

Staffing Cuts Are Said Necessary As Deficit Looms for School Board

Another deficit is looming for the Floyd school district and immediate staffing cuts must be made in an effort to head it off, Superintendent Ray Brackett told members of the Floyd Board of Education last week.

State law protects the jobs and salaries of teachers and principals, Brackett said later, and no cuts are anticipated among bus drivers or cooks. Among custodians, clerks, maintenance, and transportation workers, however, some seem certain to be laid off, he said.

"It's something I hate to do, but we have to do it," said Brackett, who called a special meeting of the board Tuesday night to decide on the cuts.

Unless steps are taken to cut expenses, a deficit of $118,204 is projected at the end of this school year, the superintendent said. The board is already under state orders to balance the books this year, after ending last year with a $403,278 shortfall.

To make up last year's deficit, local and state school officials hammered out an austere budget last November, which has already proven impossible to live within, Brackett said.

Meeting Said Cancelled

A special meeting of the Board of Education scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday at Prestonsburg High School was "cancelled," a high school custodian reported. Neither Board Chairman Dr. James D. Adams nor Supt. Ray Brackett could be reached for an explanation. The meeting was called "to consider the steps necessary for dealing with a projected fund deficit for the 1986-87 school year" and Brackett indicated earlier that layoffs of some school workers would be announced.

Sharp reductions in the amounts budgeted for custodial and maintenance supplies have proven unrealistic, Brackett said. Already, spending for janitorial supplies is $10,000 over budget and is expected to be $20,000 over by year's end. In the maintenance department, spending is expected to overrun the budget allocation by $40,000.

High school textbooks are expected to cost $5,000 more than was budgeted for. A clerical error means that principals' salaries will cost the system $7,500 more than the budget indicated. And settlement of a suit brought by a former special education teacher will cost the board at least $18,000, for which the budget made no provision, Brackett said.

The largest single cause of the spending overrun, however, is said to be the state's enforcement of rules limiting class size—which has forced local districts to hire more teachers and aides. The additional positions will add $91,049 to instructional costs this year, Brackett said.

A total of $181,549 in unanticipated costs will be partly offset by some unanticipated savings—$63,345 will be saved by leasing rather than buying classroom trailers and by purchasing insurance at a more favorable premium than was projected—but that still leaves a negative balance of $118,204 and the district cannot know what unpleasant, and costly, surprises may yet be in store, Brackett cautioned.

FORMER GOVERNOR John Y. Brown, Jr., and Lt. Gov. Steven Beshear—one expected to be a candidate for governor, the other already announced—were in Floyd county Monday and, for a well-publicized moment, found themselves in the same place.

Brown had met with county judge-executives, educators, and leaders in the arts and was eating lunch at the Holiday Inn here when Beshear walked in and shook his hand. "I want to know who squealed and told you where Floyd county was," he joked.

"Check the electorate," Brown retorted. "It's my No. 1 county in the state." Brown ran strongly here when he was elected governor in 1979.

The former governor suggested to community leaders here that the region should plan for tourism. An Appalachian museum in Kentucky would be a major draw, he said.

He also suggested building a music hall to attract "stars from Nashville," establishing a coal museum, and developing crafts centers as ways of attracting visitors to the region. "It's a pity the snow doesn't stay longer here," he quipped.

Beshear was said to be in town for organizational meetings.

Ruling Denies Former Teacher Re-instatement

When the Kentucky Court of Appeals ruled in her favor last December, former special education teacher Pam Precht thought only the formalities remained before she would be reinstated as a teacher in Floyd schools and paid her salary for the past two-and-a-half years.

That hope was shattered recently in Floyd Circuit Court, however, when Judge Hollie Conley took the appeals court judgment to mean that Precht would be paid only a year's salary and not that she would be reinstated.

"I thought (the appeals court ruling) was so clear there could not have been a possible point of contention," said John Mann, Precht's attorney, last week. The court found that Precht, who would have entered her fifth year as a teacher here and been eligible for tenure, was wrongly dropped from the system at the start of the 1984-85 school year.

The clear implication—a consequence spelled out in the state law cited at length by the appeals court in its judgment—was that his client should have been teaching for the past two-and-a-half years, deserves compensation for wages lost during that time, and must now be reinstated, Mann argued.

Board of Education attorney W. W. Burchett countered, however, that the appeals court remanded the case to Floyd Circuit Court only for a determination of damages—not for reinstatement—and then only for the damages Precht suffered in 1984-85, a figure reckoned at around $19,000.

Judge Conley endorsed the narrower reading of the appeals court decision. He also denied Precht attorney's fees, meaning that the teacher rather than the Board of Education will be liable (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Curtain Close for Big Screen?

The last picture show may already have flickered across the big screen of the Prestonsburg Drive-In.

The property, along with a smaller tract just north of the drive-in, has been sold by the Porter family to the Branham and Baker Coal Company of Prestonsburg. The two pieces of land total slightly more than nine acres.

Company officials won't say what they plan to do with the property. Jack Absher, Sr., who has been leasing the drive-in for almost 20 years, says he doesn't know what will happen to it. His lease expired on Oct. 31.

The deed transferring ownership, which was signed last Oct. 30, stipulates that the smaller piece of land will not be used for commercial purposes during the lifetime of Lyda M. Porter.

The Prestonsburg Drive-In is the last in this area of a dying breed of theaters that enjoyed widespread popularity in the 1950's and 60's. The Skyview Theater in Paintsville and the Almar Theater, on old KY 80 between Allen and Martin, both have closed in recent years, brought down by the availability of cable television and videocassette recorders, and a growing preference for small, multi-screen theaters.

The local drive-in attracted some controversy in 1981 when manager Jack Absher, Jr., tried to boost attendance with a variety of special prizes and contests—particularly "wet-t-shirt" and "sexy nightie" competitions. The contests drew a good deal of attention, but not all of it was positive. The racier promotions were halted after some residents complained.

Floyd Garbage Collection System One of 11 Not Approved in State

Although a system that markedly improved the way garbage is collected and disposed of in this county has been in place here since 1981, Floyd remains one of only 11 Kentucky counties—one of only three in the eastern half of the state—whose garbage disposal plans still lack state approval.

The holdup, says the chief architect of Floyd's solid waste system, stems from his insistence that waste systems be organized on regional rather than county lines—a concept, he notes, that has been endorsed by the state and by the Big Sandy Area Development District.

Counties were required by state laws passed in 1982 and 1984 to submit by last June 30 waste disposal plans for approval by the state Division of Waste Management. It was the end of October before Robert McAninch, board chairman of Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc., submitted this county's plan—and, two months later, it was sent back for revisions.

Most of 16 deficiencies listed by the state represented gaps in technical or statistical data but one raised an issue of policy—and, possibly, of politics.

In his plan, McAninch said the Floyd landfill at Garth should become a regional landfill serving Magoffin, Martin, and Johnson counties as well as Floyd. To bolster his suggestion, he noted that regionalization has the official backing both of the state and Big Sandy ADD solid waste management plans. And, as a first step, he recommended the closing of Johnson county's new landfill.

The Division of Waste Management ordered that recommendation deleted from the Floyd plan, arguing that closing a landfill in another county is beyond the jurisdiction of Floyd Fiscal Court.

That is beside the point, McAninch argued last week. Although Floyd Fiscal Court lacks authority to close the Johnson landfill, he said, the Division of Waste Management does not. "They could do it themselves," he said.

The solid waste director has partially backed off, however. A revised plan, which he submitted for state approval at the end of last month, retains the goal of regionalization and argues that everyone would save money if Garth Hollow became a regional landfill serving "many of the surrounding counties." But the plan no longer calls explicitly for closing the Johnson landfill.

McAninch insists he is no less committed to regionalization—although he now thinks that Knott rather than Magoffin should join Floyd, Johnson, and Martin counties in the regional partnership. Although engineering projections put the life of the Garth landfill at 44 years, McAninch believes it could be used for 100 years, even with three other counties dumping there.

The solid waste chief's commitment to regionalization is selective, however. The regionalization once envisaged by state authorities—and agreed to as a condition of receiving federal funds—involved not only shared landfills but regionalization of the trash collection system itself.

McAninch does not go that far—and he confesses to delaying submission of Floyd's solid waste plan until he was assured that the plans receiving state approval provided for trash collection on a county rather than a regional basis.

The reason for the inconsistency, explains McAninch, is simple realism. "A regional collection system just wouldn't work politically. There are too many jobs involved. County officials are not going to give up that kind of power."

By the same token, he insists, a regional landfill could have been approved if the Division of Waste Management wanted to approve it. "There just aren't the same number of jobs involved," he said. "How many does it take to operate a landfill? One or two at most."

The Floyd landfill will be solvent with or without trash from other counties, McAninch contends. The extra business would be just "icing on the cake," he said.

But it would be "cost-effective for everyone for them to bring it over here," he maintains.

Stumbo Calls for Answers To Road Collapse Queries

A state official ducked the main issues when he spoke before a legislative committee on the collapse last October of a steel culvert under KY 80 at Martin, House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo charged last week.

In an appearance before the joint transportation committee, Transportation Secretary C. Leslie Dawson said the state was not at fault when the culvert collapsed early one Sunday morning, opening a crater that swallowed two automobiles. Nor will the state bear the estimated $2 million cost of repairing the highway, he said.

But Stumbo, who is one of several legislators who earlier suggested the state may have failed to heed warnings that the road was at risk as early as last February, said last week that the legislators' questions remain unanswered.

"The issue is not who pays for the repairs. The issue is, when did the (Highways) Department learn of the problem and why did they not act more rapidly to correct it?" Stumbo said. Dawson "did not address these questions at all. The legislative panel made it clear we wanted answers to these questions—and we still want answers," he said.

Stumbo said he would ask to see the file on the case in the Department of Highways' Pikeville office in order to learn the exact chronology of events. "For legislators it is a public safety question. What is to keep something like this from happening again?" he said.

"If something in the system keeps dangerous situations from being dealt with rapidly, we have a problem—or the Department has a problem," he added.

The Transportation Cabinet recently awarded a $1,287,113 repair contract to the London Bridge Co., of London, KY. Reconstruction of the damaged highway is expected to be completed later this year, Dawson said.

The state will negotiate with various parties to pay the bill and, if necessary will sue them to recover the repair costs, the transportation secretary said.

Dawson declined to name the parties the state is holding responsible for the collapse. Named as defendants in a damages suit filed by Terry M. Boyd, of Maytown, one of the drivers who plunged into the hole created by the collapse, were Brighton Engineering and Haworth and Associates, Frankfort firms involved in designing the highway; Armo Steel Co., of Middletown, Ohio, designer of the steel culvert; C&O Railroad, said by the plaintiff to have "supervised the construction and installation" of the tunnel; and Elmo Greer and Sons, of London, the contractor who installed it.

B.F. Reed's Life Tied To Coal and Progress

By KEVIN OSBOURN

(Reprinted with permission from the Kentucky Coal Journal)

When it comes to well-known Kentuckians, the name B.F. Reed and coal are synonymous. It could just as easily be said that B.F. and the term "social conscience" are synonymous.

From the time he and his older brother came to Kentucky in 1927 to open a mine at Jacks Creek in Floyd County, B.F. has devoted much of his time and energy to the improvement of life in Eastern Kentucky. His life is a narrative on the growth of the coal industry and conditions in Appalachia. He is now 89 years old and lives in Lexington.

Born in Shamokin, Pa. in 1897, B.F. and his oldest brother came to Kentucky because of the high quality of coal in Eastern Kentucky, particularly in the Big Sandy Valley. At that time, there were no roads up the Big Sandy from Ashland, and the only means of traveling was by train. There were other problems.

"Telephones didn't work half the time," he said. "I learned to climb the telephone pole and learned to fix them myself."

Those conditions prompted him to begin efforts to improve transportation routes to the central part of the state.

"At that time Lexington was a very small place," he said. "It had plenty of horse farms just like it does now, but not much else except the university. When Happy Chandler became the governor for his second time, he felt it was necessary to improve the road connection between Lexington and the East Kentucky mountains."

Chandler got a group of men together to form the Eastern Kentucky Regional Planning Commission, which decided to concentrate on obtaining a better system of roads from the bluegrass district to Eastern Kentucky. No one wanted the chairmanship, so B.F. accepted it on a temporary basis, but he soon became a permanent fixture.

"Chandler told us to study the situation and recommend the location for a road to Eastern Kentucky," he said. "We did that immediately and reported to the highway commissioner and he agreed to plan the road. Later we were informed Kentucky could not do it without federal help."

After Chandler's term, Gov. Bert Combs took office. The work of the commission finally paid off when the Bert T. Combs Mountain Parkway started east of Winchester early in 1961. As Gov. Combs noted, the road could "have very appropriately been called the B.F. Reed-Harry LaViers Parkway." LaViers also (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

One of Floyd county's—indeed, one of Kentucky's—most respected coal operators, B.F. Reed has also played a major role in public affairs, helping to build the Mountain Parkway and laying the foundation for the Appalachian Regional Commission. Founder of the Turner Elkhorn Mining Co. 60 years ago, he sold the business in 1974 and now lives in retirement in Lexington.

New Process May Reduce Preparation Plant Waste

Scientists and engineers from the Kentucky Energy Cabinet Laboratory are working with Bell County Coal to refine a process for recovering large amounts of coal that preparation plants now dispose of as waste.

