Mud Cr. Woman Named in Death Of Ex-Husband

A lengthy history of turmoil between a Mud Creek couple ended late Thursday afternoon with the fatal shooting of Danny Ray Reynolds, 35, at the Grethel home of his ex-wife, Juanita Akers Reynolds.

Mrs. Reynolds was arrested at the residence by state police and charged with murder. Bond of $10,000 was quickly executed and she was released Friday morning.

Reynolds, a disabled county employee, was shot one time in the left chest by a bullet from a .25-caliber automatic pistol. He died at the scene.

According to reports, Reynolds was attempting to force his way into his former wife's trailer when he was shot. The shooting is said to have been witnessed by Mrs. Reynolds' 13-year-old son, Carson Akers.

The couple's troubles frequently brought them into court here in recent years. Reynolds drew a 30-day jail term and a $100 fine after being convicted of beating his ex-wife, May 24 last year. In July that year, he was charged with breaking into her home and refusing to leave but the charge was later dropped. And, two months later, she accused him of attempted rape, a charge that was also dismissed.

By her own admission, Mrs. Reynolds shot Reynolds in the shoulder when he allegedly bothered her last year. At his arraignment on a criminal trespass charge in November, District Judge Harold J. Stumbo warned Reynolds to keep away from his ex-wife and advised Mrs. Reynolds of her right to defend herself.

A son of the late Walter and Nannie Jones Reynolds, the victim was born May 21, 1948. He is survived by his stepmother, Edith Hamilton Reynolds, of Springport, Mich.; a son, Danny, Jr., of Chicago; two daughters, Paula Kaye, of Chicago, and Danita, of Grethel; seven brothers, Charles and Emmitt, of Lorain, Ohio, Wendell and Dominic, of Springfield, Mich., Ronnie and Glenn, of Justell, and Larry, of Lorain; six sisters, Ella Ruth Hall, of Beaver, Emogene Turner, of Vermilion, Ohio, Augustine Cooper and Billa Faye Finitzer, of Cleveland, Pauline Newsome, of Elyria, Ohio, and Loretta Reynolds, of Springport, Mich.; and a stepsister, Mabel Martin, of Albion, Mich.

Funeral services were conducted October 2 at 10 a.m. at the Beaver Regular Baptist Church, and burial was in the Joe Reynolds cemetery there.

Officials Say Salisbury Not Granted Parole

The parole of Roy Salisbury has not been granted by the state Parole Board—last week's story in The Times, to the contrary.

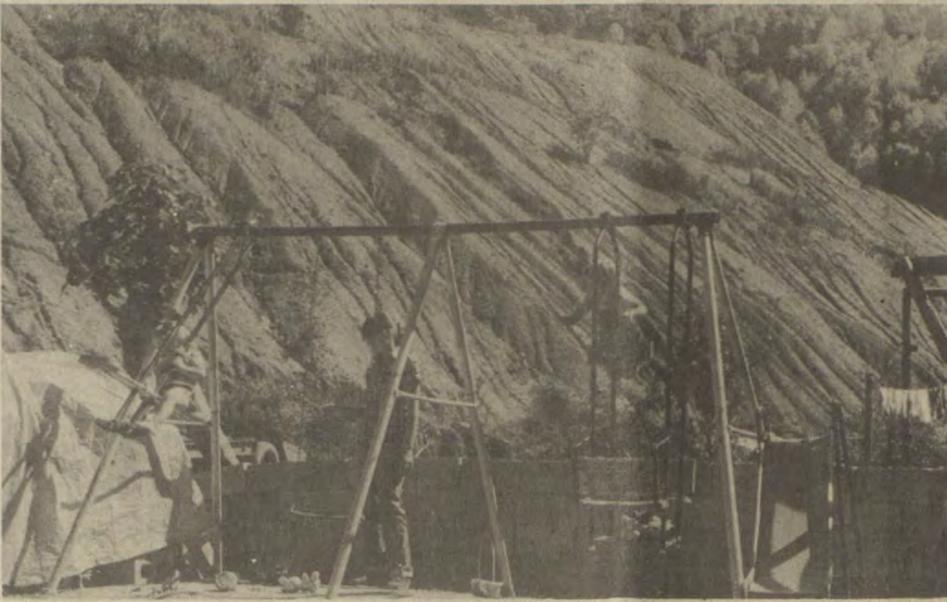

The error, which was not that of this newspaper, was described by Parole Agent Frank DeRossett, Jr. as "an inter-department mistake."

"I may have been wrong," DeRossett admitted Monday when informed that the Parole Board chairman had said Salisbury has not been paroled and that his hearing on petition for parole will not be held till this week.

DeRossett said he received notification dated Sept. 15 that the prisoner "has been recommended for parole," and that in his experience this meant that such recommendation was that of the Parole Board.

The parole officer said one of the confusing factors in the Salisbury case was that the same notification form was used for those paroled and those marked, as Salisbury was, for expedient release. DeRossett had not given such approval for Salisbury.

(Expedient release is a departmental tool used to expedite the release of the inmate as soon as possible after he is granted parole. The correspondence (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

MOUNTAIN OF MINE REFUSE forms the backdrop as Helen Newsome and daughters, Mary Louise, 3, and Jennifer Lynn, 2, play in the front yard of their Clear Creek home. Over 160 Ligon and Mud Creek residents have asked for state and federal help in reclaiming the gob pile, which they fear is in danger of collapse.

Seepage from the slag, which is hauled and pumped from a tippel operated by Left Beaver Coal Co., a Turner Elkhorn subsidiary, has contaminated their wells, residents also claim.

This Town...That World

The Jenny Wiley Festival is having a Terrapin Trot Saturday, and I've been wondering if they wouldn't like to sign John Allen and me to serve as pace-makers.

STOP THE PRESSES!

I have just had a disturbing thought, even if it is idle: If this were 491 years ago, America would be discovered next Wednesday—too late for our weekly edition.

DEFENDER OF TRUTH

Delmas Saunders recently won a guitar as a prize at a Retired Citizens' event. My reason for recording this fact is to state most emphatically that there is not a scintilla of truth in that foul canard which has it that he was not seen in his usual haunts the next week-end because he was away, negotiating with a booking agent.

JUST A HINT, PLEASE

The two old friends, both, as they say, "getting along in years," were being pretty frank with each other about old age, its infirmities and how it had, in particular, affected their ability to remember.

"I can remember things that happened 50 years ago better than what happened last week," one confessed.

The other agreed he was in the same fix and added, "I'm going to have to start keepin' books on my medicine. Forget, sometimes, if I've taken it or not."

"Harlem Nocturne," a cast of six singers and dancers performing the songs and music of well-known black performers, will appear at Prestonsburg Community College, next Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the first of the Eastern Kentucky Concert Series performances.

Miss Jenny Wiley Fest Set For Thursday Night

A number of activities feature the Jenny Wiley Festival during the remainder of the week before the climactic parade, Saturday. Among these, the Miss Jenny Wiley Pageant, a festival highlight, which will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at Prestonsburg Community College.

Survey Under Attack In New Akers Action

Property surveying risked some of its reputation as an exact science in the Floyd circuit courtroom yesterday (Tuesday), as attorney Cliff Latta challenged surveyor Harold Baldrige on the accuracy of a plat Baldrige had prepared.

Latta was representing Triple Elkhorn Mining Company in that firm's continuing dispute with Mr. and Mrs. Everett Akers, of Finance Hollow, between Allen and Martin. Mr. and Mrs. Akers claim that a haul road built by the company to serve its stripmine operation there encroached upon their property.

Between 1975 and 1980, the company trespassed on two tracts he owns on the ridge dividing Finance Hollow, a tributary of Beaver Creek, and Haus (or Rice) Branch of Prater Creek, Akers alleged. One tract is the site of a television antenna Akers subsequently sold to Tel-Com, Inc.

Testimony by Akers regarding "permanent damage" allegedly done to his property by the coal company was ruled irrelevant by Special Judge Reed Anderson. Anderson warned jurors that they could consider only those damages associated with the alleged trespass. Under cross-examination by Latta, Baldrige conceded there were discrepancies between the map he had prepared for Akers and two maps furnished by the attorney, but said the differences did not affect the area in dispute.

Latta also closely quizzed appraisers who testified about the fair rental value of the haul road Akers said ran on his property. Gary Endicott said the property owner could have got $800 a month for each tract in 1975. Dixon Nunery reckoned the 1975 rental value as $800 a month for one tract, $600 a month for the other.

Testimony in the case was continuing Tuesday afternoon.

The present suit punctuates a nine-year dispute between Akers and Triple Elkhorn. In July, 1979, the couple brought a $1.6 million damage suit against the coal firm, whose blasting, they claimed, had damaged their home and TV antenna. That trial ended in a hung jury.

Plaintiffs are being represented in the present suit by Pikeville attorney Michael DeBourbon.

Despite All Pleas...

County Reaches Blood Quota Only One Month During Year

A graph on the wall at the blood donor center here tells it all. While the jagged green line occasionally starts upward, the going since January has been almost all downhill.

The line, center workers explain, stands for donors; and the donors, for reasons they cannot explain, are simply not coming in.

"At first we thought it was the hot summer, when the average monthly census dropped to 94 and stayed there," said nurse Georgia Sanders. "But since then the weather has cooled and they're still not coming in."

To pay its way, the Prestonsburg donor center must draw an average of 130 pints of blood a month. That has happened only once this year—in January, when 131 pints were collected.

For the three center workers who set up the donor station here three years ago as a satellite of the Lexington-based Central Kentucky Blood Center (CKBC)—and who still speak of needing a full-scale blood center here by the end of the decade—the response of Floyd residents has been disappointing.

A CKBC brochure lists 44 Floyd organizations—hospitals, churches, stores, businesses, schools, civic groups and government agencies—as "participating donor groups." But participation has been unpredictable and spotty, according to Pat Phillips, director of the center here.

A whole day spent recently on the campus of Prestonsburg Community College, for example, yielded only 20 pints. And 200 phone calls, asking potential donors to come into the blood center in Prestonsburg's Municipal Building, attracted a single response.

Floyd countians received about 2000 pints of blood last year, about 600 pints more than was contributed by donors here. How that gap can be closed is a problem that baffles center workers but, says Mrs. Phillips, strong leadership from some civic organization could make up the difference.

Attitude has a lot to do with it, too, she thinks. "We like to think we're enlightened but a lot of people are superstitious when it comes to blood," she said. Some fear a needle. Some picture blood drawing as a messy operation. Some are just squeamish about blood in general.

And, lately, a new fear altogether has entered the picture. "People are starting to ask, 'Can't I get AIDS from giving blood?'" said Kim Boyd, a nurse on the center staff.

You can't get AIDS from giving blood. A sterile needle is used to draw the blood and the needle is used only once and then discarded. There is no pain beyond the initial prick of the needle as it is inserted in the donor's arm; and it is not messy, the blood being drawn directly into a plastic bag.

Clear Creek Slag Problem Still Remains Unresolved

Coal washers at the Ligon tippel were still last Thursday. Trucks that usually haul slate and other waste to the top of huge gob piles up Clear Creek were idle. Shut down, too, were the pumps that force slurry from the tippel into old mines at the head of the hollow and into wells drilled into the surrounding hillsides.

The tippel operators were in Atlanta the same day, where officials of the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) handed them a notice of violation and explained that they were holding up renewal of the firm's waste discharge permit.

But if some of the eight or nine families on Clear Creek were wondering if the wheels of government were not finally beginning to turn for them, no one was yet planning a victory celebration.

These are people who have watched the gob piles grow up around their homes for the past 14 years. Some of them say that sometimes the creek, and now their faucets, run black with coal waste. And no one is predicting that their problems will be solved quickly or easily.

Hope comes hard for Tommy Wright, who helped clear a site for the original slate dump but says he never foresaw the blight it would become. "This used to be a farm," he said, his hand describing ridges of gray slate as far as the eye can see. "You could walk; you could hunt. It's not fit to live here now."

Worse yet, there are the makings of a tragedy there, said Wright, who was not the only resident to draw a parallel with Buffalo Creek, near Logan, West Virginia, where a torrent of water burst from a slag dump, killing several downstream residents, about seven years ago.

"On both sides, the whole mountain is full of water. What if it was to bust? Buffalo Creek wouldn't be nothing," he said.

Nor did Wright draw much consolation from the EPA's citing the tippel operators last week. "They'll all be gone," he said, "and we'll be left holding the bag."

"They" are the Left Beaver Coal Company, which operates the big processing plant, the Turner Elkhorn Mining Co., which owns it, and a Cleveland, Ohio firm, Pickand Mathers, which owns Turner Elkhorn. Palmer Humphrey has no kind word for them, nor for the federal or state mining inspectors who are supposed to monitor their operation.

Humphrey claims that runoff from the slate dumps was once diverted into his back yard. The company made promises it never kept and the water coursing around his house has since risen on occasion to a height of four cinder blocks, he said.

"They'll not do anything reasonable like a company should. They just do what they want to do," Humphrey said. "You can call an inspector. They write them up. But that's the end of it."

The slate dump encroaches almost to the walls of the cottage where Darryl and Connie Platkus live with their two children. Any sort of rain causes water to swirl around their house and, in one recent storm, "we thought we were being washed off," Mrs. Platkus said.

