

PARENTS' FEARS for their children's safety, and the right of a merchant to use his property the way he wishes, have come into heated conflict on this street corner in West Prestonsburg. The issue centers on a new, 50-foot section of sidewalk (in background of picture), where Main Street meets Railroad Avenue.

Gary McCoy, owner of a scrap metal firm on the corner, says his customers' trucks will just have to roll over the new curb to gain access to his yard. But nearby residents say the trucks are a menace to their children and should be kept off the sidewalk. Prestonsburg City Council refused Monday to deny McCoy has Main Street access.

Children waiting for the school bus Tuesday morning were, from left, Keith Hopkins, 11, Vernon "Junior" Shepherd, 11, and Bill Hopkins, 9.

Closing Access To Business Lot Stumps Council

The rhetoric swelled on a theme of children's safety but, when the votes were counted, Prestonsburg city council shied away from a proposal that would have kept tractor-trailers off a West Prestonsburg sidewalk.

Urged by council members Bill Ray Collins and Paul Hunt Thompson, the proposal would have closed a 50-foot section of sidewalk to traffic entering or leaving the Mountain Metal Company yard. The motion to block the entrance fronting Main Street was made in response to complaints by nearby residents that truck traffic crossing the sidewalk there endangered children who play in the area.

But Gary McCoy, owner of the scrap metal firm, argued that his corner lot has for many years had access on two sides and that closing one side made it difficult to maneuver trucks making deliveries to his yard. His attorney, David Barber, added that restricting access to McCoy's property would reduce its commercial value.

The issue, described by Thompson as a classic dilemma for towns in which commercial and residential districts overlap, was once postponed by referring it to the city's legal adviser. But City Attorney Larry Brown lobbed the ball

Rural Highway Funds Diverted To County Roads

Who do you need to see to get your road paved around here?

It all depends. Buttonhole your local magistrate if you hope to get a piece of the $39 million-or-so in gasoline taxes which is being split up among the state's 120 fiscal courts this year for surfacing rural roads.

But there is other road money to be had, too, at least by those who chose prudently and gave generously in the governor's race last November.

Some $6 million which was earmarked for state-maintained rural roads will be used instead on county roads, state Transportation Cabinet officials announced last week, resurrecting a practice that was last used in the administration of Gov. Julian Carroll.

The transfer of road funds doesn't bother him, Floyd Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo insisted this week. "I'm glad about anything they do for the county roads," he said. "I'm tickled to death."

But Stumbo conceded the switch may be tantamount to robbing Peter to pay Paul: While some county roads will benefit from the unanticipated injection of road funds, some other rural roads here—those maintained out of the state fund from which the $6 million was drawn—may go begging.

The judge-executive acknowledged, moreover, that the road-money transfer appeared to shift from the fiscal court some control over which county roads get the blacktop. Those on the county level with the biggest say in how the new funds will be spent, it seems, are Gov. Martha Layne Collins' county campaign chairmen. Mrs. Rose Collins was her campaign chairman in this county.

School Tax Rate Held at Minimum

Against the wishes of its chairman—who wanted voters to decide how much they are willing to support the schools—the Floyd Board of Education voted last week to set the lowest of three permissible property tax rates.

The board followed the recommendation of Treasurer Ray Brackett in setting the so-called "compensating" tax rate of 17.9 cents for $100 of assessed valuation. That is a rate theoretically calculated to bring in $754,580, about the same as last year.

Brackett defended the low rate as the simplest to impose, since it does not require the scheduling of a public hearing. The two higher rates—one would permit a four percent increase in revenue and the other nearly a 50 percent hike—would each require a hearing and the highest rate would be subject to a veto by voters.

Board Chairman Dr. J.D. Adams urged that one of the higher rates be considered—a rate of 18.6 cents would yield $774,698 if it were all collected; a rate of 27.9 cents would produce $1.1 million—and that voters voice their opinion at a public hearing.

"People have got to realize we need more money if we're to straighten out this school system," he said. "In my opinion there is not as much opposition (to a tax increase), at least in the northern end of the county, as some may think."

Although Adams rejected the comparison, Brackett cited public opposition to a proposed utilities tax last year as a sign that Floyd voters would oppose any increase in the school tax.

The vote for the low rate was unanimous.

As many as eight teachers may have to be cut from the payroll as the result of a drop in enrollment this year, Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. told the board. After about five years of growth, the student population in grades one through 12 fell by 257 this year, a drop only partly offset by a rise of 42 in the number of children in kindergarten.

Labor Secretary Wells Stresses Workplace Health and Safety

Stressing the importance of health and safety in the workplace, Kentucky Secretary of Labor John Calhoun Wells met Monday night with members of the Pike County Chamber of Commerce and Tuesday morning with Floyd county business leaders to explain the Labor Cabinet's new emphasis on reducing work-related injuries through enhanced education and training programs for labor and management.

Secretary Wells' appearances in Eastern Kentucky coincided with a series of Occupational Safety and Health Program seminars being held September 11 through 14 at Jenny Wiley State Park.

According to Wells, who is a native of Auxier, the education and training program is primarily focused on "high-hazard industries", the major source of work-related illnesses and injuries.

"In 1983 alone, over 100,000 Kentuckians were needlessly injured on the job," he said. "These injuries varied from minor scrapes and abrasions to fatalities, with statistics showing that

Teachers who do not use all their sick leave will be paid for up to 30 percent of their accumulated days on retirement, the board decided. In presenting the proposal, Board Treasurer Brackett called it "an incentive for conscientious teachers." Were the policy in effect last year, eight teachers with a total of 248 unused sick days would have benefitted from it, at a cost to the school district

"TAKE HOPE, ye who enter here." As a slogan, it pales beside Dante's immortal warning, but it's more apt for motorists wishing to drive towards the Prestonsburg post office on Third Avenue. Those who are just now learning to accept the fact that driving north on Third is forbidden will be happy to learn that it is again permitted. The city council had a change of heart. Third is again two-way.

Coal Plant at Ligon Loses Permit Battle

For the time being at least, the Ligon tittle is still.

That is good news for the Ligon and Melvin residents who last month begged state environmental officials not to issue an operating permit for the coal-washing plant and who learned last Friday that the permit sought by the Left Beaver Coal Company had indeed been denied.

Janice F. Forter, the attorney who represented several Clear Creek families at a hearing held last month by the state Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet (NREPC), called the decision "an important first step" but stressed that "a lot more needs to be done."

Clear Creek residents have long complained that run-off from huge gob piles generated by the plant has contaminated their drinking water and that the waste piles and settling ponds are themselves unstable. Moreover, the practice by Left Beaver Coal of injecting waste water into underground mine workings could one day lead to a catastrophic collapse of the surrounding hills, some fear.

Left Beaver Coal—a subsidiary of Turner Elkhorn Mining Co., of Drift, which is itself owned by the Pickand Mathers Corp., of Cleveland, Ohio—had applied for a new operating permit under regulations which took effect last year, when Kentucky assumed from the federal government primary responsibility for enforcing environmental laws.

Brack Marquette, a spokesman for the Natural Resources Cabinet, said the application was denied for reasons having to do with the technology used at the plant. Attorney Forter said this week

HANDMADE QUILTS draw the approval of visitors to the arts and crafts exhibit at the annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival held last week-end at Jenny Wiley State Park.

In Tenth Year, Music Festival Packs Them In

The picture at the 10th annual Kentucky Highlands Music Festival last week-end at Jenny Wiley State Park was too big and varied to invite detailed description, except to say everything was "just about perfect."

More people saw more exhibits, heard more musicians and enjoyed the event than ever—and the weather was perfect. The Friday and Saturday night sessions of music and dancing drew a full house. Mrs. Kathryn S. Frazier, director, said. So did the closing hymn sing at the amphitheatre late Sunday.

The arts and crafts section of the festival had its best year, with more exhibitors displaying their work and more viewers showing their appreciation. Each of the free concerts at May Lodge drew approximately 250 persons, it was said.

In addition to the music and dances that are traditional in the region, art and literature, storytelling and demonstrations of handcrafting drew wide interest.

The festival was founded in 1974 by Mrs. Edith F. James, of Prestonsburg.

This Town...That World

Another week and another summer waves a languid farewell.

ON AHEAD

Be patient. Nature is getting ready to stage "the greatest show on earth," no less, only a few weeks from now.

But, if the colors of springtime and summer failed to register with you, autumn in all its glory isn't likely to score. The yellows, blues, scarlets, even the white, of spring escape few eyes. But how many shades of green do we see on a forested hillside? And the tricks sunshine and shadow play—have you noticed? The kaleidoscope is there, long before autumn touches the leaves with its magic brush.

(For my views on winter, see me later.)

EXPLANATION

"Constant Reader" writes to inquire about my boating troubles. Says, "You never did say in your article what caused the boat to sink."

And I hasten to explain that it sank because it got too much water inside. Or, if you want to be devious about the matter, you could say it was because there wasn't enough water outside.

Joint KET, Education Dept. Venture...

"Study-at-Home" Project Would Help Adults Catch Up On School

As tough as it is today to get by without a high school diploma, getting one after you've dropped out of school can be a discouraging task.

The kind of effort some will make to catch up on an interrupted education was movingly illustrated at the Floyd Board of Education last week, when the board considered a request by a 23-year-old mother of two who has come back to school to get the three credits she needs to graduate.

Anyone prepared to put out that kind of effort needs all the help she or he can get, board members decided, even though the school district is not obliged to educate adults and is not reimbursed for it by the state.

But going back to the classroom—even a classroom for adults—is not the answer for everyone. And, for that reason, a pilot program was launched here and in 17 other eastern Kentucky counties last week that will offer another route for Kentucky's large population of underschooled adults.

A flyer distributed in connection with the program spells out what is at stake for them: A better job. A better life. A better feeling about themselves.

At a May Lodge luncheon Wednesday, Brenda Griffin, coordinator of adult learning services for Kentucky Educational Television (KET), outlined a project for using television to help high school dropouts prepare for their GED (high-school equivalency) tests with a study course they can take in their own homes.

Another part of the project will promote discussion of ways to keep high-school students in school.

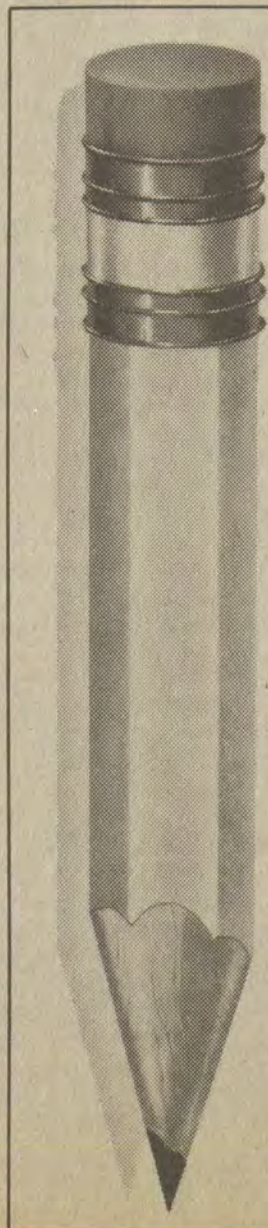

Griffin summed up Kentucky's depressing statistics in this regard: this state has the least-educated adult population in the country. In 1980, only 56 percent of those 18 and over had a high school diploma. Only 11 percent had graduated from college.

