Shot, Dust Are Blamed For Blast

Conclusion After Inquiry Confirms Views of Stanley

The misfire of one of a series of charges detonated to blast the working face of coal ignited coal dust that was in suspension after previous blasting by the morning shift and resulted in the explosion which killed eight employees of the Adkins Coal Company Mine No. 16 at Topmost, Knott county, the after-

This was the conclusion reached by the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals after a two-day formal inquiry into the disaster had ended last Wednesday. It agreed with preliminary conclusions reached by Commissioner Willard Stanley, of the Department of Mines and Minerals, which also had been corroborated in substance by James Boyd, a UMW safety official.

What happened, it was held, is known in miners' parlance as "a shootout." The sixth in a series of seven charges failed to go off, causing the last misfire, and directed the blast into the working area of the mine instead of the face of the coal. Coal dust in suspension after earlier shooting by another work shift then ignited.

The resultant explosion hurled debris 280 feet from the mouth of the mine and killed all eight men inside the mine at the time

Findings relating to the explosion came during the hearing held at the Coal Building at Martin. Repr at the inquiry, in addition to the state agency, were the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration, the U.S. Department of Labor and Incoal, Inc., parent firm of the Adkins Coal Com-

Robert Craft, Sr., 64, of West Prestonsburg, was returned to jail by order of Circuit Court Judge Hollie Conley last Friday,

Craft was sentenced in March last year to a 10-year pen term for the 1979 shooting of Prestonsburg Police Chief Keith Lawson. He had been released some months for medical treatment, however, when he was arrested on li-

State Claims Old City Debt

Offsets Grant

With the $60,000 racketball court at Archer Park near completion, the state will apparently renege on its commitment to put up half the funds for the projet.

The reason, according to a state official, is that Prestonsburg already owes the state more than $63,000-a debt dating back to construction of the city park some 12 years ago. In a recent letter to Mayor Harold W.

Cooley, Andrew "Skipper" Martin, commissioner of the state Department of Community and Regional Development, said an audit showed that construction work done at the park in 1969 by Holbrook Construction, of West Prestonsburg, and Whitten Construction, of Paintsville, was not awarded through competitive bid procedures as

As a result, a $63,239 grant awarded for the work will have to be paid back to the state, Martin said.

Martin noted that part of the debt could be defrayed by deducting it from a current state grant of $30,000, awarded for construction of the racketball

City Manager David Evans this week characterized the state action as a low blow. "It puts the city in a very bad spot," he said. "On the one hand, they award us a grant and, on the other, they tell us they're not goin to give us the money. How can that be ethical?"

In a reply to Martin last week, Mayor Cooley noted that, since commitment of the racketball court grant, the city had awarded a bid for the work in good faith and that the contractor now needs

The city does not concede that there was anything irregular about the awarding of contracts for the Archer Park construction, Cooley noted. If mistakes were made, he added, they should have been pointed out at that time and not

Calls ARC a "Disaster"

As Aid Programs Are Mourned, Author Questions Their Value

Modernizing the Mountaineer: People, Power, and Planning in Appalachia, by David E. Whisnant, 296 pp. Boone, N.C.: Appalachian Consortium Press, 1980. $8.95, paper.

There is some irony in the fact that just as many people around here are lamenting the phase-out of federal aid programs like the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC), a book should arrive depicting that agency as "a nearly unmitigated disaster in every respect." (xxi)

To compound the irony, the "trickledown' thinking (called supply-side economics these days) now used by President Reagan's economic strategists to justify preferential treatment for corporations and to jettison aid programs like the ARC is precisely the philosophy that has guided ARC planners themselves for the past 15 years, according to the book's author.

In fact, he argues, critical choices made repeatedly by individuals, church organizations, and government agencies bent on fostering the development of Appalachia reveal that, for the most part, the would-be-helpers have acted in the interests of corporate interests in the belief, implicit or explicit, that this was the most effective means to benefit the people of the

Missionaries have preached an individualistic piety innocent of social analysis; aid has supported socialservice-type projects rather than efforts to change the region's political and economic structures; and the central issue-public control of Appalachia's natural resources-has never gotten a hearing on account of opposition from those who have traditionally exploited those resources, it is

In Modernizing the Mountaineer. David E. Whisnant-the book gives few clues as to his identity-records the endeavors in this region of the Southern Mountain Workers' Conference (later the Council of the Southern Mountains), publishers of Mountain Life and Work, and of four federal agencies-the Tennessee Valley Authority (from 1933 on), the Area Redevelopment Administration (1961-'63), the Office of Economic Opportunity (1964-'68), and the Appalachian Regional Commission (from

A number of activities that arose in opposition to federal planning efforts-including the Appalachian Volunteers, the Congress for Appalachian Development, and local resistance to the Kentucky River Area Development District-also receive at-

Among the citizens' associations formed by Appalachian Volunteers in the late sixties mention is made of Mud Creek's Highway 979 Association. which "organized a water district, operated a community printing company, and published a newspaper (The Hawkeye) so outspoken in its criticism of the local establishment that it was eventually burned out." (196)

Reference is made, too, to the more militant Eastern Kentucky Welfare Rights Organization-also active on Mud Creek-bent on bolder political action than what had come to be called the "bandaid" approach of earlier efforts at economic development and community organizing.

Militant activism-and local reaction to it-peaked here around 1967. One incident recorded here that readers in this section will recall was the arrest of several activists in Pike county that year on charges of sedition, amid charges spread by a number of coal operators and county officials that the young activists were Communists.

Whisnant at least credits the activists with bringing a critical social analysis to their work among the mountaineers. They could see that "the system" is wrong-corporations exploit the area's resources; local government is beholden to the dominant financial and political interests; and, as a result, social services such as housing, transportation, health care and education have deteriorated-and the system would need to be changed if the area's social ills were to be

Most of the cooperatives and community organizations established by the Appalachian Volunteers proved to be short-lived. And, despite the activists' efforts to involve the ordinary people in political decision-making, local political machines generally remained intact. To their credit, though, much of the ire of established interests was focused on the community organizers precisely because they were getting at the roots of the problems they saw

The same could hardly be said, Whisnant argues, of the more established aid programs. While the OEO-funded CAP agencies occasionally urged people at the grassroots to challenge local power structures, they were more commonly controlled by the courthouse cliques. And the ARC he dismisses as "conventional, businessoriented, status quo, porkbarrel politics masquerading as 'creative federalism." (xxi)

While the agency busied itself building roads and vocational schools to serve business and industry, paid doctors to build themselves new hospitals, and encouraged marginal tourist development, the ARC was generally impotent to address the area's most critical needs-its high unemployment, lack of high-grade industries, absentee corporate ownership of the land, environmental damage, lack of essential services, and outmigration.

How could it have been otherwise when even the "helpers" were typically well removed-by geography, class, background and education-from the people they were trying to help? They came with the paternalistic confidence of those who know what is best for the people, with the expectations of the urban middle classes, and with an American faith in free enterprise. Woefully but predictably, they missed the point

So what is the point? It is that the only development of Appalachia worth anything to the people who live in the region is the development they choose and are able to implement because they have regained control of the region's resources.

Development so defined raises formidable questions, even if one accepts that it is the only development worth having. Traditional sources of capital are not likely to fund for long enterprises that threaten to change the rules by which they have prospered; few skilled outsiders seem to have mastered the art of making their skills available in a way which is not manipulative of the people's aspirations; and "the people" may, in any case, be unable to speak with one

Modernizing the Mountaineer is a history of failure and-even more depressing-it is not easy to see how that history could have turned out differently. If one accepts, as Whisnant argues, that Appalachia has long served as an "internal colony" within the larger American economy, the problems encountered here are the classic problems of development among colonized peoples.

It has never proven easy, in such a context, to steer the course of intentional social change safely between impotent reformism, on the one hand, and manipulative social engineering on

Development efforts in Appalachia, in Whisnant's analysis, have generally fallen into the former trap but, even where activists sought sincerely to demonstrate that the poor can act responsibly on their own behalf, he notes, "the irony of acting responsibly on one's own behalf under someone else's direction did not become clear until later." (192)

The voice that commonly guides social analysis in these pages is that of Whitesburg author Harry Caudill, especially in his insistence that popular control of the area's natural resources is critical to a resolution of its problems.

Until there are clearer signs that ordinary Appalachians are ready to organize to negotiate a better deal from the corporations that have traditionally exploited them. Modernizing the Mountaineer leaves one with little reason to hope that the situation here will improve much. In the meantime. one might conclude, the withdrawal of federal aid from this area will not be much of a loss.

Whisnant's is a provocative analysis well-researched and written, which raises the critical questions facing those who would see Appalachia developed in the interests of its people. For all that, the Reagan administration's final surrender in the war on poverty appears likely to cause suffering here that should not be casually overlooked.

Apart from reductions in direct aid to the poor through cuts in welfare programs, at least two agencies here which are linear descendants of the 1960's war on poverty-the Mud Creek Clinic and the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund-are likely victims of Reaganomics. Long since domesticated by time and political exigencies, both agencies have nevertheless served poor people in ways that established medical and legal institutions were unable or unwilling to do.