"When it rains, nobody sleeps on this hollow," Helen Newsome said flatly. With her husband, John, she has led a fight to get state and federal inspectors to take seriously the complaints of Clear Creek residents about the tippel operation.

They came to the end of their patience with Left Beaver Coal Company last October, Helen Newsome said, when the water from their 87-foot drilled well "ran solid black." Since even before then, the family has had to buy distilled water or draw water from Mud Creek neighbors for drinking, she said.

The Newsomes say they've seen fountains of black water bubbling up from the creek running by their house. A pipeline carrying slurry runs up the creek from the coal-washing plant into the hills at the head of the hollow. Company workers sometimes open valves to discharge the tarry waste directly into the stream, the Newsomes charge.

Two of their four children have chronic sores which their family physician thinks are reactions to the high concentration of sulfur in their bathing water, and other Ligon residents also (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

The fitted bodice, accented with seed pearls, flowed into a chapel train, finished with a self-ruffle with a flounce of venise lace underneath. She carried a silk cascading bouquet composed of white orchids, pink rosebuds, white and pink stephanotis, baby's breath, and English ivy, which she made.

Linda Stone, of Sebring, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Renee and Sarah Thompson, sisters of the bride, Fran Haas and Beth Lehman, of Sebring. They wore identical gowns of soft pink polyester taffeta. Each carried a bamboo fan accented with pink silk orchids and baby's breath, also made by the bride.

Federal Funding Helps 10,000 More Per Month With Nutritious Foods

Through increased federal funding, a $2 million Jobs Bill grant and a streamlined administrative system, the Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources now provides nutritious foods to 10,000 more people each month than it served a year ago.

The cabinet's Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC) now serves 60,000 eligible Kentuckians monthly. WIC, funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, supplies certain foods high in protein, iron and vitamins A and C to low-income pregnant women, new mothers, infants and children to age 5.

Included in the 10,000 new clients, says Human Resources Secretary Buddy Adams, are 3,000 who were on a waiting list this time last year. That list, he said, was the result of limited funds and an inefficient voucher and vendor reimbursement system.

"A $2 million allocation through the federal government's Jobs Bill gave our WIC program a big boost," said Adams. "In addition to that, USDA increased Kentucky's WIC budget from $22 million to $24 million. The new money plus a new, automated voucher system allowed us not only to extend service to the 3,000 on the waiting list, but to serve an additional 7,000 women and young children who cannot afford the kinds of foods they need to avoid health problems."

The new system provides participants a two-month supply of vouchers at one time. The vouchers are like checks and are redeemed at grocery stores for the specified foods. Grocers then deposit the vouchers directly into their bank accounts for prompt reimbursement.

Under the old system, reimbursement to grocers took up to 60 days. The new system, first tested in Kentucky last October in 18 counties. Adams said it is more efficient and may encourage more grocers to accept the WIC vouchers in their stores.

WIC foods (milk, eggs, cheese, juices high in vitamin C, cereals high in iron, dried beans and peas, plus iron-fortified formula, cereals and juices for infants) are available to low-income women, infants and children who have health problems that can be improved through better nutrition. Each applicant receives a basic health assessment so that a physician, nutritionist or nurse can make that determination. Eligible households are given vouchers to buy the specified foods.

IS IT WISE TO PLAN MY OWN FUNERAL?

It was the Earl of Warwick who said there is nothing more certain than death and nothing more uncertain than the time of dying. He would be prepared for death at all times, he states, and his preparedness would not make him die the sooner, but the better.

This individual insight is very enlightening and practical. We have pre-planned funerals with many members of our community who share some of these same sentiments. Many have expressed great relief in their foresightedness. They say it's a comfort to know everything will be well-handled, and will cost no less and no more than you want it to be.

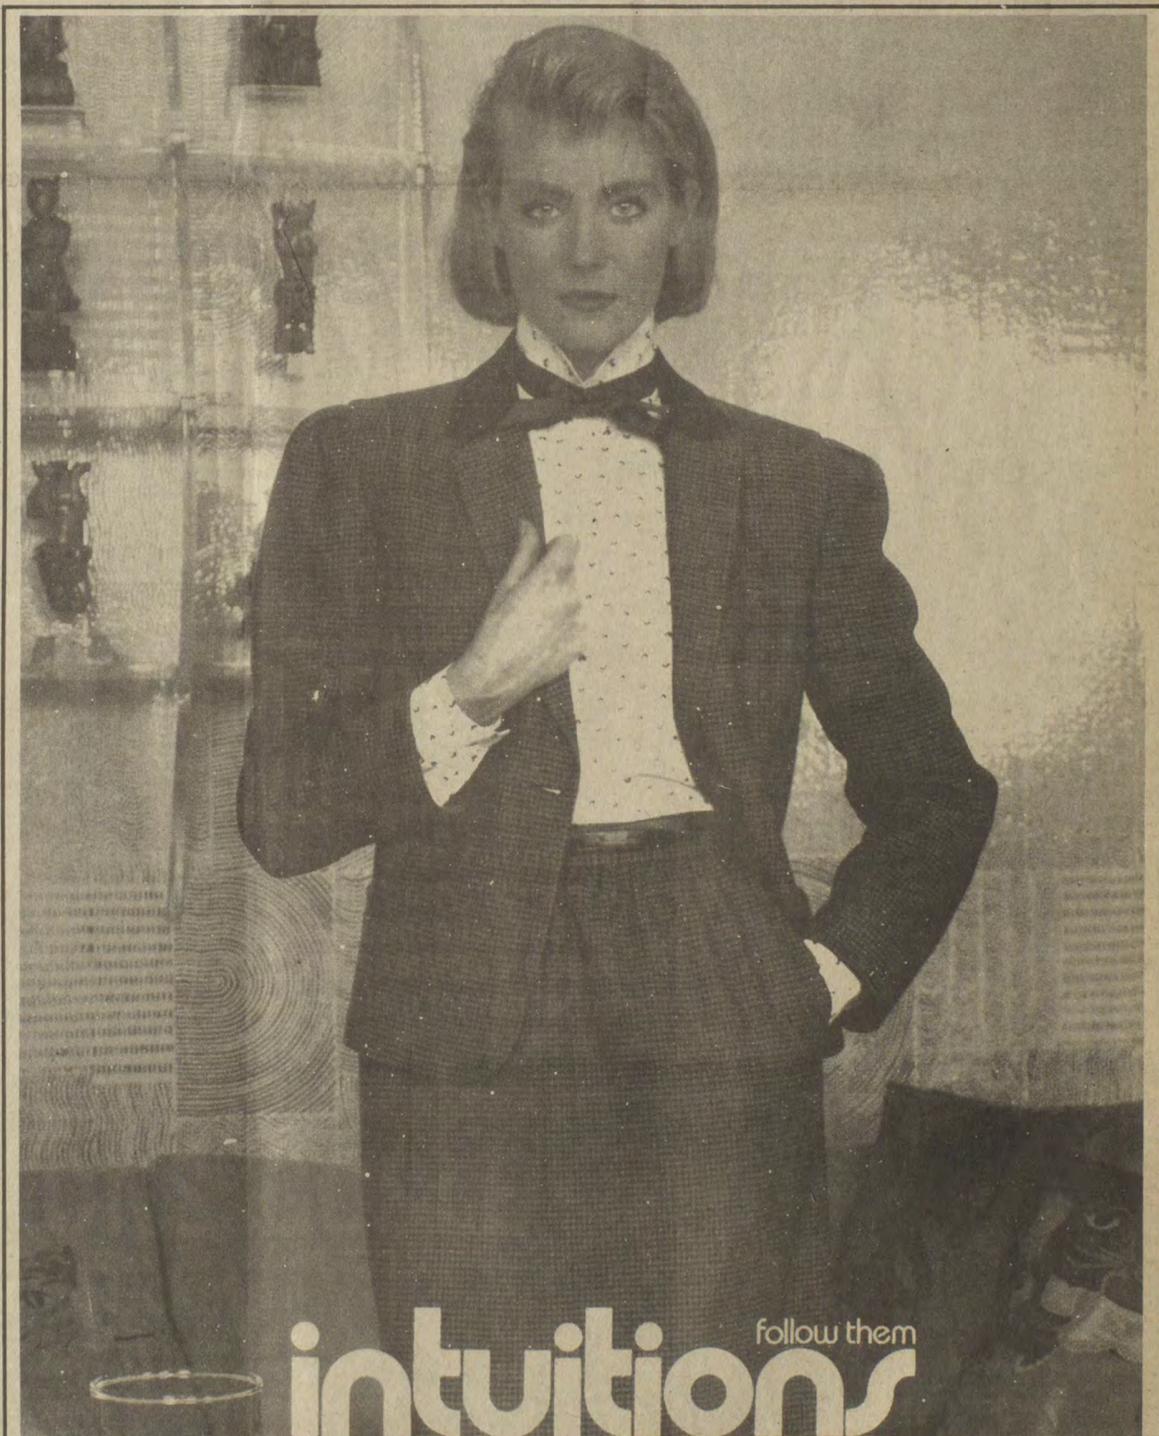

Rather than permit a third party to arrange things or cause your loved ones the anguish and painful burden of funeral details, you may wish to plan your own funeral down to the smallest details.

PROFESSIONAL ASSISTANCE

There are no amateurs on our staff. We are professionals in funeral service. Our experience provides you with advance counsel in your own best interests. Our aim is your comfort. Call or stop by for details—we can provide you with a variety of plans to suit your cost and personal requirements.

complain of unexplained skin lesions, the Newsomes said.

Reports of black-water discharge are not new. In 1976, a state hearing officer accused Left Beaver Coal of "a consistent pattern of discharging their refuse by inappropriate and unacceptable methods."

But the Newsomes' biggest fear is that one of the mountains of refuse around them will one day collapse, releasing a devastating tide of water and sludge.

"Completely impossible," Turner Elkhorn President Frank Heinze said of that suggestion Monday. There have been some accidental spills of coal waste into Clear Creek and reclamation practices there "have room for improvement," the company official conceded. But he discounted fears of a buildup of water pressure behind the slate dumps, claiming "the water runs out, and it runs out clean."

Some observers do not share Heinze's confidence. Over seven years ago, a mining inspector reported that "slope stability may be a problem" on the huge gob pile on which the Newsomes look from their front porch. It was a potential hazard to anyone working on it or anyone living within a mile downstream, the engineer said.

Commenting on that report recently, a hydrologist confirmed the dump is hazardous, adding that "it is even riskier if Left Beaver is pumping water into the mines and hillslope."

Patrick Sloan is a Berea-based hydrologist working as a consultant for the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition, an environmentalist group which is advising Clear Creek residents. "Pumping water into the mines will raise the water table in the (Clear Creek) waste pile and decrease the slope stability," he said in an August report.

Already, Clear Creek residents have had advance warnings of tragedy, the Newsomes believe. Nine truckloads of slate washed off the hillside into the house of her father, Ballard Gibson, last year, Helen Newsome said. And on July 15 this year, black water erupted violently from a nearby hillside, covering the surrounding trees and slopes, she said.

"I was born and raised here, but I'm scared to live here now, knowing something like Buffalo Creek might happen any time," she said. "I don't understand how something like this can be allowed to happen."

Officials of the state Department of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement (DSMRE) found no violations of the law when they visited the Clear Creek gob piles in April and June this year. After the latter inspection, Johnnie E. Ross, principal reclamation inspector in DSMRE's Prestonsburg office, reported that all sediment control structures appeared to be properly maintained, there were no water quality problems, and the coal company was reclaiming its permitted refuse areas.

Ross was accompanied on that inspection by John W. Thacker, DSMRE regional administrator, Sonny L. Vance, chief reclamation inspector, and Glenn Turner, tippie foreman.

Left Beaver Coal Co. was even reclaiming a refuse area for which it was not responsible. Moreover, Turner assured him the company planned to reclaim the whole area, even though much of the waste had been dumped before federal Clean Water and Surface Mining Acts took effect, Ross reported.

That was when the Newsomes retained legal counsel and started circulating a petition. It charged that Left Beaver Coal's injection wells were contaminating streams and drinking water and accused the company of sometimes discharging waste directly into the creek. It asked for immediate assistance from federal and state agencies. It gathered 167 signatures.

Mark Morgan, a Danville attorney with a special interest in environmental issues, agreed to represent the Newsomes and some others. Darryl and Connie Platkus and others are being represented by Appalachian Research and Defense Fund (ARDF) attorney David Rubenstein. And Congressman Carl D. Perkins offered to do all he could, too.

On July 14, EPA published a routine notice that it intended to renew Left Beaver Coal Co.'s national pollutant discharge elimination system (NPDES) permit. Through their attorneys, the residents asked for a review and public hearing on the permit renewal.

Soon afterward, federal and state inspectors began to discover violations at the Clear Creek refuse area. A federal inspector issued Left Beaver Coal a notice of violation for exceeding the manganese limit in its effluent; a state inspector issued a notice of non-compliance, citing violations of various water quality regulations; EPA officials cited the firm for failing to report waste spillages.

Then EPA officials announced last Wednesday that they were not going to renew Left Beaver Coal's NPDES permit after all, "pending further enforcement action presently under way."

William J. Taylor, chief of EPA's industrial water management in this area, refused Monday to comment on the Left Beaver Coal operation, saying "it is still under investigation on our part." The citizens' request for a hearing on reissuance of the firm's NPDES permit will be held in abeyance pending the outcome of the investigation, he said.