The process could increase income for coal firms by millions, and might turn some marginal operations into good profit makers, according to George E. Evans, Jr., Kentucky energy secretary. "This has always been a regrettable loss of coal and valuable energy," said Evans. "But until now there simply has not been an effective and economical technology for avoiding it."

Column flotation could be the answer, Evans said.

The process, based on research and tests done at the cabinet's laboratory in Lexington, is designed to recover the so-called "coal fines." These are the tiny coal particles that are produced in large volumes during the mining and preparation processes.

"Our research on column flotation can produce a bonus for Kentucky coal," he said. "If the technology works as well as is proving to be the case in Bell County, preparation plants will be able to sell coal they've normally disposed of in slurry ponds."

In column flotation, air is injected into a column of water mixed with the coal fines. The fines, the majority of which are smaller than particles of talcum powder, attach to air bubbles near the bottom of the device and are recovered from the froth near the top.

At Bell County Coal, the technology has already demonstrated the potential to recover some 90 percent of the coal that is too fine and has too high an ash content to be saved with conventional flotation.

For many of the state's preparation plants, this could amount to the recovery of an additional $1 million worth of coal or more annually. "In today's market some operations would find that to be the difference between just breaking even or making a profit," Evans said.

The Bell County unit, some 20-feet tall and six inches in diameter, is a direct descendant of a smaller column flotation device built and tested at the Kentucky Energy Cabinet Laboratory in Lexington during the past year.

Al Bland, the laboratory's director of coal preparation, said a full-scale commercial column would be 20 feet tall and about six feet in diameter.

He said engineers working with the Bell County column are experimenting with different feed rates for coal and water and with other variables to determine the most efficient operating combination for a commercial unit.

Evans said the cabinet is interested in beginning a research for suitable plants in both eastern and western Kentucky coal fields where, with the financial and technical cooperation of the company, a demonstration or commercial scale unit would be built.

In other business, the board adopted a plan to boost school attendance, an area in which the district has been officially declared deficient by state education authorities. Strategies include distributing posters encouraging students to stay in school, furnishing board members with monthly status reports on attendance, scheduling a meeting with state and county officials to increase public awareness of the problem, developing incentives for students, and calling parents of school absentees.

According to a state norm, daily attendance is supposed to average 94 percent in each district. Floyd, where attendance last year averaged 91.69 percent, has set a goal of raising that figure by one percentage point per year.

The Rev. Tim Jessen asked on behalf of the Floyd County Education Forum that the board declare what provision it intended to make in the school calendar for parent-teacher conferences.

On his own behalf, the Prestonsburg pastor suggested that plans for the new middle school to be built here include an auditorium for both school and community use, adding that citizens could be expected to help plan and fund its construction. "I think our community would rally around something like this," he said.

Brackett asked for and was given authority to establish a line of credit at the Bank Josephine, to be guaranteed by the anticipated sale of school construction bonds. The credit would allow him to borrow money needed to purchase and prepare sites and pay architects' fees in connection with the current school building program, the superintendent explained.

Job descriptions were approved for teacher aides and for the coordinator of a state-funded writing project. Carol Stumbo, an English teacher at Wheelwright High School, was hired to coordinate the writing project, for which she will be paid $4,500 over 18 months.

Others hired or transferred:
Betty Minix, remediation teacher at Prestonsburg Elementary; Gwendolyn Hamilton, teacher at McDowell; Doug Derossett, transferred from McDowell to Martin; Ruth A. "That road has made the difference in the connection between the eastern mountains and central Kentucky," B.F. said. "Today, I can drive from Lexington to Floyd County in two hours. Before the road was built, it took five hours of hard driving."

The Eastern Kentucky Planning Commission is also credited with laying the foundation for the Appalachian Regional Commission, an organization that has been responsible for progress in all the states touched by the Appalachian Mountains.

B.F. also saw the rise of the UMW in Eastern Kentucky. Because he and his brother grew up in the coal regions of Pennsylvania, where unions controlled all of the mining, they were familiar with UMW methods and "had no trouble accepting the UMW in 1933."

The Turner Elkhorn Mining Co., which B.F. helped organize at Drift, had no trouble with the UMW until 1962. This was at the time when underground mines were going to mechanization and hand-loaded coal became too costly to compete.

Turner Elkhorn developed a plan of mining in small operations, owned by the men who worked there. But, difficulties occurred and a work stoppage began the day after Labor Day. Few of the men in Turner Elkhorn were involved, but pickets prevented the workers from going to the mines. Events turned ugly when violence erupted, and the area became a war zone.

"I tried to get my wife to leave, but she refused to," he said. "I tried to get her to take our children with her. They shot at my house. To this day, the bullet holes are still in the house."

B.F.'s son David had a crew that worked with a coal auger, and people were shooting at his men. David's men returned the fire and kept working despite the trouble, Reed said.

"The coal needed to be trucked to the tippie to be loaded in railroad cars," he said. "Every coal truck had two men. One was the driver and the other had ammunition to return any fire. People who were employed at the tippie got through the picket line and work went on."

Another operator who was involved in this chaos was George Evans, who today in Kentucky's Secretary of Energy. Evans and Reed conferred almost daily on how to stop the violence. After three months of trouble, an agreement was finally reached. Yet, the violence was not over.

The day after the settlement, B.F. happened to be looking in the direction of the company office, which was only a stone's throw away from his home, and he "saw a huge fireball...There was a second less forceful explosion...All the windows on the side of the office building exposed to the explosion were shattered."

Carrying weapons was a way of life in the mountains, according to B.F. In fact, the men carried guns at all times, even when working in the mines. One evening B.F. went to the boiler house and saw a man sitting in a chair against the wall, obviously asleep. When B.F. said his name the man dashed to grab his gun.

B.F.'s son David was also instrumental in development of a tremendous innovation in mining machinery for the mountains: the coal scoop. The days of hand-loading coal were gone, so it became necessary to mechanically do the work.

"David started experimenting with the coal scoop," Reed said. "The scoop picked up the coal at the face after it was loosened by the use of explosives. David kept improving it until it was an excellent piece of machinery."

As B.F.'s father told him long ago, the coal industry has always been either a feast or a famine. During the oil embargo in 1973, coal had a feast, but Reed felt problems were developing and decided it was time to sell the business.

"We sold the business and got a decent price," he said. "If we had waited a year, we could have gotten twice as much money, but I never regretted it one minute. We made the sale in 1974."

Sure enough, market conditions got bad, and then bad conditions became horrible. Where is the industry headed now?

"I wish I knew," he said. "Heretofore, every time we had a boom, we had a slump. But, when you had a slump you could see ahead to where it would disappear. Today, I don't see anything except maybe the development of locomotives using coal."

B.F. has been a key player in many important organizations. He was a trustee of Pikeville College, and in 1974 was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities. He was also a member of the board of Regents of Morehead State University, which has a building dedicated in his honor. He has been active in the Boy Scouts of America and has served as president of the Big Sandy Operators Association.

Bits and Pieces

Considering the quality of my life for the past two weeks, I may never again buy anything made in Taiwan.

OVER THE HILL, AND WHO CARES?

It comes as no shock to my nervous system that this bit of trivia has little appeal to those under 30. Now, I like or dislike the under-30 crowd on about the same par as those on the other side of the line. There's no discrimination there as far as I'm concerned, but the sad fact is, I'm not 'with it.'

When I rent a movie, I'm lost as a golf ball as far as knowing who's who and what's what in the flickers, nowadays. I do know Al Pacino, Robert Redford, Charles Bronson, Paul Newman, Burt Reynolds, Ha! Even Richard Pryor and Dabney Coleman. Then, on the distaff side, Goldie Hawn, Barbra Streisand, and Meryl Streep are about as far as I go. I find myself looking for some former (old) star of the 50's or 60's who is now a supporting actor. As a last resort, I consult my children for pointers.

A friend and I were mutually facing the fact a few days ago that we are part of the "over the hill gang," and you know, we decided we didn't care.

We had it good.

He grew up in Louisville; I, right here and on Salt Lick. We both went to the movies once a week—Saturday—when it was always a Western playing and two serials. Now isn't that a blast?

Well, it was.

There was Tailspin Tommy; Johnny Weismuller, who was the only Tarzan I could ever accept as 'real'; Buster Crabbe, who faced horrible and certain death at the end of every episode, much like Indiana Jones, today, except you had to wait a whole week for the denouement.

And a lot of hot arguments as to how he would get out of it were bandied about before the next Saturday rolled around. Then, on to the main feature, a Western with Buck Jones, Tom Mix, William Boyd (Hopalong Cassidy), Gene Autry, and not one of them ever kissed the gal. They just rode off into the sunset.

We got all this and popcorn for 25¢ at the outside.

During the week, we played Round Town, softball—when the boys were short of players—hide and seek, hopscotch, jumping rope, statues, banner—now, why was it called that? This could cover anything from seeing who could jump the farthest—over a stream, for instance—to walking the rafters of any building going up. I, personally, chickened out at the third floor of what was then to be the new grade school. My own gauge of whether to try it was whether or not I would be killed in the process. Maimed was all right. In any case, it worked, and I walked a lot of rafters.

Then, there was hill-climbing, including every rock you came across from the three-storied cave on down, and I've been stranded atop every one of them. Climbing up was always a piece of cake; getting down was another story.

We made up our own diversions, partly through necessity. These were depression years, and not many people had money to waste. There was, of course, no TV, and no pressure to be grown up when we weren't. Most of us were taught to value ideals, not things.

We were children, and we knew it; our parents knew it; the whole world knew it—thank God.

I would not trade my childhood for that of anyone else—not even to be young again.

Yes, over the hill, and who cares?

Woman's Club Meets At Library, Here

The Prestonsburg Woman's Club met Thursday evening, February 5, at the Emma Wells May Cultural Center with Mrs. Susie Poe, president, in charge.

Mrs. Boots Adams presented Dr. Randall Wells, member of the faculty at Morehead State University. Dr. Wells was accompanied on the piano by Mike Conley, of Paintsville, as he sang several solos, including, "I Can't Help Falling in Love," "Always on My Mind," and "Somewhere in Time."

It was decided that the club's Arts and Crafts building, at Archer Park, could be used by the Loaves and Fishes Food Pantry.

Miss April Adams, a member of the Prestonsburg Jr. Woman's Club, discussed the forthcoming Scholarship Pageant being sponsored by their group with assistance from the host club. She said the pageant will be held April 18, at PCC.

The next meeting, will be held at the library, Thursday evening, March 5, at 7:30.

Hostesses were Mesdames Maman Leslie, Fannie Runnels, Pauline Sparks, and Lucille Nunnery, assisted by Miss Alice Harris in serving cherry pie and other refreshments to Dr. Randall Wells, Mike Conley, and April Adams, guests, and Susie Poe, Rebecca Rasnick, Joyce Allen, Jane Wallace, Zella Archer, Mable H. Brown, Roberta Davidson, Myrtle Allen, Honey May, Burieta Gearhart, Eileen Burchett, Kathryn Poe, Lucy Regan, Mabel Donahoe, Garnett Fairchild, Dorothy Osborne, Eva Collins, Dolly Pettrey and Dorothy Stover, members.

Academy Graduate Posted At Pikeville

Trooper Michael J. Thorpe, 27, of Wayland, graduated Feb. 7 from the Kentucky State Police Academy and is stationed at the Pikeville post.

A former coalminer, Thorpe is married to Cindy Castle Thorpe and the couple have a three-year-old son, Aaron Michael. The new trooper is the son of Geraldine Thorpe, of Wayland.

CAP Offers Community Service Scholarship

If you are a high school senior and plan to continue your education after graduation, then you may be interested in the Christian Appalachian Project's annual Community Service Scholarship.

Community Service Scholarships are unique because the primary factor for selection is community service and involvement rather than academic achievement or financial need. Students who have, for example, worked as volunteers in hospitals, civic projects, churches, or community projects involving conservation or ecological improvements are encouraged to apply.

Scholarships will be awarded to seniors in 25 Southeast Kentucky counties. A total of $24,000 in scholarship money will be divided among Casey, Floyd, Garrard, Jackson, Jessamine, Lincoln, Madison, Magoffin, Pulaski, Rockcastle, Clay, Estill, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Laurel, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Martin, McCreary, Owsley, Powell, Whitley, and Wolfe counties.

Committees composed of local citizens will award scholarships to graduating seniors who have applied.

Graduating seniors are encouraged to contact their school counselors for applications and more information by mid-March of this year, or you can contact Glen Taul, Scholarships Coordinator, Christian Appalachian Project, 322 Crab Orchard Road, Lancaster, Ky. 40446 or (606) 792-4000.

Supervision Lack Charged in Suit Against Board

Children were left "completely unsupervised, unattended, and unprotected" while they waited for afternoon school buses at McDowell Elementary School last spring and, as a result, several children were "accosted, harassed, and assaulted" by two men, a Minnie woman claims in a suit filed last week in Floyd Circuit Court.

Peggy Tackett said her eight-year-old daughter was among those bothered by a man identified as Jeff Blackburn and by an "unknown accomplice." The child has suffered severe emotional distress and has lost weight as a result, the mother said.