Kentucky also has one of the highest high school dropout rates in the nation—33 percent in 1981. Only eight states did worse.

About 700,000 Kentuckians lack a high school diploma, and another 20,000 high school dropouts join their ranks each year.

Directed jointly by KET and the state Department of Education and funded so far by an Ashland Oil Foundation grant, the program being introduced this fall will aim at bringing up to high school level those who have already discontinued their schooling and stemming the tide of those currently giving up on high school.

Task Force Member Says Drug, Alcohol Use In Schools 'Epidemic'

A member of the Task Force in the Kentucky War on Drugs expressed concern this week at the public apathy in the face of an alarming situation in this county.

"Drug and alcohol use in our schools has become epidemic," said Mrs. Mary Lou Layne, of Prestonsburg. At the same time, she said, relatively few attend meetings of the Task Force which, she said, "is trying to help these children."

Parents of school children who have been attending Task Force meetings are few, Mrs. Layne said, and the number of other citizens who would be expected to have an interest in the war on drugs is even less.

The Task Force will have its next meeting Monday, Sept. 17, at 7:30 p.m., at the Floyd County Library here, and the public is invited to attend.

Adventists Open Church Here

The official opening of Prestonsburg's first Seventh-Day Adventist Church will take place Saturday at 11:00 a.m.

Special speaker for the occasion will be Clayton Farwell, president of the Kentucky/Tennessee Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, based in Madison, Tennessee, just north of Nashville.

"Building projects are always best when they come to an end," reports Adventist Pastor Paul Hoover. "Now we can worship in the freedom of our new sanctuary and begin to serve our community from our own church."

Seventh-day Adventists have been in Eastern Kentucky for many years, establishing their first church in the area of Belcher in 1919. Seventh-day Adventists are a world-wide church which increases in membership by over 100 every day.

The Prestonsburg church, located five miles west of Prestonsburg on the Mountain Parkway, has been meeting at the First Presbyterian Church for worship and Bible study.

The public is encouraged to attend the opening ceremony. Bible study starts at 9:30, church service at 11:00. Following the service a luncheon buffet, with a fully vegetarian menu, is planned for guests.

Retailers, Restaurateurs To Hear of Law Changes

The Kentucky Retail Federation, Inc., will conduct its annual meeting for all local retailers and restaurateurs next Wednesday at the Floyd County Library to inform them of the laws that were changed during the last session of the Kentucky General Assembly. Major changes were made in state tax laws, labor laws, unemployment compensation and workers' compensation statutes.

Mack J. Morgan, Jr., president of the Kentucky Retail Federation, said the session here will be held from 2 p.m. to 3:15 p.m. and that the meeting will be free. All retailers and restaurateurs are invited and encouraged to attend.

The discussion will be led by staff members of the Kentucky Retail Federation. Additional information about the meeting can be obtained from Ruth Goebel, of the B.F. Casual Shop here, who is the local chairman of the Federation.

Pregnancy Series To Begin

The Big Sandy Family & Childbirth Education Association (BSF-CEA), which provides families with breastfeeding support, prepared childbirth, prenatal education, and parenting education to young families, will sponsor an information and discussion series on pregnancy. The series will use handouts and discussions to highlight different aspects of pregnancy at each of the three planned sessions.

Prestonsburg Community College's Building A-1 will be the location for the series. Each session will take place at 11 a.m. and will be designed to last 60 minutes in order to give the working woman an opportunity to participate. Sessions will be presented as three independent units so that a woman can choose to participate in any one session or the entire series of three. Participants may bring a sack lunch if the classes coincide with their lunch hour. A fee will be charged. The fee will include participation of the pregnant woman and anyone she chooses to bring as well as the handouts.

The series began Sept. 11, with the topic, "Your Baby". Growth and development of the fetus during pregnancy as well as the factors affecting that process, such as nutrition and exercise, were discussed. "Your Body" will be the topic for the September 13 session. Recognizing that changes for the pregnant women are both physical and psychological, this session will deal with physical comfort measures, changing body image, and the stress of being pregnant. The concluding session's topic will be "Your New Family", Thursday, Sept. 20. The family issues surrounding pregnancy will be presented.

Further information and registration for the pregnancy series can be obtained by contacting Vikki McGuire at 886-3863, ext. 213.

PREPARED CHILDBIRTH CLASS

Fiscal Court Erred in Switching Ads, Conley Rules in Letcher County Case

Letcher Fiscal Court was wrong in moving its advertising from The Mountain Eagle last June, Floyd Circuit Judge Hollie Conley has ruled.

Judge Conley was named as a special judge to hear the case after Letcher Circuit Judge F. Byrd Hogg disqualified himself on grounds he had prior knowledge of the facts.

Conley issued a permanent injunction preventing the fiscal court from placing legal ads in any other newspaper unless they are also placed in The Eagle. He also directed the court to pay the newspaper punitive damages of $2500 and actual damages of $561 in lost advertising revenues.

In addition, the judge directed the court to pay costs of the suit, including a $3500 fee to the Whitesburg law firm which represented The Eagle.

In his written opinion, Judge Conley said: "The undisputed evidence in this case shows that the plaintiff, The Mountain Eagle, has almost twice the circulation as the Community Press. Based upon the fact that the Mountain Eagle newspaper has the largest circulation, it is hereby ordered and adjudged that the defendants are required to publish any legal notices with the plaintiff. It is therefore adjudged that the defendants are enjoined from listing all publications with anyone other than the plaintiff, Mountain Eagle Newspaper, unless same is advertised in the Mountain Eagle."

The lawsuit arose after Magistrate Roger Burke introduced a resolution at the June 1, 1983 meeting of the Letcher Fiscal Court to change the county's legal advertising from The Mountain Eagle to the Community Press, Cromona. The fiscal court adopted Burke's resolution with only one member, Steve Banks, voting against the resolution. (Banks said he advised the court to follow the advice of County Attorney Harold Bolling, who told the magistrates several months before they passed the resolution that The Mountain Eagle was the proper place for county legal advertisements.)

When Burke introduced the resolution he gave as a reason that part of The Mountain Eagle was published out of state. (At the time, The Eagle's Patch Work section, which did not carry legal advertising, was printed in Norton, Va. The paper itself was printed in Prestonsburg, and had been for the past decade.)

In sworn testimony taken in connection with the lawsuit, Burke testified also that he was displeased with The Eagle's endorsement of Harvey Sloane in the 1983 Democratic primary for governor. Burke served as county campaign chairman for Martha Layne Collins. Burke denied, however, that a political vendetta influenced the newspaper switch.

Attorneys for The Eagle detailed statistics from sworn testimony given by Mountain Eagle publisher Tom Gish and by Charles Whitaker, publisher of the Community Press. An examination of route sheets recording news stand sales of each paper showed that on the week of May 5, 1983, The Mountain Eagle had actual news stand sales of 3344 copies and the Community Press had sales of 916 copies. Mail subscriptions within the county for the same week were 1453 for the Mountain Eagle and 741 for the Community Press.

Record Enrollment Recorded at PCC

Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of Prestonsburg Community College, is shown assisting Stephanie D. Maynard, of Raccoon, Ky., to register for classes at the college. Miss Maynard's enrollment pushed the college above its previous record enrollment of 1,154 students.

Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., director of Prestonsburg Community College, announced Monday that the final official enrollment figure for Prestonsburg Community College for the 1984 fall semester again exceeded all previous enrollments. A total of 1,280 students were enrolled at the end of registration last Wednesday. This figure represents approximately an 11 percent increase over the 1,154 who enrolled during the 1983 fall semester.

Beginning in 1978, Prestonsburg Community College has had a steady increase in enrollment. For several years, the increase has varied from 15 to 33 percent. "This increase begets a myriad of other problems," Campbell said. "Over 135 cars are being parked in areas not zoned or paved for parking, every classroom is in use during the day and several special purpose rooms, including the home economics room, have had to be converted to classroom spaces at certain hours of the day. This continual growth emphasizes the problem created by the rejection of the building that was appropriated by the legislature during the past session and vetoed by the governor."

Dr. Campbell attributed the increased numbers of students to the wide variety of courses that the new faculty has enabled the college to offer and the increased number of students in the five-county area who chose to come to Prestonsburg Community College rather than go outside the area.

Public Figures Make Constitution Live

Can a document written almost 200 years ago address issues of modern times? Do current interpretations of that document shed new light on debates surrounding conflicts? "The Constitution: That Delicate Balance," a 13-part series beginning Sunday, September 23, at 10:00 p.m. on KET, serves as a springboard for examining public policy and the Constitution.

In each program, moderators from leading law schools present a hypothetical case based on a constitutional issue to a panel of politicians, judges, lawyers, academics and journalists. Participants include public figures such as former President Gerald Ford, former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, former Attorney General Griffin Bell, CBS Anchor Dan Rather, and writer/editor Gloria Steinem.

"The Constitution: That Delicate Balance" is a production of The Media and Society Seminars, a program of Columbia Graduate School of Journalism, in conjunction with WNET/New York and WTTW/Chicago.

Suggestion

Tommy Yankey, Martin county Extension agent, has won national honors with the experimental garden which he and Monroe Cassidy, a landowner of that county, produced this year.

We congratulate Mr. Yankey. It is no small achievement to produce on Martin county's thin soil a garden experientially superior to all but one that was grown this year all over the United States, including the fertile acres of the Blue Grass section of Kentucky, Iowa, southern river bottoms and the like.

For all that, we have an idea that, given public support, especially that of public officials, some farm agent, somewhere, could come up with a production feat beside which the Martin county success would pale.

This "dream project" would involve landowners as well as those with agricultural expertise. It would make available space for gardens for each family now depending upon food stamps and the neighborhood grocery store for their food supplies.

Seeds and plants would be supplied, Extension personnel would lend advice in planting and tilling these gardens, and at harvest time would guide those who needed help in canning and preserving what had been raised.

This would not be a program for everybody. The aged, the sick, those with other handicaps, physical and mental, would not be expected to participate. But those who are able to work would be expected to take part, and their refusal to do so should make them ineligible for further public assistance.

A program such as this would not penalize anybody for being poor, nor would it humiliate those who participated in it. Instead, the knowledge gained, the work done, the sense of achievement found would all join in erasing the stigma of the dole and make independent many who now are pitifully dependent.

The May Lodge meetings attracted representatives of the Floyd schools system, Prestonsburg Community College, the Job Corps, the state employment office, the Chamber of Commerce, Floyd County Citizens' Education Council and a number of private individuals. They heard Harlan Stubbs, of the state education department's adult education division, explain that current adult education services are barely keeping abreast of the numbers quitting high school each year.

Approaches now in use include learning centers (the closest to Floyd county are at Morehead and Ashland), night classes (offered two nights a week here), and teacher aides (one in this county) who tutor at home adults who cannot get to a class.

The new project includes two television programs addressing the dropout problem. The first, designed as an in-service program for teachers and administrators, aired last week. The second, aimed at parents, parent-teacher organizations, and civic groups, airs on Monday, November 12, at 7 p.m. on KET. It is entitled, "Dropping Out: What's It Worth?"

Schools and citizen groups are encouraged to use these programs, live and videotaped, to stimulate public interest in the problem. Leader guides prepared with the help of the state Department of Education will be available to schools and target groups in the community.