The Ligon tippie was back in operation Monday. Lack of business was the only reason it was idle for two days last week, said Turner Elkhorn officials.

Meanwhile, two other developments were noted that will likely have a bearing on the enforcement of water quality regulations on Clear Creek and elsewhere. One is the gradual transfer from federal to state authorities of primary responsibility for enforcing the Clean Water Act. The other is a proposal to allow coal operators to apply for a general NPDES permit which would apparently reduce opportunities for citizen input in the permitting process. A public hearing on that proposal has been set for 7 p.m. this Thursday at Prestonsburg Community College.

Questions of permits and primacy aside, the issue for the Newsomes and their neighbors is whether Clear Creek can ever again live up to its name. Extending the Mud Creek water system beyond the Ligon hill could solve their household water problems. But reclaiming Clear Creek will apparently depend on what responsibility the coal operators will assume, or be compelled to assume, and what public monies government officials can be persuaded to commit to the project.

In the meantime, commented ARDF attorney Rubenstein, "it's a royal mess up there."

His friend then lamented the fact that he could no longer recall names. "It's plumb embarrassing" for an old friend to come up, call me by name, and find myself trying to recall his," he said. "I dig around for hints, and sometimes it helps."

And so their litany of mental woes ran till came time to part. As they did so, one said to the other, "Say, just exactly how do you spell your first name?"

FRUIT OF THE VINE

One of the fruits of the season is the plum-granny, and I was given one a few days ago. This is the miniature melon that convinced me, years ago during schooldays, that my willpower wasn't what it should be. Sniffing its delightful aroma, I could never resist taking a bite, although experience had taught me they were strictly for smelkin', not eatin', purposes.

One plum-granny in a room will do more to clear it of obnoxious odors than all the sprays chemists have ever whopped up.

Now, don't go hifalutin' and call this a pomegranate, which is native to Asia and Africa. A pomegranate it is not. It is—I grannies—a plain plum-granny.

The guy who calls himself Mump-simus says we will have a mild winter, explaining that he bases the prediction on the fact that the "woolie worms" are almost all red.

Students State Reasons For Attending Meeting

Your article which described our reason for being at the September 14th Floyd County School Board meeting was not accurately explained. Your article said that we were there as supporters of the student who had a hearing that night. This was not our reason for being there. We didn't know anything about the hearing until we got to the meeting.

We didn't get to state our reason for being there. No one asked us why we were there, certainly not your reporter, even though we tried to tell him our response.

Our response was to see how board meetings were conducted, and we wanted to ask the board how we could go about having some improvements made at Prestonsburg High School. We didn't know that you couldn't just go to a meeting and ask questions.

For example, we want clean restrooms with doors on the stalls. We also want toilet paper and soap in the restrooms. We wanted to ask why suspension procedures set forth by the board are not being followed. We feel that the way suspensions are being conducted is not fair. Some students are suspended for one day for a supposed violation, some are suspended for three days, and some not at all. There should be a set pattern. We wanted to ask why we couldn't take certain books home with us. These are just a few of the things we wanted to discuss.

We did discuss fund raising, but not for the purpose your reporter stated. We didn't hear anyone discussing a "Save Tony Potter Fund." We don't know where that came from. The remark made about Karen Marcum's involvement with the fund raising was also incorrect. The only thing that we asked her was if it was legal to fundraise.

We started our improvement organization on our own, because we felt that something had to be done. The only involvement we had with the Floyd County Citizens Education Council was to borrow school rules from them. We did ask them to get a copy of our school rules for us, because we didn't know anyone else to ask for help. Since we didn't know what the rules were, we felt that this was the first thing we had to find out.

We are not attacking any one individual. We just want to improve our school, and we don't think that these are radical actions.

The actual drawing takes only five minutes or so, although the entire procedure—including registration, taking a medical history, rest and refreshments—may take from 45 minutes to an hour.

Anyone who is 18 or older (17 with parent's permission) and weighs 100 pounds or more can give blood, and blood can be given every two months—more than enough time for the body to replace the red blood cells.

Science has come up with no means for manufacturing blood—only the body's bone marrow can do that. And while commercial markets guarantee a supply to pharmaceutical firms—which use plasma in the manufacture of some drugs—the vast majority of people who need blood transfusions depend on the voluntary donor system.

While she wouldn't want to make too much of it, Pat Phillips thinks people have a kind of "civic duty" to keep the system going. "In that sense, we are our brothers' keepers," she said. And the American Association of Blood Banks points to the other side of the coin with its slogan, "Giving Blood Makes You Feel Good All Over."

The blood donor center is on the second floor of the Municipal Building and is open on Tuesdays, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Thursdays, 12 noon to 8 p.m.; and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. A pint given will guarantee the donor and his or her immediate family free blood coverage for a year. You can also specify that your donation is a replacement for a particular person who has had or will be having a transfusion.

For regular donors, giving blood is a matter-of-fact habit; its meaning hits you only when you think about it, Mrs. Phillips said. "Most people would jump at the chance to save someone's life," she explained. "Our donors are doing that all the time."

Says Students 'Picked On'

I think I know one reason for the great dropout rate in the Floyd county school system. I believe that certain students are picked on until they just can't take anymore, so they quit school. Or else, they're suspended repeatedly.

My son was suspended last year for not going to school during a flood. Our house and cars were flooded. This made no difference to Mr. May, the principal, or to the board of education.

He was suspended this year for smoking in his truck before getting out to go into the school. He never intended to smoke at school. He was putting the cigarette out when Mr. Layne saw him and reported him to Mr. May. He was suspended again for smoking at Garth. It made no difference to the principal when my son said that he was not smoking. In this school, it's not a case of being innocent until proven guilty. You're just guilty, and that's that.

My son did not have a hearing before any of these dismissals. Their rules look good, but since they don't abide by them, they might as well throw them in the trashcan.

Sincerely,
DONNA HUNT

Supports School Discipline

I applaud Mr. May in his fight to keep order in Prestonsburg High School. As a former teacher in the Letcher County Schools, I dealt with the same problems he described several times myself. Unfortunately, the students who proved to be discipline problems were not expelled—they were only sent back into the classroom to make more trouble. Principals and teachers alike were forced to keep those who did not want to learn, but were there to win popularity contests with the other students by being nonconforming heroes who would beat the system by making fools of anyone in authority.

I don't question an individual's right to pursue an education, but when that individual disrupts the learning environment for some 25 to 30 other students, then he should forfeit his right and be made to find an alternative to public education.

I sincerely wish there were more principals like Mr. May who have the courage to stand up for the rights of the school against problem students. Such courage might even raise student scores on the state tests.

Sincerely,
KATHRYN SHAFER

Need Two-Party System

This letter is in response to your editorial, dated Wednesday, September 21, 1983 and titled "Politics Not to Blame."

You wrote "If that a traveller happens to be from Floyd county, he or she may wonder why US 23 between Paintsville and Louisa is being four-laned while the Prestonsburg-to-Paintsville section of the same road, a section that carries far more traffic than all the road from Paintsville on north, remains untouched." You also stated "you can't say this situation is the result of politics. Johnson county, which is getting the four-lane as far as Paintsville, is staunchly Republican. Lawrence county, which is getting all of its part of the road four-laned, pretty well splits its vote between the two major parties."

While back on the home front, good old Floyd county "earns a trophy" for being "Democrat country, USA."

Is there a message here? According to your article, Johnson county, which is strongly Republican got part of theirs, and Lawrence county, which pretty well divides its votes between the two major parties, got all of theirs. However, Floyd county, which boasts more than 10:1 Democratic, got absolutely nothing. It seems to me that the message here is loud and clear. When either party dominates, we lose. Only if we have a competitive, two-party system, can we get equal representation. Come on Floyd county, let's be competitive, we deserve more!

Ford To Keynote MSU Conference

U.S. Sen. Wendell H. Ford will give the keynote address for "New Lands for the Future," an economic development conference scheduled Nov. 10 and 11 at Morehead State University.

The conference will provide the public with pertinent economic, geographic and technical information on the new land plateaus being created through surface mining.

Topics discussed will address the social, health and economic problems faced by the people in mid-Appalachia due to the absence of level lands for developmental purposes. Discussions will also include how the new mine plateaus and other mined lands can and should be utilized in alleviating problems.

Former Kentucky Gov. Edward T. Breathitt, now a vice president for the Norfolk-Southern Corporation in Washington, D.C., will be the general conference chairman, while Kentucky Congressman Carl D. Perkins will moderate a panel of experts on the final day of the conclave.

A helicopter tour of nearby plateau mine sites in Martin county will be provided on a first-come, first-served basis in accordance with conference registration.

Generally, the conference will depict how the surface mine plateaus are constructed, where they are and the different ways they can be utilized in connection with regional needs from a developmental standpoint.

Included will be a presentation by representatives of Gilbert Development Corp. of Gilbert, W. Va., on "How to Build a New Town on a 220-Acre Mine Plateau," a concept that is to become a reality early next year in Mingo County, W. Va.

Other presentations during the conference will focus on possible uses of mine plateaus varying in size from 50 acres to several thousand acres. The need for coordinating planning on using the plateaus for local and regional needs will be heavily stressed.

Roadside Theater Gets Off-Broadway Acclaim

During the month of September, Roadside Theater of Whitesburg performed its newest show, "South of the Mountain," off-Broadway in New York at the Bessie Schonberg Theater. While Roadside has performed other of its shows in the New York City, this was "South of the Mountain's" first appearance there.

The New York Post called the show, "extraordinary theatre," and a National Public Radio broadcast reported, "What emerges in 'South of the Mountain' is a portrait of Americans in a locale, Appalachia, that's more rich and immediate than you're likely to read in any social history." But, perhaps most interesting was the New York Villager which stated, "There is an intriguing and admirable solidity about this trio that you seldom see on a New York stage."

Roadside returns home from New York only briefly before embarking upon its fall tour of the Southeast, being sponsored by The Southern Arts Federation. The group will also be doing a one-night only performance of its show, "Brother Jack," at the Appashop Center in Whitesburg on October 15 at 7 p.m. The performance will be a part of the three-day Appashop Homecoming event which will take place October 14, 15, and 16. For these three days, the Appashop will be the site of an array of entertainment.

Seating for the "Brother Jack" performance will be limited so reservations for the show must be made early. To make reservations, call Jerry Mon-Fri. from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at (606) 633-0108. Reservations must be paid for at least two days before the performance.

Baby Recognizes Best Friend

One-year-old Kara Michelle Knorr was more interested in her mother, Stachia Hayes Knorr (left), than Mrs. George Bush, wife of the Vice President of the United States, at a recent function held at the American embassy in Stockholm, Sweden. Her father, Capt. Marvin Knorr, Jr., of the U.S. Marine Corps, is on assignment as an exchange officer for the Swedish Coast Artillery. His assignment will be concluded Oct. 31, and he and his family will then spend two weeks at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Knorr, Sr., in Skagway, Alaska before coming to Hueysville to spend the holidays with Mrs. Knorr's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rondal Hayes.

Bulbs Planted Now Will Yield Colorful Blooms Next Spring

Kentucky gardeners often rely on spring flowering bulbs to bring beauty and color to their landscapes. Crocus and daffodils announce to the winter-weary that spring is on its way. Red tulips are a Derby Day tradition in the Bluegrass and throughout the state.

In order to enjoy those early-bloomers next spring, you'll have to get busy this fall planting bulbs. Fall is the only time tulips, daffodils and a host of other spring flowering bulbs can be planted.

You'll find the procedure simple and quick—especially in terms of the rewards you'll reap. If you've never planted bulbs before, here are some tips from Dr. Robert Anderson, Extension horticulture specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Plan to plant spring flowering bulbs between October 15 and Thanksgiving. Start by cultivating and cleaning the planting site.

Bulbs can be used as annuals or perennials in beds, in ground covers, in rock gardens or under trees and shrubs. Well-drained sites are essential, stressed Anderson. Established gardens and beds or newly cultivated areas are fine, he said, as long as no triazine herbicides (such as simazine) have been used on the soil.

Soil pH should be 6 to 7. Bulbs will not do well in heavy clay soils, warned Anderson, so get poor soils in better condition with compost, peat moss or other organic matter.

Most bulbs prefer partial shade, so avoid a site that receives full sunlight in the middle of the day. "This reduces water stress on hot spring days to extend flower life and allows the bulbs to mature properly after flowering," said Anderson. Also, if you want your bulbs to naturalize or become perennials, avoid planting them near heated basement walls.

If you're thinking of planting a few bulbs directly in your lawn, choose those that flower very early in the spring, Anderson advised. All others perform best and are easier to maintain when planted in mulched beds.

For a mass of bright color and maximum visibility, plant flower bulbs in groups—at least 10 or 12 small bulbs together or 5 to 6 larger bulbs in a grouping. Intersperse bulbs that flower at different times for continuous blooms.

To get down to the actual planting, put small bulbs (about an inch) in holes 5 inches deep and 1 to 4 inches apart. Large bulbs (2 inches or more) should be placed in holes 8 inches deep and 4 to 8 inches apart. Anderson said these planting depths will help protect the bulbs from frost, animals and physical damage when you hoe the bed.

