Attorney General Acts To Curb Phone Sales By California Firm

Attorney General David L. Armstrong announced last week that he has filed a lawsuit in Franklin Circuit Court and obtained a restraining order against a California business selling office supplies to Kentucky businesses and individuals.

According to Armstrong, the business has operated under several different names including Continental Paper Company, Central Processing, National Supply Center, and National Processing. Presently, it appears to be using the name Data Supply. Armstrong said that the business seems to focus primarily on small businesses, contacting them by telephone in an attempt to sell its office supplies, usually photocopying paper and chemicals.

In the suit, Armstrong alleges that the business, Park Distributing, Inc., has engaged in several deceptive practices which violate the Consumer Protection Act which prohibits misleading and deceptive practices.

Juvenile Drug—Drink Abuse Treatment Program Studied

During 1985 Kentucky courts are expected to commit to state custody more than 500 juvenile offenders with histories of alcohol and drug abuse. The Kentucky Department for Social Services is developing an experimental treatment project in Elizabethtown which, if successful, may become a standard process in working with juvenile delinquents who also have substance abuse problems.

The project is under study by the department's Division for Children's Residential Services and is located at the Lincoln Village Treatment Center in Elizabethtown. A one-year allocation of $50,000 has been committed for training and technical assistance to be provided by the North Central Comprehensive Care Center, also in Elizabethtown.

Residential Services director William Verbeten said the project addresses a serious situation facing juvenile treatment systems across the nation.

"Alcohol and drug abuse is a contributing factor in approximately 95 percent of the cases we receive," he said. "Yet most of the existing treatment therapies tackle the delinquency issue with only secondary attention to drug or alcohol abuse. This project attempts to help the youth first with the drug or alcohol problem itself as a cause for criminal or otherwise delinquent acts."

Lincoln Village manager Chuck Fenigstein gave this example. "A teenager who had been involved in some petty thefts began using and abusing a drug. To support his habit, he soon took part in more serious crimes. Certainly we can work with the youth on his delinquent behavior problems. But the drug habit won't necessarily go away and any success we have could then be decreased once the juvenile's time with us is finished."

That's why the Lincoln Village project is so important, according to Fenigstein. "The problem of a kid leaving our program and later returning to old, bad habits is further complicated when drugs or alcohol are involved," he said. "In this project we want to concentrate on helping the juvenile develop a sense of self-esteem, self-confidence, a positive lifestyle without dependence on drugs or alcohol."

Treatment staff at Lincoln Village are receiving special training in substance abuse counseling from advisors with the North Central Comprehensive Care Center and from Fenigstein, who is a certified chemical dependency counselor. Verbeten said, "This wealth of expertise both at the facility and close by is the reason we selected Lincoln Village for the pilot project. If we get some positive results, it's our goal to have at least one certified chemical dependency counselor in each of our programs."

Verbeten said the Lincoln Village project will have some hurdles to clear before a statewide treatment program is approved. "Most drug and alcohol treatment therapies involve voluntary clients. Lincoln Village is a residential facility first, so we will be trying to motivate non-voluntary participants," he said. "But that's a specific aspect of the alcohol-drug abuse problem. Another aspect is the issue of the role-models which most of the juveniles have experienced—parents, other family members and friends who abuse the use of alcohol and drugs. So some of the points—like the negative impact of drug abuse, vandalism or other criminal offenses—are very basic indeed."

Once the Lincoln Village project has been evaluated, results of the study will be shared both within the Department for Social Services as well as with outside agencies.

Fenigstein said a truly successful treatment program should not end with a juvenile's stay in a state facility. "Community support through such groups as Alcoholics Anonymous, the Comprehensive Care Centers and others will be necessary so that when these kids go home and face a problem they can't handle, there will be people and places for the family and the individual to turn to for support. After all, the real impact of alcohol and drug abuse is felt by the families and the communities right along with the individual."

Property of Late County Clerk Sells

The proposed sale of the Mayo subdivision property of the late C. "Ollie" Robinson, longtime Floyd county clerk, attracted no buyers last week, the house reverting to the First Commonwealth Bank on a bid of $26,700.

The property, which was ordered sold to pay debts against the late clerk's estate, was reckoned by an appraiser to be worth $40,000.

In another court-ordered sale conducted by Master Commissioner Marshall Davidson on the courthouse steps here Friday, a commercial property on South Lake Drive owned by DeGarmo DeRossett and Ruth J. DeRossett also went to First Commonwealth on a bid of $98,000.

