Snow Means Big Trouble As 9,755 Lose Electric Power

More than 160 Kentucky Power Company employees and members of contract crews worked last week—some up to 24 hours at a stretch—to restore electricity interrupted by a surprise snowstorm which dumped up to 11 inches on parts of Eastern Kentucky.

The snow, which was wet and heavy, began Saturday night, December 11, and by midnight the first outages were reported to the company's offices in its Pikeville and Hazard Divisions and in the Sprigg area.

Approximately 9,755 customers of the company were without electricity for varying periods of time during the three days.

In the company's Hazard Division, K. C. Brashear, division manager, reported that 70 employees and 15 contractor people handled approximately 247 separate cases of trouble involving outages to 5,855 customers in Perry, Knott, Leslie, Letcher, and Breathitt counties.

In Kentucky Power's Pikeville Division, W. W. Zoellers, division manager, said his employees began restoring service at 1 a.m. Sunday, and through Tuesday 52 company employees and 18 contractor employees had averaged 16-hour shifts each in restoring electricity.

Almost all of this division's outages were in an area south of Allen, and included some 3,300 customers in the Elkhorn City, Elkhorn Creek, Jenkins, Feds Creek, Mouthcard, Mud Creek and John's Creek areas.

Marijuana and LSD Cost Pike Man 14 Years

A penalty believed to have been the heaviest imposed in Eastern Kentucky on a narcotics defendant was the 14 years in prison ordered Dec. 15, by U. S. District Judge Wix Unthank for Harry Madison Soards, Jr., 34, of Shelbyana, Pike county.

According to Asst. U. S. Atty. Thomas L. Self, Soards was convicted on one charge of possession of marijuana with the intent to distribute it, one count of marijuana possession and one of possessing LSD.

The charges resulted from a search last August 5 by State Police and the Pike sheriff's department of Soards' trailer and adjacent dwelling. The 14 years in prison was the total of sentences imposed for the three offenses.

We're glad you asked!

WHAT IS A FUNERAL TRUST FUND?

It is an interest-bearing fund set aside at a bank or S & L for use specifically to pay for funeral and burial expenses for one or more members of your family.

As the fund grows, with its interest accumulating, it may even provide MORE than the amount you have pre-arranged to pay for funeral expenses.

Most states have laws governing the pre-financing of funerals and burial expenses. We are experienced in handling these matters, having conducted many such arrangements.

Store Manager Here Reports $2100 Robbery

Mrs. Ernestine Slone, manager of the Shoe Show store in the Highlands Plaza shopping center here, reported to Prestonsburg police Saturday the loss of approximately $2100 in store receipts when she was robbed at gunpoint.

The store manager was quoted as saying she had driven to the night depository at the rear of the First Commonwealth branch bank at about 4:40 p.m. when two men appeared, driving an old-model car and wearing ski masks. They took store receipts which she was preparing to deposit. Both were armed, she said.

The police investigation continues.

The home was decorated throughout in keeping with the Yule season. A large, decorated Christmas tree, with recorded carols, formed the main attraction. The tables had for their centerpieces, a variety of ceramic carolers, and favors were at each plate.

Roberts to report on the recent heart clinic at the Floyd County Health Department, which is co-sponsored by the Prestonsburg Kiwanians and Kiwanis Clubs, with assistance from local churches.

The club's next luncheon-meeting will be held at May Lodge, Thursday.

Mrs. Pitts expressed her gratitude for the gift.

Enjoying the occasion were presidents of several of the Homemakers' groups of the county: Mrs. Willena Campbell, Prater Creek; Mrs. Virginia Wallace, Lancer; Mrs. Arnita Snavelly, East Point, and Sally B. Goble, who represented Mrs. Virginia S. Goble, president of the Cow Creek Club. Other guests were Mrs. Maman Leslie, Mrs. Janet Phipps, and Mrs. Mary Lou Horn. Highlands Gets H.E.L.P.

Highlands Regional is the first hospital in Kentucky to receive a low-interest loan through the state's new Hospital Equipment Loan Program (H.E.L.P.)

The Kentucky Development Finance Authority which arranged the program to help hospitals obtain below-market-rate financing for expensive equipment lent $296,332 to the Medical Center. "This is the first time in Kentucky that a group concept for purchasing capital has been utilized by hospitals," said Jim Soder, Kentucky Hospital Association representative.

"I'm pleased that we were able to help Highlands obtain state of the art equipment at a substantial savings."

Advanced x-ray equipment has been purchased with the money at an interest rate of 10.25%. According to Director of Finance Max Bunnell, nearly $54,000 in interest charges will be saved due to this financing program. After a six year lease period, the hospital will take title to the equipment.

HRMC has been approved for just over $1 million in low interest funds. The money will be used in leasing a wide variety of medical equipment, including advanced ultra-sound and nuclear medicine equipment and the word processors in Medical Records.

"The savings from our participation in the H.E.L.P. program will mean reduced charges for patients while providing the most up-to-date equipment available," Bunnell said.

CHRISTMAS ORNAMENTS were made and placed on the May Lodge Christmas tree last week by pre-school and kindergarten children from Floyd and Johnson counties. The impressive tree, located in the main lobby of the lodge at Jenny Wiley State Park, is a gathering place during the holidays for lodge guests and visitors and the park extends an invitation for all local residents to come and enjoy the tree during the Yule season.

CHRISTMAS TREE lights are reflected on the wet blacktop of the municipal parking lot here.

Try Gas Space Heater Advises Columbia Rep.

Columbia Gas urged homeowners recently to make the most efficient use this winter of their home-heating energy.

"One new product that has recently come on the market is a vent-free gas space heater," said Larry Cameron, area manager here. "It is designed to operate at less than half the cost of kerosene or electric heaters and features an oxygen-sensitive safety device.

The unit is used primarily for hard-to-heat areas, room additions and other space heating needs.

Cameron added, "Before cold weather really sets in, every homeowner should look closely at other ways, too, to keep down heating costs—by installing storm windows, cleaning the furnace, caulking around windows and doors, and closing vents to unused areas.

"For those homeowners who have a need for space heaters, we recommend the new vent-free gas space heaters which are fully tested for safety and offer heating efficiency approaching 100 percent."

Cameron said that although Columbia recommends use of a high efficiency central heating system for all-around comfort living, the space heater can serve a distinct purpose.

"They have oxygen depletion safety systems that automatically shut them off if the oxygen in the room dips to 18 percent, two percent below the normal level of 20 percent. Also, there's no fuel to store, and the units burn gas efficiently, without odor or soot," Cameron said.

Vent-free natural-gas room heaters manufactured by several firms have been certified by the American Gas Association Laboratories, and conform with requirements of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC).

The CPSC announced Oct. 27 it is conducting an inquiry into the safety of kerosene-fueled space heaters. A commission staff report noted studies have shown that levels of carbon monoxide and nitrogen dioxide from some kerosene heaters "may result in adverse health effects." The staff also said some models pose a fire hazard.

Cameron said the vent-free gas heater will meet the needs of many homeowners who want a safe and efficient heater to help them reduce their whole-house thermostat setting by 5 to 10 degrees while keeping certain rooms warmer, or for heating such areas as basements and garages.

Floyd Schools Await Decision on Aid Plan

He will need to be thoroughly convinced that the plan will be helpful before he signs up Floyd county schools for a new program designed to improve tests scores here, Superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr., said this week.

Grigsby was one of 23 superintendents who attended a meeting in Frankfort last week to hear an explanation of the program, which will be aimed at improving the performance of students in school districts that have scored consistently below the national norm on basic skills tests administered to Kentucky students each year by law.

Superintendents from 25 districts were invited to attend this meeting. Ten districts will be able to participate in the program, state officials said. Districts selected for the program will receive up to $20,000 each from the state and special help from a team of state education staff members.