Thoroughly loosen the soil and mix in a handful of bonemeal per square foot (1 ounce/square foot). Place bulbs upright in the hole (generally pointed side up) and cover bulbs with half the soil removed from the hole. Water bulbs thoroughly and replace the remaining soil.

Fertilize the soil surface with 10-10-10 (N-P-K) at a rate of 3 to 4 pounds per 100 square feet. Cover the bed with 2 to 3 inches of mulch and water thoroughly again. If the weather is dry this fall, water the area as needed.

SELECTING BULBS

With the vast array of different types and colors of spring flowering bulbs available through mail order companies, garden centers, supermarkets and department stores, how does the prospective gardener choose?

You'll need to consider flowering time, flower color and plant height, and whether you want them to bloom beyond that first spring.

To identify the spring flowering bulbs best for Kentucky gardens, Anderson and his associates have been testing more than 100 species and cultivars in the UK Landscape Garden Center. Trials during the last four years have focused on the naturalization of tulips and other spring flowering bulbs.

Crocus, daffodils and grape hyacinths are common plants that grow readily and naturalize in most gardens, Anderson said. Tulips and hyacinths are also common and available but they will naturalize only in the best garden sites.

Generally, spring flowering bulbs do very well the first spring after they are planted, Anderson said. Tulips are generally excellent the first and second year when they're planted properly, but they usually deteriorate in the third or fourth year.

"It depends on the site, whether they've received proper care, and whether they've been fertilized as needed," added Anderson. "Some gardeners in Kentucky have had tulips completely naturalized in the landscape for many years."

Little Known Birds Of The U.S.

PLUMED WEED SIFT—Though nondescript at best and lacking any sort of prominent plumage, as suggested by its name, the plumed weed sift, nonetheless, must be included among the feathered kingdom's more enterprising members. When this dweller of damp lowlands happens upon a suitable hollow reed (notably the dwarf bayou bullrush) it will invariably insert its rather short beak into one end, pluck the stem from the ground and thus provide itself with a quite workable beak extension apparatus. Thus equipped, the clever, if somewhat nervous bird, will probe and literally sift for tasty insect life in normally inaccessible recesses of logs and dark pockets along stream banks. During mating season, which, oddly enough, runs from Aug. 12 through the first of October, these fowls become quite frisky and will often delight their potential mates by donning brightly-colored milkshake straws (where available) and performing a bizarre courtship strut.

(Bird lovers in the sift's range are advised against leaving frayed electrical wires unattended since the weed sift may attempt to insert its beak into a "hot" lead.)

SOUTHERN CLOSET THRASHER—First identified as a distinct species in 1937 by Missouri farmer Hobert Wooster, this unusual bird, a first cousin to the attic shrike, is remarkable not only for its habit of nesting and, indeed, living most of its life in the closets of old houses, but for the relatively small and seemingly "squinty" appearance of the eyes, an apparent adaptation to the subdued light of the bird's curious environment. A retiring bird, about the size of a tangelo, the thrasher is easily frightened and shows great reluctance to fend for itself in the "outside world." Indeed, it is not unusual for the thrasher to literally become paralyzed and drop out of the sky at the sight of a housecat or nine-year-old with a BB gun while on a rare foray into the "wild." While favoring household insects for its subsistence, the thrasher can manage quite well by foraging on dried wall paper paste. The plaintive, pre-dawn cry of the closet thrasher has doubtless given rise to numerous ghost stories and troubled the sleep of countless youngsters.

SCARLET TALISMAN—The ire of the BB gun set, the talisman is blessed by a tough and heavily padded layer of skin which underlies its striking red breast. So contemptuous is the hearty bird of youngsters armed with Daisy pumps, that it will often present itself in clear view and easy range of the young hunters, take a slug to the chest, and then flit away, undaunted. Guided by a primeval and almost mystical instinct, strikingly similar to that which directs the well-known swallows of San Juan Capistrano to their annual destination, these cocky fowls return each March 9 to a vacant lot on the corner of Ninth and Maple in Cedar Rapids, Iowa on their annual migratory route.

Further information concerning avis raris may be obtained by contacting P. N. Allen or any member of the I.P.F.F. (Institute for the Preservation of Forgettable Fowls.)

Mite snatcher catches a lift on the head of a bluetick.

BANDED MITE SNATCHER—This delicate fowl, hardly larger than a double-ought road gravel, uses to full advantage its light weight and skillful hovering ability to land atop unsuspecting animals such as grazing cows, foraging woodchucks, even Ole Shep on occasion, where it feeds upon various mites, fleas, ticks and similar unseemly parasites. Many times the host animal remains unaware of the little snatcher's presence although the birds can be worrisome to certain smaller, high-strung dogs. If Rover only knew the valuable service being rendered by the gregarious little mite snatcher, he surely would offer no protest.

The banded mite snatcher, both male and female, is of a dull charcoal hue with no distinguishing coloration patterns. Its cry is a muffled "peep, peep," followed generally by a three "peep" sequence.

FENCE WREN—Lackluster in both appearance and demeanor, this homey member of the wren fellowship is distinguished only by its penchant for loitering along fence rows throughout certain sections of the Southeast where it feeds on the ubiquitous locust post borer.

Environmental Effort Of County Recognized At Annual Conference

County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo was in Paducah last Friday to accept for Floyd county a Certificate of Recognition for outstanding environmental achievements. Certificates were also awarded to 13 other counties.

The award ceremonies ended the eighth annual Kentucky Environmental Conference, and Jackie Swigart, secretary of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection cabinet, presented the 1983 Secretary's Award to Former Governor Edward T. Breathitt for his role "in the passage of the landmark 1966 Surface Mining Act in Kentucky and for his continuing interest in, and support for, that program."

The Martiki Corp was recognized for outstanding post-mining land use in Eastern Kentucky. Under a joint agreement with Morehead State University, an agricultural research and development complex would be placed on Martin county land reclaimed by Martiki.

The project involves several agricultural phases to be developed over a 15-year period. Martiki has agreed to fund the project, Morehead State University will manage it. The first phase of the project is nearly completed. It is a swine facility, which will produce 4,500 pigs a year. Martiki has already constructed a 70,000-gallon water-storage tank and a treatment plant. The company has also laid more than 4,000 feet of water-lines for the complex.

Future phases of the project are planned to include a 72,000 poultry facility, commercial greenhouses and commercial cattle herds. Orchards and vineyards are currently in place at the site.

National PTA Launches Program To Prevent Drug and Alcohol Use

The facts are alarming. Roughly two-thirds of high school seniors have tried an illicit drug; 8000, aged 15-24, die each year in alcohol-related accidents; 92 percent of America's youth have used alcohol by the age of 17. Drug abuse among youth in the United States is the highest of any developed country.

Responding to these frightening statistics, the country's largest child advocacy organization, the National PTA, has launched a two-pronged attack against drug and alcohol use among school-age children.

According to Elaine Stienkemeyer, National PTA president, "the objective of the National PTA's Drug and Alcohol Use Prevention Program is to strengthen parent-child communication. The more patients know about drug and alcohol use, the more effectively they can help their children cope with their problems, thus helping to avoid the child's need for drugs and alcohol in the first place."

First, the National PTA is encouraging its 25,000 local units and more than 5 million members to participate actively in this national program by conducting drug and alcohol projects at the grass roots level.

The October issue of the National PTA magazine, "PTA Today," contains a complete guide for PTAs and other community organizations that are interested in beginning drug and alcohol prevention programs.

The second part of the program focuses on 32 city PTAs that were awarded grants to enable them to conduct local drug and alcohol awareness projects. These PTAs, representing cities coast to coast, will build local coalitions, help other local PTAs conduct drug and alcohol programs in schools, at PTA meetings, and in the community.

These PTAs will also be responsible for organizing town meetings to watch "The Chemical People," a two-part documentary on school-age substance use and abuse which will air on PBS stations throughout the country, November 2 and 9. The National PTA will also conduct a massive information sharing and "How-to" campaign to assist communities with the logistics of organizing the town meetings.

Scattered Blazes Emphasize Danger Of Fall Season

Although Division of Forestry officials here reported no woodland blazes in Floyd county as of Tuesday afternoon, two fires Monday were looked on as a portent of what could become commonplace during the current forest fire season, which began October 1.

Stephen Brackett, director of the Division of Forestry's office here, pointed to recent dry and warm conditions as creating the first stages of a potentially severe fire season. "Many more days like the past week and we could start seeing some serious problems," Brackett said.

Forestry crews were called out to a fire on Bull Creek, Monday, which began after a van, belonging to Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, caught fire while transporting clients back to their homes in that area. The van apparently backfired through the carburetor and driver and occupants were able to vacate the vehicle safely. About 15 acres were burned on the Left Fork of Bull Creek and, although some residences were threatened for a time, firefighters were able to suppress the blaze before damage to any structures occurred.

About 20 acres were swept by fire at Garrett before the blaze could be extinguished by forestry employees, Brackett said. He added that a citation had been issued a resident for carelessly burning debris in connection with the fire.

The forestry office here sent personnel to the "breaks" area near Elkhorn City over the weekend to fight the worst of the fires burning in the five-county eastern forest district of which Floyd county is a part. Brackett said about 75 acres of forest land in Kentucky and Virginia were damaged by that fire.

Brackett stressed that burning is allowed only between 4:30 p.m. and 12 midnight during the fire season which runs through November 15. "and then only when the fire is burned carefully and correctly," he emphasized.

Policeman of the Year... Magazine Honors Wounded Trooper

Kentucky State Trooper Tony Boleyn, the Floyd countian who, though himself severely wounded, managed to fire the shots that are credited with saving two other state troopers from possible death, has received the 1983 Policeman of the Year award for outstanding service.

This, the 18th annual Police Service Award sponsored by PARADE magazine and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), was announced in last Sunday's issue of PARADE, a magazine which is circulated nationally as a daily newspapers' supplement, and was presented yesterday (Tuesday) at the IACP annual meeting in Detroit.

Boleyn who at 32 is a paraplegic because a bullet severed his spine, was released from Jewish Hospital, Louisville, little more than two weeks ago and will return at intervals to the hospital for rehabilitation. He resided at Garrett with his wife, Connie, and their four-month-old son, Jason.

Although he will not cruise the highways again as a trooper, Boleyn was quoted recently as saying that with rehabilitation he will be able to drive a car with hand controls and that he may eventually return to school and study law. (The Times was unable to reach him for comment by telephone.)

Last May the state's highest award for heroism, the Governor's Medal for Valor, was presented him by Gov. John Young Brown, Jr. Only five others have been so honored.

Boleyn was shot after he and seven other officers had gone last Jan. 8 to the home on Glomawr Hollow, Perry county, to arrest Tommy Allen Combs, 41, who was described as a federal parole violator. Combs, his nephew, Wayne Davis, 14, and Perry Deputy Sheriff Alex Eversole was killed. Besides Boleyn, two other state troopers were wounded but not seriously.

Boleyn is credited with saving the lives of two troopers when, already wounded, he picked up the shotgun of the fallen deputy sheriff and contrived to shoot Combs.

Interspersed between films on The Movie Channel, there are interviews with a variety of actresses and actors. What makes these interviews interesting is that they are not restricted to the "stars," but also include meetings with a number of younger and lesser-known, but not less interesting performers.

One of the best of these actors, Vincent Spano ("Baby, It's You," "The Black Stallion Returns") is featured in an interview that will be aired throughout this month. He speaks straightforwardly about his career with a minimum amount of hype.

Other interviews that will appear this month will include ones with James Mason, the all-time champ at portraying suave decadence; Annette O'Toole, who played Lana Lang in "Superman III"; and Amy Heckerling, who directed "Fast Times at Ridgemont High."

It's not UCLA playing USC, but when Stanford meets UCLA in a football game televised by ESPN on Oct. 10, the rivalry is pretty intense. Speaking of USC, USA will cover the game between USC and Arizona State on Oct. 15.

A mixed week on Spotlight: "Conan the Barbarian" (Oct. 10) — The film managed to adapt a character from some adventure and action-packed short stories and make him dull and morose. There are many questionable things about this movie. Why did they make the villain, Thulsa Doom (who actually appeared as a villain in some non-Conan short stories by the same author) a black man when the character in the books was not? Thulsa Doom's skull lacked skin of any color. Arnold Schwarzenegger, who plays Conan, looks the part, but is unable to act.

"The World According to Garp" (Oct. 11) — Adapted from the novel by John Irving. This movie has a real misogynist streak to it, equating the women's movement with self-mutilation, both emotionally and physically.

"My Favorite Year" (Oct. 13) — An entertaining movie about a young scriptwriter for something like Sid Caesar's 1950s TV comedy show, who has to chaperone an aging, alcoholic matinee idol, who resembles Errol Flynn. Peter O'Toole does a fine job as the Flynn lookalike. This is a funny and often touching film with a great ending.

"Piaf, the Early Years" (Oct. 14) — A biographical film about the childhood of the great French chanteuse Edith Piaf. The movie graphically describes Piaf's desperate life on the streets as an orphan and the beginning of her singing career.

STRANGE INVADERS, from Orion Pictures. Directed and written by Michael Laughlin. Starring Paul LeMat, Diana Scarwid, Nancy Allen. Rated 'PG' ★ ★ ★

By J.T. YURKO

At the end of the classic sci-fi film "The Thing" (the original, not the recent remake) the reporter is about to tell the world how he and a small group of friends just defeated a creature from outer space. He begins by saying, "Watch the skies."