The building, which formerly housed the Coal Bit Company, was appraised at $140,000. John Leake, who opened bidding for the bank at $93,500 was forced into a brief duel with Prestonsburg businessman Hansel Cooley, who dropped out after bidding $97,500 for the property.

In other courthouse sales, a mobile home and lot on Spurlock Creek owned by Clifford and Edith Ousley and appraised at $5000 was bought by Philip Akers, of Prestonsburg, for $6801, and a once-acre tract on Abbott Creek owned by Etta Jane Horn and the late Carl D. Horn was bought by Mike Spradlin, of Abbott Creek, for $6701.

The Horn property, which was appraised at $10,000, once belonged to Spradlin's father, Grady Spradlin.

Tincher Named Council Chairman

A keener sense of community cooperation and awareness is the goal of the newly elected Chairman of the Community Advisory Council of the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center.

At a council meeting last week, Rev. Roy Tincher, pastor of the First Church of God of Little Paint, said, "As chairman, I see our role to be a support team for the Corps, and to work for better community understanding."

"There are some very positive programs going on here for young people, and we need to give the Center all the support we can."

The 24-member advisory council will meet once a month, according to Center Director Kermit Berry, and provide liaison between the center and the community in these areas:

- Ideas on integrating the center more fully into the community.

- Suggestions for community projects and special events for student participation.

- Advice on possible work experience positions.

In addition, Berry said, he hoped council members would advise on work and life situations, and become more familiar with the center's operations, goals and objectives.

Melton Adamson, center training manager, outlined projects that are now in the planning stage, including compiling a list of jobs requested by people in the community which Job Corps students might perform.

"We have had several requests to have our students work on community projects," he said. "A requirement is that they must be for non-profit ventures."

Adamson said he hoped the council will help find such projects and evaluate and recommend those that students might work on.

The Perkins Job Corps Center has 165 students, and offers training in six vocational education work skills: building maintenance, carpentry, electricity, plumbing, masonry, and culinary arts.

Other members of the council are: Father Ralph Beiting, St. Martha's Church; Prestonsburg Fire Chief Thomas A. Blackburn; Bill Ray Collins, city councilman; Mayor Harold Cooley; City Manager David Evans; Robert E. Deertfield, maintenance superintendent, Jenny Wiley State Park; Joe Ferguson, county ranger, state Division of Forestry; Prestonsburg Police Chief Stan Fletcher; Chalmer Frazier, vice president property management, May Management Co.; William O. Goebel, III, city councilman; Abby Grant, coordinator, Women in Community Service; Glenda Hall, counseling supervisor, Kentucky Employment Service; Jim Humphrey, service manager, Elliott Co.; Rev. Dr. Lowell Langefeld, First United Methodist Church; Julia M. May, executive director, Prestonsburg-Floyd County Housing; Ned Pillersdorf, Public Defender; James Ratcliff, coordinator, Continuing Education, Prestonsburg Community College; Jim Reed, Employment and Training Program supervisor, State Employment Service; Sister James Roach, administrator, Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin; Leon Russell, superintendent, Jenny Wiley State Park; Mike Sanders, management coordinator, Christian Appalachian Project, Martin; Burl Wells Spurlock, president, First Commonwealth Bank; and County Judge John M. Stumbo.

Berry was elected vice-chairman of the Council, and Center Secretary Karen Wicker, was elected secretary.

Georgetown College Grant To Honor Late Congressman

Georgetown College's President W. Morgan Patterson has authorized the designation of an annual Carl D. Perkins Scholarship at the school honoring the memory of the late U.S. Representative who served in that office 36 years.

The first scholarship will be awarded in the 1985-'86 academic year, according to the announcement. Georgetown's president listed six guidelines for administering and awarding the scholarship each year:

- One scholarship of up to $1,000, depending on financial need, will be awarded to an incoming student each year. The scholarships can be renewed for up to three additional years as long as the student maintains a 3.0 (B) grade point average.

- Only students who are Kentucky residents will be considered with preference given to students from Eastern Kentucky.

- All incoming students who apply for financial aid will automatically be considered for the scholarship. Preference will be given to students who plan to become elementary or secondary teachers.

- One such new scholarship per year will be awarded.