The water systems and even the highways funded by agencies like ARC, moreover, have arguably contributed more to the quality of life in Appalachia than Whisnant gives them credit for.

True, this is not the stuff of radical social change-and that is the author's point-but it will be missed nonetheless.

That discrepancy will be the basis of an appeal, defense attorney Gary Johnson indicated after the trial. As Wright's divorce attorney, Patton had no right to participate in the murder investigation, said Johnson, who intimated that Wright's confidence in Patton may have figured in his altering his account of the shooting.

Patton testified he was not aware his client was subject of the investigation until he arrived on the scene and had subsequently played only an incidental role in the investigation.

Among the witnesses called by prosecuting attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. were two of Wright's teenage daughters, Karen, 16, and Elberta Jane, 14, both of them whom were in the house at the time of the shooting. Karen said she saw Wright shoot her mother and that her mother was unarmed at the time.

In his own defense, Wright said he had suffered repeated assaults at the hands of his wife almost since the beginning of their marriage as teenagers. She had frequently hit him with bottles, once struck him on the head with a hatchet, had kicked him in the abdomen, rupturing a surgical incision, had thrown a hammer at him, and threatened his life, he testified.

He kept a gun by his side for his protection, he said. On the day of his wife's return home in January, the couple "made up" and Wright decided to drop his divorce suit. However, his wife made fun of him, Wright said and, in the course of a bedroom altercation, threatened to

"knock his brains out. He pocketed his revolver and followed her to the kitchen-out of fear for his life, he said-where she allegedly raised a pop bottle above her head and said, "Goddam you. I'm going to kill

Wright said he remembered drawing the revolver but had no recollection of firing the shot that killed his wife.

Cross-examined by the prosecutor, Wright acknowledged assaulting his wife on various occasions, once blackening her eyes, and conceded that, prior to the shooting, he could have barricaded himself in the bedroom, left the house, or protected himself with less than deadly force, but said he "wasn't thinking" of those alternatives at the time

Dr. Bruce Albert, a psychologist employed by the Lansdowne Mental Health Center in Ashland, testified he had examined Wright and found him to be a passive and dependent personality, with many of the characteristics of a battered spouse. Wright would likely have been fearful as a result of his wife's threats, Albert said.

A sixth-grade dropout, Wright worked as a miner until he was disabled by a mine accident some years ago. He once served briefly as a deputy sheriff in this county and was a preacher for six or seven years—until he heeded the biblical admonition that "if a man cannot rule his own house he cannot rule the church of God"-he said.

He remarried in July this year and. prior to his conviction last week, lived in Virginia.

Sturgill To Resign State Cabinet Post

William B. Sturgill, the former Prestonsburg man who has occupied more influential positions in the Brown administration than any other individual, will resign as secretary of the Energy and Agriculture Cabinet with the end of the year next Thursday.

His intention to resign was stated in a letter to Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr. He pointed out that "my commitment for participation in your administration was for a period of two years. I have now fulfilled that commitment, and the time has arrived when I must take leave of my duties ... and return to the task of seeing about my own affairs."

Mentioned as a possible candidate for governor, Sturgill was asked about this possibility after his letter of resignation had been released. He replied that he had "no immediate plans to seek public office. I think we have a lot more immediate problems than who is going to run for governor. We'll have plenty of time to address that letter.

Governor Brown said, after releas ing contents of the resignation letter. "We're going to miss Bill, but not that much, because I expect him to be very active in the next two years.

The 56-year-old Sturgill will continue to be chairman of the state Coal Policy Council, the Kentucky State Racing Commission, the Kentucky Council on Agriculture, the Kentucky Export Resource Authority and the board of trustees of the University of Kentucky

He said he has suggested that his deputy secretary, David Drake, be named to succeed him in the cabinet

The former Floyd countian-a son of Mrs. Dorothy Sturgill, of Prestonsburg, and the late Troy B. Sturgill-was a sensational success in the coal mining business, mainly in Perry county, and has acquired interests in banking, tobacco warehousing and real estate. When he became secretary of the Energy and Agriculture Cabinet he sold his last coal mining company, Golden Oak

The state has indicated it will not reimburse the city for the $13,000 or for any forthcoming bills on the racketball court project.

Bids for the construction of the park were awarded while Dr. George P. Archer was mayor. According to City Manager Evans, an employee of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation-the state office handling the original construction grant-is prepared to swear that bidding for the work was completely regular.

In the absence of written documentation, however, it is thought the state will not likely be persuaded by the

Speed Bumps Not Approved, Officials Told

Speed bumps can be dangerous and should not be used on public streets. A city installing them can expect to be held liable if they cause an accident. And the state Department of Transportation has no intention of permitting them.

That was the response of Transportation Secretary Frank R. Metts to a recent request by Prestonsburg Mayor Harold Cooley for an administrative regulation that would permit use of the controversial traffic control devices

Residents of Central Avenue, concerned about speeding on that thoroughfare, requested some months ago that the transportation department be asked to approve of the devices. Installed on several city streets earlier, the speed bumps generated some heated arguments among residents and were subsequently found to be illegal, according to an attorney-general's opinion. In his reply to Mayor Cooley, Secretary Metts cited a report commissioned by the city of San Jose, California, to the effect that speed bumps tested were not effective in reducing vehicle speeds; they present an immediate hazard to bicycles and motorcycles and a potential hazard to other vehicles; it is impossible to design an effective speed bump for all vehicles; and they could cause noise pollution in residential neighborhoods.

Metts also attached a Connecticut Superior Court judge's ruling that speed bumps are inherently dangerous.

'The only viable alternative and effective method of reducing speed is increased enforcement," Metts wrote. "A large number of our motorists will reduce speed only if there is a known possibility that they will be caught and fined should they violate the prevailing speed limits," he added.

Offices To Close

Tax Amendment Aids Disabled Persons

The Kentucky Department of Revenue has issued guidelines to all property valuation administrators pertaining to the implementation of the recently approved constitutional amendment allowing qualified disabled persons an exemption from property tax of a portion of the value of their residence

Basically, this amendment extended the current homestead exemption, now a maximum of $12,900, to totally disabled persons, effective for the 1981 tax period.

To qualify for this exemption, certain conditions must be met. These are,

-The applicant must own and live in the residence for which the exemption is sought.

-The applicant must have been classified as totally disabled under a program administered or authorized by an agency of the federal government or the railroad retirement system for the entire tax period (Jan. 1, 1981, to the present)

-The applicant must have received benefits as a result of such classification for the entire tax period (Jan. 1, 1981, to the present).

-An application for this exemption nust be made with the appropriate county property valuation administrator by Dec. 31, 1981. (Offices are in each county courthouse.)

Before an application can be approved by a property valuation administrator, the applicant will need to provide documentation from the agency issuing the classification to verify the disability claim as well as receipt of benefits and the time period that such a classification has been in effect.

Individuals should contact their local property valuation administrator to acquire the proper applications in time to receive the exemption for the current period. Applications will have to be filed annually to continue to receive the exemption

Only one exemption will be allowed per residence. Therefore, regardless of the number of qualified owners of a home, totally disabled or over 65 years of age, $12,900 is the maximum value which can be exempted from property

Many persons have already received tax bills for 1981 and may have made payment. They will be eligible for a refund of taxes paid if an application is properly made and approved up to the amount of taxes paid on the exempted

To receive this refund, the taxpayer should provide a copy of the paid tax bill to the property valuation administrator when applying for this exemption and ask for assistance in taking the steps necessary.

New Catalog Said To Be Consumer Aid

In these days of tight money, being a smart shopper and getting full value for your dollar is more important than ever.

A major aid in furthering your consumer education could be the new Kentucky Consumer Catalog now available from the office of Attorney General Steve Beshear.

In the new catalog, state and federal laws are translated into everyday laymen's language. The catalog tells how to deal with or totally avoid consumer problems.

It covers hundreds of topics such as advertising guidelines, credit rights, insurance shooping, small claims court and automobile dispute resolution programs.

About 2,000 copies of the Kentucky Consumer Catalog are being sent free to high schools, public libraries, universities and agencies dealing directly with consumers such as county extension services.

Individuals may obtain the catalog for $3.50 (which covers printing and postage costs) by calling the attorney general's toll-free consumer hotline, 1-800-432-9257, weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. or by writing the Consumer Protection Division, Office of the Attorney General, 209 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Beshear made the announcement concerning the new consumer catalog during a press conference this week. He said the topics for the publication were chosen in response to complaints received by his consumer protection division.

Production and personnel costs were funded by a grant from the U.S. Office of Consumers' Education. The attorney general's office paid printing costs printing costs.

Also during the press conference, Attorney General Beshear drew attention to two executive orders recently signed by Gov. John Y.

Gov. Brown proclaimed Dec. 13-19 Consumer Education Week in Kentucky. In a separate order, the governor appointed Edward F. Hessel Jr. of Louisville and Dr. Joseph Liebman of Frankfort to the Consumers' Advisory Council for terms ending Sept. 8, 1982.

Hessel, who is with the Louisville Better Business Bureau, replaces Dr. Charlotte Bennett of Morehead. Dr. Liebman replaces Oren Doyle of Glasgow

In addition, Gov. Brown reappointed 14 members to the advisory council, also for terms ending Sept. 8, 1982.

