

PHS Academic Team Ranks Third in State Tournament

Prestonsburg High School's academic team took home third place trophies in a statewide invitational tournament held Saturday in Pikeville. Lafayette High School, from Lexington, won the meet.

The tournament, sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Academic Conference, invited its top six teams as well as eight of the top ten teams in the state. Sixteen schools in all participated.

Ranked third in the state going into the tournament, Prestonsburg was eliminated in the semi-finals by Franklin County, 31 to 30. It was an evenly matched and exciting rivalry right to the end with protests submitted by Prestonsburg's coach, Nell Lawson, and the Prestonsburg team was called back to answer two bonus questions. If they had won, they would have played Lafayette High for first place.

Prestonsburg High is now 35-5 for the season and 24-0 in conference competition. Its quick-recall team is made up of five members: Chris Croot, Tony Skeans, Scott Wells, Mike Rosenberg, and David Spiggle. Four players start, and at half-time one player is substituted.

Usually academic competitions include quick-recall and written assignments, but Saturday's tournament was quick-recall only. A quick-recall game is similar to the old College Bowl TV program, whereby each team fields a panel of four players, and a moderator tosses up questions to both teams. One point is given for every right answer, and a bonus question is worth one point if the first question answered correctly. And it's imperative to be fast with the answers. Five seconds are allowed for a regular question and ten seconds for a bonus question. Each game has two 12 minute halves and a three-minute half-time break.

The questions asked in a game come from four subject areas: math, science, social studies, and humanities. Layne Tackett, English teacher at Pikeville High School and the Commissioner of the Eastern Kentucky Academic Conference, said the questions are not trivia but substantive. "The questions asked will come from materials taught in Kentucky public schools."

This was the first year for the Eastern Kentucky Academic Conference Invitational Tournament. Alternate players making the trip for Prestonsburg were David Stanford, Mike Parker, and Dusty Weathers. Assistant Coach Bobby Wells also traveled with the team as did Coach John Patton, who served as a tournament moderator.

Saturday, January 24, Prestonsburg competes in its next conference meet at Pikeville High School.

New Policy Adopted by Board May Lead to Attendance Zones

A new policy that will probably lead to the establishment of attendance zones for Floyd county elementary and middle schools was adopted by the Board of Education at its meeting last Wednesday night.

The new attendance policy was adopted to help the school board comply with state law regarding maximum class size, according to Supt. Ray Brackett. "This is not something we want to do," Brackett said. "It's going to be an unpleasant thing to deal with, but it's going to have to be done."

State law requires that classes be limited to a maximum of 28 students for kindergarten classes, 26 students for grades one through three, 30 students for grades four through six, and 31 students for grades seven and eight. When new students arrive at a school where classes are already nudging the limit, Brackett said, the district must either offer "split classes" of more than one grade, or it must spend extra money for new teachers, aides, or classrooms.

The new policy is aimed at easing this problem by preventing mid-year transfers of students who already live in the district. It was made effective retroactive to Jan. 5 and requires students to enroll in the school that "predominately and traditionally" serves the area in which the students live. Unless their parents move to a new residence within the district, students will not be allowed to transfer from one school to another.

In addition, the policy allows the school district to transfer students to new schools in order to meet the state-mandated limits on class size. This will be done, however, only if space is available at the new school and if the transfer does not add more than 30 minutes of travel time to the student's day. Students who live in the area around a school will be given first priority over any other students who might enroll in that school.

The attendance zones for district schools have not yet been drawn, Brackett said, but will be ready by the time school opens next fall.

On the same day that the new policy was adopted, the state Board of Education in Frankfort adopted a new regulation making it easier for local school boards to exceed the class-size limits. The new regulation was strongly opposed by state Department of Education officials.

Arrest Dampens Spirits Of 140 During Holidays

More than 140 holiday party-goers in Floyd county had their spirits dampened by ending up in jail, including about 65 persons arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol or other drugs.

About 80 others were arrested for public intoxication in the two weeks and two days beginning Dec. 19 and ending Jan. 4, according to jail records.

Both numbers are considerably higher than the totals for a similar period last year. About 35 people were arrested in Floyd county for driving under the influence of alcohol or other drugs between Dec. 20, 1985, and Jan. 5, 1986, while about 50 others were arrested for public intoxication.

Arrests during the recent "D-Day for Drunk Drivers," held Dec. 12, also were higher than the previous year. Kentucky State Police reported 24 arrests for driving under the influence (DUI) during the evening and early-morning hours of Dec. 12-13 in the five-county area including Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike counties. In the same area the year before, 15 arrests were made on D-Day.

D-Day is a nationally coordinated effort by law enforcement agencies to warn people about driving under the influence of alcohol, and to get drunk drivers off the roads and into jail. Locally, D-Day was a cooperative effort involving city, county and state police.

The higher number of arrests on D-Day last month was probably due to an increase in the number of officers at roadblocks, according to Kentucky State Trooper Ken Frost.

Publicity about the D-Day roadblocks, or "traffic checks," in police parlance, is an important factor in keeping drunk drivers off the roads, said Frost, who called the recent effort "more than effective."

"I think the public was very aware," he said. "We did accomplish getting the drunk driver off the highway."

Stumbo Calls for Election Reforms, Non-Traditional Governor's Campaign

Dr. Grady Stumbo promises a "non-traditional" campaign in his second bid to win the Democratic nomination for governor. At a press conference in Frankfort last Thursday, he said, "From Kentucky's past we have learned that, with millions of dollars, you can buy the governor's chair. But that does not buy a vision for Kentucky."

Stumbo called, as he did in his 1983 campaign, for his opponents to voluntarily limit spending, noting that "We have reached a point in Kentucky where candidates, if they are to raise $1 to $2 million for a campaign, have to hang a sign around their necks that says: 'This sign for rent.'"

The news media was not exempt from recommendations for improvement in election coverage. Dr. Stumbo declared, "As representatives of the public, the media have a responsibility to help make the governor's race one that is based on issues and is not a fund-raising contest. The front pages and lead stories need to focus on issues, not always name-calling and financing. It is my opinion that the media need to seriously consider what their position is in calling for reforms in editorials and fueling the fund-raising race in news reports."

Stumbo experienced difficulty in fund-raising for his 1983 campaign and in repaying the debt incurred.

The focus of his campaign, he said, will be issues critical to Kentucky's progress, such as welfare reform, health care and education. For too long, campaigns have worried more about raising money than about "talking about things that matter with words that need to be said," he stated.

Reforms proposed by Stumbo for the 1987 governor's race include the following:

Voluntary spending limits in specific campaign areas, including polling and advertising.

Agreement by all candidates to appear at major forums conducted by neutral organizations.

Expanding the role of the Democratic Party whereby it outlines the 10 major areas of concern involving Kentucky's future and obtains and distributes responses from all candidates.

Agreement by all candidates to appear in regional debates, and in issue debates.

Agreement by all candidates to share the costs of two, 90-minute roundtable discussions, televised statewide during the last month of the campaign.

Publication by Kentucky Press Association of questionnaires completed by candidates stating their positions on issues.

Major legislative reform to be enacted by the 1988 General Assembly focusing on limits on campaigns spending and contributions by political action committees.

Council Hears Objection To Possible Zone Change

Concerned citizens in the Maple Avenue area of Prestonsburg appeared before the City Council Monday night and presented a petition to Mayor Ann R. Latta. The petition, signed by 50 residents, objects to any attempt by Mountain Comprehensive Care to apply for a zoning variance in regard to the former Lillian Rimmer Maple Avenue property.

The petition reads: "Any use of this property for other than one family residence would devalue our property rights, and, further, we believe that the proposed usage might endanger the well-being of the surrounding residents, which include several elderly persons, as well as several small children."

Addressing the issue, Mayor Latta assured the citizens that she had been informed by Chalmer Howard, the Mental Retardation Director at Mountain

Comprehensive Care, that the agency was withdrawing its plan to purchase the property. It had planned to use the house as a care residence for no more than three mentally retarded clients.

In other business, the council passed a motion that will allow the city to apply for a federal street sign grant. The grant will pay for new regulatory, warning, and street name signs; it requires Prestonsburg to install, maintain, and upgrade its existing signs in compliance with the Federal Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices. The funds will come from the Federal Highway Administration through the Kentucky State Police.

PRESTONSBURG NATIVE, EDSSEL MOORE, of the Department for Health Services, above, explains the use of radon monitors which the department will begin placing in about 1,250 Kentucky homes this month. The detectors will determine radon levels in selected homes in all counties of the state. Moore is director of the Division of Radiation and Consumer Product Safety.

To Monitor Radon Levels In 1,250 Kentucky Homes

"This study will give us information about the magnitude of the radon problem in Kentucky," said Health Commissioner Dr. Carlos Hernandez. "We know that some areas of the state are more likely to be affected by radon, but we need data about the entire state."

Ten radiation field inspectors in conjunction with local health departments will randomly select homes for participation in the study, according to Mr. Moore.

"To choose homes, inspectors will use detailed maps of areas 10 miles by six miles," Moore said. "They will choose two homes in each of these quadrangles for the placement of a radon detector."

Radon is a colorless, odorless, tasteless radioactive gas that occurs from the natural breakdown of uranium. Radon is diluted to such low concentrations in outdoor air that it is usually not dangerous. Indoors, however, the gas can accumulate. Scientists estimate that from between 5,000 and 20,000 lung cancer deaths a year in the United States may be attributed to radon, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Inspectors will place the detectors and help homeowners complete a questionnaire about their houses. The placement of the detectors will take about three months, said Moore.

Detectors will remain in homes for two to three days, and homeowners will put them in boxes that inspectors supply and mail them to an EPA laboratory in Montgomery, Ala.

The detector is a metal canister, four inches in diameter and about two inches tall. It is filled with charcoal, which traps any radon that might be in the air. Once the EPA laboratory has analyzed the charcoal, results will be sent to the Department for Health Services and shared with homeowners if they desire.

LTA Signup Underway At ASCS Office, Here

Beginning January 12 and extending through January 23, the Floyd County ASCS Office will be accepting applications for Long-Term Agreements under the Agricultural Conservation Program. Long-Term Agreements are contracts lasting from 3 to 5 years during which time a landowner may complete a number of conservation type practices needed to meet erosion or sedimentation problems on the farm. Before any LTA is approved, a farm plan must be developed by technicians from the Soil Conservation Service. A farm plan will determine the conservation problems on the farm and the measures needed to solve the problem. For further information on LTA's or any other ACP practice, contact the Floyd County ASCS Office at 886-3128 on Wednesdays or 785-5402 during the remainder of the time.

Three Beef Roundups Slated Late January

Three Extension-sponsored meetings for beef producers are scheduled for the last three days in January at three locations in Kentucky. The meetings will be held January 28, 29 and 30 at Mt. Sterling Civic Center, the Barren River State Lodge near Lucas and at the University of Kentucky Research and Education Center near Princeton, respectively, said University of Kentucky Extension animal scientist Curtis Absher, who is coordinating the programs. "This year's beef roundup program will focus on management of the beef herd to boost profits," Absher said. Featured at each of the meetings will be an address by Martin Jorgensen, of Ideal, South Dakota, who will speak on "Making Sense/Cents out of the Beef Business," Absher said. Jorgensen has been a breeder of Angus cattle for the past 40 years and has been quite successful at incorporating management prowess with production savvy to make more money in cattle, Absher said. Other presentations at the three one-day meetings will feature University of Kentucky Extension animal scientists and agricultural economists speaking on topics relating to increasing profits in the beef herd. Each of the roundups begin at 9:15 a.m. local time and ends with a discussion of the day's program at 3 p.m. Registration for each of the programs may be made by January 20 or registered on the day of the program. The registration fee includes a copy of the proceedings from the meeting and lunch. "County Extension agents in Kentucky have details about the program and materials for registration," Absher said.

Three Floyd Mines Are Issued Permits

Three mining operations in this county were among the 108 for which permits were issued by the Division of Permits of the State Department of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement during November, the latest month for which figures have been released. In all, these permitting activities authorized the disturbance of 6,360.04 new acres of land and resulted in the collection of $271,050 in fees. Of the total acreage, 605.34 acres are located in Floyd county and will be mined by one surface and two underground operations. Of the 108 permits issued, five were for preparation plants and refuse areas, two for tunnels, 77 for surface mining, and 24 for underground mining. These included 31 original permits, 49 revision permits, 11 amendment permits, seven succession permits, and 10 two-acre permits.

Oklahoma Trucker Remains in Jail

James E. Phillips, a truck driver from Monroe, Okla., remains in jail this week with $35,000 bond set after an altercation during the early hours of Jan. 1 left him charged with three felony counts of wanton endangerment, as well as other charges. Only one of those counts was discussed at a preliminary hearing held last Wednesday, leading Phillips' public defender, Norman Bennett, to request that the bond be reduced. "I am not going to reduce his bond," replied District Judge Harold Stumbo firmly. Phillips, 23, is accused of numerous violations stemming from an incident that began when he mistakenly pulled up in front of May Lodge in a Peterbilt 18-wheeler and ended when the truck came to a halt on the railroad tracks near Allen Grade School and he was removed from the cab. What happened in between those two events is not yet entirely clear. Park ranger Jerry Daniels was the only witness called during last week's hearing, and he told only part of the story. Daniels described what he said were two attempts to run over him by Phillips in his truck. The first occurred at the lodge, when Daniels was parked behind the truck and Phillips attempted to back up. The second occurred a few minutes later, as Phillips in his truck was leaving the park and Daniels drove his car in front of the truck in an attempt to slow it down. At the lodge, the flagpole retains a slight tilt from its encounter with the 18-wheeler, but the landscaping has been repaired. Phillips sat quietly at the hearing last week. His case will go before the grand jury when it convenes the first week in February. If Phillips is indicted, he could be in jail here for several months, said defense attorney Bennett. "He told me that he would not be able to make bond."

170-Pound Weight Loss Proves To Be A Real Find For Darrell Patton

"The general public cannot know what a fat person goes through. There are so many untold stories and feelings that only a fat person can know." These were the words of Darrell Patton, of Prestonsburg, as he described his 29-year battle with obesity. "Unless you have been there you can't imagine the small inconveniences and embarrassment the overweight experience each day. Not being able to go into a regular store to buy clothes. Struggling to get in and out of a car. Those little details get you emotionally down really quick." As Darrell points out, no one but the obese can know the anguish of being grossly overweight. But by the same token, no one can experience the joy and appreciation of being thin as much as someone who was once obese. To suddenly be set free after being a prisoner inside yourself. To know what it is like to blend in with the crowd. To walk down the street without getting out of breath. To have people listen with respect to what you say. These are some of the rewards Darrell has discovered since losing 170 pounds on the Diet Center Program. Darrell is 29 years old. He and his wife, Jayne, are the parents of two little boys, Brandon, 5 and Ray, 7. Obesity is something Darrell has had to deal with his entire life. He remembers having severe problems with overweight even as a six-year-old. Throughout his life, he has tried several diet programs, but never achieved permanent weight-loss success. In spite of his six-foot-four-inch frame, Darrell's 397 pounds was a heavy burden to carry, and before losing the weight he had very little energy. It took him great effort to perform the simplest of tasks. After a day at work he would go home, find his favorite chair and stay there, watching TV until bedtime. Then one evening an incident occurred that changed Darrell's life. His five-year-old son Brandon crawled into his lap and asked, "Daddy why are you so fat?" The question both shocked and hurt him. Darrell hadn't thought his sons had noticed his weight problem. But whoever it was that drew their attention to it made no difference, Darrell decided at that moment that he was going to make some changes and seek professional help. In fact, that very evening he told his wife Jayne, "I'm going to do something about my weight if it kills me." In deciding on the course to take, Darrell considered everything from a weight control program to bypass surgery. He was desperate enough to take drastic measures. But after much

Students Can Apply For Washington Trip

The state YMCA is now accepting applications for its 1987 Washington seminar, to be held Jan. 29 through Feb. 2. Students in grades 8-12 are invited to participate in this program, which is aimed at answering questions dealing with current national issues. The Washington seminar allows students from all parts of the state to talk with top decision makers in the nation's capital. Students will also tour the many historic landmarks in Washington, such as the monuments, the FBI buildings, Ford's Theater, the Smithsonian Institute, the Pentagon and the White House. In addition, participants will visit Virginia's colonial capital, historic Williamsburg. A limited number of $100 scholarships is available. Some Offices To Be Closed For King Holiday

The Post Office and most other federal agencies will be closed next Monday, Jan. 19, in honor of Martin Luther King Jr., the black leader who was assassinated in 1968. King was born on Jan. 15, 1929, but federal law sets aside the third Monday in January to commemorate his life. Kentucky is one of 38 states that officially recognize the holiday, but most state agencies will be open, including the local public assistance and unemployment offices. Locally, the public schools will be open, as will the county health department and the public library. Some private businesses will be closed, such as the Bank Josephine. Others, including the First Commonwealth Bank, will stay open.

