Multi-Million Reclamation Program Announced Here

A large landholding firm, a coal company and a university will cooperate in a multimillion-dollar experiment designed to turn reclaimed stripmines to agricultural uses, it was announced here last week.

Pocahontas Land Co. will join Martiki Coal Corp. and Morehead State University in the project, officials of the three bodies announced at a press conference at Prestonsburg High School last Wednesday.

The land and coal companies will share the cost of the 15-year venture, estimated at between $2 million and $3 million, while Morehead will manage it, it was said.

Martiki donated a 250-acre site in Martin county for the first phase of the program, which was announced last August. Several hogs are on the site and alfalfa and clover are already waist-high, said MSU President Morris Norfleet.

Plans also call for poultry, beef cattle and sheep at the site, as well as row crops, orchards, greenhouses, vegetables and commercial forests. A byproduct of the poultry and swine operations will be large quantities of manure to fertilize the soil.

Two hundred acres will be developed each year over the next 15 years until 4000 acres of stripmined land will have been converted to productive use, it is hoped.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins, who also announced the project at a meeting here of the Big Sandy Rural Electric Cooperative, said the venture shows a concern for "the future, when coal would cease" to be the major resource of the region, and for "the future of land resources of eastern Kentucky created by mountaintop surface mining of coal." Several attempts have been made before to maintain crops on stripmined land, with mixed results. Former Kentucky Governor Edward T. "Ned" Breathitt, now a vice-president of Pocahontas Land Company's parent firm, Norfolk Southern Corporation, called the present project "a kind of demonstration."

The problem is "what we're going to have when coal is gone. That's what we as a corporation are trying to find out," said Breathitt, adding, "Only time will tell if it's economically feasible."

Group Protests Board's Choice

New Board Member

Fred Newsome, 54, of Grethel, was sworn in last Wednesday by County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. as a member of the Floyd Board of Education. He will represent Educational District No. 3 in place of John M. Stumbo, who resigned from the board to become judge-executive.

Pack Is Named New Principal For W'wright

In spite of some local pressure to name former principal Don Daniels to succeed Wilbur Jamerson as principal at Wheelwright High School, the Board of Education last week picked an outsider for the job.

The board named Ervin B. Pack, 48, a teacher for 25 years and, for the past two years, principal and athletic director of Lynch (Harlan county) Elementary and High Schools.

Ann Hunt and Pat Vicars, who were among a small group of Daniels' supporters at the Wednesday night board meeting, criticized the choice of Pack, arguing that a "local man" should have been chosen.

Mrs. Vicars complained that the board, which had discussed at length the awarding of contracts for school annuals and photographs, chose Pack hastily and without public discussion. "Annuals and pictures are more important (to the board) than our children at Wheelwright," she told the board, adding, "We got nothing but a dirty deal."

In a conversation later with Dr. Mary Hall, board member for the Left Beaver district, Mrs. Vicars said Daniels had proven himself to be "someone parents can work with" and suggested he had been passed over because he once sued the board. She carried a petition with the names of 587 Wheelwright-area executive.

'Underground Ambulance' Floyd Man's Design

State mining regulations now require that all operations of more than 25 employees have at least one certified emergency medical technician (E.M.T.) on hand to provide improved first aid capabilities in case of accident. A Floyd county man, familiar with the needs of E.M.T.'s and with first-hand knowledge of the nature of coal mining, has come up with an innovative system which promises to enhance the effectiveness of first-aid response in underground mines.

Curtis L. Hughes, of Martin is an E.M.T., he was a coal mine inspector for three years and a coal operator for six. It was with such a background that he designed and has begun to manufacture, through his newly-formed company, Energy Equipment, Inc., of Martin, an underground ambulance and first aid station.

The whole project has only come about since he began design and started some preliminary work from his brother Bill's welding shop on Buck's Branch in January of this year, yet the first aid system has already been featured in the July issue of "The Scoop," the official newsletter of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals.

Working from the simple premise, as Hughes pointed out, "that an E.M.T. would not be of much use unless he had something to work with," a self-contained, mobile system was arrived at which could be quickly transported to the site of a mine accident. Measuring 6 x 12-ft. and weighing 790 pounds when empty, the unit is made up of two

County Students Score Poorly in Recent Tests

While Kentucky students scored better in every grade and every subject in which they were tested this spring, Floyd students continued to fare poorly.

In a ranking of the state's 183 school districts, Floyd third graders placed 179th, fifth graders 170th, seventh graders 167th, and 10th graders 152nd.

The test results and academic rankings were released by Superintendent of Public Instruction Raymond Barber at a news conference in Frankfort last Friday. It was the first time that the Department of Education has released a statewide ranking of districts based on test scores.

While Floyd scores were about on a par with other counties in this part of the state, both Paintsville and Pikeville independent school districts stood out, with scores that put them among the top third of the state's school districts.

The achievement tests and a test of cognitive skills were given to about 200,000 Kentucky students. The tests, which are required under a 1979 state law, are designed to measure math, language, reading, spelling and learning skills. They also gauge a student's individual potential and enable school officials to see how a student is doing compared to the student's abilities.

For the first time since the tests were begun, Kentucky 10th graders exceeded the national average in one of the areas tested. The state's third, fifth and seventh graders have regularly bettered the national average. Floyd students, by contrast, have consistently scored poorly in relation to both national and state norms.

Floyd Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. was quoted as saying that even though Floyd scores were low, they were generally improved over last year.

Also released Friday were findings of a task force appointed by Barber to study why 10th-graders were scoring so poorly. The panel concluded that parental emphasis on basic skills is reduced when children reach high school and that students are not taking enough

FORGOTTEN TOPIC

J.D. Bond was in from Deland, Fla. this week, and our conversation, as usual, ranged the well-known gamut: fishing, health, children, grandchildren, church, Florida, finances, politics, the lot. But, probably because his wife, Jenny, was patiently sitting by, I overlooked an important matter. I forgot to ask him if in the year since I had last seen him he had gathered one yarn that could be printed in this family-type newspaper. But I console myself with the thought that it would probably have been wasted time, anyhow.

THE WOOD THRUSH

A few weeks ago, I was at the point of boasting about the dusk-time serenade I enjoyed, almost every day. I have never heard a nightingale or a hermit thrush, but until I do this wood thrush that was temporarily ours was the Caruso of the lot. But, for some reason

$400,000 Mud Creek Clinic Begins with Groundbreaking

Images of a tough past and a glorious future are the standard stuff of groundbreaking ceremonies. In that respect Eula Hall, speaking Saturday morning at the groundbreaking for the new Mud Creek Clinic, followed custom.

The beginning of work on the new clinic—at this point still a pattern of white lines on a lot just up the road from the John M. Stumbo school at Grethel—is "a dream come true, something we have fought and worked hard for for 10 years," she said, standing on the flatbed truck which served as podium. "It is the beginning of a new era."

But the pride in her voice marked this as something more than standard oratory. And those who turned out—neighbors, politicians, donors and patients—needed no persuading they were at a milestone in the clinic's history.

That history dates formally to 1972, when students from Vanderbilt University ran a "health fair" on Mud Creek and the health needs they uncovered—black lung, diabetes, hypertension and poor nutrition among them—convinced Mrs. Hall of the need for a clinic.

For nine years it operated out of the cramped cottage at the mouth of Mink Branch that had been her home. The house burned to the ground, probably a result of arson, last summer and, since then, the clinic has operated out of two trailers.

As it turned out, the razing of the old clinic was a blessing. Staffers take pride in the fact that, though the disaster may well have finished the clinic for good, they barely missed a beat. And the fire served both to fan community interest in the project and to focus the attention of those who dispense the dwindling pot of federal health funds.

The Appalachian Regional Commission committed $320,000 for the erection of a new clinic, on condition another $80,000 was contributed locally. The money was raised in three months.

There was a time when the Mud Creek Health Project was for some a beacon of political and social change and some veterans of the clinic's early campaigns, back in town for Saturday's groundbreaking, spoke in the old cadences.

Dick Couto, director of Vanderbilt's Center for Health Services and an organizer of the 1972 health fair, said that the clinic, with its easy give-and-take among patients, professionals and the community, offers "an important lesson for the country." Ten years ago, when activists could still speak confidently of "returning health care decisions to the people," the Mud Creek clinic represented for some an independent, populist alternative to the established health care industry.

Julie Schneider, a New York psychiatrist who helped out at the clinic's founding, has returned periodically and was back Saturday for the groundbreaking, still speaks of the clinic as a place where medical problems are seen "in perspective"—that is, in the context of the area's social, economic and environmental problems.

But local control has been elusive. While the balance of control will shift a little toward the community with the construction of the new clinic—which will be owned by the local, non-profit Mud Creek Community Health Corporation—management has been in the hands of others since 1977 when, in the wake of a lengthy coal miners' strike, the clinic had to choose between extinction and a takeover by the Prestonsburg-based Big Sandy Health Care agency.

