

Male Strippers At Auxier Club Get 'Clean Bill'

Their large audience of women appeared well satisfied and the sheriff said they had broken no laws, but a troupe of male strippers who appeared recently at an Auxier nightclub may lead to a closer scrutiny of the county's clubs and bars.

County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. said The Warehouse, where a five-member group called Men of the Eighties appeared on a recent Friday night, did not have a current roadhouse license. But the procedure for renewing the county-issued licenses is unclear to many roadhouse operators and not consistently enforced, he admitted.

An order requiring operators to renew their license annually and to advertise their intention of doing so has been on the fiscal court books since last October and was scheduled to take effect January 1 this year, said Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo. But "nobody has done it," he said.

The reason, Stumbo said, is that County Clerk Carla R. Boyd, who is responsible for issuing the licenses, was never notified of the new order. Nor was he (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Court Supports Extra $1 Million For Holiday Inn

A group of developers came looking for another $1 million, but most visitors at Tuesday's meeting of the Floyd fiscal court would settle for a few loads of gravel.

The million dollars, it sometimes appeared, would come easier than the gravel.

The meeting—postponed from Friday, when only one magistrate and the county judge showed up—approved a request by the developers of a Holiday Inn on Katy Friend to increase by $1 million the industrial revenue bond issue for which they are seeking state approval.

The developers, who originally sought a $3 million bond issue for the motel, said a later cost estimate and a decision to add 15 rooms to the original design means they must now have $4 million to complete the project.

The fiscal court approved the application, which will be presented this week to the state Industrial Revenue Bond Oversight Committee. Approval by the state panel would mean investors in the motel would get a tax break, a feature that makes the bonds more marketable.

Maggie Dye, of Spewing Camp, said she and the 200 neighbors who signed a petition she sent around, would be satisfied with a creek crossing. Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo said he thought they would get it.

On two Bull Creek hollows, however, neighbors were not in such harmony and the court authorized the county attorney to seek restraining orders against some who have allegedly prevented county crews from working on the roads there. At the request of Henry Messer, the court decided to fill a section on Big Branch in order to get the road up out of the creek before winter; at the request of Shirleen Ousley, the same will be done on Conn Branch.

Not even Solomon, it seemed, could resolve a dispute among neighbors on Jacks Creek, although Hattie Burke argued strongly that she had right on her side. A road there, washed out by the May flood, needs to be restored and a creek dredged out; but the only remedy on which neighbors could agree would cost $3000 and the road may not even be part of the county road system, county officials said.

Floyd-Pike Bank Merger Hits Snag

The proposed merger of Pikeville National Bank and First Guaranty Bank of Martin was on hold this week and faced the possibility of losing entirely in the future.

A protest lodged by two Prestonsburg Banks, The First Commonwealth Bank and The Bank Josephine, asking federal regulators to deny the merger request on the grounds of antitrust violations created the roadblock. The protesting institutions contend that Floyd and Pike counties comprise a single market for banking services and that the merger of Pikeville National and First Guaranty would place the two banks here at a competitive disadvantage. Pikeville National claims in its application to the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland for approval of the merger that the two counties are separate banking markets.

A Cleveland bank spokesman was quoted as saying the process of defining market boundaries could delay approval of the merger for an indefinite time. Had not the question been raised, approval would have been possible within 60 days.

If the protest filed by the banks here is finally upheld, the merger plan would be dead, it was said. The Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland only a few days ago began its analysis of the situation before making recommendations to the Federal Reserve Board of Governors. There was no guess as to the time the process would require.

The Pikeville National-First Guaranty merger is not the first snag Pikeville National has run into in recent months. Its proposed merger with First Bank & Trust Co. of Ashland was dropped after disagreement as to merger terms, and plans to develop property acquired on North Lake Drive here have resulted in no more than the removal of residences occupying the land.

Veteran Finds Little Change On Visit to War II Scenes

Russell May sees the figure of a soldier on the wall of barn in front of which Mrs. May stood for photo. Can you?

To his wife, Eve, it was a new world, far removed from the sights and sounds of armies at war, but to Russell May, Prestonsburg artist, so little had changed that he could almost "see and hear what happened there 40 years ago."

It was what the Mays found, from their separate points of view, during their tour of Holland and Belgium a few weeks ago during the 40th anniversary of the liberation of Europe.

They were looking for those places where the 101st Airborne Division, of which May was a member, saw action during World War II—places like Bastogne, where the 101st fought in the Battle of the Bulge; Omaha Beach and the hedgerows in the nearby countryside into which 101st paratroopers dropped in the early hours of the invasion; others scattered in towns and hamlets.

"I stood in the same spots where we had eaten and slept and been in action 40 years ago, and it was just like it was when we left," May said. It was an eerie feeling.

The years, he said, have not dimmed the memories of those who were liberated. The 101st Airborne insignia which May wore on his lapel opened any door to him and his wife. The welcome given them was something to remember.

"We found real Southern hospitality there in Belgium and Holland," May said.

Before they left May photographed his wife against a background provided by the wall of a barn inside which the wounded were taken during the fighting there. The photo is of special interest to Mr. May, for it shows something that was not apparent at the time the picture was made. On the barn wall appears—clearly to him—the figure of an American soldier in battle fatigues.

How did the ghostly figure get into the picture? May surmises that it was the result of weathering of the barn wall over the years.

Council Considers Tax Rates to T.V.

In a lengthy regular session of the Prestonsburg City Council, members dealt with a variety of questions and problems, several posed by a number of local citizens who attended Monday night's meet.

The problem of surface water runoff in the City, which was emphasized dramatically during the heavy rains of the past spring when a number of homes on North Arnold Avenue were flooded, was brought up by Attorney Clifford Latta. Latta pointed to extensive use of dirt fills within the City for new business and home construction as a major culprit along with inadequate carrying capacity of culverts.

Latta referred to fills in the vicinity of Druther's Restaurant and the so-called Tourist Information Center as particularly damaging since those previously low-lying sections served, in earlier years, as sump areas.

"One of these days you're going to have to bite the bullet and put in a major downtown drainage system," Latta told the council. Otherwise, he said, "it will affect the integrity of our pumping station."

He supported his statements with a study recently completed by John Hill, engineer, and suggested that "something will have to be done by spring."

Council members recognized the urgency of the situation and discussed the possibility of installing larger pipe in the area of Friend Street to alleviate the runoff problem, at least, in the North Arnold section. Council will be briefed on the engineering report with a detailed discussion of the problem scheduled for the November 12 council meeting.

A number of citizens who attended Monday night's meeting came to protest a request by a Prestonsburg car

Drugs, Topic of Inservice Meet

Terry Buchanan, teacher at Prestonsburg Elementary, was one of three speakers featured during a county-wide teachers' inservice held here recently. With drug abuse the topic of the meet, Mrs. Buchanan spoke on incorporating drug education into existing curriculum in the schools, while Greg Walters commented on drugs from the student's point of view. In addition, Jim Recktenwald, Job Corps instructor who is involved with the Floyd County Drug Education Awareness Program, spoke on the county drug education group which is a part of the Kentucky War on Drugs program.

Judge, Officer Dispute Rights

The district judge and an auxiliary police officer sparred in court Thursday over the question of whether an auxiliary officer has arrest powers.

The issue came up with the case of Carl Trent Hicks, 20, of Blue River, who had been booked by Officer R.D. (Bob) Carpenter, an auxiliary with the Prestonsburg police department, on charges of drunk driving and driving on a suspended license.

District Judge Harold Stumbo said the law allowed auxiliaries to assist regular officers but not to make arrests on their own. The reason, he suggested, is that, unlike regular officers, auxiliaries are not bonded.

Carpenter noted that city auxiliaries are indeed bonded and said a state attorney-general's opinion supported their claim to have powers of arrest.

The dispute remained unresolved—"You get your attorney-general's opinion, let me get the statute and we'll see which is best," the judge told the officer—but the case was tried, nonetheless, Hicks pleading guilty to two reduced charges.

On an amended charge of public intoxication, the defendant was fined $10; on a reduced charge of driving without a license, he was fined $50 and given a 30-day suspended sentence. In accepting the reduced charges, Judge Stumbo noted that Hicks had a Breathalyzer reading of .07 percent, lower than the .1 percent at which a driver is presumed drunk, and the defendant denied that he was driving at the time.

(According to KRS 95:445, a city may create an auxiliary police force by an ordinance which must specify the number of officers and the rules governing their powers and duties. By a May 1, 1975 ordinance, the city of Prestonsburg created auxiliary officers "with all the powers and authorities" of regular officers, except that their power of arrest is limited to times they are on duty. The ordinance stipulates that they be bonded and City Manager David Evans said they are in fact bonded. A 1978 attorney-general's opinion supported the right of a fourth-class city to create an auxiliary force with powers of arrest, "not limited to the time they are on regular duty") (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

Former Floyd School Bus Driver Hero-Victim in Rescue Attempt

Those who remember his appearances 18 months ago at meetings of the Floyd Board of Education—a short, stocky man with a wide-brimmed hat and a handlebar mustache—will easily imagine his saying it: "Boys, we can't let them lay there and die."

That was what James Clevenger, formerly of Prestonsburg but most recently of Salyersville, told bystanders shortly before he rushed to the aid of three men overcome by methane fumes escaping from a Magoffin county sewer line last Thursday.

Clevenger, 44, and Farmer Howard, 44, one of the men he tried to rescue, died in the incident. Two other Salyersville men were seriously injured by the fumes.

The tragic chain of events began when Howard, an assistant manager of a Pic-Pac supermarket in the Wal-Lyn shopping plaza, was overcome by fumes after he had spent four hours trying to unclog a blocked sewer line. James Salyer, 45, a technician at the nearby Mineral Labs, and Terry Puckett, 17, a carryout at the supermarket, crawled into the 20-foot manhole where Howard lay but were themselves weakened by the gas.

That was when Clevenger, a foreman at Mineral Labs, entered the manhole. "Jim got half-way out with James (Salyer)," said a colleague, "and he said, 'Boys, I can't make it.' Those were his last words."

It was not the first time Clevenger had taken decisive action where he thought the safety of others was at stake. In March, 1983, when he was a bus driver in the Floyd schools system, he once refused to drive a bus he considered unsafe and he appeared several times at board meetings to argue for tighter mechanical inspections of school buses and tougher discipline for the children who rode them.

Clevenger was not rehired for the 1983-'84 school year and he set out last winter with his wife and nine children in search of a job elsewhere. With the help of a Salyersville pastor—who found the family hungry, destitute and living out of a station wagon—Clevenger got a job at Mineral Labs and was eventually able to buy a house near Falcon.

In a report to the state superintendent of public instruction in June, 1983, Floyd school officials took issue with Clevenger's assessment of the safety of school bus No. 73. Even among those who thought he was misguided, however, no one denied he cared.

Columbia Gas Wins Rate Boost

Floyd countians who burn natural gas supplied by Columbia Gas of Kentucky are in for higher bills as early as next month.

This uncomfortable situation is the result of a 5.72 percent rate increase approved for Columbia Gas by the state Public Service Commission last Friday. The increase will mean, it was estimated, $3.39 on the average residential bill per month.

The increase will add about $7.4 million to the company's annual revenues, according to the PSC.

Columbia Gas of Kentucky, a subsidiary of the Columbia Gas System, Inc., serves more than 112,000 customers in 20 counties, including Floyd. Their average monthly bills should increase from $59.84 to $63.23 under the PSC order it was predicted.

The commission also ordered a substantial decrease in Columbia's markup on the price of wholesale gas sold to small distribution companies. Columbia had been charging 62 cents per thousand cubic feet above its cost and wanted to increase the charge to 89 cents.

But the PSC reduced the added markup to 2 cents per thousand cubic feet, based on the company's testimony that that amount reflected its cost of service.

Columbia last asked for a rate increase in 1982, an officer said. The increase was not awarded until the summer of 1983.

Constance Parrish, a spokeswoman for the PSC, said that the order is effective now and that customers' bills will be higher next month.

The rate increase came in response to a Columbia request in April that it be permitted a 7.8 percent rate increase to provide an additional $10.16 million in revenues.

The company later amended the request to 8.77 percent, or $11.4 million, saying the additional money was needed to offset increased operating costs, capital costs and declining gas sales.

According to the PSC, a significant adjustment to Columbia's request was a $3.1 million reduction in the net investment rate base—the company has proposed a base of $52.4 million but the commission set a base of $49.3 million.

The commission similarly decreased the company's authorized return on equity. Columbia sought a 17.5 percent return; the PSC authorized a 15 percent return.