The second part of the project will use a televised instructional series, supplemented by student workbooks and a hotline to a trained tutor, to help adults prepare for GED certificates. The "study at home" project will begin this fall in the state's 18 easternmost counties with plans to expand statewide next year.

Those interested in the program will be directed to several cooperating groups for help, including the Kentucky Coalition for Literacy, the Kentucky Department of Libraries and Archives, the state's 24 adult learning centers, and vocational schools.

For an enrollment fee of $15, "study at home" students will receive:

—A workbook and study guides to help them follow the course and the TV broadcasts.

—Practice sheets which they will fill out and mail to KET. They will be sent back to the students with corrections and comments.

—A pre-test to help the student determine his or her weaknesses before the course begins.

—A post-test that tells the student when he or she is ready to take the GED test.

—A toll-free number—1-800-262-2037—to call for help.

that the main technical issue concerns the plant's waste disposal system. "The company claims it's a closed system," she said. "It isn't."

The technology is available that would allow the company to operate in an environmentally acceptable manner but installing it might cost more than the owners wish to spend, Porter conjectured. But Palmer Humphrey, who has led community opposition to the plant in recent months, doubts whether the tittle and the community could ever coexist peacefully.

"This holler is just too close, with houses just above and just below the tittle," he said. "I don't think there's room here for the kind of operation they want."

Humphrey said that, for him and his neighbors, the problem now is, What is the state going to do about their water supply? With the coal-washing plant idle, the problem may resolve itself in time, Humphrey conceded. "But it's pretty doubtful it will ever clear up," he said. "They've been piling that stuff in the hills 12 to 14 years."

It was not clear this week what alternatives might yet be available to Pickand Mathers, assuming the company wants to resume its Clear Creek operations. Marquette, executive assistant to Natural Resources Secretary Charlotte Baldwin, said Left Beaver Coal would have to reapply for a permit if it intends to operate.

But Martin Cunningham, who presided at the public hearing on the permit application here last month, said then that the application would initially be decided by the director of NREPC's division of permits, a decision which could then be appealed to the Secretary, and ultimately to the courts.

Palmer Humphrey, meanwhile, wishes the company would accept what, from his point of view, is the simple fact of the matter: "They've gobbled themselves out."

HOSS-TRADIN'

One of the boss-swappin' arts is to find fault with the nag or nags in question, and the same tactics run over into bigger transactions. Downgrading a farm which he wanted to buy at a bargain, one would-be buyer pointed to a building which was far past its prime and somewhat out of plumb.

"Squattin' a bit, ain't it?" he asked, pointing to a post which reinforced a wall.

"Not exactly," was the reply. "Just a little propindicular."

THIS COULD BE FATAL

Clean streets... newly surfaced streets... sidewalks repaired... conveniences for the handicapped... most parking meters only a bitter memory... If the city keeps this up, we're going to have nothing to gripe about—and that might put some of us in the hospital.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Mrs. Cheryl Dye wishes to thank everyone for their kindness and prayers during her long illness. A special thanks to the staff of the Highlands Regional Medical Center, the Hall Funeral Home, and to all her friends who showed their love through the beautiful flowers that were sent.

of $7800, Brackett said. Teachers in the audience hailed it as a "progressive" move.

Abacus Computer Store, of Prestonsburg, won a contract to sell the school system 20 Apple IIe computers at $839 each; Twin Coal Co., of Hueysville, will supply coal to the schools, on condition the firm will guarantee delivery in the event of a miners' strike; and Pelphey Supply Co., of Paintsville, won the contract for gasoline.

Parents of students at Clark Elementary School were told that a broken sewage lift station on the school grounds should be repaired before the week was out and that physical education teacher Bridget Clay might be assigned to Clark an additional day.

Clay, rehired this year after Clark parents had protested the board's failure to rehire her, is assigned to both Clark and Wayland grade schools. One Clark parent at Wednesday's board meeting noted pointedly that, while their physical education teacher was cut, the board added a member to the district's central office staff—a reference to the replacement of Wayne Ratliff as transportation coordinator and his appointment as assistant food service director, a new position.

Peggy Tackett, of Minnie, asked the board to have a bus pick up children on her hollow and two nearby hollows on Sizemore Mountain. Transportation Coordinator Ed Patton will be asked to investigate the situation.

The board adopted revised curricula in reading and math in the elementary grades and a student handbook distributed this year to high school freshmen, improvements brought about under the state-sponsored School Effectiveness Project. Also the result of state prompting, a plan was adopted to name head custodians in county schools and pay them an extra 50 cents an hour.

Hired by the board were:

make a U-turn on U.S. 23. Her vehicle collided with Branham's, causing her a neck injury, she said.

Branham admitted he intended to cross the median but said he was in the fast lane to begin with and the reason the other driver hit him was that she was driving too fast. Branham sought to recover the cost of damage to his vehicle, an estimated $2307.

Miss Smith asked for $25,000 for pain and suffering as well as $1395 for medical bills and lost wages.

But, under court instructions recently adopted in Kentucky—and commonly used in other states—which require that juries determine what share of the blame is borne by each party in an accident, the Floyd jury Monday decided that the plaintiff was 70 percent responsible, Branham 30 percent.

While the jury said the plaintiff should recover 30 percent of her medical expenses and lost wages, it awarded her nothing for her pain and suffering.

Miss Smith was represented in the case by Gary E. Johnson, Branham, by Mitch Kinner, an attorney with Francis, Kazee & Francis.

back to the council's court. As long as a business is provided reasonable access, he said, the city council has power to limit access in the public interest.

"Your entrance is one of the biggest of any business in Prestonsburg," Collins told McCoy. "I don't understand why you need (a second entrance on) the stretch where children play."

But council member Eunice Shepherd, a West Prestonsburg resident who said she had herself recently purchased a corner lot, said she was "not about to tell people how to run their business."

Collins and Thompson cast the only votes for the measure. Mrs. Shepherd, Bobby Watson, William O. Goebel III, and George C. Brown voted against it. Bobby Ranier, saying he could not make up his mind, abstained.

Just as most drivers were becoming accustomed to Third Avenue's being a one-way street between Court and Graham, it is reverting to two-way traffic as the result of a council decision Monday. The decision, which prompted little discussion, came in response to a request by Third Avenue furniture dealer O.R. "Pete" Howard. The council also decided to remove parking meters from the street.

The city police department will be buying new crime detection equipment with funds realized from a case they recently cracked. A West Prestonsburg drug raid yielded $7300 which the department got to keep, Police Chief Stan Fletcher explained. It will go to buy equipment the city council had earlier indicated the city might not be able to afford.

Purchase of a $180,000 ladder truck for the city fire department earlier this year has helped improve the city's insurance rating, Fire Chief Tom Blackburn told the council. Purchase of another $17,000 worth of equipment could improve it even more, he said. Prestonsburg seems certain to be upped from a class 6 to a class 5 rating, it was said.

Permission to hold fundraising roadblocks was given to the Shriners and the Arthritis Foundation, over Councilman Watson's objection. "I'm damn tired of these roadblocks," he said.

Council members had praise for the city streets department, Councilman Brown opining that "downtown looks better now than any time since I've lived here—and that's 47 years."

In the rural secondary road program, from which the $6 million is being shifted, recommendations for road work come from district engineers in the 12 highway district offices. Kirby Ison, district engineer at Pikeville, was here in March to get the Floyd fiscal court's suggestions. They included: the Cow Creek road; the Buckingham road, near Price; Steele's Creek road, off Sizemore Mountain into Wayland; and Spurlock Fork, the road that connects Little Mud Creek with Left Beaver, joining KY 122 near Salisbury.

For county roads financed with the $6 million, recommendations come from Otto Ingram, deputy transportation secretary for rural and municipal aid. Ingram said he is taking suggestions from a variety of people, including county officials—and certainly including the governor's campaign supporters.

The Times was unable to get a list of Floyd roads to be blacktopped with the new money, but two projects said to be on the list will apparently benefit well-known Collins supporters here. Mrs. Thelma Spears said she had heard a section of her road, the Coldwater road near Harold, would be blacktopped. Her family were strong supporters of the governor, Mrs. Spears acknowledged, and her brother, Leo Roberts, was hired under the Collins administration as a state roads foreman.

But Mrs. Spears said she did not know if the road work was a reward for her family's support. "I don't know what they take into account in deciding what roads to pave or not to pave," she said.

Another person who figured prominently in the Collins campaign here, Mrs. Laura Feamster, said she had "heard a rumor" the blacktop might be extended on Daniels Creek, where she lives, but implied it was a fiscal court decision and was unrelated to her support for the governor.

The reason funds are being transferred from the rural secondary road program, Ingram said, is that the state-maintained roads are "in fairly good shape," compared to the county-maintained roads.

That will be hard to explain to people who have to travel the state-maintained road over Spurlock, Stumbo acknowledged. But many county-maintained roads are in poor shape, too, and if the Coldwater and Daniels Creek road are on the state list, they deserve to be, he said.

Because rural secondary road funds have now been reduced by one-fifth, it seems less likely that the four roads he recommended under that program will be resurfaced this year, but he is still hopeful that they, too will be paved, the judge-executive said.

Free Health Fair Slated Sept. 29

Jenny Wiley A.A.R.P., No. 3528, and KNRTA, of Floyd county, will hold a free health fair at Prestonsburg High School from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, September 29, for ages five years through adult.

General practitioners, optometrists, dentists, nurses and laboratory technicians will be present to make examinations and tests. Those wishing urinalyses should bring specimen with them.

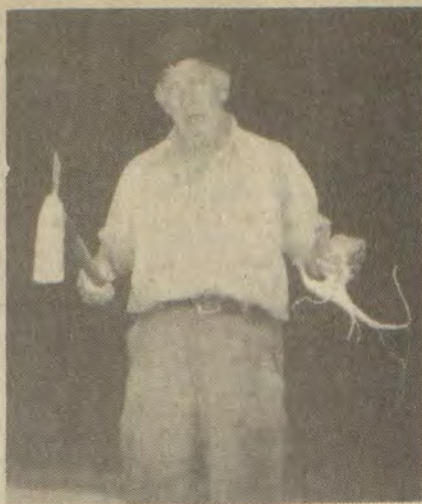

Staffing the health fair will be members of Mountain Comprehensive Care, Department of Aging for Floyd county, the Floyd County Health Department, and Mud Creek Health Clinic.

Free bus service will be available for senior citizens, and those who are unable to attend this health fair should plan to attend the health fair scheduled at McDowell High School, Saturday, October 20.

Celebrates Second Birthday

Andrew Martin Cummings celebrated his second birthday with a party at the home of his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Cummings, of Largo, Florida, August 18.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cummings, formerly of Prestonsburg and the great-grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Campbell, of Allen.

THIS FIVE-PRONGED GINSENG ROOT was dug up by Delmer Robinson near his home on the Katy Friend Branch, last week. Although a root of this size is said to be rare and much sought by ginseng buyers, Mrs. Robinson says it is not for sale.

Mr. Robinson retired several years ago after working for the Prestonsburg Water and Gas System for 22 years.

Bullet Victim's Survivor Files $1.2 Million Suit

The son of a woman who was shot to death at Harold last July has filed a $1.2 million damage suit in circuit court here.

Barry Lynn Boyd, 35, of Betsy Layne, filed the suit as executor of the estate of Mary Lou Boyd, who died of a bullet wound on July 25 at the trailer home of Ray Hamilton on Pinhook.