And, while many of those close to the clinic are still active in social causes, it has been a while since they have walked picket lines or tried to close a stripmine operation.

Its lower profile on controversial issues is reflected in the fact that Congressman Carl D. Perkins, chronicling the history of federal interest in Mud Creek, could refer jokingly on Saturday to his past differences with Mrs. Hall and that the county judge-executive could be invited as an honored guest for the ceremony.

It was no joke in 1971 when years of protest spearheaded by Mrs. Hall

TURNING THE SYMBOLIC first spadeful of earth to mark the beginning of work on the new Mud Creek Clinic last Saturday were Congressman Carl D. Perkins and Eula Hall, the clinic's founder, social worker, and longtime advocate. They are flanked by board members of the Mud Creek Community Health Corporation—from left, Delmer Frasure, John Handshoe, Walker Tackett and Don Laferty.

Big Sandy Health Care, Inc., the Prestonsburg agency that staffs and manages the clinic, together with a clinic in Salyersville, will lease the new building from the Mud Creek Community Health Corporation. Construction of the building is being financed by an Appalachian Regional Commission grant.

SHOULD THE CASKET BE OPEN OR CLOSED?

This question can only be answered by the family, never by the funeral director. There are several options available to the family. The casket can be open during the hours of visitation and closed during the final rites or it can remain open during the final rites. It can also remain closed at all times.

The customs of the family's faith and the influence of their clergyman's thoughts may help determine what is to be done.

Modern psychologists tell us viewing the deceased helps the family to accept the fact of death, especially when it may have been sudden or unexpected. If, however, the appearance of the deceased cannot be made acceptable, viewing may possibly be harmful.

The family's own wishes on the desired procedure will always be the guideline for the funeral director at our firm. We respect the family's wishes on all particulars of the funeral service as we try our very best to provide a truly personal and meaningful service.

What Became of Ingenuity?

Tobacco interests have for years disputed the claim that cigarette smoking causes cancer. It has pointed to the fact that there are other factors involved, other carcinogens in the atmosphere, in the water we drink, in food, even in the X-rays that are used to diagnose and treat human ailments.

These other factors are indisputable, but tobacco is not clear of blame because of their presence.

Now, the coal industry disputes the evidence that emissions from coal-burning plants cause acid rain. It points, and not without reason, to auto emissions, chemical plants, oil refineries, a whole unholy mess that is going up into the atmosphere and inevitably will be coming down somewhere.

But coal may, like tobacco, in the final analysis, be branded the No. 1 culprit.

With this a possibility, it would seem that the problem should be faced by both the coal industry and electric power-generating companies in more positive fashion than that of merely citing the cost that will be suffered by an already suffering public.

The famed Yankee ingenuity should be given a chance. There is a strong possibility that not only coal, one of the nation's greatest resources, can be saved a mortal threat but also that the cost of saving it might not be as prohibitive as predicted.

Already there is on the market a comparatively simple combustion device which is cheaper than the "scrubbing" process. Its future development could be one of the products of American ingenuity that could mean much for the future of coal and the environment.

culminated in the withdrawal of federal health funds from the Big Sandy Community Action Program—the protesters said the funds were being misused—and when the fiscal court presided over by Judge Henry Stumbo epitomized the political machine despised by many community activists.

The Mud Creek experience of the 1960's and 1970's illustrates a government patronage that has since fallen out of official favor. Perkins outlined the federal role with some pride on Saturday and deplored the cuts in human services funding that have characterized the Reagan Administration.

Some have described federal help on Mud Creek as a mixed blessing—Perkins' reference to the federally-funded and chronically-troubled water system may have touched a sore point with some in Saturday's audience—but Uncle Sam has played a vital part in the survival of the clinic.

Now that federal dollars are harder to come by and agencies like Big Sandy Health Care are being pressed to pay their own way—the agency currently raises around 40 percent of its operating budget locally—clinics like that on Mud Creek represent the remains of the "safety net" that is supposed to guarantee essential services to the nation's neediest families.

The presence of Bishop William Hughes, head of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Covington, who opened Saturday's rite with a prayer—Dr. Ted Nicholas, pastor of Prestonsburg's First United Methodist Church, offered the closing prayer—is symbolic of another aspect of the Mud Creek clinic story, the role of Catholic missionaries.

Bishop Hughes is listed among the clinic's major donors, Sister James Roach, administrator of Our Lady of the Way Hospital, sits on its board, and three members of its 10-member staff—a nurse practitioner, registered nurse and laboratory technician—are Catholic nuns.

But "outside" help alone could no more guarantee the survival of the Mud Creek Health Project than it could the many failed projects initiated in "War on Poverty" days. As the ready response following last year's fire made clear, the Mud Creek clinic enjoys strong local roots.

Providing the bridge linking politicians and donors with the community for the past 10 years and longer has been the doughty, enduring figure of Eula Hall. "She knows the system very well and shows others how to use it," said Dr. Ellen Joyce, the clinic director. "She supports providers who give good care. And she does what she says she's going to do."

But Mrs. Hall has her own explanation of the clinic's success. "It has been the support of the community," she said this week, "and the love and dedication of its staff."

THANK YOU

Perhaps you sent a lovely card, Or sat quietly in a chair. Perhaps you sent a funeral spray, If so, we saw it there. Perhaps you spoke the kindest words, As any friend could say; Perhaps you were not there at all, Just thought of us that day. Whatever you did to console our hearts, We thank you so much whatever the part.

eight-foot-long, water and dust-proof storage boxes which carry an exhaustive list of first-aid supplies and specialized medical equipment.

"It's equipped like a hospital emergency room," Hughes commented.

The boxes feature continuous hinged doors which open downward to provide easy access to first aid equipment in low coal. Mounted between the storage compartments on a common chassis of four-foot, double strength pipe is a removable stretcher which is designed to slide out across rollers from either end of the unit to facilitate recovery of victims in hard-to-reach areas. A railing around the stretcher will allow others to assist the E.M.T., once the patient has been secured, and the firm rubber bottom of the stretcher was designed to accommodate cardiopulmonary resuscitation techniques. A removable pillow is also provided.

A standard ten-inch ground clearance should keep the stretcher above any water that may be on the mine roadway and the over-all height of the standard model is 24 inches. Height and ground clearance can be modified according to differing requirements, Hughes stressed.

The unit is mounted on skids or track wheels and is designed to be transported to the accident site by a mine car. "The objective is to transport the patient to a hospital without adding to the severity of the original injury," Hughes pointed out. He added that the design of the stretcher will be adaptable to either conventional ambulance vehicles or a pickup truck for fast transportation to a medical facility.

Although the need for such a system seems obvious enough, an international patent search, according to "The Scoop" has documented that the ambulance-first aid station is "the first of its kind in the state and the nation."

State officials are pleased by Hughes' brainchild. Department of Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley commented, "We think he's got a real nice little package," and pointed to the unit's capabilities in low coal as especially advantageous.

The 38-year-old Hughes, though confident of financial success through the project, takes a good deal of pride in the thought that his innovative system will make a substantial contribution to the saving of lives or minimizing of injury and disabilities. "Despite the accident prevention programs and a variety of safety efforts, each year coal mines continue to take a heavy human toll; large numbers of fellow miners are injured, many are left disabled," he said. "I feel that many of these injuries would be less severe if proper first aid could be administered at the scene of the accident."

With emergency medical technicians at hand, and with his underground ambulance and first aid station providing the needed equipment, Hughes is confident that proper emergency care can now be a reality. "I want the miner to be able to say, 'We have the best first aid system possible,'" Hughes concluded.

basic skill courses in the first two years of high school.

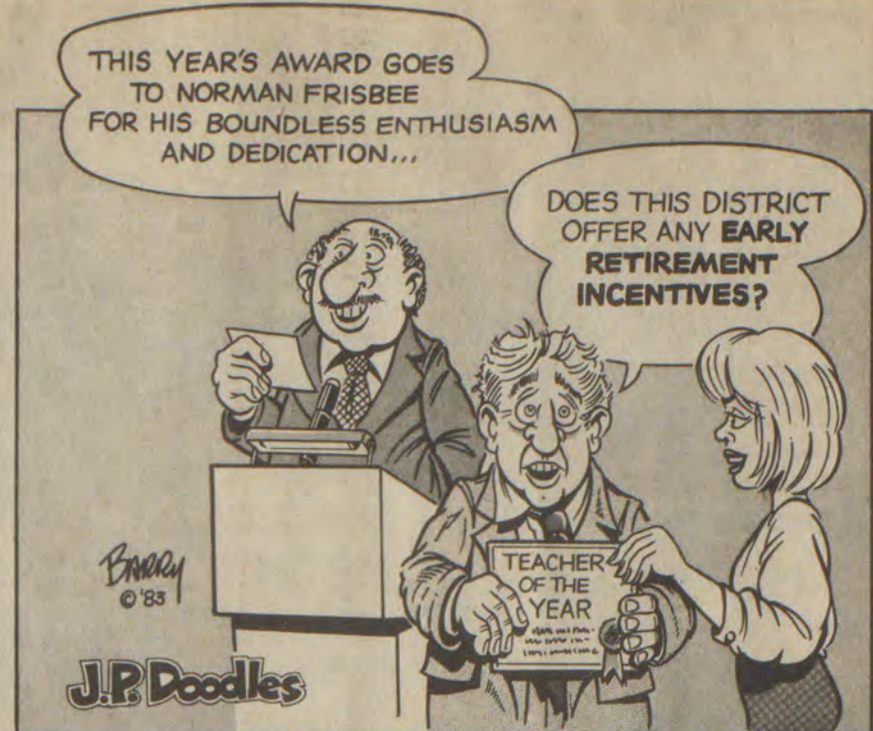

The panel recommended that more emphasis be placed on basic skills in high school and that students be required to show a mastery of basic skills before they enter the ninth grade. It also called for six full class periods a day, without study halls.