Donald Hunter, state assistant superintendent for instruction, said the team will spend about four weeks in each district, beginning next spring, assessing current programs, how well instructional time is used, the leadership given by school boards and administrators, and incentives for students.

During this phase, department and district officials will work together to develop an improvement plan that is "tailor-made" to each district, it was said.

The $20,000 would be available for the 1983-'84 school year and could be used for whatever the district decides is most important, such as in-service training for teachers, equipment or personnel, Hunter said.

Grigsby said he felt the need to consult with his staff and with school principals and to "feel the pulse of the people" before volunteering for the program. "If we go into it, we want to know it is going to give solid help," he explained.

Most of the other superintendents at the Frankfort meeting felt the same way, Grigsby said. Nine districts—Whitley, Martin, Menifee, Jackson, Lawrence, Letcher and Magoffin counties and Covington and Cloverport Independent—indicated immediately that they would be willing to participate. But 14 other districts—including, besides Floyd, Bell, Wolfe, Owsley, Lewis, Perry, Knox, Clay and Casey counties and Pineville, Providence, Newport, Richmond and Eminence independent districts—said they need more time to decide.

Harlan and Leslie county schools were invited to the meeting but did not attend.

The districts will have until Jan. 17 to decide whether they want to volunteer for the program, it was said.

In selecting the 25 districts invited to participate in the program, other factors besides test scores were used, state officials said. These included pupil-teacher ratio, per capita expenditure in the district, the local tax contribution, and the educational level of faculty members.

Some superintendents at last week's meeting complained about press coverage of low test scores in their districts.

Kids Learn at Home In KET Snow School

KET broadcasts daytime instructional programming for students every weekday, even if snow or other inclement weather forces schools to close. With Snow School, students can tune in KET and watch the same daytime instructional programs they see at school.

Programs about art, science, math, history, reading and health for grades kindergarten through six air each weekday from 8:45 a.m.

Snow School is the name given to KET's daytime instructional programming when schools close because of weather; the programming schedule is the same as the one aired on regular school days.

Parents and interested persons can pick up information and programming schedules at their public libraries or local school board offices.

Some of the programs KET airs during the school day and during Snow School are:

'MAGIC PAGES/TALES OF MAGIC' Motivational reading of books and fairy tales for grades kindergarten through two.

'THE ELECTRIC COMPANY' A program for grades one through four designed to enrich language skills using the phonetic approach.

'ZOO ZOO ZOO' Personnel of the Cincinnati Zoo explain the functions of ears, feet, tails and other body parts of animals to show grades one through four how the way animals look often is related to where they live and how they survive.

'THE BODY WORKS' This series for grades two through six looks at nutrition and physical fitness while offering 10 minutes of non-stop exercise.

'THE UNIVERSE AND I' An award-winning KET production for junior high school students that explores the realm of earth/space science.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

WINTER CARE OF HOUSE PLANTS

Here are some pointers which should make winter care of house plants easier for the house plant fancier.

Go easy on the water (non-softened water) to your house plants during winter. Give them the best light you can in a cool room since many plants prefer temperatures of 60-65°F.

Keep your plants away from cold or hot drafts and away from sources of heat such as heating registers, radiators and fire places.

If the leaves of your plants that are next to the window start turning black, move them away from the cold glass. Don't close plants behind drapes at night because of the cold temperatures which can result by being shut off from the heating source.

Holidays Suggestion . . .
Go Easy on the Drinks!

Being a good holiday host or hostess means taking some grim statistics into account when planning a holiday party.

Most traffic deaths which occurred during Christmas weekend and New Year's weekend 1981 involved a drinking driver, according to the Kentucky State Police.

If your guests will be driving home after the party, here are some ways to ensure they arrive safely:

- Center party activities around food and fellowship.
- Make a brightly decorated table filled with a wide variety of food the focal point of the party, rather than the bar.
- Offer soft drinks, coffee, tea or other non-alcoholic beverages as alternatives to alcoholic drinks. Many drink recipes can be adapted by simply leaving out the alcohol.

If you do serve alcohol, serving high-protein foods like cheese or deviled eggs will help slow the absorption of alcohol into the bloodstream. Serving non-alcoholic drinks will encourage guests to pace their drinking without leaving them empty-handed.

—If you see that a guest is getting intoxicated or close to it, try to gracefully guide him away from the bar by engaging the guest in conversation. Introduce the guest to someone he hasn't met. Give him a compliment or tell a joke.

—Make sure you don't contribute to "over drinking" by your guests.

—Don't rush to refill their glasses.

—If you mix the drinks, don't serve doubles. Use fruit juice or water as a mixer, rather than carbonated beverages. Carbonation speeds alcohol absorption.

—Go easy on the alcohol. A good drink isn't necessarily a strong drink. Measure the alcohol with a "jigger glass" rather than just guessing at the amount.

—Once the party is over, your responsibilities as host or hostess do not end. You should personally see to it that all your guests get home safely.

—Don't allow an intoxicated guest to drive home. Also, don't let an intoxicated guest walk home unassisted. A large percentage of adult pedestrians killed in traffic accidents are drunk, according to a federal study.

—Either give the guest a ride home, ask a sober guest to take him home, or call a taxi. If the situation warrants it, invite the person to stay overnight.

—Don't take no for an answer. The guest may insist he can drive but a person is not the best judge of his own sobriety.

Arts Groups Reach Fund-Raising High

Despite the uncertain economy, Kentucky arts organizations set a fund-raising record in 1981-82. The Kentucky Arts Council has announced that 61 arts organizations from 19 communities raised $5,333,180 to qualify for the Challenge Grant. A partial match of $986,800 in Challenge Grant state funds will be distributed to the qualifying arts organizations. These figures reflect a 31.5-percent increase in eligible funds raised by arts organizations over the previous year.

Quicksand Craft Center at Vest ($6401), Jenny Wiley Drama Association ($9288), and the Pikeville Concert Association ($1052) were among the groups receiving awards.

For the first time, the Challenge Grant program was expanded to include two introductory phases that encourage participation by emerging arts groups. At least 90 groups from 47 Kentucky communities are now eligible to participate in the expanded Challenge Grant. First-time applicants include 29 communities and range from Flemingsburg to Albany and Elkhorn City to Benton. These groups will be raising approximately $92,000 for the arts to be matched by the state.

We're wishing you just the nicest kind of Christmas. May it be filled with laughter and good cheer. And may the good feeling continue throughout the year.

Gifts for the Sportsman

Looking for a last minute Christmas present for Uncle Harry, the quail hunter, or Brother Bob, the bass fisherman? A 1983 hunting or fishing license might be just the thing.

All Kentucky sport licenses expire at midnight, Dec. 31, so the sportsman will need a new one before his first trip of 1983. There isn't any problem about size or color and the price, in these inflationary times, is reasonable.

A resident hunting or fishing license costs $7.50 each and a combination license at $14.00 allows the sportsman to both hunt and fish for a full year. While youngsters under 16 years old do not need a fishing license, young hunters must have a junior hunting license ($4.00), issued with parental permission.

The only persons who don't need licenses are Kentucky residents who have reached their 65th birthday, land-owners or tenants and members of their immediate families hunting or fishing on lands which they own or reside and resident servicemen on furlough of four or more days who hunt or fish in the county where they lived before joining the service.

If Uncle Harry lives out of state, you'll have to spend $16.00 for an unusual non-resident fishing license or $40 for a year-round hunting license. Short term licenses are available for non-residents; a three-day fishing license costs $5 and a 15-day fishing permit, $6.50. A three-day small game hunting license is $14.50, but isn't valid for deer or turkey hunting.

Since the funds from license sales are used to finance the operations of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, that Christmas present to Brother Bob is also in effect a gift to fish and wildlife conservation in Kentucky. The money spent for licenses will ultimately be used for scientific research and management, stocking, law enforcement and education.