Traffic Light Going Up On U.S. 23 at Betsy Layne

Rep. Gregory D. Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, Majority Floor Leader for the State House of Representatives, said that Transportation Secretary C. Leslie Dawson has committed to placing a traffic light on U.S. 23 at Hayes Complex in Betsy Layne, Floyd county. According to Stumbo, several traffic accidents have occurred at the site including one that resulted in loss of life. Stumbo worked with Secretary Dawson and Governor Collins to alleviate the circumstances creating this dangerous traffic situation. "I am very pleased to make this announcement because I know of the critical need in this area," he said. For additional information contact: Rep. Gregory D. Stumbo at (606) 285-9228.

and this is the first time people have looked at me as they would a normal person. Feeling normal is great... (When I go into people's homes), I no longer have to worry about damaging their furniture. And when I meet someone new, I know they are looking at me and seeing the real me." One of Darrell's greatest rewards is the influence his success has had on his friends. Several are now dieting on the same program, and one has lost over a hundred pounds, inspired by Darrell's experience. Witnessing the success of his friends has enhanced his own and is an additional source of happiness. Darrell's family has given him support and encouragement. He says, "My wife always provided encouragement and is really proud of me. When I was dieting, she knew there were certain foods that were more tempting than others; so she wouldn't prepare or eat them when I was around." Jayne says, "We're just so thankful for the change it's made in his life." When asked to pass on some advice for other dieters, Darrell made the following suggestions: • Don't try to change the diet to fit your needs. Believe that the diet will work for you exactly as it is; then stay with it. • The counseling sessions are invaluable and going in to the Center each day for weigh-ins is a must. "Knowing I had to face the scales and the counselors every day made a difference in my degree of commitment." • If you have a weak moment and go off the diet one day, all is not lost, and you're not a failure. Recognize how far you've come and what you've accomplished; then return to the diet with new commitment. You can't throw away or discount your success because of one day's setback. • Exercise is another important part of a total program. For Darrell, it was necessary to work into it gradually. At first, he was just too big to seriously exercise. But after losing 50 or 60 pounds, he started walking, then gradually worked up to running and playing basketball. Since reaching his goal weight on December 4, Darrell has lost seven additional pounds, and is looking optimistically toward a slim future. He continues to go to the Center for weigh-ins three or four times a week. Darrell maintains, "Anyone can lose weight once they get the control." And he has experienced, firsthand, the pleasure of being in control of his life and of knowing the choices he has are up to him. (Adv.)

ficials, and state legislators said they would seek an attorney general's opinion on the legality of the regulation.

If the regulation is found to be legal, it could become effective in March. Brackett said he did not know how the regulation might affect the new policy adopted by the local board.

In other business, the school board accepted the audit report of Linton & Co. for the school year 1985-86, showing a deficit of more than $405,000. Last year was the first since 1978 that the district ended the year in the red.

According to Don Wallen, a representative of Linton & Co., receipts for last year were up 2.1 percent over the previous year, while expenses were 6.3 percent higher than the year before. If receipts had kept pace with the 4 percent inflation rate, Wallen said, the deficit would have been only about $70,000 for the year.

"In my opinion," he added, "the deficit was created not by a rash of expenditures, but by a shortfall of receipts."

Wallen also noted a minor bookkeeping problem with the Wheelwright activity fund, and said that all federal programs in the district were found to be in compliance with law.

Two board members re-elected last fall, Dr. James D. Adams and Ray Campbell, were sworn in by Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo. The board subsequently re-elected Adams, chairman, and James A. Duff, vice chairman for the 1987 calendar year.

An offer of $25,000 from the Osborne Drilling Company for property belonging to the board at Bosco was accepted, and members agreed to put property at Home Branch up for public bid. Both properties had previously been approved for disposal.

The board agreed to dismiss Patsy Phipps, teacher's aide at Auxier Elementary School. No reason for the dismissal was given.

In other action, the Board accepted the resignation of Laurel Sims, English teacher at Prestonsburg High School, and hired Rudy L. Shively to replace her; accepted the resignation of Judy Layne Wood, teacher at Betsy Layne High School; hired Debra Slone as 7th and 8th grade teacher at Prestonsburg Elementary School; Judy C. Stewart as certified substitute teacher; James E. Staggs, Jr., Barbara Hall, Lisa K. Slone, Robert A. Burchett, and Patty S. Johnson as emergency substitute teachers; Lorene Cordial as substitute custodian to replace Vina Akers at Prater Elementary; granted a temporary leave-of-absence to Nina Branham, teacher at Wayland Elementary, due to illness between Dec. 4 and Jan. 12; hired Ruth Derossert as Headstart secretary/bookkeeper; Glenda Newsome as teacher aide at John M. Stumbo Elementary; Delilah Blackburn as substitute custodian at Drift; Tammy Adkins as cook at Betsy Layne Elementary for 1986-87; Connie Mosley, James Hoover, James Layne, Hillard Hall, Otis Johnson, Willie Bailey, Calvin Miller, and Danny Anderson as substitute bus drivers, and James Sherman as contract driver for German Bridge area at $25 per day.

Pros and Cons Debated On Unmined Minerals Tax

Kentucky's tax on unmined minerals is much lower than the tax rate for other real property, but it is not unconstitutional, attorneys for the state Revenue Cabinet and the Kentucky Coal Association argued before the state Court of Appeals in Frankfort last week.

The state constitution requires that all but a few types of property be taxed, and the state legislature has the right to set the rate of taxation, said James Cox, attorney for the coal association.

Lawyers for the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition, representing several property owners in the state, however, contended that the tax rate is so low that it amounts to no tax at all. In 1978 the state legislature set the tax rate on unmined minerals at one-tenth of a cent per $100 of assessed value. Currently, the rate set for most other real property is 21.6 cents per $100, or about 200 times greater than the rate on unmined minerals.

According to lawyers for the property owners, yearly revenue collected from the tax on unmined coal has been less than $3,200, which is far less than the cost of collecting it.

The appeals court debate followed a 1985 ruling by Franklin Circuit Judge William Graham that the unmined-minerals tax was unconstitutionally small. Graham ordered the Revenue Cabinet to begin collecting the tax at the rate of 21.6 cents per $100 in 1986, but that order was stayed by the Court of Appeals at the request of the Revenue Cabinet and the Kentucky Coal Association.

resolution was approved deleting Highway 1428 as an extended weight coal haul road. The resolution pertains to trucks exceeding fifty thousand pounds that are considered "thru traffic" on the segment of Highway 1428 from KY 3 to U.S. 23.

A motion passed the council giving the go-ahead for the city to apply for a $50,000 Community Development Block Grant. The grant money, if approved by the federal government, will be loaned with interest by the city to Mountain Laurel for the expansion of its business. Mountain Laurel of Prestonsburg produces a collection of fine infant and children's clothing, bedding, toys, and accessories.

The council gave the city administration power to hire one person for the position of dispatcher. This is part of an effort to streamline its dispatching services and raise the number of full time dispatchers to four. The job will require completion of a training program and holds the pay grade of a police recruit.

complete will include information about the type of house, floor, water supply, ventilation devices, insulation and wall construction, and the house's age.

"EPA results and data from the questionnaire will be entered into a computer system," said Hernandez, "allowing us to retrieve information about radon level by county, by area, by type of house, by geologic formation under the house and by many other correlations."

"In other words, this survey will provide us with a wealth of information about radon activity in Kentucky."

Gathering the information is the first phase of the project; the second phase will be the interpretation of the data.

"Our concern right now is to get the data and see what's out there," said Hernandez. "When we get the information, experts can analyze it, and we'll go from there."

Kentucky is one of 10 states conducting a radon survey under auspices of the EPA, which is providing the state with the detectors.

Graham's ruling was appealed by the state and the coal association.

The appeal court decision is expected in about a month. It will not necessarily be the last word on the subject, since the decision is likely to be appealed to the state Supreme Court. The issue also could be taken up by the 1988 legislature.

The final court ruling could affect the tax rate on other types of property which also are taxed at very low rates. These include farm machinery, livestock and poultry, distilleries and distilled spirits, bank accounts, annuities and retirement plans.

At the appeals court hearing last week, one judge expressed the fear that the low taxation rate might be an attempt on the part of the state legislature to circumvent constitutional requirements.

The one-tenth of a cent rate seems "an obvious way of getting around the constitution," said Appellate Judge Michael O. McDonald, of Louisville.

Thirty Years Ago

(January 10, 1957)

Floyd county began the new year with a personnel reduction in both its road department and relief board. Repair of the bridge at Cliff on U.S. 23 is not a matter of the immediate future but is a job that must eventually be done. M. F. Johnson, Pikeville, district highway engineer, told The Times last week. The new dial exchange at McDowell will go into operation at noon Saturday, Jan. 19. Floyd county's only known polio victim of 1956 is 10-year-old Carolyn Gaye Hurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hurst, of Drift. Floyd county this week was assured a second Bookmobile with a full complement of books to expand the mobile library service begun two years ago. The year that just ended was Leap Year, and an increasing number of Floyd county couples took the Big Leap. Forty Years Ago

(January 9, 1947)

Strict enforcement of Kentucky's new pistol law was pointed to as an urgent need by Circuit Judge E. P. Hill, Jr. in his instructions to the newly-empaneled grand jury here Monday morning. As the distance from arid territory to the nearest alcoholic oasis has become greater, officers within the last two weeks have encountered in this county more alleged violators of the whiskey laws. Operation of a city bus line will begin here within the next 30 days by W. H. Jones, Jr., and Joe Taylor Hyden. The Warfield Natural Gas Company, one of the section's largest, ceased at midnight, December 31, to all intents and purposes, to exist. The Floyd County Board of Education in its first meeting of the year organized Tuesday for a two-year period, re-electing Dr. J. H. Allen, of Langley, Chairman, and T. H. Newsome, of Grethel, vice-chairman. Mrs. Ruth Steele, of Dema, one of the five occupants of an automobile which left the Allen-Lackey highway on a curve near Maytown last Thursday night, was drowned as the car turned turtle in the edge of Beaver Creek. Wayland, the only Floyd basketball team remaining undefeated in county competition this season, rang up its 18th victory in 19 starts Friday night with a topheavy, 59-27, win over McDowell. The Prestonsburg Blackcats defeated Martin here last Friday night, 42 to 37, and lost the following night to Wheelwright, 30-29. Born: A son, Charles Elijah, on December 28 to Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Jobless Rate Rises In Big Sandy Area

Floyd county recorded a 10.7 percent unemployment rate for November 1986, the lowest rate in the five-county Big Sandy area but still considerably higher than the statewide rate of 7.9 percent and the national rate of 6.6 percent.

According to figures released this month by the state Cabinet for Human Resources, the November jobless rate was 13.4 percent for Johnson county, 16.2 percent for Magoffin county, 15.1 percent for Martin county, and 13.3 percent for Pike county.

The average rate for the Big Sandy area was 13.0 percent, up from 12.1 percent in October. That means that about 8,020 of the area's 61,700 workers were out of work in November.

In the nearby Kentucky River area, consisting of eight Eastern Kentucky counties, the average rate for November was 13.7 percent, up from 12.0 percent in October. Individual rates for those counties were: Breathitt, 13.1 percent; Knott, 13.6 percent; Lee, 16.2 percent; Leslie, 13.7 percent; Letcher, 14.9 percent; Owsley, 12.0 percent; Perry, 12.6 percent; and Wolfe, 13.8 percent.

In both the Big Sandy and Kentucky River areas, the largest group of unemployed workers were those who had been employed in mining.

Statewide, the unemployment rate jumped from 6.9 percent to 7.9 percent in November. The increase was attributed to a sharp drop in agricultural jobs as the tobacco harvest season came to an end, as well as a traditional increase in applicants for temporary jobs during the holidays.

Carroll county reported the lowest rate in the state for November, 2.6 percent. The highest rate was 22.1 percent in Menifee county.

In spite of the one-month jump, the state jobless rate remained well below the 9.0 percent recorded in November 1985. Only 56 counties reported a two-digit unemployment rate in November 1986, compared with 74 counties the year before.

"The loss of 14,900 farming jobs had the biggest impact on Kentucky's labor force activity in November," said Ed Blackwell, a state labor market analyst. "The category that includes domestic workers, self-employed people and unpaid family workers (also) declined by 2,000."

Other job losses occurred in bituminous coal mining (300 jobs), construction (100), and finance, insurance and real estate (100).

"On the positive side," Blackwell said, "manufacturing jobs increased by 900, transportation, communications and utilities by 900, trade by 800, education by 600 and services by 300."

The estimated number of jobless Kentuckians rose from 119,700 in October to 135,400 in November, but remained below the November 1985 total of 153,400. The state's estimated civilian labor force was 1,717,000 in November 1986. The civilian labor force includes non-military people who are working and unemployed people who are actively seeking jobs. It does not include anyone who is jobless but is not seeking work.

Appeals Court Upholds Earlier Bakay Sentence

The Kentucky Court of Appeals has upheld the 1985 assault conviction of a Weeksbury man. The charge stemmed from an automobile accident in which two Floyd county women were injured, one of whom died last September of injuries received in the accident.

Timothy Bakay, 24, is currently serving a 10-year prison sentence. He was found guilty of first-degree assault after his car crossed the centerline on old KY 80, in front of Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin, and smashed head-on into one driven by Cathy L. Allen, of Hueysville.

Bakay registered a blood-alcohol level of .12 percent on a Breathalyzer test administered about two hours after the accident, which occurred on the afternoon of February 7, 1985.

Allen, driver of the other car, sustained serious head injuries and lay in a deep coma for 19 months. She died last Sept. 6 at the J.J. Jordan Geriatric Center in Louisa without regaining consciousness.

Kay Rodebaugh, passenger in Allen's car, received a broken leg and back injuries in the accident. Bakay sustained minor injuries.

The conviction was appealed because defense attorney Ned Pillersdorf claimed that the trial court improperly admitted testimony from Allen's husband about her physical condition, which served "to inflame the passions and prejudices of the jury." In addition, the appeal claimed that the Commonwealth attorney, James R. Allen, made improper statements during closing arguments at the trial.

In upholding Bakay's conviction, the state appeal court agreed that statements made by the Commonwealth attorney were improper but were not flagrant enough to result in a reversal of the conviction.

The appeal court did not agree that admitting the testimony from the victim's husband was clearly improper. "The discretion as to whether to admit this...evidence rested with the trial court," the court ruled. "We cannot say that the admission of this evidence amounted to a clear abuse of discretion or denied appellant a fair trial."