That rate of return "should not only allow Columbia to attract capital at reasonable costs to ensure continued service and provide for necessary expansion to meet future requirements but also should result in the lowest reasonable cost to the ratepayer," the PSC said.

The commission commended Columbia for its efforts to buy lower-cost gas and natural gas produced in Kentucky, and it asked that the company file semi-annual reports on those efforts.

Cervical cancer can be one of the most curable cancers if detected early through a Pap test, a simple painless test which takes only a few moments of a woman's time and could save her life.

The Floyd County Health Department is having a Pap clinic at the Floyd County Health Department and is open to women of all ages. Those women age 45 and over are especially urged to take advantage of this free service, since this is the high risk age for the disease.

There will be no nursing services at the Floyd County Health Department Monday, Oct. 29, and Tuesday, Oct. 30 due to the Regional Heart Clinic being held at the Health Department on those days.

"SCHOOL PRIORITIES-POLITICAL POWER, NUMBER ONE."

The Assistant Superintendent of Kentucky's Public Schools recently stated publicly that the priorities of the Floyd County School Board seemed to be "Political Power, Number One."

HENRY D. BAILEY

Why would the Assistant Superintendent say such a thing? All of us know that people with the same college degree who work in the superintendent's office make $30,000 per year while those teaching our children make an average of $12,000 per year less, but they are as qualified!!! During campaigns for school board member, many of these $30,000 per year employees campaign for the established school board, but they are only exercising their rights guaranteed under the Constitution. I have met many of these $30,000 per year employees campaigning for my opponent. They have that right and I support their right to vote for whomever they feel is the best candidate, the same as I support your right to vote.

I, for one, think the Assistant Superintendent is wrong. After all, we are talking about the education of our children. Everyone connected with the school board knows that professional educators are hired, promoted and given new contracts because they are competent. Besides, the courts have held that it is a CRIMINAL ACT for a school board member, or a candidate for the school board to promise employment or advantage to any person in order to gain political support or influence. Further, the Court has stated that the use of a political patronage system by a board of education is not only bad school policy, it is CRIMINAL CONDUCT. Our school board and our superintendent know this and they certainly would not violate the law. If this ever happened in Floyd County, our teachers, the largest professional group in our County, certainly would not stand for it.

Further, I believe that any candidate who must resort to "pressuring" school board employees to get out and campaign and vote for them has something to hide and is not comfortable running on the record they have achieved. Our superintendent told the State Board of Education that he and our Board were proud of their record and defended their record in achievement. When reminded that Floyd County Schools ranked 176 out of the 183 school districts in Kentucky, our superintendent, demonstrating the feeling of the Board in educational achievement, told the State Board, in effect, "somebody has to be last." That's telling 'em, Pete. However, if someone does have to be last, does it have to be Floyd County?

Friends, I run for the school board to represent the needs and concerns of the people on Left Beaver Creek and to see that our area, and all areas, are treated fairly. I will assist the Board in setting educational policy that strives to make Floyd County Schools the best in the state. I will never pressure or attempt to pressure anyone to vote for or against any candidate. I respect our teachers and our school employees. Together, we can move Floyd County to the head of the class.

Child's Fever, Seizure Could Signal Infection

By GUY A. O'CONNOR, M.D.

Perhaps one of the most difficult and stress-producing times for parents of young children occurs when their child has a fever. The child is hot, uncomfortable, often crying or lethargic, looks sick, and may or may not be vomiting.

Fever, in itself, however, is not usually a real medical problem, and, often, the child with a fever does not need immediate medical attention. However, when the child with a fever suddenly experiences a seizure, immediate medical attention must be sought.

To physicians, fever is not a diagnosis, but rather is a symptom. That is, a fever is a signal that something else is wrong—usually an infection. A temperature rise is a normal response of the body to an illness and thought to be a stimulus to its infection-fighting defenses.

Fever is defined as a rise in the body's basal temperature above an average normal value. This normal value will vary, depending upon just where the temperature of the body is measured. An oral temperature is normal at approximately 99 degrees Fahrenheit; a rectal temperature is normal at 100 degrees Fahrenheit; and an axillary temperature is normal at 98 degrees Fahrenheit. Fever, then, is any temperature above these normal values.

The height of the fever does not directly indicate the seriousness of the illness. In the determination of how severe the associated illness actually is, the severity of the accompanying symptoms, such as pain, difficulty breathing, severe nausea, vomiting or diarrhea, are much more reliable than the degree of temperature rise.

There are two major reasons for treating a fever. One is simply to allow the child to feel better. The second is to prevent a febrile seizure. The body, including the brain, is not damaged by temperatures in the range usually found associated with illness. However, a rapid rise in the temperature may cause a seizure, and this can and should be prevented.

About 1 child in 50 below the age of five years will have a seizure associated with a fever. The younger the child, the greater the chance of this occurring. Children who seize simply from a fever rarely suffer brain damage and do not develop lifelong seizure problems. This type of seizure is a self-limiting condition and rarely lasts longer than several minutes.

The febrile seizure has no direct relationship to the final level of the temperature or to the severity of the associated illness, and is thought to be related to the rapidity with which the temperature actually rises. That is, a rapid rise to 103 degrees is more often associated with a febrile seizure than a slow rise to 105 degrees.

During a seizure, a child should be turned on his or her side to allow any saliva to drain freely from the mouth and should be gently restrained and protected from injury in a lying position at a safe level. Nothing should be placed into the mouth or between the teeth.

Your physician can answer any questions on how and when to treat a fever in your child; however, any child who has a seizure associated with a fever can receive medical attention immediately at your local hospitals.

DAY HOMEMAKERS MEET

The old maxim, "They met, and they eat, then they got down to business," could well be applied to the members of the Day Homemakers at Friendship Hall of the First United Methodist Church last Tuesday afternoon. Following the devotional, the theme of which was "Unto the least of these," by Mrs. Mary Jane Brown, the hostesses, Mesdames Margaret Alley, Myrtle Allen, and Ann Alley assisted by Mrs. Jane Wallace, served a salad course. The business meeting followed.

The president, Mrs. Eleanor Horn, presided. Mrs. Becky Short made a report on the recent countywide luncheon-meeting, held here. Mrs. Frances Pitts reported that 602 cookbooks had been bought by homemakers and others in Floyd county. Mrs. Pitts reminded members of the ornament workshop to be held Oct. 10 at this church for the purpose of making decorations for the Christmas tree at May Lodge, which the Floyd County Homemakers will decorate this year. Members were reminded of the tin-punch workshop scheduled to meet at the Kentucky Power Company, at 7 p.m., Oct. 25, and were asked to call Mrs. Pitts' office if they wish to attend.

The group voted to make a donation of $50 to the local Hospice program, which was reported to be seriously in need of funds.

The following guests were introduced: Mrs. Lee Ann Johnson, home economist, from Magoffin county, guest of Mrs. Pitts; Mrs. Beverly M. Hackworth, guest of Mrs. Rebecca Rasnick; Mrs. Ruby Young, guest of Mrs. Mary Jane Brown; and Mrs. Betty Langeford, wife of the pastor of the church where the meeting was held. Mrs. Langeford, Mrs. Young and Mrs. Hackworth were welcomed as new members. Others in attendance were the hostesses and Mesdames Frances Pitts, Eleanor Horn, Judy Kittle, Dorothy Osborne, Nancy P. Webb, Stella Spurlock, Fannie Runnels, Barbara Dawson, Dorothy Burke, Rebecca Rasnick, Opal Dingus, Peg Hewlett, Lucy Regan, Becky Short, Rita A. Francis, Dolly Pettrey, May K. Roberts, Ruth Francis, Mary Jane Brown, Gladys Blackburn, and Dorothy Stover.

The Mayflower averaged under two miles per hour on route to America.

WAYLAND

CLUB HOSTS ANNUAL DINNER
Members of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club and their guests from the Drift and Wheelwright women's clubs were "in stitches" a number of times during the evening of Monday, Oct. 15, on the occasion of their annual daughter club dinner, which was held this year at the Allen Central High School lunchroom at Eastern.

The "stitches" administered by the speaker, who though a medical doctor in the person of Dr. Mary Pauline Fox, of Pikeville, were not produced by surgical instrument but by her very humorous anecdotes and personal experiences with which she began her talk and which were interspersed throughout her discussion. Dr. Fox remarked after the first sudden and prolonged outburst of laughter from her hearers that she had lowered their cholesterol, increased their heart rate, and improved their breathing as much as if they had run around their tables once or twice. She pointed out how essential it is to good health that people have laughter in their lives. The main theme of her speech, however, was on a very serious subject—the Club Collect.

Prior to the buffet style "turkey and trimmings" dinner and Dr. Fox's talk, devotions were given by Mrs. Marsella Bradley and the Pledge to the Flag was led by Mrs. LaFaye Hughes.

Those present were Ruby Akers, Beth Ward, Velva Reed, Mildred Salisbury, Anna Sue Stumbo, Celia Little, and Lynn Stumbo, from the Drift club; Alma Souleyrette, Betty Mullins, Ruth Daniels, Margaret Jones, and Lois Curry, from the Wheelwright club; Marie Mullins, LaEunice Dunfee, Lula Coburn, Marsella Bradley, Louise West, Blanche Bamer, LaFaye Hughes, Elizabeth Duff, Joyce P. Stevens, Maxine Martin, Elizabeth R. Martin, and Avanelle C. Wells, from the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland club, and the speaker, Dr. Fox.

The wedding took place at the First United Methodist Church of Prestonsburg, with the pastor, Dr. Lowell Langefeld, officiating.

The bride was attired in a winter-white ensemble with matching accessories. She carried a bouquet of white rosebuds and ivy.

Attendants were Miss Mary Bumgardner, of Prestonsburg, maid-of-honor, and Miss Marla Pitelko, of Louisville, bridesmaid. Mr. Rodgers served as his son's best man and Tommy Stover, brother of the bride, was the groomsman. Ushers, in addition to Master Stover, were Michael Alley, of Prestonsburg, and Phillip Albers, of Frankfort.

The mother of the bride wore a cranberry-colored chiffon dress with black accessories. The groom's mother was attired in teal blue with matching accessories. During the ceremony, the bride presented a long-stem white rosebud to her mother and the groom's mother.

A program of pre-nuptial music was presented by the Wesley Handbell Choir of the church, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Frazier. Miss Frazier was also the vocalist during the ceremony. The organist was David Banner Leslie.

Serving as director of the wedding was Mrs. Elizabeth Alley, and the bride's lady-in-waiting was Miss Eve Sanders.

tle, and Miss Kathy Harris. Also assisting with preparations for the reception were Mrs. Kathryn Frazier, Mrs. Anna Stumbo, Mrs. Edna Carol Greenwade, Mrs. Marie Stephens and Mrs. Dorothy Wells.

DIET CENTER

HALLOWEEN

Can you believe it? Halloween is almost here! Instead of "trick or treating," why not have a Halloween party for the children?

Almost any age group enjoys a party with friends. Imagination is the key to fun and success, but here are a few suggestions you may want to consider:

- Let children make their own masks to wear during the party, or perhaps they would prefer to paint their faces with washable paint.
- Bob for apples on a string.
- A bag of sugarless gum and candy and popcorn balls could be made up for each child.

Diet Center suggests having a light supper to begin the party. A nutritious stew or soup, crackers and cheese, or bite-sized pieces of fruits and vegetables could be served before the candy is passed. Display a large punch bowl filled with orange juice and dry ice, accompanied by Diet Center applesauce cake. Above all, have a safe and fun Halloween!

Rabbit Hash, Kentucky: Dealing With The World On Its Own Terms

By JEFF LEWIS

As you drive along the twisting, hill-climbing, and valley-delving roads of northwest Boone county, you may see a farmer tooling his tractor over toward one of those fine, fertile, silt-rich river-bottom tobacco patches that abound in the area.

And seeing that he is not in too much of a hurry (and neither are you, if you're behind him), you might want to stick your head out the window and holler up at him: "Hey, partner—just where is Rabbit Hash?"

If geography is destiny, then the tiny hamlet of Rabbit Hash, Ky. (pop. 40) was meant to remain hidden, not only from the traveler, but from time itself. It sits on the banks of the Ohio River. And though the tall rounded hilltops of the region look down into startlingly deep valleys carved out by the Ohio's tributary creeks, offering 30-mile vistas of the Kentucky plateau farmland or the level fields of Southern Indiana, the tendency of the river to double back keeps the traveler alert; common sense often finds itself in complete contradiction with the "north" or "south" of a highway marker.

First settled in 1789, Rabbit Hash got its name early in this century when the old name of Carlton had to be dropped because it often caused the town's mail to wind up in nearby Carrollton. The present name commemorates a favorite local dish that was often served when river flooding forced rabbits from their warrens along the banks.