And when a sportsman buys hunting or fishing equipment, he also benefits conservation by an 11 percent federal excise tax on such goods. The funds from this tax are prorated back to the states and used for approved fish and wildlife research or management projects or for wildlife land acquisition.

Another excellent and inexpensive Christmas gift idea is a subscription to Happy Hunting Ground, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' bi-monthly magazine about hunting, fishing and conservation in Kentucky. A year's subscription costs only $3 for six issues and may be obtained by sending payment along with the name and complete address of the recipient to Happy Hunting Ground, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. If you'd like, a card announcing the gift subscription will be sent in your name.

The New York General Post Office handles about 20 million pieces of mail a day.

PBS in the spotlight

Alan Crisp portrays scientist Karl Von Frisch, who confirmed that honey bees can perceive color, in PBS' "The Discovery of Animal Behavior" airing Dec. 26.

Animal communication

For centuries, naturalists have been trying to discover whether animals can communicate with each other and, if so, how. Program No. 5 of "The Discovery of Animal Behavior," to air Sunday, Dec. 26 on PBS, will focus on this question. (Air dates may vary; please check local listings.) The efforts of scientists and naturalists to learn the languages of animals will be explored, including: Karl Von Frisch, who unraveled the language of honey bees, proved that fish could hear and that insects could distinguish colors; Julian Huxley, who studied the ritual movements of great-crested grebes; Konrad Lorenz, who recorded the visual language of geese and popularized the phenomenon of "imprinting"; Niko Tinbergen, who studied the habits of wasps and discovered birds react to different colors; and Esther Cullen, who along with Tinbergen, recorded the relationship of temperament in birds to their natural habitat. The work of the different scientists will be portrayed by a cast of actors including Alan Crisp, Paul Jerricho, John Ashton, Terry Wale and Jayne Lester. "The Discovery of Animal Behavior" is a co-production of the Natural History Unit of the BBC, RM Productions and WNET/Thirteen, New York. Dr. Donald Johanson, director of the Institute of Human Origins, Berkeley, Calif., is the on-camera host for the series which concludes Sunday, Jan. 2 with a program titled "Living Together."

Three Cats on All-Area Team; Haywood Named Coach of Year

Prestonsburg High School's Black Cats, winners of the AAA regional football championship, have won added honors with the Ashland Daily Independent naming four of their players to the All-Area team. And other coaches in the region have voted Prestonsburg Coach Phillip Haywood Coach of the Year. Prestonsburg players named to the mythical All-Regional: Offense—Robert Midgette, senior, back, probably the smallest of the 22 players selected. His weight was given at 140 pounds. Defense—John DeRossett, 175-pound junior defensive back; John Gilliam, senior defensive tackle (200 pounds), and B. J. Sturgill, 195-pound senior end. Midgette excelled in open field running and was credited by Coach Haywood with also being a good blocker. Besides his record as a hard-hitting back on defense, DeRossett as an offensive back gained 455 yards and scored five touchdowns. Gilliam, a two-time All-Area linebacker, was classed by his coach as "the kind of boy you want to have out there at linebacker." During the past season he had 40 solo tackles, 91 assists, four fumble recoveries and four pass interceptions. Sturgill was probably the region's top all-round kicker. Besides playing a strong defensive end position, Sturgill kicked 30 extra points and three field goals. On defense he had 10 solo tackles and 62 assists and recovered two fumbles. Named for honorable mention were three other Black Cats: Todd Nairn, Brian Pace and John Anderson. Of his selection by his peers as Coach of the Year, Haywood said: "I feel very honored, "but I think that a head coach is no better than his assistants and, of course, no better than his players. I want to give credit where credit is due. Especially one coach, Tony Burchett, who worked with the offensive and defensive lines. He did an incredible job with rebuilding the line." Others named to the All-Area team: Offense—Bill Allen, quarterback, Morgan County; Rodney Clark, back, Fairview; Eric Gray, back, Paintsville; Greg Nolan, end, East Carter; Ron Porter, end, Rowan County; Dave Hall, tackle, Raceland; Scott Roberts, tackle, East Carter; Robbie Hutchinson, guard, Morgan County; David Scarberry, center, Lawrence County. Defense—Art Daugherty, back, East Carter; Chris Valvo, back, Raceland; Danny Bostick, back, Raceland; Loran Madden, back, West Carter; Jim Byron, end, Rowan County; Chris Sparks, tackle, West Carter; Robert McFaddin, tackle, Paintsville; Pat Jones, noseguard, Rowan County.

by
Hans Christian Andersen

It was terribly cold; it snowed and was already almost dark, and evening came on, the last evening of the year. In the cold and gloom a poor little girl, bareheaded and barefoot, was walking through the streets.

Shivering with cold and hunger, she crept along, a picture of misery, poor little girl! The snowflakes covered her long fair hair, which fell in pretty curls over her neck; but she did not think of that now. In all the windows lights were shining, and there was a glorious smell of roast goose, for it was New Year's Eve. Yes, she thought of that!

Her little hands were almost benumbed with the cold. Ah, a match might do her good, if she could only draw one from the bundle and rub it against the wall and warm her hands at it. She drew one out. R-ratch! how it sputtered and burned! It was a warm, bright flame, like a little candle, when she held her hands over it; it was a wonderful little light!

She rubbed another match against the wall; it became bright again, and in the brightness her old grandmother stood clear and shining, mild and lovely.

And she hastily rubbed the whole bundle of matches, for she wished to hold her grandmother fast. And the matches burned with such a glow that it became brighter than in the middle of the day; grandmother had never been so large or so beautiful. She took the little girl in her arms, and both flew in brightness and joy above the earth, very very high, and up there was neither cold, nor hunger, nor care—they were with God.

★ The Best Gift ★

By WILMAY
The greatest gift in history occurred when God gave his only Son for mankind. Christ presented one comparable to it by forsaking heaven in its majestic splendor to make the longest visit on record, coming to earth for 33 years, atoning for the sins of the world on Calvary, paying our sin debt on the cross with his blood. He did this voluntarily, for he could have summoned an army to rescue him from the mob in a second, or destroyed them himself.

Many have risked and sacrificed their lives for others. That's wonderful, but Jesus left the inimitable glories above to assume human form, live in a humble home though He was the King of Kings, and to give his life for us. That's indescribable. Like God, he owned the universe, having created it himself.

There will never be one to compare with him. Several founders of religions other than Christianity achieved success and fame but Christ alone rose from the dead. For millions that's unbelievable, it seems.

Although it is established that Jesus was born in the spring and not in winter his birthday of pagan origin is celebrated in December. Since he gave so much to humanity, what shall we give him this Yuletide? The little left from shopping, the small sum remaining after bills are paid, a dollar in the church offering plate on Sundays? Will we take time to reread the matchless Christmas story in Luke 2, study his word, or will we devour sports, society pages, TV guide, read trashy magazines, spend hours on either or both, watch any program regardless of content? Will we share with the needy, unemployed, sick and lonely? Christ said, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Mt. 25:40. Only God can foresee the final harvest from any kindness.

Will we pack theaters, night clubs, gyms and stadiums, but fail to attend church during the holiday season? Will unchristian activities consume our leisure, often with costly admission fees, while thousands are ill, cold, and hungry, and friendless? Or will we shift gears, help turn the national tide for materialism and pleasure, live more for people, care less for things, like luxuries, and status symbols which all of us have of one kind or another? The world is hungry for love, companionship, friendship, understanding, compassion, warmth and love. It craves people like Jesus who give of themselves. Are we too preoccupied to give these priceless commodities that don't cost a dime?