Barber said the task force also found that local school districts which have the greatest local tax support are the ones that do best academically.

Local tax support represents only 5.1 percent of the Floyd school budget, compared to a statewide average of 21.9 percent.

residents who asked that Daniels be hired.

Dr. Hall and Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. defended the choice of Pack as the most qualified candidate and denied that Daniels' suit against the board figured in the decision.

(After serving as Wheelwright principal and coach for the 1977-'78 school year, Daniels was not rehired as principal. Claiming he had not been properly warned of his demotion, he successfully sued the board for the difference between what he actually earned in 1978-'79 and what he would have earned as principal.)

Franklin Pack, who is not related to Ervin Pack, was named principal at McDowell Elementary. Gary Frazier was previously appointed to the principal's position at McDowell High School.

Despite what is being said about the state providing total funding for textbooks, this year's textbook allocation falls more than $20,000 short of what is needed to provide all students with the books they need, Asst. Superintendent Ronald L. Hager told the board.

Providing each student with necessary science, health, math, reading, handwriting and spelling books would cost $112,669 but the textbook allocation amounts to only $92,591, Hager explained.

Asked whether local funds could be found to supplement the state allocation—the Floyd board contributed $9600 toward textbook purchases last year—Board Treasurer Ray Brackett said it was still too early to tell if monies might be diverted to textbooks from other budget categories. Dr. J.D. Adams, board chairman, suggested local taxes would have to be raised in order to furnish the necessary books.

Bids for producing 3000 copies of the 1983-'84 school annual were received from Josten's ($31,640) and kreative grafiks, ink. ($32,548) but a decision on awarding the contract was tabled until the August board meeting. Dr. Hall and various members of the audience were critical of the quality of the annual produced last year by Josten's.

A long discussion also followed the opening of bids by Taylor Studios, of Martin, Paula Goble Photography, of Prestonsburg, and John Wilson Studios, of Bristol, Va., for school photographs. While board members James A. Duff and Ray "Shag" Campbell urged the board to select Taylor Studios as the low bidder, the board adopted a motion of Dr. Hall to advertise again for bids on the photographs.

Some members of the audience said the quality of photos taken last year by Taylor Studios was poor and Taylor's two competitors both claimed they were misinformed about bid specifications.

On Supt. Grigsby's suggestion that they "clarify in writing what has already been agreed to verbally," the board adopted a resolution authorizing "the superintendent and assistant superintendent" to use board-owned or leased vehicles for "business and/or personal use," on condition they pay their own gas and other expenses when using the vehicles for personal purposes.

Grigsby acknowledged after the meeting that the board order was prompted by recent insinuations that his and Asst. Supt. Hager's use of leased autos was improper. (A citizens' group alleged last month that the two school officials have charged the school district for gasoline in addition to their receiving a monthly mileage allowance. The group also implied that the board's decision to lease the vehicles was discussed only in closed session.)

A six-acre tract on the southern end of Prestonsburg is being considered as a site for the planned middle school to serve this area. Dr. Adams told the board. The property, formerly the site of radio station WPRT, would need to be filled to bring it above the flood plain, Adams explained.

Hired by the board were: Janet Mullins Tackett, Jones Oliver Webb, Jr., Priscilla Ann Jones, and Teresa B. Fugate, certified substitute teachers; and Stanton Watson, N.Y.C. summer supervisor at Wayland.

the thrush is no longer heard. I fear a unarauding cat but hope the thrush has merely moved back farther into a boskier dell for the summer.

Now, with the thrush gone, I am left with a beautiful bird, the summer tanager, which is trying its level best to drive me nuttier than last reported. One call, over and over, same tempo, same note. Twitterpated, that's what it is.

But the tanager has his purpose. I'll be more grateful than ever when the wood thrush comes around again.

MODERN FABLE

Once upon a time a certain hog became very popular among his kind. For, lo! he discovered a way to escape the butcher.

"The farmer feeds us and makes us fat, and when we become fat enough we're slaughtered to make food for humans," he told the others in the sty. "All you need to do to stay alive is not eat enough to make you fat."

The applause rose in squealing crescendo. The hogs broke free of their pen and went foraging in the forest for nuts, eating just enough to keep them trim and fit but not fat.

But they became hungry, and recollections of full troughs and plenty to eat back at the farm persisted, and soon they were straggling back home for the usual feedings.

Then the wise hog, who no longer was hailed as the savior of his species, rose in his wrath. "You," said he, "are worse than those humans with their best-laid plans of diet and menu. Some humans, they say, dig their graves with their teeth. We're worse. All of us hogs are eating our fool heads off."

EXTRA!

And now for the good news. They've fired Dick Wagner.

Wagner will be remembered a long while as manager of the Cincinnati Reds. He was the guy who fired the Reds' most successful manager, Sparky Anderson, and then dismantled the team, piece by piece—Rose, Morgan, Foster, Knight, Griffey, Collins. Before he got into the act, the Reds may have been the best baseball team in modern times. Now, it may be the worst.

Yet I have an idea that the real villain in the plot was the club ownership. It doesn't seem reasonable to believe that any general manager could or would dare destroy a baseball team without the approval of the boys who pay the salaries.

LETTERS To the Editor

The views expressed here are those of the writer, and not necessarily those of this newspaper. No unsigned contributions will be published.

'A Beautiful Display Of Unselfish Concern'

I would like to add my voice to those who have already commented on the invaluable contribution made by the Community Meals on Wheels during its ten years of existence. Planned and developed under the auspices of the Christian Service Ministry by numerous volunteers from many churches (and some from no church), a great variety of professions and vocations and a grand mixture of political and social philosophies, this project was a beautiful display of unselfish concern. This was one of those rare jewels of social expression which can never be duplicated by proxy.

I would be pleased to see a listing in your paper of all of those volunteers who participated in this program, including those who served in an advisory capacity as well as those who served meals.

JAMES W. RATCLIFF
Former Chairman,
Christian Service Ministry

Add To Praise

I must add my sentiments to those other people who have recently written letters in praise of Meals on Wheels, and particularly in praise of the fine, dedicated work of Phil Price, the administrator. A much-needed service has really "gone down the drain."

The Mountain-Tea Patch

(From the book, "My Mother Told Me")

After the spring snows were waning and a few green plants began creeping out from piles of drifted dried leaves, the Mountain-Tea was among the first to be seen. The group of plants was never more than a few inches high. They were a vivid, shiny green, so unlike the other plants nearby that there was no danger of confusing it with anything else.

The older plants would be deeper green, and, even though they were coarser, they were equally delicious. The Mountain-Tea is always found in "beds" or patches. Sometimes these beds will range in sections as large as a room, but most generally they grow in smaller patches. If the leaves are picked and dried they make a most delicious tea. They also may be chewed for the sheer joy of the unrefined flavor you may have enjoyed in the pink-package chewing gum, after a certain commercial process.

These leaves are the most wonderful spice to be used in canning or pickling beets and cucumbers. As mother was told by her mother, there will never be a substitute for the Mountain-Tea or Mountain-Tea berries for flavor in processing your home-grown foods. The berries are bright red and about the size of holly berries, but have a mealy taste all their own.

Leisure Sunday afternoons were the ideal times to get a group of friends to go Mountain-Tea hunting. These walks in the hills were enjoyed by young and old alike. If children were too young to walk, they were carried. The old leaned on a sturdy stick found beside the road or path. Quite possibly, these walks could have been the forerunner of the mod rap-sessions of today's rush-rush world. When each person in the group "spoke his piece," or perhaps talking in unison, little did they know, or would have cared, they were falling into a set pattern: to relieve tensions, alleviate fears and plan common goals. All that mattered was the fact that they were enjoying themselves. No tour guide could ever point out the deer tracks by the waterhole, the den of the fox or a log with bits of fur hanging on it where a small animal had made a path and scraped its sides—that is, unless he was born and raised Down Home.

Large Stone Tears Away Part of Home

Hueysville, Ky., Oct. 11. (Spl.)—The widow of "Uncle" Sammy Handshoe, who died some time ago, lost part of her little house a few days ago, when a huge rock was dislodged above her home by a tractor hauling casing for use in the large pipe line now being laid up Salt Lick.