Rabbit Hash isn't a classic "attraction"—no hotel, no restaurant, and the little gift shop at the Iron Works is stocked mostly with quilts and carvings made by the women of the town. Rabbit Hash hasn't been "restored"; it's just there, as it has been for nearly 200 years.

There have been setbacks for the town: the great flood of 1937 wiped out most businesses—though not the General Store, in business since 1831. The Markland Dam downriver, built in 1962, raised the Ohio to cover a good bit of rich farmland that once was accessible along the bank.

As Sally Ryle, storekeeper, tells it, the flood of 1978 came near to finishing Rabbit Hash off. "But my son Lowell (town mayor Lowell Scott) came down here and said, 'Rabbit Hash can't die.' So he bought it all and fixed it up." Scott now owns all three stores and the two log cabin houses which comprise the town.

The General Store is the natural focus of the town. There, the kids who wander in for ice cream and the farmers who smoke and talk around a wood stove in the back don't seem to ponder much the history of the place.

It's there just the same. A Burma Shave sign outside. A sign offering Pepsi

Employees Encouraged To Hire Handicapped

Kentucky employers are being encouraged not to overlook persons with developmental disabilities when filling employment vacancies. That's the goal of a statewide multi-media campaign being launched by the Kentucky Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services and its Development Disability Planning Council.

"We want to promote throughout the state the acceptability and employability of people with physical and mental handicaps," explained department commissioner Dennis Boyd. "We want to enlighten the employers on the advantages of hiring these individuals. They're good, conscientious, dependable employees, sometimes more so than persons who are not disadvantaged."

Other songbirds may flee when people move in, but the American robin seems to thrive amid civilization, says National Wildlife magazine. It has adapted so well to humanity's imposition on the land that there are more robins in North America today than during colonial times.

Mountain Manor Honors Volunteer

Miss Myrtle Pugsley was honored recently, on her birthday at the Mountain Manor Nursing Home, where she has been a volunteer for the past 16 years. She remains active in the community where she has taught Christian principles for the past 41 years.

for five cents. Boxes on shelves still half filled with things like Pork Chitterlings, Watch Dog Cleanser, Penetro Nose Drops, or Putnam Fadeless Dyes. Who says this is too long a wait for a return on your investment?

Residents are happy that tourists are finding their way to their village, but it hasn't caused them to change many of their ways. The 40's vintage International pumper truck in the yard hasn't been cleaned up, though on weekends horses are hitched up to a wagon to take visitors for rides. Still, in general, the attitude of Rabbit Hash is as honest and level as that of the storekeeper who demanded, and the customer who carefully wrote, this note in 1903:

"One day after date I promise to pay S J Stephens & Co. twelve dollars with interest at six percent until paid. Thomas T. Campbell." A one-day contract with provisions for a very long time to come—not a bad epigram for Rabbit Hash.

The Northern Kentucky Convention and Visitors Bureau suggests the one-day weekend riverboat cruise by B&B Riverboats from Covington to Rabbit Hash is probably the easiest way to see it. If however, one finds the all-day cruise too long, here are the road directions. From Covington or Lexington, take I-75 to the KY-18 exit. Take KY-18 west straight through Burlington (don't take Route 20, a T-junction right turn which goes to Petersburg). Go through Bellevue, and keep on until KY-18 turns into KY-338. There's a sign for Rabbit Hash, a right turn down the hill (Rabbit Hash Hill Road), but be careful! Rabbit Hash is reached by following this road nine-tenths of a mile to a left turn that is not marked. It's just around the bend, and back a few years.

Highlands Regional Shows Off Its New Emergency Department

Highlands Regional Medical Center Administrator Clarence C. Traum briefs members of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce on plans for the second floor expansion. Enlarging the second floor is part of a greater expansion that will have cost about $10 million by the time it is completed. Already open is the new emergency department; the rest of the expansion should be finished in January.

The new Emergency Department at Highlands Regional Medical Center has been almost as full of visitors as of patients.

The facility, which opened Oct. 1, has been the focus of several tours. Highlands Regional employees were treated to an open house in the new department Oct. 10. The next day, area media members were invited in for a luncheon and a question-and-answer session with Administrator Clarence C. Traum, HRMC Board of Trustees Chairman Burl Wells Spurlock, Chief of Emergency Medical Services Dr. Paul T. Brizendine, Contractor Gordon Akers and Architect Mark Tanner. The hospital hosted the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce for a luncheon Oct. 15, that included a tour of the department as well as the rest of the still unfinished expansion. Those who've commented on the new Emergency Department say the first things that hit them about it are its size and the feeling of openness. This is especially true of those who are familiar with the old ER, which often drew from visitors the adjective, "cramped."

The new department has 4,138 square feet, about twice the size of the old. It features separate rooms for treating trauma, cardiac, fracture and obstetrics patients, plus two holding beds. There are separate entrances for patients brought in by ambulance and patients coming in on their own or with family. This makes for better traffic flow and less congestion, according to Highlands officials.

"Our new Emergency Department was the next step in the long-range regional plan for the Medical Center," Traum told the Chamber members. "It was also made necessary by the tremendous number of emergency patients we've treated. The old ER was built to handle 8,000 patients per year. We treated 16,000 last year."

The number of HRMC emergency patients seems to have stabilized at that figure, but Dr. Brizendine expects it to increase again in a few years. "We've left ourselves some margin for increase," Brizendine told media members. "We could comfortably treat up to 24,000 emergency patients per year here."

The new Emergency Department is part of a larger expansion that is scheduled to be finished by the end of the year. The full expansion carries a price tag of some $10 million.

Survey Finds Emphasis On Traditional Values

A Reader's Digest/Gallup Survey finds that the sexual revolution of the past 20 years is continuing to subside as Americans are placing greater emphasis on traditional family values in their relationships—whether they're married or living together. These values include such basics as mutual love and respect, faithfulness and trust, and sharing interests.

The Digest's October issue also reveals that a majority of Americans seem happy with their choice of marriage partners. When asked whether they'd marry the same person again if given a second chance, 85 percent of the married public said "yes." Only 8 percent of those polled said "no" and 7 percent could not decide.

The survey of 1,549 adult Americans, part of The Digest's "Pulse of a Nation Series," was conducted by the Gallup Organization of Princeton, N.J., during January 1984.

When asked to select from nine possible choices the best things about their marriage, nearly half of the married public (47 percent) chose mutual love and respect, while 40 percent cited faithfulness and trust.

Raising children and sharing the same interests received equal mention (28 percent), followed by good sexual relations (17 percent), sharing the work (14 percent), sympathy and understanding (13 percent), few or no money problems (12 percent) and relations with in-laws (7 percent).

Similarly, when asked to select the best aspects of their relationships, couples living together out of wedlock chose mutual love and respect, faithfulness and trust, sharing the work and a good sexual relationship in the same proportions as their married counterparts.

Looking at things from the other side, nearly one third of America's married population (32 percent) say one of the worst aspects of their marriage is having too little money. This seems to be more of a problem for people under 50 years of age (37 percent), those with the least formal education (39 percent), couples married less than 10 years (50 percent), and not surprisingly, couples whose annual household income does not exceed $10,000 (59 percent).

Another 27 percent of those polled complain their marriages are in a rut—they do the same things all the time, followed by 23 percent who say they and their spouse don't communicate and 9 percent who blame their difficulties on poor relations with in-laws. Only 5 percent of those polled said "poor sexual relations" was one of the worst aspects of their marriage.

The survey also found that a large percentage (67 percent) of married couples do not argue very much at all. Only 4 percent quarrel a great deal, while 12 percent bicker quite a lot. More apt to disagree than others are spouses between the ages of 18 and 29 (22 percent) and those at the low end of the educational scale (23 percent).

However, frequency of arguments is no barometer of a successful union. Nearly half (43 percent) of those who are discontented with their spouses say they rarely fight, while 14 percent of those who would marry the same partners again quarrel with them quite a lot.

The Reader's Digest/Gallup Survey also revealed that being married to a working wife can have a beneficial effect on the relationship.

Among 68 percent of the married couples polled, the wife holds a part- or full-time job. Of this group 41 percent feel that the wife's having a job has benefited the marriage. Thirty percent say the arrangement has had no effect, and only 6 percent—more men than women—feel the impact has been adverse.

Those who feel most strongly that the wife's employment has helped the marriage are those under 50 (46 percent), college graduates (52 percent) and people earning over $30,000 annually (54 percent).

Interestingly, over 3 percent of couples interviewed said because the wife works they've put off starting a family or having more children, making this one of the least cited reasons for taking that action. Rather, 33 percent of all couples interviewed said they have all the children they want. Other reasons: they are too old (18 percent); they have money problems (19 percent); they are incapable of having children (5 percent); or they don't want any (3 percent).

Social Security...

Apply As Soon As Possible

By JIM KELLY
Social Security District Director
For the Big Sandy Area

Surviving dependents of a deceased worker should apply for Social Security benefits as soon as possible following the worker's death.

Applying promptly will allow benefits to start in the shortest possible time. In addition, some benefits cannot be paid more than a month before the application is filed.

Social Security benefits can be paid to these survivors:

—Unmarried children under 18, or under 19 if a full-time high school student.

—Unmarried children over 18 who were disabled before 22 and remain disabled.

—A surviving widow or widower of any age caring for a child under 16 or disabled who gets benefits.

—Widow or widower 60 or older.

—Disabled widow or widower 50-60.

—Dependent parent 62 or older.

Benefits can also be paid to a surviving divorced spouse if the marriage to the deceased worker lasted 10 years or more. Grandchildren can get benefits on a grandparent's record under certain circumstances.

Before any benefits can be paid, the worker must have had credit for a certain amount of work covered by Social Security. In 1984, the amount ranges from 1½ to 8¼ years depending on the worker's age at death.

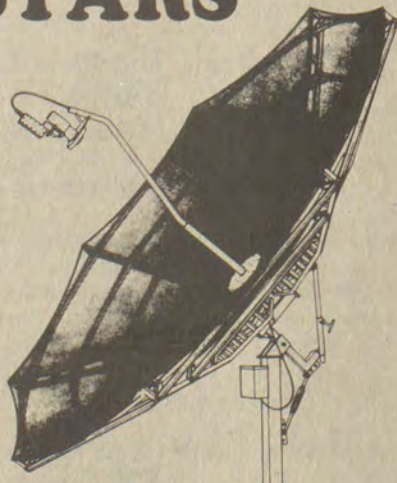

More information about survivor's benefits can be obtained at the Big Sandy Social Security office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

For Phil Bradbury...

Computer Firm is Latest In Series of Bold Ventures

By JEFFREY MARX
Herald-Leader Business Writer
(Reprinted by permission from the Lexington Herald-Leader.)

PRESTONSBURG—Phil Bradbury was resting on the steps to his living room, momentarily defying a self-imposed law: Better to burn out than rust.

Then he was asked why he would voluntarily swap a secure salary of $70,000 a year for a fresh start in a risky new coal venture. And he couldn't sit still.

Digging into the plush carpet with the pointed toes of his brown cowboy boots, Bradbury, 30, didn't search long for the answer.

"I just don't like normalcy," Bradbury said. "I like change."

It was an obvious answer for a man who had once traded a Harley-Davidson 1200 motorcycle for an antique car, which he then bartered for a red 1975 Corvette his wife drives through the hills of Floyd County.

In August, Bradbury, whose family has been in the coal business for three generations, quit his job as manager of four surface mines at Martin County Coal Corp. near Lovely.

He would devote his time to AMPS Inc., a small computer company specializing in programs for coal producers, and 4-M Resources Group, a coal company that Bradbury and three partners founded about two months ago.

The investment of $200,000 in the coal company may return a profit sooner than the $10,000 investment in AMPS, but the computer company has created more excitement among followers of the Eastern Kentucky coal industry.

State Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley said he was "very impressed" with the AMPS programs, which include formats to help improve maintenance of mining equipment, production availability, and drilling and blasting capabilities.

"He's coming on at a time when we're economically depressed," said Stanley, who worked for Phil Bradbury's late grandfather, Arthur Bradbury, in the 1940s. "If he can survive this—and I'm sure he will, because his whole family has been hard-working—he will do well in the future."

Bradbury and Bob Beatty, 34, dabbled with computer software while both worked for Martin County Coal, where Phil Bradbury's father, Raymond, has been president since 1973.

Beatty was the maintenance superintendent of surface mines, a position that often placed him next to Phil Bradbury in discussions of new techniques to reduce expenses. They found small computers to be helpful in cost cutting.