Hamilton was also found dead at the scene, leading to speculation that he killed Mrs. Boyd and then shot himself. Both died of a bullet wound in the right temple. She was 54; he, 63.

Named as defendant in Boyd's suit is Jack Bryan Hamilton, of Harold, Ray Hamilton's son and administrator of his estate.

Boyd claims the elder Hamilton forcibly detained Mrs. Boyd and shot her in the presence of her mentally retarded daughter. Her family—she left a son, five daughters and a step-daughter—has suffered losses amounting to $500,000 as a result, the suit alleges. The family is further entitled to $500,000 in compensation for Mrs. Boyd's suffering, $250,000 in punitive damages, and $3600 for funeral and other expenses, it is claimed.

The suit was filed Aug. 28 by Prestonsburg attorneys Gary E. Johnson and Jerry A. Patton.

(Claims made in filling a lawsuit present only one side of the issue in dispute.)

Registration Changes Must Be Made by Oct. 10 Is Warning to Voters

Now is the time for all good men and women who want to come to the aid of their party to be sure they are registered correctly.

Voters who have moved to another precinct and failed to change their registration, changed their name by marriage, or even changed party affiliation, should be sure these changes have been properly recorded. Those who live in one of the four precincts divided last year may need to have their precinct polling place changed. Kentucky law requires that a voter must vote in the precinct where they reside.

County Clerk Carla Robinson Boyd, says, "It is now time to get these minor problems straightened out."

Voters have until October 10 to make these changes, and members of the Clerk's staff will be in different areas of the county soon to register voters. (A schedule of these visits will be published in The Times.)

Those who have a question regarding their voter registration may call 886-3816 for information, or come to the Clerk's office from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday, or from 8 a.m. until 7 p.m., Friday.

When you quit smoking, you will have added a number of healthy, productive days to each year of your life.

Officials Spoil Escape Attempt

Court officials last week foiled an attempted escape from the county jail by a man sentenced to two days for drunk driving.

Phillip Akers, 26, of Prestonsburg, ran from Deputy Jailer Don Hall around 2:30 p.m. Friday as Hall served him with a warrant for contempt of court stemming from an incident earlier that day.

The deputy jailer, Circuit Clerk Frank DeRossett and Deputy Sheriff John Blackburn gave chase, Blackburn apprehending the fugitive in the courthouse parking lot.

Akers was arrested earlier Friday by Prestonsburg Police Det. Mike Ormerod and charged with drunk driving and driving on a suspended license. Court records indicated two previous drunk driving convictions, one in Kentucky, the other in Virginia. Floyd District Judge Harold Stumbo ordered the defendant to pay $407.50 in fine and court costs and sentenced him to 30 days in jail—the whole term to be probated except for two days in jail and one day of public service.

Assigned to clean the courthouse as part of his public service, Akers took off instead, drawing an additional contempt of court charge. Deputy Jailer Hall attempted to serve the new warrant when Akers returned unexpectedly to the jail, reportedly "to pick up his things," and Akers again fled. He was later charged with third-degree escape and Judge Stumbo set a $2000 property bond.

Two days earlier another escapee was returned to jail here from Ohio. Millard Conn, 34, of Martin, was charged with first-degree escape after he fled the Floyd county jail on August 8.

Conn was serving two months of a five-year sentence for burglary—the rest of the sentence was probated—when he escaped from a courthouse work detail. He was picked up by Shelby (Ohio) city police and returned here Wednesday in the custody of Jailer Lawrence Hale.

Zendale Sherman, 22, of Endicott, was charged Wednesday with producing marijuana, State Trooper A.L. Wedington alleging Sherman was raising the crop in his vegetable garden. Police said 29 plants were found during a search of a field at David, Sherman was released after posting a $50 cash bond.

A.C. Collins, 19, of Martin, pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of arson, stemming from the burning in April last year of a house belonging to Z.C. Dingus and a motorcycle owned by Robbie Keathley. The Commonwealth recommended a one-year sentence on each count, to be probated on condition Collins makes restitution to Keathley for the loss of his motorcycle. Sentencing was set for Friday this week.

Da Vinci, Subject Of Special Program

Leonardo da Vinci was the embodiment of the "Renaissance Man." Scientist, artist, visionary, and philosopher, he was a keen observer and student of nature who kept voluminous notes on his observations and used the knowledge he obtained to make revolutionary contributions to both science and art. On Monday, October 1, at 9:00 p.m., "I, Leonardo: A Journey Of The Mind" will air as a special presentation on KET.

Frank Langella stars in this acclaimed production based on da Vinci's own words, translated from the artist's notebooks and authenticated by experts in the fields of science and art. The late Richard Burton narrates the hour-long production and Walter Cronkite hosts and provides commentary in related segments focusing on the importance of quality education in America. Filmed in Europe and the United States, the production follows da Vinci from his beginning as an art student in Florence to his diversified careers as scientist, painter, military engineer, and sculptor.

Program Will Follow Sexual Abuse Series

Immediately following the fifth and final program in the PBS series, "Child Sexual Abuse: What Your Children Should Know," KET will air live a one-hour special program, "Child Sexual Abuse: A Kentucky Perspective." The program will be aired on Thursday, September 20, at 9:00 p.m.

The purpose of the program is to not only make viewers aware that the epidemic of child sexual abuse is happening in Kentucky, but will also serve to educate viewers on what's being done now and for the future to deal with the problem.

Host Kate Underwood of Louisville will be joined by a panel of three experts on child sexual abuse. Her guests will be Nancy Fox, community relations specialist with the Child Protective Services in Louisville, who for 11 years worked alongside police in following up reports of abused children; Vicki Dennis of Frankfort, from the office of the Attorney General, and Dr. Cathy Martin, a psychiatrist at the University of Kentucky Child Psychiatry Department.

The program will offer a call-in period for viewers, and will post 24-hour hotline numbers for reporting sexual abuse. "Child Sexual Abuse: A Kentucky Perspective" is a KET production.

The views expressed here are those of the writers, and not necessarily those of this newspaper. No unsigned contributions will be published.

JV's Get Hurt, Too

A near disaster came our way Monday night during Prestonsburg's Junior Varsity game with Pikeville due to the negligence of our coaching staff and right on up to the top of our beloved school board. For some reason our J.V. football players do not rate as high as our varsity team in the area of safety and a few other choice areas.

These second-rate football players are lucky to get a few parents out to the game. Sometimes, maybe, the scoreboard lights up. Oh yes, where are the guys to pull the chains. Is there a doctor in the house? If not, is there an ambulance on the field? Surely the lives of our J.V. team are important—evidently not. It seems as though our coaches, principals, and school board officials don't find it necessary to follow all the same safety precautions as for a Friday night game.

We almost lost one of our football players, a child, a friend, a classmate. He was dangerously injured during Monday night's J.V. game. At times his life was in grave danger. The call came from the referee. "Is there a doctor in the house, is there anyone here who can help?"

We look around and ask, where is the ambulance? We take another look at the seriously injured player in desperate need of medical attention, and we pray that he can just hang on until help gets here.

I can't tell you in this letter just how lucky we were not to have had a loss of life on our football field Monday night.

Football, as we all know, is a dangerous sport and we all take the risk by letting our boys play, just as we take a risk each time we get into our car and drive on the highways. Life itself is a risk. But surely we can use our God-given minds and abilities to head off situations of this nature.

If our school officials cannot be responsible enough to maintain these programs that our children are involved in, then we parents had better pause and take a look at ourselves, and find out what we must do to get things in order in our schools.

Questions Fuel Cost

(Editor's note: A copy of the following letter to the superintendent of Floyd schools was submitted by the writer to The Times for publication.)

In reviewing your financial statement published in the September 5, 1984 edition of the Floyd County Times for the period August 1983 thru July 1984, there seems to be some waste in monies paid for gasoline purchased. One specific example is payments made to the Martin Gulf Station in the amount of $30,792.36.

As a resident of Left Beaver, when I buy gas in Martin, I usually buy gas at the lowest possible price, which is currently $1.08 per gallon at another service station. The cost of $1.08 per gallon is approximately 27¢ per gallon cheaper. Also I cannot understand why the board of education does not have its own pumps at Garth. If bulk fuel was purchased savings would have been approximately 35¢ to 40¢ per gallon over the charge at the Martin Gulf Station.

My calculation shows that the board of education would have saved $5210.92 if it had bought fuel at the lowest price possible at another station and $8290.10 if they had bulk fuel for pumps at Garth.

I also notice that gasoline purchases for other areas were made at selected high price service stations. While I have not totaled the purchases made at each station, I am sure that gasoline could have been purchased cheaper at other service stations in that particular area. More savings could have resulted in having bulk fuel dispensed by pumps at various schools.

Recently, my son came home from school selling flowers to raise money for school improvements. This would be unnecessary if your staff and the board of education would work to hold costs down.

LEONARD J. SAYERS
Drift, Ky.

(Editor's Note: A spokesman for the Board of Education pointed out, after receiving Mr. Sayers' letter, that the board now buys bulk gasoline and that the fuel is dispensed through its own pumps at some locations.)

Lauds DeRossett

The people who have Gerald Derossett for their magistrate, have to be the luckiest people in Floyd county. He is the best kind of a magistrate, always doing for his district all that he can possibly do. He puts forth real honest effort to aid in any crisis, such as this past May after and during the flood. Any of us can call on him at any time and be assured of getting the same excellent, prudent help from him, that he is able to give to us. Recently, however, Gerald had quite a time in getting a new grader man hired, and as he knew the man would be, the new grader man is a good employee. Again may I say how fortunate we are to have Gerald as our magistrate, and long may we keep him as such.

Likes 'Long Week-Ends'

Being considerably younger, and not quite as tolerant of the daily grind, I feel that the "whoop-de-doo week-ends" are essential to my well being.

These long week-ends help to reduce tension without taking unnecessary vacation time. Perhaps when I understand life as you do, these week-ends will mean as much to me as they do to you. Until then, I feel that these week-ends were the only real contribution of the Nixon Administration.

Grateful Parents

We would like to thank the Prestonsburg Police Department, Prestonsburg Fire Department, Squad 6, the Dive team, P & B. Ambulance and all persons who responded to the emergency call by D.J. Conley on behalf of Stephanie, when she suffered an allergic reaction to medication. Thank each of you who was there and assisted in any way.

SUE DEROSSETT

Cats Easily Defeat Betsy Layne, 44 to 0; Johnson Central, Next

The Prestonsburg High School Black Cats had easy sailing Friday night in their 44-0 conquest of the Betsy Layne Bobcats, but the course may soon get rougher.

They have three games in a row away from home, and the opposition grows stiffer. The Cats go to Paintsville Friday evening for their annual set-to with the Johnson Central Golden Eagles, and the following week they will be at Middlesboro.

And the week after that they will play at Belfry High, a team coached by the Cats' former mentor, Phillip Haywood. Belfry has lost only one game, and that to Tates Creek of Lexington.

In last Friday night's game a plucky Betsy Layne team was clearly outclassed. It was the Prestonsburg team's third win in as many starts this season.

Attorney General Rules Each Person Convicted To Pay An Extra $10

Attorney General David L. Armstrong has announced that he is issuing an opinion upholding the ability of Crime Victims Compensation Board to collect an additional $10 from each convicted defendant in Kentucky whether that person receives a sentence of imprisonment, probation, parole or a fine. The money generated is placed in the Crime Victims Compensation Fund to provide financial assistance to victims of crime.