Commonwealth attorney James R. Allen said he was pleased with the appeal decision. "This was a very serious case," he said.

Defense attorney Pillersdorf said he did not yet know whether the case would be further appealed to the state Supreme Court. "That will be up to my client," he said.

According to court records, Bakay had been convicted of drunk driving in 1981. Upon his arrest following the 1985 accident, he was cited for drunk driving, driving on a suspended license, and having no insurance.

Crum Gets Three-Year Term In Theft Case

Floyd county auto dealer and nightclub owner Ballard Crum has been sentenced to three years in prison for receiving a county check based on a fraudulent work invoice.

Crum, 46, of Eastern, was found guilty of theft in November by a Circuit Court jury. In handing down the sentence, Special Judge Will T. Scott followed the jury's recommendation of a three-year prison term.

Crum has been released on $50,000 bond, pending an appeal.

He was one of 16 people, including three Floyd county magistrates, a county clerk and a trial commissioner, who were indicted after a three-year investigation of Floyd county government. The indictments included Crum's two sons, Rick, 24, and Jack, 23, but they were acquitted by the Circuit Court jury.

A Good Man Remembered

All of his life he was a hardworking, honest, frugal, and respected individual. In those depression years, I saw him often as we passed his service station. There he was, as usual, hand-pumping gasoline from the tall pumps that read, "Ethyl—28 cents; Regular—19 cents." How times change—but not the man.

In all that Tom Neeley did he always exhibited the most honorable of intentions. His wave and his smile were noticeable as we passed his station. They ever-expressed personal appreciation and friendship that possessed our families. Even when times were drear in those seeming days of scarcity, this wonderful man exuded an enviable optimism and happiness through it all.

Talking to Tom one day, we recalled the times: when the Mayo Trail was merely a dusty, gravel roadway; the gradual spread of the town toward Cliff; the bridge at the curve that spanned the Big Sandy; and the accidental, but eventful day when Bob Hughes ran his dad's Pierce Arrow automobile over the curved embankment near the bridge. Tom had a keen memory of such things.

As a small boy, and as impressionable as young lads are, I always listened to what he had to say. I was seasonally infected through his straightforward eyes and his friendly wisdom. It is through such persons as Tom Neeley, and the likes of him, who have helped in cementing the purposes of my own life. And in his passing, his generosity of soul and spirit yet lingers.

Since everything that God made was both good and abundant at the time of creation, man only has seen cause to defile or desecrate His gifts. Tom Neeley was one of God's promises—he was made good and remained so throughout his life. He loved, honored, and always respected all that God made for mankind. Truly, Tom Neeley was a treasure, and enlightened soul within the community of men. In his quiet way, he cherished all—defiled nothing.

Applaud Academic Excellence

It is extremely refreshing to read about a Floyd County school excelling in academics.

We applaud Prestonsburg's High School academic team on their high state ranking, and we are convinced that each school in Floyd county has the student potential for achieving the same high standards. The teachers and parents who coach and support these young people are also to be commended for the special time and interest they continue to give.

We hope to continue reading about such high performance in the future.

The Rainbow—

A symbol of God's promises. When we feel battered by life's storms, it is nice to know God's rainbow is coming. To receive its' blessings, all we do is ask.

God's rainbow contains many blessings—all we do is claim them. They are listed in simple words in our scriptures.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: My husband was recently diagnosed with cancer of the larynx. We had two opinions from a surgeon and a radiotherapist, and both have recommended surgery to remove the entire larynx. They told us that because my husband's voice box will be removed, he will no longer be able to speak as he always has. How can he speak at all if he has his voice box removed?

ANSWER: Patients who have had their larynx removed may be able to speak again after learning methods they have been taught by a speech pathologist (a person who is trained in helping people who have speech problems). Some patients are able to begin speaking in three to four weeks, for others it may take as long as several months.

There are several methods that can be used to speak once your larynx has been removed. Three of the more common methods are included here. The first method is called esophageal speech. This method involves using the back of the tongue to hold air in the top part of the food pipe (esophagus). When the patient speaks, the air is forced back out through the mouth, forming a sound made deep in the throat.

The second method is called pharyngeal speech. This method uses a small amount of air which is present in the nose and mouth when the patient breathes through the tracheotomy tube (a tube which is inserted in an incision made in the neck. This hole is how the patient breathes). By making the air vibrate against the roof of the pharynx (at the back of the mouth) the patient can make this speech sound almost normal.

The third method uses a battery-operated device called an electro-larynx. The patient holds this device against his neck. When the button is pushed, a vibration is sent from the device through the neck and into the mouth, where the sound is formed into words.

Perfecting each method requires a lot of practice and patience. When a patient is unable to learn one of these methods, there are still other options. Research continues to look for new methods to restore speech to patients who have lost their voice from cancer surgery. With the help of a speech pathologist, many people have learned to speak again. Hartford To Appear On Mountain Stage

His musical influences are many, his style is his own. He once practiced playing his face while he soaked in the bathtub. Now, to the delight of listeners, hosts and technical crews, he plays his face on national radio. And his fiddle, banjo and guitar, while he clogs in tennis shoes on a 4' by 8' piece of electrically-amplified plywood.

This madcap minstrel is none other than John Hartford, who will headline West Virginia Public Radio's Mountain Stage, Sunday, January 18, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Capitol Plaza Theater in Charleston, W. Va.

Hartford's popular standard "Gentle on My Mind," for which he won two Grammy Awards, was recently honored as the most played country hit of all time. (It's been played four million times on radios across America, which is equivalent to playing the song 24 hours a day, seven days a week, for 22 years.)

Joining Hartford on the Mountain Stage will be Jean Ritchie, the Katie Laur Band, and Elmer Bird.

Ritchie, who has gained worldwide recognition for her folk singing, made her first appearance on Mountain Stage in October 1986. She so enjoyed the experience that she let the show producers know she would be passing through Charleston in January and would like to step back on stage to do a song.

The Cincinnati-based Katie Laur Band is made up of Laur on guitar and vocals, Jeff Roberts on banjo, Jim Huey on dobro and Buddy Griffin on fiddle. Fiddler Griffin is well-known to the Mountain State, having grown up in Summersville and just recently moved to Cincinnati from Flatwoods, W. Va. The band has recorded three albums and made several appearances on the popular public radio program "A Prairie Home Companion."

It is only fitting that the final guest on the January 18 show will be Elmer Bird. "The Banjo Man from Turkey Creek," because the first time John Hartford saw Bird perform, Hartford proclaimed him the best old-time banjo player he had ever heard. Since then, Bird has often worked on stage with Hartford, including shows on the riverboat "Julia Belle Swain" that Hartford pilots. Hartford also both produced and played on Bird's third album Bumble Bee Waltz.

Bird, who lives in Hurricane, was voted "Best Old-Time Banjo Player of the Year" by the Society for the Preservation of Bluegrass Music of America in both 1984 and 1985. He is also one of the few solo acts in the cast of the famed "Jamboree U.S.A." in Wheeling, W. Va.

The audience warm-up begins at 2:30 p.m. at the Capitol Plaza Theater, 123 Summers Street in downtown Charleston, and the live radio broadcast runs from 3 to 5 p.m. Call 34-MUSIC for more information.

New Year's Baby

Highlands Regional Medical Center's first baby of the New Year is Jessica Fay Howard, born January 1, at 3 p.m. She is the daughter of Harrison and Carlie Howard, of Gapville, Magoffin county.

The baby and her parents were recipients of gifts from area businesses. Little Miss Howard received gifts valued at approximately $420.

Maxey Flats Cleanup To Be Viewed at Meet

Cleanup of the Maxey Flats Radioactive Waste Site will be discussed by federal and state officials at the Kentucky Environmental Quality Commission's public meeting, Jan. 21, Room 105, Capitol Annex, Frankfort, at 9 a.m.

Burial operations began at the site in 1963, and 4.75 million cubic feet of radioactive wastes are buried there. The dumpsite, located in Fleming county, was closed when radionuclides were detected in the surface and ground water at the site.

During the meeting, the Environmental Quality Commission will also receive a status report from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the state Division of Water on economic hardship exemptions to the state's water quality criteria for oil and gas drilling operations. The first draft permit to exempt an operation from the chloride standard will be reviewed and discussed.

The Environmental Quality Commission is an independent seven-member citizen board that advises the governor and the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet on environmental rules, regulations, policies and plans. The commission serves as a public forum for the exchange of views, concerns and information relating to the quality of Kentucky's environment.

Farm Prices Drop As Food Costs Soar

The 1986 year-end report on food prices in Kentucky was bad news for both consumers and farmers, according to Kentucky Farm Bureau's market-basket survey.

The 40-item marketbasket of staple food items jumped more than a dollar in cost during December, to a statewide average of $63.07. That brought the total retail food price increase for the year to 7.8 percent, or $4.56 for the 40 selected foods.

Those findings contrasted sharply with year-end farm price statistics. USDA said farm prices for all commodities dropped an average 5.5 percent during 1986, indicating a wider farm-to-retail margin.

For some commodities the price decline was much sharper, accenting the severe price recession affecting many Kentucky farmers. Corn prices plummeted 41 percent from December 1985 through December 1986, wheat fell by 24 percent, soybeans by 10 percent and beef cattle by around 6 percent.

Hogs showed a slight decline during the 12-month period, falling by one-half of 1 percent. But those prices had been significantly higher during the summer months, accounting to some extent for higher retail tabs now.

Five of six food price categories cost shoppers more money at the end of '86 than was the case a year earlier. Pork prices were 20 percent higher; fruits and vegetables were 9 percent more, and poultry and eggs were nearly 8 percent more. Beef cuts and dairy products each showed increases of around 3.5 percent.

Only grain-based foods such as bread, meal and flour showed lower than year-ago prices. That decline averaged just under 2 percent.

Kentucky Farm Bureau market analyst Jeff Hall said he finds it difficult to understand why retail food prices moved up so sharply during 1986 when most Kentucky farm commodities—with the notable exception of livestock—were selling so cheaply.

"It's a foregone conclusion that farm-to-retail margins for some of these items have widened," Hall said. "And the effect may be worse in Kentucky because our farmers don't sell some of the produce items which are still most profitable."

Hall said grain prices are at their lowest levels in two decades; tobacco prices are down significantly, and milk prices held steady during 1986. Only hogs and cattle, among the major commodities, showed price strength over the 12-month period.

Honored by Supt. McDonald

Pictured with Alice McDonald, Superintendent of Public Instruction, are Danese Amburgey, at left, and Ruby Akers as they attended the Education Forum and Honor Luncheon held for presidents of local retired teachers' units over the state.

McDonald presented each attending president and vice president with a Certificate of Appreciation and an apple for teaching our Kentucky children. She ended her presentation by saying, "I know teachers can make a difference, for you did."

Class Sizes To Be Limited As Required

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald says she will continue to enforce the statute limiting class sizes as the Department of Education has been interpreting it.

"Less than one percent of the school districts are out of compliance with this law," McDonald said. "It's a good law and it's working. Kids are getting better instruction in smaller classes. That is what the legislators intended when they passed the law, and they reaffirmed that in committees last month."

"We expect the school districts to continue to comply with the law as they have in the past. We will continue to grant exemptions, but only for lack of class space as intended by the law."

A new regulation passed by the State Board of Education Jan. 7 would make it easier for school districts to get exemptions for classes over the state-mandated size limits. It was written by lawyers for the Jefferson County Schools and the Kentucky School Boards Association.

Education Department Attorney Gary Bale, who usually signs state board regulations said he could not sign the regulation, because it was in direct conflict with his interpretation of the law. A School Boards Association attorney volunteered to sign it for the state board.

The state board member who proposed the new regulation, W.D. Kelley, of Hopkinsville, argued that the existing regulation was placing hardships on school officials and students because children were being moved from class to class, and in some cases, from school to school.

McDonald said that when local districts adjust classes, they generally assign the newly-arrived child to another school, so there is little or no actual moving of students from school to school. Regulations stipulate that students cannot be transferred to a school that adds more than 10 minutes to their original travel time.

Kentucky's 178 districts are required to meet class-size caps by Sept. 15 of each year. Districts failing to meet class size requirements could lose state power equalization money, which helps districts make their programs more comparable to those in the wealthiest districts. As the law specifies, exemptions can only be granted in cases of space shortages.

The state board-passed regulation would allow some districts to seek exemptions for "unusual circumstances," including students' moving into a new attendance zone. It would apply to districts not using power equalization money to meet class-size requirements.

Henry Ford refused to hire anyone who smoked cigarettes.

Clark Elementary JW Theatre To Share in Arts Grant Fund

Gov. Martha Layne Collins has announced that Floyd county will receive arts grant funds totalling $10,400 from the Kentucky Arts Council, a division of the Kentucky Departments of the Arts.

The Jenny Wiley Drama Association in Prestonsburg has received a $10,000 Arts Development Grant, money that will help support the ongoing operation of the organization. Also Clark Elementary School near Prestonsburg received a $400 Teacher Incentive Project Grant for a visual arts residency.

According to the Governor, "Kentucky's arts identity is an increasingly important factor in the state's progress, and we in state government are proud to join with local sponsors in supporting the arts."

A total of approximately $1,620,000 in state and federal funds is being disbursed to arts groups throughout the state in the most recent round of grants. Funds are distributed twice each year, in July and December, with a total of $2,200,000 going to artists and arts groups during fiscal year 1986-87. This money includes the Kentucky Arts Council's share from the National Endowment for the Arts as well as new funds recently allocated by the Kentucky Legislature.

The Kentucky Arts Council is a 16-member citizen board, appointed by the Governor, that receives grant applications and disburses funds. These matching grants continue a 20-year tradition of support for the arts in Kentucky cities, neighborhoods and towns. A panel of arts professional reviews and makes recommendations on each of the grants.

Arts Department Commissioner Crit Luallen explained that the primary goal of the Department is to encourage interest in and expand audiences for the arts, help create new programs, and support Kentucky's artists. The Department does this through marketing and loan programs for artists as well as Arts Council grants.

LRC Releases Study Results On Legislative Assistants

Final results have been released from a comprehensive study made by the Legislative Research Commission on the feasibility of initiating a legislative assistants program.
The study was conducted on two levels—one being a survey summary of how seven surrounding states address their assistants policy. Information was gathered from Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri. It was found that all seven of the border states provide direct service to individual legislators outside the realm of routine committee staff support.
The ratio of legislator to assistant is one to one for Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri. The ratio is two to one in Tennessee and ten to one in Indiana. Legislators in Virginia and Illinois have district offices which are staffed.
Funding for assistants is provided directly to legislators in Missouri and through the legislative agency in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia. Job description and qualifications varied drastically from state to state. In Tennessee, West Virginia and Missouri salaries are established by the legislative agency while Illinois leaves salaries to the discretion of the legislator. Indiana uses the state merit schedule.
The other facet of the study was the analysis of a questionnaire dealing with legislative assistants that was sent to Kentucky legislators.
Ninety-three members from the House and Senate responded. Of that total, 78 were House members and 15 were senators.
Of those committee chairmen responding, forty-two percent favored full-time assistants. Fifty-seven percent suggested that space for the assistants be provided through a pool situation in Frankfort as did sixty-three percent of the regular House members.
A variety of assistants' plans, qualifications and skills were suggested by Kentucky legislators.
Rep. Gregory D. Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, Majority Floor Leader for the State House of Representatives said he plans to submit the results of the study at the Legislative Research Commission meeting Wednesday, January 7, at 1 p.m. in Room 327 of the Capitol.
Stumbo, who has been a leading advocate for a legislative assistants program, said he will urge LRC members to support one of the assistants plans suggested in the total tabulation of the survey.