Years ago, one Sunday afternoon some of us visited a dying man in Maytown. He was overjoyed, talked more than expected. A basket of fruit was on a table beside his bed, the donor's card visible. One caller commented on its beauty. The patient surprisingly broke into tears and sobbed, "There was a day when she would have come to see me but she's too busy now." Isn't that true of most of us today, all too often? Haven't we heard folks say, "We never get together any more except at the funeral home or for weddings."

These questions are more serious than we realize, for only God knows what lies ahead for America which is rapidly deteriorating morally and spiritually. As a nation we have lived extravagantly for decades under administrations of both parties, charging multiplied billions to our great-great-grandchildren, permitting untold graft and corruption in and out of government at all levels, if the media are half-way correct. The sound principles of thrift instilled and practiced by our founding forefathers have been ignored fifty years. Rom. 13:8. Pay day has come, marring the happiness of millions, robbing them of joy which should be spelled: "J" for JESUS FIRST; "O" for OTHERS, second; and "Y" for YOU (and Me.) last.

To do an about-face is a gigantic order that only God's children can initiate, for "happiness is like rare perfume inside you on a shelf, when you rub some on the other fellow you spill a whole lot on yourself," according to some unknown poet. How will we spend this Christmas? What will we give Jesus?

Lost Bronze Age Found In Southeastern Asia

By MADELEINE JACOBS
Smithsonian News Service

PHILADELPHIA—An eerie silence greets visitors to the basement storage room in the venerable University Museum of the University of Pennsylvania. Here, a few flights below exhibition halls displaying treasures from past civilizations, are 5,000 unbleached cotton sacks, unceremoniously stacked on dozens of floor-to-ceiling shelves.

Containing more than 1 million scraps and fragments of excavated pottery dating back to 55 centuries, the mite bags have already spoken volumes about an ancient agricultural people who settled and thrived in what is now the village of Ban Chiang in northeast Thailand. The prehistoric people of Ban Chiang carved no tablets, painted no frescoes, built no cities, but they left evidence in their pottery and metalwork of an artistically and technologically sophisticated civilization which flourished for some 4,000 years.

"The discoveries at Ban Chiang, particularly early bronze metalwork dated to sometime after 3000 B.C. and some of the oldest ironwork yet unearthed in East Asia, were completely unexpected," University Museum archaeologist Joyce White says. "Finding these objects thousands of miles from the accepted centers of cultural innovation has caused scientists to rethink traditional theories about the development of civilization in Southeast Asia, long considered to be a cultural backwater of China and India."

The public now has its first opportunity to glimpse this remarkable lost culture in a new exhibition—a rich array of handsome pottery spanning four millenia, bronze tools, utensils and jewelry such as anklets and bracelets and other artifacts uncovered from the excavations. The show opened last month, appropriately, at Philadelphia's University Museum, which, with Thailand's Department of Fine Arts, undertook the excavations and subsequent scientific analyses. Those organizations and the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service are sponsoring the exhibition, which will visit eight major American cities before traveling in 1985 to its permanent home in Thailand.

The story behind the exhibition begins more than 15 years ago, in July 1966, when Stephen Young, son of the then U.S. Ambassador to Thailand, was carrying out anthropological research in Ban Chiang and stumbled—literally—over the site. While walking down a sloping path, Young tripped over the root of a kapok tree.

"I caught myself with my hands as I fell forward," Young recalled. "When I hit the ground, right underneath my face was a round circle...it was obviously the top rim of a pot...I got up to look around and saw that the entire area...was littered with these round tops. I guessed it was the top of a burial ground."

Young took samples of the potsherds to Thai experts, and eventually the sherds were sent to the University Museum for dating. Soon after, Thai scientists conducted test excavations at Ban Chiang, uncovering stone tools and bronze as well as more pottery.

Then came the startling news: One of Young's potsherds seemed to date back to 4630 B.C. (a date that was later revised substantially). "This date for a Bronze Age site in Southeast Asia was unheard of!" says White, who has been involved with the Ban Chiang project for six years and, as a research associate at the University Museum, has been the creative force behind the exhibition. "Moreover, excavations at a site near Ban Chiang, Non Nok Tha, had turned up bronze axes and bracelets that appeared to be made locally and might have dated back to 3000 B.C."

The finds created a sensation, and Ban Chiang became famous almost overnight.

"After all," White says, "the traditional theory held that bronze technology was established originally in the Middle East around 3000 B.C. and eventually spread—about 2,500 years later—to Southeast Asia. Although Bronze Age items had been reported from haphazard excavations all over mainland Southeast Asia for over 100 years, everyone assumed that they had been introduced from other regions—India or China, for instance.

"Basically," she explains, "little research had been done in Southeast Asia. It was a vicious circle. No one did research there because the area was considered culturally uninteresting, and it was considered uninteresting because no one had done research."

That soon was to change. A full-scale excavation was launched at Ban Chiang in 1974. The largest ever conducted in Southeast Asia, the excavation was directed by the late archaeologist Chester F. Gorman of the University Museum, who had earlier excavated a Stone Age culture dating to 12,000 B.C. at Spirit Cave in northern Thailand, and Pitsi Charoenwongsa of the Thai Fine Arts Department.

Tons of soil were sifted to retrieve every sherd, scrap of bone and fragment of metal. After two seasons of fieldwork, 18 tons of material, including more than 1 1/4 million pottery sherds, 200 pots and 2,000 other artifacts—most associated with burials—were sent to the University Museum for analysis. The skeletal remains from 123 human burials were sent to the University of Hawaii, animal remains to New Zealand. A battery of the latest sophisticated scientific methods was employed to study the metal objects. Pots were laboriously reconstructed in the basement of the University Museum. Data were computerized for easy retrieval.

In 1979, White went to Ban Chiang for 20 months to gather information on current lifestyles and the present-day ecology to see what might be learned about the past.

From years of detailed study and analysis, a picture of life at Ban Chiang has begun to emerge.

The early inhabitants, White says, settled around 4000 B.C. on a rise near two seasonal streams, bringing with them the rudiments of an agricultural village lifestyle. They built simple huts

Gardners May Use Ashes with Caution

The use of wood ashes in the garden should present few problems for gardeners, and coal ashes can be applied with caution, according to an Extension horticulturist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Questions about applying wood and coal ashes to the garden often arise during the winter months," said Dr. Jean English, who works at Robinson Substation-Quicksand.

The main value of wood ashes lies in their potassium and calcium carbonate (lime) contents, explains English.

Wood ashes are about 45 percent carbonate, with hardwood ash being about one-third higher in lime than softwood ash. "Thus, you would have to apply about twice the weight of wood ashes as lime to meet a particular lime requirement," the specialist said.

If the pH of a soil is 6.7-7.8, no lime is required, according to English. On a soil with a pH of 6.1-6.7, an average application of limestone is about 50 pounds per 1,000 square feet, so about 100 pounds of wood ashes per 1,000 square feet could be applied safely.

"If you remove about five pounds of ashes from your stove each week, you could make 20 trips to a 1,000-square-foot garden without worrying about raising the pH of the soil too much," English said.

She added that gardeners who apply wood ashes to their gardens year after year should have the soil pH checked regularly. "Also, wood ashes should not be applied to soil around acid-loving plants, such as azaleas, rhododendrons, blueberries and pin oaks."

Wood ashes contain no nitrogen, 1-2 percent phosphate and 4-10 percent potash. Thus, 100 pounds of wood ashes would supply about two pounds of phosphate and 4-10 pounds of potash per 1,000 square feet. Since the highest recommended amount of potash per 1,000 square feet needed on a low potassium soil is four pounds, 100 pounds of wood ashes could meet all of your needs for this element, English said.

"Soil tests should be done regularly to make sure your soil is not becoming too high in potassium, since too much potassium can interfere with the uptake of other essential elements, such as calcium and magnesium," explained English.

Recommendations for phosphorus range from 1-7 pounds of phosphate per 1,000 square feet, so little danger of oversupplying phosphorus from wood ashes exists.