According to Armstrong, the opinion addresses KRS 346.185, legislation passed by the Kentucky General Assembly in 1982, which established the funding mechanism for the Fund.

Armstrong said that previous opinions had interpreted the law to exclude defendants who had just received fines "even though the crime authorizes a jail sentence." However, he cites case law which requires courts to be guided by the intention of the legislature in interpreting statutory language. In his opinion, Armstrong said that he believes the legislature intended the additional $10 be imposed on all defendants.

Armstrong praised the Crime Victims Compensation Board for its efforts to assist victims. "No amount of money can erase the trauma imposed on the victims of crime," he said. "But, financial redress can be an important first step in helping victims begin the often lengthy process of recovery." He added that the Compensation Fund is particularly appropriate because "the convicted criminal, not the taxpayer, provides the money for the assistance."

CERVE of Floyd County Gets Grant of $4000

The Kentucky Interchurch Disaster Recovery Program (KIDRP) recently made grants amounting to more than $10,000 to several ecumenical, church-related organizations involved in responding to the May, 1984 floods and winds.

Recipients of grants have been Interfaith of Bell County, $500; Hazard-Perry County Community Ministries, $750; Christian Ecumenical Recovery Effort (CERVE) in Floyd county, $4000; and Christian Service Ministry in Letcher county, $5000.

A program of Kentucky Council of Churches, KIDRP has responded to natural disasters in Kentucky since 1974, when severe tornado damage occurred in central and northern Kentucky. The program assists church leaders in determining appropriate disaster response, provides training opportunities for disaster preparedness, coordinates the voluntary repair and construction skills of such church groups as Mennonite Disaster Service on homes of those with the greatest unmet needs, and solicits funds from regional and national governing bodies of denominations on behalf of the local affected communities.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of mother, Rissie Shores, who passed away Sept. 14, 1981:

Its been three long years since you left, mother;

It doesn't get any easier as you might say.

There are days that I can hardly hear the thought of you being gone. But I have memories of your sweet smile and you and I sitting for hours just talking;

There's not a day that goes by that I don't think of you;

I wish I could turn back the hands of time, and sit and tell to you, mother, the way we used to do.

You were always there when I needed you—That's how mothers are;

Even though I took so many things for granted, you knew that I loved you, and will never forget you.

Your Daughter misses you,
Brenda

In Loving Memory

Of Wilven Bascom Harris
For his birthday Sept. 14, 1984
His life touched the earth
Like a breeze

Here then gone...
But in his brief stay
He left an impression
Maybe only as the rustling of leaves, rippling of water, or shifting of sand.

We can never forget the effect of the breeze, or the way
He touched our lives.

Sadly missed by his mother, brother, and sisters.

In Memory

Of Eugene Phillips

It has been six years since you've been gone but to me it doesn't seem that long. Sitting here writing this poem of you. It is another one I can book. It is of your life someone here on Earth took.

I have other children. I love them, too, but only God in heaven knows how much I really love you.

I can tell many people how I feel but they wouldn't understand unless they had one laid on the hill.

I often dream of you; you are so plain to see—you are as pretty as you were here with me.

I have tried to figure out what really happened that day, and who fired that shot that took my son away.

I go to your grave with tears in my eyes, but I know God took you to live in the sky.

This poem was written from your mother's hand and thoughts, from my heart.

Wood In Our Lives: Products from the National Forests

Plywood: A Modern Wood Product

Way back in the 1850s Henry David Thoreau sat in his wilderness haven at Walden Pond and wrote: "It is remarkable what value is still put upon wood even in this age and in this new country—a value more permanent and universal than that of gold."

Today in America wood is still an essential material in every industry—from the construction of buildings of every type to the manufacturing of furniture and other products to transportation to shipping.

One of the ways the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service helps to ensure a continuing supply of wood to meet America's present and future needs is through research on wood utilization conducted at the Forest Products Laboratory in Madison, Wisconsin. The Laboratory was established by the Forest Service in 1910 in cooperation with the University of Wisconsin. Since that time this Laboratory has been a respected leader in the research of improved wood utilization. The findings of scientists at the Laboratory have led to the development of new, improved wood products. Among these developments is a product called plywood.

Plywood is made of thin layers of knife-cut wood—called veneer—bonded together with the grains of wood arranged at right angles. Wood is stronger along the grain than across the grain. Thus, when the direction of the grain is turned 90 degrees with each successive layer or ply of wood, the resulting material is equally strong at all points. Pound for pound, plywood is stronger than steel.

A hardwood log is peeled for plywood on a powered back-up roll. The powered back-up roll was invented by the U.S. Forest Service's Forest Products Laboratory in Madison, Wisconsin.

When plywood was first developed, its use was restricted to interiors, places where it would remain dry. But, with the discovery of superior adhesives, plywood is used widely in outdoor construction. Nowadays, it is found everywhere, in exteriors of houses, in paneling, in furniture, cabinets, even boats. In addition to its strength and its ruggedness, plywood conserves precious wood. More expensive grades of wood are used for the top ply, while less attractive pieces made from less valuable species are used for the inner layers. Thus, valuable wood is conserved. Nothing is wasted.

Eighty-four percent of all plywood used in the United States is manufactured from either the Douglas-fir or the Southern pine.

Presently, the majority of plywood manufacturing plants are located on the Pacific Coast, a region where the vast forests of the majestic Douglas-fir flourish. Immense quantities of the massive Douglas-fir—200 feet in height, yards in diameter—grow in the Willamette National Forest in Oregon. This National Forest, which is a prime source of Douglas-fir veneer logs for plywood, sold an astounding 442,667,000 board feet of Douglas-fir in 1982. This timber, when cut, will generate $66,152,132 for the U.S. Treasury. Moreover, it will add immensely to the economy of then surrounding community—creating 3,000 jobs and contributing some $800 million to the local area.

A recent advance in plywood technology is the Powered Back-up Roll (PBR), developed by scientists at the Forest Products Laboratory. To make plywood, logs are peeled on a veneer lath. The Powered Back-up Roll is a device that supplies an auxiliary force to turn the logs, which prevents the log from "spinning out." Spin-out ruins the log for plywood use. In addition, the PBR peels logs down to a thinner core, thus enabling fuller utilization of a precious resource.

The PBR, which has performed successfully in tests at a plywood plant in Washington State, is expected to save the plywood industry $75 million a year. The Forest Service has applied for a patent in the public's name, so that this device may benefit the entire public.

Plywood and other wood products developed through research are examples of forest conservation through wise use of its products.

Major Reform Urged In Ky. Tax System

A recent study by a University of Kentucky professor strongly suggests the need for major tax reform in Kentucky.

At a tax policy conference in Lexington last week, political scientist David Lowery released an 85 page document calling for significant changes in the state's tax system. The conference was sponsored by the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition and the Commonwealth Tax Policy Education Group.

Lowery said Kentucky needs to find better ways to export taxes, having consumers or corporations in other states pay, rather than forcing Kentuckians to finance more of governmental operations.

One such tax would be to institute a property tax on coal in the ground, Lowery said. The burden of an unmined minerals tax would be paid mainly by large corporations headquartered out of Kentucky, the associate professor said. Lowery's study also promotes the idea of higher business taxes, citing figures that Kentucky is among the lowest states when total business taxes are taken into consideration.

"There's virtually no evidence that further tax giveaways will do anything to increase business activity in Kentucky," Lowery explained at the conference.

The state should not look for revenues from sales tax increases, a lottery, or through a flat rate income tax, he said. Kentucky needs to raise taxes through a tax on horses, a progressive income tax and from an increase in the severance tax, according to the document.

A proper combination of tax levies could be raised in the state while cutting taxes for the average Kentucky resident, Lowery said. For example, a two percent raise in the coal severance tax, an unmined minerals tax, and a progressive income tax could net the state about $250 million per year, according to Lowery's projections.

A copy of the report is available from the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition, P.O. Box 864, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, 41653, for $5.00.

Huntin' and Fishin'

By DOUG HENSLEY
7th District Commissioner,
Kentucky Department of Fish
And Wildlife Resources

Good hunting and fishing days are upon us. The weather is starting to cool off and the leaves are beginning to turn. The fall season is a beautiful time of year to enjoy the fish and wildlife resources of our state.

Even though the summer of '84 is history, the Department of Fish & Wildlife has to be proud of the job they've done this past summer. The Division of Fisheries has stocked many of our lakes, streams and ponds and conducted many studies throughout the state to enhance our fishing opportunities.

Our Conservation Education Department has also had a very successful year at camp. We've had many improvements in our camps and accommodated more than 6,000 campers. I'm sure our kids will never forget the great learning and fun experiences they had at Conservation Camp.

While we're on the subject of education, there will be a Hunter Safety course offered at the Hazard Community College, starting Sept. 27 at 6:30 p.m., and also at the Whitesburg Elementary School, starting Oct. 4 at 6:30 p.m. This course is for anyone over the age of 10, and is required in this state for kids under the age of 16 wanting to hunt on our management areas. You know, many states have already enacted this course as a requirement before anyone can hunt. If you're planning to hunt in another state, be sure to check to see if the Hunter Safety course is required.

One big event coming Oct. 25 at the Woodland Motel & Restaurant in Hazard is the first annual Ducks Unlimited dinner sponsored by the newly formed Southeast Kentucky Ducks Unlimited Committee. Ducks Unlimited is a great organization that raises millions of dollars each year to protect our fish and wildlife resources. If anyone is interested in tickets to a dinner that the whole family can enjoy, write or call me and I'll give you all the information needed.

I wonder if anyone is finding any squirrels in eastern Kentucky. Most hunters are not, probably due to the spotty mast crop last year. However, I think one can find a few squirrels later on in the season when the young start getting away from the den. Squirrel hunting later in the fall enhances a hunter's chances for a limit of squirrels and decreases his chances of encountering a copperhead or rattlesnake.

The Knott county deer stocking program will continue as soon as the weather gets cool enough to transport the deer. We should be able to finish the stocking program in Knott county by early 1985. Because of the great public acceptance of the deer in the county, I have every expectation that the deer stocking program will be a tremendous success.

The time is nearing to decide where to establish our next deer stocking area. A few areas are being considered, but several questions must be answered before stocking a particular area. Does that county or counties have a dog warden and a dog pound? Will the public accept the deer? Are local conservation clubs active and willing to help? Is there sufficient habitat to support a deer herd? Although these questions have to be answered, the bottom line is that if the people want deer bad enough, they'll have to be willing to sacrifice the effort to achieve this goal.

Another item that may be of interest to sportsmen of eastern Kentucky is the establishment of a Wildlife Management Area at Paintsville Lake in Johnson county, and also a possible Management Area at Fishtrap Lake in Pike county. The establishment of Wildlife Management Areas, not only in eastern Kentucky, but all over the state, will go a long way to help in the restoration of our fish and wildlife resources.

At our last Department of Fish & Wildlife Commission meeting, we recognized George Wright, our turkey biologist, for his outstanding effort in establishing a successful wild turkey program in Kentucky. Through this stocking program Elliott county and the Paintsville Lake Wildlife Management Area will receive turkeys this year. We have excellent turkey habitat here in eastern Kentucky and I anticipate good turkey hunting in the near future for our counties.