The scholarship should be matched at least equally from funds available through the Title IV financial aid programs (Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, National Direct Student Loans, and/or College Work-Study Program). National Direct Student Loan Funds would be especially appropriate for this purpose.

A letter will accompany the financial aid award telling the student recipient about Congressman Perkins and noting that it was largely his efforts that made possible the various types of aid included in his or her package.

The award will be made by personnel appointed by the president of the college.

State Health Projects Okehed

A total of 21 projects, representing more than $23 million in new capital expenditures, were granted certificates of need by the Kentucky Health Facilities and Health Services Certificate of Need and Licensure Board during last week's meeting.

Among the projects approved were nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR) services at Humana Hospital University and Medical Center Imaging in Louisville. The board also approved a 70-bed replacement hospital in Fulton and a full-body CT scanner for a Richmond hospital. Humana Hospital Audubon in Louisville was granted another cardiac catheterization laboratory, while rehabilitation units were approved for Ashland and Elizabethtown. The Lincoln Trail Recovery Centre in Elizabethtown was granted a certificate of need upon reconsideration by the board. The proposal was amended from 100 beds to 40 beds, with an adjusted cost of $2,586,212.

Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington was granted a certificate of need to purchase and install a linear accelerator after the proposal spent almost three years in litigation. Three requests for reconsideration, Hillview Manor in Scottsville, Grant Manor in Williams-town and Owenton Manor in Owenton, were granted while a request from Federal Hill Manor in Bardstown was denied.

King's Daughters' Medical Center, Ashland was permitted to establish a 21-bed rehabilitation unit by converting 21 acute care beds and renovate space for therapy services ($90,000).

The Paintsville Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Institute, Inc. application to establish an ambulatory outpatient surgery center containing two operating rooms ($287,530) was at the request of the applicant, deferred until the May meeting.

The Irish were referred to as Scotti in early Latin documents. When some of these people settled Scotland about 500 A.D. they gave the country their name.

BSA Color Guard

Den No. 2, Pack 32, of Prestonsburg Cub Scouts, was invited by the Prestonsburg Kiwanis to act as Color Guard, November 18, for the dedication of the new flag pole in the Municipal parking lot in honor of all Vietnam veterans. This event helped the boys earn a special patch for the 75th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America.

The boys were busy the first part of December making Christmas cards, getting gifts and fruit to give to patients of the Mountain Manor Nursing Home, December 17, when they sang Christmas carols and visited with the patients.

The boys appreciated the Kiwanis invitation and also the refreshments provided by nurses at Mountain Manor.

Participating were Jacky Blackburn, Jr., Doug Brown, Phillip Caudill, Nathan Hardee, Timmy Hatfield, John Mattox, Greg Sellars, Kerry Snyder and Shad Vickers.

FAME

NORTH AND SOUTH — Elizabeth Taylor, Robert Mitchum and Kirstie Alley have joined the cast of "North and South," a ten-hour ABC miniseries. The drama is based on John Jakes's best-seller, which chronicles the turbulent events that lead to the Civil War.

Elizabeth Taylor

The film follows two families on opposite sides of the conflict from 1842 until the end of the war in 1865. The Mains, South Carolina plantation owners, and the Hazards, Pennsylvania industrialists, first meet at West Point. Immediately they become caught in the widening gulf between the North and the South.

Miss Taylor will play a flamboyant proprietor of a New Orleans bordello. Mitchum stars as an Irish military surgeon who is looking for the proper husband for his spirited daughter. Miss Alley portrays a 19th-century abolitionist. The miniseries is scheduled to begin production in February.

The frequent transitions faced by all men and women, and, by extension, the fluid fates of countries and political ideologies, are what bind Lean's films together into a formidable, and with few exceptions, popular oeuvre. Think of his great films, "Dr. Zhivago," which was set during the turbulent times of the Russian Revolution; "Lawrence of Arabia," which also presented a country during a state of upheaval; and "The Bridge on the River Kwai," set during World War II.

It is the people who are most important in Lean's movies. And the same is true in "A Passage to India." Based on the novel by E.M. Forster, the 74-year-old Lean has written, directed and edited the film with characteristic style and grace.

Here, the very British Adela Quested (Judy Davis) journeys to India. She gradually realizes her civilized airs are mere upper-class trappings. When she seeks to learn about

Poore Says Road Needs Great But Funds Low

"Unless there are adequate transportation facilities serving an area, there is no point in even expecting to be considered" as the choice spot for a new manufacturing plant or corporate facility. "You won't even have the opportunity to lose."