PCC Students Best Faculty In Tourney

When staff and students chalked up their cues for a benefit pool tournament at Prestonsburg Community College, the students came out winners.
Rita King, medical technology major from Stanville, received a trophy as champion shooter of the tournament, held between Nov. 24 and Dec. 12. She played off against the staff champion, admissions officer John Herald.
The tournament was a benefit to raise money for the college's Phi Beta Lambda chapter, a leadership organization for students interested in business. About $90 was raised, which will be used for the chapter's community service projects during 1987, said faculty sponsor Mazola Salmons.
Other staff members who contended for the pool championship were Mansoor Aminilari, Bill Graves, Louise Houghton, Bob McAninch, Mazola Salmons, John Sammons, and Jeff Yurk.
Student shooters included Rose Akers, Doug Bailey, Rita Carrell, John Clemons, Greg Conley, Teresa Evans, Michael Goff, Linda Love, Cindy Meade, Eddie Runyon, Steve Scalf, Bernice Stacey, and Craig Tackett. Bailey was the winner of the consolation prize, a stuffed animal, determined by a drawing that included the names of all contenders.
Phi Beta Lambda also sponsored a blood drive in November, in cooperation with the Central Kentucky Blood Center, and a toy drive in December.

Owners of Flooded Land Eligible for Federal Funds

There are flood-damaged properties in Floyd county that would be eligible for federal funds if they were applied for, according to Clark L. Allison, conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service. Almost five million dollars (4.7) is now available to help property owners relocate if they've suffered flood-damage.

The funds can be applied for through the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Purpose of the program is to reduce future flood insurance and disaster assistance costs by providing an opportunity for severely damaged households to be removed from flood risk areas. This also serves to restore the floodplain and provides recreational, and open space resources.

"Eastern Kentucky needs something like this," Allison said, "and a lot of places would be eligible." He cited the towns of Martin, Allen, Garrett, Hueysville, and West Prestonsburg as communities that have been hurt from past floods. In particular, he noted that McDowell High School has a serious flooding problem.

The string attached to this federal buy-out program is that communities must restrict future floodplain development on the acquired site. Susan Wilson, of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said that the applicants will be competing for the available dollars, and that once the federal government has acquired the damaged property, the community must agree to certain conditions. "The community has to agree to remove the structure and implement a land use plan. Then it can't resell the property for commercial, industrial, or residential use."

To be eligible the property must be covered by flood insurance under the National Flood Insurance Program and the property must meet one of the recognized damage criteria:

The damaged building must have been flooded by at least three previous floods over a five year period, with average damages of at least 25 percent of its value; or a single flood damage to the building being at least 50 percent of its value; or any single flood leaving the building beyond repair, either due to local ordinances or significantly increased building costs.

At the present time no communities in Kentucky have made application for these funds, although other states have utilized funding available under this program. According to Allison, this shouldn't stop areas in eastern Kentucky from applying. "We would be just as competitive as any situation in the country," he said.

Communities making application must contact Susan Wilson at the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Atlanta at (404) 347-7062.

Visit Shroud of Turin Exhibit

A group of Youths and their sponsors from St. James Episcopal Church, here, travelled to Atlanta, Georgia, recently, to view the Shroud of Turin Exhibit at the Omni and to present a donation for the Shroud of Turin Research Project to the Rev. Albert R. Driesbach, Jr., who is a member of the project's board of liason. Pictured above are Pat Conn, Pilgrimage sponsor, Maria Campbell, Julie Davis, the Rev. Driesbach, Stephen Davis, and Joe Campbell.

The Rev. Driesbach, curator and executive director of the ecumenical exhibit, spent several hours with the group sharing with them some of the knowledge he has gained through many years studying the Shroud.

The Shroud of Turin, claimed by tradition to be the burial cloth of Jesus, contains faint amber images of a bearded, brutally scourged and crucified man. The images of that man closely match Biblical descriptions of the scourging and crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth.

Documents trace the Shroud of Turin from Lirey, France, in 1353 to its current repository in Turin, Italy, where it has been since 1578. Many believe that the sacred linen is the same cloth known as the "Mandylion", which has been traced from Jerusalem in 30 A.D. to Constantinople in 1204, and which disappeared during the 4th Crusade.

When displayed in Lirey in 1353 it was in the possession of Seigneur Geoffrey de Charny, a descendant of a Knight Templar who had been executed in 1314 during the persecution of that order by Philip the Fair. The Knights Templar are believed to have been the Shroud's custodians from 1204 to 1353. The Shroud of Turin is a 3'6" x 14" linen cloth of ancient herringbone weave, slightly ivory in color. The faint image it contains is one of the rare historical records of the results of scourging and crucifixion and as such is supported by recent archeological finds.

The group's interest in the Shroud came about in a Sunday School class at St. James approximately four years ago when the story of the Shroud was related to the class, and they became intensely interested. So much so, that out of that interest a group called the Pilgrimage was formed. The initial idea was to accumulate funds to take a group to Turin where the Shroud is enshrined. They realized that viewing the Shroud would be impossible but wanted to visit the Royal Chapel of the Cathedral of Turin where the Shroud is kept in a long narrow silver chest, lined with cedar wood and velvet, safely stored in a vault enclosed by iron bars. Public showings of the Holy Shroud have been extremely rare—only three times in this century.

Recent terrorist activities made it apparent that it would be dangerous to take the group through international airports. In light of this, the group opted to travel to Atlanta to view the exhibit there with its replica of the Shroud, to make a contribution toward STURP which will do further testing on the Shroud and to bring an exhibit to Prestonsburg.

Extensive testing was done on the Shroud by STURP in 1978. The results of this testing is best expressed by a statement made by STURP and released at its final meeting in October, 1981.

"...the answer to the question of how the image was formed or what produced it remains now, as it was in the past, a mystery. We can conclude for now that the Shroud image is that of a real human form of a scourged, crucified man. It is not the product of an artist. The blood stains are composed of hemoglobin and also give positive test for serum albumin."

Pope John Paul II has given permission for a portion of the Shroud to be used for Carbon 14 testing. This test can establish the age of an object within 300 years. It is expected that this test will be conducted soon and the outcome of the test will probably be made known sometime before Easter, 1988.

Meanwhile, the St. James youth will continue their interest in the Shroud by starting a small library on the Shroud at the Church and plan to sponsor an exhibit in Prestonsburg in early spring.

The History Corner... "Burr's Conspiracy in Kentucky"

By A.G. SPENCER

On a dark night in Frankfort, May 5, 1805, a man appeared at the door of state politico John Brown. The man, bearing the gift of discord, was a planner, a plotter, a noted duelist who was fleeing the law. He was, at that time, a recent ex-vice president of the United States—Aaron Burr.

His reputation already tarnished, with most Americans viewing him as a traitor, Burr was making a huge gamble that would either bring him greater power or greater shame. He had already established and nurtured contacts with Anthony Merry, a British agent, and James Wilkinson, the ambitious governor of the Louisiana Territory. From the Bluegrass state, Burr went to Nashville, where he was welcomed by Andrew Jackson, and from there, to New Orleans.

Burr's plan was to unite dissatisfied elements of Spanish and French cultures there with English-speaking Americans to forge a new republic. He modestly schemed to head this new nation-in-planning.

Having established new and valuable contacts, he retraced his path down the Natchez Trail to Nashville. From there, he left by boat to Maysville, Kentucky. By August 19, 1805, Burr was in Lexington. His objective there was to speak with influential men on this edge of the civilized American frontier and gather their thoughts on the political future of the Louisiana Territory. He would also have liked to have done the same back in his native New York, where faced murder charges as he did in New Jersey, also.

Burr's adventurism in Kentucky was undermined to a large degree after he returned to John Brown's home, August 28. The editor of the Palladium overtly tried to expose him. Along with the Kentucky Gazette, these giants of state journalism labelled Burr the "Eastern Culprit." Slander suits were much less frequent back then, and lawyers much less wealthy.

Rather than shrinking from the harsh glare of public scrutiny, Colonel Burr used his winning, dominating personality to alter the shifting tides of public opinion. In this case, at least among the upper crust in central Kentucky, fiction conquered fact and the editorializing of the state's most influential papers at the same time.

The conspiratorial ex-V.P. continued his conquest of Kentucky by using the same tactics in Louisville, where he also rode around on the arms of respected social and political figures.

A trip to St. Louis proved to be a setback, however, as Wilkinson had determined that the military support for Burr's scheme simply didn't exist. He gave Burr an obviously cool greeting upon the latter's return to St. Louis. In an effort to rid himself quickly of his troublesome co-conspirator, Wilkinson tried to get Governor Harrison of the Indiana Territory to appoint Burr as a delegate to Congress. Disillusioned, and seeing through Wilkinson's maneuvers, Burr went to Philadelphia, where he hoped to split the loyalties of overlooked and ignored naval officers.

He also met a sheep to be fleeced, one Harman Blennerhassett, who was an unlucky if adventuresome entrepreneur. We'll take up at that point next week. Until then, health!

Anaplasmosis Can Hit Herd "Right Out of the Night"

Anaplasmosis is a cattle disease which "can hit you right out of the night," according to Allen Skillman, a Breckinridge county farmer.

Skillman knows because he was hit. Of the 58 cattle in his herd, seven died and 17 cows and six calves had to be sold for slaughter.

He has had to vaccinate all the cattle on his farm twice. These animals will have to be vaccinated again every two years, and now Skillman must vaccinate any new calves born on the farm and any cattle brought to the farm in order to keep the disease under control.

Skillman is concerned that farmers don't know enough about anaplasmosis and the results it can have.

"I had cattle dead before I even knew what anaplasmosis is," Skillman said.

Anaplasmosis is an infectious blood disease of cattle and other ruminants. It is caused by an organism called anaplasmosis marginale.

It is carried by ticks, mosquitos, horse flies and stable flies. It also can be carried mechanically by such things as using the same hypodermic needle when vaccinating animals or not cleaning a dehorning instrument between uses.

The severity of the disease varies considerably with the age of cattle. Calves undergo mild infections, with little or no mortality. In yearling cattle the disease is more severe, but recovery is the rule. Increasing severity occurs in adult cattle, with marked anemia developing and mortality varying between 20 percent and 50 percent in older animals. All breeds and types of cattle are susceptible.

The earliest signs include depression, loss of appetite, listlessness and body temperatures of between 104° and 106°F (40 to 41°C). Lactating cows show a rapid fall in milk production.

The disease can be treated with antibiotics, but the infected cattle remain carriers.

Anaplasmosis is not a new or unusual disease, but it is a Southern one.

Skillman believes the early symptoms of the disease are close to those of grass tetany. He recommends that any cattle which have signs of grass tetany should be checked for anaplasmosis as well.

If the disease is found, farmers can do the vaccination themselves, and early control is important, Skillman said.

Skillman said he would rather his cattle have Bang's (brucellosis) than anaplasmosis, because then he would receive indemnity money from state and federal governments.

"There is no indemnity money for anaplasmosis because it is not a funded program on either the state or federal level," explained Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell.

"Anaplasmosis is usually dealt with on the private level. The practicing veterinarians are crucial in controlling this disease, and they are usually the ones who handle it," the Commissioner said.

The difference in this case was that the disease was well established in Skillman's herd, and the cattle designated for slaughter needed to be under the auspices of a quarantine.

The state doesn't always become involved in anaplasmosis cases, but it needs to know about them because the disease can be easily spread.

The state Agriculture Department communicates with the county extension service, and the diagnostic laboratories in the state provide information on anaplasmosis to the department on a routine basis.

"When the case is as significant as it was with Mr. Skillman, we usually get a phone call from the lab doing the blood work. Also, veterinarians are required to report anaplasmosis to the department," Boswell said.

"We don't usually issue a quarantine, but we have to make sure any infected cattle are sent to slaughter and not sold," he added.

"We really appreciate Mr. Skillman's cooperation in this matter. And we can appreciate his concern that farmers don't know enough about anaplasmosis. We sincerely intend to be of help in that regard," Boswell said.

FIVE BUSINESS RATIOS

All businesses, large or small, will benefit by making month-to-month and year-to-year comparisons of certain business ratios.

The owners of small businesses are often intimidated or confused by business ratio concepts. Don't be embarrassed to ask your accountant how to construct and use these ratios. Ask him or her every month if necessary until you finally get comfortable with the necessary information.

It's the change in your business ratios and a comparison of the ratios to other businesses in your industry that should assist you in making good, profitable decisions.

Here are five common business ratios:

- Gross profit percentage. This ratio is computed by dividing gross profit by net sales. Gross profit is the difference between sales and the cost of goods sold. An unsatisfactory gross profit percentage is a major factor in many business failures.
- Net profit percentage. This is computed by dividing net profit by net sales. Unincorporated businesses should make an allowance for the owner-manager's compensation before making industry comparisons.
- Breakeven point. When expressed in dollars, it is computed by dividing the fixed costs by the gross profit percentage.
- Operating expense ratio. This is computed by dividing the operating expenses by net sales. An increase in this ratio from one period to the next should serve as a warning to management.
- Return on investment. This is computed by dividing net income by total equity (assets minus debts). This measures the overall profitability of the company. A large ratio which increases annually is of course desirable.

By the use of these ratios you and your accountant can make decisions which will increase the profitability of your company.

THE SPORTING TIMES

After 16 weeks of regular season head knocking and three more in post season action, the NFL is finally ready to decide this season's professional football champ.

Super Bowl personnel are preparing Pasadena for the biggest single sports game of all, but this year's finale will settle more than just a champion.

When the final two survivors meet on January 25, they will be battling, not only for the Super Bowl ring, but also for conference pride.

During the long NFL season, the AFC and NFC battled on the gridiron a total of 52 times, and from these previous games, the Super Bowl promises to be at least a close finish.

The two conferences split their seasonal schedule right down the middle with 26 wins each. The home team also won 26 times so playing in a neutral site doesn't really affect the situation.

In taking a closer look at inter-conference numbers, we find that the AFC might have an advantage, but only a slight one at best.

The American Football Conference somehow managed to out-score their cross conference rivals. In the 52 games played, the AFC scored 1149 points while the NFC tallied 1075.

Unless you have a big faith in numbers, this doesn't mean a thing, but 52 occasions is certainly enough to give us an idea of what to expect and to expect a high scoring game.

In the cross conference games, both teams averaged 41 points per game, slightly higher than games within their own conferences.

Some of these stats may be of some surprise but what could be termed as downright unbelievable is the fact that the AFC Central had the best record of all divisions against the NFC. And could have had an even better one if they hadn't lost four games to the Chicago Bears.

This factor doesn't help the Central Division's hope for the Super Bowl, the Cleveland Browns. They lost to Denver of the Western Division, and the West had the worst record of any against the National Football Conference.

Does this tell us anything? Probably not. Odds makers consider everything, but they won't worry themselves with divisional records, because it is down to team against team, man against man.

Denver finished 3-1 against the NFC and more importantly, 3-1 against the AFC East. However, the Broncos only loss came at the hands of the New York Giants.

Back in week 12 of the regular season, the Giants upended Denver 19-16 in New York. Three points is merely a home field advantage, but wait a minute, playing at home didn't make any difference, did it?

The Broncos and John Elway were impressive, Sunday, in their victory at Cleveland even though they needed a 33-yard Rich Carlos field goal in overtime to advance past the Browns.

Denver beat a strong team and with their two weeks off should get Elway completely healthy. His sore ankle bothered him Sunday, but bumps and bruises have a way of disappearing this time of year.

During the regular season, New York averaged just over 21 points per game while their famed defense limited opponents to less than 14 points, an impressive stat indeed.

In their previous meeting with the Broncos, George Martin gave New York a win with his 78-yard interception return for touchdown. This kind of play was typical of the Giants, and if their defense doesn't get the job done, Phil Simms and Joe Morris can certainly control things from the offensive scheme of things.