Our 1985 spring turkey season will be a week later and the Commission voted to prohibit the use of muzzle-loading rifles to hunt turkey. The reason for this is that scopes are being used and many turkeys are hit and not recovered from long-range shots. Also, these long-range shots present a great danger to other hunters in the area. Fort Knox and the Pioneer Weapons Area are the only exceptions to this change in regulation.

Waterfowl seasons were also set at our last commission meeting. The first phase of duck season will begin Nov. 20 and continue through Nov. 25, with the second part of this split season set for Dec. 8 through Jan. 20.

Goose season will open Nov. 20 and run through Jan. 20. However, in the western zone, goose season will open Jan. 7 and run through Jan. 31 or until a quota of 7,000 geese is harvested. Duck and goose hunting on the Ballard Wildlife Management Area will begin Jan. 9 and run through Jan. 31, or until the quota is reached. Hunting on the Ballard WMA is by drawing only and hunters will be allowed two hunting days.

Sportsmen, if you have any questions about this year's seasons, hunting and fishing guides are available from me, conservation officers, county clerks, various sporting good stores, or anyone that sells hunting and fishing licenses.

Remember, every year the hunting and fishing opportunities get better. I believe this trend will continue if we all do our part. Sportsmen, join a fish and wildlife organization, support your local conservation officer, share your fish and game with the landowners, take your family hunting and fishing, share some of that hunting and fishing with others, but, most important, be concerned and dedicated sportsmen.

If anyone has any comments or suggestions, feel free to write or call Box 775, Hazard, Ky. 41701, or 606-436-2526 at home or 606-439-1703 at work.

Good huntin' and fishin'.

OPEN LETTER TO FLOYD COUNTY

Regional Medical Center
 McDOWELL, KENTUCKY 41647

Dear Neighbors,
 One of my major commitments has always been to participate with my colleagues in improving the quality of medical care in our community. I am very excited about a new program now available at the Regional Medical Center as we announce our association with the Columbia Healthcare Association and Columbia Medical Centers.

There are many health services needed by those in our community, whether they have a major medical insurance program or no insurance coverage at all. Our staff of dedicated health professionals is anxious to provide the best possible medical care at an all time, exceptionally low annual cost.

The Columbia Medical Center approach combines the very latest computer technology, medical research and diagnostic tools to provide your family with the support you need to maintain your health and quality of life. By discovering and treating illnesses before they become serious is a sure way of attaining these goals.

Please come in and see us and learn about our new Columbia Healthcare Association. The CHA philosophy is to spend a little to stay well rather than a lot to get well.

Yours in Health,
DR. Mary Hall

Sandy Dennis

'THE EXECUTION'— Sandy Dennis, Loretta Swit, Jessica Harper, Barbara Barrie and Valerie Harper are in Los Angeles filming "The Execution," an NBC movie that will air next season. The actresses star as housewives who plot the death of the sadistic Nazi doctor who tortured them while they were in a concentration camp 40 years ago. Rip Torn, who won an Oscar nomination for his performance in "Cross Creek," stars as the ex-Nazi doctor who lives under an alias near the women. Paul Wendkos, who directed the highly acclaimed NBC miniseries "Celebrity," will direct.

'CAMILLE' — Though Alexandre Dumas's classic novel 'Camille' has been filmed four times already — most people cry even thinking about Greta Garbo's poignant 1936 performance — it's being done again. The new version, being produced in France for "Hallmark Hall of Fame," stars another Greta — Greta Scacchi — as Camille. Her lover Armand will be portrayed by Colin Firth. Ben Kingsley, who won the 1982 Oscar for his role as "Gandhi," will star as Duval, Armand's outraged father and John Gielgud will play the Duke de Charles.

A HAIRY SITUATION — Barbara Mandrell fans will be in for a surprise when they tune in to catch the country singer making her dramatic acting debut in "Burning Rage," a CBS movie airing Friday, Sept. 21. For her role as Kate Bishop, a geologist sent by the government to investigate suspicious fires in a small Appalachian town, Miss Mandrell cut her trademark hairstyle short. Why didn't she just wear a wig? "I tried that once when I disguised myself on a visit to Disney World," she says, "But after a few hours it hurt so much I got a bad headache."

Barbara Mandrell

GOLDEN DEBUT — Gymnast Bart Conner, who won a 1984 Olympic gold medal in the parallel bars competition, will guest star on an upcoming episode of the NBC series "Highway to Heaven."

PAPER DOLLS

Nicolette Sheridan (l.) and Terri Farrell are models in the dazzling, highly competitive world of fashion on "Paper Dolls," premiering TUESDAY, SEPT. 18 on ABC.

The BOX SEAT

A losing club still offers pleasure

By Adam Beckerman

Much to the consternation of baseball's non-contenders, college football now dominates the tube from noon to midnight on Saturdays during the late summer and early fall months. But you've got to figure that back in November 1983, when major league baseball's 1984 schedule was first issued, both the Boston Red Sox and their non-cable carrier station, WSBK, assumed next weekend's series in Baltimore against the defending world champion Orioles would be one that would bear some significance on the outcome of the American League's Eastern Division race, and thus garner strong — if not outstanding — ratings.

Well, everyone was wrong. The Detroit Tigers more or less settled the division race by mid-May. And so now, a Saturday night matchup once considered attractive enough to feature on the 69-game WSBK television schedule begins one half hour after a College Football Association game on ESPN or an SEC get-together on Ted Turner's WTBS.

And the question is: With all that college pigskin, will anybody notice a ballgame between two mathematically eliminated clubs?

"If we're not doing well we're going to lose viewer support," admits James Healey, director of marketing and broadcasting for the Red Sox.

Mike Boddicker

Boston will be bringing south rookie pitcher Roger Clemens, who recently came within two of tying the Sox' single-game strikeout record of 17. Maybe, if WSBK is lucky, it'll be Clemens vs. last post-season's pitching wiz, Mike Boddicker. Maybe Clemens will send signals to those Boston fans, whose patience hasn't yet worn through, or whose skepticism hasn't thickened to the point of callousness, that their hit-happy Sox will not be so one-dimensional come next season.

Watching baseball being played just because the season isn't over yet is strangely soothing, almost humbling, often reassuring. A ground ball still gets fielded with as much care as one would take bagging the raked autumn leaves.

State School Officials Hail Program Benefits

By SUSAN MCDONALD

Positive feelings, improvement in test-taking skills and community involvement in schools are a few of the initial benefits of the School Effectiveness Project, according to officials in the Kentucky Department of Education and in participating school districts.

Although the program is only two years old, educators are pleased with the results achieved so far and are giving the program partial credit for this year's improved test scores. Almost all participating districts, including Floyd county, bettered their scores.

All but one of the 21 participating public school districts posted higher scores this year on the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills, and one district maintained the level achieved last year.

"We are very pleased with the results achieved by these districts," Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said.

"Schools can clearly improve their own efforts, but in districts where a cycle of discouragement has prevailed for a period of time, the School Effectiveness Project approach can overcome it."

McDonald attributed the gains to a concentration on "time on task," or time devoted to instructional activities; the construction of positive attitudes; and improved instructional leadership.

Because the program is still young and many factors are involved in school improvement, department officials are hesitant to call the project a miracle-worker, despite the improved test scores.

Kay Anne Wilborn, director of the department's Division of School Improvement, said, "We feel that it is a really good project, but I don't think you can obtain a true reading for two or three more years."

The School Effectiveness Project was initiated two years ago to help lower-ranked districts analyze and improve instructional practices.

Twenty-five districts were initially invited to take part in the program. They were targeted primarily because they had the lowest scores on the CTBS.

Ten districts agreed to participate in the pilot project during the 1982-83 school year, and 11 more joined during the second year.

Teams of education officials visited participating districts and found that the most prevalent problems involved lack of curriculum materials, minimal community involvement, lack of instructional leadership, lack of high expectations and lack of rewards for teachers and students.

Department of Education staff members then conducted in-service training sessions, leadership conferences and other activities, and helped each district compose an improvement plan to meet its specific needs.

"The crucial thing seems to be awareness," Wilborn said. "We try to see that the districts become more aware of how to use their test results, have them think about rewards for teachers and students and encourage them to improve their school-community relations."

The program also tries to acquaint parents with ways to help their children do well in school.

"Simple things like making sure children go to bed at a reasonable hour and have proper nutrition make a big difference," Wilborn said.

"We also try to encourage high expectations for all children, not just the ones who are consistently at the top of the class."

Officials in participating districts spoke highly of the project, although most agreed that other factors were also involved in their increased test scores.

Nancy Stout, instructional supervisor in the Spencer County school system, said diagnostic use of test results, practice in test-taking skills and an improved self-image were among the factors involved in her district's improvement.

"I do feel the School Effectiveness Project has been a big factor, although we began working on some of those problems about five years ago," she said.

"This has been the first time we've had a team to take an objective look at the district. They've reinforced some of the good things as well as working on our problems. We've improved our self-concept and raised our expectations."

John Willis Smith, superintendent of the Jackson county schools, agreed that increased awareness had been a factor in his district's higher scores.

"We've increased our awareness about the test scores and how to use them," he said.

"We've also placed greater emphasis on attendance and improved our communication with the community. We've been getting some articles in the paper about school activities, and we've improved our internal communications."

Pineville Independent Schools Superintendent Ronald F. Jones said that although his district had only been involved with the project a short time, it had made a difference.

"Utilizing our test results in the classroom has been very helpful to us," Johnson said.

"Teacher evaluations and rewards for the kids have also been effective. When we've been involved longer, we hope to see an increase in parent involvement."

Pineville was the big winner in this year's CTBS results, with overall scores rising 22.3 points. The Clinton county system, also a participant in the School Effectiveness Project, recorded a gain of 12.1 points.

Nine participating districts increased their scores by between five and 10 points, including Casey, Floyd, Jackson, Leslie, Magoffin, Martin, Rockcastle and Spencer counties and the Covington Independent district.

Nine other systems recorded increases of up to five points. They were Breathitt, Harlan, Knott, Lawrence, Letcher, McCreary, Menifee and Whitley counties and the Richmond Independent schools.

Providence Independent Schools maintained the same results as last year, but that score was 2.7 points higher than its average in 1982, the year before the School Effectiveness Project began.

State Agencies With U.S. Help Wage Fight on Adult Illiteracy

By FRAN SALYERS
The most recent unemployment roster included more than 9.5 percent of the Kentucky labor force. More than 20 percent of the state's adults are "functionally illiterate," unable to read or write well enough to cope with many of the demands of daily life.

Department of Education officials believe that the link between adult illiteracy and unemployment is a strong one and are joining forces with another state agency to break it. Their efforts are attracting national attention.

The Department of Education, with its long-established network of adult education programs, and the Cabinet for Human Resources, with funding provided under the federal Job Training Partnership Act, are attacking the problem of adult illiteracy in Kentucky. It is no small problem.

According to department statistics, Kentucky ranks last among the states in the educational attainment of its adult population. Forty-seven percent of the state's adults 25 years of age and older do not have high school diplomas.

The Department of Education has offered adult education programs since 1966 and now serves more than 23,000 people every year. Now, with funding from Human Resources, the department is expanding adult education services.

The funds go to local agencies that help adults learn to read better. The total allocation for 1983-84 totaled $213,233. This year's allocation is still being negotiated, but Department of Education officials expect a substantial increase.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald calls the liaison between Education and Human Resources a "productive linkage" that is meeting a genuine need.