The two, who had as much experience in programming as Einstein had in coal mining, fed a personal computer with facts and figures. Bradbury said that the coal industry, "a little bit behind" where it should be in technology, was ready to advance.

Bradbury plugged into two personal computers, one in his converted garage, which previously served as a recording studio for his rock band, Southern Comfort. For more than a year, he entered maintenance records for every piece of equipment at Martin County Coal.

In the end, Bradbury compiled a 65-page report on the maintenance of six rock trucks through 4,000 hours of use. He and Beatty presented their findings to Peter Rupp, then president of Euclid Truck Co., a Cleveland firm that sold the trucks to Martin County Coal.

Rupp saw in the report several weaknesses with Euclid's production and several suggestions for improvement. Bradbury and Beatty walked off with a $193,000 credit for Martin County Coal, which is owned by the A.T. Massey Coal Co.

"We were grinning like possums," Bradbury said.

And, he saw an opportunity to parlay his work for a major coal company into a new business of his own.

So, in November 1983, he and Beatty founded AMPS, short for Advanced Maintenance/Production Systems.

"It was a gamble, because we put everything we've got on the line," Beatty said. "But with the ammunition we had, we said, 'Let's go.'"

A risky business is nothing new for Bradbury, who took out a bank loan as a teen-ager so he could finance his own band. He's also a licensed pilot. Life seems to be about 20 minutes long, Bradbury philosophized, and you're gone for the balance of eternity. Better to burn out than rust.

"He arrived on this earth, I think, being innovative, seeing opportunities and willing to risk a little more (than most people) to put them into operation," said Bradbury's father, Raymond, who described himself as a "more conservative" businessman. "He's really got himself stuck out on a limb right now... (but) he has to have some activity going all the time."

So far, AMPS has sold only one program package—a $5,000 package (cost is now $7,000) in March to RJF Coal Co. in Hazard. The package is guaranteed to save the customer more than the purchase price in the first three months of use, Bradbury said.

In the time it takes to ignite a dynamite explosion, Bradbury analyzes data from a company's initial reports to show how more than $600 is being wasted on each blast it makes in mine development. When the data are properly used by a foreman, such savings can alter the odds of survival in the coal industry, Bradbury tells potential customers.

The AMPS programs are especially crucial to maintenance of mining equipment, Bradbury said, because computer analysis aids coal producers in care of equipment and in gaining concessions from equipment manufacturers.

Anthony Cornett of RJF Coal, which operates two surface mines and a deep mine on the Knott County-Perry County line, said the AMPS program had already resulted in better equipment maintenance. But he added that it was too early to tell how much the program would help with blasting, drilling and production availability.

That's because the program has not been used long enough to accumulate enough data to draw meaningful conclusions, Cornett said. "We're still trying to get settled in with it," he said.

At a recent coal conference in Lexington, Bradbury addressed the typical coal product's fear of "computerized" mining. He stressed that the only fear should be that everyone else will be using it, and you will be left behind.

"You can't get away from it, and you should not be scared of it," Bradbury said.

Gus Bahas, a programmer whom Bradbury hired away from Computerland in Cincinnati and who is now an AMPS partner, said that he was lured to Prestonsburg by the potential of AMPS and the freedom it provides him to create new programs.

"There's really not that much software out there for the coal industry, so I figured it's a golden egg if I take advantage of it," he said.

And, Bahas said, there was one pervasive characteristic that qualified Bradbury's offer as one he couldn't refuse. "He's a dreamer, like I am," Bahas said.

Back in Bradbury's converted garage, on a shelf above the wooden bar he built with his wife, Carol, rests a thick, hard-cover book titled The Coal Crisis: A Simple Solution. The author is listed as Phil Bradbury, and the author was very serious about his work until a visitor asked to open it.

Then, with a smile and an easy laugh, Bradbury handed over the publication. It was hollow from cover to cover, filled only with two shot glasses and a bottle of Jack Daniels.

Carol Bradbury is used to such antics. "The first time Phil brought a motorcycle home, (his father) kicked him out of the house," she said. "Phil is your basic Harley rider, leather jacket and faded blue jeans, but he's not the violent type. He loves peace, getting along with people."

Bradbury fetched an old 8- by 10-inch color photograph of his favorite biker. A red bandana restrained the rider's shoulder-length hair.

The image was right out of the movie Easy Rider. The biker was Phil Bradbury. Better to burn out than rust.

"But at 26 or 27, you don't get much recognition if you look like that," Carol Bradbury said.

Out came the earring he wore during his days as a serious biker and musician. His hair was clipped, his beard groomed.

And Phil Bradbury the computer salesman wears cleaner boots than Phil Bradbury the mine operator.

Middle Creek Man Suffers Gunshot

Larry Douglas Calhoun, of the Middle Creek road, suffered a gunshot wound early Sunday morning, according to state police, and remains hospitalized at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Calhoun, said to be in his late 20's, reportedly drove himself to Prestonsburg after being shot and was then taken to the med center by a rescue squad vehicle.

State Police Trooper Zoellers said circumstances surrounding the shooting are not known since Calhoun chose not to name his assailant.

Calhoun, who was reported shot with a small caliber weapon, is expected to recover.

Throughout his life Columbus believed all his discoveries were in the Orient.

CHAPTER ELECTS OFFICERS

The Jenny Wiley Chapter, American Association of Retired Persons (A.A.R.P.), held a dinner-meeting at the Western Sizzlin' Steak House, Friday evening, with Jack Freed, president, presiding. Officers and members of the board for the year were listed by the Nominating committee as follows: James E. Select Teacher Group Plan a Follow-up Weekend

Forty outstanding Kentucky teachers who took part in the first Commonwealth Institute for Teachers will share their classroom experiences since that time and review the results of community surveys at a meeting in Louisville, Oct. 26-28.

The follow-up weekend is the first of two scheduled for the teachers who took part in the enrichment seminar held at the University of Kentucky in June. The institute was co-sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Education and the Kentucky Educational Foundation, aided by a grant of $25,000 from the Ashland Oil Foundation.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said the get-together would give the participating teachers an opportunity to renew their commitment and to share ways they have applied the experiences of the institute to their teaching.

The teachers submitted research papers giving community opinions on education and suggestions for the improvement of education in Kentucky, and those recommendations will be reviewed in one session. Teachers also gave their own suggestions for improving education and for the direction of future institutes.

Other topics of discussion will include teacher evaluation, teacher effectiveness, proposals for a career ladder for teachers—now under study by a special commission—and ways of involving the institute members in educational improvement at the state level.

McDonald will address the group at 9 a.m. Oct. 27. Dr. James Fouche, associate superintendent for instruction, will speak at a reception at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 26.

Sessions on teacher evaluation will be conducted by Dr. Don Hunter, deputy superintendent of curriculum and instruction with the Covington Independent School District and a consultant to the Department of Education.

Dr. Stephen K. Miller, an assistant professor at the University of Louisville School of Education, will conduct group sessions on teacher effectiveness.

Teachers who took part in the institute were selected by the Department of Education on the basis of applications and letters of recommendation. Each teacher received a stipend of $400, in addition to free room and board at UK during the weeklong seminar.

The only teacher from this section of the state in the participating group is Carol Stumbo, of Wheelwright High School.

With a solution to the acid rain problem still a long way off, biologists in upstate New York are trying to develop a heartier strain of trout that could survive in at least moderately acidic waters, reports National Wildlife magazine. The viable, though temporary strategy, would surely help trout fishing, which is a big business throughout upstate New York.

Approximately 18,000 "Kilogram Kids" are born in the United States each year. They weigh less than 2 1/2 pounds and may be as much as three months premature. A decade ago, only one in ten survived. Now, reports the October Reader's Digest, if treated early enough nearly half can be saved to lead a healthy life.

Firemen Respond To A Different Kind of Alarm

Members of Prestonsburg's fire department are used to emergency situations but when a car came screeching into the parking lot of the municipal building here last Wednesday night two firemen found themselves confronted with a rather unusual situation.

It was about 9 p.m., according to Fire Chief Tom Blackburn, when department regular Ronnie Burke and volunteer Don Hall saw the car slide in. They ran to investigate. One woman, the driver of the vehicle, jumped out in something of a panic and indicated that the firemen should open the rear door of the auto, post haste. The nature of the situation became graphically clear when Burke and Hall saw that a young woman in the back seat was having a baby!

The two firemen assisted in bringing the baby, a girl, into the world, and in addition, two of the city's emergency medical technicians, Kevin Hedrick and Teddi Pence, arrived on the scene to further assure the safety of mother and child.

The mother, 21-year-old Carol Guest, of Magoffin county, was on her way to Highlands Regional Medical Center, it was said, when it became clear that the time was at hand.

Blackburn said the mother and baby daughter were doing fine at HRMC.

Another Good Year

This is the annual thank you from those of the East Point Area Development Club to you who helped buy and sell the applebutter we make each year and sell. This year we made over 2200 quarts-pints included-and sold all of it! We also had many calls for the applebutter, after it was sold. We even made a bit extra this year, but not enough. Maybe next year...

And the winner of the case of applebutter this year was Mrs. Annie Brent, of Brownsville, Indiana. Although only one person got the applebutter, all of you who bought tickets were 'winners' to do this kind of thing. It will help the residents of Mountain Manor Nursing Home have a little better Christmas, what with the ticket money going into their Christmas Fund.

And speaking of winners, I myself felt I was a "winner" for having someone nearby to sort of give me a boost when I took a spill during the Apple Festival in Paintsville. Don't know if the young fellow was a local person or not, but he and his teenage buddy were asking if I were OK. It's true that not all teenagers are thoughtless! I wish to thank them personally for being so kind.

MRS. ESTA TACKETT, HC 72, Box 502, East Point, Kentucky 41216, Publicity Chairman of E. Point Area Development Club

Honored For Winning Window

Winner of this year's Jenny Wiley Festival window display was the B.F. Casual store here. Alice Gray Buchanan, left, a member of the window committee, is seen presenting a commemorative plaque to Mrs. William O. Goebel, Jr., owner of the store. A window decorated by the Peggy Lou store was judged second, and the George P. Archer Senior Citizens' window third.

“DON'T BLAME THE TEACHERS.”

HENRY D. BAILEY

“I and my board members and our attempts and our dedication will stand on our records in achievement.”

—Supt. Pete Grigsby, Jr.

“Your district ranked 176 out of 183. That probably is not a good record to stand on. What is your response?”

—Mr. Ratcliffe, State Board of Education

“If you rank them from 1 to 180, somebody has to be 180.”

—Supt. Pete Grigsby, Jr.

All of us have read a lot in recent years about education. Isn't it disappointing when superintendents of schools and school board member always respond that the problem with education is the classroom teacher? When the superintendent of schools responds to problems with an answer that seems to say, “Somebody has to be last,” or that the only thing parents and citizens are interested in is “Cheerleaders and taxes,” it makes us wonder about educational leadership.

The superintendent is totally wrong and out of touch with the history of our people and our historic support of the public schools. In fact, our ancestors built schools in Northern Ireland before they migrated to our region that were the first to teach boys and girls together to “read, write and figure.” When these Scotch-Irish migrated to America, they settled here in our region. History tells us that of the 30 million people living in America that can trace their ancestors back to pre-revolutionary America, 43% still live in the Appalachian Region.

Our ancestors furnished America with its most educated group. Their church schools became the model for the American educational system. Our people, particularly here in Floyd County, have always demonstrated a high priority for education. We support our schools and we are interested in educational opportunity for our children. That's why it is extremely disappointing to our people, especially to our dedicated classroom teachers who are the largest professional group in our county, to know that people who profess to be educational leaders make such outlandish statements in public. If they have been mis-quoted, they should demand a retraction; if they made the statements, they should apologize to the public and to the classroom teachers.

The situation of our schools, especially the high school buildings on Left Beaver Creek, did not happen overnight. It is the result of years of neglect on the part of our superintendent and our school board member. They have increased the budget of the Floyd County Schools by millions of dollars each year—to over $17 million this year and paid their friends in the Superintendents's office an average salary of $30,000 per year while our classroom teachers earn an average of $18,000 per year; they spend over $1.4 million per month, yet they propose and vote for a tax bill that would have raised the utility bills of Floyd Countians by over $800,000 per year; they have voted for and supported building programs that resulted in new or newly renovated schools in all parts of the county while our high school students on Left Beaver attend classes and our teachers teach in buildings constructed in the 1920's and 1930's. After 12 years of this record, our school board member asks us to vote for her again. Isn't it time for a change?

Our schools are important to us and should be a source of community pride. Doug Bailey is a lifelong resident of Left Beaver Creek, attended and graduated from the public schools and has demonstrated his concern for our schools, our classroom teachers and our children.