That was the message of Irving Rubin, Dearborn, Mich., government affairs planning manager for Ford Motor Co., speaking at the recent annual Transportation Conference in Lexington.

"Every study I am aware of," Rubin said, "indicates that transportation is one of the two or three most important factors in corporate decisions about where to locate plant facilities."

When Ford looked at variable costs associated with six different plants recently, Rubin said, costs of other factors were examined. But "conclusions were clear that transportation was by far the most important, the largest one of these costs, and far more important than health care, energy and state and local taxes."

Transportation Secretary Floyd Poore told the conference that Kentucky may have to postpone some $50 million in federal-aid construction projects until late '85 or '86 because of inadequate state matching funds. Not being able to let the projects now, Poore said, means that the cost to the state will be more in the long run.

Scrambling to find funds to match federal aid is just one of the problems created by a sick Road Fund. There are no funds available for resurfacing toll roads, several of which are in the 15-25 year age bracket and are falling apart. The estimated cost of needed major maintenance for the toll roads is $25 million annually, "and we don't have that," said Poore.

Poore added that the resurfacing budget for other highways (except Interstates) is in "dire straits." He said the Transportation Cabinet needs a minimum of an additional $50 million a year for resurfacing, another $10 million a year for mowing and maintenance, and another $5 million a year for snow and ice removal.

Poore said both the state motor pool and road maintenance fleet are in need of replacement vehicles. The motor pool of 1,600 vehicles has more than 900 vehicles with over 100,000 miles of wear. The maintenance fleet of more than 13,500 vehicles has received no new equipment in the past four years. Snow and ice removal, Poore said, has been severely hampered because "one-third of the fleet is down."

Every year from October to January about 3,500 bald eagles cluster on the banks of Alaska's Chilkat River for a salmon feast, says National Wildlife magazine. The eagles fly from as far away as Washington state to join the dinner party that is not held anywhere else in the world.

with the state's legislators to deal with the Road Fund problem.

Rubin challenged KBT members to a course of "eternal vigilance" in making sure funds earmarked for highways aren't diverted to other uses.

KBT maintains that the Road Fund is unable to meet essential services because of the failure to return nearly $47 million annually in severance tax to the Road Fund to pay off resource recovery road bonds. The group has warned that the situation is critical and can only get worse without General Assembly action.

"Tourism has been projected as the number one industry in the next ten years," Poore told the conference. "How many people do you think will come to our state if its roads are so rough that it tears up their motor homes and house trailers? The latest estimate is that Kentuckians are spending over $200 million per year for repair of vehicles because of roadway problems. Wouldn't it be better to put that $200 million into resurfacing and improving our roadways?"

All told, the Transportation Cabinet needs $150 million "just to stay even" in maintaining the states roads, Poore said. "Every year we don't have this means we backlog $150 million of needs. We have a cancer eating at the transportation system of Kentucky, and if we do not do something those who follow us are going to have to pay a tremendous bill," Poore said.

Poore challenged KBT members and others attending the conference to work

Headwaters To Present 'Frontier Nursing' On KET

"Whatever the weather, if the man could come for the nurse, the nurse could go back with the man."
Tuesday, Jan. 29 at 7:30 p.m., Headwaters continues its series on KET with a look at the beginnings of the Frontier Nursing Service.
In 1929, Mary Marvin Breckenridge Patterson, cousin of the founder of the FNS, made a silent black-and-white film, "The Forgotten Frontier." The documentary gives a portrait of the first nurse-midwives in this country, as well as a landscape no longer seen in the mountains. Clips of the film, accompanied by music by Lee Stamper and Tommy Lee Hunter, are narrated by Miss Patterson. She describes making the film: "I have to explain the uneven exposure—I had a camera that you had to crank by hand, and my arm was so cold, I couldn't keep an even stroke."
Headwaters also interviews Betty Lester, the 13th nurse-midwife to arrive in the U.S. "I had never seen a mountain like it in my life with all these rocks and things and almost straight up. Then we got to the top and had to go down the other side and I thought I'd go over my horse's head but I didn't. Then when we got to the foot of the hill, there was the river."
Headwaters will be seen every Tuesday evening at 7:30 on KET during January and February. Produced by Appalshop of Whitesburg, this series about mountain culture and concerns will be seen this year for the first time on KET. The producers appreciate local reaction to the shows. Letters may be sent to KET, 600 Cooper Drive, Lexington, Ky. 40502, or to Appalshop, Box 743, Whitesburg, Ky. 41858.