Reappointed members are: Ruth Baxter of Carrollton; Cheri R. Bryant, C' Allen Chauvin and Nelle T. Horlander, all of Louisville; John Hinkle of Paris; Pat Kafoglis of Bowling Green; Nancy Spann Kelly of Owensboro; Robert Newberry of Frankfort: Lloyd Painter of Greenville; Peggy Paxton of Paducah; Carol Spotts of Lexington; Mary Summe of Fort Mitchell; Joe Terry of Madisonville and Sue Warmath of Mayfield.

Pike-Based Trooper Cited For Bravery

A Pikeville-based Kentucky state policeman was decorated in formal ceremonies at Frankfort, Friday by Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. for extraordinary courage in connection with an incident that occurred last July 16 in Pike county.

Trooper Darrell Tolson, who joined the state police only two years ago, was awarded the Kentucky State Police Medal for Bravery for disarming a robbery suspect who opened fire on him after allegedly holding up a hardware store at Phyllis and shooting and wounding a 16-year-old youth.

The shooting of the youth occurred when, following the robbery, the suspect took up a position on KY 194 near Phyllis and began firing randomly at passing vehicles without any apparent reason

According to the citation accompanying the award, when Tolson reached the scene where the random firing had been reported, he suddenly was confronted by the suspect who, armed with a revolver in one hand and a rifle in the other, immediately moved on the officer, firing at him as he walked.

"Despite the clear and present danger to his own life," the citation read, "Tolson refrained from returning that fire until his shouted order to surrender was ignored. Then and only then did Tolson return his assailant's fire, wounding the man and enabling him with the assistance of passersby to disarm the suspect and take him into custody.

The citation concluded by stating that "Trooper Tolson's actions while under fire, specifically his refusal to fire in self-defense until he had attempted to secure his assailant's surrender...demonstrated a concern for human life and a capacity for cool judgement and extraordinary courage that reflects the greatest credit both upon himself and the Bureau of the Kentucky State Police.'

Tolson is a native of West Liberty and a 1970 graduate of Wolfe County High School. Prior to joining the state police, he served with the U.S. Marine Corps in Vietnam.

He entered the business with his father after leaving college and took over the active management in 1955. He has served as president of the Kentucky LP-Gas Association for two terms and is currently a member of the Association's board of directors.

He is married to the former Carlos E. Horn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl R. Horn, of Prestonsburg, and they have one son, Charles Britton, who is a student at Georgetown College. Georgetown, Kentucky.

Old Christmas Scheduled, January 3

A scene from one of the early observances of Old Christmas, sometime in the 1930's, shows Bill Marshall, of Prestonsburg, demonstrating a sword dance he learned from Jasper Fitzpatrick, father of Edith James. Mrs. James and husband, the late Tom James, are pictured at right. Also shown are Mrs. Birdie Holbrook, and the late Theodore Holbrook and four of their children, one of whom holds a simple banjo fashioned from an old powder box. This year's observance of the old custom which was revived by Mrs. James during the '30's as part of a W.P.A. project, will be held January 3, the Sunday before the January 6 calendar date of Old Christmas. Traditional music and dance, storytelling, the wassail bowl and a variety of other old-fashioned refreshments will be a part of the observance which is officially a part of the Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival.

The program will begin at 2 p.m. and Katherine Frazier, director, and Mrs. James, founder of the folk festival, invite the public to attend.

Says Rights Violated

I'm disabled, live on a small fixed income in a very small mobile home on Town Branch. I was lying on my couch Saturday, Dec. 12, at approximately 11 a.m. when three Floyd county deputy sheriffs broke into my back door. The front door was open. If they'd knocked, I would have let them in

They waved a little piece of white paper under my nose and said they had search warrant for this mobile home. I asked them why. They wouldn't tell me. I said, "Is it for Ollie Campbell?" They said, "No". I said, "Well, this is my trailer. I've lived here for 6 years." Two deputies were already searching through my bedroom drawers when the third one brought the piece of paper through. They never would tell me why-they just went through everything in my home.

Later, I went to the Sheriffs' office to see what the search warrant was for Sam Hale refused to tell me anything. He said, "You'll have to see the judge Monday morning.

I have never sold any alcoholic beverages or stored any in my home. I can prove this by my neighbors.

I request that the good citizens of Floyd county support me in this misuse of justice so that we can prevent it from happening to another American citizen. I could see this happening in a Communist country, but in America we are supposed to have some rights and privileges. They just can't break into a man's home and not even read him or let him look at a search war rant. We don't have many rights left-don't let them take away the few remaining privileges that we have.

Cut Profits, Not Poor

As the continuing saga of federal and state cutbacks on social programs goes, it looks as if our governments sure are getting impersonal

Unfortunately, we seem to have lost a sense of responsibility as a collective nation of men and women-maybe we have just been too caught up in seeking those things that benefit us individually. I believe that we have lost the importance of sharing the resources available to us in a meaningful way.

I guess what I'm trying to say is that with the cutbacks, our federal and state governments have decided to take monies from very needy families, who were already struggling, and try to save some money. Well, I just can't see how much good it will do to take food from the table and clothes off childrens' backs while we continue to support space programs and military spending at exorbitant levels.

Some might think that taking just a few dollars from a public assistance recipient would not mean much to them. The truth of the matter is that they were never funded at an adequate level in the first place

At the same time that we cut poor folks, we allow AT&T to continue their monopoly and we let these large land and coal companies reap huge profits-leaving little but crumbs in the communities in which they work.

I think that it is high time that we stand up for these matters before they create an irreversible situation, I encourage everyone to write to their legislators and to become active in local community groups concerned with these issues

Please do it today. Tomorrow may be too late JANICE BERGER Box 253 Melvin, KY 41650

A Whiff Of Roses

C & H Rauch has grown in the last 10 years from one store in Lexington to Kentucky's largest jeweler with 17 locations throughout the state. We pride ourselves in that we keep our business within the state of Kentucky.

Many changes have taken place in the economy which directly affects our customers' buying habits. We have found that our growth as well as our success is due mainly to newspaper advertising. Even though our advertising is not stylish, or even what a lot of advertising agencies think is stylish advertising, we do our own thing which is to give our customers more to choose from at low prices. We believe in simple, honest advertising.

Our experience has taught us that newspaper advertising is the most direct means of reaching our present customers as well as new potential customers. We spend over 90% of our advertising dollar in newspaper, which is proof alone that newspaper advertising works for us

We have found that, even though you are the only newspaper in town, you have treated us as if you had competition. By this I mean you go out of your way to help...This means a great deal

We wish you and your paper the very best in the New Year

A Prisoner's Plea

After reading The Floyd County Times today. I feel that some of your readers would care about a little girl who has a big need to know her own importance.

I'd like to tell you about a little girl named Lisa. When she was a toddler, her mother was boiling something on the stove, and left the kitchen to do some work in the front room. While she was gone, Lisa climbed on the counter, and upset the boiling water on her herself. She was rushed to Norton Children's Hospital in Louisville. Her burns covered 90% of her body. She was in the hospital 9 months. Finally the blackness covering her body went away, except for her feet. Later her feet had to be ampulated. Now because of this she has contracted a rare disease

Lisa is now 7 years old, and has ar-

I'm her father and I am in prison for life. Since this has happened and I have been imprisoned, my whole life has changed. Even in prison I want to reach out to people. But one thing I want most to do, and can't is do more for Lisa. I long for her to have the feeling that people care, that I love her, that there are others everywhere who see her as God's child.

I'm writing this letter to ask your readers if they could help me by telling others about Lisa. To all the Christian people there in Floyd county, would you people tell others about Lisa? I'm sure there are people every where that care about this brave, little girl who needs love. She'd be so happy to get some cards and letters and I know that it would brighten her life. Could vou people help me? You could write her at...Lisa K. Popplewell 3538 E. Terrace St., Indianapolis, Ind. 46203

Congressman Carl D. Perkins was amused by a student comment during his recent appearance at Morehead State University's higher education symposium. Roadside Theater Is Smithsonian Feature

The current issue (December, '81) of the national publication, Smithsonian Magazine, features an article on Roadside Theater and one of its original plays, RED FOX/SECOND HANGIN' RED FOX/SECOND HANGIN', now in its sixth year of touring, has received both regional and national acclaim and recognition for its inventive presentation of the story of Dr. M.B. Taylor, the Red Fox of the Cumberlands. The production has toured throughout the South to colleges, community arts groups, and theaters, had several off-Broadway runs in New York City, and has been performed in many of the smaller communities of Central Appalachia in a revival-style tent.

The Smithsonian article draws liberally from the show's script and uses more than a dozen photographs to illustrate its story. The article's author, Jack Fincher, who traveled from his home in Oregon to a tent performance in Clintwood, Virginia, sums up Roadside Theater's work by writing that "the result is magic" and that the audience's reaction 'electrifying.'

In addition to RED FOX/SECOND HANGIN', Roadside Theater currently is touring two other shows, BROTHER JACK and MOUNTAIN TALES. Both feature stories and music from the mountains. Roadside Theater also has an LP recording of Mountain Tales and is currently producing RED FOX/SE-COND HANGIN' for both radio and television.