Doug Bailey will stop waste in our schools and direct the money to where it should be—the classroom. Vote for Doug Bailey. He'll restore pride to our schools.

THREE KILLINGS IN THIS COUNTY DURING SUNDAY

Aught and Bill Blizzard Slain At Garrett

LACKEY SALISBURY DEAD

Three men were killed in this county as the result of shootings Sunday. Bill Blizzard was shot and instantly killed near the water tank at West Garrett, this county, early Sunday morning, and his brother, Aught Blizzard, was mortally wounded in the same fray by John Dyer, of Hueysville, two miles below Garrett.

On Turkey Creek, a few miles from Maytown, Lackey Salisbury was shot and fatally wounded by his brother, Tobe Salisbury, while the two were wrestling for possession of a revolver. He died early Tuesday morning in the Beaver Valley Hospital, where he had been taken for an operation in an attempt to save his life.

Two Versions Given.

According to reports of the slaying at Garrett, Dyer was followed down the railroad from the Barney-Goodin mine to a spot near the water tank by the Blizzard brothers, and was attacked by them. It is said that he was struck by a brick or stone and that he fired after one of the brothers seized him. Aught Blizzard was shot through the heart, dying instantly. The other was rushed to the hospital at Martin, where he died Sunday.

Another version of the affair says that Dyer was shooting at Burness Hall before he shot the others, and that Dyer did not shoot in self-defense. A statement made here states, in contrast, that Hall first saw Aught Blizzard holding Dyer from behind.

Aught and Bill Blizzard were sons of Mrs. Frank Garrett, who survives. Aught Blizzard is also survived by his widow and two children.

Buried In Same Grave

The brothers were taken to Estill, where both bodies were buried in the same grave Tuesday afternoon.

Dyer surrendered to Deputy Sheriff Kendall Moore, and came here Monday morning. He was admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000 on the same day, and after waiving examining trial Wednesday was released under a similar bond for his appearance before the grand jury at the September term of circuit court.

Memories of Gettysburg Aroused On Approach of Fourth of July

To at least one Floyd county man the Fourth of July means far more than a day of mere patriotic demonstration, observing that day when America's freedom was declared. On that day memories of the roar of cannon and the carnage of war rise in his mind; for it was on July 4, 1863, that he and his comrades of Lee's gray-clad veterans left Gettysburg, after a three days' struggle in the vise of death.

This man is Uncle Andy Frazier, who says that the following account, taken from that given by J. N. Hubbard, of Boyd county, is a correct version of the battle as a soldier in action could see it:

This vivid description of the Battle of Gettysburg and its consequences has been written by J. N. Hubbard, well-known Boyd county farmer and a resident on rural route No. 1. Mr. Hubbard is known as an able historian and has often related his experiences of the Civil War around the fireside at the Hubbard home of an evening to interested groups. He was a member of the Seventh Indiana Infantry.

"The first corps arrived at Emmetsburg, Maryland, on June 30, 1863. Colonel Grover rode along the line and stated that we would be passing General Reynolds' headquarters in a few minutes and that he wanted the regiment to move in good order. We

HENRY F. PATTON LEADS INSURANCE AGENCY FORCE

Henry F. Patton, district agent for the Commonwealth Life Insurance Company, is leading the agency force of his company for the first five months of 1927, and will be rewarded for his work with a free trip to Atlantic City in July.

Mr. Patton has consistently proved a leader in his field of work, and his continued success is very gratifying to his many friends.

VETERAN, AGED 84, SUCCUMBS

Thomas Amburgy, one of the oldest citizens of this county, and one of the few veterans of the Civil War in Floyd county, died Wednesday at his home on Johns Creek in his 85th year after a long period of ill health.

Mr. Amburgy was a highly respected citizen of this county, and was well known. During the War Between the States he saw service as a Confederate soldier. For the greater part of his life he was engaged in farming, and had lived about 45 years at the home in which he died. He was a devout member of the Baptist Church.

Surviving him are three daughters and two sons: Mrs. Alice Herald, Mrs. Belle Thompson, T. M. Amburgy, all of Prestonsburg; John Amburgy, at home, and Mrs. Mollie Kendrick, of Pike county. His widow, who is now 87 years old, also survives.

Burial will be made Friday in the family burial ground near the old home.

LEGION PROGRAM ON JULY FOURTH

Beaver Train to Make Afternoon Run Here

The local post of the American Legion plans an interesting program of patriotic speeches, infantry drill, parades, contests, music and the like in celebrating the Fourth of July here.

One of the largest crowds to be here in years is expected for the occasion which those engaged in preparing for the event say, will be one of exceptional interest.

A company of militia will be brought here from Pikeville for the day.

After connecting with the Big Sandy train at Allen, bound down-river, on the evening of the Fourth, the Beaver train will make the run here, leaving on the return trip at six o'clock. This will enable visitors here from Beaver to return home after staying in town all day. Efforts were made this week to have the Long Fork train wait at Martin for the other train. Whether or not these were successful have not been learned.

Prominent Couple Wed On Saturday

The wedding of Miss Harriet Harper of Frankfort, Ky., and Mr. Ernest R. Reed, of Adcock, La., who is stationed here as resident engineer in highway construction, was beautifully solemnized Saturday at the Presbyterian Church, Frankfort.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Reed are members of prominent families, and are welcome additions to Prestonsburg society.

The bride is the attractive and accomplished daughter of Mrs. George Harper, of Frankfort, who is prominently associated with state politics, at present being Republican candidate for nomination as secretary of state. Mrs. Reed is a graduate of Oxford College, Oxford, Ohio, and is quite popular in Frankfort society circles.

Mr. Reed is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reed, of Iowa. He is a graduate of Iowa State College, and is a young man of much talent in his profession. During his stay in Prestonsburg he has won a wide circle of friends by his gentlemanly conduct.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed went to Cincinnati on a wedding trip cut short by the demand of his services here, and, after returning to Frankfort, came here Monday. They are now located at the Hotel Elizabeth and expect to remain in the Big Sandy valley for some time.

AMERICANS MAKE FLIGHT TO HAWAII

Ocean Barriers Now Leveled By U. S. Airmen

Two American airmen, Lieut. Lester J. Maitland and Albert F. Hegenberger, dropped from the sky Wednesday morning at Honolulu to the strumming of many stringed instruments, after having coursed the uncharted sky between Oakland, California, and Hawaii, 2,900 miles across the Pacific Ocean.

The actual flying time for the trip was, as unofficially reported, 25 hours and 51 minutes. In this time was the first flight made from America to Hawaii.

The fliers missed their landing directions, delaying their arrival somewhat and causing some momentary anxiety among those gathered to greet them.

The giant Fokker made a graceful landing, with Lieut. Maitland at the controls. It taxied to the reviewing stand amid the cheers of thousands—Americans, Hawaiians, and Orientals.

The arrival, despite the delay, took the great welcoming throng completely by surprise.

The ship was fifty feet off ground but the onlookers realized it had arrived.

Before touching the ground, the great ship rose slightly, skipped the field in a semi-circle and taxied to perfect position directly in front of the reviewing stand.

A battalion of troops immediately surrounded it.

As soon as the plane came to a standstill Lieut. Maitland and Hegenberger stepped out. Despite their apparent weariness, they scrambled out without assistance and both turned to glance back to the east toward the new airway they had opened up from North America.

They stepped then to the reviewing stand, where the Governor of Hawaii and the commanding officers of the army post greeted them, and decorated them with floral leis.

RUSH ROAD WORK IN FLOYD COUNTY

Shannon and Ramer, contractors on the road up Elm Mud Creek, are moving equipment to push the construction of a road toward as rapidly as possible.

The road is being built on the headway of the Big Sandy river, and is running day and night shifts.

Those connected with road work have one of the best of beliefs that the bridges of Cliff and Allen over which the trail crosses the Big Sandy will be completed by early November. It is also hoped that the greater part of the road between these places will be opened by that time.

TEACHERS ARE SELECTED FOR GRADE SCHOOL

School Board Considers Smith-Hughes Representative

CURRY, HIGH SCHOOL HEAD

Election of teachers for the Prestonsburg graded school was made Friday night at a meeting of the Prestonsburg board of education, held in the office of H. F. Patton, with the following teachers being named:

D. O. Harmon, Joe Dingus, Mrs. Fanny Collins, Mrs. Fanny Jarrell, Miss Anna Miller, Miss Minnie Grace Harris, Mrs. Victoria Spradlin, Mrs. Pearl Laferty, and Misses Stella Fitzpatrick, Hope Hereford and Eula Hunley.

John Layne was hired as Janitor for the coming school term.

Consideration of a Smith-Hughes teacher for the school here was made at the meeting. H. F. Patton and W. S. Harkins were appointed to attend to the matter.

Duties of Smith-Hughes teachers are to teach agriculture in high schools and to act as athletic coaches. Their salaries are paid in part by the state and in part by the county in which the teacher is employed.

Prof. T. J. Currey, principal of the high school here last year, will head the school again this year, and selection of high school teachers will be left to him.

BOYS' BAND PLAYS HERE

Floyd County Boy In Group; Visit Garrett

Sixteen boys, members of the band from the Odd Fellows' home at Lexington, appeared here at the Baptist Church Friday evening in a musical program which was roundly applauded by the large audience present. Prof. E. O. Kidd was in charge of the boys.

Those who came in contact with the boys here were impressed by their musical accomplishments and manly bearing, and paid a deserved tribute to them and their tutors. Of the sixteen members of the band, none was more than 17 years old.

The band also visited Garrett, spending two nights there.

Markham McCown, a Floyd county boy, was a member of the youthful group of musicians.

Names of those composing the band are: Norvell Schaffer, W. M. Crooks, Clarence Philpot, Fred Schaffer, Ed Frazier, Woodrow Browning, H. E. Hatcher, Ed Miller, Markham McCown, Mike Brewer, W. M. Hatcher, Hubert Poe, Joe Joslin, Parker Keith, Liggett Grayson, and Robert Frazier.

Youth Confesses To Forgery; Held Here

Paul Warix, 15 years old, who was arrested last week as a suspect in the robbery of the postoffice at Martin, this county, confessed to forgery of the name of his father, Elijah Warix, to checks, and is being held here pending sentence to the state reformatory at Greendale.

The youth denied robbery of the postoffice robbery however, and no proof was produced as to his guilt. His father was exonerated of suspicion in the case.

ROAD FROM CLIFF IS MADE PASSABLE

The road from Cliff to Prestonsburg has been worked this week, and it is said that it will be passable for automobiles Sunday, provided that dry weather continues. A number of local residents plan to take this opportunity to visit the town, given suitable weather.

Mrs. Emma Taylor and Alvin left Thursday morning for Williamsburg, Ohio, where they will be guests of Mrs. Taylor's sister, Mrs. Mary O. Clark. They will also visit in West Virginia and Kentucky before returning here. They expect to be gone about two weeks.

HARRY LEE MOORE ESCAPES WHEN TRAIN STRIKES HORSE

Returning Wednesday from the funeral and burial of Lackey Salisbury near Lem, this county, Harry Lee Moore, well-known Floyd county man, narrowly escaped death when a coal train struck the horse which he was riding, near Eastern. The horse was so badly injured that it was shot after its life was despaired of. Mr. Moore escaped by leaping from the saddle.

BUYS INTERESTS OF IVYTON FIRM

The Kentucky-West Virginia Gas Company, which recently purchased the interests in this county of the Ivyton Oil and Gas Company and other holdings, is the latest entrant into the Floyd county gas field, it was announced this week. Amount involved in the purchase was not given out.

The new company has its main office in Ashland, with local headquarters in the Masonic building.

Approximately 15 rigs are in operation on this company's leases at this time, it is said. Product of its holdings will go into the Louisville Gas and Electric Company and the Warfield Natural Gas Company's lines.

TO ERECT LARGE BUSINESS HOUSE

Building Active in Prestonsburg; Business Improved

What will be when completed one of the finest business buildings in Prestonsburg will be let to contract within a few days, it is said, by Will H. Layne for erection on the lot adjoining Fraher's store.

This structure will be of brick, two stories high, and will be approximately 70 square feet. It will be divided into two store rooms, with office rooms on the second floor.

The larger of the store rooms, which will have a frontage of 40 feet, has been leased to H. C. Francis for a period of five years. The other, 30 by 70 feet, has not been leased.

Construction work on the proposed building is expected to begin within the next week.

This building is only one of several large business houses and handsome residences being erected. Buildings under process of construction at this time are a brick business house for H. E. Hughes on the lot adjoining the First National Bank; the large brick school building opposite the Valley Inn, a fine residence for J. M. Morell, and a brick bungalow for John W. Layne.