New York wins by sheer brute force while Denver is more of a quick and surprising team. Their defense isn't as physical as New York's, but they do things that win a football game.

In the regular season, Bronco defenders yielded 18 points a game. This is somewhat higher than what New York's defense surrendered but Denver has a more explosive offense, 24 points per game.

Whoever wins the Super Bowl takes home a few extra grand, a ring and their conference's pride factor of whipping the enemy, and it has all the makings of a grand ole game.

Expect a higher scoring contest than the one in week 12, and expect a close game. Both teams possess solid kicking games, but the one more superior on the 25th will give their team a Super Bowl win.

Defense is the name of the game, but watch New York's Mark Bavaro. He is the best tight end in football. The Denver Broncos will find out just how tough he is Super Bowl Sunday.

After this season, I'm hesitant to pick a winner. The Raiders, Dolphins, and Rams let me down but the Giants didn't.

Phil Simms and I have something in common. We're Morehead State University alumni, and we both want the Giants to win. Let's go with the heart, Giants by four, 24-20.

During the season Denver was a team either great or the Colts. They sometimes destroyed their opponents or were destroyed. It all depends on which Bronco team shows up in California.

DOUBLE TEAM COLLISION: Two McDowell players deny Allen Central's Tonya Kester this basket in action Friday night.

Allen Central basketball coach Johnny Martin expressed deep concern about his team's road games at Wheelwright and McDowell.

And for good reason. During the past years, the Rebels have struggled with the Left Beaver schools, especially on the road. Last season, Martin watched as his young team lost games at both Wheelwright and McDowell, but this season, Allen Central turned their situation around, completely.

Martin said his team didn't play well at these particular places, and last Tuesday the Rebels found themselves in yet another battle at Wheelwright.

The biggest lead of the entire game was a four-point Allen Central advantage but like so often before, when crunch time comes, Coach Martin calls upon his sharpshooting guard, Roger Horne.

Once again the senior guard responded, cashing in on a jumpshot that upended Wheelwright, 68-67, in overtime.

Horne finished with 16 points, but Ronnie Ousley proved to be Allen Central's offensive leader, accounting for 19 points. Stanton Bentley also broke twin digit scoring with 13.

For Wheelwright, Johnny Isaac heated the nets up with 22 points, while Craig Martin and Tony Hutton added 14 and 12, respectively.

One leg of this dangerous journey had been successfully completed, but Johnny Martin and crew didn't leave without a battle.

"They always play us tough up there," the veteran coach mentioned. "They've improved a lot since we saw them last, and they are going to give some people fits, especially up there."

Allen Central wasn't in the clear, however. McDowell stood waiting in the wings, but it didn't take the Rebels long to establish themselves in this Friday night affair.

Behind the offensive efforts of Roger Horne, Ronnie Ousley, and Robbie Click, Allen Central jumped out to a quick lead, taking an 11-point advantage in the first quarter.

The offensive trio of Horne, Ousley, and Click scored six points apiece in the initial frame, but only Horne continued this pace as McDowell and Lenny Hall clawed their way back to even.

By halftime the Daredevils had cut Central's lead to five, and when McDowell forward Lenny Hall caught fire, 13 points in the third quarter, the Rebels found themselves in a battle.

Unfortunately for McDowell, Johnny Martin has in his reserve arsenal an offensive explosion by the name of Rady Martin. This slick shooting sophomore is rapidly developing a reputation as the finisher, and Friday night his efforts were as timely as ever.

With the score tied at 54 entering the final frame, Martin cut loose offensively, scoring a total of 14 points in the fourth quarter to push Allen Central past McDowell, 85-69.

Horne also proved to be a most important part of the Rebel machine, finishing with a game high 28 points while Martin finished with 18.

With the trip completed and two wins under his belt, Johnny Martin can rest easy but not for long. The coach said his team played their worst basketball at Wheelwright and McDowell, but the coach has another good team coming in Friday night as Betsy Layne invades John E. Campbell arena.

With the two wins, Allen Central improves to 3-0 in the conference, good enough for them to sit in the catbird seat, but with five conference contests remaining the Rebels can do everything but rest easy.

For McDowell, they will have to return to the drawing board. Not to reprogram their team but to find a way to win. The Daredevils have the talent and prove it in every contest but somewhere during the game experience minor but devastating problems.

McDowell's talent is deep, especially in the backcourt where Brian Hall and Dickie Joe Shannon provide strong offensive play, 16 points apiece.

Lenny Hall seems to have solved the inside game, 21 points and three blocked shots, but McDowell fans won't be satisfied until their Daredevils do what they are capable of, win basketball games.

INDIVIDUAL SCORING: Allen Central: Roger Horne, 28; Rady Martin, 18; Ronnie Ousley, 15; Robbie Click, 9; Darin Conn, 8; Stanton Bentley, 5; Kevin Webb, 2.

McDowell: Lenny Hall, 21; Dickie Joe Shannon, 16; Brian Hall, 16; Reggie Hall, 8; Jessie Osborne, 4; Lance Hall, 2; Scott Tackett, 2.

SHORT SPORTS

Last Tuesday night the Prestonsburg Blackcats earned another conference victory, this time defeating the McDowell Daredevils in the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse, 80-70.

David Martin once again led the Blackcats with 25 points but received great offensive help from Thomas Nairn, 17 points, and Brian Wallace, who popped in 15.

McDowell was topped in scoring by Brian Hall, who accounted for 22 points. Dickie Joe Shannon added 19, while Lenny Hall tossed in 16.

Coming into the game, the spotlight was shining directly on two of the 15th region's top players, David Martin and Brian Hall. These two performed well up to expectations, but it was the two teams' sophomores who tried to steal the show.

Nairn, of Prestonsburg, and Shannon, of McDowell, are rapidly becoming known for their youthful but successful basketball abilities around this tough district and region.

Jimmy Stumbo Named MVP This Week As Betsy Layne Takes Pikeville Tourney

Betsy Layne forward Jimmy Stumbo led a balanced Bobcat scoring attack as the Floyd County school captured the Pikeville Invitational Tournament, last week.

Stumbo paced the Bobcats in scoring each night to also earn personal honor, being named the tournament's most valuable player.

In the tourney's opener Betsy Layne downed John's Creek, 58-40, as Stumbo tossed in 22 points. Bobcat guard Duran Newsome also got into the scoring act, adding 12, while Todd Sturgill checked in with 11 points.

The Bobcats came back Friday night with another impressive performance, turning back Pikeville, 49-36.

Two wins over Pike county competition wasn't enough for Betsy Layne. Craynor Slone brought his boys back for another go Saturday, and the Bobcats responded with probably their biggest win of the season, a 54-53 decision over Virgie.

"We took care of the basketball real well, our shot selection was good, and we just played an all-around good game which is what you have to do against Virgie, because they're a good team," Slone said.

Jimmy Stumbo tossed in 19 points for the victorious Bobcats and received offensive help from Bud Newsome who added 13.

For the three-game event, Stumbo scored a total of 54 points to pace the Bobcats, and Bud Newsome, after a four-point performance in the opener, finished with 26.

With the tournament title, Betsy Layne continued the expected 58th district domination over regional foes.

The title represented the fourth of it's kind won by Floyd county schools thus far this season, but now Betsy Layne must turn their basketball attentions back to their own district and the Floyd County Conference.

"We really played well throughout the tournament, but now we have to come back and be careful not to have a let-down," Coach Slone said. "We don't have the type of talent that we can overlook anybody, so we'll just have to continue to play the way we did in the tournament."

Lady Blackcats Dump Wheelwright

Somewhere between pre-season practice and conference play someone told the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats they had a solid basketball team.

Obviously that someone knew what they were saying because the Lady Blackcats are winning, especially in the Floyd County Conference.

Last Friday, Prestonsburg captured their fifth conference win with a 56-37 win over the Lady Trojans at Wheelwright.

Shon Burchett led the Lady Blackcats to their latest conference victory, scoring 17 points, while Paula Harris and Karen Frazier checked in with 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Coming into Friday night's contest, the Lady Blackcats had already played twice and Coach Bridgett Clay says her team may have been a bit tired but played well against an improved Wheelwright squad.

"This was our third game of the week, and I think we were a little tired, but we played pretty well," Clay said. "Wheelwright has a good team, and I think by tournament time, they will be a contender."

April Bradford paced the Lady Trojans' scoring attack with 16 points, and April Reaves cashed in with 13.

With the win, Prestonsburg improves to 5-0 in the conference, in front of everyone, while Wheelwright dipped to 0-2.

After struggling with the Lady Trojans in the first half, Prestonsburg finally shifted things into high gear, outscoring Wheelwright, 27-15, to win going away.

With the Floyd County Conference race heating up, the Lady Blackcats find themselves in an enviable but not comfortable position.

Prestonsburg has completed more than half of their conference schedule by winning their first five games, but Bridgett Clay knows that her team will have to keep on winning if they hope to bring home a championship.

"We have to keep on winning," Clay said. "Two of our three remaining conference games are at home, so we need to keep playing well and stay healthy."

The biggest concern around Prestonsburg is their one road game, however. The Lady Blackcats have yet to make an appearance in Betsy Layne. The Lady Blackcats and Lady Bobcats met once in Prestonsburg which the home team won, but the contest in Betsy Layne could tell a different tale.

"We have to go to Betsy Layne, and I think that will be our toughest game, but you can't count Allen Central out."

Having played only three conference games, Betsy Layne faces the toughest portion of their schedule, but so far the Bobcats have proven they can compete with county competition.

Selected as this district's number four team by a pre-season coaches vote, Craynor Slone has already advanced his inexperienced squad past most people's expectations.

The hardware is continuing its steady flow into the Betsy Layne trophy case, and if the Bobcats keep up the type play exhibited in the Pikeville Invitational, they may have to purchase a new storing space at Betsy Layne High School.

Lady Rebs Keep Pressure On With Two Conference Wins

The Allen Central Lady Rebels, after losing their conference opener, kept the pressure on leader Prestonsburg with two victories over Wheelwright and McDowell this past week.

The Lady Rebs, fresh off a win at Wheelwright, Tuesday night, rolled into McDowell, Friday, where they claimed their second victory of the week, but this win didn't come as easily as Tuesday's and the Lady Trojans weren't exactly easy pickings, giving Allen Central a run to the buzzer before falling 45-40.

However, the Lady Daredevils proved to be a much tougher opponent this time around. In fact, McDowell staged a remarkable comeback to force an overtime where they almost pulled out their first conference victory.

Trailing by five points with less than three minutes remaining in regulation play, the Lady Daredevils never surrendered as Gwen Stegall scored McDowell's final eight points, including a last second field goal to force the extra period.

In that extra period, McDowell elected to send Allen Central to the foul line and until the final five seconds, their strategy appeared to be working.

The Lady Rebels connected on only five of nine free throw opportunities but the most effective charity stripe appearance proved to be a miss.

With seven seconds remaining in overtime, McDowell sent Lady Reb Donna Robinson to the free throw line. With her team up by one, Robinson missed the front end of a bonus opportunity but quickly made up for this and every mistake Allen Central had made the entire night when she stole the upcourt efforts, proceeding with an easy layup.

Robinson's efforts clinched a victory for Allen Central, and what a time to come through. The Lady Rebs were playing without Michelle Floyd and Tonya Brown while Joann Conn isn't full strength following a bout with chicken pox. Robinson finished the contest with 17 points, while Conn added 12 in the winning effort. With the victory, Allen Central moves into contention for second place and certainly has Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne believing that the conference race will be at least a three-team event.

Coming into Friday's game with McDowell, Lady Reb coach Bonita Compton understood the problems facing her team, but what she got was an even tougher time than she had anticipated.

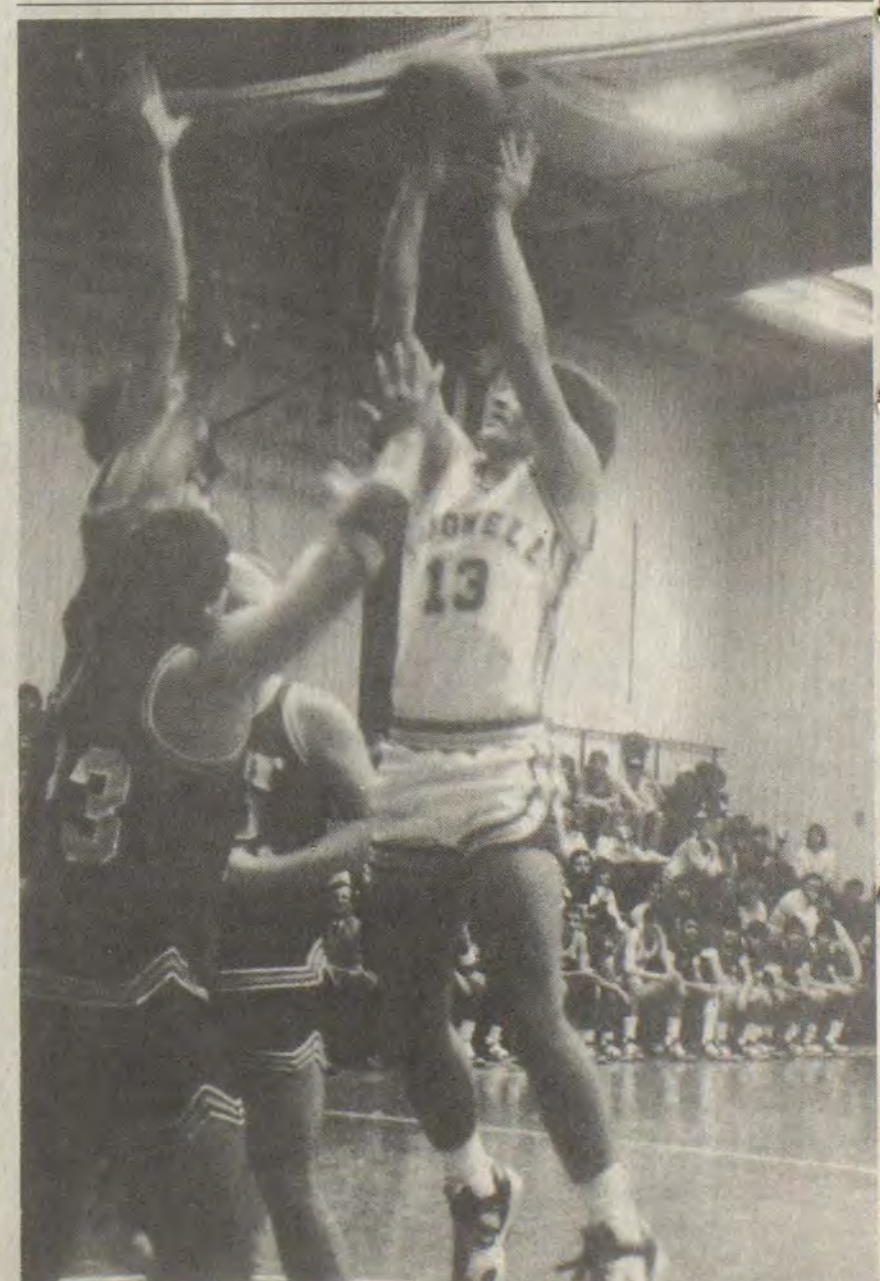

"I knew it would be tough, but I didn't think it would be this tough," Compton admitted. "They were a patient team, and they shot the ball real well, just like Wheelwright did."

Some of that good shooting Compton mentioned came from the likes of Stegall and guard, Gloria Mullins. Stegall led the Lady Daredevils' offensive attack with 22 points, while Mullins poured in 16.

After the game McDowell principal Gary Frazier complimented his student athletes on a fine game, and it was true. McDowell did play their best game of the season but came up short to a strong Allen Central team, 50-47.