Roadside Theater is a part of the nonprofit arts and educational organization, Appalshop, Whitesburg, KY and Norton, VA. Appalshop's purpose is to illuminate the history, culture, and life of Central Appalachia. Roadside Theater is funded in part by the National Endowment for the Arts, the Kentucky Arts Council, the Virginia Commission for the Arts. and the Lyndhurst Foundation.

Board To Probe Charges

The state Personnel Board voted last Friday to conduct a "preliminary inquiry" into allegations that a reorganization in the Department of Transportation violated state law and merit-system regulations.

The charges stem from a decision by the department more than a year ago to replace the state's 12 district highway engineers with highway general managers.

The changes received the approval of the Personnel Board, but its members were told Friday that what has actually occurred since the reorganization was not what they had anticipated when they approved the Representatives of the Kentucky Association of Transportation Engineers and the Kentucky Society of Professional Engineers told the board, among other things, that many of the general managers are not qualified to operate the state's highway districts.

In some instances, they said, work that should be done by engineers was being done by people with no engineering qualifications.

Walker R. Reynolds Jr., executive director of KSPE, wrote a letter to the board, in which he said that state law requires any public work involving engineering to be done under the supervision of a licensed engineer.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of John Milton Stumbo takes this means of expressing thanks to everyone who helped us in any way during the passing of our loved one. We especially thank the staff of the McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital; those who spent time with us at the hospital; the ones who sent or prepared food; the ones who sent the beautiful flowers; those who came by or sent cards, expressing sympathy and words of solace; the Hall Funeral Home for its extreme kindness and efficient service; the ministers for their comforting words; and his nephews and neighbors who served as pallbearers. We thank the members of the Old Beaver Regular Baptist Church which he loved so well and considered his second home. May the Lord share His blessings upon everyone of

ARC Reports Show Coal Demand Up Overseas

The Appalachian Regional Commission presented summaries of several reports on the world market for Appalachian coal at a briefing recently in Washington, D. C., attended by coal producers, importers' representatives and legislative aides.

Among the reports were an International Steam Coal Trade Analysis which projects that the U.S. share of the world steam coal market will increase from 30 percent in 1980 to 33 percent by 1985. It was also predicted that world coal demand will double by 1990 and more than triple by 1995.

Appalachia's share of the U.S. export steam coal market in Western Europe is predicted to be 26 out of 28 million tons in 1985, rising to 58 out of 64 million tons in 1995. The value of these exports is calculated at $1 billion in 1985, rising to approximately $5 billion in 1995.

SUMMER SOLSTICE

"Summer Solstice," a one-hour teleplay produced by WCVB/Boston, starring Henry Fonda and Myrna Loy (pictured), premieres on ABC-TV WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 30.

"Summer Solstice" marks the first time a network has ever purchased an entertainment drama produced by a local television station.

Primarily set on the beaches of Cape Cod, with remaining locations in Boston, "Summer Solstice" is the story of Joshua and Maggie Turner's fifty-year marriage. Beginning with un-conventional wedding vows, their marriage endured parental disapproval, the death of a young child, infidelities and reconciliations.

Stephen Collins and Lindsay Crouse play the Turners in flashback scenes of Fonda's and Loy's characters.

Miss Ellie (Barbara Bel Geddes, pictured) plans the annual Ewing barbecue to coincide with Jock's expected return to Southfork, on "Dallas," FRIDAY, JANUARY 1 "Dallas," F on CBS-TV.

The barbecue gets underway with all of the intrigues inherent at most of the big Ewing functions: J.R. and Sue Ellen find a renewed interest in each other while Cliff Barnes realizes that he may still love Sue Ellen; Lucy is annoyed when Mitch is called away by a patient; Ray gets drunk and embarrasses Donna; Clayton and Rebecca renews an old acquaintance-ship; Katherine Wentworth is attracted to Bobby, and Miss Ellie's festive mood is smashed by a shocking phone call.

Michael Thompson displays the unusual hornet's nest which he and his grandfather, Lum Mitchell, of Grethel, discovered while grouse hunting on Little Mud Creek this past November. Eve Protection—A Gift Worth Giving

Do not be surprised if Santa Claus comes down the chimney wearing safety goggles this year. Kentucky Optometric Association has convinced the jolly old fellow that eye protection is a gift worth giving and a practice worth practicing.

The optometric association suggests that Christmas gift lists containing 'toys that are not really toys" should also include safety glasses or goggles to protect young eyes. Gifts falling in this category include chemistry sets, some hobby kits, workshop tools, rifles, BB guns, minibikes, sleds, skis, and snowmobiles.

Although schools and industry require safety eyewear to be worn, young would-be chemists, home woodworkers and other hobbyists are carelessly exposing their eyes to splashing chemicals, flying bits of wood and broken nails.

Outdoors, young skiers and riders of minibikes, snowmobiles and sleds are exposed to flying rocks or pebbles, dirt, dust and tree branches. Usually, they are not covered by laws requiring motorcyclists to wear protective eye-

Richocheting bullets or BBs from air rifles and BB guns pose a serious danger to young shooters and bystanders. Safety eyewear is important but so are properly constructed targets and enrollment in a junior rifle club to teach the new gun owner how to properly and safely handle a gun.

According to the optometric association, safety glasses and goggles can be purchased in major hardware or department stores having home repair departments and in some hobby shops. Purchasers should look for an indication that the goggles meet the American National Standards Institute Z87.1 standards: If a prescription is needed for good vision, the optometrist can prescribe it in safety eyewear.

The association advises that safety glasses and goggles, although tougher than the impact-resistant lenses required in eyewear by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, are not shatterproof or unbreakable. Still, they offer the best eye protection available today.

KET Receives Grant To Explore Statewide Audio Services

KET recently received a grant from the National Telecommunication and Information Administration (NTIA) to explore the feasibility of providing a statewide distribution network and radio service to currently unserved areas. The grant, totaling $15,590, will allow KET to begin the planning process as early as the first quarter of

The project will result in identification of areas in Kentucky that do not have any public radio service, and recommendations for distribution systems that can provide new services such as instructional audio and audio teleconferencing.

According to proposed plans, a statewide audio service would enable KET to greatly expand its programming in six priority areas: target audience programming for blacks, women, and nontraditional adult students (including higher education); continuing education for professionals; in-depth coverage of government and public affairs activities; and instructional services for elementary and secondary students. In addition, a statewide audio system would enable the network to expand special program services to the

Say 1,055 Jobless Here in October

Kentucky's unemployment rate has continued to be lower than the national rate even though most counties in the state reported increases in unemployment during October, according to Department for Human Resources

The state's unemployment rate increased from 6.6 percent in September to 7.1 percent in October. The national rate for October was 7.5 percent. The number of Kentuckians unemployed rose from 109,900 in September to 118,200 in October.

Kentucky's unemployment rate has remained below the national rate since June of this year.

According to the department's statistics, 22 Kentucky counties experienced decreases in unemployment while 93 counties reported increases. The remaining five counties' unemployment rate indicated no change. Menifee county had the state's highest rate, 26.0 percent, while Woodford county had the lowest, 3.3 percent.

Grady Stumbo, secretary of the Department for Human Resources, attributed the rise in the state's unemployment to layoffs, which were not concentrated in any one area of the

The eastern Kentucky area continues to have the highest unemployment in the state. The area's October rate was 8.5 percent, up from the September rate of 8.1 percent.

Within the eastern Kentucky area, 11 counties had unemployment rates higher than 10 percent. Menifee county had the area's highest rate, 20.0 percent, while Martin county had the lowest, 4.5 percent. In Floyd, 1055 were unemployed, a rate of 7.2 percent.

The department survey of unemployment insurance benefit recipients indicated that 26.2 percent of the recipients were employed in the manufacturing industries, 16.0 percent were at work in services, 14.4 percent in mining and 13.9 percent in trade within the eastern Kentucky area.

Land Trust Concept Discussed by Group

Family farms become extinct...lowincome urban tenants are pushed out by affluent immigrants from the suburbs...elderly homeowners are unable to keep up with their property taxes...families with children are unable to find the space to raise them...thousands are displaced from their homes or unable to own one because of pressures of the housing

Why not take parcels of land out of the speculative market? Why not set down, by written compact, what purposes the land will serve and bind potential tenants to those purposes? Why not offer tenants a low-interest loan to build on the land and a lifetime. renewable landlease, to transfer automatically at death to the leaseholder's heirs?

That essentially is the idea of a land trust, an idea that has had currency for some time among certain groups inspired by Biblical or native American notions of land stewardship, and which some feel may now enjoy wider acceptability as market pressures squeeze many out of the housing market.

The land trust concept was the subject of a conference held earlier this month at The Dwelling Place, an ecumenical center staffed by a Catholic women's religious order on land which is itself part of a land trust at Blue River.

Marie Cirillo, of Clairfield, Tenn., told the group she had been drawn to the land trust idea by the recognition that, while people urgently sought land for housing and gardens, most of the available acreage was owned by a relatively few coal companies.