According to accounts of citizens living near the place, the tractor dislodged the rock from its bed while pulling a load of casing up the mountain. The rock at first started in a direction which meant no injury to the little home, but when it plowed into a ravine near the house, its line of travel was changed directly toward the house. The rock ripped away part of the kitchen and plunged on into a hollow, where it stopped.

The old lady had just left the kitchen and gone into the porch, it is reported, when the accident happened. The act saved her life, in all probability. The company is having the house repaired, it is reported.

HURT IN FALL

William Huff, 80 year old man of this place, was considerably injured a few days ago, when he fell while trying to assist in getting a hog back into a pasture from which it had escaped. Members of his immediate family had tried to prevent his undertaking such an act, but he insisted on helping. His neck and back were sprained, and he is suffering much pain.

PERSONALS

Mrs. William Sexton, of Salt Lick, was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Huff, of this place, Wednesday. Mrs. Ellen Gearheart, of Raccoon, Salt Lick, was visiting Bosco Thursday. Her daughter, Annis, was also along. Misses Blanche Allen, Gola Huff, Irene and Esther Foster, were visiting Bosco Theatre Sunday night. Brode Duke, employe of the C. and O. Railway Company, has been visiting his uncle, Dr. R. W. Duke, of this place.

Crops of this section have improved wonderfully during the past month. It was recently thought by many farmers of this place that the corn crop would be a failure, due to much rain and cool weather. However, the late improvement in weather conditions have wrought remarkable changes. Just recently, several farmers here have garnered splendid crops of cow peas and soy beans. The outlook is much better.

CHILD SERIOUSLY ILL

Joyce Duncan, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Duncan of this place has been in a critical condition, following an attack of cholera infantum or a similar disease. Mrs. Duncan, the child's mother, was recently operated on at General Hospital, Ashland, and is recovering very slowly, probably due to worry over her little daughter's illness. It is thought that the child is slightly better, but her condition is yet serious at the time of this writing. Dr. Mark Dempsey, of Lackey, is attending physician.

"Jimp" Reed, and his son, Joe Reed, this place, recently employed by Beaver Mining Company, have changed jobs and are now working for Stover-Elkhorn Coal Company, of Lackey. Prices for work of the nature which they do, are better at Stover's, they say. They are expert machine men, having followed the trade for some years. Their families are yet staying here, but they contemplate moving soon.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A large crowd of children attended a birthday dinner given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gearhart in honor of the seventh birthday of their daughter, Maxie Louise. Those present were: Leona Hays, Clemence Hays, Kathleen Hays, Marietta Hays, Mildred Mullins, Grace Mullins, Billa Wright, Norma Gayheart, Olive Rose Turner, Wilma Schumate, Loretta Schumate, Hazel Patrick, Mildred Allen, Buster Patrick, Harold Allen, Herman Allen, Clarence Hays, Joe Gayheart, Baird Conley. Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Alex Damron, Mrs. Buck Patrick, Miss Blanche Allen, and Mr. Gomer Turner. The little miss received many gifts from her little friends, and all reported a fine time, good eats. All wish her many more happy birthdays.

PAINTSVILLE

TO SURFACE GARRETT HIGHWAY Tuesday the State Highway Commission let to contract to the Wilmore Construction Company for hardsurfacing the Garrett Highway from the mouth of Mud Lick to Salyersville. The contract calls for native stone base with surface for the top dressing. We are informed that work will start immediately and be rushed to completion. Construction work on this character of road will not disturb traffic, it is understood. This type of road can be built at any season of the year. The completion of this section of road closes the gap between Salyersville and Paintsville and will give the people of the two towns an all-year road.

MRS. STAFFORD DIES

The death of Mrs. H. M. Stafford, which occurred at the home of her son, Dr. Don Stafford in Cincinnati last Tuesday afternoon, was a great shock to the people of Paintsville, and the news was received here with much regret. She had been very ill for the past three months. Three weeks ago she was taken to a Cincinnati hospital for treatment, but was later removed to the home of her son. Mrs. Stafford died from a complication of diseases which defied the best medical skill of the country.

The remains were received in Paintsville Wednesday and the funeral services were held Friday. Services were in charge of the Reverend H. G. Sowards, pastor of the Mayo Memorial Church.

She is survived by her husband, one son, Dr. Don G. Stafford of Cincinnati, one sister, Mrs. Tom Brown, and two brothers, Dan E. and M. G. Preston, of this city.

Mrs. Stafford was one of the best known and highly respected women of Paintsville. Her pleasing smile and kind words will be missed by her many friends.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS CHECKED

Since the quarantine of the town of Van Lear against infantile paralysis no new cases have developed. This fact shows the importance of close quarantine of any epidemic of communicable disease. If no new cases are reported the quarantine will be lifted Wednesday. With the coming of cold weather, there is little likelihood of any new cases developing as this disease is exclusively one of summer and early fall.

PAINTSVILLE HI WINS

The Paintsville High School Tigers, exhibiting the finest type of football seen on the local gridiron in many a day, knocked Van Lear for a row of chalk marks and forty-three perfect points while officially opening the 1927 gridiron season at Riverside Park on Saturday, September 24. The game was a thriller from start to finish and fans went away well satisfied that they had been given full measure for the half-wheels deposited with the gate keeper.

EASTERN STARS INSTALL OFFICERS

At a regular meeting of the Eastern Star held Monday evening in the Masonic Temple, the installation of officers for the ensuing year was held. A large number of members were present and an interesting meeting was held. Degrees were also conferred upon Mrs. Virgil Picklesimer, Mrs. Henry Ziegler and Mrs. Harper Preston. The meeting was presided over by Past Worthy Ma-

Science warns against improper refrigeration. Danger as great in winter as in summer, survey shows

FRIGIDAIRE is rapidly supplanting the old make-shift methods of food storage, formerly so widely practiced between fall and spring. This modern, sanitary, care-free refrigeration is now regarded as essential in cold weather as in warm.

For here is constant, cold storage temperature that guards against the risk of food contamination. In this cold, dry atmosphere, foods stay fresh and wholesome—no matter how hot or cold it is outside.

'We Don't Need To Be Told To Move,' Dr. Miller Declares

Dr. Jim Wayne Miller

Appalachia has more than its share of problems, and the solutions must come from people living in the region, according to Dr. Jim Wayne Miller.

Dr. Miller, who has played a major role in developing Appalachian studies programs in seven states, was the scholar-in-residence during the recent Appalachian Celebration at Morehead State University.

"We don't need to be told to move north or west or wherever jobs may be at the moment," Miller said. "What the people of Appalachia need is a way to make a living where they live and a way to get back their land from the big corporations."

Saying that the war on poverty had mixed effects on Appalachia, Dr. Miller explained that one of its goals was to convince people to move from rural areas of Appalachia to the cities.

"All the new highways built during that time weren't built for the people," he said during an interview. "They were built to serve the corporations, and they all lead to what were known as magnet cities where it was hoped people would move."

Some good things were accomplished, though, "good basic things like fixing sewers and repairing county roads," commented Dr. Miller. "And it gave people the incentive to get organized, to write grant proposals and get federal money."

One of the myths about Appalachian people is that they are poor because they have such a strong attachment to the land that they refuse to move where the jobs are. But Dr. Miller said that is not true.

"The facts just don't bear it out," he said. "Appalachians have always migrated out. During the 1840s, they went to California for the Gold Rush, during World Wars I and II they left in droves, and more people went north during the fifties than the number of Oakties who left Oklahoma during the dust bowl era."

People everywhere have a traditional attachment to their place, he believes, but sometimes people have to leave to survive.

"And they do leave Appalachia for jobs, then they make long trips home on weekends and holidays," said Dr. Miller. "But this only lasts one generation, because their kids are attached to the new place where they were born and raised."

Dr. Miller thinks Eastern Kentucky and all of Appalachia needs more local people to write about the social, economic and political problems of the region.

"For too long we have been characterized by outsiders, and our problems have been examined from the outside," Dr. Miller said. "And as a result, there has been too much foisting off on people what some bureaucrat in Washington, D.C. or some church in New York thinks we need."

As an example of the lack of understanding, Dr. Miller told how one Senator suggested giving free subway tokens to Eastern Kentucky children who attend school irregularly.

"A lot needs to be done in Appalachia," said Dr. Miller. "That's why weeks like this Celebration are good. A lot of changes can take place in a week, changes in people's mind. You can't see it, but that's where change must start."

Appalachian people need to learn to be proud of their heritage, he said, before they can be proud of where they are today.

Dr. Jim Gifford, assistant director of Appalachian Studies at MSU and coordinator of the Celebration, said he chose Dr. Miller as this year's scholar-in-residence because he could bind together all components of the Celebration.

As scholar-in-residence, Dr. Miller, who is a Western Kentucky University professor, taught Elderhostel and Heritage Arts Workshop classes, gave a public lecture, addressed the Conference on Appalachian Children and Families and spoke at the Jesse Stuart Symposium.