There are more than 700 life-size glass flowers and plants in the Botanical Museum in the University Museum of Harvard.

No Job and Little Hope

Discouraged workers—who are they? Generally speaking, they are unemployed people who have stopped looking for work but who would work if they thought jobs were available. The official definition for a discouraged worker, according to state labor market analyst Ed Blackwell, is "a person who doesn't have a job and hasn't been actively looking for work for four weeks."

He said an unofficial estimate by Department for Employment Services staff shows 90,000 to 100,000 Kentuckians fall into this category.

"Some of these people have held jobs at some time, been laid off, exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits and given up looking for work because they don't believe jobs are available," Blackwell said.

"Some, especially women, who worked outside the home but would enter the labor force if jobs were available," he said. "An example of this is in Letcher County, where the labor force jumped by more than 400 people in November because people were applying for jobs at a new shopping center. Many of these probably were wives of laid off coal miners. They may have been looking for jobs for the first time."

Blackwell said such an influx into the labor force supports the department's view that people will work when jobs are available.

"There are situations where, in a two-income family, when one spouse loses a job, the family does not relocate because the other spouse has a good job," Blackwell said. "The family might move if both the husband and wife could find work elsewhere, but because of economic conditions nationwide, chances are not good for both to find jobs."

In many cases, especially if the wife was in a minimum-wage job, she just drops out of the labor force, Blackwell said. "This is especially true where garment and shoe factories in Kentucky have closed in the last few years," he added.

If discouraged workers were included in labor force figures, what impact would it have on unemployment rates?

"Based on trends we've observed since the last recession began in 1979, inclusion of discouraged workers in the labor force would push the unemployment rate up by one to 1.5 percent each month," Blackwell said.

"We have a record of how many people have lost their jobs and exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits," he said. "We also know many wives in one-income families would work if jobs were available." Blackwell also cited the number of food stamp families as an indicator of discouraged workers. "We figure in each family receiving food stamps, at least one adult is unemployed," he said. "Inclusion of these people in the labor force would give us a better picture of economic activity."

Why aren't discouraged workers included in the labor force, if they are willing to work?

The federal Bureau of Labor Statistics determines who will be included in the labor force and how unemployment rates are computed. Federal officials maintain there is no single way of measuring unemployment that can satisfy all interests. Furthermore, the National Commission on Employment and Unemployment Statistics has considered inclusion of discouraged workers in the labor force and has recommended that BLS continue excluding them.

The bureau does obtain data on discouraged workers each month from the U.S. Census Bureau, but the sample is not large enough to provide a breakdown for each state or county, Blackwell said.

"Competition for jobs is the key," he said. "If you are looking for a job and some discouraged workers have the same or better skills as you, but perhaps are not able or willing to relocate, whereas you can, then they are not actively competing with you for that job."

In the early 1900's, the riverboat would steam into town. At the sound of the whistle and the calliope, all Prestonsburg would gather at the Upper Landing to see what news, goods, or travelers had come up the Big Sandy.

At this same location, the carefree charm of a bygone era is recalled today at "The Landing," the new name for Prestonsburg's foremost address...at an affordable price.

Drug, Alcohol Abuse Task Force Slates Organizational Meeting

The organizational meeting of the Governor's Task Force on Drug and Alcohol Abuse Prevention has been scheduled for Jan. 24 in Frankfort. Registration is set for 9:30 a.m. and the opening session will begin at 10 a.m. at the Capital Plaza Hotel on Wilkinson Boulevard.

Task Force chairman and former governor Julian Carroll said in a letter to the 35 members of the organization that the initial meeting will focus on discussion of issues and concerns to be studied by the task force.

In late 1984 Gov. Martha Layne Collins created the Task Force on Drug and Alcohol Abuse Prevention to expand state government role in combating those problems. The new advisory council assumed the activities and responsibilities of the now-abolished Governor's Advisory Committee to the Kentucky War on Drugs, Inc.

The task force is attached to the Cabinet for Human Resources and staffed by the Division of Substance Abuse within the cabinet's Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services. Division director Mike Townsend serves as vice-chairman of the task force.

A "Santa Claus School" was opened in 1937 in Albion, NY to train men to play the part of Santa Claus. Six students enrolled for the one week course.