Cirillo was instrumental in the formation of a land trust which has begun to buy up acreage to put in trust, is raising community gardens, and hopes soon to begin building houses.

Ande Gaines and Mike McCarthy, who have built a home on the Blue River land trust, said building on a land trust with the help of a lowinterest loan was one way a family of

The Greatest Gift

By WILMAY

A miracle occurred almost two thousand years ago in Bethelehem. The story thrills millions now. It is incomplete without the finale at Calvary, the part most overlooked at Christmas. though more people are seeking the Savior than ever before. Men everywhere are still trying to save themselves. Some think that by being moral and doing nothing bad they have a free ticket to heaven. Isaiah 64:6 says: "But we are all as an unclean thing; our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." They are indeed. compared with God's. holiness. The sinful publican in Luke 18:13-14 was accepted by Christ because he depended on Jesus for salvation. But the self-righteous man who thought he had no need of a Savior was rejected and doomed to eternal nunishment The plan of salvation is so simple many cannot believe it. Did you ever hear someone say Uncle Dick or Grandma or some other saintly person was with the angels because of the noble life he or she had lived? Mt. 19:17 says: "There is none good, no not one." If godly living, knowing the Bible by heart, rendering constant Christian service, giving huge sums to kingdom causes, serving God, the church, and humanity, joining every faith, being baptized a dozen times could save one, Jesus died in vain; and God would never have had to send His only Son from mansions of glory to earth, where Christ made the longest visit in history, 33 years. If by any or all means man could save himself, the supreme sacrifice would have been unnecessary. Martyrdom, astounding deeds, a glorious life determine our heavenly rewards, not salvation itself.

Every lost sinner must come under the blood of Christ. Hebrews 9:22 says: "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." Jesus paid our sin debt at Calvary. He was a substitute for you and me. A debt once paid is no longer owed. This leaves the child of God free from sin but not from sinning. No mortal can or will ever be perfect in this life. Achieving Christian maturity is a continuing process by means of daily Bible study and prayer, church attendance unless providentially hindered, Christian service, fellowship, etcetera. But perfection only comes as one passes into the great beyond. There are two kinds of sinners, the saved and the lost. The major difference is that the saved is better off than the lost.

One is saved by faith in Christ, thru God's grace, his love and mercy. Ephes. 2:8-9 reads: "For by grace are ye saved thru faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast." No one can work or buy admission to the heavenly portals. He must humble himself and come as a little child, believing Jesus was the Son of God. that He died on the cross for all mankind, and rose from the grave in three days. Mt. 18:4. That is the gospel in a nutshell; so is John 3:16. No gift has a price tag, for gifts are free. To receive the greatest gift in history one needs only to believe, repent, and confess Christ. Mt. 10:32-33 reads: "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But

By giving to The Salvation Army, you give joy to a world that greatly needs it.

whosoever shall deny me before men him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven."

James says faith without works is dead; so it is. Works are not the means of salvation but proof of it. Works that count come after salvation, and they determine the Christian's rewards in heaven. Only God knows the human heart. He alone knows who is saved and who is lost. Men cannot read the heart so they judge professed believers by their lives and works. There is no conflict between Paul and James concerning the plan of salvation. Men who profess Christ as Savior but show no evidence of spiritual progress as time passes are described in I JOHN 2:19. 'They went out from us but they were not of us: for if they had been of us they would no doubt have continued with us." Also Mt. 13: 3-7. Sins listed in Galatians 5:19-21 will not be a life pattern of any born-again Christian. One may slip as did David (Ps. 37:24; 51:12) and Noah, but will not continue such habitually. Instead, having given their souls to Jesus they start devoting their lives to Him, out of love and gratitude because He gave His life for them.

What will we give the greatest Giver of all this Yuletide? What will we do for the Christ child whose birth we celebrate? Will our Christmas observance honor Him or will it be marked by commercialism and selfishness? Will it consist of revelry and worldly pleasures with no time for the Prince of Peace in hearts and lives? Or will we take time to read and ponder the blessed story in Luke 2, and meditate on the closing chapters in the four gospels. and most of all on the life of One who voluntarily laid His own life down for us?

LATE SEASON SQUIRREL

When squirrel season opened back in August, a lot of hunters went out then, couldn't find many squirrels, and gave up for the year.

But early-season hunting is the hardest and least productive of any. A trip now through the same woods that seemed barren last summer could well be an eye-opening experience and enough to convert you to late-season hunting.

The trees, whose heavy foliage provided good hiding places for squirrels last summer, are bare now, so the flicker of a gray, bushy tail will be more obvious. And food has become harder for the squirrels to find, forcing them to concentrate near what is available

This is the time of year the hunter who prefers to take his squirrels with a .22 rifle waits for. He can scout out a good stand of nut-producing hardwoods with plenty of squirrel sign, arrive quietly just before dawn and often take his limit from that one spot.

The soft bark of a .22 doesn't scare squirrels nearly as much as the boom of a shotgun, so if the hunter sits quietly after shooting, the squirrels will soon resume their activity and afford the hunter additional shots.

If you do hunt with a .22, remember to be careful—those little bullets can carry over a mile and will richochet off hard surfaces or even off water. If there's any question about safety, leave the .22 at home and go with a shotgun.

Another productive squirrel hunting technique is to hunt from a tree stand-perhaps the same one you built for deer hunting. Squirrels don't seem to pay much attention to humans off the ground and will often almost run over a hunter sitting quietly in a tree.

Hunting from a tree stand is a good technique for taking squirrels with a bow and arrow. Special small game arrows are available with blunt points and fletching designed for short flights. So if you've already taken your deer but still want to bow hunt, consider giving squirrels a try.

Another good technique is to hunt by water, either by wading or from a canoe or light john boat. If duck season is open, a combined float-hunt for squirrels and ducks is possible-and could possibly be combined with some fishing.

But be extra careful around or on the water in cold weather. A dunking in winter can be more than uncomfortable-it can kill you. Always wear a personal floatation device and know the symptoms of and treatment for hypothermia, the dangerous lowering of the body's internal temperature which can cause death if not checked.

The last part of the squirrel season runs from Nov. 19 through Dec. 31. The daily limit is six, with a possession limit of 12 after two or more days of hunting. Squirrel hunters may not use or carry slugs or buckshot, nor may they use breechloading rifles of .240 caliber or larger. Any muzzle-loading firearm may be used to hunt squirrels.

Plan Would Provide Heaters for Elderly

Dr. Grady Stumbo, secretary of the Department for Human Resources, has announced that a new pilot project which offers an alternative to cash assistance under the Home Energy Assistance Program will be administered by Kentucky Association for Older Per-

The alternative energy project will allow the purchase of space heatersheating appliances for homes to see if this will be a more effective way to ensure the family has heat for a longer period of time.

"Funding for this project will be $150,000 which has come from savings in administrative costs of the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program," Dr. Stumbo said.

"A minimum number of 540 people could be served, but more like 1,000 will be served," said Pattie Rupp, executive director of Kentucky Association for Older Persons.

The maximum purchase for a space heater will be $250, and two-party checks will be issued to the client and the business selling the heaters.

Only the elderly and disabled will be eligible to apply for this assistance. Senior citizen centers, nutrition sites and other places that serve the elderly and disabled will be taking applications beginning Jan. 18,

The project will be administered in Northern Kentucky Area Development District, Kentucky River Area Development District and Jefferson County.

The Kentucky Association for Older Persons is an advocacy agency that speaks to the needs of older persons. The association was selected to handle the project because of its local contacts with people, and the group will be responsible for the complete operation of the project, Stumbo said.

> With his arrival in the Pennsylvania Dutch country, it was evident that the rest of America had reached these isolated farm people. In turn, their Christmas customs began to spread beyond the countryside to Philadelphia and on to the rest of America. In 1825, Philadelphia's Saturday Evening Post reported seeing "trees visible through the windows, where green boughs are laden with fruit richer than the golden apples of the Hesperides, or the sparkling diamonds that clustered on the branches in the wonderful cave of Aladdin." A best-selling children's book, "Kriss Kringle's Christmas Tree." published in Philadelphia in 1845, introduced a Santa

In a widely read penny pamphlet, antislavery champion Harriet Martineau described the tree that Charles Follen, a Harvard professor of German, had decorated for his son in 1832. She concluded with a prediction that might have shocked the Puritans, "I have little doubt the Christmas-tree will become one of the most flourishing exotics of New England." To the south, in Vicksburg, Miss., a niece of Jefferson Davis, Mahala Eggleston Roach, in 1851 created a tree for her children from her imagination. "...I never saw one," she wrote, "but learned from some of the German stories I had been reading." Botanist William Brewer reported from California in 1862 that in San Francisco. despite the unfortunate lack Christmas snow, "Christmas trees are the fashion." From its first planting, in a Pennsylvania community fertile with tradition. the Christmas tree had spread its branches from coast to coast.