"Most of the adults who enroll in adult education tell us their enrollment is employment-related. They want to get a job or get a better job," McDonald said.

"Many have low incomes and are eligible for the kinds of training programs offered through Human Resources, but they can't read or write well enough to take advantage of the programs.

"This project helps them jump that hurdle, to prepare themselves for training so they can prepare themselves for jobs. The average age of project participants is 29, which means each has 25 or more years of employment ahead."

McDonald said the Job Training Partnership Act funds allowed a substantial increase in the number of adults served by adult education programs last year. In 1983-84 the project financed 21 local programs that in three months of operation served 750 students new to the adult education system, she said, and those students made significant academic progress.

"For every 75 hours of instruction they received, students in the project averaged gains of 1.37 grade levels in their reading skills," McDonald said. "Gains like that make us know the program is getting the job done."

Sharon Darling, director of the Department of Education's Division of Adult Education, believes the project has been successful because it uses an existing adult education network and proven teaching methods.

All local programs financed by the project are based on the Jefferson County Adult Reading Program, which Darling said has become a national model and has been adopted by more than 200 school districts in the United States.

"This teaching plan has exceeded our most optimistic expectations," she said. "The U.S. Department of Education has named it an exemplary program because it is a more efficient method of teaching reading and retraining adult students than other adult education programs in the nation."

The Jefferson County Adult Reading Program was developed with financing from the state Department of Education. It has been disseminated nationwide through the National Diffusion Network, a federal funding system that makes exemplary education programs available to schools, colleges and other institutions.

One of the project-finding local programs used the Jefferson County method to teach adults with physical or mental disabilities. The Eastern Kentucky Comprehensive Rehabilitation Center in Thelma (Johnson County) served 40 disabled adults in 1983-84.

"The program is a unique collaboration between the National Diffusion Network, the Jefferson County Adult Reading Program, the Cabinet for Human Resources, and the Adult Education and Vocational Rehabilitation divisions of the Department of Education," Darling said. The program was featured in June at a national conference on combining resources and information to improve literacy services to adults with disabilities.

"At that conference, Kentucky emerged as a leader in the networking concept," Darling said. "Requests for more information have come from 34 states."

She added that the success of the program in Thelma has prompted Department of Education staff members to begin work on a stronger network between the agency's adult, community, vocational and special-education programs and vocational rehabilitation efforts.

A resource guide for adult services is being produced as a part of the networking project.

Kentucky Homes Host White House Evictee

The crickets that were keeping President and Mrs. Reagan awake last week may have been evicted and found their way to the Bluegrass state.

Extension entomologist Lee Townsend, with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, said cooler weather in Kentucky will cause the noisy little critters to begin coming into homes.

Hank Lindsey, press secretary for Gov. Collins, said the state's top executive has not lost any sleep due to the insect serenades that bothered the Reagans.

But Townsend said many other people around the state are likely to find themselves playing host to the bothersome bugs.

Crickets are not associated with income levels or degrees of sanitation, they can be found in homes ranging from executive mansions to travel trailers. And even the neatest housekeeper is not immune to their visits.

But aside from their noisy habits, crickets pose no threat or danger to humans.

"They aren't really biters, they can (bite) but generally don't. They have relatively sharp spines and legs that may poke you if you handle them," Townsend said.

Crickets are not associated with any diseases in humans, and they do not eat their way into food packages.

"They're scavengers, they'll eat crumbs or dead insect parts, perhaps nibble on a houseplant. Generally they're feeding on grass outside and will wander in, especially as nights get cooler," Townsend said.

Townsend said the insects are no threat to pets or even babies who might get hold of one and put it in their mouth.

The crickets are not likely to take up permanent residence in homes.

"A light tan cricket, generally sold as fish bait, might become established in the house, but these crickets, dark brown crickets, are field crickets and they won't. They'll eventually go away of their own accord," Townsend said.

But for those who don't want to wait until they go away of their own accord, Townsend recommended cricket baits and some preventive measures.

"If possible, caulk or close cracks that allow crickets entry, and keep outdoor night lights off. These can attract insects that will enter the house.

"Reducing cricket numbers around the house by outdoor treatments is preferable to spraying insecticide indoors," Townsend said.

Another reason for treating outdoors and trying to prevent the creatures from getting into the house is the Oriental belief that crickets in the house are a sign of good luck, and that they should not be killed indoors.

Dr. and Mrs. Wells Heads Parents Weekend At Morehead State

Dr. Randall Wells and his wife, Mrs. Sue Wells, have been named co-chairpersons of Morehead State University's 1984 Parents Weekend.

The annual event, set for Sept. 14-16 this year, offers parents of students the opportunity to visit the campus and meet students, faculty and staff of MSU. A dinner, breakfast, concert and golf tournament highlight the weekend activities.

"We are hoping for a really good turnout," said Dr. Wells, a professor of education. "This is a perfect opportunity for parents to spend time with their son or daughter in the University atmosphere."

Mrs. Wells is an associate director of the Division of Student Activities and Organizations.

Every parent of a MSU student is an automatic member of the MSU Parents Association. Dr. and Mrs. Wells are former association members. Their daughter, Troy Lynn Wells, is a 1981 MSU graduate.

For more information on Parents Weekend or the Parents Association, contact Dr. and Mrs. Wells at Morehead State University, UPO 1322, Morehead, Ky. 40351.

Seven Floyd Projects Slated for Improvement

One bridge and six roads in this county are scheduled for improvement, State Transportation Secretary Floyd G. Roore announced last week. The projects are:

A deck overlay on a bridge on KY 1210, the Blue River-Martin road (Manton); repaving the existing surface on one mile of County Road 5133, the Branham's Creek road, and .8 mile of County Road 5113, the Pike-Floyd Hollow road; place bituminous initial treatment surface on .2 mile of County Road 5014, the Daniels Creek road, and .2 mile of County Road 5116, the Coldwater road; and do bituminous patching on 2.6 miles of KY 1100, the Whitaker road, and 9.6 miles of KY 1427, the Abbott Creek road.

These projects are estimated to cost a total of $184,378 and are being financed with Rural Secondary funds.

The two bituminous patching projects are to be done by state forces and will be worked into the schedule as soon as time will permit. The remainder of the projects are expected to be accomplished by contract and will be advertised for bids as soon as possible.

The latest consumer scam is the "carbon con," warns the September Reader's Digest. Thieves use discarded carbons from credit record slips to get your number. Once they have it, they can order items by phone or mail or sell it to an operation that prints phony credit cards.

John C. Hall
Founder
Hall Funeral Home

IS THERE REALLY A PURPOSE FOR A FUNERAL
Many social and personal customs undergo changes and are criticized as obsolete and void of purpose. Funeral customs and directors have not escaped these critics. However, these very criticisms have given strength to the tradition of funeral service, because it has caused the public to think seriously about the purpose of the funeral.
The funeral provides, of course, for the proper disposition of the body. It also provides a service of love and caring for the living, those who place value in life and pay respect to the dignity of man.
The funeral is generally a basic religious rite just as the baptism and the marriage ceremony. It provides a time for friends, neighbors and associates to express group support and compassion for the bereaved.
The funeral director is professionally trained to provide a compassionate and understanding service during the difficult emotional experience of death. We are at your service, whenever needed.

Squirrel Festival Scheduled Sunday

"A kind of community gathering" is how organizers describe the Stone Mountain Squirrel Festival, which is gearing up for its fifth annual meet next Sunday on Sizemore Mountain between Minnie and Wayland.

There will be music and games—including a greased pig contest, sack race, greasy pole and horseshoe pitching—and a menu featuring squirrel, squirrel gravy, roast pig and groundhog.

Visitors are invited to bring a picnic lunch if they like but organizers warn no drugs or alcohol will be tolerated.

Scientists at the University of California believe the sun may have a companion star that passes so close to the Earth every 28 million years that it could destroy all life on this planet, reports International Wildlife magazine.

Clinic Can Help When They Click, Pop, Catch or Lock

By MARY MARGARET COLLIVER
"Between 40-60 percent of the population have problems with facial pain and the function of the jaw at sometime or other in their lives. For most of our patients we are the end of the line for these complex problems that are often difficult to diagnose," says Dr. Jeffrey Okeson, director of the facial pain and temporomandibular disorder pain center and associate professor of restorative dentistry, University of Kentucky College of Dentistry.

"For some there is no pain involved, just clicking and popping of the jaw; for others the pain is often unbearable," states Okeson.

Located on the second floor of the Warren Wright University Medical Plaza, four UK College of Dentistry faculty members staff the facial pain clinic, in which 5-20 patients are seen each week. The UK program is unique in that it is the only one of its kind in the state.

The center is specifically designed to aid the patient experiencing facial and temporomandibular joint area pain. This involves, diagnosis, treatment and prevention. Patients with these types of problems are most always referred to the UK program by their regular dentist or physician. Referrals not only come from Kentucky, but also from West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana.

Okeson describes two classic examples of patients he treats. "One typical patient has a disorder which originates from the function of the jaw joint—a disc interference disorder. His or her classic symptoms are clicking, popping, catching or locking of the jaw. The second example is a patient who has muscle problems; moving the jaw hurts the facial muscles. This problem could be related to hyperactivity of the muscles."

Diagnosing what causes the pain and joint problems is the difficult part. Being a good listener and counseling patients on their lifestyle is an important aspect in the treatment modality chosen.

"Some people are totally unaware of their habits," says Okeson. "We need a certain amount of stress each day, but some of us manifest this stress in different ways. For instance, clenching your teeth while driving a car or studying for a big exam increases the muscle activity of the head and neck. This can cause a great deal of discomfort."

According to Okeson, "People under stress tend to clench their teeth more while sleeping, especially during their dream cycle. We try to help these patients find the source that is causing this stress before we can begin treatment. If the cause of stress can be controlled, then we may not have to use medication or an appliance."

One such treatment modality often used is a splint, better known as a bite guard. "The jaw joint can be running a marathon with talking, chewing and clenching," says Okeson. "Using a splint is like using crutches—it unloads the joint, gives it a rest and helps in the healing process."

Jo Ann Lutts of Lexington, a patient referred to the facial pain center from a local dentist, says she had unbearable jaw pain before her problem was diagnosed and treatment began.

"My problem started when I was out shopping and decided to grab a candy bar. I opened my mouth and my jaw locked. It was very painful and I could not open any further. I was finally able to close my mouth, but I was still in a lot of pain," says Lutts. In addition she said her jaw made popping and crackling sounds.

She immediately contacted her regular dentist who treated her for muscle spasms and prescribed a mild tranquilizer. When this did not work, a muscle relaxant was given.

"That didn't help the problem...I still had pain. My contacts wouldn't even stay in my eyes because of the muscle relaxant. It hurt to bite into a thin hamburger, so I ate lots of mashed potatoes and drank milkshakes," she says. After that, she was referred to the facial pain center by her dentist.

"On my first visit, Dr. Okeson made two painless adjustments to my jaw with his hands to give me a wider opening," says Lutts.

After the initial visit, she was fitted with a splint to alter the jaw position, change her bite and pull the disc back into place. Lutts claims there was a noticeable difference after two weeks of treatment.

According to Okeson, "There has been an explosion of knowledge in this area of dentistry, especially in the last 10 years." The UK College of Dentistry uses this particular program as part of the teaching curriculum for fourth-year dental students.