The application of coal ashes to gardens can present problems of salt and boron toxicity to plants, and the coarser particles of coal can make a soil to gravelly, according to English.

She recommends that coal ashes be sifted to remove anything larger than sand-size particles. Then apply the fine particles in a layer about one-third inch deep over the garden. Such an application probably can be repeated for three or four years before potentially toxic levels of salt or boron are reached, English said.

These applications will supply most of the potassium, calcium, magnesium and sulfur needed by crops while elements such as nitrogen and phosphorus will have to be supplied by other fertilizers.

English points out that most coal ash has a pH of 6-7, so it should not be used around acid-loving plants. "You should also avoid adding much or any ash to boron-sensitive and salt-sensitive crops, such as fruit trees, garden beans, celery, radishes, cucumbers, squash, peas and Jerusalem artichokes," advises English.

Plants that can tolerate boron and salt are asparagus, beets, spinach, broad beans, turnips, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts and rutabaga.

"If areas of leaves begin to die or appear scorched, especially along leaf margins, toxic levels of boron may have been reached," notes English. Toxic levels will be reduced by weathering and leaching within three years if no more boron is added to the soil, she said.

Researcher Says TV May Not Harm Kids

Television may not have the harmful effects on children some people claim, says a Western Kentucky University researcher.

Through a grant from the Kentucky Department of Education, Dr. Thomas P. Dunn, professor of sociology, has studied how TV influences youngsters, and he says monitoring viewing is a parent's responsibility.

Dunn and a senior honors student, Sandra Long, of Mammoth Cave, are presenting their research on "Television and Children": It's Not All Black and White," to parent-teacher associations all across the state.

"Parents have been made to feel unnecessarily guilty about letting their children watch TV, and this is a controversial issue. Lobbyists for and against TV both present convincing arguments that only confuse parents," Dunn says.

"The majority of information on the subject comes to the public from organizations and people with vested interests," Dunn says. "Networks have studies that show television isn't harmful, while others try to make livings writing books that scare people into buying them because they talk about the harmful effects," he says.

Many parents who see his presentations are already concerned parents, Dunn says.

"It's the ones who don't come who often need to be reached," he says. His approach, Dunn says, is "rather conservative." "We suggest parents decide whether Jerry Falwell is better for their children than T. J. Hooker or Magnum P. I.," Dunn says.

He says he does try to emphasize the relationships in mediating the effects of TV. "That's just another part of being a parent," he says, and Dunn recommends parents watch at least one episode of their child's favorite program and explain actions such as stuntmen's and special camera tricks.

Elementary teachers are encouraged to take their classes to a television station for a tour, to let them look through cameras, and Dunn offers assigning each child to write a commercial about a favorite toy or game, then read it aloud to the class. "This demonstrates to children how advertisers sometimes exaggerate the value and ability of a product in order to sell it," he says. Actual viewing of television isn't going to cause psychological or sociological problems, Dunn asserts. The responsibility again lies with the parents to determine what may be causing a child's behavioral problems if there are any, he says. "There's no evidence indicating heavy TV viewing itself can produce a sociopath. If there were conclusive evidence, attorneys would have surely found it by now," he says. "Ours was a violent society before television. All of our classical operas and plays—even the Bible—contain violence."

Keeping Good Records Eases Tax Preparation

Good tax records can save taxpayers substantial time and money when preparing income tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service said.

If their financial records are in order, taxpayers can save themselves hours of searching for earnings statements, or lost receipts and cancelled checks. These records are not only necessary to prepare a complete and accurate return, but they can save money when people become aware of deductions they might have otherwise overlooked.

The types of records to save for those filing both the Form 1040 and the shorter Form 1040A include income statements, such as Forms W-2 and W-2P, and Forms 1099, the latter reporting interest and dividends from financial institutions.

Taxpayers who itemize deductions on Form 1040 need receipts, cancelled checks, etc., for such things as medical and dental payments and contributions to churches, universities, and charities. Taxpayers should keep statements to substantiate mortgage and real estate tax payments, and bank loan and credit card interest payments. Records of the real estate taxes and personal property taxes paid during the tax year are also helpful. Other miscellaneous items to keep records of might include payments of union dues, uniform expenses, and tax assistance fees—all these can be deducted, too.

Taxpayers must have receipts that document and support the deductions claimed on tax returns should the IRS examine them. Tax records which support items of income or deductions claimed on a return should be kept at least until the period of limitation expires for that return. Usually this is three years from the date the return was due or filed, or two years from the date the tax was paid, whichever is later.

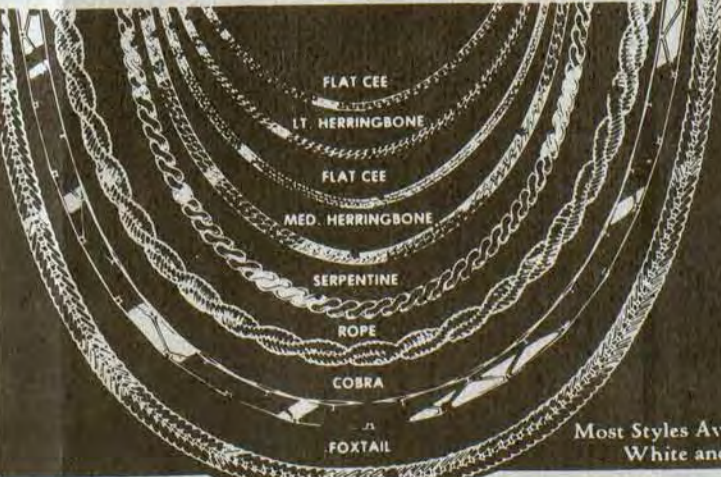

The IRS publishes a free publication on recordkeeping for tax purposes. To obtain a copy of Publication 552, "Recordkeeping Requirements and a List of Tax Publications," write the IRS Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 636, Florence, KY 41042.

In Antarctica, a "Meteoric" Christmas

By MADELEINE JACOBS
Smithsonian News Service

The scene might have been a typical Christmas. Anywhere, USA—a festive holiday celebration with friends, an after dinner stroll and, as it turned out later, some very special gifts. Only this was Antarctica and Bob Fudali and his companions were 12,000 miles from home, sharing a makeshift meal in a cramped eight-foot-square tent on a wind-swept stretch of snow and ice known as the Allan Hills.

After dinner, bundled up against the mind-numbing cold, Fudali, a 48-year-old Smithsonian Institution geochemist on his first trip to the frozen continent, wandered off from the tiny temporary encampment. He had walked a few hundred yards when he spotted a glassy black object through the icy glare. Approaching it, he spied another, then a third.

"I thought, 'My God, there they are, just like they told me they would be!'" he recalled. After only a few weeks at the bottom of the world, Bob Fudali had found his first three meteorites—and on Christmas Day!

Until recently, finding a single meteorite—much less three at once—was just a bit more common than finding the proverbial hen's teeth. Although some 500 meteorites fall to Earth each year, a mere five to ten of these were ever found—and then largely by luck. But all has changed in the past decade, following the surprising discovery that parts of Antarctica, due to a quirk of nature, are a rich source of meteorites, including many rare and several important new types.

Scientists have long been interested in meteorites because tests show that nearly all were formed some 4.5 billion years ago, at the same time as the solar system itself. Locked within these chunks of rock and iron are complex records of truly ancient events, providing scientists with their most direct clues to the birth and early history of the sun, the Earth, the planets and their moons.