As "Strange Invaders" begins, the opening credits tell us that the aliens have already landed and completely taken over a small town in Illinois. They vaporized the town's inhabitants and took on human form. These are quasi-docile aliens. Unlike "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," they are not set on conquering the earth. Instead they are quite content to perpetuate the lifestyle of the year they landed, 1957.

The viewer quickly recognizes what lies ahead in this spoof/send-up/homage to the low-budget sci-fi films of the 1950s. But director/writer Michael Laughlin doesn't play it for Mel Brooks-like laughs. Laughlin's tongue is pressed quite firmly in cheek, and he retains the right level of camp, corn and inside jokes.

And there are tons of inside jokes. If you are a fan of '50s sci-fi films like those mentioned above, you are bound to enjoy this film more than the average viewer. In fact, spotting the film fan will be easy; he or she will be the one in the movie theater who keeps talking to their date pointing out all the references to those movies.

Such a movie could easily become silly, but Laughlin and a terrific cast force us to laugh with the film and not at it. Paul LeMat discovers the town stuck in 1957 when he searches for his ex-wife, nicely played by Diana Scarwid. Nancy Allen is delightful as a tabloid reporter, and Louise Fletcher plays the director of the National Center for UFO Studies.

Even if you're not a fan of such sci-fi epics, "Strange Invaders" has enough gags of its own well worth watching. And if you've a mind to see a message of conformity hidden behind the tongue-in-cheek humor, feel free to do so. It is your inalienable right.

To millions, World Series is baseball's top show

FALL CLASSIC — Here comes the World Series. The Fall Classic first matched the National and American Leagues 80 years ago, in 1903. Now the biggest event in the Great American Pastime draws up to 100 million U.S. TV viewers each year for at least parts of the various games. Millions more watch in dozens of countries throughout the world.

ABC-TV Sports — led by Howard Cosell — will broadcast the '83 World Series. Here is the schedule of the first four games in the best-of-seven Series (all times, EDT): Tuesday, Oct. 11, 8:30 p.m.; Wednesday, Oct. 12, 8:20 p.m.; Friday, Oct. 14, 8:30 p.m.; Saturday, Oct. 15, 1 p.m. or 4:30 p.m.

Last year, when St. Louis beat Milwaukee 4 games to 3 in a sloppy World Series, the NBC telecasts averaged a rating of 29. This year, baseball experts — not to mention sponsors with millions of dollars at stake — are hoping for a crisper, more exciting World Series. A TV network reaps extra millions in ad money when a Series lasts seven games.

Over the years, the New York Yankees have won 22 World Series and lost 11 — to lead in victories and appearances. Next come St. Louis with a 9-4 World Series record; and the Pittsburgh Pirates, which is 5-2.

In 1981, the Los Angeles

Howard Cosell

Dodgers, trailing 0-2 in games, won the last four contests to beat the New York Yankees, capping a strike-shortened season. There were a total of 13 errors in the six Series games.

In 1980, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Kansas City Royals, 4 games to 2, in the World Series. The Phillies won their first World Series ever when Mike Schmidt knocked in two runs to lead them to a 4-1 triumph in the final game. Philadelphia reliever Tug McGraw twice stopped the Royals with the bases loaded.

But you have to go back to Oct. 21, 1975, for a game that many call the best in the history of the World Series. In Game 6, Carlton Fisk hit a 12th inning homer for a 7-6 Boston win against Cincinnati, after the lead kept changing hands. Cincinnati, however, won the Series the following day.

Negligence Alleged In Patient's Suit

A Prestonsburg radiology clinic and a physician were named by a Magoffin woman in a $607,000 damage suit filed in circuit court here last week.

Patsy Davidson, of Royalton, alleges in the suit that Dr. Peter Jakobsen and Highlands CAT Scanning, Inc., on U.S. 23 North, were negligent in preparing her for an X-ray of her bladder and kidneys last December.

She suffered an allergic reaction to the contrast medium injected for the X-ray and, as a result, is seeking $50,000 in physical and psychological injuries, $75,000 in medical expenses, $300,000 in reduced earnings, and $250,000 for pain and suffering.

Plaintiff is represented by Robin Simpson Smith, of the Salyersville law firm of Turner and Collins. (Suits filed in court give only one side of the issue in dispute.)

Publisher Accused Of Deceptive Selling

The attorney general is trying to recover payments made to a Lexington publishing firm accused of using deceptive solicitation techniques to sell ads in periodicals that in some cases were never published.

In a civil suit filed yesterday in Fayette Circuit Court, an attorney for the state's consumer protection division charged Lexington publisher Sterling LeMaster with using numerous "unfair, false, misleading and deceptive" practices to sell ads for a variety of publications.

Ads for the publications were sold with the false understanding that ad revenues would be donated to charities or legitimate law enforcement programs, the attorney general charged.

"In fact," the complaint continued, "the purchase money for advertisements does not go toward any legitimate law enforcement program, or any legitimate crime prevention program, or any legitimate firefighter program, or other non-profit program or charity."

The state is seeking a $2,000 fine for each "willful violation" of Kentucky's consumer protection act and restitution for those who bought ads solicited by salesmen representing LeMaster-owned corporations.

"The deceptive practices take advantage of Kentucky businesses and make it difficult for legitimate charitable and non-profit organizations to solicit businesses for legitimate causes," wrote Susan N. Mastin, an attorney with the consumer protection division.

Included in the complaint are allegations that solicitors for LeMaster's publications led prospective customers to believe:

They were officers or authorized representatives of law enforcement agencies.

They were local people from the purchaser's home county "by using aliases."

Failure to advertise in the publications would "adversely affect" police and fire protection.

Someone in the business already had authorized publication of the ad.

The complaint also alleged that prospective customers were given the impression that the publications would be widely distributed in the state or in the advertiser's home county.

LeMaster also is charged with failing to print the publication in which ads were expected to appear, failure to publish some ads at all, and publishing ads in different publications from those authorized by the advertisers.

Co-sponsored by Morehead State University and several regional educational centers, the Academy offers individual and group instruction in Prestonsburg, Ashland, Maysville, Mt. Sterling, Jackson and Whitesburg.

"The response has been overwhelming," said Milford Kuhn, associate professor of music at MSU and director of the Academy. "Because of this, we are leaving registration open; anyone interested in taking a course can begin at any time during this semester."

Gas Rate Increase Effective Nov. 1st

Because of the newest in a series of increases charged by its supplier, the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company, the Prestonsburg Utilities Commission has ordered a 58-cent per 1000 cubic feet increase to its gas customers.

The new rate increase will become effective Nov. 1, Bill H. Howard, utilities superintendent, said.

Inside the corporate limits of Prestonsburg, the charge will be $6.60 (the minimum) for the first 1000 cubic feet of gas and $6.30 per 1000 for all gas burned above that minimum. Outside the city, consumers will be charged a minimum of $8.30 for the first 1000 cubic feet and $6.80 per 1000 for all above the minimum.

Almost exactly a year ago, the rise in natural gas costs first hit Prestonsburg, though other communities had already suffered. At that time it was estimated that the consumer who burned as much as 20,000 cubic feet of gas last winter would pay $94.30 a month—$43.23 more than during the preceding winter.

When the latest raise becomes effective, the monthly payload on the same volume of gas will be $126.30.

Governor's Scholars To Re-Unite

Friday, Oct. 7 is Governor's Scholars Day on the University of Kentucky Lexington campus.

The 245 Kentucky high school students who participated in the five-week Governor's Scholars Program (July 3-Aug. 5) at Centre College, their parents and their faculty have been invited to the UK campus for a day of discussion and reunion.

Mina Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O.R. (Pete) Howard, of Prestonsburg, was one of the 245 in this year's Governor Scholars Program.

Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., who was hospitalized during the time of the summer program, plans to join the group during the UK session to meet with the students for the first time.

Edward Prichard, attorney and chairman of the Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence, will address the group on "Education and Kentucky's Future." Prichard's talk will set the theme for the day-long seminar with time allowed for small group discussions between students and faculty.

Dr. James L. Howard of Centre College and dean of the Governor's Scholars Program, and UK vice chancellor for student affairs, Dr. Robert G. Zumwinkle, will lead the parents discussion topic, "The Impact of College on Students."

Other speakers throughout the day include Dr. Art Gallaher, chancellor of the UK Lexington Campus, who will discuss "Learning as a Way of Life," and Dr. Raymond Betts, director of the UK Honors Program, whose topic is "Playing with Ideas."

The Governor's Scholars Program offered outstanding Kentucky high school students the opportunity to attend a residential summer program which encouraged development of creative ideas and talents.

The students were taught by a faculty selected from Kentucky's high schools and colleges. In addition, Kentucky and national leaders also came to the sessions for various discussions.

The ceremony, a once-a-year event, was held during the annual meeting of the United States Section of the International College of Surgeons (I.C.S.).

Dr. Minix heads an office located in Prestonsburg.

Announce Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Stumbo, of Minnie, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Jackie Belinda, to Mr. Jimmy Darrell Chaffins, son of Mrs. Cynthia Chaffins, of Minnie, and the late Elder Mitchell Chaffins.

Miss Stumbo is a 1982 graduate of McDowell High School and attended Mayo School of Nursing. Mr. Chaffins is a 1978 graduate of McDowell High School and is currently employed at Triple M Coal Company, Drift.

The wedding will be solemnized at 3 p.m., October 29, at the Old Beaver Regular Baptist Church at Minnie.

The gracious custom of open church will be observed. All relatives and friends are invited to attend. A reception will follow.

Miss Cornelius, Mr. Lovely Wed

Ginger Carol Cornelius and Mark Steven Lovely were married at 2 p.m. July 9 at Millbrooke Christian Church, Cadiz, Ky.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cornelius, Hopkinsville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark A. Lovely, Cadiz, formerly of Floyd county.

The Rev. Tom Wright officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Mark Ray, soloist, Frank Campbell, pianist, and Elizabeth Brown, organist, provided nuptial music for the occasion. The traditional wedding marches were used.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted to the altar by her father, wore a formal gown of white chiffon over a white taffeta underskirt. The Queen Anne neckline was accented with Venise lace at the collar and bodice. The fitted bodice was sprinkled with sequins and pearls. The sleeves featured point d'esprit lace at the elbows and cuffs and were trimmed in Venise lace. The chapel-length train was trimmed in Venise lace.

She wore an English veil of illusion with a pearl accent that fell from a beaded lace Camelot. Re-embroidered lace accented the borders. She carried a silk cascade bouquet of white roses, miniature carnations, lily of the valley, and Stephanotis entwined with English ivy and baby's breath.

The bride chose Barbara Armstrong, Nashville, Tenn., to be her maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Kathy Gentry, Tallahassee, Fla., and Teresa Bennett of Louisville.

Lana Eaton, niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

The bridegroom chose his brother, Sean Lovely, Cadiz, to be best man. Bridegroomsmen were Paul Hooks of Princeton and Mike Chadwell of Hopkinsville.

Ushers were Jim Love and Don Mitchell, both of Hopkinsville. Jack Love, Knoxville, Tenn., cousin of the bridegroom, was assistant to the ushers. Tyler Eaton, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer.

Following a brief wedding trip the couple arrived home in Hopkinsville.

Many Advantages To Making A Will

"Many people mistakenly believe that only the rich need wills. If you have dependents, own a home or other possessions of value, and want certain people to receive specific portions of your estate, then you should have a will," says Attorney General Steven Beshear.

There are other advantages to having a will besides the opportunity to make specific gifts. The probate court can settle your estate more efficiently with the will's provisions to follow. A clearly written and well-planned will can reduce the possibility that extra fees will be added to probate costs. Because these costs are usually paid out of the estate, there will be more left to pass to your beneficiaries.

There are basically two types of wills. A holographic will is handwritten. It should be written, dated and signed entirely in your handwriting. A holographic will does not have to be witnessed. A formal will is usually prepared with the help of an attorney.

It may be typed or preprinted, but you must sign the will acknowledging it as yours in front of two people who are not beneficiaries. These witnesses must also sign the will in your presence. A will should contain the names of beneficiaries and their relationship to you, and the amount of money, percentage of your estate, or specific assets you want each to receive. If you are married, the will should contain provisions for simultaneous death of the death of you and your spouse at or about the same time. The will should name a guardian for any children under 18 and should list any special powers the guardian is to have. An alternative distribution should be included in case any of your chief beneficiaries die before you. The will should also contain the name of your executor, an alternate, and any special powers the executor is to have.

Review your will every few years to see that it still fits your situation. Your will may be affected by changes in your personal situation or if your financial status changes.

Never make changes on the face of the will. Making additions, deletions or erasures on the document may invalidate it. If only a few changes are necessary, a codicil may be the answer. A codicil is a legal document used to modify a will. It should identify the will being amended, confirm the portions that will not change, and explain, add or delete provisions that will be changed. If you already have a codicil, or if a number of changes are necessary, a new will may be preferable. The new will should contain a clause revoking all earlier wills and codicils.

"Good legal advice is the best assurance that your will meets all legal requirements. An experienced attorney can help to define and organize the objectives you want your will to accomplish," says Attorney General Beshear. If you do not have an attorney, contact the Kentucky Bar Association Referral Service at 1-800-372-2999.