Individual Scoring: Allen Central: Donna Robinson 17; Joann Conn, 12; Tonya Kester, 9; Stephanie Wallen, 4; Teresa Crum, 4; Jennifer Stephens, 2; Becky Rice, 2. McDowell: Gwen Stegall, 22; Gloria Mullins, 16; Padra Hall, 2; Kristina Bevins, 2; L. Bryant, 2; Crystal Hall, 2; April Hall, 1.

SPECIAL NOTE: In last week's Prestonsburg-Allen Central article we incorrectly listed Joann Conn in the individual scoring list. Actually Conn was at home due to an illness. Becky Rice should have been listed instead of Conn. We apologize for the error. No excuse has been found yet, but we are working on some.

ANOTHER IMPRESSIVE SOPHOMORE: Dickie Joe Shannon has already shown that he is one of the district's top offensive guards and he is only a sophomore.

Outdoors With Andy... "Cats, 1987, and Other Fancies"

By A.G. SPENCER
When is a painter not a painter? When it's a cougar, of course! No, we're not talking about artists, workers or luxury cars. The talk at hand has to do with mountain lions.

There have always been mountain lions in eastern Kentucky, although never in great numbers. Those who first settled in this region referred to these regal animals by several different names, such as catamounts, painters (a derivative of panther), and wildcats (the latter being more commonly used in modern times to describe bobcats and tall basketball players in Lexington).

Much lore has been spun around the family hearth during late evening hours concerning mountain lions. The respect and awe that early settlers held these animals in is evident in the expression "He could lick his weight in wildcats." All was not smooth sailing between early settlers and these magnificent cats, however. Families took it as a serious matter to awaken only to find their chickens or livestock slaughtered. There was no supermarket to make up the difference.

Thus, mountain lions were shot on sight. Every unpleasant act was blamed on the big cat, usually when an errant fox, coon, weasel, or even a two-legged varmint, was responsible.

As a result, there were relatively few cougars by the middle part of this century. Why did it take so long to decimate the population? For the same reason so few of them are ever sighted: their extreme furtiveness. I have only seen one mountain lion in the wilds, that having been this past summer. Many better woodsmen than I have spent their entire lives in areas with fairly good populations of cougars without having ever laid eyes on one.

My mother, the former Carolyn Price, was reared in Wayland, during an era when the large predators were still fairly numerous in this part of the country. When I was just a little whippersnapper listening in wide-eyed wonder, she told me of being terrified as mountain lions and bobcats would both come part way down the hill they lived on to drink from puddles of condensation formed at the base of the water tower in that coal mining community.

The cats, typical of their genre, announced their presence by screaming as only the predatory cats of North America do. They do this to get game in front or below them to begin milling around or running so that the prey can be located and pursued. Still, it takes little imagination to understand how such a piercing scream, which many people say sounds like a woman screaming in fear, would cause a youngster or even an adult to snuggle down further into the covers.

Such tales took on great realism when told to me when I was about three or four years old and visiting at the same house in which my mother was raised! Imagine how lonely travelers and early pioneers must have felt when hearing that scream from the hill behind them, or, worse still, being roused from their sleep by the embers of a dying campfire to hear the fearsome sound from close by!

Well, we are two weeks into the New Year now. How are your resolutions holding up? Yeah, mine aren't doing so hot, either. Some that I still hope to keep, though, have to do with the outdoors.

For instance, I plan to do a lot more hunting and fishing this year than I did over the past 12 months. A whole lot more! Also, there are a few spots open in my gun rack, spots which I have convinced myself need to be filled. If you like firearms, it is difficult to have too many, or enough varieties. I am especially fond of those with historical significance, such as early "smokeless" examples of the Colt Peacemaker, old shotguns and war relics (many of the latter which represent important moments in history), and such.

Additionally, I hereby resolve to get a compound bow and learn to shoot the darned thing well. I should, and may later resolve, to quit referring to my friends who bow hunt as would-be Haiwathas, too. Might otherwise be left off their Christmas card lists.

It might also be a good thing if I get a couple of deer this next year, perhaps by filling tags in one or two neighboring states. You see, a two-hundred-pound deer translates into about fifty to sixty pounds of meat once gutted, skinned and boned. Its amazing how quickly a family can put that away!

I'm sure there are some more resolutions I should make, but I guess I'll just have to deal with things as they come down the river. Until next week, Happy Hunting!

RABBIT WITH RICE

Ingredients: two first-year rabbits, three or four carrots, thyme, basil, bay leaves, salt, seasoning pepper, two parts of butter, a couple of jars of sliced mushrooms, one cup of wild rice, half a cup of long-grain wild rice, diced green onion stalks, a quarter cup of cooking sherry (non-alcohol cooking wines provide a good alternative for those with objections to alcohol), and several tablespoons of chicken-flavored bouillon. Directions: Cut the carcasses into serving pieces just as you would a chicken. Add a couple of thinly sliced carrots. Using a deep frying pan, melt the butter and, on medium heat, slowly brown the pieces, adding a dash or two of seasoning pepper and thyme and basil and salt as you go. Meanwhile, rinse and drain the wild rice, and place it in a casserole dish along with the long-grained rice. When the pieces are nicely browned, you will place them on this rice bed. Then, with more butter, stir-fry the sliced carrots, green onion stalks and sliced mushrooms. Add sherry, bouillon, three cups of water, season to taste and bring to a boil on high heat. Pour this concoction over the rabbit pieces and rice, and bake the whole casserole in the oven at about 350 degrees for an hour and a half. This dish may be garnished with a sprinkling of parsley, and should serve four to five adults without a whole lot of calories.

Dealing With Ground Hogs

The first frost has touched the tops of the peppers and eggplants, marking the end of another summer of gardening. Last night I frantically gathered all of the okra pods fit to eat and all of the tomatoes beginning to turn yellow.

With some regrets I note the passing of the season; yet this time of year has always brought a sigh of relief: the end of the battle with ground hogs who are now preparing to give us gardeners a respite for the winter. I've sometimes believed that ground hogs are something of a family curse.

I came to Virginia from New Jersey. Mom still lives in New Jersey. She has ground hogs. Brother Bob, who lives down the street from Mom; he's got ground hogs too. Actually, Mom has given up vegetable gardening and no longer battles her ground hogs. But Bob periodically experiences fits of rage, brought on by these gargantuan tunnelers, and he makes inroads on their population so that his family can enjoy a few quarts of home-grown tomatoes come January.

I too have ground hogs. I've been plagued by these fossorial food processors for ten years. I've wondered at times if I must live with them for the rest of my life.

Ground hogs (or wood chucks) are the world's largest squirrel. Zoologists lodge Marmota monax right in between the tree squirrels such as our gray bushy tail and the prairie dogs. A ground hog is a phenomenal digger, spends most of its time foraging close to its underground labyrinth but is perfectly capable of climbing trees for food or to escape from enemies. These short-tailed critters may weigh up to fourteen pounds. I hope one never falls out of a tree as I walk below.

Ranging throughout the eastern U.S., into the midwest and across much of Canada, ground hogs graze mostly on grasses and wildflowers. If their home is in the suburbs, however, they snack voraciously on our beans, marigolds, canteloupes and other succulents.

One way to try to outwit a ground hog is to fence it out. Here's how: Dig heavy-duty galvanized fencing two feet in the ground, with six to eight additional inches of fence angling out and down from the two-foot mark. Bury the fence which then lines the perimeter of your garden. You might add an electric fence atop the galvanized one.

In my own yard, I've put all my vegetables in raised beds constructed of pressure-treated lumber. It's very easy to fence such a garden because the posts that anchor the lumber are also used to anchor the fence. Although a ground hog may consider going underneath, in this case my absolutely miserable, clayey, rocky soil is a blessing. Ground hogs are no more willing to tunnel through it than they are through concrete.

Actually, I can't complain this year. Ground hogs have rarely attempted to enter my garden; nor have they bothered my unfenced plants. I think perhaps they have found enough food in the clovers, evening primroses and succulent grasses of my natural meadow garden nearby. At any rate they've done no real damage and I'm beginning to believe I've discovered a couple of cures for the family curse.

Kentucky Afield... "Spotlighting" Still Illegal

In spite of a recent ruling that a state statute against "spotlighting" for deer is unconstitutional, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is continuing to arrest and prosecute those who engage in this illegal activity, according to Commissioner Don R. McCormick.

The department has appealed to the Supreme Court for a discretionary review of the Kentucky Court of Appeals ruling that its law against "spotlighting" is unconstitutional. In addition, McCormick said that other existing laws still make "spotlighting" deer or other game illegal and that the state's conservation officers will continue to enforce these laws.

The appeal to the state Supreme Court has been filed through the Attorney General's office, McCormick said.

In late November, the court of appeals struck down a statute which prohibits a person from "casting the rays of a spotlight, jacklight or other artificial lighting device on any highway or in any field, woodland or forest," while having a firearm or other weapon capable of killing a deer in his possession. In the opinion of the court, the statute is too broad and may be applied to anyone driving a public road with a firearm at hand.

McCormick said that existing laws against molesting wildlife, hunting at night or hunting out of season are being used to combat spotlighters until the appeal is heard.

"There is no way we are going to allow illegal hunters to damage our highly successful deer program," McCormick said.

"Spotlighting" is a favorite technique of illegal deer hunters, who use a powerful spotlight to locate and temporarily blind deer before shooting them. Deer habitually feed in open fields and along roadsides at night, making them easy prey for poachers.

Over the last 10 years, Kentucky's deer herd has increased greatly in many areas of the state. Wildlife officials say one reason for this increase is better law enforcement, stiffer penalties in the courts and a shift in public attitude toward promoting the protection of our wildlife resources.

Some areas of the state, however, still have low deer numbers, and illegal harvest may be contributing to the failure of deer management programs in these regions, wildlife officials say.

"If we want to bring quality deer hunting to all of Kentucky, it is important that we control spotlighting," McCormick says, "and our officers are certainly not reducing their efforts in the least."

Bassin' With The Pros...

Tips For Buying a Fish Locator/Depth Finder

One of the most productive tools available to the modern bass sportsman is the depth finder or fish locator. When used in conjunction with a lake map, the mastery of these two tools can prove to be a real boon to your bass harvesting success.

Every pro I've talked to on this subject agrees: Buy a brand and model that is best for your application or style of fishing. Don't buy a model with a lot of buzzers and bells if you don't need them.

"The main thing to consider is your application for the unit," stresses Ken Cook, Evinrude Pro Staff member. "Buy a unit that will do what you need it to do and get your money's worth. The bottom line is getting something you can use that provides the benefits you need. It's essential for someone who's going to buy a depth finder to learn about each model he's interested in, find out how they work, and what they actually do for you."

Randy Dearman, Johnson Outboard Pro Staff member, gives some insights about flashers:

"Flashers basically all do the same thing. Some of them have different features or added features. They send a signal to the bottom and back up to the transducer and it tells you the depth. The scale is an important feature to look at, because your choice depends on what type of water you're fishing in. I like one with a shallow scale, say a 20-foot scale instead of a 60-foot scale because when your light moves it will move farther over a one-foot area on the 20-foot scale than it does on a larger scale."

"I think the OMC Tracker 2000XR™ is a unit that fits a lot of fishermen's needs very well because it does most of the things that the average guy needs," said Cook. "It tells him how deep the water is, tells the location of the bass between him and the bottom (within reason), and that's about all a fisherman needs most of the time. That covers 90% of your applications. For the money, the OMC Tracker is an appropriate unit for a lot of different fishermen in a lot of different situations. And it certainly works well for me in most of my applications."

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association
The grass was already brown and most of the leaves had fallen from the shrubs and trees and there just wasn't anything appetizing around the barnyard except some bright green shrubbery with brilliant red berries on the other side of the fence.

The veterinarian noticed the fence had been broken down by the cattle, when he was called to determine the cause of death of the 20 cattle found lying dead beside the shrubbery.

His diagnosis was simple, he'd seen it before though more often in horses than cattle. In fact it happens all too frequently.

The cattle had eaten Taxus cuspidata, better known to landscapers and gardeners as Japanese Yew.

The shrub is used extensively as an ornamental throughout the northern two-thirds of the United States (including Kentucky) because it remains brilliant in color when most other plants have turned brown or simply withered away.

This may be part of the problem, because most animals find the foliage distasteful, but will eat it anyway in the absence of other fresh foliage and sometimes from boredom. Occasionally trimmings have been thrown over a fence into an overgrazed pasture, where animals then eat it. Sometimes, trimmings are mixed with grass and the flavor is disguised.

STRUTTIN' HIS STUFF: Morehead State University's Bob McCann put on a good show for Bullitt management with 22 points, 13 rebounds, and four blocked shots against Akron Monday night.

Install Energy-Efficient Windows

Highlands Regional Medical Center has finished installing $48,000 worth of new energy-efficient windows that are expected to save more than $14,400 each year in heating and cooling costs.

The double-plated Thermo-Windows are resistant to heat and cold and can maintain an interior temperature as much as 35 degrees different from outside temperature, according to Gary Berghaus, director of environmental services at the medical center. Thus, he said, patients' rooms will be more comfortable in both winter and summer.

The window replacement was made possible by a $24,000 grant from the Kentucky Department of Energy. An equal amount was provided by the medical center. The project followed a 1985 study of energy losses at the facility, which revealed a need for energy-efficient windows.

The medical center plans to apply for an additional grant from the state energy department in 1987.

Med Scholarships Now Being Accepted

The Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund is accepting applications from residents of Kentucky, who have been accepted at the University of Kentucky College of Medicine or the University of Louisville Medical School. The fund offers a $6,000 loan per year of medical school to a qualified recipient who is willing to practice and reside in a rural county in Kentucky for one year for each loan received. The interest rate will be one-half of the prime rate on May 1.

Special forgiveness of loans is available to those who practice in one of Kentucky's critical counties.

The Fund is the oldest and most successful of its kind in the nation. The Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund has loaned $3 million to 512 medical students.

Anyone interested in applying for a scholarship should contact the RKMSF Office at the Kentucky Medical Association Headquarters, 3532 Ephraim McDowell Drive, Louisville, Kentucky 40205, or call 502-459-9790. Deadline for applications will be April 1, 1987.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: I have recently made an attempt to quit smoking. I know it is harmful to my health and to the health of those around me, but I can't seem to quit for longer than a few weeks. I'm eating everything in sight and fear the weight gain. Can you offer any tips on how to quit and not gain weight?

ANSWER: Weight gain is a major reason that quitters give up relapsing. It is true that smokers weigh on the average 7-8 pounds less than non-smokers. However, giving up cigarettes if far healthier to you than adding on a few extra pounds. It would take the addition of more than 75 pounds to offset the health benefits which a normal smoker gains by quitting. Researchers believe that nicotine alters the preference for sweet-tasting foods. It's not just that the orally-fixated smoker trades in the gratification of cigarettes for the pleasures of eating, but that sugar is a particular problem for those trying to kick the habit. Research findings suggest that if you restrict the type, but not the quantity of food around the ex-smoker, you may be able to control body weight gain. Don't keep calorie-rich foods around the house. You can avoid weight gain when you stop smoking by practicing your A,B,C's: You must begin an...

Action program of daily exercise...it helps to regulate your diet and gives double protection against weight gain...

Be careful what foods you eat...avoid deep-frying and between meal snacks, trim fat and eat fresh fruits...Control your calorie intake and do not eat more than you did as a smoker.

Remember, that successful methods of quitting smoking are as different as the people who use them—so don't hesitate to try something new. Pick ideas to quit that make sense to you. And then follow through—you'll have a much better chance of success.

For more information on how to quit smoking call the Cancer Information Service, 1-800-4-CANCER, and ask for Clearing the Air, A Guide to Quitting Smoking.