No matter how you slice it, a day's electricity costs less.

In an all-electric home, electricity does everything, everyday—including heat—for less than the cost of a small pizza.

Think about it. Electricity lights your home, cooks your meals, cleans the house and dishes, entertains you, washes and irons your clothes, powers your tools, heats your water and, with an electric heat pump, keeps you warm in winter and cool in summer.

Electricity does all this and more for about what you might spend for lunch.

In addition to being a great value, electricity is delivered wherever and whenever you want it, instantly, with just a flick of a switch. Having dependable power when you need it is something we all take for granted.

Why Plants May Fail to Flower

Your neighbor's African violets are covered with purple flowers, and yours haven't a bud. The lilacs along the driveway bloomed beautifully when grand mother owned the house, but now they're just a bunch of sticks. The roses bloomed better last year before you finally fertilized them. What happened?

What happened? too little light? too little thinning? the wrong kind of fertilizer? What?

Let's look at these various situations and decide what went wrong. There are various environmental, cultural and plant-related problems that can cause or contribute to a plant not flowering.

In the "Case of the Non-blooming Violet," (I'm an Agatha Christie addict) the plants probably didn't receive enough light. Flowering plants generally require part to full sun outside or relatively bright sunlight or artificial light inside in order to flower. There are exceptions, such as impatiens and rhododendrons, that are happier in the shade. Where shade is too dense in an outdoor garden, plants may need to be moved or overhead tree branches thinned.

Inadequate light isn't the only environmental problem that can decrease or prevent flowering. Summer droughts followed by warm, wet falls can cause spring buds that develop in fall to swell or even open, almost invariably to be zapped by cold winter temperatures. Cold can also cause a problem in early spring if temperatures warm up, buds begin to develop and a killing frost suddenly occurs. Most of us have seen the beautiful creamy-white flowers on saucer and star magnolias go from perfection to mush overnight.

With the non-blooming lilacs, if they're in full sun, the problem may simply be cultural—years of neglect that have produced an abundance of non-flowering old wood. When flowering shrubs such as lilacs, forsythia and spirea become overgrown with old wood, the wood should be gradually pruned out to stimulate new growth.

If pruning was done, it may have been at the wrong time of year, inadvertently removing already formed flower buds. Prune spring blooming trees and shrubs after they bloom in spring; summer and fall blooming plants in early spring before buds develop. And don't overprune, stimulating lots of suckers and rank growth.

Another cultural problem may be fertilization—too little, too much, the wrong stuff. Too little and overall growth will be stunted; too much, especially nitrogen, and leaves and stems (vegetable growth) may be produced at the expense of flowers. That may have happened with the non-blooming roses, especially if the same nitrogen fertilizer that was used on the lawn was used on the roses.

With houseplants, over or under watering can interfere with flowering. Buds can drop if roots are either overly wet or overly dry. They can also drop if the humidity is too low.

Two other plant factors that can prevent or reduce flowering are immaturity—the plant simply isn't old enough to flower, and alternate flowering—heavy flowering some years, light flowering others. Alternate flowering is common with crabapples and dogwoods.

Timely Tip: Keep English ivy from climbing on wooden structures and trees. Tiny gripping roots can separate boards, foster rotting by trapping moisture behind its dense mat, harbor insects, and shade out sunlight in trees.

The Best of Bird Feeders and Bird Foods

"Is there 'one perfect birdfeeder'?" "What kind of bird food is best?"

These are questions I'm often asked, and I am glad to have the extensive research of Dr. Al Geis, Urban Wildlife Biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, to back up and expand upon my own observations and experience in feeding birds.

Of course there is no "perfect" feeder or over-all best food for all birds, but we can come pretty close to the ideal: Birdfeeder: A tubular, plastic feeder stocked with sunflower seed is highly successful. You'll find fewer squirrels at this feeder than at others, particularly if the feeding "ports" are lined with metal and if you place it a distance from overhanging eaves and branches. You can pick and choose your perch sizes to suit the kinds of birds you have—or want to have—at your feeder. Long perches accommodate large birds. Small birds need short perches—or no perches at all.