She learned in March of the incidents, which had allegedly occurred since the previous December, and told McDowell Elementary School Principal Franklin Pack of the "desperate need for supervision and protection of children" waiting for the bus, but the principal ignored her pleas, Tackett said.

Her lawsuit, which was filed by attorney Ned Pillersdorf, seeks compensation for her daughter's medical bills and damages for the child's "pain and suffering." Named as defendants are Pack, School Superintendent Ray Brackett, and the five school board members.

No criminal charges have been brought against Blackburn, but Pillersdorf said the case had been presented to the grand jury currently in session for possible indictment.

Tackett appeared before the school board last April to complain of the alleged assaults and of the principal's alleged failure to respond and to ask the board to hire a security guard at the school. The principal told her "such a thing could not happen" at the school, she reported.

(Lawsuits filed in court present only the plaintiff's version of the issues in dispute.)

Correction Noted

In the obituary of Mickey Lee Jarvis, who died January 28, the following names were omitted: his stepfather, Lewis Dale; three stepbrothers, Merlin, Estill and Donald Ray Dale, and one stepsister, Patricia Hamilton, all of Ivel.

Hospital Displays "Heartfelt Memories"

Some of the photos need "studying" but, between the two of them, Waneta Newsome, left, and Helen Bradley have yet to find one they couldn't identify for Our Lady of the Way Hospital's fortieth anniversary display, "Heartfelt Memories."

Because the 1957 flood destroyed most of the Martin hospital's earliest records, the recollections, photos and keepsakes of both women will play an important part in the exhibit.

Newsome, who is a registered nurse and serves as the hospital's health care coordinator, has worked for the hospital since its founding in 1947.

Bradley came to the hospital in 1951 to visit her sister, sister Angelo Dusini, one of the hospital's co-founders. She "stayed to help" in the kitchen, eventually became its supervisor, and now manages the gift shop.

Thanks to these women, hospital associates, former patients, and hospital employees of the past and present, "Heartfelt Memories" features photos, stories, poetry, song and keepsakes. The exhibit will open on St. Valentine's Day, February 14, in the hospital's main lobby. It is open to the public.

Health Clinic Set

A nurse from the Floyd Health Department will be in Wayland on Friday February 13 at the Methodist church. She will offer T.B., skin tests, urinalyses, blood pressures, anemia screening, and immunizations. These services will be offered on Friday, February 20 at the Vogel Day Methodist Church at Harold. Times for these clinics will be 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The health department will be closed Monday, February 16 in observance of the President's Day Holiday.

Health Clinic Set

The Kentucky Easter Seal Society owns and operates seven centers providing services for physically handicapped children and adults. In fiscal year 85-86 more than 22,000 Kentuckians received help from Easter Seals.

Sister Files Suit In Spriggs Death

Before her brother died of an apparent heart attack in Floyd county jail in December, Jailer Lawrence Hale had "deliberately ignored" his requests for medical attention, a Martin woman claims in a suit filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Pikeville.

Thomas Lee Spriggs, who was 39, had been held three days on a drunk driving charge when he fell dead into a fellow-inmate's lap during an early-morning card game.

In a suit filed on her behalf by Prestonsburg attorney Ned Pillersdorf, Brenda Clay claims that Hale showed "total and deliberate indifference" to Spriggs' medical needs and so subjected him to "cruel and unusual punishment."

On his admission to jail on Dec. 15, Spriggs told jailers he had had previous heart attacks; indeed, he had been treated for a heart condition during an earlier incarceration in the Floyd jail, the suit says.

For two days before the fatal seizure, Spriggs complained of severe chest pains, requested immediate medical treatment, and asked to be taken to his doctor, but was ignored by the jailer and his deputies, the suit alleges.

Plaintiff seeks unspecified compensation for pain, suffering, and loss of earning power and $200,000 in punitive damages.

A deputy jailer reported that he had made a routine cell check around 3:35 a.m. on Dec. 19—about 10 minutes before Spriggs died—and that Spriggs did not complain of pain at that time.

(Lawsuits outline only the plaintiff's version of the issues in dispute.)

Railroad Commission Lists Floyd Projects

The Kentucky Railroad Commission has four projects targeted for immediate action in Floyd county—a cleanup of garbage dumping on Oklahoma Creek on property owned by C. & O. Railroad, repair of the grade crossing at Cliff, additional work for the grade crossing at Dwale, and the installation of a new grade crossing at Price—according to Raymond Douglas Kirk, attorney and spokesman for the commission.

According to Kirk, "notices have been sent to county officials requesting their joint cooperation and directives have been forwarded to C & O Railroad specifying the work to be performed."

The cleanup on Oklahoma Creek will be a major project and will require the cooperation of the county attorney commonwealth attorney, fiscal court, and the railroad commission, Kirk said.

Kirk added that a hearing will be conducted on February 12, in Frankfort, at 10:30 a.m. regarding the installation of a new grade crossing at Price. The public is invited to attend.

Floyd Accident Puts Bite on Inez Worker

From Lexington Herald-Leader columnist Dick Burdette came the following item this week:

James Hinkle, of Inez, is breathing a whole lot easier these days.

Last August, when Hinkle was working in a railroad yard in Floyd county, a rail switch struck him in the face, fracturing his left eye socket, nose and jaw—12 fractures in all.

Two months later, after numerous operations, he returned to work but still couldn't breathe properly. That led to more treatment and X-rays. Nothing seemed to help.

Recently, however, a doctor at Our Lady of Bellefonte Hospital in Russell inserted a flexible tube down Hinkle's windpipe and discovered it was almost blocked—by an inch-long piece of denture plate with two teeth intact. Hinkle had been wearing a full upper plate and a partial lower plate at the time of the accident.

The obstruction was removed without surgery.

FCRTA Board Meets At First Methodist, Here

Mrs. Danise Amburgey, president of the Floyd County Retired Teachers' Association, held a meeting of the executive board, Tuesday, February 3, at Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church, here. The main purposes of this event was to discuss the F.C.R.T.s' part in honoring retiring K.R.T.A. director, Dr. J.M. Dodson, and the selection of delegates and alternates for the state convention, to be held in Louisville, in April.

The president, Mrs. Amburgey, gave a report on the Johnson County Retired Teachers' meeting, which she and Mrs. Norma S. Stepp, president-elect of the Big Sandy Retired Teachers' Association, had attended in Paintsville.

The recent deaths of two retired teachers, Mrs. Josephine Stanley Hill and Mrs. Ruby Conley Osborn, were noted.

Mrs. Norma S. Stepp was added to the Public Affairs Committee, and will serve with Mrs. Delphia Hicks as co-chairman of this committee.

Members selected to serve as delegates for the forthcoming state convention were Danise Amburgey, Ruby Akers and Imogene Caldwell, with Alice Martin, Delphia Hicks, and Docia B. Woods, to serve as alternates.

The cookbooks, "Favorite Recipes from Floyd County Retired Teachers," presented to members during the December meeting, will go into a second printing due to popular request, according to Miss Ruby Akers.

Board members present included Danise Amburgey, Ruby Akers, Ethel Ratliff, Goldia Williams, Norma S. Stepp, May K. Roberts, Grace Conley, Imogene Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Martin, Delphia Hicks, Woodrow Allen, Alice Martin, and Docia B. Woods.

The next regular meeting of the F.C.R.T. will be at May Lodge, March 19, and the next meeting of the B.S.R.T. will be at the lodge.

John Graham Chapter, DAR Holds Special Business Meet

A special called business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Carl R. Horn, regent, John Graham Chapter, NSDAR, Wednesday, January 21, at the Floyd County Library.

The meeting dealt with reports to be mailed to KSDAR and NSDAR. Chairmen were announced and their reports were completed.

Executive board members present were the regent, Mrs. Carl R. Horn; second vice-regent, Mrs. Mae S. Kendrick; chaplain, Mrs. J.G. Stepp; recording secretary, Mrs. Ray Brackett; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Joe A. Spradlin; treasurer, Mrs. Olga A. Preston; registrar, Mrs. James B. Goble and historian, Mrs. Opal S. May.

Mrs. Horn, presented delegate cards to Mesdames J.G. Stepp, Opal S. May, and Ray Brackett for the 91st annual Kentucky Conference to be held March 17-19, at the Marriott in Lexington. She presented an alternate card to Mrs. James B. Goble, for the 96th Continental Congress to be held, April 20-24 at the Capitol Hilton Hotel, and NSDAR Headquarters, in Washington, D.C.

Valentine's Day Observances Will Range From Parties To Romantic Weekends

Hearts, flowers, and romantic dances will herald Valentine's Day in Floyd county, with some kind of entertainment planned for lovers of almost every age and any size bank account.

For those who are willing to go all-out to impress a sweetheart, Jenny Wiley State Park will host an entire weekend of romantic events, beginning Friday night with a hometown version of the Newlywed Game and concluding on Saturday with a "King and Queen of Hearts Dance." Intimate, candlelight dining also will be offered Saturday evening, featuring items not usually listed on the restaurant's menu such as tournedos of beef and cherry crepes.

The Newlywed Game on Friday will be patterned after the television show of the same name, according to recreation director Gail Brahier, who will act as master of ceremonies, but it will be a little toned-down.

"I'm not going to get too risqué," she laughed. "We don't want to know that much about them."

Two people will be chosen to reign as king and queen of the dance on Saturday, based on nominations by their sweethearts. Music will be swing and jazz, played by the Young Urban Professionals of Lexington. Refreshments will be served, Brahier said, and mixers will be available.

Brahier said she expects at least 40 couples to turn out. This is the first "all-out effort" for Valentine's Day held at the park, she added.

Another option for eager toe-tappers is the Sweetheart Charity Dance to be held Saturday from 8 to 12 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, sponsored by the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club. This event also is a first for the area, according to organizer Sherry Goble, who said her group planned the dance as a way to liven up an otherwise dull month.

Music will be contemporary, played by The Full House Band. Proceeds will be donated to the Breast Center at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Goble said the group has 200 invitations to sell and hopes to raise at least $1,000. Anyone who would like to get an invitation can contact her at Sherry's Shoes, or April Adams at April's On the Avenue.

A third area dance will be held Saturday night at Prestonsburg Community College, sponsored by student government and open to the public. Music will be popular and top-forties tunes played by Bad X Cuse from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Proceeds will go to the college's student activities fund, according to John Herald, public information officer.

Dances also will be held at several county schools, for students only. These include Maytown Elementary and Wayland Elementary on Friday evening, and McDowell Junior and Senior High Schools on Saturday.

Most elementary schools in the county plan to entertain their younger students with small classroom parties and an exchange of Valentine cards. Third-graders at Prestonsburg Grade

B.J. OUSLEY, OWNER of Jenny Wiley Florist, prepares for Valentine's Day by dosing her carnations with plenty of water and sunlight, to encourage them to open up.

School have put together a bulletin board displaying their artwork on handmade hearts, and students at Garrett have their Valentines on display at the local Bank Josephine.

Connecting up with the holiday's theme of love, the Garrett school also will hold its first "I Love To Read Day" today (Wednesday). For one whole hour during the day, everyone at the school will do nothing but read, explained principal Ralph O'Quinn.

"That means students, teachers, cooks, bus drivers, janitors—everybody," he said.

For those who would like to give a Valentine gift straight from the heart, the Central Kentucky Blood Center in Prestonsburg is offering a special incentive for donors on Friday, Feb. 13 (the blood center is not open on Saturday). All blood donors this month will receive a free T-shirt, but those who show up on Friday will be eligible for a drawing to be held Friday evening. The winner will receive a silk Valentine floral arrangement, according to Larilynn Leffler.

In addition, the first ten donors on Friday will receive potted Christmas cacti from the greenhouse of Mountain Comprehensive Care.

Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin will be 40 years old in 1987, and to kick off the year-round celebration the hospital is putting together a Valentine's Day display called "Heartfelt Memories." Anyone who has ever been a patient or employee at the hospital is invited to contribute photographs, poetry, or written anecdotes about staff members or experiences at the hospital.

The display is intended to show "forms of love that aren't strictly romantic," explained Gwen Hall, public relations consultant. "It's like a giant Valentine to the hospital. It's saying, here is a place that we've experienced love."

About 60 entries have been received already, Hall said. They will be mounted on blue and white hearts—the hospital's colors—and put up on the lobby wall. Contributors should submit copies of photographs, rather than original keepsakes, she added.

Highlands Regional Medical Center has not planned any special Valentine events, according to marketing representative Pat Willis. However, since February is Heart Month, the hospital will offer classes on cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) later this month.

Roses and carnations will be delivered to lucky loved ones at Prestonsburg Community College on Thursday and Friday by members of Phi Beta Lambda, a leadership organization for students interested in business. The flower sale will raise money for the group to use in community service projects, according to faculty sponsor Mazola Salmons.

Flowers are a traditional Valentine's Day gift, and most local florists will have extra supplies on hand for this week's holiday. Red roses are the top choice, according to Lee Collins of Christina's Flower Shop in Prestonsburg.

The origin of the holiday is not known with certainty, and many different stories purport to explain it. One version claims that St. Valentine was an imprisoned Christian who wanted to get word to his family that he was still alive. According to the legend, he reached through his cell window, picked the leaves of violets growing there, and pierced them with the words, "Remember your Valentine." The leaves were then delivered by a dove.