Workshops Slated To Assist State High School Grads

Sixty-five high school seniors who live in certain Kentucky counties and who want to become physicians or dentists will get an early start toward their goal next summer at the University of Kentucky, the University of Louisville, or Kentucky State University.

Students will be chosen to attend a five- or six-week college preparatory workshop at one of the universities from applicants who live in Kentucky counties or areas of some counties that have too few physicians or dentists.

Graduating high school seniors who live in Floyd county are among those eligible to apply.

The workshops are part of the state's Professional Education Preparation Program, which was designed to help increase the number of students in medical or dental school from Kentucky counties experiencing a shortage of physicians or dentists.

Students attending the workshops will meet and work with medical and dental students and professionals and receive instruction in reading, writing, study-skills, and problem solving.

They will also have classes in biology, chemistry, and other sciences to improve their chances of doing well in their premedical or pre-dental college studies.

Room and board and all workshop instruction will be provided without charge to the participant. Each student will also be given an expense allowance.

The workshops will be only the first in a series of activities that will be provided the participants. Additional programs and services designed to help them succeed in becoming doctors or dentists will be provided throughout their undergraduate and medical or dental school studies.

Interested high school seniors can get further information and application forms from their high school counselor or principal, or by contacting the Professional Education Preparation Program, Kentucky Council on Higher Education, West Frankfort Office Complex, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Applications must be received by March 2.

of James Monroe Hunt who died January 10, 1986.
It's been a year since you were here. I can sense your closeness, I know your presence is near. I want to see you at the end. I want to love my special father, my loving friend. You were there when things went wrong. I could always call and say: Dad I want to come home. His wisdom and words, were spoken to me. Be good on this earth, and God will honor thee. Now this big space I have in my heart; Is where you left your loving daughter with a broken heart, But I knew you were tired, and the Lord took your hand, And I know to this day you are when the world began; That's Heaven, God love you dad until we meet again.

St. Jude Announces Bike-A-Thon Chairmen
The Central Regional Office of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital has announced that the following individuals in Floyd county have agreed to chair the 1987 Bike-A-Thons in their community.
Mr. Ellis Spurlock for Allen, Miss Bridgett Clay for David, Mrs. Teresa Tackett for Harold, and Mrs. Ruth Daniels for Wheelwright, will each chair separate Bike-A-Thons this year. St. Jude Children's Research Hospital was founded by entertainer Danny Thomas. The institution opened its doors to the public in 1962 to combat catastrophic diseases which afflict children. St. Jude Hospital is non-sectarian, non-discriminatory, and provides medical care to over 4,200 patients.
At St. Jude, scientists and physicians are working side by side seeking not only a better means of treatment, but also the causes, cures and prevention of these terrible killers.
All findings and information gained at the hospital are shared freely with doctors and hospitals all over the world. Thanks to St. Jude Hospital, children who have leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, sickle-cell anemia, and other child killing diseases now have a better chance to live.
The Bike-A-Thon program is dedicated to "Jaime". Jaime is from Ohio and was diagnosed with leukemia in May of 1983, and began treatment at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. Today, her cancer is in remission and she is doing quite well. Jaime is a living example of the progress and success of the research, patient care, and educational programs of this internationally recognized hospital.
Funds raised in the event will help assure the continuation of the work at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.
The concern which these chairmen have for the work being done at St. Jude Hospital is greatly appreciated. We also feel assured that the citizens in their communities will support the upcoming events as generously as possible.
Information about the Bike-A-Thons may be obtained from the following chairmen: Mr. Ellis Spurlock (Allen) 606-874-2304, Miss Bridgett Clay (David) 606-886-1378, Mrs. Ruth Daniels (Wheelwright) 606-452-4118, and Mrs. Teresa Tackett (Harold) 606-478-2660.

Civil Rights Leader To Keynote King Day
The Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, nationally prominent civil rights leader, will be the keynote speaker for Morehead State University's celebration of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday tomorrow (Thursday).
Shuttlesworth, now pastor of the Greater New Light Baptist Church in Cincinnati, will speak at 7 p.m., Thursday, in Breckinridge Auditorium. Prior to his speech, there will be a campus candlelight memorial march at 6 p.m., beginning at Allie Young Hall.
In May 1956, when Alabama political leaders outlawed the NAACP, a group of ministers in Birmingham came together under the leadership of Shuttlesworth to organize the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights (ACMHR). One of the five founders and first secretary of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), Shuttlesworth still serves on its board and is president of the Cincinnati Chapter.
After being bombed twice, beaten and jailed more than 25 times during the struggle, Shuttlesworth was honored in 1978 by the Birmingham City Council for his "courageous efforts" in leading peaceful demonstrations which eventually led to the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the 1965 Voting Rights Act guaranteeing all citizens the right to vote.
"Actually, the University will mark the anniversary of Dr. King's birthday with a week-long observance, beginning Monday, Jan. 12, and featuring a variety of events including films and slide presentations," said Jerry Gore, MSU's minority student affairs director.
The activities have been organized under the auspices of MSU's Office of Minority Student Affairs and the Black Coalition.

Grace Jones isn't quite 'Perfect' in her new clip

By Barton Weiss

All music videos are star vehicles. After all, their primary function is to establish the performer as a star. But the new clip from Grace Jones goes beyond normal star making. With a title like "I'm Not Perfect, But I'm Perfect for You," that's to be expected. But it is a bit much to start the clip with a number of celebrities, including Andy Warhol, telling us why the clip's star, in this case Jones, is perfect.

Grace Jones

The rest of the clip is a setup for the final sequence in which the queen of ultra cool wears a dress that's literally as big as a room, as her fans dance under it.

The clip isn't perfect, but it's the best thing Jones has done in a long time.

Mush and intelligence

Nick Finn, who was the voice and face of the Split Enz, had a big hit a few years back with "I Got You." Finn's new band, Crowded House, has come up with a great video

THE MORNING AFTER (R-20th Century-Fox) Starring Jane Fonda, Jeff Bridges, Raul Julia. ★ ★ ½ ★

By J.T. YURKO

Some dates turn out to be real stiffs. In "The Morning After," Jane Fonda, who has been suffering blackouts because of her drinking, wakes up and discovers that she's lying in a strange apartment — and lying next to her is a man with a knife in his chest. That must have been some party, even by Los Angeles standards. Her attempts to escape are futile, but along the way she picks up Jeff Bridges, a blue-collar kind of guy who's just a touch shady — and just a touch too interested in her predicament. Is he the killer trying to frame her? And what about her social-climbing ex-husband (Raul Julia)?

Director Sidney Lumet presents a murder mystery/thriller/love story with style and ease, and if it's not his best film, mediocre Lumet is better than the best of many other directors.

Star power is the fuel for the tale, with Fonda and Bridges pairing off against the forces of evil. "The Morning After" tells an almost quaint little story of alcoholism, murder, blackmail and betrayal. For all its jack-in-the-box effects, which are guaranteed to put your neighbor in your lap, the tone has none of the gritty realism that might comprise a day in the life of an alcoholic. Even Fonda's discovery of the body is handled in near black-comedy fashion.

When Lumet, who is known as a New York director, shines his camera on the other coast, he presents a portrait of a very different Los Angeles. This is not the glitzy area of "Beverly Hills Cop," but Lumet still overtints the sky bright blue and shoots the industrial sections of town in pastel hues.

As mysteries go, this one is relatively easy to solve, and it relies heavily on the considerable talents of Fonda and Bridges to carry it along. Bridges is curiously cast in the film, since movie-goers will suspect that he retains his "Jagged Edge."

But in a film where there are few real surprises, that may even add to the suspense.

THE NEW MIKE HAMMER

Mike Hammer (Stacy Keach) seeks to help an amnesiac who appears in his office, but it becomes apparent that the man figures importantly in the plans of Soviet and U.S. secret agents, on CBS's "The New Mike Hammer," airing WEDNESDAY, JAN. 21.

Stone Head Presents Enigma

Sometime in 1981 or 1982 a Floyd county resident from Martin was hiking up at the head of Deadman Branch hollow in the Littcarr section of Knott county when he stumbled upon a strange rock. It was partially buried in mud from recent blasting from a strip mining operation. He dug it out of the mud and to his amazement it was a sculpture of a man's head, about life size and weighing over 100 pounds. The face had a beard and appeared to have a very sad expression. Most people who have seen it say it looks like Christ, or at least someone from that part of the world. Were there ancient people here who carved the piece? Surely it doesn't look like the work of native American Indians.

The head was kept in the finder's home for a few years and eventually came into the possession of Jim Scott, of Martin, who has spent many hours studying the piece and puzzling over its origins. He asked John Paul Francis, bookseller and writer in Prestonsburg, for help and through him contact was made with Dr. John Payne, of Berea, who arranged for the statue to be studied at Berea College.

At Berea it was evaluated by three members of the art department who felt it was probably a modern sculpture (19th or 20th century), the work of a student or good amateur artist. The head was examined under a high powered microscope by a professor of Geology who found no evidence of weathering in the worked surfaces of the stone and therefore concluded that the piece was of recent origin. It is made of silt stone, a locally occurring type of sandstone in eastern Kentucky.

Although the evidence suggests the piece is not a remnant of some lost civilization it is still a fascinating mystery. Why would such a sculpture have been buried at the head of Deadman Branch to be unearthed in a mining operation? Was some budding artist frustrated that his work did not bring him fame and fortune and he cast it aside? Was it stolen and disposed of there?

Anyone who might have information about this statue should contact the owner, Mr. Jim Scott, Box 29, Martin, Ky. 41649.

AICR Makes Possible First Scientific Link To China

What is believed to be the first permanent facsimile hookup between scientific health institutions in the Peoples Republic of China and the United States was recently made possible as the result of a grant from the American Institute for Cancer Research (AICR).

The Chinese Academy of Preventive Medicine in Beijing was presented with a Sharp brand facsimile machine which will allow for the direct transmission of research data between the Academy, Cornell University in Ithaca, New York, and Oxford University in Oxford, England. The facsimile machine will be used in support of a joint research effort being conducted between Chinese, American and English scientists.

This research study, which has been funded in part by the American Institute for Cancer Research, the National Cancer Institute and a number of other organizations, is analyzing the relationship between dietary patterns in China and cancer mortality rates. The study is the most comprehensive of its kind and is expected to provide further understanding of the effects of diet and lifestyle on the risk for cancer.

The presentation of the new equipment was made in Beijing by Dr. Colin T. Campbell of Cornell University, director of the joint China-British-U.S. study, and Melvin Hutson, chairman of the Board of Directors of the American Institute for Cancer Research and a partner of the law firm of Thompson, Mann and Hutson, with law offices in Greenville, S.C., Atlanta, Ga., and Washington, D.C.

In making the presentation to Dr. Jun-shi Chen of the Chinese Academy of Preventive Medicine, co-director of the project, Mr. Hutson noted the positive effects this machine will have on international collaborative research efforts by making possible instant communication of research materials. Dr. Campbell commented that this level of cooperation is necessary for the success of this and future projects, and predicted that "a great deal of future research will be collaborative studies between nations that will be dependent on the efficient exchange of scientific information."

The American Institute for Cancer Research (AICR) is a national cancer organization which has focused on research and educational programs on cancer and cancer prevention as they relate to diet and nutrition. It is hoped that the U.S.-British-China project, which AICR has helped to fund over the past three years, will eventually provide further clues on the role diet plays in the occurrence of cancer.

Further information about AICR and its programs is available by contacting the American Institute for Cancer Research, Director of Grants, Washington, D.C. 20069.

LICE AND GRUBS

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association They are present throughout the year, it's just that you're more likely to notice cattle lice and grubs during the winter months.

Reason is that they don't like sunlight and exposure, so the lice wait until the hair grows long and the dimly-lit, short days come along before they make a public appearance.

Unless you're specifically looking for lice, the first indication will usually be the rubbing your cow suddenly begins, on anything handy. Then the hair will be worn away, especially on the neck, and your cow may appear to have dandruff.

Look a little more closely, and you may see gray bugs, smaller than a grain of rice, oval shaped with a head that appears at times to be red.

Those are cattle lice, and small as they may be a sufficient number of them can literally bleed an adult cow to death.

Another common parasite are grubs, parasitic fly larvae laid by flies on the hairs of the legs and underbelly of cattle. When hatched, the maggots from these eggs burrow under the skin then migrate through the animal's tissues until they reach the skin on the animal's back, where they make breathing holes in the skin and eventually fall out and hatch as flies, starting the cycle all over again. They also cause itching and rob the animal of nutrition.

Domestic cattle and the American bison seem to be the only mammals regularly infested with the two species of flies which cause the grubs. There are six strains of lice which infest cattle. Control of both lice and grubs is relatively simple, once they have been noticed and identified.

Various insecticides control the lice, but because of the possibility of contaminating milk with insecticide the type used on dairy cattle may vary from that used for beef cattle or sheep or goats. Spraying and dipping are both effective, if properly done, but may not be practical in winter when the lice are most frequently seen. Dusting may control the lice unless warm weather arrives.

Systemic insecticides are quite effective against grubs. Properly selected and applied, these make the cow itself an insecticide against the grubs and kill the grubs wherever they are in the host's body.

Your veterinarian is trained in identifying which parasites are infecting your cattle, as well as in recommending an insecticide which is effective and compatible with your use of your animals. Not only is lice/grub control easier on your animals, but it can produce up to 40 pounds more meat per calf with less feed, while cost of treatment is modest.

FLOYD COUNTY HEALTH NEWS
By JANE BOND

A nurse from the health department will be in Wayland at the Vogel Day Methodist Church, Friday, January 16 from 10 until 2. She will offer T.B. skin tests, urinalyses, blood pressures, anemia screening and immunizations. This clinic is a free service of the health department and is open to the public. The same services will be offered at the Rescue Squad Building at Price, Friday, January 23, from 10-2.

A Pap clinic will be held at the Floyd County Health Department Thursday, January 29, from 8-11:30 and 1-2. This clinic is a free service of the health department and is open to women of all ages, but those women age 45 and over are especially urged to attend since this is the high risk age for cervical cancer.

There will be a Glaucoma clinic at the health department Thursday, January 22, from 8-11:30 and from 1-2. This clinic is a free service of the health department and is open to persons of all ages, but those persons age 40 and over are especially urged to be screened for this disease since this is the high risk age.

President Dennis F. Kinlaw, of Asbury College will be preaching at First United Methodist Church on January 18th at 11:00 a.m. and again at 5:00 p.m. In the evening service, he will be sharing in the Consecration service of a new ministry begun at First Church, the Ministry of the L.A.M.B. or Lay Assistants in Ministry of the Bible. The Rev. Dr. Kinlaw is an outstanding United Methodist. He serves on the boards of several organizations, including Christianity Today, Luthiana Christian Medical College and Wesley Biblical Seminary. He is a member of the Francis Asbury Press, a division of Zondervan Publishing Company. He is associated with the Christian Holiness Association and serves as president of the Francis Asbury Society.

As to his family background, Dr. Kinlaw is the son of a North Carolina lawyer. He was born in 1922 in Lumberton, North Carolina. He is married to Elsie Katherine Blake and they have five children.

Dr. Kinlaw's interests have been varied. A student of human culture (both religious and secular), he has a special interest in those ideas (moral, ethical, philosophical and theological) that shape our destinies. In addition to his pastoral, education and administrative duties, he has preached widely in evangelistic outreach around the globe. He has also preached or lectured on numerous college and university campuses, both Christian and secular, throughout the United States.

Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club

Members of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club were met at the door not only by the hostess, Mrs. Joan Hall, of Mousie, but by the delicious aroma of turkey and all the trimmings when they arrived at the home of Mrs. Hall last month for their annual Christmas party.