PBS in the spotlight

Dr. Timothy Johnson hosts the new five-part series "Faces of Medicine."

'Born too soon'

Premature birth threatens the lives of thousands of infants each year and remains the leading cause of infant mortality. Yet in few medical fields has recent research produced such dramatic, visible results. "Born Too Soon," the premiere episode of the new five-part series "Faces of Medicine," beginning the week of July 17 and hosted by Dr. Timothy Johnson, examines the impact of recent medical developments on the lives of doctors, researchers, patients and their families. (Please check local listings for time.)

This episode will take a behind-the-scenes look at a leading intensive care unit for newborns at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., where premature babies with birth weights as small as one-and-three-quarter pounds now have a reasonable chance for life.

Using an innovative approach that integrates patient care with research, Dr. Stahlman and her staff run their intensive care nursery for premature infants while conducting extensive clinical investigations into the treatment of complications associated with prematurity.

Each week "Faces of Medicine" will focus on a person or project that has made a significant contribution towards advancing medical science.

Count on Earl Weaver for baseball tips

EARLY BIRD? — The "retired" Earl of Baltimore is still making his presence felt in major-league ballparks. Which is no surprise.

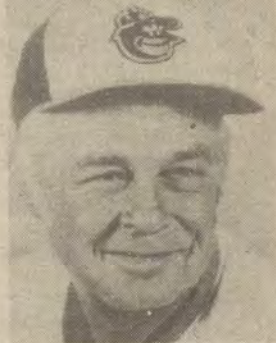

This is the first full season for Earl Weaver, former manager of the Baltimore Orioles, as a member of the ABC-TV broadcast team. His commentary on "Monday Night Baseball" reflects his longtime field experience.

Weaver, who had managed the Orioles for 15 seasons, must rely, of course, on his expertise rather than movie-star looks or smooth talk. But few can match the fiery ex-manager on the subject of baseball.

Weaver, one of the most successful managers in major-league history, managed the Orioles to six American League East titles, four A.L. pennants and one world championship (1970). His teams finished first or second 13 times, won 90 or more games 12 times and 100 or more five times.

Weaver — whose .596 winning percentage (a 1,354-919 career record) is third among all managers since 1900 (minimum of five years) — was known to go by the book, keeping extensive computerized statistics on ballplayers.

On TV, Weaver's ability to follow the baseball percentages gives him an unusually clear sense of what's at stake in any particular situation on the field. This is just the kind of thing that he passes along to viewers.

Although he never played in the majors, Weaver earned MVP honors three times and was named to five all-star teams during a 13-year career as a minor-league second baseman (mostly with the Cardinals organization).

As leader of the Orioles, Weaver won Manager of the Year honors three times: 1973 (Associated Press), 1977 (The Sporting News and United Press International) and 1979 (all three).

Weaver has never been afraid to say what he thinks. His battling got him ejected from a total of 89 games, including one spring training exhibition and a 1969 World Series game. He also drew five suspensions.

Now Weaver lives quietly with his wife, Marianna, in Hialeah, Fla.

Even so, ABC has to worry about how long he will remain in the broadcast booth. At age 52, it's a good bet he'll return to the dugout before long.

Will Rogers' story

by Kim Cooper

Will Rogers, the man who made world leaders laugh, will be featured on CBN Cable Network's "CBN Special of the Week," airing Sunday, July 17.

The one-hour weekly program televises selected documentaries that originally aired on NBC.

"The Story of Will Rogers" covers his life from his rodeoing days to his later years as a commentator and entertainer. Bob Hope is the off-camera narrator.

Using rare stills, the documentary captures Rogers at a rally for President Franklin Roosevelt, on a radio program with President Herbert Hoover and in a scene from "They Had to See London."

During Rogers' theatrical career, Rogers starred with such personalities as W.C. Fields and Eddie Cantor.

In 1933, as America was in the Great Depression, Rogers became a spokesman for the underdog. His outspoken manner and quick wit garnered a strong group of followers who produced a Will Rogers for President poster. The remarks he made became known in Congressional meetings and political offices.

On Aug. 15, 1935, Rogers and aviator Wiley Post took off on a flight for Alaska — only to crash 10 minutes from their destination. At the time, the public grief was called the greatest since Abraham Lincoln's death. Congress suspended activity and flags flew at half-mast. He was given a military salute.

Kim Cooper is publicity director of the CBN Cable Network.

Food Stamps Loss in Mails Leads to Temporary Change

High losses in food stamps mailed to clients are forcing the state to begin issuing food stamps "over-the-counter" in 17 Kentucky counties.

The Cabinet for Human Resources will request bids from private contractors to issue food stamps in Knott, Pike, Boyd, Carter, Christian, Clay, Daviess, Hardin, Harlan, Hopkins, Laurel, McCracken, McCrary, Madison, Perry, Warren and Whitley counties.

More than $60,000 in food stamps mailed to clients in the 17 counties were reported lost or not received and had to be replaced during the first quarter of 1983.

According to Department for Social Insurance Commissioner John Cubine, the cabinet will be charged a penalty for any food stamp replacements above .75 of one percent of the food stamps issued in any county between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30. After Sept. 30, the penalty will be imposed on replacements in excess of .5 of one percent of stamps issued.

Cubine said the cabinet had hoped to continue mailing food stamps directly until the new automated issuance system is in place and corrects the food stamp loss problem. "The new system will virtually eliminate mail-loss because stamps will be tracked much the way a bank tracks its checks with the use of personalized coupons and an identification card. Under the current USDA system, stamps can't be traced through the process," Cubine stated.

According to Cubine, the mail loss is too great for his department to live with until the new system corrects the problem. "Unforeseen delay has pushed back the date for beginning the issuance part of the Kentucky Automated Certification and Issuance System, and we can't wait. We have to act now to stop mail losses because we can't afford the penalties," Cubine said.

Cubine explained that the new system had been delayed since the U.S. Department of Agriculture determined that a public notice and comment period in the Federal Register was needed. "We can't proceed with issuing food stamps through the new system until we get the go-ahead from USDA and that can't happen now until after the public comment period. The issuance part of the system may not be implemented until the spring of 1984," Cubine said. "In the meantime, we have to take steps to control food stamp losses to avoid paying penalties and continued losses of federal funds."

Johns Cr. Hope Of New Source Of Water Dim

Prospects do not look bright for Johns Creek residents who have been looking for a way to have city water distributed there.

No one is denying the three businesses and 100-or-so families on the stream, which forms the Johnson-Floyd line, have a problem. Laboratory tests show that well water there is high in iron and manganese and, in several instances, in fecal coliform, the bacteria which indicate sewage contamination of the water supply.

But the only solution offered so far is one that many residents are unable or unwilling to pay for.

In a recent meeting with residents, Phil Ward, manager of the Auxier Water Company, said an extension could be run up Johns Creek from the existing line, which follows U.S. 23 north as far as the Porter School. But it would cost about $120,000, he said.

Although representatives of the three businesses—Rebel Coal Co., the Austin Powder Co., and a flea market recently developed by Donald J. "Dootney" Horn—said they would contribute more, tap-on fees would run at about $1000 per dwelling, it was estimated.

Only about half of the 105 families on the creek have indicated they would be willing to pay the costs, even if they were spread over a 10-year period. A construction loan might be repaid by a $10 monthly surcharge, according to one suggestion.

Unlike public water systems, which may tap a variety of federal funds, the privately-owned Auxier Water Company would be eligible only for a Small Business Administration loan, said Holly Leach, water specialist with the Big Sandy Area Development District.

The Auxier firm purchases water from the Prestonsburg system. According to one proposal, a branch line leading from the mouth of Johns Creek on U.S. 23 could be made to link with the line already in place at Dewey Dam.

Committee OKs Stumbo Choice

The naming by Floyd Democratic officials of John M. Stumbo as Democratic nominee for judge-executive has been upheld by the party's state executive committee. The May 17 choice of Stumbo had been appealed to the state body by Ann R. Latta, vice-chairman of the Floyd Democratic executive committee.

Paul E. Patton, state Democratic chairman, said that, in turning down the appeal, the state committee followed the recommendation of a panel which heard testimony from Mrs. Latta and Floyd Democratic Chairman Morris Isaac.

Panel members found that, since all members of the Floyd executive committee were given notice of the meeting at which Stumbo was chosen, there was no violation of a party rule requiring adequate notice of meetings.

The state panel report did not address Mrs. Latta's charge that the meeting was called so hastily that most Floyd Democrats didn't hear about it until it was over. And it found "not applicable" other issues raised by Mrs. Latta concerning the credentials of some committee members.

According to a party bylaw, "The time and place for all meetings...shall be publicized fully, and in such manner as to assure adequate notice to all interested persons."