Arson Convictions Hard To Get But Adams Has Good Track Record

Arson convictions are among the toughest to obtain, but don't tell Larry Adams that. The Prestonsburg fire investigator's work has led to convictions in seven out of the nine cases reported in 1986.

"He's very conscientious; he takes his work seriously. Larry's done an excellent job," said Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen about the investigator. Allen said that arson is one of the most difficult cases to investigate. "It's not hard to prove that arson has been committed but linking a person to it is."

Adams said that his job is made easier by the quick response time of the Prestonsburg Fire Department. "Here in town we're there in three minutes," he said. Besides saving the structure, a quick reaction will also help provide evidence if arson is suspected.

At every fire the investigator goes to he's conscious of the signs of arson. "I see the color of flames and smoke. I feel the intensity of the heat. That might tell me whether the fire's been assisted with an accelerant." And after the fire has been put out, Adams studies the burn patterns on the walls and floor. "If it's an electrical socket, the fire will burn slowly up the wall in a V pattern."

His first priority is to determine the cause and origin of the fire. If arson is suspected he will take photographs of the structure, inside and out, make a log of the photographs, store evidence in a sealed container, sketch the scene of the fire, and then interview neighbors or anyone who might have seen anyone near or coming out of the building. However, Adams said, "very seldom do you have an eyewitness."

A graduate of Prestonsburg High School, Adams, 39, spent 10 years working as a fireman in Chelsea, Michigan before returning to Prestonsburg and joining the fire department in 1979. Adams, who is also the city's fire inspector, comes to his job well qualified. He has accumulated 500 training hours from classes and seminars he took in Michigan, at the University of Kentucky, and at Eastern Kentucky University. The investigator also teaches an arson course every June at the Kentucky State Fire School in Lexington. "It's a three-day school attended by firefighters from all over Kentucky and as far away as Tennessee and Ohio," Adams said. Until four years ago Prestonsburg didn't have a fire investigator. The work was done by the Kentucky State Police but, according to Adams, investigations were handicapped by the state police's heavy case load and the lapse in time before the investigation was initiated.

Larry Adams, arson investigator for the Prestonsburg Fire Department, is also a licensed instructor for emergency medical technicians.

According to Fire Chief Thomas A. Blackburn, well over 50 percent of the fires they are called out on are arson or suspicious in nature. Blackburn attributes some of the fires to people trying to make money on their insurance policies. "They would rather burn it than make payments," he said. "They're not professional arsonists in most cases, but they may be laid off or well in debt, so arson becomes the only way out for them."

Blackburn thinks that juries have been too lenient, and he would like to see stiffer sentences handed down to convicted arsonists as a deterrent. "Too often sentences are probated, and they never pull any time. When jurors get to the point where they turn an arsonist loose—that's going to make all our premiums climb."

"We've been labeled the arson capital of the United States by the insurance companies," Adams said. "Insurance companies have been pulling out of the area. And it's not unusual for insurance premiums to triple."

Blackburn is also critical of the insurance companies which he says are taking advantage of the situation. "They're very quick to pay off and settle, but they will insure other homes for suspected arsonists or for people who have had more than one fire." Blackburn would like to see more cooperation between insurance companies and arson investigators, so that arsonists can be tracked down and denied insurance. "When an arsonist gets away with collecting on his insurance policy, everyone's bill in eastern Kentucky goes up."

Both Adams and Blackburn would like to see the state legislature take action on the insurance issue and make reforms, so that premiums are made affordable and responsible homeowners are not penalized. In the meantime, Floyd residents have a stake in the work of Adams. For as Blackburn said, "Getting a conviction is the most important thing. Once a person is convicted he cannot collect on the insurance."

$55,000 Bond Set As Stevens Faces Charge of Murder

Bond has been set at $55,000 for Frank Stevens, 35, of West Prestonsburg, who has been charged with murder, drunk driving, and leaving the scene of an accident, following the traffic death of Winston Fairchild, a Paintsville resident, last Wednesday.

Stevens, who appeared Friday before District Court Judge Harold Stumbo, pleaded not guilty and waived his right to a preliminary hearing. The case is expected to go before the grand jury today (Wednesday).

The accident occurred at about 2 a.m. According to Detective J.A. Riederick of the Kentucky State Police, Stevens was operating a 1974 Chrysler on U.S. 23 at Auxier when he lost control of the car. The car left the road, toppled over an embankment, and flipped.

Following the crash, Stevens and his wife, Lavonda, and their two children walked away from the scene, abandoning Fairchild, his girlfriend, Virginia Fairchild, and her son Jimmy. Stevens is reported to have called his brother, told him he had run out of gas, and gotten a ride home. The victims were left at the accident scene until the wreck was discovered at 7:45 a.m. by a passing motorist.

Fairchild, who was thrown from the car, died nine hours later. Virginia Fairchild and her son were admitted to Highlands Regional Medical Center that morning and have since been released.

County Attorney David A. Barber said he expects an indictment to be handed down later this week. Stevens is being lodged in the Floyd county jail and has not yet retained an attorney, Barber said.

Police Seek Leads In Armed Robberies

Kentucky State Police of Post 9 in Pikeville are continuing their investigations into several armed robberies that have occurred in recent months. Trooper Kenneth Frost, the post's public information officer, said last week. Anyone with information is asked to contact the post at 437-7311. Any information received will be held in strictest confidence, Frost said.

"Nothing can be done except little by little." Charles Baudelaire

Black Lung Program Suffers Two Setbacks

It was not a good week for some former miners who receive benefits under the federal black-lung program, nor for the coal operators who partially finance the program.

First, the U.S. Supreme Court turned down a request by Floyd legal services attorneys to review a case challenging the deduction of a miner's black-lung benefits from Social Security disability benefits to which he would otherwise be entitled.

Then the Reagan administration unveiled plans to increase the black-lung tax on coal production by 54 percent—and to begin treating black-lung benefits as taxable income.

The Supreme Court chose not to hear the case of Pike county miner Robert McCown, whose black-lung benefits, for which he initially applied in 1970, were deducted from the Social Security check he had been receiving since 1966.

As is customary, the court gave no reason for its decision not to consider the case, said John Rosenberg, director of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of Kentucky, which represented McCown.

The offset of black-lung against Social Security benefits is now routine but, for miners who filed claims before 1974, a liberal Congress specified in 1977 that their black-lung benefits should not be counted against their Social Security checks. At least seven other cases, including one filed on behalf of Floyd miner Ray Ward, 62, of McDowell, had been postponed or conditionally dismissed pending the Supreme Court decision in the McCown case.

In his Jan. 5 budget address, the president said his administration would seek an increase in the black-lung tax paid by coal producers and, in testimony before the Senate Finance Committee last Wednesday, Assistant Treasury Secretary J. Roger Mentz supplied the details.

If approved by Congress, the current levies of $1.10 a ton for underground mines and 55 cents for surface mines would increase to $1.70 and 85 cents respectively.

Defending the administration position, Mentz said the black-lung trust fund is now $2.9 billion in debt, even though it is borrowing money interest-free from the U.S. treasury. Also, he said, the program is paying $1 billion a year in benefits out of general tax revenues.

Mentz also argued that benefits should be taxed because they are replacing what would have been taxable income, a proposal sharply criticized by Democratic Sen. Jay Rockefeller, of West Virginia, who said the average black-lung recipient has an income of only a little more than $10,000 a year. He did not understand why the administration wanted "to pick on these people," Rockefeller said.

Program On Teens Generates Action

"Tonight we took a great step forward for all Kentucky teen-agers," said KET Deputy Executive Director Sandra Welch. "The overwhelming response to our viewer call-in program 'KY's Troubled Teens: A Turning Point' indicates what Kentuckians can accomplish through community activity," explained Welch.

More than 250 Kentuckians called during the program which aired January 28. Sixty-six percent of the callers volunteered to help teen-agers and more than 30 percent requested help.

"We know that our young people are our future here in Kentucky. We need to work together to see that they're taken care of; that we try to solve these problems," said Governor Martha Layne Collins as she addressed a live television audience. "KY's Troubled Teens: A Turning Point" was co-hosted by Collins and broadcaster Ralph Hacker.

"KY's Troubled Teens" was produced by KET as a follow-up program to the national documentary "Generation At Risk," which addressed teen problems such as substance abuse, suicide, pregnancy and dropping out of school. The purpose of the special call-in program was to examine how the issue raised in "Generation At Risk" affect Kentucky teens and focus on preventive and treatment services available in the state.

Mayor Latta Selected for Panel That Will Review Constitution

Prestonsburg Mayor Ann Latta has been selected as a member of the LRC Commission on Constitutional Review. The panel held its first meeting Feb. 10.

Chief Appeals Court Judge James W. Howerton, of Paducah, will chair the commission, which is scheduled to make its initial report by Sept. 1.

Other members include two former governors, Bert T. Combs and Louie B. Nunn; judge-executives Mike Miller of Benton and Delzina Belcher, of Harlan; Mayor Jack Fisher, of Owensboro; and six legislators; Reps. Paul Clark, Bill Lile and Louie Mack, and Sens. Gus Sheehan, David Williams and David LeMaster.

Five former lawmakers were picked: Sen. Joe Prather and Reps. George Street Boone, Ed Holloway, Ralph Ed Graves and Gross C. Lindsay. House Speaker Don Blandford and Senate President Pro Tem John "Eck" Rose are ex-officio members.

Among the other members are newspaper publisher Al Smith, Kentucky Post editor Judy Clabes, Dr. Thomas Clark, Circuit Judge William

Graham, District Judge Daniel A. Schneider and Terry Feathers of the Louisville Chamber of Commerce.

At its January meeting, the Legislative Research Commission approved Blandford's resolution creating the 41-member commission to study and recommend revisions in the 96-year-old state constitution.

The commission will continue to serve throughout the 1988 General Assembly session. Any proposed changes to the constitution would first have to be approved by both the House and Senate, then ratified by voters. The earliest any proposals could be on the ballot would be November 1988.

Blandford said that while there should be no wholesale re-writing of the constitution, a majority of Kentuckians "believe there are changes needed to better equip Kentucky to forge ahead in an era of extreme competitiveness."

He said the commission's mission is to review each section of the constitution and make recommendations to the LRC for necessary change.

NOTICE

The meeting dates for John W. Hall Lodge No. 950 F&AM HAVE NOT BEEN CHANGED. They are still on the 2nd and 4th Saturdays of each month.

Lawsuit Was Harassment, Martin Editor Contends

Homer Marcum, editor and publisher of the Martin Countian, filed suit in Fayette Circuit Court Friday against Wanda Cassidy, an Inez woman who sued Marcum in 1982, and John W. Kirk, the Lexington attorney who represented her in the suit.

Marcum claims the 1982 suit was malicious and was designed to intimidate him and discourage him from exercising his free press rights. He also complains that Kirk, who owns the rival Martin County Mercury, has published negative and untrue articles about him in order to hurt his business.

On the front page of its Jan. 13 issue, the Mercury published a picture of Marcum and said it showed him accepting a marijuana "joint" from a companion while on a boating trip. It described Marcum as "an admitted drug user" and noted that he served as chairman of an education committee on drug abuse at the time the picture was made.

A story on the front page also accused Marcum of marijuana and cocaine use and said his behavior affected the stories in the paper and may have caused its decline. The story also accused Marcum of tampering with a grand jury.

Those allegations invaded his right of privacy and placed him in a false light with the public, Marcum's lawsuit says. It seeks punitive and compensatory damages.

Over 12 years, the suit said, Kirk did other things against Marcum, including claiming that Kirk's paper had the larger circulation and therefore deserved to get official legal advertising business.

Kirk said the suit filed by Cassidy was not filed maliciously. Moreover, the photo and article he published about Marcum were neither untrue nor invasions of privacy, he said.

Rt. Beaver Women Meet At Garrett

The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club met January 19 in the home of Mrs. Don Hughes, Garrett, with Mrs. Marie Mullins program leader, substituting for clubmember Mrs. Launice Dunfee, who had recently been in the hospital.

Mrs. Mullins spoke on "home life" and "spiritual values." She called attention to the work done each year by the Federation of Women's Clubs in the arthritis drive, the work being done in placing dogs for the handicapped, and drug awareness and smoking awareness campaigns waged by club women. She reported on the "Grant A Wish" program for a terminally ill child, the prayer breakfasts being held by various clubs, and the work being done in nursing homes by club women. Mrs. Vera Allen reported on visits she and others had made to the nursing homes.

The hostesses, Mrs. Don Hughes and Mrs. Blanche Bamer, served refreshments to Mrs. Lula Coburn, Mrs. Elizabeth Duff, Mrs. Marsella Bradley, Mrs. Marie Mullins, Mrs. Vera Allen, Mrs. Launice Dunfee, Mrs. Libby Martin, and a guest Mrs. Gloria Faye Rister, of Garrett.

The next meeting will be held February 16 at the home of Mrs. Marsella Bradley, Garrett, with Mrs. Marie Mullins, program leader on the subject of "Arts and Crafts."

Jarrell-Piasecki Vows

Engagement Announced

Joleen Kae Jarrell and Joseph David Piasecki were married December 27 in St. Martha's Catholic Church in Prestonsburg with Father Joseph Muench officiating.