An urgent demand is being made for dwelling houses here. Prestonsburg is now experiencing a boom, and many persons are unable to find homes here.

Muse's Wedding Gift, 154 Years Old, Owned by Judge B. C. May

June brides and bridegrooms of the present day may be showered with choice wedding gifts and all the happy felicitations of the day, but few are the newlyweds of 1927 to whom come gifts of the Muse.

A gift of graceful poetry was that of Colonel John May on his marriage, February 15, 1772, 154 years ago. A copy of this poem, which was written by a friend back in pre-Revolutionary War days to Colonel May, is now in the possession here of Judge B. C. May. A view in poesy of connubial bliss and the pride of the pioneer bridegroom in the girl of his choice is given in the opening stanzas, with the admonition at the close never to "raise thy hopes too high of bliss for things below the sky," as witnesses the poem, published below for the first time in its entirety.

Behold the scene, and view the pair Whom heaven propitious makes its care; Their hearts are joined in bands of love; Their bliss resembles joys above; Discord and passion's endless strife

MAKE 10-CENT CUT FOR COAL FREIGHT RATE

Handicap for This Field Thus Slashed In Half

SECOND CUT ASKED

Announcement that a reduction of 10 cents on the coal freight rate from the southern fields of Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee to the Great Lakes would be granted, effective August 10, was made Saturday by the Chesapeake and Ohio, Louisville and Nashville and Norfolk and Western railways.

This means that the increased differential of 20 cents placed by the Interstate Commerce Commission between freight rates for coal from Kentucky and sister states and that of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana coal will be split in half. While this reduction in freight rates will mean a decrease in revenues to these railroads, the loss will not be so great as that which would have resulted, had they made no reduced rates, since the differential of 20 cents imposed by the Interstate Commerce Commission would have ruined the coal industry in this section.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, however, has maintained that the southern railroads have no right to nullify the difference in freight rates made by the commission by lowering the rates themselves, and a stiff legal battle will probably be necessary to effect this aid to Kentucky operators.

Coal operators of Eastern Kentucky, Southern West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee have joined in an expression of disappointment over the action of the carrier roads in this section in limiting the reduction on lake coal to only ten cents per ton. The majority of opinion is that the serving roads should have met the reduction of 20 cents, granted the northern carriers by the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The carriers serving the coal operators of the southern districts were asked by the operators in a joint conference, to make a voluntary reduction of at least twenty cents per ton, which would equal the reduction ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the northern districts. But, instead of taking this action the carriers offered a reduction of only ten cents per ton. The operators claimed that the southern lines and especially the Chesapeake and Ohio are in a position to move coal to the lake ports at a lower transportation cost than could be offered by any of the northern carriers, who are granted the reduction of twenty cents per ton. In view of this fact the southern shippers anticipated at least a reduction equal to that granted the northern fields and possibly greater.

Are strangers to their happy life; But hand in hand with friendly heart They strive to act the virtuous part;

While love their golden time employs, And friendship heightens all their joys.

This bliss, O May, I hope you'll find While blest with first of womankind. The loveliest fair e'er Boston knew Resigns unnumbered charms for you; That heavenly form, that angel mind Who envies not is more than blind.

How pleasing is our soul's surpris, Whenever we contemplate those eyes, Where heavenly goodness sparkles through.

And brings a spotless soul to view! While you deserve this lovely fair, Her happiness will be your care; And Heaven will shower its blessings down.

Till you put on a stary crown.

But since this life is compassed round With ill whose number can't be found,

'Tis wise to keep, in every state, A mind prepared for turns of fate; And never raise our hopes too high Of bliss for things below the sky; For 'tis a truth by all confessed No mortal e'er was fully blest.

For Some Species, Giving Of Life Results in Death

For some species in the animal kingdom, the act of reproduction is their final purpose. The effort to give new life means that their lives must end.

Species such as the salmon in North America, Australia's marsupial mouse, and the enchanting monarch butterfly engage in "semelparity," meaning they reproduce only once.

Semelparity has a purpose, says University of Arizona professor William Shaffer. Some species, he says in the current issue of National Wildlife, create more descendants because they put all their energy into one reproductive episode.

Take the salmon which, after living to maturity in the sea, begins a remarkable quest for its "once in a lifetime" reproductive episode. They migrate as many as 200 miles, often against strong river currents and past a variety of predators including fisherman, to the place of their birth. Once there, the female digs a shallow bed in gravel and then deposits a few thousand eggs that are fertilized and covered over. In a few days, the female is dead.

Sometimes the animal kingdom doesn't fare well when a plant species goes through a generational change, according to the article in the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication. A modern-day catastrophe is in the making in China where entire forests of bamboo—the staple diet of the rare panda—are withering during a once-in-80-years die-off that is necessary to provide energy for seeds to grow the next forest. The result is that the pandas face mass starvation.

The male Australian marsupial mouse is the only mammal known to die after reproducing. The nocturnal mouse, which looks like a miniature rat, becomes senile after a flurry of mating. Its thick fur turns dull and thin and it weakens. Within a month, when the females have given birth, the adult male mice are dead, while females usually live and even reproduce again.

Monarch butterflies spend winters in Mexico and wait for an instinctual signal to migrate north. Most male monarchs die along the way, but the female completes the migration and lays hundreds of eggs. Her task in life is complete, and she promptly dies.

The agave, a fleshy succulent plant that thrives in the deserts of Arizona and Mexico, is a semelparous plant. The agave may live 100 years but will not bloom throughout most of its life. Finally, the agave will grow a center stalk up to 50 feet in length before it dies.

"Some studies," says National Wildlife, "suggest that the higher the stalk, the more pollinators the agave will attract in that one spectacular reproduction episode."

Group Helps Dying Patients, Families

Hospice of Big Sandy notes that November has been proclaimed by Governor Martha Layne Collins as Hospice Month.

Hospice is a lifeline for terminally-ill people and their families. Hospice affirms life—it neither hastens nor postpones death. Instead, it believes that people should live their remaining days with dignity, and as fully, as alertly, and as comfortably as possible.

Hospice of Big Sandy is a Floyd and Johnson County organization. It works with a skilled professional staff and with trained volunteers from our community to help provide care in the home. The family continues to help care for the patient with the support and training from the hospice home care team. The patient continues to help make decisions about his or her care.

Hospice of Big Sandy is a licensed state agency, and began serving patients and families last September. All people are urged to join with the Hospice of Big Sandy in the recognition and support of hospice care as a humane response to the needs of the terminally ill.

For winter storage, wipe apples dry and pack in dry sand or sawdust. Keep in cool, dry place.

ABORTION

In your heart, you know it is wrong, but do you condemn without offering an alternative? Do you say, "Someone should help these women, counsel them, let them know they are loved...."?

Someone is. The abortionists offer their solution at the right price. They list their services in the yellow pages of your phone book under "Birth Control". They offer "free counseling" which always has a predictable and profitable conclusion. Abortion. In the 12 months of 1983, in this country, our abortionists destroyed one and a half million (1,500,000) unborn children, which generated for them over six hundred million dollars ($600,000,000.00) in fees. Of all those abortions, less than four percent (4%) were due to health of the mother, incest or rape. The remaining 96% were a matter of convenience.

In the midst of this slaughter, is anyone willing to speak for the love of these women and girls, and the value of their unborn children? One group hopes to, called Alternatives, Inc. It hopes to honestly counsel women with crises pregnancies without condemnation or concealed greed. By this, a full range of alternatives to abortion may be explored and the love of Christ revealed.

If you desire to be a part of this, or want to know more, please step-out of the crowd. Call 886-8189 for more information, or write:

Watching the demonstration are Director of Public Information Amy Lively, Lexington Herald-Leader Eastern Kentucky Bureau Chief Lee Mueller, and E.R. Head Nurse Oma Elkins.

Water Sampling Seminar Slated

A KPDES water sampling seminar will be taught tomorrow (Oct. 25) at Prestonsburg Community College. Registration will be at 8:30 a.m. in the Pike Technology Building.

The all-day seminar will be targeted for officials and employees of private corporations, public institutions, and community systems who are required to collect water samples for drinking water, sewage, or coal mines. During the evening there will be a short session for those who have their own individual systems such as one-family systems which are fed by well, spring, rainwater or other sources.

Sampling requirements, including grab sampling, composite sampling and estimation of flow rates, will be covered during the morning. In the afternoon topics to be discussed will include preservation and holding time requirements for pertinent chemical constituents, including coal mine samples, sewage plants and other industrial groups. Interpretation and implementation of laboratory reports will be reviewed and discussed.

The evening session, from 7 to 8 p.m., will cover one-family systems.

The seminar has been planned by Prestonsburg Community College's Office of Continuing Education and the Physical Science division in collaboration with McCoy and McCoy, Inc., environmental consultants, and the Kentucky State Department for Environmental Protection.

For information on registration, contact Juanita Ratliff, Office of Continuing Education at Prestonsburg Community College, telephone 886-3863, ext. 215.

The Stories Trees Could Tell...

Lilley Cornett's Woods

By JEFF LEWIS

If trees could talk what stories they could tell us about the ephemeral humans who have passed an hour beneath their boughs! And most eloquent of all would be the trees of Lilley Cornett's Woods—once the home of a man who spurned the repeated offers of timber companies to buy his trees and cut them up, and today the site of the best-preserved remnant of the virgin forest which once covered Southeastern Kentucky.

Lilley Cornett came into possession of the woods after World War I. He steadfastly refused to allow any tree-cutting, all the more amazing because those were the days when, as one old logger said, "We just kept a-cuttin' until one man's saw ran into another one's."

Cornett bequeathed the land to the state at his death. Today, a visitor center at the entrance to the woods holds the research material for the Appalachian Ecological Research Station. Here future foresters and conservationists are trained under the auspices of Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond.

The main reason for preserving the woods in their pristine state is that the diversity of tree species in Lilley Cornett's Woods is unmatched in the Eastern United States. Also the immense age of some of the trees provides invaluable examples for students of two scientific disciplines which are concerned with the reading of tree-rings, called dendrochronology (dendro-, tree, and chronos, time, from the Greek) and dendroclimatology.

The walnut tree in your backyard may have been a seedling at the turn of the century (though not likely). But some of the trees in Cornett's Woods can be shown to be more than 400 years old—that is to say, they were already fine young trees when the first Pilgrim set foot upon Plymouth Rock.

Since all trees grow about the same amount during a year, the age of an undated piece of wood can be figured out by a technique called cross-dating, in which the order of thick and thin rings on a piece of wood of known age is "matched" to the unknown piece.

No camping is allowed at Lilley Cornett's Woods, but facilities are available at nearby Buckhorn Lake State Resort Park and at Kingdom Come State Park in Cumberland, Ky. All visitors to the Woods must be accompanied by a guide; however, no appointment is necessary. Tours are conducted on weekends from April to October, and daily from May 15 to August 15. For more information, call the Research Station at (606) 633-5828.

Attends Presidential Debate in Louisville

William Slade Stumbo, member of the Mountain Christian Academy debate team, will some day be telling future youngsters about attending the first Presidential debate of the election of 1984. When names were drawn, his was the one selected to attend the debate in Louisville, October 7. In the eighth grade at the academy, he is the son of Vernon and Pamela Stumbo, of McDowell.

The hard-to-get ticket was obtained through the Democratic party by Chris Perkins and Kathy Friend, coach of the debate team.

Friday Is Homecoming

Prestonsburg High School's football homecoming will be held Friday night when the Cats play Morgan county for the semi-district championship.

Festivities will begin Thursday afternoon at 4:30 with a parade through downtown Prestonsburg, followed by a bonfire at 7 at Archer Park.

Fourteen candidates will compete for the honor of becoming the 1984 Homecoming Queen. The coronation will take place during the halftime activities.

Morehead U. Changes To Save Estimated $600,000 a Year

A sweeping reorganization of Morehead State University will reduce administrative costs by more than $600,000 yearly, starting next July 1, and will result in overall savings of about $260,000 annually, according to MSU President Herb F. Reinhard.

"It is clear that the financial impact of the streamlining of the administrative structure will be greater than we first anticipated and the subsequent reallocation of funds can be fully utilized to further strengthen academic programs and student services," he said. Earlier estimates had placed the projected administrative cost savings at $400,000.

Dr. Reinhard said the reorganization, which became effective earlier this month, was the result of "an outstanding team effort" involving faculty, staff and administrators. The new structure was approved by unanimous vote of the Board of Regents, as well.

"We developed a proposed organization and asked our faculty and staff to react to it in writing," Dr. Reinhard said. "We were very pleased to receive 105 written responses and to incorporate more than 40 changes because of those comments and suggestions. Our people realized that we had to make the university more cost efficient and more effective in order to fulfill our mission to serve Eastern Kentucky."