For more information or to register a complaint, contact the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, 209 St. Clair Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40601 or call the Consumer Hotline: 1-800-432-9257.

During fiscal year 1982 some of the important activities of the Women's Bureau continued to be collecting, publishing and disseminating information about women workers and programs designed to increase their employment options, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's annual report.

During fiscal year 1982 the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Labor Department updated two statistical fact sheets—"21 Facts on Women Workers" and "The Economic Responsibilities of Working Women." Another major effort during the year was the updating of the Handbook on Women Workers, according to the department's annual report.

Pharmacy Footnotes
By HAROLD COOLEY

Tolnaftate was first synthesized in 1960 and has since been found to be a very effective agent for various fungal disorders, particularly athlete's foot. It has little effect upon germs and is one of the few antibiotics to be applied topically to the skin. It is usually sprinkled as a powder (although it also comes in ointment and spray form) on the itchy, shedding skin between the toes where fungus is present. Although there are some funguses that are resistant to the drug, repeated applications for about a month should relieve the problem. At this point, there does not seem to be any evidence of allergic reactions to the drug.

If you're suffering from the itch and discomfort of athlete's foot, ask us here at COOLEY APOTHECARY to suggest something for you. We try to be as helpful as possible when it comes to your health needs, whether it's filling a prescription, answering your questions or suggesting an over-the-counter medication. You'll also find a wide selection of convalescent items. Located at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., where we're open Mon.-Fri., 9-5:30; Sat., 9-4. 886-8106

The Kentucky Garden Journal

By Bonnie Lee Appleton

COOPERATIVE EXTENSION PROGRAM
KENTUCKY STATE UNIVERSITY

Most of us assume, when we see leaves falling from the oaks, maples and hickories in fall, that the trees have stopped all growth until spring. A little bit of activity does continue in the trunk and branches during the winter, but this growth is internal, so we really don't see it.

We generally forget about that portion of the tree that is underground and which we usually only see when a tree is planted or when the ground must be dug up. But it is this "hidden" part of a tree that can continue to grow well into the winter when the top is taking its winter nap.

Researchers have found that the roots of many of our temperate zone trees will continue to grow until soil temperatures drop below 40° F. Soil temperatures cool down more slowly than air temperatures in the fall, therefore tree root activity can easily continue into December, even January, especially below the frost line.

The warmer soil-cooler air temperature combination that occurs in the fall is one of the primary reasons why fall is an excellent time to plant landscape plants—trees, shrubs, vines, ground covers and bulbs. When planting is restricted to spring, the cooler soil-warmer air temperature combination actually works to the disadvantage of our plants. Buds break and leaves begin to grow, but root growth will lag behind until the soil warms. Many people had first-hand experience this year with what happens to spring-planted trees when a hot, dry summer sets in before adequate root growth has developed.

Not only are there plant advantages to fall planting, there are also economic advantages. Most garden centers and nurseries prefer to reduce their inventory of landscape plants prior to winter. This does not mean that anything is wrong with the plants.

In order for garden centers and nurseries to hold plants over winter, they must have ways to keep the plants, in particular the roots, from freezing. A tree root system, sitting above ground in a ball of soil, a tin can or plastic pot, freezes more quickly than a tree root system in the ground. Over wintering materials and structures can be costly, therefore a price advantage is generally offered to the consumer who buys in the fall. You get a bargain and the nurseryman not only is saved over-wintering costs, but also benefits from more uniform yearly sales.

There are some exceptions to fall planting. Some trees, such as dogwoods and magnolias, seem to transplant better in spring. Likewise some shrubs, such as azaleas. Ask your nurseryman for help with your selections.

You will probably hear a lot about fall planting this year. Nurserymen across the United States are being aided by the Fall Planting Council's efforts to both promote fall sales and educate the public. Their efforts were very positive last year, and should continue to be this year, for both the benefit of the nursery industry and the consumer. Go sharpen your shovel and plant a tree!

Timely Tip: Help build your vegetable garden soil's organic matter level and help stop soil erosion by seeding your garden in annual (winter) rye this fall. In spring, simply till or spade this "green manure crop" into the soil.

Our Lady Observes Respect Life Week

The 36th anniversary celebration of Our Lady of The Way Hospital occasioned some administrative changes—for the day.

Sister James Edward Roach, S.C., hospital administrator, and Susan Stewart, director of nursing, literally put on new hats and spent September 27 on the hospital's patio instead of in their offices.

In a large white chef's hat, Sister James Edward grilled hamburgers and hot dogs for the hospital's employees. Mrs. Stewart, who was wearing a similar hat labeled "Gopher", delivered the cooked meats through a window of the employees' dining room.

Shorter hours may well be the reason the women gladly resumed their desk jobs the next day, since the last hot dog was not turned until 2 a.m. The anniversary lunch, served all day and night to accommodate evening and night shift employees, was but a beginning of Our Lady of the Way's observance of "Respect Life Week".

A thought-provoking movie entitled, "God in the Dock," was shown several times daily by Sister Marie Gangwish, CDP, the hospital's chaplain. Even showings at 2 a.m. were scheduled to enable night personnel to see the film.

Special posters are displayed throughout the hospital's halls and additional events are scheduled for this week.

Brown Revises Highway Rules

Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr. has signed an emergency executive order authorizing the state Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet to revise state surface-mining regulations to allow variances from the requirement to completely eliminate the highwall on steep-slope contour remaining sites.

Under revised state regulations, a variance from the requirement can be issued. However, state officials said, coal operators must use all reasonably available spoil in the immediate vicinity to eliminate as much of the highwall as is technically practical. A minimum backfill of four feet over the coal seam is still required by state regulations.

Previously, re-mining operations were required to completely eliminate all highwalls which were newly created by the re-mining, even when that activity would not generate sufficient spoil material to completely eliminate the highwall.

"In the past, in order to re-mine areas with steep slopes, operators would have to bring spoil material from off-site in order to completely eliminate the highwall," explained Natural Resources Secretary Jackie Swigart.

"As a result, many acres of 'second-cut' coal have not been mined because of the costs of highwall elimination. We feel that this change of regulation will help both the coal industry and the environment. The industry will benefit economically and the environment will receive sound reclamation work on previously mined sites which have been not been totally reclaimed."

The new regulation, 405 KAR 20:060E, revises the current permanent program performance standards for steep slope mining.

The Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement will be working with operators and engineers wishing to take advantage of the emergency regulation. Any questions about the regulation should be directed to regional offices of the department or to the Division of Permits in Frankfort, telephone (502) 564-2320.

The state revision is consistent with federal re-mining rules currently in force. State Surface Mining officials said, however, that further changes in federal regulations will take effect on October 17, 1983.

Future federal changes will repeal current variances which apply only to contour re-mining operations on steep slopes, replacing them with broader variances which will apply to all types of remaining surface mining operations.

"Although we have just revised our Kentucky re-mining regulations, we will need to revise them again very soon to take full advantage of the newest federal changes," Swigart said.

State officials said the federal Office of Surface Mining is still in the process of revising virtually all of the federal surface-mining regulations.

SIDS: A Special Kind of Sorrow

Nothing seems so contrary to the nature of things as the sudden, unexpected death of an apparently healthy baby.

But it happens. In this age of medical technology and reason, well-tended babies asleep in their cribs just quit breathing and die. It is a tragic phenomenon.

Science can offer little more than theories and a name: sudden infant death syndrome. Most people call it crib death. It kills one of every 400 babies born alive and is the leading cause of death in infants 2 weeks to 12 months old. In Kentucky the statistic translates to approximately 100 babies per year. Their parents experience a special kind of grief and a unique set of frustrations and problems.

A Cabinet for Human Resources program helps Kentucky families cope. Ida Lyons, coordinator of the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Program, says that parents of "SIDS babies" are likely to be almost overwhelmed by questions and emotions.

"After the shock of finding their baby dead, the parents first want to know why," said Lyons. "When the doctor or the coroner tells them SIDS, they may not accept it at first. We're all conditioned to search for causes and reasons, but in SIDS we just don't know what they are."

Many parents conclude that the baby has choked or smothered, but that is not the case, she said. Research has been unable to find a specific cause. Typically, a parent puts a contented, well baby to bed and later finds that baby dead.

Intense guilt is common, she said. "It is human nature for parents to think they somehow caused the baby to die or that they could have done something to save the baby," she Lyons. "The guilt is unfounded, because there is nothing anybody can do to predict or prevent SIDS."

Lyons said the guilt is sometimes compounded by relatives, friends and others who do not understand sudden infant death syndrome and place blame on one or both parents. In some cases, one parent will consciously or subconsciously blame the other. Even medical and law enforcement professionals can add to the parent's guilt feelings if they do not deal with the case appropriately, Lyons said. Some parents of SIDS victims have even been accused of child abuse.

The SIDS program sponsors workshops to help professionals involved in SIDS cases. "We work with emergency medical personnel, doctors, nurses, police, the clergy, social workers—anybody who may be in a position to help these families understand and accept what has happened," he said. "We also teach them ways to handle the most sensitive issue of asking the parents to permit an autopsy."

The program, funded through a federal Health and Human Services grant, pays for such autopsies and encourages parents to agree to them. "We do for several reasons," she said. "An autopsy can uncover an unknown problem that led to the baby's death, so parents get the answers they are seeking. If no problem is found, it once and for all establishes the cause of death as SIDS and assures the parents that they are not to blame."

Lyons said autopsies also aid in SIDS research and could lead to a better understanding of the syndrome so that future babies might be helped.

The state's SIDS Program has a network of 100 counselors throughout the state who are available to help families cope with SIDS tragedies. The counselors are on the staffs of regional and local public health agencies and provide services without charge. They contact families to offer their services but counsel only those who request their help.

"The assurance and support these counselors give can make a tremendous difference to these families," Lyons aid. "They also provide SIDS information to the community so more people can understand."

Lyons said a private, non-profit SIDS support group, a chapter of a national organization, was started in 1982 in Louisville. It raises money for syndrome research and counsels the families of SIDS victims.

"The volunteers are parents whose own babies have died of SIDS," said Lyons. "Because of their experience, they can help other parents in ways I never can."

The chapter can be reached through Pat Kilkenny, Rt. 3, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Oct. 3-8 is National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Awareness Week. Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. has proclaimed a coinciding observance in Kentucky.

More information on SIDS is available from the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Program, Department for Health Services, 275 E. Main, Frankfort, Ky. 40621.

Electric Thermal Storage works nights so you can save on your heating bills all day long.

Electric Thermal Storage, ETS, stores enough heat at night to heat your home for the rest of the day. And because ETS stores heat, it saves on your heating bills all winter long.

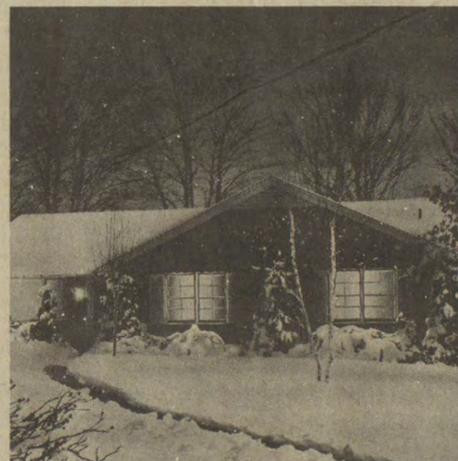

Heating coils inside the ETS furnace heat the special bricks throughout the night. The bricks then store heat which the furnace draws from at night, and the rest of the day.

You save because you heat with electricity at night, when the cost of electricity is less, under special rates available to ETS customers. So you pay lower electric rates for heating. And for all other electricity you use at night.

What's more, the same lower electric rates apply all weekend — for ETS heating and all other electric uses.

ETS heats your water, too. And individual room heaters are available, which let you control any room.

For complete information about the energy-saving and money-saving advantages of Electric Thermal Storage, send us this coupon. It could be one of the best investments you ever make.

Cut By 64%

The Job Training Plan for the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program, Inc. (EKCEP) service delivery area for the interim period of October 1, 1983 to June 30, 1984, has been duly published and made available to the public for review and comment. Based on current allocations, the funding level for fiscal year 1984 is 64% below the level of fiscal year 1983, thereby resulting in a corresponding reduction in program activities. Based on this reduced funding and the number of participants currently in training, the private industry council and the EKCEP board of directors (The Administrative Entity) have agreed, for the interim period (Oct. 1, 1983-June 30, 1984), to continue with current service providers for the traditional EKCEP programs (on the job training, classroom training, and public sector training), and to initiate limited new program activities only in the private sector. Any other new program activities during this period will be the result of additional funds that may be made available from the governor's set-aside monies for JTPA. In the event that additional funds are made available to EKCEP for new program activities, proper public notice shall be made to all interested deliverers of training services. Additional information may be obtained by contacting Virgil Osborne, Executive Director, or Robert Venters, Planner, EKCEP, P.O. Box 1035, Hazard, Kentucky 41701.

Report Urges Mandatory Jail Sentence for Child Molesters

The chairman of the Kentucky State Task Force on Exploited and Missing Children, Jefferson County Judge-Executive Mitch McConnell, released the Task Force final report during a press conference at the Jefferson county courthouse last week.

McConnell noted that Jefferson County has been the national leader in this field since he formed the Jefferson County Exploited and Missing Child Unit in 1980, and that the Kentucky Task Force has taken these accomplishments statewide under his chairmanship.