Miss Jarrell is the daughter of Carl Jarrell, of Dana, and Sharon Murdock, of Ord, Nebraska. Mr. Piasecki is the son of Dolores Piasecki, of Richfield, Ohio and Joseph Piasecki, of Seven Hills, Ohio.

The bride wore a full length old-fashioned wedding gown, with a full train of lace. The gown also had a flower of sequins sewed in the midline. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Matron of honor was Hilda Ochoa, of Prestonsburg, a friend. Bridesmaids were Sheri Martin, of Garrett, Barb Piasecki, of Richfield, Ohio, and Kristi Bishop, of Auxier. They all wore royal blue dresses.

The groom wore a Miami Vice tux with a white coat and black pants. Serving as best man was Ian Zaleski, of Richfield, Ohio; friend of the couple. Groomsmen were Mike Stoffer, of N. Canton, Ohio; Ray Nause, of Columbus, Ohio; and Dan Puzzoto, of Akron, Ohio. Usher was Steve Crossover, of Columbus, Ohio. All wore Miami Vice tuxedos with royal blue jackets and black pants. Flower girl was Mallory Collins, daughter of Gorm Collins, Jr., of Prestonsburg. Ringbearer was Arin Ochoa, son of Hilda Ochoa, of Prestonsburg.

A reception was held at the National Guard Armory. Servers were Susan Wills, of Banner, Ruby Scutchfield, of Prestonsburg, and Dolores Piasecki.

The bride is a nursing student at Prestonsburg Community College, the groom an announcer with radio station WPRT. They made a wedding trip to Lexington and Nashville and live in Prestonsburg.

HERE FROM LEXINGTON

Thelma Smith, Hazel Horseman, Dorothy Danckaert, and Claire Felder, all of Lexington, spent three days last week at May Lodge. Tuesday, they were joined for lunch by Rebecca Vaughn, Loretta Hammonds, Jean Burke, and Honey May, who became friends of this group while on a tour of the Ozarks and St. Louis, last October.

Mr. and Mrs. Barkley J. Sturgill announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Dorothy Lewis Sturgill, to Mr. Steven Austin Martin, of Memphis, Tenn., who is the son of Mrs. Alice Joy Martin, also of Memphis. The wedding will be held April 25 at Christ the King Church in Lexington at 7:30 p.m.

Miss Sturgill is a graduate of Prestonsburg High School and the University of Kentucky. She is employed by North-West Airlines. Mr. Martin is a graduate of Briarcrest Baptist High School and the University of Tennessee. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and is employed by Great Dane Trailer, Inc.

HONORED ON ANNIVERSARY

Pastor and Mrs. John H. Woods, of the Fitzpatrick First Baptist Church, were honored with a surprise reception, Sunday evening, February 8, at the church, their 25th wedding anniversary. Decorated cake, baked by Mrs. Lorraine Bailey, was served with other refreshments in the candlelit dining room.

The pastor and his wife were presented with an anniversary plate and knife.

The Rev. Woods will leave soon for a three-week evangelistic tour of Kenya.

WELCOMED TO MEMBERSHIP

Welcomed by letter, into the membership of the Highland Avenue Free Will Baptist Church, during services there Sunday morning, was Mrs. Danise Amburgey, of Cow Creek.

IN LEXINGTON

Anna Belle Harris has returned home from Lexington, where she spent a week with Mrs. Opal Fitzpatrick. She also visited with Marie Spurlock while there. Before returning home she consulted her doctor and was an outpatient at Central Baptist Hospital.

First Baptist Church W.M.U. Circles Meet

The "Mommie", Ransdell Circle, W.M.U., of the First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial) met Tuesday evening, February 3, at the home of Mrs. Jewell Bayes. The group studied home missions' beginnings, and how this can be applied to church women of today. Their mission action for this month will be to contribute to the Loaves and Fishes Food Pantry.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Bayes, to Judy Hooker, Sandra Bellamy, Elizabeth Venters, Joyce Shepherd, Jan Wells, Pat Hites, Lora Click, Donna Jewel, and Lane Dutton.

Radon Survey Needs No Volunteers

Announced plans about a radon study by the Kentucky Department for Health Services have produced an overwhelming number of inquiries from homeowners. The department cannot accept volunteers for the radon study, but interested homeowners can call the nearest health department for radon detection alternatives.

"We have a random, computer-generated list of homeowners whom we will ask to participate in our study," said Edsel Moore of the Department for Health Services, "so we do not need volunteers. However, anyone interested in information about other agencies that do radon testing can talk to an environmentalist in a district or local health department."

At the same time, Moore says, a federal request has changed the method of selecting homes.

"Originally, radon surveyors and health department environmentalists were to choose two or more houses from each 60-square-mile quadrant of the state for participation in the survey," he said. "Because the federal Environmental Protection Agency, under whose auspices the survey is being conducted, asked the state to change the method, surveyors will now use random computer selections.

"The computer-generated list will allow for a more scientifically valid sample and will make our data comparable with nine other states currently implementing a radon survey," he said.

Moore emphasizes that the state survey will follow certain procedures that homeowners should be aware of so that "imitators" do not gain access to homes.

"We will mail to each person on the list a package of information about the study," said Moore. "These packages, which are clearly identified as 'Cabinet for Human Resources' material, should begin arriving in homes the first week of February. A letter from the state Radiation Control Branch asks the homeowners to participate in the study."

"This information will be followed by a phone call from a cabinet representative to further explain the survey and request a time for a radon surveyor to contact the homeowner," said Moore.

The radon surveyor makes an appointment to meet interested homeowners and place detectors. Moore emphasizes that the surveyor will have a Cabinet for Human Resources photograph identification card.

The state study is being conducted to determine the extent of Kentucky's radon problem. Radon is a colorless, odorless, tasteless radioactive gas that occurs from the natural breakdown of uranium. When diluted to low concentrations outdoors, the gas is usually not harmful. However, the gas can accumulate indoors and pose a health hazard.

Mothers of Twins Club Meet Slated

There will be a Mothers of Twins Club meeting, Thursday, Feb. 19, at 7 p.m. in Pikeville at the Pikeville National Bank in the First 'N' Line cafeteria. The meeting is open to all mothers with twins or triplets.

Caudill Speaker At Sex Bias Seminar

Harry M. Caudill, of Whitesburg, will present the second lecture in the Sex Bias Series on February 18 at 3:00 p.m. in the Pike Auditorium at Prestonsburg Community College. He will discuss the Development of Cultural Attitudes in Appalachia. Caudill is a distinguished eastern Kentuckian, having served his state as an attorney, a legislator, a professor and a lecturer. He is probably best known, however, as an author. The public is invited to the lecture, free of charge.

MAGISTRATE OWENS' Yearly Report

From Jan. 6, 1986-Jan. 6, 1987
(This ad covers the first three months of 1986)

During the first meeting, when it came time to hire county workers, the vote went as such for Stumbo, Caudill, Tackett; Against OWENS, DeRossett—because of a dispute over the hiring of county detectives. Motion made by OWENS to lay off county detectives pending an investigation by the County Attorney as to the detectives' qualifications.

The vote went as follows: For OWENS, DeRossett, Against Stumbo, Tackett, Caudill.

SECOND MEETING, 2/21/86. During this meeting the rural secondary road program projected by the state, $484,460.00 would be spent on the present Floyd County Roads. Rural secondary roads in District 2 consist of Turkey Creek, Stone Coal, Bucks Branch, Stephens Branch, Salt Lick, and Mill Creek. Just look people—HOW MUCH DID WE GET? I, MAGISTRATE OWENS, requested repairs on All of these roads. Magistrates were scheduled to meet 2/28/86 with the Judge to discuss these roads, which never happened, due to no fault of mine. All Magistrates voted for authorizing bids for bridges to widen Clark School Bridge and to construct a bridge on Mink Branch.

THIRD MEETING, 3/13/86. During this meeting I, MAGISTRATE OWENS, fought hard to get a 10-ton weight limit on Shortwood Road between Allen and Banner, which I did succeed to get approved. During this meeting the constables asked for life insurance and a raise in salary, which I lobbied for but failed to get enough support for approval. During this meeting the Floyd County Fiscal Court voted to rehire all the former county road crew which had been laid off.

These votes that I have explained are only a few of the 39 issues voted on during these first three months. During these three months, I was present at every meeting and present for every vote. These first three months were the hardest on me because I had only one worker for my district for nearly all these three months. The former grader man who had worked 12 years under the previous administration was absent from work 37 out of the first 60 working days due to different reasons and also missed three out of five snows of which I personally cleared myself, spending as high as 27 hours at a time on the grader, stopping only for fuel and oil; however, I was also able on the 3/13 meeting to replace four out of the five District 2 workers with new men with the help of the Fiscal Court.

P.S.—People, it's important that we have good state representatives for District 2 if we are to get our share of the state material.

Next week I'll report on the Fiscal Court meetings held from April, May, and June.

Sports Information Directors, Providing The Needed Numbers

Numbers, numbers, we want numbers!

From every corner of these great United States the cry goes up for numbers. Fans want to know them, and the media can't function without them.

To use in casual conversation or to sharpen their sports fact book, fans of all sports are constantly geared to individual and team numbers while the press and media would kill or die for just a few stats in order to compile an interesting story or entertain their audience.

Particularly in college athletics, numbers are thrown at us in an almost staggering fashion, and sometimes these facts do not determine anything, except maybe that someone is doing their job.

However, most fans enjoy numbers, especially the key ones such as average points, rebounds, and some of the more important ones. They are always nice to throw back at your buddy in a heated discussion. Stats can indeed end an argument as quickly as it crops up.

More importantly, though, is the factual and exact story they tell. When a team doesn't shoot well from the floor, numbers tell us just how poorly they do shoot.

It's nice to hear the numbers story on radio or see them on TV, but the print media has gained an edge because they put them in writing. There it is. All the stats you will need to keep you informed plus they are written down. If a slip of the ole memory occurs all is required for recall is to simply re-read.

Oh yes, the media does us great favors in describing and proving their description through the use of numbers, but did you ever wonder where those numbers come from?

For example, if NBC broadcasts a North Carolina game, Dick Enberg can readily tell us just how much Joe Wolf is scoring, his shooting percentage from the floor, from the free throw line, and who he dated in high school.

These things are entertaining and helpful, but they aren't a product of Dick Enberg's work or that of the National Broadcasting Company.

The same holds true for a newspaper article on any college in the nation. Don't ever give the paper credit because their hardest job is to find the arena, and, of course, the sports information director's office.

Yes sir, this is the man, or possibly woman, who is responsible for giving us our college stats. The media is just a tool used to transfer the message from gym to home.

From the first tipoff in November (we'll use basketball as an example because it's that time of the year) to the cutting of the nets in March, various sports information offices are on the scene taking notes and writing numbers so the fans can be fully informed and the media can complete its job.

Not many people hear of S.I.D.s and their work. Morehead State University's Rick Hesterburg even went as far as to say that it's kind of a thankless job, but it is a must do type thing and Hesterburg added that with all things considered, the job has its rewards also.

"It is kind of a thankless job, but that comes with the turf," Hesterburg said. "I get a lot of personal reward from it, though. It's the most challenging work I've ever done."

Although athletics at Morehead State have never been recognized as a national publicity getter, Hesterburg's job has increased dramatically due to MSU's success on the gridiron and the hardwood. Eagle teams have gained attention both on the national scene and more than usual in the state which creates more of a burden to the sports information office, but gaining publicity for their school is a major part of the S.I.D.'s job, according to Hesterburg.

"It's hard to say in one sentence," Hesterburg said of a sports information director's duties. "Part of it is public relations but most of it is providing information to the media and getting publicity for the school."

With the job as a sports information director comes the need for a dedicated individual, a versatile individual, and a person capable of separating his duties from that of his team's success.

"You really have to love it, because it's not a nine to five job. Some nights I'm here until 10 or 11 o'clock, and when I go home I have to leave my work here, because if you don't, it will really tear you apart," Hesterburg explained.

Working behind the scenes, rarely ever receiving credit for a job well done, but continuing the job required of them, the nation's S.I.D.s will continue supplying us with our college stats and at sometime or another get just a bit too wrapped up in their work.

When this happens, the end result could be a repeat performance of Akron's sports information director Ken MacDonald going tooth and nail with Middle Tennessee coach Bruce Stewart.

In the meantime, we can look forward to factual numbers of college baseball, basketball, and all sports, provided solely from the desk of our sports information directors, a rare but important breed.

SHORT SPORTS

A meeting concerning Floyd County baseball will be held Monday, February 23, at 7 p.m. near the Allen Park swimming pool.

According to park director Oscar Rice, any coach wishing to use Allen Park should attend or at least send a representative, because playing dates will be discussed. Bringing a schedule would also be of benefit.

Plans for a 16-18-year-old team or teams for play in June and July will be discussed, and all Babe Ruth coaches are urged to attend. All schools and teams should be represented, that is if you are interested in playing baseball on the Allen Park field.

Even though the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats remained unbeaten in conference play, for a short period Tuesday night it appeared as if Wheelwright would spoil the Blackcats' perfect conference season.

After trailing by 10 points, 33-23, at halftime the Lady Trojans caught fire in the third quarter, taking their first lead of the contest with 1:25 remaining in the third.