As part of the Christmas program, Mrs. Marsella Bradley read "The Nativity Story" from IDEALS Magazine. Mrs. Libby Martin read the Christmas story according to the Gospel of Luke. Following this, an open discussion was held on the subject, "What Christmas Means to Me."

There was an exchange of gifts, and the gifts which each club member had brought to be delivered to the rest home were also collected.

Prior to the dinner, Mrs. Marsella Bradley conducted a devotional period, followed by the Pledge to the Flag led by Mrs. Maxine Martin.

The club agreed to once again send a donation for the Town of Wayland Christmas Fund.

Those present were Mrs. Marsella Bradley, Mrs. Marie Mullins, Mrs. Lula Coburn, Mrs. Maxine Martin, Mrs. Vera Allen, Mrs. LaFaye Hughes, Mrs. Joyce Stevens, Mrs. Launice Dunfee, Mrs. Louise West, Mrs. Blanche Barner, Mrs. Libby Martin, and the hostess, Mrs. Joan Hall. Mrs. Marie Mullins and Mrs. Vera Allen were co-hostesses.

The next regular club meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. LaFaye Hughes, January 19, at Garrett.

CARD OF THANKS

The wife and family of George Noe wish to thank all those who helped so much in our time of need. We deeply appreciate the beautiful flowers and all the good food which was provided by our good neighbors and friends. Though it is impossible to name each one, we extend our love to all. Also thanks to Highlands Regional Medical Center, the doctors and nurses who were so kind, and Larry Burke and the staff at Floyd Funeral Home for their help. A special thanks to the Community Free Will Baptist Church and Brother Kenneth Ray Daniels, and Brother Richard Crisp for the comforting words they spoke over our dear companion. God bless all.

Toyota Begins Hiring Workers

The Kentucky Department for Employment Services has begun the long process of screening applicants for skilled and production jobs at the Toyota Motor Corporation auto assembly plant in Scott county.

Interviews and orientation began this week at the department's 27 local offices for nearly 7,600 applicants with prior technical and supervisory experience. Letters will be mailed to the remaining 37,000 Kentuckians who filed preliminary applications in 1986, scheduling interviews during this month and early February.

Interviews will be scheduled for the estimated 2,300 out-of-state applicants only if needed after current Kentucky candidates have been screened.

"Right now we're asking people who already have completed a preliminary application to come to one of our local offices and fill out a Toyota application," said Employment Services Commissioner James Daniels.

In order to avoid a backlog of new applications, persons interested in work at the Toyota auto plant but who have not yet applied are encouraged to wait until after Feb. 1 to contact local Employment Services offices.

"People will not be hired for jobs at the Toyota plant on a 'first come-first served' basis," Daniels said. "Test and assessment scores will determine who meets the basic qualifications."

"Over the next few months Toyota officials expect to select about 140 people who have highly technical skills and some supervisory experience. They will spend four to six months in intensive refresher training courses," he said. Production workers will be selected later this year.

"With this volume of applicants, we absolutely have to set up appointments just to be able to serve our clients in an orderly manner. By seeing applicants on a scheduled basis now, we will be in a better position to serve those job candidates who have not contacted us yet," Daniels said. By the end of 1987, the department estimates about 200,000 people will have applied for jobs at the plant.

"Applicants could spend up to 20 hours over several days in screening and selection," said Margaret Whittet, the department's deputy commissioner. "First we will give each applicant a fact sheet about Toyota and explain our testing and screening process."

People who still are interested will fill out longer applications and be scheduled for aptitude and skills tests.

"No one will be rejected at this point simply on the basis of test scores," said Whittet. "Some will be placed in the first group to go through the assessment phase. Others will be placed in a holding pool for later groups."

The assessment phase involves measuring applicants' skills, interpersonal relationships and leadership abilities.

Following the assessment, those applicants who already have some technical skills needed for the job will go to a vocational school for an evaluation. Selected applicants then will be referred to Toyota for an interview and to demonstrate their job skills.

Miss Burkett-Mr. Blair Exchange Vows

Miss Rhonda Jo Burkett and Mr. Eddie Randall Blair were united in marriage, October 10, at Trimble Chapel Methodist Church by the Rev. Jim Smith. The ceremony was solemnized in the presence of family members, and a reception was held immediately following the ceremony. A two-tiered wedding cake decorated with red roses and topped with bride and groom was made by Mrs. Marcella Smith. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Gretchen Burkett, of Banner, and the late Joe Burkett. Mr. Blair is the son of Edison and Christine Blair, of Water-Gap. The couple now reside in Prestonsburg.

Betsy Layne United Methodist Women Meet

The United Methodist women of Betsy Layne met January 5th at the church. The meeting was called to order by the president, Willie Caldwell.

The February meeting will be a mother-daughter Valentine banquet, to be held at the church.

Refreshments were served to Mrs. B.C. Caldwell, Mrs. Paul Neese, Mrs. Bob Larron, Mrs. Kaminski Robinson, Mrs. Dale Meade and Mrs. Curt Wallen.

A two-pack-a-day cigarette smoker could, by quitting, save enough in just ten years (at six percent interest and at present prices) to buy around-the-world cruise or a good sized boat. In 25 years, you could save $25,000. The savings to your health and longevity are even greater.

Mullins-Howard Exchange Vows

Miss Paula Sue Mullins and Mr. James Ellis Howard were united in marriage at the Parkway Baptist Church, Lexington. The double-ring ceremony was solemnized by the pastor, Reverend John T. Wallace.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Mullins, of Lexington. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Howard, of Pyramid.

Traditional wedding selections were presented by organist Bobbie Clay and vocalists Sandra and Jeff Carter.

Escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor length gown of satin, chiffon, and lace. The full skirt of satin was trimmed at the hemline with lace and extended into a cathedral train. The bride carried a silk cascade bouquet of white gardenias accented with peach sweetheart roses.

The matron of honor was Sherri Brooker. Bridesmaids, Carolyn Woodford, Cheryl Simpson, Diana Pinkston, and Ann Mullins, wore tea-length peach satin and lace dresses and carried white lace fans decorated with peach sweetheart roses and ribbons.

The best man was Lawrence Howard. Ushers were Ronnie Branam, Dana Stephens, Bobby Bradley, and Jeff Mullins.

The flower girl was Elizabeth Woodford and the ring bearer was Todd Weigle.

The bride's mother wore a street length dress of gray silk chiffon. The groom's mother was dressed in a street length dress of rose-beige satin and lace.

A reception was held in the church dining room, which was decorated in the bride's colors of peach and white. A four-tiered cake, topped with a Precious Moments figurine, was served with nuts, mints, finger-sandwiches and punch.

The bride is a graduate of Bryan Station High School and Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond. She is a member of Delta Zeta Sorority and is employed by Columbia Gas Company.

The groom is a graduate of Maytown High School and the University of Kentucky. He is also employed by Columbia Gas Company.

Other festivities included a wedding rehearsal dinner, hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Howard, at the Holiday-Inn East, Lexington. The dinner tables were decorated with peach colored floral arrangements.

Following a trip to the Virgin Islands, the couple is residing in Lexington.

Garrett Bike-A-Thon To Be Held Apr. 25

A Bike-a-Thon to benefit the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Indiana will be held in Garrett on April 25, coordinated by Shirley Morgan.

The hospital, founded 25 years ago by entertainer Danny Thomas, conducts research aimed at preventing and treating catastrophic childhood diseases such as leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, and sickle cell anemia. It provides medical care to more than 4,200 young patients.

As far as she knows, the Garrett Bike-a-Thon will be the only one held in Floyd county, according to Morgan. Bicycle riders will circle a one-mile route on traffic-free back roads in Baptist Bottom where the event was held last year, she said.

Morgan said this will be the first year she has coordinated the Bike-a-Thon, though she has helped with benefit programs for sick children before. She hopes that at least 20 or 25 riders will sign up for the benefit.

Each rider will be asked to find sponsors willing to pay a certain amount of money for each mile that the rider covers during the event. Riders are expected to come up with at least five sponsors apiece, she said, "but the more, the better."

Last year one child brought in a total of $75 from sponsors, she added.

County residents of all ages are eligible to participate. Anyone interested should register by about April 10, in order to have enough time to find sponsors before the event is held.

Dwale Cabinetmaker Takes Pride In Special Design, Restoration

Some jobs are worth an extra effort. That was how Dwale cabinetmaker Ernest Cooley felt about the Civil War home he helped restore for former Floyd countian Curtis Hatfield, when Hatfield moved a few years ago to Ulysses, in Lawrence county.

Built along the Big Sandy at a point where it often became too shallow to support the barges and paddlewheelers supplying Union troops and upstream communities, the fine, slavebuilt home was once the center of a village of cargohandlers. It was here that food, ammunition and supplies were transferred from the boats that had ferried them up the Ohio River and its fickle tributary, to continue by wagon into the east Kentucky hills.

Cherry trees salvaged when KY 3 pushed by Hatfield's Water Gap home about 15 years ago provided timber for the kitchen cabinets Cooley built for the restoration and for the wide moldings he designed to crown the old home's high walls. "Cherrywood is pretty but it's hard to find any dry enough to use," he said, with a nod of appreciation for the bulldozers that left a supply of the prized timber so close at hand.

Cooley's work recently came to the attention of the Missouri editor of a trade paper published by the manufacturer of a line of saws, planers and other woodworking machinery. Cooley, who has two of the company's planers in his Dwale workshop, will be featured in a forthcoming issue of the Foley-Belsaw News Bulletin, said editor Sam Smith.

For Cooley's wife Valerie, who said she "reads anything" set in the Civil War period, the restoration of the Ulysses home was a source of special satisfaction.

"As you approach the house, you half expect a southern belle to step out in a hooped skirt, a mint julep in her hand," she said. "It was like Gone With The Wind, except there is no spiral staircase."

Not that a custom staircase poses any problem if the occasion warrants it, as it did when Cooley was building a home at Betsy Layne for pharmacist Roy Reasor. The design demanded a sharp u-turn that a contractor told him "can't be done." Reasor recalled. Cooley did it, molding the handsome poplar banister, u-turn and all, on his own planer-molder.

The 47-year-old carpenter, who works fulltime for Meade Construction of Stanville, resorts to his own workshop when the job calls for a special design, the kind that is unlikely to roll off a factory assembly line.

For a Pike county coal operator, Cooley trimmed the front door and eaves to give distinctive grace to a

On a weekend in his Dwale workshop, Ernest Cooley feeds lumber into a planer to create the distinctive moldings he uses on special jobs.

50-year-old, colonial-style home. On the triangular end-wall of the attic, he fashioned a wall-to-ceiling gun cabinet of oak.

For Dwale neighbor Stella Davis, he turned out elaborate, custom-built kitchen and bathroom cabinets out of birch.

Ironically, the craftsman who now prides himself on the special touch he is able to give routine construction jobs was first introduced to cabinetmaking 23 years ago during a four-year stint in a North Carolina furniture factory.

He came home to Dwale to start a business of his own, founding Cooley's Custom Cabinets, and built up a brisk, word-of-mouth business. "I was covered up," he said. "I don't know of any customer who was dissatisfied with the work I did."

In the end, the solitary cabinetmaker found it hard to compete with the mass-produced efficiency of the assembly line. And he would have given anything for a steady supply of the scrap pieces of lumber that were routinely discarded at the factory where he had worked.

But the idea of going back into business on his own is not dead by a long shot. Stripmining produces hardwood logs as well as coal and, with a sawmill, he could make good use of them. Cooley noted recently. "I'd say it would be a good line of business," he said.

If he does start back on his own, she will be keeping the books, insists Valerie Cooley, who says her husband's soft heart did nothing to help Cooley's Custom Cabinets turn a profit before.

"Cooley's Welfare Shop is what I called it," she recalled with a laugh. "We might have broken a bit above even, but we certainly didn't end up on easy street."

Even as routine home construction continues to put bread on the table, it is the weekend retreat to his own shop—to turn out the piece that takes a special effort—that gives his work a distinctive flair and Cooley a craftsman's satisfaction. "It just gives you pride, I guess," he said. "Security, too. It's always something to come back to if times get rough."

When All Else Fails, MACAP Aids Consumer

When a major appliance develops a problem that won't go away, consumers can find a much-needed friend in an Illinois-based consumer action group.

The Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel (MACAP) acts as a mediator between appliance manufacturers nationwide and customers whose dishwashers, water heaters, ovens and other appliances have stopped working. It reviews complaints, contacts company officials, and recommends action that will resolve the complaints. According to MACAP spokesperson Marian Stamos, the organization has successfully resolved 80 percent of the complaints received during the 16 years of its existence.

Stamos cautions that MACAP is intended to be a last resort, used only when a customer has tried all other means of getting the faulty appliance fixed. Before contacting MACAP, customers should examine the appliance themselves, checking the plug, fuses, pilots and controls. If that doesn't solve the problem, they should next call their local dealer or service agency.

If the dealer or service person can't correct the problem, customers should next contact the appliance's manufacturer or national dealer.

If the problem is still not resolved after contacting the manufacturer, a letter to MACAP is in order. The organization can be reached at 20 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

MACAP handles complaints involving refrigerators, ovens and ranges, microwave ovens, freezers, dishwashers, clothes washers and dryers, dehumidifiers, food waste disposers, room air conditioners, trash compactors and water heaters.

Letters to MACAP should include the following information: the customer's name, address and daytime telephone number; the type of appliance, brand, model, and serial number; the purchase date and price; the name, address, and phone number of the local dealer or service agency; copies of all letters written or received about the complaint; copies of all service receipts; and a description of the problem and what can be done to resolve it.

Dorothy Hall found there's no place like home after Same Day Surgery...

Dorothy Hall faced eye surgery for a detached retina, a cause for real concern. And when it was suggested that Dorothy go to Lexington for surgery she and her husband stood firm, and stayed home. "There would be no point in going to Lexington when we know the Hospital and the staff here... and we've got a lot of confidence in the doctors, so why travel that many miles when we've got just as good or better here."

Same Day Surgery was an ideal alternative for Dorothy. Expenses were minimized because she recovered in the comfort of her own home. Many surgical procedures, like retina surgery, can be accomplished on an outpatient or Same Day Surgery basis. Highlands now has 15 full-time surgeons on staff, covering specialties from internal to cosmetic and reconstructive surgery. And our performance has earned accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals* based on strict national standards.

Experienced, skilled surgeons are only part of the story. Highly trained medical support teams in anesthesiology, nursing, diagnostic services and post-operative care, combined with state-of-the-art equipment and facilities, make Highlands one of the safest most professional surgical centers for inpatient and outpatient surgery around. Maybe that's why some people would rather stay home at Highlands for something as important as surgery. So if you're already here, why go anywhere else? For more information on inpatient and outpatient surgery, ask your family physician, or call Highlands at 886-8511.

Abandoned Mine Funds For Cleanup Doubled U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) announced recently that the Commonwealth of Kentucky will receive an additional $320 million in eligible abandoned land mine projects from the Office of Surface Mining to cleanup pre-1977 abandoned mine sites. "It came to my attention in November that Kentucky would only be eligible for $210 million in projects in Kentucky's updated AML inventory," McConnell said. "I felt that OSM was failing to recognize the magnitude of subsidence problems and agricultural damage caused by abandoned mines in Kentucky, and I told them so. Obviously, they agreed and more than doubled Kentucky's share of the federal reclamation funds—to approximately $530 million." The AML fund is financed by a per-ton assessment on coal production. Each state is entitled to 50 percent of the money producers pay into the fund and the remainder of the fund is disbursed on a discretionary basis by the Secretary of Interior. Allocations from the discretionary fund are based upon an updated version of each state's inventory of abandoned mine sites. The higher the dollar amount in a state's inventory, the more money that state is likely to receive.