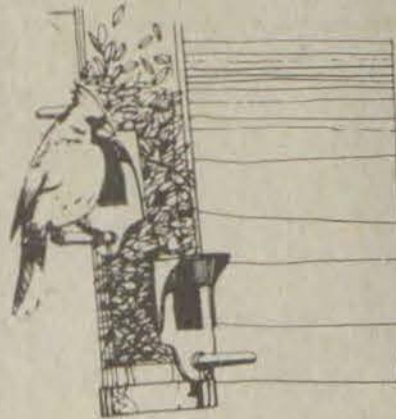

Different birds like different foods, of course, but if there is one "general" food favorite, it's sunflower seed.

Sunflower seed (striped or black oil varieties; hulled or in the shell) will attract cardinals, goldfinches, purple finches, grosbeaks and a variety of other colorful, seed-eating birds. Also, birds such as chickadees, titmice, woodpeckers and nuthatches, all of which depend heavily on overwintering insects (adults and larvae) and spiders, will frequent a sunflower seed feeder.

Black oil sunflower seed, with the highest calorie count per gram of kernel, is a fine source of energy, a real necessity for birds when the weather is windy and cold. The seed is probably a good food substitute for the insect-eaters, especially in certain urban areas where their natural diet may be limited.

Buying seed: You can buy your sunflower seed pre-packaged or loose. Bagged seed (striped or black oil varieties) can be found in most supermarkets, hardware stores and agricultural co-ops. It's less expensive to buy 25 to 100-pound bags. An even better buy is loose seed that you bag yourself. That way you get to choose striped or black oil seed. More important, you get to make sure the seed is clean, not infiltrated with stems, insect-riddled seed, and dirt. Clean, black oil sunflower seed is your best buy.

Hulled sunflower seed costs more than unhulled seed, but it's a no-waste food that both saves your plantings from being smothered in hulls and yourself from having to clean hulls off the ground. As for the birds, hulled sunflower seed means less work in getting at the snack that you've put out for them.

Court Ruling Weakens Breathalyzer Testing

A motorist's refusal to take a Breathalyzer test cannot be entered as evidence in a drunken driving trial, the Kentucky Court of Appeals ruled last Friday.

The court said that admitting such evidence is "fundamentally unfair" and that its "only plausible use is to prejudice the fact-finders into thinking the defendant's refusal to submit to testing is an effort to conceal intoxication."

Lt. Larry Fentress, legal officer for the Kentucky State Police, said the decision could significantly hamper police in getting convictions in drunken driving cases.

"I think a jury puts a lot of credence into Breathalyzer tests and that meaningful evidence is provided by informing them that a defendant would not take the test," Fentress said.

Officers will be notified of the court ruling and will be advised to "be cautious until this issue runs its course in the courts," he added.

In upholding a decision by Fayette Circuit Judge N. Mitchell Meade in the case of Waldon L. Hager, the appellate court unanimously said state law required that a person suspected of drunken driving be informed that he could lose his driver's license for refusing to submit to certain tests.

But the law "does not address the admissibility at trial of a refusal to submit to (Breathalyzer) testing," the court said.

The appellate court said there were many reasons that a motorist would choose not to submit to such testing, "not the least of which may be to escape the physical and emotional trauma and supreme embarrassment of being forced to a public place for testing when, in fact, he or she may be suffering from other maladies characteristic of drunkenness, or no maladies at all." Assistant Attorney General Eileen Walsh said the state would ask the Kentucky Supreme Court to review the appellate court decision.

And she noted that the appellate court ruling "just focused on Breathalyzer tests and not other tests police may administer in deterring drunken driving."

The Breathalyzer involves breathing into a small bag that measures the amount of alcohol in a person's body. By law, a person can refuse to take a Breathalyzer test and choose instead to take blood tests.

Officer Robert Larimore, Breathalyzer operator and technician for the Lexington police department, said that because of other tests, the ruling "hurts but would not hinder us severely."

"The Breathalyzer test is additional evidence—equivalent to fingerprints taken at a crime scene," he said. "Without it, it makes it a little harder for us to prove the driver is under the influence, but we have other tests for evidence."

Federal Task Force To Eye Tax Shelters

Louis DeFalaise, U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky, announced last week the formation of a federal task force to investigate fraudulent tax shelters in coal and other Kentucky industries.

DeFalaise said the Internal Revenue Service is opening a 10-man office in Frankfort for the probe. DeFalaise added that agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the U.S. Postal Inspection Service will be participating.

DeFalaise said the task force would operate in cooperation with Kentucky Attorney General David Armstrong's office's Leviticus Project.

DeFalaise said he expects a regular grand jury to be impanelled in Frankfort, late next month.