Wheelwright maintained that one-point lead going into the fourth quarter but were outscored 17-9 in the final frame as the Lady Blackcats claimed their sixth Floyd County Conference win against no losses. Prestonsburg also kept their conference championship hopes alive, continuing to top the list, just ahead of Betsy Layne.

The Floyd County Conference will decide a champion this week, its final week of regularly scheduled play, but no one expected to be playing five county games this week.

In the original schedule, only Betsy Layne and Allen Central were to go head-to-head this week, but due to previous bad weather, several games were postponed and re-scheduled this week.

Two conference games will be made up tonight as Allen Central travels to Prestonsburg, and Wheelwright visits Betsy Layne. Both the Blackcats and Trojans are in must-win situations if they hope to earn one of the top positions in the upcoming district tournament.

In another makeup game, the Allen Central Rebels will do battle at home against the Wheelwright Trojans in a Sunday contest, and the following night Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne will hook up in the D.W. Howard Fieldhouse.

The year's final conference matchup will more than likely have an important bearing on both the men and women's final conference standings. Depending on what happens earlier in this week's action, the Bobcats and Blackcats could either be fighting each other for a top spot or fighting to keep the other from getting a top spot.

As of now, the Lady Blackcats and Lady Bobcats own the top two positions in the conference, and Monday's game could enable Betsy Layne to at least earn a share of the conference title.

When a basketball team isn't exactly playing team basketball, they had better have some individual players ready and able to take control. This, in fact, was what enabled the University of Kentucky to win two SEC games this past week.

Wednesday night, James Blackmon poured in 27 points to lead the Wildcats to a conference win over Auburn, their sixth of the season.

Three days later Ed Davender finally arrived in full talent, scoring a total of 29 points in UK's 70-69 victory on the road against then-conference leader Alabama.

The Cats, who had led by as many as 11 points in the first half, found themselves down by six with less than two minutes remaining but took the lead for good when Davender capped off his and all scoring with a short jumper.

Only six seconds remained when Davender hit his shot, enough time for (Continued on Next Page)

SOLID PERFORMANCE: Ronnie Ousley splits the McDowell defense with this layup Friday night. Ousley finished with 31 points in one of his better performances of the season.

Foul-Plagued Lady Rebs Use Bench To Defeat McDowell

Allen Central women's basketball coach Bonita Compton now understands just exactly what being between a rock and a hard spot means.

The rock came when Compton's Lady Rebs could manage only an 18 percent shooting performance in the first half of their matchup with McDowell, Friday night, and the hard place proved to be the Lady Daredevils themselves.

During the first half of action, Allen Central struggled with their shooting, hitting on only four field goals through the first 16 minutes of play. McDowell didn't find the going much easier but did manage to build a six-point lead at halftime.

"I thought our defense was pretty good," Coach Compton said. "We've been working on a full court press, and we did a good job with it, but we just couldn't hit. We just hit 18 percent in the first half, and that won't beat anybody."

To add insult to injury, Allen Central's top two inside players were in foul trouble, but Compton says she only told her team not to get down.

"I just told them to go back out and play hard and not to let down, the shots would start falling. Sometimes when you have trouble offensively, you will let down on defense."

The Lady Rebs apparently listened to their coach's instructions, particularly freshman center Joann Conn. Behind Conn's 11 third quarter points, Allen Central outscored McDowell 12-8 in the third period to cut the Lady Daredevil's lead to only two points going into the final frame.

In that final quarter, free throw shooting proved to be the Lady Rebs' biggest all, hitting nine of 15 chances while McDowell struggled from the charity stripe.

Through the first three periods, Allen Central had missed a total of 15 attempts from the free throw line but found their range in time to turn back the Lady Daredevils, 41-37.

Allen Central, however, was forced to go in the final period with several new faces due to foul difficulty. With only seconds remaining in third quarter play, Becky Rice made the exit with five fouls, and 18 seconds into the fourth quarter, Joann Conn took a permanent seat on the Allen Central bench.

From bad to worse, the tough situation looked almost impossible for the Lady Rebs, but when McDowell made four free throws, two being of the front end of a one and one variety, to open the final eight-minute period, the Lady Rebs received the break they needed.

Michelle Floyd canned a short jumper, and Donna Robinson added a free toss to give Allen Central an early lead to kick off fourth quarter action. Although McDowell continued a strong run, they never regained their lead, mainly because of Lady Reb Teresa Crum.

Crum, normally a seldom-used reserve, was forced into action and responded with seven points, all coming in the final seven minutes of play.

With 6:44 left, Crum cashed in on two free throws and later added a jump shot to build the Lady Reb lead to five points. Donna Robinson, another reserve, hit a jumpshot with 5:58 remaining, and Allen Central found themselves up by seven consecutive McDowell points, and Gloria Mullins added a pair of field goals to keep their team in the contest.

However, Lady Reb guard Tonya Kester connected on both ends of a bonus free throw with only 24 seconds left to enable Allen Central to deny McDowell another conference win.

Although their freshman sensation, Joann Conn, was a mere spectator sitting alongside starting forward Becky Rice, the Lady Rebs found enough firepower to capture their third conference win against two losses, and Coach Bonita Compton gave a major part of the credit to her improved bench.

"Our bench won it for us," Compton said after the game. "When Conn fouled out, we started playing team ball. The players knew they didn't have her and Rice so they had to team it more."

Coach Compton knew her team hadn't played their best basketball of the season but were fortunate enough to win their second win over McDowell, and neither win has been of the easy nature.

Under Meredith Slone, the Lady Daredevils have played much improved basketball of late and appear as if they could make some noise in the district tournament.

INDIVIDUAL SCORING: Allen Central: Joann Conn, 17; Teresa Crum, 7; Becky Rice, 5; Tonya Kester, 5; Donna Robinson, 3; Jennifer Stephens, 2; Michelle Floyd, 2.

McDowell: Gwen Stegall, 13; Gloria Mullins, 10; April Hall, 7; Kristi Hall, 4; Kristina Bevins, 2; Sheri Griffie, 1.

Rebels Keep Pace In Conference With Home Victory Over McDowell

The Allen Central Rebels have never been known as a one-player team, and Coach Johnny Martin would never say that they are this season but for a long time Friday night they appeared as such.

With their key inside player, Stanton Bentley, nursing a painful ankle and lower leg injury, the Rebels already had one strike against them in their contest with McDowell.

However, 6'1" guard-forward Ronnie Ousley took the pressure off Bentley, Johnny Martin, and virtually everyone connected with Allen Central basketball. The well-rounded senior proceeded to score 31 points in the Rebels 74-61 victory over the Daredevils.

After Bentley opened Allen Central scoring and Darrin Conn, who finished with 16 points, added two field goals Ousley entered into the act, scoring eight of the Rebels last 10 first quarter points.

By this time, Allen Central had mounted a six-point advantage, but Ousley and the rest of Johnny Martin's crew weren't finished yet.

In the second frame, Ousley cashed in on a pair of free throws and a jumpshot. Combined with Roger Horne's and Rady Martin's four points each, the Rebels held a five-point halftime advantage.

The Daredevils, however, aren't without offensive firepower of their own, and by the third quarter, McDowell started lighting up the scoreboard in classic Daredevil style.

Behind the shooting of Dickie Joe Shannon, McDowell cut Allen Central's lead to one point. Shannon tossed in eight of his 17 points in that third quarter, and when Brian Hall canned a long range jumper with 5:21 remaining in the third period, the Daredevils trailed 34-33 but never took a lead.

One of the obvious reasons why McDowell could never take the lead was Ousley. After the Daredevils trimmed Allen Central's advantage to one, Ousley proceeded to score eight points in the final five minutes of the third quarter.

With no intention of letting McDowell back into the contest after his team built an eight-point lead after three quarters, Ousley positively took control on Allen Central's offensive end, scoring nine points in the first two minutes, 37 seconds of the final frame.

"He's the type of player who can do that," Johnny Martin said of Ousley. "He can play inside or outside and we were looking for him tonight. They were concerned with our outside shooting, and that kind of opened things up for him inside."

With the win, Allen Central moved into first place in the Floyd County Conference, one-half game in front of Betsy Layne, but for sometime during the third quarter Johnny Martin says he was concerned about his team's chances.

"McDowell is a dangerous team," Martin mentioned. "You can't ever look past them, because they have so many good shooters. I didn't think they were ever going to miss in that third quarter."

The Daredevils did indeed make an impressive run at Allen Central early in the second half, but never the less, lost their seventh conference game in as many tries.

Even with a winless conference slate and a definite last place finish, Coach Martin isn't sure that Ricky Hall and McDowell isn't in a better position than his own Rebels.

"That doesn't mean a thing," Martin said pointing to the conference standings posted inside the Allen Central dressing room. "What I'm worried about is having to play that extra game in the tournament. The district is so balanced that it doesn't matter who we play, and I bet Betsy Layne would say the same thing,

It's just that extra game that kills you. It killed us last year."

Although Allen Central is on top of the conference, a tough stretch is awaiting them, and the possibility remains of the Rebels not getting a bye in the district tournament.

Due to cancellations, the Rebels have three more conference games remaining which is something Coach Martin has had in mind the entire season. "I was afraid something like this would happen. If Stanton hadn't been able to play, we would have been destroyed (Bentley was forced to miss an earlier game due to his injury) because from now until Sunday we will play half of our conference schedule."

As Johnny Martin ponders the unfortunate possibility of playing an extra tournament game, McDowell coach Ricky Hall doesn't have to trouble himself with the same situation.

Even though every coach in Floyd County would more than likely trade places with Martin, Hall will have to win only one game to advance to regional play as compared to the two games facing the conference's number three and four finishers.

Johnny Martin may be concerned, but the Rebels do control their own destiny. All Allen Central has to do is win, but in the Floyd County Conference this is no easy task.

INDIVIDUAL SCORING: Allen Central: Ronnie Ousley, 31; Darrin Conn, 16; Rady Martin, 12; Roger Horne, 8; Stanton Bentley, 6; Robbie Click, 1.

McDowell: Dickie Joe Shannon, 17; Brian Hall, 17; Reggie Hall, 13; Lenny Hall, 10; Jesse Osborne, 2; Scott Tackett, 2.

THE SPORTING TIMES

The long distance shootout, the slam dunk contest, the old-timers game and the all-star game. The NBA certainly went all out to gain some attention this past weekend.

Some may say it was a showcase of basketball's best while others prefer to term it a breakdown of player specialties, but regardless of what you call it, the NBA obviously provided fans some excellent entertainment.

The various competitions provided average players no position. What the NBA introduced to fans on a national level was the best they had to offer, and unlike past years, their best was good enough.

The long distance shootout, probably not the most exciting event of the weekend, even provided some tense moments, in its own little way, of course. Watching someone shoot a jumpshot may not be your idea of entertainment, but the secret is selecting a favorite.

If either Detlef Schrempf or Larry Bird was your choice then Schrempf's last shot in the championship round had some definite excitement about it. After Bird hit his first eight shots in that final round and finished with 16 of a possible 31 points, Schrempf came within the last shot of tying things up.

As the colored basketball floated through the air, ideas, emotions, and hopes crossed all minds involved, but Schrempf's shot bounced off the back iron, and Larry Bird, for the second consecutive year, walked away with the $12,500 first prize.

Bird also came away with something other than money. His specialty is the outside jumper, among other things, and Saturday, he proved that he can shoot the three-pointer better than anyone else in professional basketball.

Outside shooting is a key to any player's success, but it isn't as flamboyant as the slam dunk and the dunkers of the NBA had a chance to showcase their ability.

In truth, a dunk counts as only two points, but there isn't anything more glamorous in basketball than an acrobatic slam. It requires many different athletic abilities, and there are several players in the NBA who can thrill a crowd with them.

Good leaping ability, hang time, and a bit of creativity goes into a good dunk. Some players like Darrell Dawkins and Moses Malone use strictly power, but the slam dunk contest requires more—it requires a Michael Jordan, a Dominique Wilkins, or a Spud Webb.

These players take pride in their dunking style, kind of like a dunking game inside the basketball game itself. Well, they all went head to head Saturday to settle their personal arguments.

Although last year's champion, Spud Webb, was forced to a fan's role as was the human highlight film Dominique Wilkins, professional basketball found enough great athletes to put on a tremendous show.

Webb still continued his argument, however. After the first round of competition, Webb said that the competitors must have been holding back, because he hadn't seen anything spectacular. "I'm a fan now, and I want to see some action," Webb told WTBS viewers.

Take your seat and watch, Spud. Michael Jordan picked up the dunking pace considerably after the first round, finding enough ability and degree of difficulty to edge out Jerome Kersey and claim the top purse of 12,500 bucks.

Another quality needed in order to be a good dunker is strong legs, and more importantly, young legs. The shootout and slam dunk contest both featured young legs and bodies, but the weekend provided something for the old, and the nostalgic. You bet, the old-timers game.

Of course no one tunes in to this contest for excitement, just a chance to remember what was and what they are doing now.

For the veteran NBA fan, the game brings back tons of memories of the golden oldies, strutting their stuff years ago when basketball was a game played out of love, not money. The greatest of the greats were there, also giving us newcomers a chance to learn just how basketball was a decade ago.

Oh, but time waits for no man so just like basketball grew from its age of pioneers to the high tech game of today, Saturday turned into Sunday. Once again we said goodbye to the guys who built basketball while turning our attentions to the heroes of today.