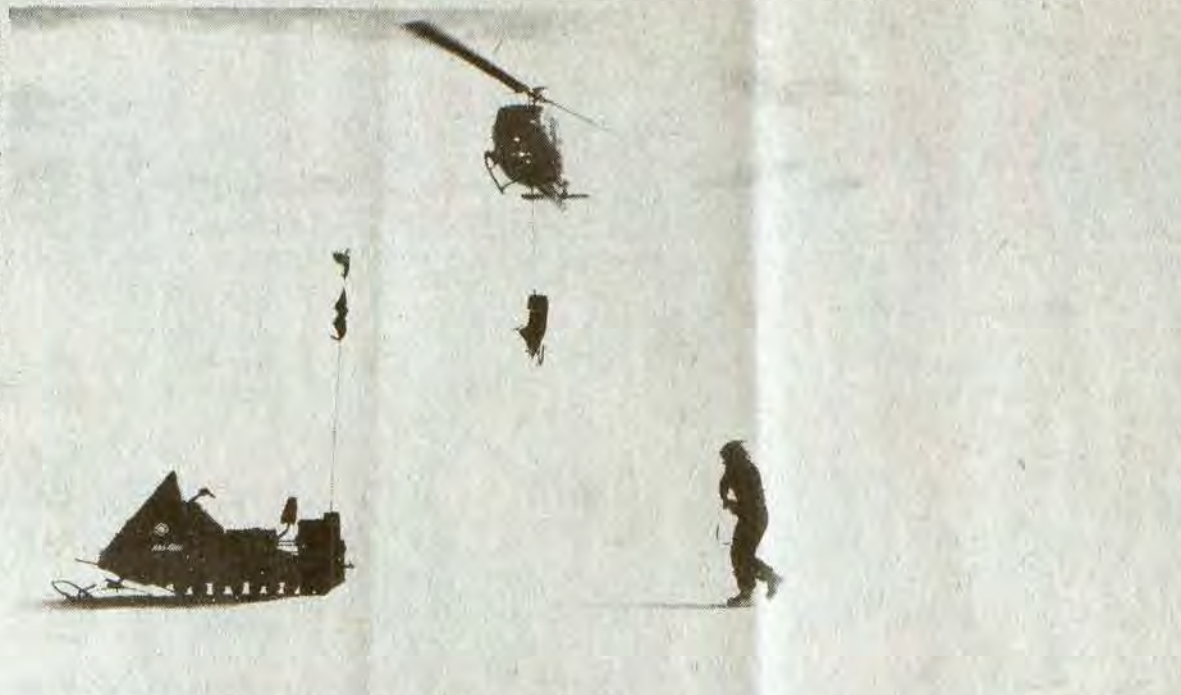

Because meteorites are so rare, there have been relatively few available for study; only about 2,400 were known, most of them in the world's museum collections. Then, in 1969, Japanese scientists studying the Antarctic ice sheet unexpectedly came across nine meteorites, all within a small area. In 1973, Dr. William A. Cassidy, a geologist from the University of Pittsburgh, attended a meeting at which this discovery was described.

"It was startling," the 54-year-old scientist remembers. "Normally, meteorite specimens found in a small area are fragments from a single meteorite. But the Japanese were describing at least four different types, which indicated they were from different falls. It seemed clear that something special was happening in Antarctica."

In the next four years, the Japanese did additional searching, finding an astonishing 991 meteorite specimens within one small area. Prior to 1969, only four meteorites had been found on the whole continent.

"Something special" is indeed happening in Antarctica, but it isn't that meteorites are falling more frequently there than in other parts of the world. Rather, Cassidy explains, their abundance is a consequence of what happens to them after they fall.

Spending Christmas (and New Year's) in Antarctica may not sound like much fun, but scientists know it is one of the best times of the year to find meteorites, which are relatively abundant on parts of this vast, frozen continent. Here, a helicopter from McMurdo Station delivers snowmobiles and gear to scientists for a month-long collecting expedition.

Simply stated, over the course of thousands and thousands of years, meteorites fall onto the snow-covered land. The snow compresses and recrystallizes into ice, and the meteorites are carried with the ice flow to the edges of the continent, where most drift out to sea in icebergs and are lost. But in parts of Antarctica, the ice flow is halted at a barrier, such as the Allan Hills in the Transantarctic Mountain Range. At these special places, the snow and ice are worn away by wind, and exposed meteorites from many different falls accumulate on bare ice patches that can be identified from aerial photos.

Today, thanks largely to Japanese efforts and Cassidy's curiosity and persistence, these bare ice patches have become annual mecca for meteorite scientists. Since 1976, Cassidy has been the principal investigator in the U.S. Antarctic Search for Meteorites, program sponsored by the National Science Foundation with assistance from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Smithsonian Institution.

Searches are conducted only during the Antarctic summer—two months between late November and late January—when the continent is bathed in sunlight 24 hours a day and temperatures climb to a bearable minus 10 plus 10 degrees Fahrenheit.

In the field, meteorites are treated as the precious cargo from outer space they are, and, in fact, they are handled much like the moon rocks. Because they have been buried in ice under sterile or nearly sterile conditions for centuries, many of these meteorites are in virtually pristine condition. To prevent earthly contamination, they are picked up with stainless steel tongs, sealed in double plastic bags and kept frozen until they arrive at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston. After initial processing there, chips are sent to the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C., for characterization. This information is distributed to scientists around the world so they may request specimens for detailed investigation.

To date, scientists have retrieved from Antarctica more than 5,000 meteorite specimens, which experts say may represent as many as 500 different meteorite falls.

Numbers are only the tip of the iceberg, however. "These meteorites," Cassidy says, "are really a special subset of the world's meteorites. Non-Antarctic meteorites represent falls during the last 200 or 300 years. Almost all the Antarctic meteorites have been on Earth much, much longer. Only a few fell less than 10,000 years ago; most fell between 30,000 and 400,000 years ago, and at least one has been on Earth for 700,000 years."

But it is the incredible diversity of the meteorites that most excites scientists. "It's like Christmas every time I get a new shipment of these—you never know what new types you'll find!" exclaims Dr. Brian H. Mason, a Smithsonian geochemist who has spent 30 years studying meteorites and now works almost entirely on Antarctic meteorites.

A "Meteoric" Christmas

Mason's job—and that of Dr. Roy S. Clarke, Jr., curator of the Smithsonian's meteorite collection—initially is to describe and classify each meteorite.

Scientists believe that most meteorites formed at the birth of the solar system, developing inside "parent bodies" within the asteroid belt, a band of rocks and debris orbiting the sun between Mars and Jupiter. By looking at sections of a meteorite sliced so thin in the laboratory that light passes through them, researchers can identify specific minerals, whose presence reveals information about the temperatures and pressures under which the meteorite formed. This, in turn, gives information about the size and the thermal history of the parent body.

By bombarding the surfaces of thin sections with electrons to generate X-rays, researchers also can determine the precise chemical content of individual mineral grains. And by measuring radioactivity levels, scientists can determine when the meteorites formed, when they broke off from their parent bodies and how long they've been on Earth, among other things.

Among the special finds in Antarctic meteorites have been amino acids, the basic building block of life, which may have existed in the primordial nebular cloud of gas and dust that eventually condensed to form the solar system. These substances could provide clues to the nature of the organic compounds that were precursors of life.