Two popular magazines, Harper's Weekly and Godey's Lady's Book, gave the Christmas tree a further boost. The December 1850 cover of The Lady's Book was an Americanized verlustrated London News of Queen Victoria, Prince Albert and the royal family around their Christmas tree at Windsor Castle. Mrs. Hale, the editor, had removed both the queen's coronet and the prince's royal insignia and sash. Mysteriously, she also had removed his moustache. Nonetheless, the little Christmas tree's royal connection impress fashion-conscious Victorians. Once accepted, Kriss Kringle's decorated evergreen grew faster than Jack's beanstalk-at least it grew fuller.

The Christmas tree of a well-to-do Victorian family. a symmetrical fir, was a miniature world of tiny houses, ships, animals, furniture, flowers, fruits, flags, dolls, drums and sugar plums-and much, much more. The introduction to America of store-bought ornaments made all of this splendor possible. Commercial importation to the United States of Germanmade ornaments began as early as 1869. In that year. Harper's Bazaar described the "globes, fruits, and flowers of colored glass. bright tin reflectors, and innumerable grotesque figures suspended by a rubber string...Bismarck leaping up

The number and diversity of tin, wax, cardboard, candy and glass Christmas whimsies available by 1890 must have astonished even dedicated consumers like the Victorians. A four-inch silver ocean liner had several hundred portholes, all its lifeboats and tiny cotton puffs of smoke rising from four smokestacks. But despite the plenty of this Christmas cornucopia, the average American family at the turn of the century still relied primarily on popcorn, Claus figure and his cranberries, sweets and Christmas tree to tots across homemade ornaments to decorate its tree.

Universal acceptance of influences carried the the Christmas tree, Christmas tree north, south, however, was not yet at hand. In 1883, a New York Times editor predicted that the Christmas tree, "a rootless and lifeless corpse. would soon disappear and that a return to the good old Christmas stocking of his childhood was imminent Even the Times could be wrong. Not only did the Christmas tree grow in popularity, it grew in size. The floor-to-ceiling tree was an American innovation.

> The Christmas tree grew in status as well. It has been bandied about that Franklin Pierce introduced the Christmas tree to the White House in 1856. Actually, Andrew Jackson had, for an 1835 White House Christmas party, a "small frosted pine tree with toy animals around

The tree also will have something old, something new and something borrowed. The ornaments from the White House collection, including 100 balls with the names of individual states on them, will be dusted off and refurbished by volunteers and staff members. Santa's White House helpers also will make lace and ribbonbedecked foil paper cones and tiny reed baskets filled with herbs and potpourri. To insure that the tree will be properly old-fashioned, the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City is loaning the White House 200 19thand early 20th-century ornaments.

BY FRANCES H. PITTS County Extension Agent RECYCLING YOUR WARDROBE CAN TURN RAGS TO RICHES

The Floyd County Times

"I don't have a thing to wear." How many times have you said that or heard it from a family member, even though the closet was full of clothes? No doubt, once too many!

The Kentucky Extension Homemakers Association has a program designed for you-Rags to Riches, a clothing recycling plan that can turn a loser into a favorite outfit.

Recycling your clothes can save money and add wear-time to your wardrobe. The trend in America today is for recycling and conserving resources...why not clothing?

Most people have many garments they do not wear because they don't like the fit, color or style. But with imagination, they either can make them wearable again or put them to another use.

The best way to get started is to take an inventory of your closet. Make decisions on what-can be used and what needs to be discarded or recycled. Make sure you go through all your clothes, even ones put back from five years ago. Things come back into style.

Those articles that still can be used need to be separated according to whether they can be worn as is or whether they need to be changed. Then organize the clothing to be recycled according to the degree of recycling needed. Some outfits can have a new look with new accessories, others may take a major overhaul before they will be wearable

Slight changes can be made with new decorations such as elbow patches or embroidered or appliqued designs on the pocket, collars or hems. A change in hem length can add a new look. Even the addition of jewelry can brighten up

Major changes in a garment may include converting a dress to a tunic or top. Making a sweater or blouse into a dickey, adding flare to a straight skirt or adding length to garments by inserting yokes or midriffs can add weartime to your wardrobe.

For garments in your closet that will not be helped with small or major changes, consider whether the fabric is usable. Reuse the fabric from a garment in clothing for your children, or

The final category of recycling would be garments that are hopeless. But there are still uses for these. Use them as dress-up clothes for children, rags or in craft projects.

Keep your sewing skills in mind when considering recycling projects in clothes. Do not tackle a project that is too difficult for your level of skill.

Only the homemakers with lots of skill should attempt a major recycling project, such as reusing fabric to make a skirt from pants.

Some types of recycling can be done with few or no sewing skills. Making a PUBLIC NOTICE TO OWNERS OF RENTAL HOUSING The Floyd County Housing Authority is administering a Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program in Floyd County using funds provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Under this program, owners will rehabilitate rental units which are now substandard or have major building systems or components requiring repair or replacement. The cost of this work, which must total at least $1000 per unit, may be financed by a local lending institution, by the owner, or by any other source available to the owner. The agency does not make rehabilitation loans or grants, but will assist owners to obtain financing.

After required rehabilitation work has been completed, the agency and the owner will execute a contract which establishes a rent for the unit(s) that will cover rehabilitation costs, meet monthly operating expenses, and allow a reasonable profit on the owner's investment. For a fifteen year period, the owner will rent the rehabilitated unit(s) to eligible lower income tenants, who will pay approximately 25 percent of their income toward the rent, the agency will pay the remainder of the rent directly to the owner. The initial occupant of a rehabilitated unit may be the owner's present eligible tenant. After rehabilitation the rent(including utilities) cannot exceed the

Moving Toward Independence

To a child who has just learned to walk, each new day brings fresh opportunities for discovery. And now that the feet are travelling, the child shows a growing desire for independence.

One of the ways a child learns independence is by imitating her parents and siblings, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter. The child toddles around the house, "helping." And she begins to explore her clothing—imitating others by pulling off her cap, tugg-ing on shoe laces, pulling off shoes. Every mother who has tied a toddler's shoe laces in a double knot knows that even this is scant protection form the prying, pulling and poking fingers of a persistent child.

Don't let your youngster's apparent determination to join the nearest nudist colony worry you. She is just as interested in exploring her clothes and herself as she is in exploring the rest of her world. So take advantage of her interest to start her on the road to independence.

As you get her ready for her bath, encourage her to help. Until her shoe laces and loosen them as you say. "Now we'll take off Erin's shoe! We until them, we pull the laces, and off it comes!" Let the child pull the laces out. Pulling these strings through the little holes is

Jenny Wiley Park Is Not Affected By January Closings

All but two of Kentucky's state parks offering overnight lodging will be closed Jan. 1-16, Parks Commissioner Lou Karibo said to-

The break, which occurs each year, allows workers a chance to prepare the parks for the upcoming season, Karibo said. Some 13 state resort parks are involved.

The two exceptions are Jenny Wiley, near here, and General Butler, near Carrollton. General Butler will remain open because it is the site of Kentucky's new ski resort. At Jenny Wiley, demand for rooms is strong year round, so the park will stay open, Karibo said.

Greetings

ing on shoe laces, pulling off great fun—and good handshoes. Every mother who eye training, too. has tied a toddler's shoe Soon she can unlace the shoe all by herself. What an accomplishment! Look out, though—as she kicks her feet in excitement that shoe might really fly! Before that happens, show her how to pull it off, and then say, "Now give the shoe to Mommy, please." Get a grip on it before she throws it to see if shoes will fly, or drops it on the floor to find out what kind of noise it makes! And don't forget to say "Thank you!" when she lets go of it.

Socks must comeoff, too. Push the top down over the child's heel, and pull the toe loose. Twitch it and pull it a little, saying, "You pull it off!" When she pulls it off with a flourish, be ready with, 'Give the sock to Mommy? Thank you!" As you and your toddler go about getting the rest of her clothes off, follow the same procedure. Get the garment part way off and let her finish pulling it off. And talk about what you and she are doing together.

Does all this sound like just play and pretty timeconsuming for a busy mother? It is play, granted, but your child is learning important lessons about her clothes and herself, about on and off, about how to balance herself while she pulls off a shoe or sock! She also learns the lesson on neatness 'Give the shoe to Mommy"), and the lesson on politeness (please and thank-you)? All this, plus taking some early steps toward independence.

P.S.: A word to the wise: When you buy your toddler a pair of shoes, always buy at least one extra pair of shoe laces, and keep some white glue on hand. Eager little hands are hard on shoe lace tips, and there's nothing more frustrating than trying to push a bushy-tailed shoe lace through a small eyelet when the shoe is on a wriggling foot.

The Growing Child newsletter follows a child's development month-bymonth. For more information on the social and physical development of children from birth to six years old, write to Growing Child, P.O. Box 62ON, Lafayette, IN 47902 Include child's birthdate when writing. A year's subscription to the newsletter costs $11.95.

From far and near, warmest greetings to all!

CONSUMER ALERT

'Senior Citizens' Frauds The perpetrators of consumer fraud frequently choose to swindle trusting and often home-bound and defenseless senior citizens. says Attorney General Steven L. Beshear.

Due to decreased mobility. health problems or transportation difficulties, the elderly are often sitting targets for the fraudulent practices of unscrupulous con men. Loneliness also makes the senior citizen open to the seemingly sympathetic sales pitch of the telephone or door-to-door solicitor, Beshear says.