And right now no one is looking better than Tom Chambers. A little known forward for Seattle caught everyone's attention by scoring 34 points while walking away with the most valuable player trophy. Chambers is a talented player who will no doubt make a mark on the NBA before leaving, but Sunday past may be his biggest memory of all.

More memorable moments came about in Sunday's all-star game. What about Julius Erving playing in his final East-West battle? Doctor J. has provided us with many an all-star thrill, but this past Sunday, you and I watched him for the last time in the East uniform.

Moses Malone's job will certainly stand up for a while. Malone had something to prove. He has had all season, and he did Sunday—27 points and 18 rebounds, a memorable performance.

For the second consecutive week, Cumberland's 6-6 senior, Garrett Gregory, is the Men's Player of the Week. In leading the Indians to a clinching of the regular season championship and three wins, the Cumberland KY native scored 73 points, grabbed 16 rebounds, blocked three shots, was credited with 6 assists and had 3 steals. He hit 28 of 34 from the field and 17 of 23 from the line. Campbellsville's 5-9 point guard, Ginger High, is the Women's Player of the Week. The freshman from Tompkinsville, Ky. scored 45 points and handed out 22 assists in leading the Lady Tigers to two wins in three games. She also was credited with nine rebounds and five steals. She was 18 of 36 from the floor and 9 of 10 from the line.

Injuries Hurt County Non-Conference Chances

Jeff Riley's Prestonsburg Blackcats have been bothered all season by tough injuries to key players. First it was Brian Wallace with a sprained ankle, then Mark Tuttle with damaged cartilage, and then Brian Wallace with a bad back.

Wallace and Tuttle are currently out and the Blackcats have missed them dearly, but in their absence, David Martin has proven himself more than capable of carrying the load.

Although the Blackcats lost two games on the road to state contenders, Martin proved to be a shining star, along with some future potential stars.

In their loss to Lexington Tates Creek, Martin outscored highly touted Jerome Coles. Martin tossed in 24 of his team's 41 points, while Coles tallied 17, but the big man from Tates Creek got just a bit more support than did Martin. Tates Creek finished with a total of 51 points.

Saturday night, Martin once again was showcased in a contest featuring one of the state's top guards, Wolfe County's Steve Johnson. Johnson finished with 23 points as did Martin, but the Wolves defeated the Blackcats 87-66.

Prestonsburg also got some solid play from a solid group of sophomores. Against Wolfe County, Tim Trusty tossed in 11 points, Todd Justice added 10, and John Wright accounted for seven points.

Jeff Riley understands how devastating injuries can be, and he also knows that his sophomores will have to contribute down the stretch, but Coach Riley has nothing on Johnny Martin, in either case.

Injuries have plagued Allen Central all season, particularly the tender ankles of Stanton Bentley and Ronnie Ousley.

Tuesday, the Rebels, playing without Bentley, lost to Pikeville, and Saturday, Allen Central was forced to go to war without Ousley.

Fortunately for Johnny Martin, Roger Horne filled the void when he scored 36 points to lead the Rebels to an 84-71 victory over Whitesburg. Martin's prize sophomore, Rady Martin, aided the cause with 19 points.

The two-man performance came just in time, especially after starting forward Robbie Click twisted his ankle two minutes into Saturday's game.

"We've got three players who aren't in very good physical shape," Martin said. "It's just a day-to-day thing, but hopefully, they will be ready to play by Friday."

The Betsy Layne Bobcats haven't received a rash of injuries this season, but their coach Craynor Slone got hurt Saturday night. Not physically, just hurt his pride a bit.

Against his former team, the Ashland Tomcats, Slone's Bobcats fell, 54-72, despite Todd Sturgill's 14 points to lead Betsy Layne.

Nothing was wrong with Betsy Layne, Craynor Slone, or Jamie Little against Pikeville, Friday night. The Bobcats defeated Pikeville, 56-43, as Little tossed in a personal season high-17 points.

With the win and two losses this past week—the Bobcats fell to Paintsville, Tuesday—Betsy Layne dips to 13-7 on the season. The record is more impressive than most probably expected, but Slone says he wants just a few more.

Monroe Jones is another who has surpassed most expectations. With their 68-60 victory over Feds Creek, Friday night, the Trojans improved to 9-7 on the season, including an impressive conference mark. Tony Hutton led Wheelwright with 17 points.

The McDowell Daredevils, usually tough outside the Floyd County Conference, fell hard to highly rated Hazard. Even with their Tuesday loss the Daredevils still hold the best non-conference record of all Floyd county schools.

County basketball certainly took a thumping this past week. One reason could have been the injuries, but another, and probably the biggest, was the fact that county teams took on some of the state's best players and best teams.

This week is the final one for conference play so from here on out local teams will turn their attention to non-conference competition as they prepare for the district tournament.

The out-of-county record is still impressive, but as players continue to heal, Floyd County could dramatically improve their composite record against teams outside the best district in the mountains.

Parsons Succeeding In Initial Year At Clinch Valley College

Where high school basketball is concerned the Betsy Layne Bobcats need no introduction, and they certainly need no promotion.

But it never hurts to get something extra, even though you don't need it.

You won't find any introduction here, but a little publicity and promotion may be in evidence. Not from their past performances or accomplishments, though. This time a former player is providing that little extra, just like he did as a Bobcat.

After playing a key role in Betsy Layne's regional final berth last season, Jimmy Parsons set himself in the direction of choosing a college.

This apparently was no easy decision. The former Bobcat senior seriously pondered the idea of attending Alice Lloyd but sometime in early August cancelled this thought in favor of the more attractive surroundings of Clinch Valley College in Wise, Virginia.

Obviously the decision wasn't an easy one, but Clinch Valley coach Bernard Hall is glad Jimmy Parsons made it. The 6'5" center has brought some much needed height to a guard-oriented team.

"We're extremely pleased to have him in our program," Hall said of his starting post man. "As a young player, he will continue to improve, and he has already made a considerable contribution to our program at critical times."

Parsons' numbers won't astound anyone. He is averaging just under six points and six rebounds per contest, but Bernard Hall is sure improvement is merely playing time away.

"Of course as a freshman he is making some mistakes, but for a freshman, he is coming along just fine and progressing pretty much the way we expected him to," Hall said.

Although Coach Hall wasn't sure Parsons would be a member of his 1986-87 squad until somewhere around the time school began, Parsons has appeared in all of Clinch Valley's games and as a starter in most of them.

Bernard Hall says his talented freshman will continue to improve on his raw talent while gaining valuable experience and should be a strong force for Clinch Valley for three more years.

According to Hall, Parsons has shown him many things a coach likes to see in a young player but as a young player he has also shown some room for improvement.

"Defensively he needs work on guarding the post down low and handling his man out high, but these are things that will come with time."

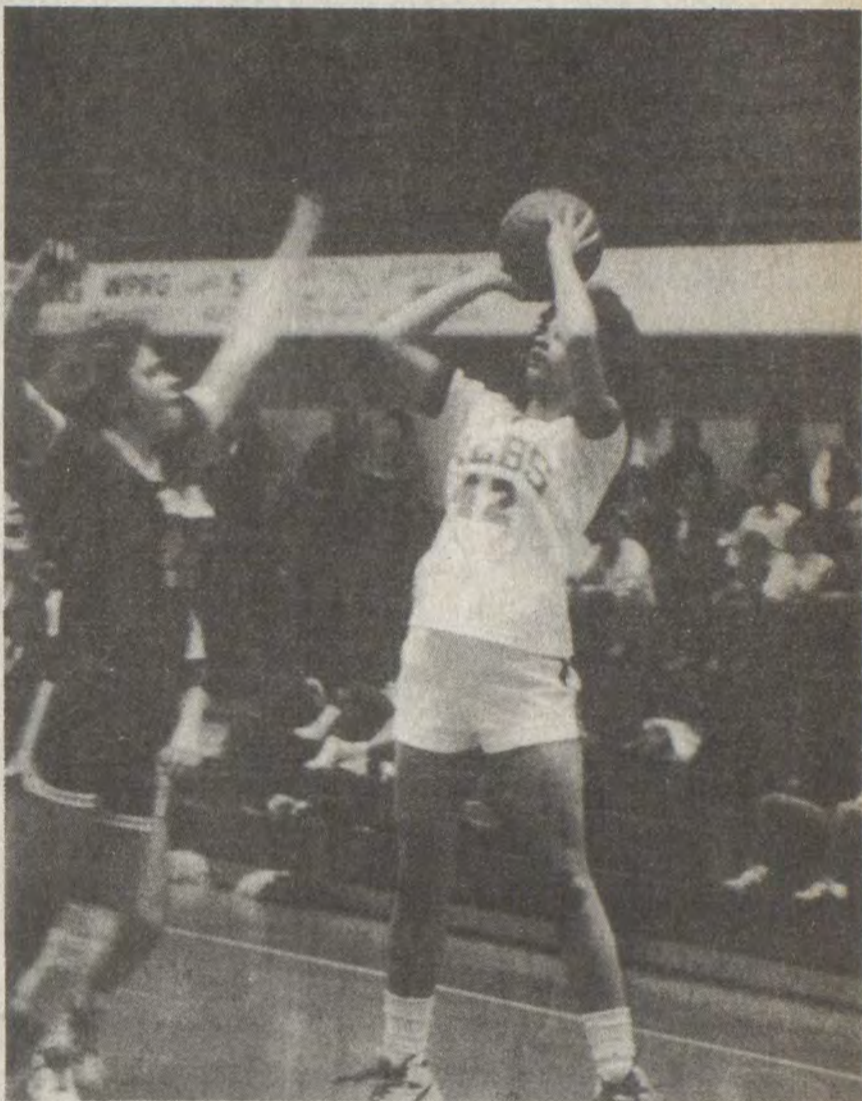

Hall breaks the game of basketball down in two areas, technique and desire. The Clinch Valley head man says basketball is 20 percent technique and 80 percent desire.

As of now, Parsons is working on the technique part, and Coach Hall says the desire portion is no problem.

"Let me put it this way. He wouldn't have played in 25 games if he didn't have the desire," Hall explained matter of factly. "Right now he is working on his technique and if he didn't have the desire to get better then we would be looking at someone else."

Through the first 25 contests of this season, Parsons was shooting over 45 percent from the floor and about the same from the charity stripe.

Parsons developed his talent at Betsy Layne, and now under the direction of Bernard Hall, he is polishing that talent. Clinch Valley will no doubt be all the better for it.

And who will forget Rolando Blackmon's two free throws with no time remaining to send the game into overtime. He will also be remembered for that and a total of 29 points.

The game itself was one of the most exciting of any before it, maybe because it was the highest scoring of all time and filled with suspense. The final two minutes certainly didn't hurt.

Oh, by the way, the West won 154-149.

Professional basketball has taken its lumps in the recent past, but if this past weekend was any example, the NBA should make a strong comeback. And soon.

Alabama to get off another shot but not enough time for them to score.

The Wildcats return to action tonight when they take on Tennessee at home before traveling to Florida this Saturday in a game with the Gators.

Kentucky, now 7-5 in the conference, can be seen in action Wednesday night via delayed broadcast and Saturday at 1:05 on the South Eastern Conference network.

In their chase of Middle Tennessee, the Morehead State University Eagles fell victim to OVC foe Austin Peay, 100-91, on the road Monday night.

Governor Lawrence Mitchell scored a whopping 43 points to lead Austin Peay, while Derrick Davis tossed in 27 for the Eagles.

Scoring 40 or more points in a game isn't anything strange to Mitchell. He has done it three times this season. If you aren't impressed yet just try this on for size. In his last two games, Mitchell has scored a grand total of 86 points. This is a season for many college basketball players.

No Change Yet In Small Game, Raccoon Hunting Regulations

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has not made any changes in small game or raccoon hunting regulations, although some sportsmen apparently believe that proposed changes have already been made.

A proposal to change small game hunting dates is now before the Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission and a series of meetings is being held with raccoon hunters to discuss the possible adoption of a new raccoon management plan. However, both these proposals are still "in the talking stage," department officials say.

According to Furbearer Specialist Tom Edwards, the raccoon management plan he is currently discussing with coon hunters was developed in response to complaints from hunters about low raccoon numbers.

"These hunters asked us to come up with a plan to improve coon populations," Edwards said, "and we are now presenting this plan to show them what it would take to accomplish that task and to see how they feel about it." There are no plans at this time to propose the changes outlined in this management plan to the commission.

The proposal to change the season framework for small game hunting was presented to the commission at its December meeting, but the commission voted to take no action upon the proposal until its next quarterly meeting, scheduled for March 1-2.

This delay was to allow time for sportsmen to learn about the proposed changes and to comment upon them. The commission may adopt the proposal as it stands, or may vote to adopt some of the proposed changes and reject others.

Most proposals for changes in season dates came from within either the wildlife or fisheries divisions, often in response to a request from sportsmen about a specific problem. These proposals are then submitted to the Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission, a nine-member citizen's panel which oversees the operations of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, for action.

The small game season proposal calls for an opening date of Nov. 1 and a closing date of Jan. 31 for rabbits, quail and grouse. The small game season would close during the gun deer season, which would open the second Saturday of November, as it does now. The raccoon "shake-out" season (currently from Oct. 22 until the opening of small game hunting on the third Thursday of November) would be eliminated in favor of a Nov. 1 opening of the taking season. Trapping would not begin until after the 10-day deer season closed.