A supporter of Barkley J. Sturgill, who had been named by Gov. John Y. Brown four days earlier to fill the vacancy created by the death of Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty, Jr., Mrs. Latta contended that the May 17 meeting was called "with unseemly haste." Local radio stations were not told of the meeting, nor did the press carry any advance notice of it, she pointed out.

In that 15 committee members were acting on behalf of 24,600 Floyd Democrats, wider notice should have been given of the meeting and more people should have been given a chance to be heard on the nomination, she argued.

The choice of Stumbo came on a 10-5 vote, the minority vote being cast for Sturgill. Shortly after losing the Democratic nomination, Sturgill resigned as judge-executive and his place was taken by Stumbo.

International Music Is Focus Of New KET Series

"Together in Song," a new series examining different forms of ethnic music, premieres Tuesday, July 26 at 7:30 p.m. on KET. Each week host Janice Sword introduces the viewer to different ethnic music experiences interpreted by guests familiar with each respective culture. Common to the series are the guests' personal journeys via music to discover more about their origins.

The first program of the series is "Black Music" and features Clara Porter discussing the relationship between the spiritual and modern gospel melodies. She sings several songs exemplifying the "call-response" pattern of singing which is at the root of some black spirituals.

On the following Tuesday, August 2, "Together in Song" introduces the viewer to Cecilia Wang and "Chinese Music." Wang points out Chinese music is very symbolic and features nature as one focal point. The stage settings for Chinese opera are simple with a heavy reliance on elaborate costumes to spur the imagination. Wang and Sword discuss themes of traditional and historical legends are used for Chinese opera.

The third program in the "Together in Song" series on August 9 is "Yiddish Music," featuring Arthur Graham. He sings Yiddish songs reminiscent of the Jewish immigration in the 1920's. Graham feels Yiddish, which has Germanic roots, is considered a language of exile and may be disappearing as practitioners die of old age, and the younger generation sees it as a language of disgrace and shame.

The final program of the series on August 16 is "Finnish Music," interpreted by Aimo Kiviniemi. He reveals Finnish folksongs have love and nature as primary elements. Raised in a home where Finnish was spoken by his parents, Kiviniemi finds Finnish songs most natural to his learning process and quite satisfying.

"Together in Song" is a KET production produced and directed for KET by Vince Spoelker.

Independent Bankers Want Airing of Proposed Changes

The Independent Community Bankers Association last week called a press conference to respond to Governor John Y. Brown's executive order creating a task force to study the multi-bank holding legislation, and to comments made by Commissioner of Banking Leonard Marshall.

Several important questions were asked:

—“Why did Governor Brown appoint the head of one of the state's largest banks to administer the Department of Banking?”

—“Why would Mr. Marshall give up a highly lucrative position with the Liberty National Bank of Louisville to accept this present appointment?”

—“Will the task force conduct an objective evaluation of the many banking-related problems in Kentucky, or will it simply adopt a predirected viewpoint that multi-bank legislation is a panacea for the industry?”

Commissioner Marshall has alluded to the need for a comprehensive approach to banking reform legislation. In testimony before the Interim Legislative Committee on Banking and Insurance he called for:

—A new level of commitment by all sectors of banking and aggressive action by regulators to resolve problems.

—Substantial and constructive change in Kentucky's banking system through legislative and executive action.

In later testimony, Mr. Marshall suggested the appointment of a banking task force. That group should, he said, be comprised of key people from the public and private sector, including representatives of the legislative and executive branches of government.

Independent Community Bankers replies:

“While we don't find fault with those concepts, we strongly feel that one group was completely omitted from the subsequent list of Governor Brown's appointees. That group is the public.”

Drama Group Extends Day Camp Registration

Registration for the second annual Jenny Wiley Drama Association Children's Theatre-Creative Dramatics Day Camp for children ages 7-13 has been extended until noon Friday, July 15. The two-week camp will be held Monday-Friday, July 25 through August 5.

“Response to the day camp has been so positive we felt we should extend the registration period to let even more area children participate,” said John McCann, managing director of the Jenny Wiley Theatre. “At the end of the first day of registration we had more children signed up than took part last year,” he added.

Brewer's Week as Bizarre As All-Star Game Itself

All-Star Week turned out to be a bizarre one for Manager Tom Gamboa's Paintsville Brewers as the club overcame two extra-inning losses, two bench-clearing incidents and, of all things, a tie game to remain near the top of the Appalachian League standings. Paintsville's record stood at 11-7, not counting the tie, through games of July 10, after the Brewers took two straight from the Johnson City Cardinals on the road.

The strange happenings surrounding the team began on July 4, when the Brewers were scheduled to host a split doubleheader against Bristol and Pikeville. The game with the Tigers lasted into the sixth inning before rain dampened the holiday spirits of both teams. The score was tied, 4-4, and the Brewers had a runner on third base with two out when play was called.

The game went into the record books as a tie, with all individual statistics standing. Had the Brewers been able to score the runner on third base before the rains came, they would have had a victory.

Gamboa's men came back the next night, sweeping a doubleheader from the Pikeville Cubs, 2-1 and 8-6. Both games were played under protest by Pikeville, due to a disagreement between the teams on the interpretation of a league rule dealing with the legal roster limit on players age 21 or older. The protests were officially disallowed by the league later in the week.

The bad blood between the Brewers and Cubs was enough, however, to precipitate two bench-clearing incidents in the twinbill. In the first game, both benches cleared after Brewers' star outfielder Glenn Braggs (currently hitting .362) was knocked down by a pitch from Cubs starter Jim Phillips. Braggs took two steps toward the mound with bat in hand but was restrained.

Tempers flared again in the nightcap of the doubleheader. In the bottom of the third inning, Pikeville second baseman Luis Cruz accused the Brewers' John Beuerlein of intentionally stepping on his foot on a close play at first base on a sacrifice bunt by Beuerlein. Again, both benches emptied, but, as in the first game, no punches were thrown.

After a day off for the All-Star game, the Brewers travelled to Bristol, where the Tigers beat them on two consecutive nights in extra innings, 3-2 and 6-5.

Paintsville rebounded on the weekend trip to Johnson City, downing the Cardinals, 10-4, July 9, and 8-6, July 10. The Brewers' bats woke up in Johnson City, pounding out 25 hits in the two games. Paintsville got plenty of help from the Redbirds, who committed 11 errors in the two games.

Paintsville center fielder Lavel Freeman had a fine week, extending his consecutive game hitting streak to 10 games before it was snapped July 10 in Johnson City.

The Brewers also got encouraging pitching performances from Mike Birkbeck, who won two games during the week while pitching well in both his starts, and from Troy Watkins, who still has not allowed an earned run in six relief appearances this season.

The Brewers lost righthanded pitcher Jeff Parrett, who was promoted to the Beloit Brewers of the Class A Midwest League July 6. Parrett, an ex-University of Kentucky standout, had been 2-0 with a 2.12 ERA for Paintsville. Righty Dan Murphy was sent down from Beoit to take Parrett's spot on the roster.

Smith, Player-Of-Week

Designated hitter Mike Smith has been named the Paintsville Brewers' Player-of-the-Week for the period ending July 10. Smith, who had been used sparingly earlier in the season, went 6-for-11 (.545) for the week, with three home runs and eight RBI. He also scored five runs. Smith, who stands 6 feet and weighs 200 pounds, had an astronomical 1.545 slugging percentage for the week, compiling 17 total bases. He was Milwaukee's 28th-round draft choice in June after playing three years at Southern Connecticut State College.

KET Program Examines Child Support Dilemma

The crisis of unpaid child support is explored on "Who's Supporting the Kids?," to be aired on KET tonight (Wednesday) at 10 p.m. Unpaid child support is a growing problem, a monumental tax burden and a social force so divisive it turns fathers into fugitives and impoverishes mothers and children.

The American divorce rate has tripled since 1960. Since child custody is almost always awarded to women, mothers and children have become the fastest growing poverty sector in the United States. Current statistics show that half the families headed by women live below the poverty level. The program examines the problem through footage of a tough family court judge in action, and by delving into the personal stories of former families in litigation, of absent fathers, and of mothers desperate for money awarded by the courts but never received.

Proposed solutions to the child support dilemma are examined, including "Mediation," which is designed to resolve child support problems outside the courtroom. The program shows that the government is beginning to crack down on the attitudes of absent parents, and that lawmakers feel that disregarding the support of their children is a crime and should be treated accordingly.

"The brighter you are, the more you have to learn."
Don Herold

Skating Spectacular Featured Tonight

On blades razor thin, ice skaters glide across the ice, combining the art of dance with skating. KET presents some of the world's top ice skaters on "An Evening of Championship Skating 1982," tonight (Wednesday) at 9 p.m.

The exhibition is held at Harvard University's Bright Hockey Center and benefits the children's research organization, The Jimmy Fund. The hour-long program features Elaine Zayak, 1982 World Ladies Champion; Kitty and Peter Carruthers, 1982 U.S. Pair Dance Championships and World Bronze Medalists.