The changes represent the first top-bottom restructuring of the institution since it became a university in 1966.

Major features of the new organization include reductions in the number of vice presidents from four to three, in academic deans from seven to four, in academic departments from 24 to 17 and in non-academic units from 31 to 26. In addition, the former six academic schools have been converted to three colleges.

"Our common goal was to reshape the University along more functional lines to gain efficiency and effectiveness and to make it easier for everyone to understand how the various components work together," Dr. Reinhard said. "We feel that goal has been achieved in fine fashion."

In addition to abolishing 11 key administrative staff positions, the reorganization also resulted in the elimination of 13 secretarial-clerical positions. The former administrators were reassigned to the faculty and the secretarial staff members were transferred to vacant positions within the same classification.

Six primary administrative units have new names as a result of the reorganization and the number of administrators reporting to the presidents office was reduced from nine to six. Now answering directly to President Reinhard are the three vice presidents, executive assistant to the president, assistant to the president for university relations and director of athletics.

The former Bureau of Student Affairs now is the Division of Student Development and the former Bureau of Fiscal Affairs now is the Division of Administrative and Fiscal Services. The Bureau of University and Regional Services was dropped. The former Division of Alumni, Development and Public Affairs now is identified as University Relations.

Five former academic schools—Business and Economics, Education, Humanities, Sciences and Mathematics and Social Services—were merged in the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Professional Studies. The former School of Applied Sciences and Technology was redesignated as a college.

Several academic departments were merged in the restructuring of the Division of Academic Affairs.

The Department of Agriculture and the Mining Technology Program were combined to create the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources. Three former departments—Accounting and Economics, Information Sciences, and Management and Marketing—now exist as the Department of Business and Economics.

The former departments of Curriculum and Instruction and Leadership and Foundations, together with the Office of Professional Laboratory Experiences were combined as the Department of Education. Two former departments were merged to create the Department of English, Foreign Languages and Philosophy.

The former departments of Geography, Government and History were consolidated as one department bearing the three names. The same happened with Psychology and Sociology. The Personal Development Institute now is a component of Home Economics.

"We already have seen that the new organizational structure is paving the way for creative and imaginative leadership which will make the University more responsive to the needs of students, faculty, staff, and the citizens of this region," Dr. Reinhard stated. "The reorganization will prove to be a vital factor in the University reaching its full potential for the benefit of all."

CHILDREN'S THERMOMETERS

Rectal thermometers are most often recommended for infants. When the child is one year or older, it is better to take the temperature in the armpit unless your doctor tells you otherwise. Place the bulb of the thermometer securely in the child's armpit and hold his arm across his chest. Allow the thermometer to remain there for 3-4 minutes. The normal temperature under the arm is 97.6°F. If you call a doctor with your child's temperature reading, always specify the way it was taken. Today, instead of a thermometer, a child's temperature can be taken by using small patches that you can stick to the child's forehead. They contain heat-sensitive, colored crystals and, as the temperature changes, a different color shows up in the form of a number.

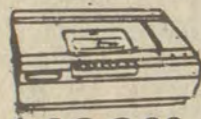

At COOLEY APOTHECARY you will find everything from various types of thermometers to prescription medications and convalescent aids. Discover for yourself why we are considered by many in this area to be the drug store with a difference. We are located at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Complete patient profiles are maintained for your convenience in obtaining proper credit for income tax and insurance purposes. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

First Shift of Mine No. 27, Circa 1939

These men, comprising the first shift of Mine No. 27 of the Elkhorn Coal Corporation, plus a couple of boys, paused for this picture more than 45 years ago. Note the carbide lamps then in use. Whether these were all his supporters is not known, but one man prominently displays a John Y. Brown for Governor poster. Only four men in the photo can be identified. They are Lloyd Daniels, Sr., Merida Brown, a former policeman here, M. Slone, and E. Bolen. Lloyd Daniels Jr., who furnished the picture, would appreciate help in identifying others in the group.

SAFETY TIPS FOR HALLOWEEN

OCTOBER 30
6:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Halloween is a time for Trick or Treating and it is a time to be safe. When it comes to safety, here are the basic rules:

1. Make sure all costumes are flame-resistant and that they do not dangle or trail behind the child.
2. Use only flashlights in out-door Jack o'Lanterns.
3. Make sure that young children are adequately supervised by an adult.
4. Go only to houses or apartments of people you know.
5. Make your child understand that he is to eat no treats until you have gone over the loot together. (A box of raisins or a bag of candy provided by you for the journey will make the child feel less tempted.)
6. Discard any unwrapped candy, or any goodies in torn packaging.

REMEMBER—TRICK OR TREAT NIGHT IN THE CITY OF PRESTONSBURG IS TUESDAY, OCTOBER 30 FROM 6:00 P.M. TO 8:30 P.M. ONLY CHILDREN 12 AND UNDER CAN WEAR MASKS.

THESE SAFETY TIPS ARE GIVEN TO YOU AS A PUBLIC SERVICE OF THE CITY OF PRESTONSBURG.

HAVE A HAPPY (AND ABOVE ALL) AND SAFE HALLOWEEN!

An ostrich egg equals the size of about 24 ordinary hen eggs, says International Wildlife magazine. One ostrich egg can provide breakfast for ten people.

Growing Up...

Guidelines for a Safe Halloween

Children look forward to having fun at Halloween. But many parents have become fearful of the dangerous tricks their little goblins may find in their treats.

Things that can spoil Halloween fun are dangerous dress, deadly treats, and roadway accidents. With a little careful planning, parents can help their children avoid these dangers and have a safe, fun Halloween, reminds Growing Up, the child development newsletter about school-age children.

Dangerous dress, treats, and accidents

Dangerous dress includes masks that restrict a child's view of traffic; wigs or costumes that are flammable; shoes that are poorly fitting or have high heels; costumes or toys that have sharp or pointed edges, and outfits that are so dark they cannot be seen at night.

Deadly treats can be any items that a child gets from a stranger.

Roadway accidents happen when a child's excitement overcomes caution when crossing a street.

Safety guidelines

Being aware of the dangers can help parents protect children against serious accidents. Here are some safety guidelines:

- Use make-up instead of masks.
- Use non-flammable material for costumes.
- Use reflector strips after dark.
- Restrict visits to homes of friends and relatives.
- Warn children to wait until they get home before eating any treats.
- Check all items, making sure they contain nothing dangerous. Throw away all opened or unwrapped candy.
- Make it clear that acts of vandalism are not allowed.
- Have a responsible adult accompany children who are out after dark. This is also a good time to review basic "Rules of the Road."
- Never cross a street without looking to the left and the right.
- Observe all traffic signs and regulations.
- Avoid talking with strangers.
- Never accept a ride from a stranger.

To the People of Floyd County

The state of Kentucky always seems to be a little behind most states in the country. But on NOVEMBER 6 we will have a chance to catch up on something.

Right now, the Kentucky Constitution does not allow a sheriff to run for re-election. This is the only county official who cannot do this, and we are the only state in this country that doesn't allow it. I hope every Kentuckian will join me on NOVEMBER 6 and vote YES for the Constitutional Amendment that will allow sheriffs to run for re-election.

VOTE YES ON NOVEMBER 6.

A Halloween Treat

The spirit of Hallowe'en is alive and well in the vicinity of Bryant's Branch at Price this year. Next Tuesday and Wednesday nights, twin witches will guard the gates at the property of Delmar and Erma Johnson, admitting only true devotees of the macabre and those who get their kicks from the late, late horror shows.

Mrs. Erma Johnson, who says she had only two children come to her door trick or treating last year because of the "candy scare", joined with neighbors to give them a different kind of treat this year—scary but safe. And she warns, it is not for the faint-hearted and recommends that parents accompany younger children.

To the accompaniment of eerie, spooky, spine-chilling shrieks, moans, groans, and the howling of "real, live werewolves," Count Dracula will hand out treats from his coffin, and the Nightstalker will conduct a tour of the cemetery where Jack the Ripper, Dr. Jekyll, and others of their ilk—20 in all—lie in restless repose. It is said that very likely most, if not all of them, will rise and join the ghostly chorus next Tuesday and Wednesday. As a matter of fact, the Mummy and werewolf have made definite commitments to be on hand.

Mrs. Johnson and her neighbors have spent a lot of time and hard work on this project—all to insure, as she says, "the kids can have fun on Hallowe'en."

Visiting hours at the "cemetery" are from approximately 7 until 10 p.m., next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Drift P.T.O. Plans Special Activities

Special activities planned by the Drift Grade School P.T.O. in coming weeks include a pancake breakfast, Nov. 6 (Election Day), beginning at 6 a.m. at the Drift school lunchroom. A winter carnival is planned for Dec. 8 at the school and anyone from the McDowell, Drift or Martin area who would like their school or organization to have a booth should call Gail Kidd, 285-3188, for more information.

HRMC Again To X-Ray Hallowe'en Treats

Highlands Regional Medical Center will again offer its x-ray facilities to area ghosts and goblins for a safe Halloween feast.

Like last year, the Medical Center will x-ray, free of charge, all trick or treat candies brought to the Emergency Department. HRMC will provide the service from 7 to 10 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 30, and Wednesday, Oct. 31.

"We're very happy to provide this service," said Ken Addington, Technical Director of Radiology. "While we can't guarantee that a negative x-ray means candy is completely safe to eat, we can say it means no metallic foreign objects have been put into the candy. That's a favorite trick of those few people who do tamper with candy, and one of the most dangerous."

Addington also said the E.I. duPont Company has again agreed to donate film used in x-raying Halloween candy. Radiology will increase its staffing those two nights to make sure candy can be x-rayed quickly without interfering with regular duties.

HRMC is extending the free x-ray offer to two nights so all area trick-or-treaters can use the service. A check with area officials indicates some stayed with the traditional date, a Wednesday this year, and some moved it to Tuesday to avoid conflicts with church services.

Trick-or-treat is scheduled for 6-9 p.m. Tuesday in Prestonsburg, 6-8 p.m. Tuesday in Paintsville, 6-9 p.m. Tuesday in Salyersville, 6-8 p.m. Wednesday in Inez and 6-9 p.m. Wednesday in Hindman.

Cats Defeat Pikeville for 8th Win

JAMES LITTLE, Prestonsburg running back, drags a Pikeville Panther defender during Friday's gridiron action.

(Tim Howell, Ray Howell and Kelly Moore contributed information for the following story.)

Prestonsburg High School's Black Cats scored their eighth victory in nine outings for the season last Friday night when they downed the visiting Pikeville Panthers, 25 to 15, but they had to come from behind to do it.

Prestonsburg drew first blood in the first quarter on John Goble's 7-yard pass to Mike Gunter. Goble kicked the extra point for a 7-0 lead, but a Black Cat fumble on their own 20 was recovered by the Panthers and they evened the score on Rowe's one-yard dive into the line and Friend's kick.

Prestonsburg went ahead in the second period when, deep in their own territory, Goble on an option ran 63 yards to the Pikeville 14, but Pikeville held and the Cats were obliged to settle for a field goal which gave Prestonsburg a 10-7 lead. On the succeeding kickoff, however, Pikeville's Mullins took the ball on his own 10 and raced 90 yards for a touchdown. On the conversion Case's pass to Rowe was good for two points and Pikeville held a 16-10 lead at the half.

Being behind was a new experience for the Cats, but the interior linemen—Moore, Ray, Griffith, Slone and Lewis—settled down to their usual brand of play, and B.D. Nunnery took a handoff and scored on a dazzling 48-yard run. The two-point conversion attempt failed. The score was 16 to 15. After the ensuing kickoff Prestonsburg held the Panthers on downs at the Pikeville 5, and when Pikeville attempted to kick it out the ball was snapped wild from center and Keith Slone recovered it for a touchback and Prestonsburg moved out to an 18-15 lead.

In fourth quarter action, rain began to take its toll. Both teams had trouble with ball control. The Panthers displayed their last big threat as they moved the ball to Prestonsburg's 10-yard line. The next few plays found both teams in a frenzy—four fumbles in as many downs within the 5-yard line. Prestonsburg finally found the handle as James Little got a crucial first down to get the Cats marching for the other end of the field. The next play found Little again on a 40-yard jaunt before being tackled by the Panthers on the 30-yard line. The drive was unsuccessful when Prestonsburg fumbled. Pikeville's drive was unsuccessful and the Cats, leading only by three points, 18 to 15, looked for some security points. Two plays later, B.D. Nunnery contributed the most spectacular run of the game, charging down the field for a 96-yard run for the game's final touchdown. Nunnery racked up 207 yards for the night.