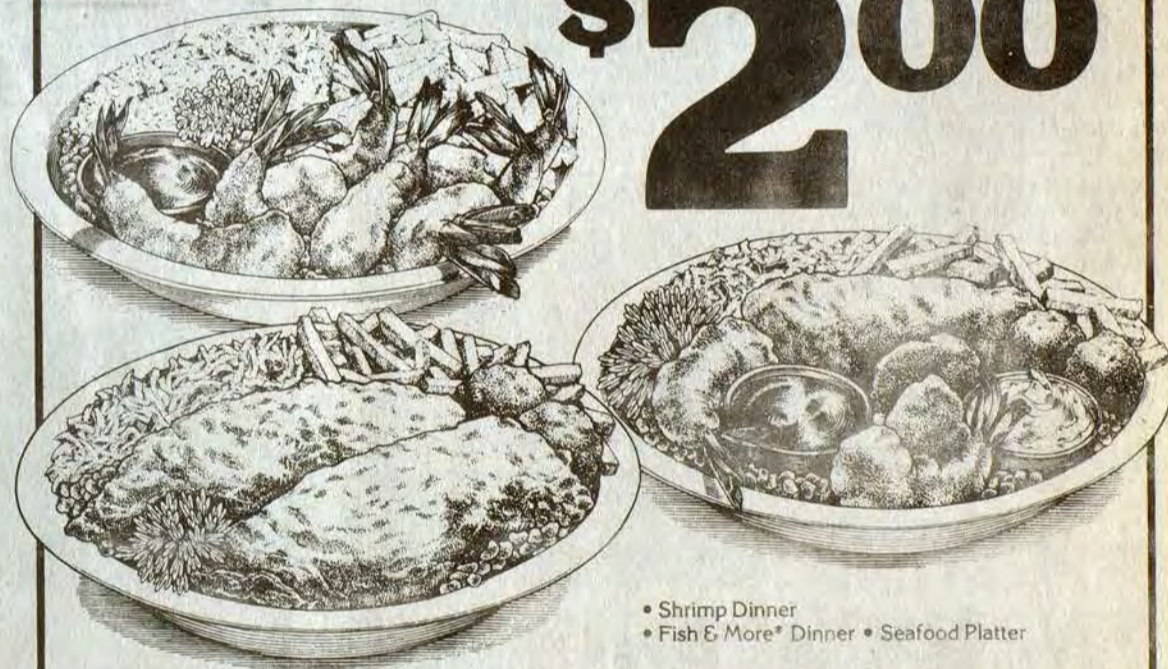

Researchers have even found two meteorites that are 3 billion years younger than almost all others. These, they believe, may have originated when a large meteorite crashed into Mars and tore them loose from that planet's surface.

Last year's record haul of 373 meteorites from Allan Hills also contained at least one surprise, this a meteorite collected on the last day of the expedition. "I'd never seen a meteorite like it before," Mason says, "but it had a remarkable resemblance to some of the lunar rocks collected by the astronauts." Could this object have come from the moon? The answer, he says, will have to wait for additional tests.

Meanwhile, scientists believe that millions of meteorite fragments lie encased in the Antarctic ice cap, awaiting slow migration to the surface and eventual exhumation by the wind. Nor should there be a shortage of future explorers, as the testimonial of Dr. Ursula Marvin of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., demonstrates. The geologist broke a leg last year in Antarctica when she collided with a snowmobile. But she'll be back. Says Marvin: "For a scientist who has always worked on meteorites obtained from museums, nothing can equal the joy of discovering your first meteorite sitting on a patch of rippled blue Antarctic ice."

"Most men admire virtue who follow not her lore."

Directories Feature Kentucky Crafts

Kentucky First Lady Phyllis George Brown is flanked by two artists whose work appears on the cover of the 1983 South Central Bell directory. Mrs. Brown gave sample covers to Warren May, with his daughter Arie and to Sharon Anderson. Several other craftsmen were also honored.

Kentucky's first lady and South Central Bell Telephone Company paid tribute recently to the state's rustic and handsome artistic heritage.

In the State Reception Hall, with its chandeliers and marble-topped tables, Phyllis George Brown, wife of Governor John Y. Brown, Jr., honored makers of mountain dulcimers and pewter plates, hand-sewn quilts, coverlets and dolls and baskets of corn-shuck flowers. She honored the artists by presenting them with enlarged copies of a still-life photograph of their work that will become the cover of Bell's Kentucky telephone directory in 1983.

For the past several years, Mrs. Brown has led a campaign to promote Kentucky crafts in chic big-city department stores across the country.

Bell Vice-President Stan Dickson said, "We wanted to have our cover reflect the entire state. Here is a directory cover that says Kentucky is proud of its artistic heritage."

Mrs. Brown presented sample covers to the artists whose work appeared in the picture, including: Charles Lane, a Louisville attorney and pewterer; Warren A. May of Berea, who crafted the mountain dulcimer; Sharon Anderson of Pine Knot, representing Kentucky Hills Industries, the co-op which made the corn shuck flower and to Lila Bellando of Berea, representing Churchill Weavers, makers of the coverlet.

Mrs. Brown also gave a cover to Jo Noe, of Louisville, whose rag doll is cleverly reflected in the pewter plate in the directory cover full-color still-life photograph. Mary Pineau, who made the quilt for David Appalachian Crafts, will receive her photograph later.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Ada Jane Moore wishes to extend sincere thanks to the Left Beaver Rescue Squad, the doctors and nurses of the McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital, the Pilgrim Rest Church and the clergy for their help during our mother's passing. Drunk and Drugged Driving Marked by Awareness Week

Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr. has proclaimed Dec. 12-18 as Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week in Kentucky.

The proclamation is aimed at encouraging activities which will foster public awareness of the part driving under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol plays in traffic deaths and injuries.

In particular, the governor is asking Kentucky drivers to show their concern about the drunk and drugged driving problem by turning on their headlights during the daylight hours of Saturday, Dec. 18, in addition to hours of darkness that day.

The awareness week was set in mid-December both to coincide with a national observance and because the Christmas and New Year's holiday season is a time of increased travel and party-going, a combination which can lead to increased drinking and driving.

Kentucky State Police

statistics give an indication of how serious the problem is.

Statistics supplied by the traffic records section show most traffic deaths during Christmas Weekend and New Year's Weekend last year resulted from accidents involving drinking drivers.

During Christmas Weekend 1981, 6 p.m. Dec. 24 to midnight Dec. 27, there were six fatal traffic accidents (two single-vehicle accidents and four two-vehicle accidents) with eight people killed.

Five of these six fatal accidents involved a drinking driver.

During the New Year's Weekend 1981, 6 p.m. Dec. 31 to midnight Jan. 3, there were eight fatal accidents (six single-vehicle accidents, a vehicle/pedestrian accident and a two-vehicle accident) which resulted in a total of eight deaths.

Five of the eight fatal accidents during New Year's Weekend 1981 involved a drinking driver.

Similar statistics on the number of "drugged driver" accidents are not available.

However, as Gov. Brown's proclamation states, "There are increased reports of traffic accidents involving drivers who have taken drugs or combination of drugs and alcohol before driving."

The proclamation urges "citizens and civic groups to observe the (awareness) week with appropriate activities."

One avenue of citizen involvement is the new statewide drunk driver detection program. People are being asked to call the state police hotline (1-800-222-5555) when they spot an intoxicated driver.

The program, called Action RAPID (Report a Problem: Intoxicated Driver) is being operated by the Kentucky State Police with funds from the Cabinet for Human Resources.

In addition to reporting drunk drivers, Kentuckians should further safeguard their life and health by not taking the wheel if their own driving skills are weakened, advised the state police.

Most people realize alcohol and illegal drugs erode driving skills and slow reaction time. But the ability to drive safely can also be impaired by certain prescription and over-the-counter medication.

Before taking medication, the user should read the label. If there's no clear indication concerning whether the medicine will impair driving skills, the person should consult his or her physician or pharmacist.

Travelers can help protect themselves from other drivers who are drunk or drugged by practicing defensive driving. Observing the traffic laws and by buckling up their seat belts. Children under 40 inches tall should be in child restraints.

At Christmas time each year, the joyful strains of carols can be heard through the halls of many hospitals and convalescent homes. The carolers may be members of a church or just a group of friends, brought together in the spirit of the season, spreading cheer to those who will not be home for Christmas.

Whether it's a thoughtful gesture toward a neighbor in need, or through a charitable group activity, the holiday season seems to bring out the desire in people to do that "good deed" that shines forth each year as brightly as the Christmas star.