"We have seen people from all parts of the commonwealth work together to eliminate this threat to our children," McConnell stated. "There has been a dramatic increase in public awareness and outrage toward these crimes, which previously resulted in little more than a slap on the wrist for child molesters. We have witnessed a dramatic movement toward harsh punishment for child molesting offenses."

The task force report makes 18 recommendations for the further fight against child exploitation, including eight legislative proposals for the 1984 General Assembly. "When the Task Force's initiatives are adopted by the General Assembly, Kentucky, which is already the national leader in this field, will be light years ahead in its efforts to protect our children," McConnell said.

Task Force proposals include:
1. ADOPTION OF A "KENTUCKY MISSING CHILDREN'S ACT"—This act sets up a computerized Missing Child Information Center and requires all law enforcement agencies to accept and investigate all reports of missing children immediately.

2. ADOPTION OF A "CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE AND EXPLOITATION ACT"—Legislation to allow taxpayers to donate $2 of their tax return to a "Child Victim's Trust Fund," which will be used to educate children to the dangers of sexual abuse and exploitation.

3. MANDATORY SENTENCING FOR CHILD MOLESTERS—Legislation to make certain sexual offenses against children nonprobable, guaranteeing incarceration for molesters commensurate with the harm they have inflicted by their crimes.

4. YOUTH SERVING AGENCIES LEGISLATION—Passage of laws to allow all Youth Serving Agencies to request criminal record checks on persons applying for positions of authority over children.

5. UNLAWFUL TRANSACTION WITH A MINOR MADE A FELONY—Upgrade the offense of engaging in sexual activity with a minor to felony status.

Other recommendations include initiating "call-back" programs to notify parents when a child fails to appear at school, providing "body-safety" programs to educate children about sexual abuse, and to continue the child fingerprinting programs which McConnell has initiated in all 120 Kentucky counties.

The final Task Force recommendation is to establish the Kentucky Alliance for Exploited and Missing Children, an organization of concerned citizens who will implement the recommendations of the report.

"There is no more irresponsible crime, no crime more deserving of serious punishment, than that of child exploitation and sexual abuse," McConnell stated. "I urge all concerned Kentuckians to join the new Kentucky Alliance for Exploited and Missing Children and commit themselves to better protect our children."

11 States Represented At Wells Family Reunion

The 1983 Wells family reunion was held Sunday, Sept. 4 at the National Guard Armory, near here. More than 500 relatives from 11 states enjoyed lunch and a meeting of the newly-formed Wells Family Association, Inc.

During the session George Wells, age 95, of Boonscamp, was honored as the oldest Wells in attendance, and plans for a new book about the Wells family were discussed. Association officers were elected for 1984 and include: John B. Wells, III, of Paintsville, president; Donnie D. Wells, of East Point, vice-president; Mary Wells Walton, of Ashland, treasurer; Susie Wells Hager, of Prestonsburg, secretary; Charles C. Wells, of Paintsville, and Bobby Wells, of Prestonsburg, historians; Cheryl Ramey of Nippa, publicity chairperson; Manford Walton, of Ashland, chaplain.

After the business meeting a genealogy session was conducted which produced new information concerning the ancestry of Richard Wells, the pioneer of the Wells family in Eastern Kentucky. The 1984 reunion will be held on Labor Day Sunday at a site to be announced later.

THE ANNUAL MINE RESCUE AND FIRST AID CONTEST, sponsored by Big Sandy-Elkhorn Mining Company, was held recently at the Allen Park. Several Pikeville College mining technology students and faculty attended the two-day event. Don Hall (left), mining technology admissions counselor/instructor, visited with Jeanette and Randy Fitzpatrick of Prestonsburg, two graduates of the mining technology program at Pikeville College. Mr. Fitzpatrick is working in the safety department at Martin County Coal Company, and Mrs. Fitzpatrick is an engineering draftsman.

Huddleston, Ford Ask Abandoned Mine Funds

Senators Walter (Dee) Huddleston and Wendell H. Ford met with Office of Surface Mining Director James R. Harris and requested that OSM revise its proposal for distributing Abandoned Mine Reclamation funds to give Kentucky a fairer share of dollars it has put in the fund.

The Senators met with Harris in Huddleston's office to ask an accounting for the OSM proposal, which would leave Kentucky with only 59.5 percent of dollars paid by Kentucky coal operators flowing back to the state. Some states, such as Pennsylvania, would get almost two dollars back for every dollar sent to the pool.

The Abandoned Mine Reclamation fund was established by collecting a 35-cent per ton fee on coal mined to be earmarked for reclamation of lands left by mining operations in earlier years. Huddleston has also been highly critical of the Interior Department's slow action in spending the earmarked funds.

Ford told Harris, "This money ought to be available to Kentucky." And in a reference to Interior's reluctance to spend the funds, he said, "It seems to me that instead of just sitting there idle, this money ought to be used now."

Huddleston sharply criticized Harris for using both a faulty inventory of abandoned mine lands (700 of 1200 Kentucky sites submitted by the state were dismissed and only now has OSM asked Kentucky to resubmit them) and for using faulty reasoning in computing the discretionary distribution.

"The OSM proposal misses by a wide mark the concept of simple fair play. Such a disparity in numbers just doesn't make sense," Huddleston said.

Further, Huddleston pointed out that "ignoring Congressional direction seems to be a way of life at the Interior Department under James Watt," citing the recent problems with coal leasing. Huddleston maintained that Congressional intent has been clear on how the funds should be expended. Both Ford and Huddleston pledged to take all legislative steps to ensure that Kentucky's share of the multi-million dollar fund is a fair share.

Under the current OSM proposal, of estimated receipts from Kentucky between 1978 and 1992 of $489.3 million, Kentucky would be returned only $290.9 million. Of this, $244.7 million is the 50 percent of receipts that by law must be returned to the source state, and Kentucky would get only $46.3 million under the discretionary authority of the Secretary of the Interior.

Environmental Meet Slated For Weekend

Panels planned for the Eighth Annual Kentucky Environmental Conference in Paducah, September 28, 29, 30, will include several topics of which Kentuckians will become increasingly conscious in the coming years.

Issues included in the agenda of the three-day conference are: acid rain, groundwater protection, solid waste disposal, reclamation of abandoned mine lands and soil erosion.

Other panels will present information on enforcement of programs in the state Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet, emergency response procedures in environmentally sensitive situations and the Kentucky Clean Community System.

A 90-minute panel discussion featuring lieutenant governor candidates Steve Beshear and Eugene P. Stuart will be held Friday.

In addition to the panels, the conference will include two environmental awards luncheons to honor Kentucky companies, individuals and communities which have made outstanding efforts to protect or enhance the state's natural resources.

The conference, to be held in the Executive Inn-River Front, will open at 2 p.m. CST on Wednesday, Sept. 28.

WHAT DOES SALIVA DO?

Q. Is saliva important to dental health?

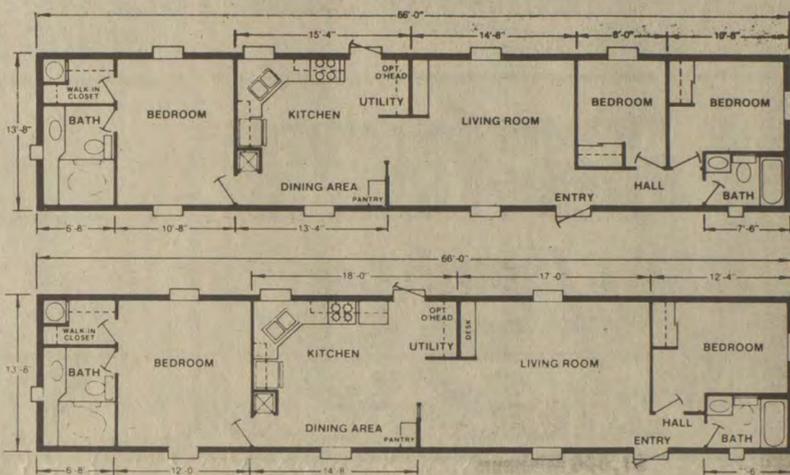

A. Saliva is not only important, it's essential! Basically, of course, saliva lubricates food so that you can move it around in the mouth while you chew, and then swallow it. In addition, saliva contains special enzymes that help you to digest foods, particularly the starchy ones, before they reach your stomach. And it has other importance, as well.

Saliva has the chemical ability to neutralize foods that may be either acidic or basic. Without it, these foods could irritate or even burn the sensitive skin of your mouth, saliva helps to disinfect and heal it, fighting as many as 80 different kinds of germs found in the mouth.

IN AN UNBEATEN season, thus far, for the Prestonsburg Blackcats, the role of offensive linemen like big Bill Tom Moore (No. 77) shown here in action against Belfry Friday night, has been a key factor.

Bobcats Win One, Lose One During Week's Action

Playing a tough schedule of two games in four days, the Betsy Layne High School Bobcats defeated Phelps, last Tuesday night, and lost to Elkhorn City on Friday in two hard-fought contests.

Playing at Phelps, Coach Hooker Phillips' surprising Bobcats scored early in the first quarter on a dive over the goal line by talented tailback John Lackey. The extra point attempt failed, making the score 6-0, and through a grueling defensive battle, Betsy Layne managed to preserve that score till the final whistle.

Though the score was no indication, Betsy Layne outgained Phelps considerably. Though Phillips expressed frustration that his team failed to score added TD's, he commented, "We moved the ball quite well."

"We played awfully hard," he added.

Although Betsy Layne lost a heart-breaker at its homecoming game, Friday night, the Bobcats were first to score against a larger and more experienced Elkhorn City team. Recovering an Elkhorn City fumble, the Bobcats were able to advance to the goal line and send Lackey across on a plunge into the end zone. A pass from Lackey to end Norman Hunter secured the two-point conversion making the score, 8-0.

After a Betsy Layne penalty gave Elkhorn City good field position, the Cougars' Hunt picked up the TD on a short run, and with a successful conversion attempt, the score was tied. A field goal put the Cougars ahead at the half, 11-8.

In the third quarter, Betsy Layne mounted an impressive drive to the one yard line but failed to get the ball across the goal line on three successive tries. Although they had to give up the ball, the tough Bobcat defense held for four downs, but were then hampered by a series of penalties which allowed Elkhorn City to score additional points, bringing the final score to 17-8.

The Bobcats, now 3 and 4 for the season, will face Mullins Friday night in an important district contest.

Annual Fish Fry Attracts Crowds To "New" Grounds

The Dewey Lake Fish & Game Club's fish fry, held Sunday under sunny skies, attracted large crowds to the newly-renovated club grounds on Stratton Branch, near Dewey Lake, and was termed by Club President Chalmer Howard, "one of the best fish fries in the club's history."

With new kitchen facilities, renovated structures, new lighting, landscaping and added parking, the grounds were occupied during the day by visitors participating in various contests, games, or just relaxing and enjoying the club's well-known fish sandwiches.

More than $1,000 in prizes were given away with the winners as follows: first prize, a 19" color t.v., to Walter Baker, of Lackey; second, a Remington 1100 automatic shotgun, to Brock Conley, of Prestonsburg; third, Ambassador rod and reel, to Dannie Ousley, of Martin; fourth, a 12-gal. Coleman cooler, to Dearly Fay Holbrook, of West Prestonsburg, and fifth, custom hunting arrows, to Delmar Holbrook, of West Prestonsburg. Lennie Harris was awarded $100 for selling the winning ticket.

In contests, horseshoe pitching was particularly popular with 13 teams in the men's class alone. Top trophy went to the team of Henry Harvey and Bobby Hackworth in this class, and to Teresa Hayes and Donna Clark in the women's class. Top prize in bait-casting, a Zebco 909 reel, was claimed by Ben Ferguson. Zeda Martin won the women's baitcasting and Donald Duty won the junior class.

In men's archery (sight class) Melvin Rice took the first place trophy while John Blair captured first place in the men's non-sighted competition. Barbara Waddles was the trophy winner in women's archery, Mike Hunter took the junior boy's prize, and Penny Bentley was top scorer in junior girl's archery. Targets at this year's archery event were designed and drawn by Paula Harris.

A turkey shoot, continuous bingo, and door prizes were also featured at this year's fish fry.

Howard thanked all who attended the fish fry or helped out in any way on behalf of the club and reminded area sportsmen that the club's next meeting will be held next Monday night.

PHS Continues Win Streak Over Belfry

By LAURA COOLEY
In what Coach Phillip Haywood described as "a physical game," the Prestonsburg Blackcats downed the Belfry Pirates, 19-6, here Friday night, to preserve their as yet undefeated record.

The Blackcats put the first points on the board midway through the first quarter when quarterback Todd Nairn sprinted four yards on an option play for the score. The extra point was collected on a kick by John Goble.

Belfry countered late in the second quarter with a TD on a three-yard run. The Pirates' extra point attempt failed leaving the score at the half, 7-6.

In the second half, the 'Cats' defense managed to contain Belfry scoring attempts while Nairn recorded two more PHS touchdowns, both on quarterback sneaks of two and four yards. Extra point attempts failed.

Total yardage for the Blackcats was 236 with Belfry not far behind with 213.

John DeRossett led in rushing for Prestonsburg with 155 yards in 21 carries. James Little rushed for 30 yards in 10 carries, Chris Hooker, seven carries for 22 yards, and Todd Nairn, seven carries for 21 yards. Gordie Ratliff caught one pass for 15 yards, and Irvin Spears picked up 10 yards on a pass reception.