This Friday, Prestonsburg will play host to Morgan County for the last regular season game when Prestonsburg's Homecoming game is for the district championship. Crowning of the Homecoming Queen will be during halftime activities.

Officials Attend Meeting

Plans for the development of its 1500-acre wildlife habitat and the possibility of stocking deer and wild turkey were discussed at a recent meeting of the Eastern Kentucky Wildlife Federation. The meeting was held at the Lafferty Memorial Wildlife Refuge, near Martin. Among those attending the meeting were (see photo), from left, Dean Franklin, archery range manager, Larry Short, wildlife biologist, and Doug Hensley, seventh district commissioner, Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources.

(Questions concerning the wildlife refuge should be directed to the Eastern Kentucky Wildlife Federation, Martin, Ky., phone 285-3804.)

Hunt Safely This Season

By JOHN WILSON
Dept. of Fish & Wildlife
A part of the tragedy of a hunting accident is that, except in very rare cases, it should not have happened at all. There is almost no such thing as a truly unavoidable hunting or firearm accident. Practically every accident is the result of someone ignoring one (or more) of the basic rules of firearm safety.

With most hunting seasons about to open, now is a good time to review some of these basic rules. Taking a few minutes to read and remember these ten commandments of gun safety might save a life this season.

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the first rule of gun safety—and the most important.
2. Guns carried into camp or home, or when otherwise not in use, must always be unloaded, and taken down or have actions open; guns always should be carried in cases to the shooting area.
3. Always be sure barrel and action are clear of obstructions, and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the gun you are carrying. Remove oil and grease from the chamber before firing.

4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble; keep the safety on until you are ready to shoot.

5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger; know the identifying features of the game you intend to hunt.

6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot; avoid all horseplay while handling a gun.

7. Unattended gun should be unloaded; guns and ammunition should be stored separately beyond reach of children and careless adults.

8. Never climb a tree or fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.

9. Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water; when at target practice, be sure your backstop is adequate.

10. Avoid alcoholic drinks before or during shooting.

If you'd like more formal instruction in hunter safety, or want to get a beginning hunter off on the right foot, there is probably a hunter education course in your vicinity this fall. These 10-hour courses, sponsored by the Division of Conservation Education of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, are free and lead to certification as a safe hunter. This certification is necessary to hunt in some states and on some federal installations in Kentucky. To learn the dates and locations of a class near you, contact your local conservation officer or call (502) 564-4336.

Bobcats Down Birch In Convincing Style

An improving Betsy Layne High School football team won its second victory in a row and its third of the season last Thursday night when it downed visiting Birch (W. Va.) High School, 26 to 6.

Birch scored its only marker in the first quarter on a pass to Buster. After that, it was all Betsy Layne. In the second quarter the Bobcats scored on a 21-yard pass from quarterback Bud Newsome to Jim Cecil. The two-point conversion was made good by Billy Campbell, who had 121 yards gained during the game. The second touchdown came on a run by Darvin Kidd. The conversion attempt failed. In the second quarter Billy Campbell went in on a 20-yard pass from Newsome, and in the final quarter Kenny Doer took another Newsome pass for a touchdown.

Newsome passed for a total of 237 yards, and the Bobcat running attack chalked up 475 yards.

Betsy Layne will close out the season Friday night when it goes to Pikeville to meet the Pikeville High School Panthers.

Cloud over Festival?

I am writing concerning the recent scandal of the Jenny Wiley Festival. My children and I were looking forward to celebrating and having a good old-fashioned time.

But a large, black cloud surrounded the Festival this year. A carnival was brought in and erected on public school grounds. Our children were not allowed to have their physical education classes outside and no recesses were allowed. Instead, on Monday, Oct. 8, a carnival literally took over the public school grounds at the expense of our children. The Board of Education should never have allowed this to happen. Our children should be considered "top priority". No amount of persuasion or money should alter the minds of our board members.

Next, arrests were made at this carnival, as was stated in last week's Floyd County Times. Three carnival employees were arrested for possession of a large amount of an illegal substance; possessing a defaced concealed weapon and disorderly conduct. Doing his job efficiently, our police chief closed down the carnival.

Just a short time thereafter, the carnival was operating again which was not mentioned in the Floyd County Times. Why? Someone evidently tied the hands of our police chief and took control of the laws of our city. Money was there to be made and they fully intended not to lose a cent. "Contracts could not be broken without a lawsuit," they said. Yes, they did have a contract with the carnival. Understand, though, that contracts can be broken on moral grounds. Where are the morals of the city of Prestonsburg? It was also said that marijuana was found on students in the elementary school and I should accept the fact that it is everywhere. I agree, but I firmly believe it should not be allowed to be brought in by adults on public school grounds. Some of these carnival employees were a danger to our children. We were lucky this time; what about next time? What if your child had been kidnapped or even worse?

You may think I'm being a bit rough but I wouldn't have thought so strongly about this situation if the carnival had been held at Archer Park or on city property. My children attend Prestonsburg Elementary. It's a shame they have to be endangered just by attending school.

I was told that because the carnival was held so close to the police station and fire department, adequate supervision would be provided. Some of the carnival people had in their possession a grocery bag of marijuana right under a policeman's nose.

There was a promise that there would be no more carnivals and may never be a Jenny Wiley Festival in Prestonsburg again. Because of all this silly concern over our children and our school, I am sure.

I think an explanation should be made to the people of Prestonsburg; Floyd County and Alice McDonald, superintendent of schools of Kentucky of why our police chief could not perform his rightful duties and why our children were put in a dangerous situation. And, most of all, exactly who was responsible.

The Jenny Wiley Festival is a good thing and wonderful fun for young and old. If only politics of the city would back off and let us celebrate our heritage without endangering anyone in the process.

Protest the Handling Of Conn Obituary

I'm writing in concern, hurt and very mad, when I read Oct. 3-84 obituary section on the death of Dennis Wayne Conn. His past arrest had nothing to do with his death. That part of his past was printed a few months ago when it happened. His death was no time to bring up and print his past. The person responsible for this has hurt lots of people, who love Wayne. The fact is, it was not a family member on Wayne's side of the family (This was not made clear). His death was reported in two other well-known papers, they reported as should have been. I read the obituary of a friend a few months ago. You didn't dig up any gory past.

Get your facts straight before you hurt another family.

The loss of Wayne hurt enough without you stabbing our hearts again.

His aunt,
TALMA BEASLEY
Taylorsville, Ky.

This letter is regarding the obituary of Dennis Wayne Conn which appeared in the October 3rd issue of the Floyd County Times.

I feel that the reporter who wrote the obituary used very poor taste in writing it.

Being present before and after the funeral, I experienced the grief inflicted upon the family, as well as myself, aunt of the deceased. Also, I am aware of the suffering the family went through from the time of the stabbing to the time of his demise.

Why was it necessary to cause the family more grief by writing all the extra unnecessary items in the obituary?

Wayne was very precious to our family and we all loved him very much. He was not the type of man who even thought of bringing harm to other people.

My nephew had not been convicted on the mentioned burglary charges, therefore, why even mention it in his obituary? If the reporter had to publish it, then why couldn't he have placed it in another section of the newspaper?

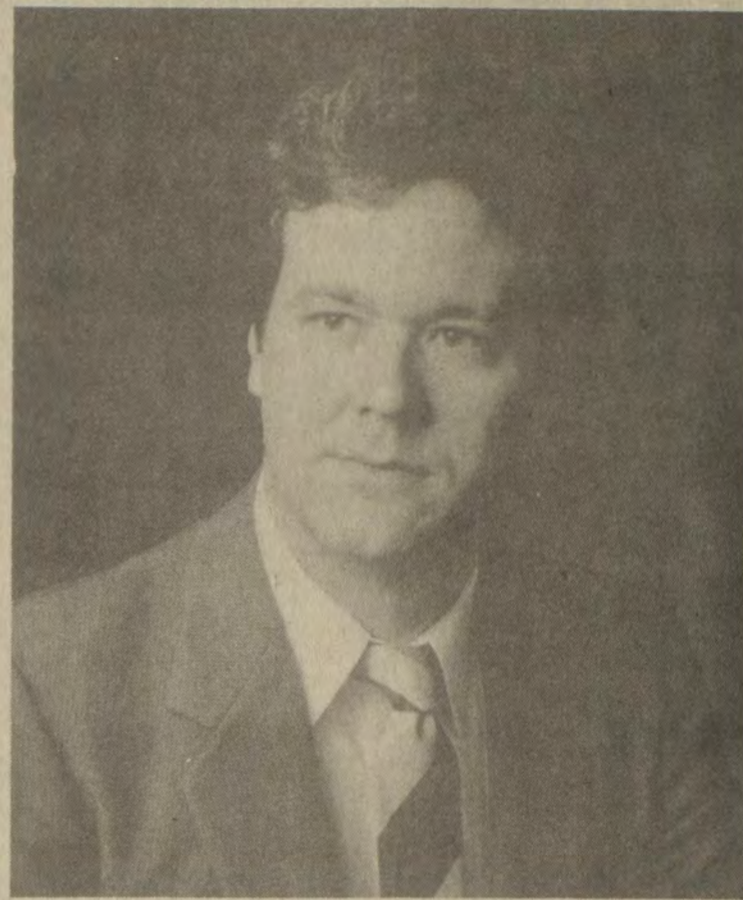

In addition, the home where he was stabbed was not the home of his family member.

VA Questions and Answers

Q—Is there any treatment available from the Veterans Administration for alcoholism?

A—Yes, the VA has a program for the treatment of veterans for alcoholism and other drug dependence. Contact your nearest VA medical center or outpatient clinic for treatment.

Q—Can active duty service personnel apply for a Veterans Administration guaranteed home loan?

A—Yes, active duty personnel are eligible after serving a period of more than 180 days on active duty status. VA Form 26-1880 must be completed and submitted to the VA regional office with a statement of service signed by their commanding officer. The VA will then issue a certificate of eligibility.

Q—I sold my home purchased by using my Veterans Administration loan guaranty benefit to a non-veteran. The current owner is selling the home to a veteran. Can my VA loan guaranty entitlement be restored?

A—Yes, a recent change in the law allows restoration of a VA loan guaranty entitlement when the property is sold by the veteran purchaser to a non-veteran and subsequently resold to an eligible veteran if the new purchaser substitutes his/her entitlement.

Q—My husband was killed in World War II while on active duty and was buried in a national cemetery. Is it possible for me to be buried in a national cemetery also?

A—Yes, the Veterans Administration says that any spouse of an honorably discharged veteran killed while on active duty may be buried in a national cemetery.

Q—Can a non-veteran assume a GI loan?

A—Veterans Administration approval is not required before a veteran or a nonveteran assumes a GI home loan. However, the veteran-seller will continue to be liable in the case of a loan default, unless the buyer is a credit-worthy obligor who is acceptable to the VA.

Q—I am a veteran receiving improved Veterans Administration pension benefits. What effect, if any, will employment have on my pension?

A—Your pension benefits will be reduced dollar for dollar by any earnings or income that you receive from other sources. Also, a new determination may be required regarding your basic eligibility for pension, depending on the nature and extent of the employment and your age.

Q—Can a World War I veteran receive outpatient treatment at a Veterans Administration medical facility?

A—Yes, a World War I veteran can receive outpatient treatment, including medication at a VA medical facility for any medical disability.

Q—Can the closing costs of a mortgage be included in the amount of the loan that is guaranteed by the Veterans Administration?

A—Except for refinancing loans, closing costs of a mortgage cannot be included in the loan that is guaranteed by VA.

Q—How long after the death of a veteran does a survivor have to request a burial allowance from the Veterans Administration?

A—The claim for any type of burial benefit must be received by the VA within two years of the date of the veteran's burial or cremation.

Q—How does the type of discharge affect eligibility to Veterans Administration benefits?

A—The type of discharge is determined by the service branch releasing the veteran. The VA is required to consider the type of discharge issued to a veteran in determining eligibility for benefits. Usually, a general or honorable discharge will qualify a veteran or surviving claimant for benefits sought. In all other cases, the VA is required to determine the character of service as part of the review of any claim. The VA review may or may not establish eligibility based on facts in the individual case.

Q—When I purchase a home using a Veterans Administration loan guaranty, will my wife's income be considered?

A—The veteran's and the spouse's income are considered in determining ability to repay the loan.

Q—I completed six months of active duty with the National Guard. Am I eligible for Veterans Administration hospital benefits?

A—Members of the National Guard who complete active duty for training are not eligible for VA hospital benefits unless during such service they are disabled from a disease or injury incurred or aggravated in line of duty.