Beshear is aware of these problems and wants older Kentuckians to be aware of the various schemes used by

"Many different schemes are directed at senior citizens. Deceptive door-todoor salesmen exploit the elderly by pressuring them Into paying for unneeded repair work or unwanted merchandise. Some use sales pitches as scare tactics, while others prey on people's sympathies," says

Beshear. Many people grieving over the death of a loved one have been talked into purchasing expensive mementoes such as photographs or bibles which are of poor quality or never delivered.

The desire for extra income has caused some to sign up for fraudulent workat-home schemes and investment programs, Beshear says. One of the oldest traps aimed at widows and but this does not stop widowers is pressure to pay large sums of money in dancing or some other activity as a means of meeting others and relieving loneliness.

The bank examiner scheme is another fraud often directed toward senior citizens. Here, a phony bank examiner contacts a person and asks for help in catching a dishonest bank employee. He asks the person to withdraw a specified amount of cash from a bank account and turn it over to him so he may check the serial numbers. After turning over the money to the so-called examiner, the person never hears from him again, Beshear explains.

Patton Says More Funds Should Go to Roads

Part of the solution to the "woefully inadequate transportation facilities" in eastern Kentucky is the dedication of more coal severance tax dollars to road programs, according to Pike County Judge/Executive-elect, Paul Patton.

Speaking in Louisville, to a transportation conference sponsored by Kentuckians for Better Transportation (KBT), Patton said, "Our people who are producing the coal this state depends on, have a right to decent roads," He said, a "major portion," or about "75 percent of coal severance taxes ought to be spent on roads,"

Present state law requires that one-half of all severance tax collected over $177.6 million be allocated to coal impacted counties. Those counties are required to use 30 percent of the revenue received for road programs. "Roads, especially in eastern Kentucky, are absolutely essential to development and progress," Patton

Patton told the conference that more money must be dedicated to roads and that "a method is needed to get more of that money into the local and rural road" programs.

"Based on the gasoline tax as it presently exists," which is nine percent per gallon of the average wholesale price, and constitutes about 45 percent of the state's road fund budget," there is no way that Pike county government can give its citizens the kind of service that is necessary for local roads," Patton said.

The county judge-elect also indicated that county

HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND Health Educator

The Floyd County Health Department WIC Program began implementing new food package policies December 15 in accordance with revised WIC Program regulations.

There will be six food packages issued by the WIC Program. Food package assignments will be based upon the individual's category of participation. The food package categories are: I. Infants 0-1 months of age; II. Infants 4-12 months of age; III. Children/Women with Special Dietary Needs; IV. Children 1-5 years of age; V. Pregnant and Breastfeeding Women; VI. Postpartum Women.

There will also be an increased emphasis in tailoring the food package to the individual participant's nutritional needs. If you are presently on the WIC Program, your next set of WIC vouchers will reflect the changes in food packages.

If you would like additional information about the WIC Program, you may contact the Floyd County Health Department at 886-2788.

This is an equal opportunity program. If you believe you have been discriminated against because of race, color, national origin, age, sex, handicap, religious or political beliefs, write immediately to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

The Floyd County Health Department in Prestonsburg and the branch office in Wheelwright will be closed all day December 24, and 25 in observance of the Christmas holiday. We will also be closed December 31 and January 1 in observance of the New Year's Holiday.

The staff of the Floyd County Health Department would like to take this opportunity to wish everyone a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Horse Council Seeks Support

Since its establishment as an agency of Kentucky state government in 1974, the Kentucky Horse Council has received state funds for its operation. No other state has such a governmentsupported horse council. However, with state revenues at a low level, state appropriations to the Kentucky Horse Council have been severely reduced. In order to supplement reduced state funding and allow the continuation of activities designed to meet industry needs and promote and strengthen the Kentucky equine industry, the Council must obtain financial support from the organizations, individuals and businesses that make up or benefit from the industry. Donations to the Kentucky Horse Council are tax deductible as a charitable contribution. A brochure listing accomplishments and activities of the Council and projects the Council wants to accomplish over the next few years, along with a form for making donations, is available from the Kentucky Horse Council, P.O. YULE PROJECT BENEFITS NEEDY

A Christmas store, where people in need could fill their Christmas baskets, was established by the Outreach Programs of St. Juliana's Church in Martin and St. Vincent's Mission in David combined with Our Lady of the Way Hospital. Invitations were sent to 100 area families allowing them to receive food, clothes and toys for their needs. While dozens of people were involved, hundreds of people will benefit from this unique program.

Hypertension is a condition which requires constant monitoring of blood pressure levels. There are no shortcuts to successful therapy and there is no one drug that is ideal for its treatment. Each is capable of producing side effects. For this reason, it is necessary to properly communicate with your doctor. It is not enough to have a drug prescribed and let several months go by before visiting your doctor. It is common to be started off on water pills (diuretics) in cases of mild to moderate hypertension. During this introductory stage of treatment, the blood pressure can often drop 10-15 points. Consult your doctor.

COOLEY APOTHECARY, INC. wishes to extend our best holiday greetings. We're small enough to know you and large enough to serve you. Stop by and see us at No. 2 Town Center Building. Open Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30; Sat. 9-4. 886-8106.

HANDY HINT:

Make your doctor aware of any side effects that your prescribed drug causes.

A Christmas Story

By Bob McAninch

It was the first snowfall of the year. Much of the snow had melted but wisps of flakes were blowing about here and there. A Prestonsburg daycare center was presenting its Christmas program in the basement of the church. The children had made their own elf costumes and were singing "We Wish You A Merry Christmas," the last song of the program. Proud parents applauded their offspring, punch and cookies were served; the children were alert with anticipation for the special visitor they knew was coming.

With a rousing "ho, ho, ho," Santa shortly appeared, sat in the prearranged chair, and listened to the twenty or so children tell what they wanted for Christmas until, after the last photograph had been taken, he wished all a Merry Christmas and made his exit down the building's long corridor.

"Could you tell me where the preacher's house is?" The question that intruded on him came from a young man in tattered clothes.

Santa, concerned with other duties he had that night caught only pieces of the man's conversation. No job. Lost their house. Have no place to stay the night. The two reached the end of the corridor and Santa pointed out the preacher's house.

The young man turned, "Would you do me a favor? I have a four-year-old son out in the car and—well, there won't be anything for Christmas this year, because I haven't got a dime to my name. If you would just go out and talk to him, I would appreciate it. Just say something—anything—to him."

Santa sent word back to the party to see if there wasn't perhaps a present left over. There was. He took it out to the parking lot where he saw a car that must have had an inch-thick layer of mud on it. Inside sat a shivering young woman with a beautiful, runny-nosed little boy resting on her lap.

"I've brought you something," said Santa. "We don't have our house anymore," said the little boy.

Plans Candelight Service

The First Presbyterian Church will hold its traditional Christmas candlelight service Thursday, December 24, at 7:30 p.m. Special music will include a duet by the Rev. and Mrs. Tim Jessen, and a choir anthem, for which the guest-accompanist will be David Leslie. The congregation will participate in the reading of Christmas Scriptures, singing of carols, climaxed by the singing of "Silent Night" while each worshipper holds a lighted candle.

The public is invited to the service

"I know," said Santa. "That's what made it so hard for me to find you." He handed the little boy the present.

"Can I keep it?" asked the boy "Yes!" "Can I open it now?"

"Of course."

As the wide-eyed child was opening his present, the mother's face had

As the wide-eyed child was opening his present, the mother's face had broken into an enormous smile and the father was beaming. Santa quietly wished them a merry Christmas and made his way back into the church.

The party was breaking up, children were walking up the hallway, and Santa's exits were cut off. As it would not do to have Santa appear twice at the same party, he dashed up a flight of stairs, only to find himself in the empty chapel. There in front of the altar, he got out of his costume and reflected on the night's events.

There were times in his life he had done what might be called the Lord's work, he mused, but never before had the Almighty been so clear with the instructions

CANCER HOPELIN

Q. I'm a housewife. I don't see how an untrained person like me can locate a lump in my breast if one is there. Isn't self-examination really just chance for the average woman?

A. You may not be medically trained, but you are the best expert on your body. Once you learn what your breasts really look and feel like by consistently examining them once a month, you will be quick to note any changes. And those changes from what's normal are just what breast self-examination (BSE) is all about.

When you learn about BSE, you will find that it is not mysterious at all. Basically, you need to look and feel for anything that is unusual: new lumps that aren't "you," nipple discharge, puckering, dimpling, or scaly skin. If you find any of these symptoms, see your doctor as soon as possible.

There are some new statistics that may interest you. In a recent study, more than 48 percent of women who regularly practiced BSE were diagnosed in the earliest possible stage of breast cancer. That figure is compared with only 38% who practiced BSE occasionally and 33% of those who never

The most difficult aspect of cancer is controlling its spread. Of 1000 women treated for breast cancer between July, 1975 and January, 1979, only 2.7 percent of the women who regularly practiced BSE had spread to distant parts of the body, while 14.6 percent of women who never did BSE had distant spread. (This study was performed at the Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y. and was reported in the August, 1981 issue of Oncology Times.