Ruling Prohibits Private Schools' Free Textbooks

The 1978 state law providing free textbooks to private schools is unconstitutional, the Supreme Court of Kentucky has ruled in a 5-to-2 decision.

"This is a big victory for public education," said Kentucky Education Association general counsel John J. Slattery, Jr., one of the lawyers who took the appeal to the state's highest court on behalf of KEA and a group of public school teachers and library patrons.

A lower court had dismissed the suit brought in 1980 against then state librarian Barbara Williams, the Department of Libraries and Archives, state treasurer Drexell Davis and state finance secretary George Atkins.

In reversing that decision, the Supreme Court said the Kentucky Constitution forbids the use of tax money for non-public schools, unless the question has been approved by a majority of voters.

Under the 1978 law the Department of Libraries and Archives was required to buy textbooks approved by the State Department of Education and furnish them to accredited private schools that requested them.

The state budget contained $500,000 for the textbook program for the 1980-81 fiscal year and $1 million for the next fiscal year.

"The Kentucky Constitution contemplates that public funds shall be expended for public education," said the decision written by Judge Charles Leibson.

"The Commonwealth is obliged to furnish every child in this state an education in the public schools, but it is constitutionally proscribed from providing aid to furnish a private education. We cannot sell the people of Kentucky a mule and call it a horse, even if we believe the public needs a mule."

"The people of Kentucky specified by the language of the Constitution in terms that are clear and unmistakable that the type of expenditure authorized by the statute in question should be unconstitutional," the judges noted.

In addition to KEA, other plaintiffs bringing the successful suit were Vyda Fannin, Ashland; Vonnie France, Central City; Renee Jennings, Sacramento; David L. McFarland, Somerset, and Barbara Martin, Daviess county, all teachers and KEA leaders; and Charles Johnson, Lexington, described in the suit as a black person.

The individuals in the suit were also variously described as library users, taxpayers, and in some cases parents of children in public schools. They filed the suit on behalf of similar persons around the state.

Mining Co., Doctor Named in Suits Here

The Wheelwright Mining Company and Luther Adams, of Topmost, doing business as Marlboro Energy, have been named as defendants in a $1.1 million suit filed in circuit court here this week.

Plaintiffs, Wiley-Dixon and Wiley Brothers Energy, allege that, when they went to remove their mining equipment from the Wheelwright Mining Co. site, equipment valued at $60,000 was missing; that defendant mined $20,000 worth of coal without plaintiffs' consent; and that defendants are holding $24,000 that belongs to plaintiffs.

Wiley-Dixon and Wiley Brothers claim they have lost earnings amounting to $1,000,000 as a result of the dispute.

In another suit filed here this week, Katie Horn, of Inez, has sued Dr. Don Bryson and Highlands Regional Medical Center for $1,050,000. Mrs. Horn claimed that, on account of Dr. Bryson's alleged negligence, she fell from a bed at the hospital and sustained severe injuries.

Only two players have won baseball's coveted "Triple Crown" twice—the St. Louis Cardinals' Rogers Hornsby in 1922 and 1925, and Boston Red Sox slugger Ted Williams in 1942 and 1947.

Alcohol Abuse: Help for Those Who Want To Help Themselves

Drinking alcoholic beverages becomes a problem, when a person's misuse of alcohol results in physical, psychological or social damage to the drinker or those close to the drinker. In general, a person is said to have a drinking problem if he or she changes markedly in personality or behaviour after drinking, gets drunk often, gets arrested as a result of drinking, has family or job problems because of drinking, takes alcohol before going to work, drives a car while drunk, or is injured while intoxicated.

As the alcohol problem gets more serious, these signs may be present; eventual loss of control over drinking, the need to drink increasing amounts of alcohol to achieve the same effects that once more came after few drinks, specific and painful physical and psychological reactions to the sudden withdrawal of alcohol, "blackouts", or the inability to remember what happened while drinking.

It is hard to draw an exact line between social drinking, problem drinking, and alcoholism. Alcoholic persons come to depend upon the drug alcohol to get them through their days and nights. Alcoholism, or alcohol dependence, may come early in a drinking career, but it often develops over a period of years.

The Layne House Treatment Center is a treatment facility for men, women, and families who suffer from alcoholism and other related chemical dependencies. The treatment process is oriented to help those persons who have come to a point of not being able to effectively deal with reality because of their dependency on alcohol and drugs. The 30-day residential program is suited for any individual who is 18 years of age, who accepts that he/she has a problem related to alcohol or drugs, who is in no immediate medical danger, who is able to understand all the guidelines of the program, and most importantly, who is willing to help themselves. For information call The Layne House, Mountain Comprehensive Care Center; 886-8572.

Diet Pill Dangers

Are you taking diet pills in an attempt to lose weight? An estimated 10 million people, mostly women, who take diet pills containing phenylpropanolamine or "PPA" are exposing themselves to a drug that has the potential for altering brain function and raising high blood pressure, while offering little help in controlling weight. This drug is dangerous for at least 30 percent of adults who are overweight.

Although the advertisements often claim weight loss of up to 100 pounds, industry-sponsored tests show the average consumer can expect to lose less than two pounds per month from taking PPA.

The Federal Trade Commission, because of some bureaucratic paralysis, has not made strong effects to halt, on a nationwide basis, this serious case of false and dangerous advertising by all manufacturers of PPA-based pills, but the state of California has taken action against the diet pill advertisers. As a result of court action undertaken by the Ventura county, CA district attorney's office, Thompson Medical Company, the manufacturers of "Dexatrim", "Control", "Prolamine", and "Appedrine", will halt exaggerated weight loss claims for its products and pay Ventura county $145,000 in fines.

If you would like more information about PPA and diet pills, write PPA Clearinghouse, Center for Science in the Public Interest, 1755 S Street, Washington, D.C. 20009.

... about your Social Security

SSI (Income) Eligibility

An individual or couple can have some income and still be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments, Jim Kelly, Social Security district director for the Big Sandy area, said recently. An individual can have countable income up to $284.30 a month, while a couple can have up to $426.40 a month. In July, these amounts will increase to $304.30 and $456.40.

SSI provides a basic cash income to people 65 or over, or blind, or disabled who do not have much income and who do not own much real or personal property.

"If a couple has been living apart for more than six months," Kelly said, "each person is treated as an individual; however, if they are living together and only one member qualifies for SSI, a portion of the other person's income is treated as if it were the eligible individual's."

"Furthermore, an unmarried child under 18 who is living at home is considered to be receiving a portion of the parent's income. Allowance is made for the parents' work and living expenses, and for other children living in the home."

BRIDES NEED NEW SOCIAL SECURITY CARD

Brides, along with anyone else who had a recent name change, should contact the Big Sandy Area Social Security Office to arrange to have their names changed in Social Security records and to apply for a new Social Security card showing their new name, Jim Kelly, Social Security district director for the Big Sandy area, said recently.

Social Security records should be changed so that any earnings she may have are properly reported to the correct record.

To apply for a new Social Security card, which will show the bride's new name but the old Social Security number, she should submit evidence showing her old and new names, a marriage license, for example.

Only original documents or copies certified by the issuing agency are acceptable. Uncertified photocopies are not acceptable.

After acceptable evidence is submitted, it will take about two weeks to issue the new Social Security card, Kelly said.

Georgia, the Empire State of the South, is the largest state east of the Mississippi. This sunbelt state covers an area of 58,876 square miles and became our fourth state on Jan. 2, 1788.

Delayed Retirement Raises Benefits

People in the Big Sandy area who are nearing 65 and do not plan to retire will find that their Social Security check will be bigger when they do claim benefits, Jim Kelly, Social Security district director for the Big Sandy area, said recently.

This is because of the delayed retirement credit, Kelly said. This credit increases a person's retirement benefit for each month between 65 and 70 that he or she does not receive a benefit.

The credit adds one-fourth of 1 percent for each month—3 percent for a full year—that a person does not get a check because of work. The credit also applies to widows and widowers benefits. Starting in 1990, the credits will increase gradually until they reach 8 percent by 2008.

In addition to these credits, a person's earnings after 65 may result in a bigger check than would have been payable at 65.

Of course, Kelly said, a person who starts getting checks at 65 can work and have significant earnings and still receive benefits. A person 65 or over in 1983 can earn up to $6,600 before checks are affected.

If earnings exceed $6,600, then $1 in benefits is withheld for each $2 of earnings above $6,600. This annual exempt amount will increase automatically in future years to keep pace with increases in average wages. The exempt amount for people under 65 is $4,920 in 1983. (Starting in 1990, the $1 for $2 withholding will become $1 for $3 for people 65 and over.)

(More information about Social Security retirement benefits can be obtained at the Big Sandy Area Social Security Office, located on U. S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville.)

Ex-Senator Byrd to Speak

Former U.S. Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr., will be the guest speaker at the annual Salyer family reunion at Grassy Creek Church, in Russell county, Va., August 21.

