mulkey 12 and Cassandra Keathley 10. McDowell was led by Melinda Hopkins with 16 points. In the championship game, the Allen Central Rebelettes rolled to their eighth straight win and their second championship game by defeating the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats by a score of 70 to 40. Two weeks ago, Allen Central won the Betsy Layne Invitational by defeating Betsy Layne, 32 to 30, on a last-second shot by Kristi Frye. In the pre-season tournament, the Rebelettes were led by Jolenda Howard with 17 points, Trena Hensley connected for 13. Kim Shepherd and Ramona Hall each had 10 points. Lila Layne led the Lady Bobcats with 13 points, and Brenna Reynolds had 8 points. Cheerleaders' first place trophy was awarded to Prestonsburg; second place, to Allen Central, the sportsmanship trophy was awarded to Prestonsburg. The team free-shot trophy was won by Allen Central, individual free-shot trophy went to Kim Shepherd, of Allen Central.

The Annual Jenny Wiley Invitational Tournament will get under way tonight (Wednesday) at the Prestonsburg Field House. Bert Layne is tournament manager. Tonight (Wednesday) at 7 the Wheelwright Trojans will go against the Elkhorn City Cougars. At 8:30, the Magoffin County Hornets will battle the host team, the Prestonsburg Blackcats. Thursday at 7 p.m. the Belfry-Pirates will go against the Betsy Layne Bobcats at 8:30 p.m. For the third time in less than two weeks, the Allen Central Rebels will battle the McDowell Daredevils. Semi-finals will be played Friday night, consolation and championship games are set for Saturday night at 7 and 8:30.

Girls' Basketball The Allen Central Rebelettes picked up their 10th win Monday night by defeating Fleming-Neon, 58 to 48. Scoring for Allen Central were Kim Shepherd 18, Trena Hensley 10, Kristi Frye 10, Jolenda Howard 9, Della Scarberry 7, and Lisa Green with 2. Scoring for Fleming-Neon were McBee 14, Hall 10, Allen 7, Bland 4, Johnson 4, and Abbott with 2. Monday night, the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats hosted the Magoffin Co. Hornets and lost, 45 to 27. The Lady Blackcats were leading at halftime, 25 to 23, but scored only two points in the second half of play, while the Lady Hornets scored 28 points. Also on Monday night, the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats hosted the Sheldon Clark Lady Cardinals and lost, 74 to 69. Serious hi-fi for normal people.

FINANCING AVAILABLE

For years hi-fi has been geared for a special kind of person. A person who was willing to learn the foreign language of electronics and also to keep up with the hundreds of brand names. A person who was thrilled by the complexity of it all. If you didn't want the complications you didn't get involved. Simple as that. Pioneer, the leading maker of high fidelity components in America, has just changed all that. They've created a system anyone can both understand and love: Syscom. Syscom is a complete high fidelity component system put together by Pioneer engineers. Not by you.

So you can't make a mistake. Syscom includes everything. The amplifier, tuner, turntable, tape deck, speakers. It even comes with a specially designed cabinet. So it looks every bit as good as it sounds. And it sounds better than just about anything you've ever heard. Syscom is easy enough for even the least mechanical of us to operate. Do you know the difference between off and on? You know enough. There are five Syscom groups to choose from. Each was made to fit a different lifestyle and a different budget. Shopping for Syscom isn't even complicated. Because Pioneer has made it available at select stores. And we're proud to say we're the store in your area.

SYSCOM by PIONEER
Serious hi-fi. Finally made simple.