When you get right down to it, BSE is one of the nicest things you can do for vourself and for your family. It means Once you have learned the simple BSE technique, you can make it a part of your regular health habits, as routine in its few minutes once a month as brushing your teeth is every night.

Christmas Memories

Greetings to all my dear friends at this wonderful holiday season!

Wish I could send each of you a lovely Christmas card and thank you for your prayers and concern for me-especially during the past seven months that I have had to spend the major part of my time away from Floyd county. During this time I have overcome two major surgeries and a series of radiation treatments, and just as I was about to "start driving" again, I fell and broke my leg. Am happy to report the cast is off and I am doiing fine. Your lovely cards and messages of encouragement have meant so much to me. Thank you-and God bless. The Lord has been so good to me-His presence so real! And because of the loving care of my foster son, Masond Meshkat. I have been spared having to go to a nursing home. Yes, this is a season of joy and celebration of the birth of our Saviour. It is also a season of sadness-of memories of suffering and the passing of my beloved son. Stephen Lee Best, five years ago, Dec. 18, 1976. It seems like yesterday! By God's grace I can now say." Thank

ORDINANCE NO. 6-81

An ordinance of the City council of the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, closing a section of first street in the downtown section of Prestonsburg. Kentucky, and authorizing the institution of the necessary legal proceedings to effect this purpose.

WHEREAS, there is existing in the City of Prestonsburg. Kentucky a street designated on the plat as First Street, running between Goble Street and Friend Street along the Big Sandy River, a distance of 500 feet, more or less in a north/south direction, and:

WHEREAS, the above described street is not now in use and has not been used by the general public for a number of years and the closing thereof will not damage or interfere with the general public, or any of the adjoining or abutting property owners, and;

WHEREAS, it is the desire of the City Council to permanently close said street and surrender it to the use and occupancy of the adjoining property owners, their heirs, successors and assigns, subject only to the right of the City of Prestonsburg to ingress and egress on said street for the purpose of laying, removing, altering or maintaing city utilities.

NOW THEREFORE, the City Council of the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky hereby enacts and ordains as follows: SECTION 1. The section of First Avenue running between Friend Street and Goble Street along the Big Sandy River be, and is, permanently closed and said property surrendered to the use and occupancy of the adjoining land owners, their heirs, successors and assigns, subject only to the right of the City of Prestonsburg to ingress and egress on said street for the purpose of laying, removing, altering or maintaining civ utilities.

SECTION 2. That Paul P. Burchett, Citv Attorney for the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky is hereby authorized and directed to take whatever legal action is necessary to carry out the purpose and intent of this ordinance, including the filing of a suit in the Floyd Circuit Court, the cost of which, including attorney fees, is to be borne solely by David Bruce Spradlin as an adjoining property owner and requesting the street closing

Wildlife Group Sues Watt, Charges Lax Enforcement of Strip Mine Laws

The National Wildlife Federation has filed suit against U.S. Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt in a move to protect the nation's prime farmland from what it called strip mining without any environmental controls.

The Federation, along with seven other conservation and civic groups, asked a federal court to overturn a regulation, issued by Watt, that would allow many existing strip mines on prime farmland to sidestep a federal law requiring restoration of mined

"Secretary Watt's regulation would undermine the federal laws that sought to protect farmland from coal mining in the first place," said Norman Dean, attorney for NWF. "It would open up vast areas of prime farmland to strip mining without providing for any environmental controls."

Specifically, the suit challenges Watt's omission of a deadline from a regulation he issued in September to implement the so-called grandfather clause of the Surface Mining Reclamation and Control Act of 1977. According to Federation attorneys, the grandfather clause of the Act established exemptions for mines operating at the time the legislation was passed, so that coal mining companies would have time to develop the technology for restoring strip-mined farmland to its original condition, as required by the Act. The Carter administration had proposed a 1982 deadline for these socalled "grandfather clause" exemp-

Without a deadline or cut-off-date, the suit charges, Watt's regulation provides no practical limits to strip mining on prime farmlands. If not overturned, it "will permit surface mining of coal on hundreds of thousands of acres of prime farmland without any showing that coal operators have the technological capability to restore the lands to their premining productivity." says the Federation's complaint, filed in the District of Columbia's U.S. District Court

Joining the NWF in the suit are the Iowa and Illinois Wildlife Federations, the Environmental Policy Institute, and four other civic and environmental organizations in Illinois. Also named as a defendant in the suit is Richard Harris, Director of the Office of Surface Mining, Reclamation and Enforcement within the U.S. Department of the

The suit claims that Watt's regulation violates the intent of the Surface Mining Reclamation and Control Act. It also maintains that Watt unlawfully implemented the regulation, because he did not obtain the approval of the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture as required by the Surface Mining Act.

Illinois, which contains half of the nation's prime farmland on which strip mining occurs, would be hardest hit by Watt's regulation, according to NWF attorneys. "Most of the strip mining in Illinois occurs on two coal seams," allow the 56 existing mines on those seams to continue mining under the grandfather clause as long as the reserves last. That leaves most, if not all, of Illinois' best farmland unprotected by the new regulation." According to Dean, not one existing coal mine in Illinois is yet obliged to meet the prime farmland requirements of the Surface Mining Act.

Watt's regulation, without any said Dean. "Watt's regulation would deadline for compliance, will result in a loss of productive farmland, increased water pollution from increased erosion and stream sedimentation, aesthetic damage, and the destruction of wildlife habitat, the suit alleges.

The Illinois and Iowa Wildlife Federations are state affiliates of the NWF, a conservation and education organization with more than 4.5 million members and supporters throughout the United States.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. Hope Plan Will Trim School Dropout Rate

There is no single or easy solution that can be prescribed to keep a student from dropping out of school, but the Kentucky Department of Education has undertaken a new program that may cure a lot of the problems.

A three-year pilot project, initially involving 17 school districts, identifies potential dropouts at the ninth-grade level and then develops strategies to keep those students in school.

In the last four years, some 20,000 Kentucky students left school prior to receiving a high school diploma. Nationally, there are approximately 1 million youth, age 14-24, leaving school without a diploma. This trend, both on the national level and in Kentucky, is increasing.

Raymond Barber, superintendent of public instruction, has listed the dropout problem as one of his eight educational goals to improve upon during the next two years.

The dropout plan was launched last February when a research report was sent to all school districts outlining certain characteristics that contribute to a student's dropping out of school. The report also listed conclusions drawn from a study of dropouts and persisters, or those students who stay in school.

All ninth-graders in the 17 districts volunteering to participate in the project completed questionnaires in September. The questionnaires were returned to the department's office of research and planning for computer

At a November meeting in Frankfort, representatives from the districts received a computer printout with the percent of students in their districts, along with a list of individuals who are considered high risk from the data collected.

Phase IV of the project, now under way, involves developing strategies for dropout prevention by the local districts which should result is a dropout rate decrease. The division of student services in the Department of Education will provide assistance to the local districts in developing strategies.

"Because of the multitude of reasons why students drop out of school, no one program is appropriate for every school, student or district," said Clyde Caudill, head of research and planning. "A comprehensive dropout prevention strategy that provides certain basic elements yet allows each school to adapt to meet their specific needs would be best.'

Caudill went on to say that extreme caution should be exercised so that results from the questionnaire do not classify or label students.

"This data is not intended to replace professional judgement but to be used in conjunction with professional judgement," he explained.

Gene Wright, director of the psychometric services unit with the department, stresses the importance of both in-school and out-of-school cooperation to encourage students.

"A student may need help in improving basic skills, learning job skills or just experiencing success," Wright said. "Whatever the need, however, a student cannot be forced to fit into a program. The program must be designed to fit around the needs of the student. Knowing why the students are dropping out is essential to developing appropriate strategies.'

Hopefully other districts will see a successful prevention program working well in one of the 17 volunteer districts and opt to use that same approach, according to Wright.

The program was designed on a three-year basis to allow yearly updates on the ninth-graders through their senior year in high school. This should check the accuracy of the data collected from the testing instrument, Wright said.

The optimum goal of the program is to modify the questionnaire for use in lower grades, particularly at the junior high level.

DOE Predicts Adequate Electric Power Supply

An analysis by the Department of Energy indicates the nation will have adequate electric power this winter, William A. Vaughan, Assistant Secretary for Environmental Protection, Safety, and Emergency Preparedness said today

Vaughan said the department's semiannual report on estimated electric supply and demand projects no widespread problems stemming from the lack of generating capacity, failure to construct transmission facilities, or unexpected forced outages of equip-

The report notes that each of the country's Regional Reliability Councils and Electrical Regions has a projected planned reserve that would be satisfactory under normal winter weather conditions.

It adds, however, that unusually severe weather or the unexpected unavailability of generation equipment could possibly curtail power supplies in some regions, notably Florida, parts of North and South Carolina, Virginia, Northern Ohio, and Northern Pennsyl-

The study further reports that "heavy snowstorms or other natural phenomena may result in service being cut off in some areas but the extent of such disturbance is not predictable." It observes, however, that "careful management of generating and transmission facilities can minimize (such) difficulties.