Gordie Ratliff was leading tackler for the Blackcats with 12 assists and one unassisted tackle. Bryan Pace had two tackles and eight assists; James Little, nine assists; Randall Hager, six tackles; Mike Blackburn, five assists; Philip Lewis, four assists, and Jeff Patrick, three assists.

Coach Haywood praised his team's defense and the special teams as well. Although he termed the offense "sluggish" at times, "they were able to get the points we needed."

The Blackcats will play the Lawrence County Bulldogs for the sub-district championship, Friday at Lawrence county.

Kentucky Afield

Even though we've had some September days with temperatures in the 90s, fall is definitely in the air. Days are noticeably shorter now, mornings are likely to be foggy and there's a certain quality to the late afternoon light that belies the summertime temperatures.

Something similar is happening below the surface of our lakes and streams. Although water temperatures have dropped only slightly, fish are beginning to stir around more, feed a little more heavily and more often. Like us, they can sense that winter is approaching.

Fishermen are coming back to the docks now with both heavier stringers and happier expressions than they did during July and August, when anglers who braved the heat generally got little for their efforts except sunburn.

We are right now on the threshold of what is generally one of the best fishing times of the year. From now until really cold weather sets in, anglers have a good chance of finding active, aggressive fish—and finding them in shallow water, where they're easy to fish for and catch.

The fall fishermen has another advantage over his summer counterpart—fewer people. Vacationers have gone home, water skiers have quit until next year and many sportsmen, lured away from the water by squirrel, dove or bow deer hunting, have turned to other pursuits, leaving the fall fishermen relatively undisturbed.

Spinner baits and buzz baits seem particularly productive in the fall. If you're fishing lakes such as Kentucky or Barkley, watch for what the local anglers call "popcorn"—small bait fish dimpling the surface like someone popping corn underwater. Run a buzz bait through this school of bait and most likely you'll attract a largemouth bass that was following the smaller fish looking for an easy meal.

In deep, clear, lakes like Cumberland or Dale Hollow, Kentucky bass will school off vertical banks, suspending out in the lake from between 15 to 25 feet deep and from 20-30 feet off the rocky wall. They are easy to spot on a depth finder and will strike a small jig dropped slowly among them.

First Aid Facts

(Courtesy of Highlands Regional Medical Center, Our Lady of the Way Hospital, and the emergency physicians of Medical Associates).

Highlands Regional Medical Center and Our Lady of the Way Hospital have a physician trained in emergency medicine in its emergency room twenty-four hours a day. Sometimes, however, even this is not enough protection against illness or injury. One must be prepared to deal with emergency situations on the spot. Severe bleeding is a particularly dangerous situation.

Severe bleeding may be stopped by three methods: direct pressure, pressure points and tourniquet.

Direct pressure is the preferred method. Place a thick clean cloth over the wound and press firmly with the palm of the hand and continue to apply direct pressure. Do not disturb any blood clots that form. If the blood soaks through the compress, do not remove the compress but add another pad over it and continue with firmer pressure over a wider area. A limb that is bleeding severely should be elevated. If bleeding stops or slows, wind a bandage around and over the compress, being careful not to wrap the bandage too tightly.

Pressure points should be used only if bleeding does not stop after the application of direct pressure and elevation. This technique presses the artery supplying blood to the wound against the underlying bone and cuts off circulation to the wound. To stop severe bleeding of the arm grasp the arm midway between the armpit and the elbow with your thumb on the outside and your fingers on the inside of the arm where you can feel the artery pulsating. Squeeze firmly until the bleeding stops. To stop bleeding on the leg lay the victim on his back. Place the heel of your hand on the center front part of the thigh at the crease of the groin. Press down firmly. Do not continue the pressure point technique any longer than necessary.

Never use a tourniquet except in a life-threatening situation where severe bleeding cannot be stopped by either of the other two methods. A tourniquet should be two or more inches wide and long enough to wrap around the limb twice with ends for tying. Wrap the tourniquet around the limb twice, just above the wound. Tie a half knot, place a stick on top of the half knot and tie two full knots over the stick. Twist the stick to tighten the tourniquet. (Do not loosen or remove the tourniquet once it has been applied and attach a note to the victim's clothing stating the time the tourniquet was applied.) Tourniquets can crush tissues underneath them and may cause permanent damage of nerves and blood vessels as well as the loss of the extremity. Tourniquets should be applied only as a last resort.

A victim with severe bleeding should be treated for shock. Keep the victim lying down, and as warm as possible. Elevate the victim's feet unless he is unconscious, has neck, spine, head, chest, severe lower face or jaw injuries. He should be placed on his side with his head extended backward to prevent choking on fluids or vomit.

37 Years Later . . .

Do you know the feeling of having a prayer answered or a dream come true? Well, Johnnie Henson does.

It all began July 16, 1983, with a phone call from his sister in Ligon, Kentucky. She had told Johnnie that a man from Ohio had called her, asking where Johnnie was living. She told the stranger that Johnnie had moved to Powell, Ohio a few years ago. Johnnie had a feeling then that his prayers were going to be answered. He stewed over the phone call for a week. Then, on July 23, a tall, middle-aged man came to Johnnie's gate.

When Mike Martin introduced himself, Johnnie recognized the name as the man who had called his sister. Johnnie said, "I don't know you." Mike replied, "No, but you know her," as his wife stepped out of the car. Johnnie knew then that his prayers of finding his daughter, Patsy Carol, had been answered. He had thought about her off and on for years, but in the last two or three weeks was really thinking and praying a lot about her. He had even planned to run an ad in the newspaper in Paintsville, Kentucky, the town where Patsy was born, for any information leading to her whereabouts.

Patsy's mother, Opal, had taken her from Paintsville to Columbus, Ohio to stay with Opal's sister, Ruby, when Patsy was six months old. Johnnie saw Patsy shortly after that, and never saw her again until 37 years later.

In the meantime, she was reared by her aunt and uncle, Jim and Ruby Snowden, most of her life. For as long as Patsy can remember she kept a picture of her father. Her aunt told her his name, and her grandparents, Scott and Bertha Castle, told her where he used to live. This is how she started looking for a Johnnie Henson in Ligon after her husband encouraged her to do so. Johnnie had been told by a sister that Patsy was dead. But he learned from Patsy that Opal was killed in a car wreck in 1961 when Patsy was 15. Her aunt and uncle continued to care for her until she married.

Johnnie is very contented with his animals and his family. Since he has found Patsy, he gained three grandchildren.

Patsy lives in Logan, Ohio with her husband, a maintenance laborer and assistant pastor of the First Church of Logan UPC, a daughter Wendy, 17, who will graduate this year, Robin, 15, and a son Michael, 11.

A total of nine children and 27 grandchildren are his life. Thirty-seven years and a prayer is answered in God's own time.

Ministers Show They Care

"He wasn't of her faith, but Mom sure had faith in him," said Robert Preston, a Lexington attorney. He was speaking about a Highlands Regional Medical Center minister-on-call who cheered his mother, Hazel, while she was a patient there. "She found him to be a dedicated, caring individual," he said.

Such testimonials have been made frequently by families, patients and staff who have been helped by a member of the HRMC Minister-On-Call Program. The program has been operating at the hospital for over two years.

Currently nine ministers from Floyd and Johnson counties volunteer their time to provide support to all patients and their families who request their services. Ministers rotate their duties on a weekly basis.

Like hospital personnel, HRMC ministers-on-call must be prepared to handle hospital emergency situations at any time of the day or night. They visit patients in the hospital daily and are available by phone 24 hours a day. The ministers get requests from patients as well as referrals by nurses, physicians and the social worker. They give professional, non-denominational spiritual guidance, comfort and support.

"We feel good about providing spiritual care for patients that compliments the excellent medical care they receive at Highlands Regional," said

Science Series In New Season

NOVA begins a new season of scientific excitement on Tuesdays during October on KET. On Tuesday, October 11, at 8 p.m., "Signs of the Apes, Songs of the Whales" debuts with an exploration of the feasibility of man conversing with animals. Mr. Doolittle's dream approaches reality as scientists determine whether the whale, dolphin, man or ape has the most complex language system. NOVA tackles the controversial issue of research and development of the "Artificial Heart" on October 18. The question facing scientists and a concerned public is what choices do we make after $175 million and 15 years of research have yielded a plastic and metal pump capable of sustaining life in cattle and sheep for little more than six months and only three months for a human. "Talking Turtle," seen on NOVA October 25, features MIT's Seymour Papert, inventor of a computerized robot that crawls on the floor, does trigonometry and calculus, and talks in a versatile language even a five-year-old can learn. NOVA profiles Papert's progressive educational views and their potential impact on classrooms around the world.

For 'Service to Mankind' Alice Slone, Mountain Educator Honored by State Education Board

A special award was given to a special woman at the Sept. 20 meeting of the State Board of Education. Miss Alice Slone, founder and director of Lotts Creek Community School, near Hazard, was honored for "meritorious service to mankind" by the State Board and Superintendent of Public Instruction Raymond Barber. A native of Caney Creek, Knott county, Miss Slone attended Alice Lloyd's Caney Creek Community Center at Pipa Passes, and was one of 17 young people that Mrs. Lloyd sent north to Cleveland to study. There, Miss Slone lived in the home of Ann Anthony Bacon, a niece of Susan B. Anthony. She went to high school and business college and worked her way through Ohio State University where she received an advanced degree in education. When she returned to Kentucky, she taught at Mrs. Lloyd's School while dreaming of a school of her own. In 1933, her sister, Bertha Whitaker, asked her to come to Lotts Creek and start the high school there. Miss Slone accepted the appeal. Miss Slone likes to tell how she struggled over Hardburly Mountain on foot, carrying her suitcase in her hand. The only road was a rutted, dirt, jolt-wagon affair and Miss Slone tells that she slipped and slid down it into the land that was called Lotts Creek.

There was no electricity in Lotts Creek at that time. There was no school, no schoolhouse, and no money to build one. Miss Slone taught in peoples' homes. Her classes moved to the top floor of the grade-school building until neighbors donated the land, the materials and the manpower to build the first Lotts Creek Community Center. Children walked for miles to attend the new school that was held there. Some of the boys even slept in the coal house until the dormitory was built. In 1948 a gravel road replaced the dirt trail, and in 1964 a three-story concrete-block classroom building was erected. "It has been a hard struggle," Barber said in paying tribute to Miss Slone. "Through it all, it has been Alice Slone's spirit that moved the mountains. It was her dream of an education for everyone, her drive that collected the teachers and the resources, her determination that sent Lotts Creek children away to college so that one day, they too could return to the mountains that bred them. It has been her smile, her spirit, her dream that made it possible." Miss Slone attributes her success to the power of dreams. When she was presented with the Public Service Award by Berea College, she said that dream power is the greatest force in the world. "It is inborn in every living thing. It is God-given, God-sustained, and undying. Dream power is a living force. It is to be seen unclouded in the faces of children, poignant in the consuming idealism of youth, and in the directed force of maturity," she said. In recommending Miss Slone for the rarely-given State Board honor, Barber said that Miss Slone dreamed. "She caught a vision and lived it. In so doing, she helped her neighbor and all mankind." Miss Slone was not able to be present in person to receive her award. A death in her closely-knit family held her in her beloved mountains. The honor was accepted on her behalf by her niece, Mrs. Alice Whitaker, Louisville, who read a letter from her aunt. "This is a people school," Miss Slone wrote to the State Board. It is "built on work, love, and a firm faith in the power and worth of education...our students have participated along with the parents in the very building of the school structure and still do."

"Our achieving graduates...are our tribute and yours," she wrote. "They fulfill the dream of those stalwart fathers who hungered, worked, and sacrificed for the dream that is being honored here this day."

(Miss Slone is the aunt of Mrs. Avery Wiley, of Prestonsburg, Mrs. Clem Martin, of Langley, Neil Watson and Leona Fouts, of Garrett, and Marcus Owens, of Bevinville.)

The sting of some South Pacific jellyfish, commonly called sea wasps, can kill a person in less than 20 minutes, says International Wildlife magazine. The transparent, box-shaped jellyfish is blamed for 50 deaths among swimmers off the coast of Australia.

EAST POINT CLUB MEETS

Members of the East Point Homemakers' Club held their September meeting at the home of Mrs. Sharon Watkins, with Mrs. Watkins, the club's new president, presiding. Those volunteering to submit recipes for the cookbook to be published by the area Homemakers were Mrs. Gayle Bastin, Mrs. Wilma Montgomery and Mrs. Leatha Kendrick. The lesson on "Nutrition and Quick Meals" was presented by Mrs. Leatha Kendrick. After presenting each member present a useful kitchen item, the hostess, Mrs. Watkins, served lunch to guests, Mrs. Bossie Hunter, Mrs. Sherry Mullins and Mrs. Malta Rice, and members, Mesdames Gayle Bastin, Arnita Snavelly, Leatha Kendrick, Wilma Snavelly, Frances Pitts, and Betsy Baldrige. A floral arrangement was presented to Mrs. Arnita Snavelly, in appreciation of her serving as president during the past year.

The hostess for the October meeting will be Mrs. Arnita Snavelly at her home on Little Paint. The lesson will be on "Candlewicking."