The occasion of Sen. Byrd's speech is the dedication of a historical marker on Virginia 71 in front of the church, between Dickensonville and Nickelsville, which commemorates the settlement of the area by Isaiah Salyer, who obtained a state land grant on Copper and Molls Creeks in 1787. Isaiah's brothers and sisters followed him and settled in the area in 1788. These Salyers, the sons and daughters of Zachariah Salyer, who was born in New Jersey in 1730, are the progenitors of the Salyers in southwest Virginia, east Tennessee, eastern Kentucky and southern West Virginia.

Summer Survival

By Dr. Teresa Bolick

So you've been to Camden Park and King's Island; the Fourth of July picnics and fireworks are over; day camp and vacation Bible school have come and gone. But it's another month before school starts! How will the parents and kids in your family survive the "dog" days of August without trying each others' patience?

By the end of July, a lot of school children have explored the woods and ridden their bikes to their hearts' content. The swimming pool is losing some of its excitement. Parents begin to hear "I'm bored" and "There's nothing to do" every time they turn around. August is the time for families to use their creativity to overcome boredom and have fun without spending too much money. The suggestions below are designed to bring good clean (and, hopefully, cheap) fun.

1. Write a family history. This can be a joint task or an individual project for an older child. Talk to grandparents, aunts, uncles, etc., to learn about ancestors. Find out how Mom and Dad got together, how each child was as a baby, where the family has lived. Include some old photographs if you have them. Some families like to make a copy of the history for each family member.

2. Plan a "dream" vacation. Write to the tourist bureaus of states you'd like to visit. Look at the maps and brochures to decide where to go and how to get there. Read about the places in the encyclopedia at the library. You may want to cut pictures from magazines or travel folders to make your own "vacation dream book." To get brochures and maps write to the State Tourist Bureau in the capital of each state. Who knows? You may get to visit one day!

3. Now that we've mentioned libraries...the public library is a great source of all kinds of information. The library has books on travel, crafts, cooking and almost anything else you can imagine. The librarian will help you find books that will be interesting to any child or adult. In addition, the Floyd County Library lends record albums and 8-track tapes. They have a summer reading program for children and will begin a story hour soon. For details, call the Floyd County Library at 886-2981.

4. Make up a new game. you may want to make a new board game or a new sport. Collect all the equipment you need and keep it in a specially decorated box. Don't forget to write down the rules.

5. Recycling is a great project for kids. They can pick up aluminum cans, scrap iron, copper, etc. When they have collected enough to fill several bags or boxes, take them to Mountain Metal Company to sell what they've collected. Mountain Metal is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday-Friday and 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

6. While they're cleaning up the neighborhood, get them to clean up the house, too. Those toys that are cluttering the closet may be just what someone else wants, so have a garage sale. Get the kids involved in setting up the sale, pricing items, and making signs. Let each child keep the proceeds from selling his or her possessions.

7. Get the neighborhood kids together to write and produce a play or talent show. If they get really industrious, they can sell tickets and popcorn. Don't forget to take pictures!

A few words of caution. We all know that television is a good babysitter. With cable TV, there's always something to watch. But watching TV keeps children from reading, developing hobbies, or playing outside. Therefore, most experts agree that families need rules for TV viewing. Some suggestions: (1) limit the number of hours the kids can watch TV—two hours per day is plenty unless something special is on; (2) limit the kinds of programs they watch and don't hesitate to turn off a program that offends you; (3) select programs to watch together and talk about the program afterwards; this helps everyone understand how TV programs are like or different from real life and how values on TV agree with or oppose those held by your family; (4) use a TV program as a stepping-stone to learn more about the world; for example, if Walter Cronkite talks about blimps or about a new type of airplane, ask a family member to read up on the topic and give a report to the rest of you; (5) turn the TV off during mealtimes.

Finally, parenting is a rough job, and summertime taxes even the best parent. Be sure to reserve some private time for you and your spouse. Even if you just sit and drink a cup of coffee or take a long relaxing bath all alone, time away from the children can work wonders. Trade off babysitting with a neighbor or relative to give both of you a few "child-free" hours each week. Remember, parents are people too!

These ideas are just a few of the many strategies you and your family can use to beat summer boredom. Use them to spark your own creativity and have a great August!

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

In order to make a definite diagnosis of bacterial infection, a physician usually prefers to take a culture before prescribing an antibiotic. This procedure serves to identify the specific bacteria and the antibiotic to which it may be sensitive. Further guidance is provided by knowing the location of the bacterial infection. The location, combined with a knowledge of which types of infection are common to that body location is helpful. The kidney and liver functions of the patient are also considered. These organs play an important part in excreting antibiotics. It can be seen, then, that antibiotics are not to be taken lightly. A physician must weigh several considerations before prescribing them. It is hoped that the public will also become aware of the precautions.

Sometimes when people think they have a bacterial infection, they are tempted to take an old antibiotic that's still in the medicine cabinet. Remember never to do this because the antibiotic may not be the proper one for the infection or else it will have already lost its effectiveness. Consult your physician instead, and then bring your prescription to us at COOLEY APOTHECARY, #2 Town Center Bldg. Open Mon.-Fri., 9-5:30; Sat., 9-4. 886-8106.

Here She Is—Future Miss America

One of the youngest beauty pageant winners in the country is Miss Bryanna Grace Hamilton, who, at nine months, is the recent winner in three pageants. She is the daughter of Mrs. Connie Spears Hamilton, of Galveston, and the late Wade Bryan Hamilton.

In April, she was crowned winner in the Baby Miss division of the Miss Southern Belle Beauty Pageant held at Millard High School. She was awarded a trophy for being most photogenic, an attribute illustrated above. As winner of her division, she was presented a five-foot trophy, crown, and banner.

In May, she was again crowned queen in the Baby Miss division of the Miss Pike County Beauty Pageant and was winner in the talent division in competition with children up to four years old.

The young beauty's latest triumph was June 4 at the Carriage House in Paintsville where she was first runner-up in the beauty division of the Miss Kentucky Beauty Pageant. She also won first place in the talent division in which she played the piano to the background music of "Mary Had A Little Lamb," and placed second in the sportswear division.

In the three pageants, she has been awarded five crowns, 10 trophies, four banners, a scepter, and several bouquets.

Her maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Glenn B. Spears, of Galveston, and her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Pervis Hamilton, of Craynor.

State Coal Production Down by 8 Million Tons

Coal severance receipts in Kentucky have dropped by 19 percent and coal production is down 13.6 percent during the first five months of 1983 compared to the same period last year, according to figures compiled by the U.S. Department of Energy and the Kentucky Coal Journal.

The figures also showed that 25.8 percent of Kentucky's miners were unemployed in May.

The state's miners produced about 55.8 million tons of coal from January to May this year, or about 8.8 million tons less than the corresponding period of 1982, said the figures.

In the eastern Kentucky coalfields, production through the first five months of this year was 41,702,000 tons. The 1982 production for the region during that period was 46,788,000 tons.

The 10.8 percent fall represents a drop in production of more than five million tons of coal.

Production in the western Kentucky coalfields fell 20.6 percent from last year. The 1983 production was 14,166,000 tons while 17,848,000 tons were produced in the first five months of 1982.

Statewide, production is off 10.6 percent from the corresponding term in 1980.

The reduced production, a result of declining orders, also has significantly reduced the state's collection of coal severance tax this year.

Through May, receipts of $75,446,307 were 19 percent off the $93.3 million collected through the first five months of 1982, according to the figures.

The statistics may not be promising, but Tom Duncan, president of the Kentucky Coal Association, said executives in the coal industry are offering mixed viewpoints about the direction the industry is moving.

"Some think they can detect the first signs of a turnaround," Duncan said. "A lot depends of what kind of burn we get this summer (at coalpowered electric power plants) and how well the national economic recovery comes along."

Duncan said the reduced tonnage suggests the industry is bringing its production "in line" with lower demands. "When you get production less than demand, you get a situation which could cause a recovery," he said.

"We know it has got to turn sometime, but the question is when and how soon. I don't think anyone knows," Duncan said. "But the indications are the worst may be over."

★ Cancer Hopeline

Q. My doctor has told me I have polyps in my colon. Are polyps a sign of cancer?

A. The discovery of a polyp in the large bowel (large bowel consists of colon and rectum) is a signal for careful medical evaluation. Polyps are growths that arise from the mucous membranes of the large bowel. When a polyp is found with a colonoscope, it can be safely and easily removed with a snare through the colonoscope in the majority of cases. The colonoscope, a long flexible instrument, is used by the physician to view the entire colon. Generally, no further treatment is necessary, but regular check-ups are advisable to see that new polyps have not developed. If polyps contain cancer, as small numbers of them do, or if the polyps are large and do not have stalks, a surgical operation may be necessary. If the polyps are within reach of a sigmoidoscope or a proctoscope, the polyps may also be removed through this short instrument.

If you would like more cancer information, call the Cancer Hopeline at 1-800-4-CANCER. We have pamphlets on colo-rectal cancer as well as material on other types of cancer. You can also write us at 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington, KY 40536.