Animals as Christmas Gifts Are Often Ill-Advised Choice

Pets are among America's most ill-advised Christmas gifts. Soft-eyed puppies, and frolicsome kittens, gleefully tumble in pet shop windows. Their appeal is tremendous. The sales are high.

A month later, many of those same delightful animals will be covering miserably in the cages of the local animal pound. Others will already be dead—unwanted and abandoned to bleak winter.

The simple point here is that although many people find great happiness in giving a young animal as a Christmas gift, not everybody is so happy about receiving one. And it takes exceptional courage to reject the gift of a helpless, ribbon-festooned kitten on Christmas morning.

Usually, the animal is received with gracious thanks, and then somehow disappears in a few weeks. Responsible people burdened with an animal they don't really want take it to a respectable shelter. And shelters all over America have experienced a great population explosion during the weeks immediately after Christmas for many decades now.

Humane jurisdictions require that animals in shelters be either adopted by new owners, or humanely euthanized. Other jurisdictions also force animals to be funneled off to experiment labs and other cruel ends.

Anyone considering a gift of a living creature should also consider the following points:

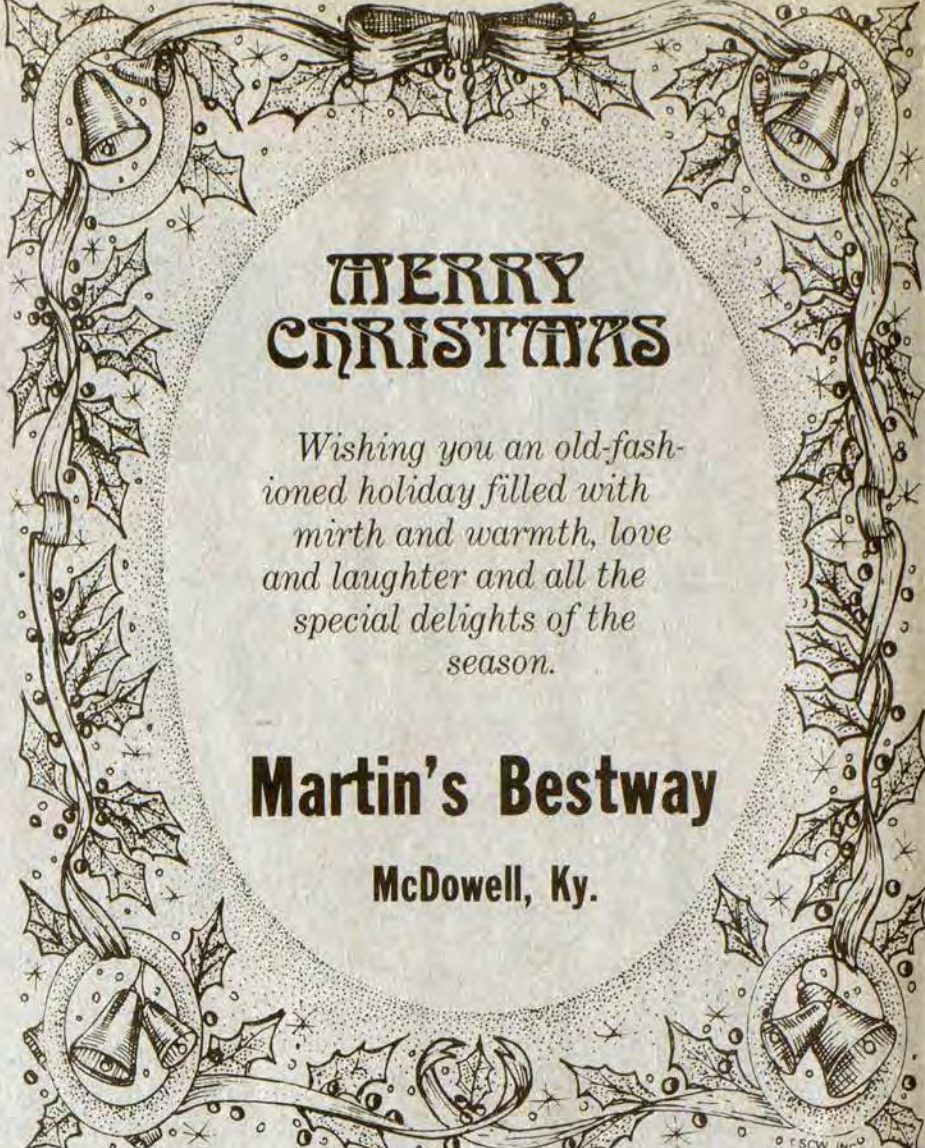

1. Make absolutely sure the animal is wanted. If this means losing the joy of surprise, so be it. Better no surprise than risking tragedy with an animal's life.

2. Make absolutely sure the receiver is capable of giving the animal all the care and attention it deserves. Too often, kittens and puppies are given to children who are wildly infatuated about the pet, but are not mature enough to insure that the animal is properly tended. Also, "companion" animals are now frequently given to older people who have neither the strength, nor the resources, to provide basic care for those pets.

3. If somebody you love really wants an animal, and is mature enough to provide it with good care and attention, why not agree between you to wait a few days, or weeks, after Christmas. Go shopping around the animal shelters in early January, and it's likely you'll find many appealing animals—some purebred, some sprightly mongrels. Your gift of joy will also become an errand of mercy.

4. If the shelter does not have its own requirements for spaying the animal, contact Friends of Animals, 11 West 60th Street, New York, NY 10023 for information on low-cost spaying. Spayed animals make better pets—they're better tempered, more reliable and easier to train. (It's no accident that more than 90 percent of all the seeing-eye dogs in the world are spayed females). Spaying your pet will also protect you from having to deal with an unwanted litter later in the year—a litter which could put you in the position of having to give away a half-dozen puppies or kittens, knowing that some of the recipients really don't want them. These are the creatures which keep the pounds and shelters full the other eleven months of the year.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Wishing you an old-fashioned holiday filled with mirth and warmth, love and laughter and all the special delights of the season.

Preparation Can Make Childbirth Shorter, Easier, More Enjoyable

By NELL VALENTINE
 Big Sandy Family and Childbirth Education Assn.
 How important are prepared childbirth and the first few minutes of life?

Whether it is husband and wife, or woman and friend, the couple who prepares for childbirth is likely to have a shorter, more comfortable and enjoyable experience. Being prepared for childbirth involves learning the stages of labor and comfort measures for each, exercising to strengthen certain muscles, and conditioning the mind to concentrate and the body to relax during uncomfortable moments.

Relaxing the body allows the uterus to work more effectively, so that labor is shorter. The partner of the laboring woman can give relief to her for discomforts such as a dry mouth, backache, a hot face or cold feet. He can boost her morale and calm her fears. When the woman concentrates on something other than the contractions, she is able to block out the pain, and go much longer without anesthetics. Knowledge is helpful, too, in the event of a Caesarian delivery, and to plan for breastfeeding.

Many women are able to give birth without any anesthetic. These mothers feel euphoric and energetic after birth, and are in good condition to greet the newborn. An unmedicated baby has a spell of about one hour after birth in which it is in a quiet alert state. It has very good vision, good hearing, and responds to its mother and father by looking into their eyes and moving as they touch it. It will nuzzle or suckle at the breast for the first time. This is a rare moment which can never happen again, a perfect opportunity for parents to begin becoming attached and committed to their infant.

Bonding can happen at any time, but it seems to be facilitated in the beginning by an unmedicated mother and baby, a relaxed, homelike atmosphere, and time for parents to be alone with their baby. Hospitals are arranging routines and rooms so that parents can have these precious moments which will remain fresh in their memories the rest of their lives.

For more information concerning prepared childbirth, breastfeeding, and bonding, contact the Big Sandy Family and Childbirth Education Association office at Prestonsburg Community College. Pamphlets are available there and at the Resource Center at Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.