Well known in the field of temporomandibular joint disorders, Okeson presents continuing education courses nationwide. For the last several years, he has also been invited regularly to several cities in Italy to lecture to various groups.

"Our center is here mainly to aid in the diagnosis of facial pain and temporomandibular joint problems, and to recommend treatment," says Okeson. He stresses that the center uses a multidisciplinary approach in diagnosing these problems. "We often work with physicians including neurologists, neurosurgeons, internists, ENT (ear, nose and throat) specialists, physical therapists and other dental specialists. After we recommend treatment and get it started, patients eventually go back to their referring dentist or physician."

If you are one of these people who have facial pain or jaw discomfort, don't despair. Jo Ann Lutts is one of those success stories. After several months of treatment at the UK facial pain center, she says, "Through Dr. Okeson's patience and counseling, it has helped me realize how stress can bring on jaw pain. With that and the treatment he prescribed, I have very little pain, if any."

Six-Hour School Day Problem... State's New Academic Program, Athletics on Collision Course

Members of the State Board of Education and the Kentucky High School Athletic Association will study ways to insure that athletics do not infringe upon the academic program of Kentucky schools at a joint meeting in November. Criticisms of a proposed regulation prohibiting athletic practice or games during the six-hour school day were aired at a public hearing in Frankfort last Wednesday. At least two Eastern Kentuckians argued that the regulation imposes a handicap on this section's schools because of difficulties in transporting student athletes to their homes following after school practise seasons. The regulation, which was approved by the state board in July, specifies the activities that are part of the instructional program and says that other activities are not to be allowed during the time provided for instruction. Laurel True, secretary of the State Board of Education, said a joint meeting between the board and the athletic association was recommended by Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald and board Chairman James Ratcliffe. The date has not been set. Tom Mills, commissioner of the athletic association, said members would like to discuss concerns about the scheduling of athletic events with members of the state board and to suggest some "alternatives or possibilities." Noting that scheduling must be done far in advance for most events, he asked for a one-year delay in implementation of the regulation and requested that school districts not be penalized for the loss of class time to athletics during the present school year. Under the regulation, districts devoting less than six hours a day to instruction would lose a portion of the state funds provided through the Minimum Foundation Program. Conley Manning, director of program development in the Office of Instruction, said the Department of Education "has never recognized athletic practice as instructional activity" and that practice for interscholastic sports would not be permitted as part of physical education classes. True said McDonald and the state board were not opposed to athletics but were "trying to make sure that the students of Kentucky get an education" by requiring a full six hours of instruction. State Supt. McDonald has repeatedly stressed the need to put greater emphasis on academic performance and called for the time provided for learning to be used solely for that purpose. She notified all school systems earlier that they would be held accountable for instruction six hours a day, 175 days a year, and that encroachments on that time would not be acceptable. The Department of Education has found "gross abuses of the six-hour school day" in some school systems, True said at the hearing. In some cases school has been dismissed for games and practice allowed during the school day, he said. "Unfortunately the total educational system in Kentucky is weighed by those few who abuse the system," he said. R.B. Singleton, superintendent of Knott County schools, urged that high schools be allowed to hold practice at the junior varsity level during the study period. Otherwise, many students will be unable to participate because of problems in obtaining transportation for after-school practice, he said. State Rep. Jim Maggard, D-Jackson, said the ban on practice during school hours would put mountain schools at a disadvantage. He recommended that athletic practice be allowed during the study period, saying, "It's part of the school day. It's part of physical fitness."

Paintsville Seminar To Study Law Changes

Recent changes in Kentucky's unemployment insurance compensation laws will be the focus of 11 seminars the Department for Employment Services will sponsor during October for employers. Targeted Jobs Tax Credit and on-the-job training programs also will be addressed at the meetings, which will be held in nine locations across the state.

The seminar for this section will be held Oct. 24 at the Carriage House, Paintsville.

"The 1984 legislature made several critical changes in laws governing unemployment insurance," said Employment Services Commissioner James Daniels. "One of the more significant changes affects the employer charged for a person's benefits. Under the old law benefits were charged to the employer for whom a person had most recently worked during a 30-day period. Under the new law, which became effective July 13, benefits are charged to the employer for whom a person had worked most recently over a 10-week period."

Another change Daniels cited affects representation at hearings of appeals on unemployment insurance claims. "A new law permits either party to have lay representation at hearings. A claimant may represent himself or herself, retain an attorney, or appoint someone else, such as a union representative, to represent him or her at an appeals hearing," Daniels said. "An employer may be represented by someone such as a company officer or a personnel manager."

The seminars also will feature a mock hearing and presentation on unemployment insurance protest and appeal rights and procedures.

Daniels said employers also will learn how to save money by using the department's services. "Staff in our local offices can recruit, interview and refer job applicants, which saves employers time and money," he said. "On-the-job training and Targeted Jobs Tax Credit programs can help defray the cost of training new workers."

Champion Lumberjack To Collect Extra $300

The Kentucky lumberjack champion of the 1984 Kentucky Logging Show will take home an extra $300.

The added purse, posted by Tibbal's Flooring Company of Oneida, Tenn., will be given in addition to prize monies won during the individual event competition during the Sept. 22-23 show at Morehead State University's Derrickson Agricultural Complex.

Lumberjacks will compete in horizontal chopping, two-person crosscut, stock chainsaw, "hot" chainsaw and axe throwing, with cash awards going to the first four finishers in each event. The overall Kentucky champion will win the $300 bonus.

The Kentucky Logging Show, cosponsored by the Kentucky Forest Industries Association and Morehead State University, also features a mule and horse pull, displays of logging equipment, a beauty pageant and a Saturday night concert.

Diabetes Classes Offered at HRMC

Don Hicks, laboratory supervisor, explains how blood glucose can be monitored at home during a recent session of Highlands Regional Medical Center's "Living Well With Diabetes" classes.

Free classes on "Living Well With Diabetes" continue this month at Highlands Regional Medical Center. HRMC provides four hours of instruction each month for diabetics and their families, in two two-hour class sessions.

The next class is scheduled for today (Wednesday) when topics discussed will be skin, foot and mouth care, medications, complications and how diabetics can maintain good control. The following Wednesday, Sept. 19, information will be presented on diabetic meal planning, exercise, urine testing and home blood glucose monitoring. Both classes run from 3 to 5 p.m.

Since diabetics share the same problems, problem-solving discussions are a key part of these classes. Recipes and other information of special concern to diabetics are also available, and diabetic refreshments will be served.

For more information on these "Living Well With Diabetes" classes, call Sue Wilkerson, HRMC Food Services director, at 886-8511, extension 556.

Kiwanis Bowl Queen

Although West Virginia won 26-0 over Eastern Kentucky in the Kiwanis Senior Bowl high school all-star game played at Williamson, August 11, Miss Linda Marie Whitten, of Prestonsburg, came away wearing the crown as the new Miss Kiwanis Senior Bowl Queen. She was selected from homecoming queens of all schools represented by players in the all-star game and was crowned by Miss West Virginia, Melanne Pennington.

Miss Whitten is the daughter of Charles and Clara Terry Whitten, of Prestonsburg, the granddaughter of Harold and Gertrude Whitten, and great-granddaughter of Mrs. Gladys Nolan, all of Mt. Carmel, Illinois.

In addition to having its homecoming queen chosen as Kiwanis Bowl Queen, John DeRossett, of Prestonsburg was named Kentucky Star of Stars in the game.

Meeting Scheduled To Elect Officers

The Harold-Allen-Prater Little League has scheduled a meeting to elect officers on Saturday, Sept. 15 at 2 p.m. at the Prater grade school.

Series Traces Jewish History

From the heights of the Sinai to the shores of the Dead Sea; from the Amphitheater at Delphi to the Roman Forum; from the ghettos of Germany and Poland to the kibbutzim of Israel, "Heritage: Civilization and the Jews" traces the history of the Jews, their influence, and interaction with and upon Western civilization. The nine-part series will air on Saturdays beginning on October 5, at 9:00 p.m. on KET.

The series begins with the birth of Western civilization and the emergence within the glittering empires of Mesopotamia and Egypt of a seminomadic people advancing a new idea of God above nature.

The programs explore how this small group of people influenced the world at large: the Greek and Roman empires, the birth of Christianity and rise of Islam, the turbulence of the Middle Ages, and the cultural achievements of the Renaissance.

Reasons Why FAIR-TRAC Equipment Is Better

Now, with the new FAIR-TRAC line of battery-powered equipment, Fairchild International can supply the mining industry with a scoop that has many distinct advantages over its competition. Here are just twelve to consider.

Stronger Center Section

Our ball-bearing center section has the capacity to withstand a 100,000 lb. radial load and a 300,000 lb. thrust load, which is 40% more strength than competitive models. Three grease points will grease the entire section and there are no brass bushings to wear out. The Fairchild Advantage... greater strength and fewer parts to replace.

A Larger Bucket

Our scoop bucket can hold 100 cubic feet while most scoops have a limit of only 94. The Fairchild Advantage... 550 pounds more coal per cycle.

Heavier Axles

Our axles have a 20" gear, extra heavy-duty bearings and a patented oil flow path to lubricate the bearings and seals. The Fairchild Advantage... added strength and easy maintenance.

Steel Wheel Hubs

Our hubs are made of steel, which can be repaired. The competition offers iron hubs, which can break and are not repairable. The Fairchild Advantage... less expensive maintenance.

Stronger Frame

Our heavy-duty frame is larger in size and stronger at crucial stress points. The Fairchild Advantage... greater strength.

Better Designed Control Box

All components in the control box have been arranged in a manner to assure easy maintenance. The Fairchild Advantage... easy access for less downtime.

Improved Operations Deck

A deeper, wider and elevated compartment. The Fairchild Advantage... more comfort and clearance.

Needs less power to operate the bucket

Full power is used to eject coal from the bucket, but a check valve reduces the amount of power needed to retract the cylinder. The Fairchild Advantage... longer battery life.

Less Capital Investment

With the FAIR-TRAC line of battery-powered equipment you not only get all of the above advantages, but your initial investment will be significantly less. The Fairchild Advantage... lower cost.

More Fairchild Advantages Include..

More powerful motors, lower parts cost, easier operational features.

Q. How can doctors recognize cancer cells in a biopsy?

A. When a biopsy (removal of a small piece of tissue by a surgeon) is performed, the tissue sample is sent to a pathologist for examination. A pathologist is a doctor who specializes in the laboratory study of normal and diseased body tissue.

Using a microscope, the pathologist examines the tissue specimen to determine if it is cancerous (malignant) or non-cancerous (benign). Normal cells have an orderly appearance in tissue. Also, they have the distinctive features of the organ from which they came. Cells from the thyroid gland, for example, are different than those from lymph nodes.

Cancer cells are disorganized. Although cancer cells usually bear some resemblance to the cells in the organ from which they came, their sizes and shapes vary, and they tend to be larger than normal cells. In addition, cancerous cells grow uncontrollably, piling on top of each other and forming unruly clumps.

If the tissue is malignant, the pathologist will perform additional tests on the specimen to gather more information. These tests will help identify the type of cancer cells present in the tumor and how fast they are reproducing. Special stains help to determine if blood or lymph vessels are involved. This information gives the patient's doctors important information which helps them to decide the proper course of treatment.