The changes in raccoon hunting dates that are a part of the small game proposal should not be confused with the raccoon management plan which is being presented to coon hunters. This plan includes much more sweeping changes in the way the raccoon resource is managed.

Sportsmen who would like to express an opinion on these proposed changes should contact the commission member representing their district or write the Department of Fish and Wildlife, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Trojans Rally To Down Prestonsburg Tuesday

In one of the most exciting finishes of the season the Wheelwright Trojans came from behind to upset Prestonsburg, 52-49, Tuesday night in Prestonsburg.

When Blackcat forward Todd Justice completed a three-point play with 5:27 left in the third quarter, Wheelwright found themselves down by 10 points and playing on the road didn't improve the bleak Trojan position.

However, this year's Trojan team doesn't understand the word quit, and by the start of the fourth quarter, Wheelwright had fought their way back into the important Floyd County Conference contest, trailing by only one point.

The impressive rally didn't come as a major surprise to Wheelwright coach Monroe Jones. His Trojans have accomplished this feat several times this season and once before in Tuesday's game.

With 6:01 showing on the second quarter clock Todd Justice, who finished with 16 points, canned a short jumpshot to give Prestonsburg a nine-point advantage, but Jones' Trojans didn't surrender then, and they didn't surrender later in the contest.

"We just kept coming," Jones said of his team's efforts. "It seems that we get down like that in just about every game."

After cutting the Prestonsburg lead to one to begin the fourth quarter, Wheelwright took their first lead of the game when Tony Hutton hit a layup early in the final frame.

The Trojans' job wasn't over though. David Martin took offensive control for Prestonsburg, scoring four consecutive points, and all of a sudden the Blackcats had regained the lead while continuing their hopes of a high conference finish.

After an exchange of baskets between Trojan Johnny Isaac and Blackcat Todd Justice, Wheelwright's Tony Hutton once again sunk a key shot, this time pulling the Trojans to within one with just under four minutes remaining in the game.

Prestonsburg, however, had possession and the lead but not for long. With 35 seconds showing on the game clock the Blackcats were nailed for a controversial over and back call which gave control to Wheelwright.

Fifteen seconds later Jones signaled for a timeout to set the strategy for an apparent last shot. With a designed play in mind, the Trojans took the floor for that critical 20-second play that remained.

Tournament Drawings Will Be Aired Live

Drawings for the 1987 Sweet Sixteen High School Basketball Tournament will be aired live on KET, Friday, February 20, at 2:00 p.m. from the KET Network Center in Lexington.

Louisville Courier Journal sports columnist Earl Cox will host the program featuring the coaches from last year's state championship teams drawing for this year's pairings.

David Weedman, who guided the Oldham County girls' basketball team to a state championship last year, will draw for the girls' basketball teams.

Dave Fraley, head coach of the 1986 state boys' basketball champions Pulaski County, will handle the boys' tournament drawings.

The drawings will determine the pairings in the first round of this year's Sweet Sixteen competition. The boys' tournament will be held at Rupp Arena in Lexington March 25-28. Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green will be the site of the girls' tournament March 18-22.

Drawings for the 1987 Sweet Sixteen will be held under the supervision of Kentucky High School Athletic Association Commissioner Tom Mills. The program is a KET production.

Outdoors With Andy... "Bear Sign"

By A.G. SPENCER
Most people, when thinking of the term "bear sign," picture trees with claw marks where the bear sharpened his claws at the same time he was trying to leave an indication of his size as a warning to other bears. Or what about the shiver of fear that pioneers must have felt when finding fresh tracks in the mud outside their homes, or, just as bad, their stock pens?

It was the latter that got me to wondering about bears this past week. I was rabbit hunting in the afternoon when I stumbled onto some fresh tracks across a muddy old logging road. Did that same shiver of fear run up and down my spine? Nope.

Don't misunderstand, now. I'm no braver than the next guy. Nonetheless, I knew that, on balance, black bears are no more dangerous than your average defanged Yorkshire Terrier. That isn't to say that you should crowd a sow with cubs or that you should try to dig into a den in mid-winter. Any wild animal is dangerous when concerned.

After losing the tracks across a rocky, leaf-covered trail, I sat down and pondered whether or not to tell anyone about what I had found. That they were bear tracks was without question. There they were, big as my outstretched hand, with claw marks lying across the ground more than digging into it. Still, mightn't some folks accuse me of tipping a jug or three?

Well, I never could keep something that interesting secret. Turns out that a lot of people have had much closer encounters with local bruins than I have. We're talking about incidents during the last few years, too.

Just a few years ago, a bear allegedly killed a calf belonging to a Sitka resident over in Johnson county. The owner bought shells for his deer rifle and laid out for the cattle killer, but it never showed. By the way, don't try the same, as present laws are such that you are going to be eating prison food for a long, long time if you shoot a bear in this state.

Another bear was hit by a truck just this side of Watermelon Hill in Lawrence county some five or six years back. Apparently, the collision damaged the truck more than it did the bear, the latter being only stunned long enough for the truck driver to chain him to a guardrail. When the authorities arrived, the bear was examined (after being tranquilized), revealing that his ear carried a tag where he had been checked previously by game officials in Elkins, West Virginia. Another bear that was checked in this area is said to have been tagged in North Carolina.

A little bit closer to home, a pair of bruins were live-trapped by the game department some years back right behind the Floyd Funeral Home here. Various other people also reported having seen bears in other incidents. One fellow is even said to have been chased by an irate bear, getting away only by vaulting over a high-wall (not very high, if true), breaking both legs in the process. No corroboration could be found for this last story, however.

Indeed, I would like to point out that most of these tales are word-of-mouth. If you or someone you know can substantiate any of these, or if the local officials of the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Department have any incidents over the last dozen or so years on file, please contact us.

The burning question remains, some eight days after the fact, did the groundhog see his shadow? Most likely. That's how little groundhogs, i.e., "pasture poodles," come about. Seriously, male woodchucks go from den to den in February and March, seeking a little romance to break up the dreary winter.

Chucks reproduce all year 'round, but then, that doesn't have a direct effect on our weather, now, does it? Does the groundhog seeing his shadow on February 2 portend anything meteorological? Well, we did get some snow and hail the following Sunday (we may have gotten more bad weather, but this is being written February 8). Your guess is as good as mine!

Now that you've read this piece and gotten the "bear" facts, here is a corresponding recipe:

BEAR ROAST

Ingredients: a 10 pound roast cut of bear meat, onion salt, paprika, sage, 1/2-quart of water, four beef bullion cubes, one tbsp. Worcestershire sauce, a cluster of garlic cloves, cooking sherry.

Directions: Remove ALL fat from the meat, as bear lard tends to become rancid when heated. Score the surface of all sides on the roast into inch-square patches to permit the juices to run off and to soak in properly. Take the knife that you made shallow scores over the meat with and make shallow punctures in the grooves, three inches apart. Into each one of these place a single clove of garlic. Lightly sprinkle the roast with onion salt, paprika and a very light touch of sage. Into the bottom of a very large roasting pan place 1/2-quart of water, four beef bullion cubes, a generous dash of Worcestershire sauce and, later, cooking sherry. Cook the roast at 250 degrees for five hours, adding the sherry directly to the bottom of the pan after two hours. In lieu of basting, turn the roast over a third of a turn every hour-and-a-half. Make sure the meat is very well done, as it, like pork, frequently carries trichinosis bacteria. A variation on this recipe is to add carrots, potatoes and mushrooms.

Cave Run Muskie

Cave Run Lake can produce good muskie fishing for serious anglers. This was demonstrated by Johnny K. Endicott, of Endicott, with this October 23 catch. The Kentucky Silver Muskie is 38 inches long and weighed nine pounds.

Offer Guidelines For Coping with Emergency

Maxwell House joins forces with the American Red Cross to help their neighbors expect the unexpected.

Are you prepared for the possibility of emergency striking your home? By "expecting the unexpected" to occur, you'll be able to handle the situation—and minimize potential danger.

In an effort to service the American family, Maxwell House Coffee has joined together with the American Red Cross to develop "How to prepare your family for times of emergency," a serious reference book of life-saving recommendations.

The free, 96-page book offers guidelines for emergency preparedness, so "you can prepare yourself for anything and everything." Included is information on dealing with a wide range of specific emergencies such as fires, gas leaks, blackouts, floods, hurricanes and dangers from extreme weather conditions.

During 1986, 43,658 disaster relief incidents occurred, reports the Red Cross. The organization provided individual aid to more than 97,000 American families that were victimized from these incidents.

Many of these incidents occurred in Kentucky and families in this community were assisted with food and clothing.

In addition to the rules-of-thumb for handling specific emergency situations, the book offers pragmatic suggestions for designing your own master plan (to cover all specifics within and outside your home that your family will need to know for times of emergency); what to do before, during and after a disaster; food planning; determining safe drinking water, and preparing a first aid kit.

As part of its commitment to the Red Cross, Maxwell House will launch a national promotion on February 8 to help fund the organization's community programs. On that day, a special coupon (free standing insert) will appear in Sunday newspapers across the country announcing the brand's offer to donate $1.00 for every can/jar of Maxwell House Regular or Maxwell House Instant Coffee sold by March 31, 1987. A grand total of $100,000 can potentially be reaped for the American Red Cross from this effort. On a community level, coffee, percolators and cups will be donated to the local Red Cross Chapter in the name of that area's supermarket. Consumers may obtain a free copy of "How to prepare your family for times of emergency" by sending a Maxwell House proof-of-purchase to: Maxwell House, 888 Seventh Avenue, Suite 2800, New York, NY 10106. The book is also available free with a purchase of Maxwell House Regular and Instant Coffees at participating supermarkets nationwide.

Offer Literacy, GED Instruction

Floyd county residents who want to help in preparing to take the test for the General Educational Development (GED) certificate can sign up for classes offered by the Christian Appalachian Project.

An article published in the Floyd County Times last week noted that the local public schools have spent most of their adult education funds for this year, and thus can't offer much immediate help to county residents who want to overcome their lack of a high school diploma. But classes for adults are available from other agencies in the county, and the Christian Appalachian Project in Martin is one of these.

Sister Gervase Lochotski, the project's adult education teacher, said she currently has about 60 students enrolled in literacy and GED classes, which are held once a week in Martin, Wheelwright, Weeksbury and Salyersville. She also trains volunteers who want to help other people learn to read, and has almost 50 tutors in training now.

The sister said she has plenty of room for new students. Her classes haven't yet experienced any jump in enrollment due to the new state effort to increase the number of Kentuckians who hold high school diplomas or GED certificates.

BLASTING SCHEDULE

This is notice that Coal-Mac, Inc., P.O. Box 3428, Pikeville, Ky., phone (606) 432-0171, Permit No. 836-0178, will be blasting approximately 0.25 miles north of the junction of KY 1426 and Deadenig Fork Road. Blasting will be done daily between the hours of sunrise to sunset. No blasting will be conducted before sunrise or after sunset. At least 10 minutes before the blast access to the area will be controlled by Company personnel. Before each blast is detonated the following type(s) of audible warning will be given: Five minutes prior to blast, 3 short sirens—immediately before blast, 3 short sirens. The all-clear signal(s) after blasting will be: 1 long siren. Blasting will not be conducted at times different from those given except in emergency situations, where rain, lightning, other atmospheric conditions, or operator or public safety requires unscheduled detonation. Prior to these detonations, the following audible warning will be given: Five (5) short sirens prior to blast; all clear signal—1 long siren. Also, prior to these emergency detonations, oral notices will be given to persons within one-half mile of the blasting site.

The preceding notice is published pursuant to CFR 715.19, Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement Provisions and KRS 350.220, and the regulations relating thereto. Kentucky Permit No. 836-0178.

Winners of County Spelling Bee

The Floyd County Spelling Bee was held Tuesday, Feb. 3, 9:00 a.m. at Prestonsburg Elementary. Boys and girls from seventeen schools participated. The winner was Clark Elementary eighth-grader Pamela Tackett, 14, left, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Tackett and the runner-up was Stumbo Elementary eighth-grader Steve Newsome, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Newsome. The three judges were Anna Sue Stumbo, Doris Hyden and Sue Bingham. The pronouncer was Lillian Conley, the statistician Betty Flannery and the supervisor Roberta Davidson. The winners were presented dictionaries from the Board of Education.

Must File Return

If you are eligible for the Earned Income Credit (EIC) for 1986, you must file a Federal income tax return to claim it.

To be eligible for the EIC, you must have had earned income (and adjusted gross income) of less than $11,000 and must have had one or more children living with you for more than six months (the entire year if you are filing as a qualifying widow(er)).

The credit can be as much as $550 and is based on a percentage of your earned income. To qualify, you must file a Form 1040A or Form 1040 even if you are not otherwise required to file an income tax return. If you file as single or married filing separately, you are not eligible for the credit.

Surgery? Ask For A Second Opinion

Some medical problems require surgery if the patient is to survive and, the sooner the operation is performed, the better. However, other medical problems can be treated either surgically or in some other way and, in any event, are not emergencies; in such cases, even if surgery is eventually found necessary, at least there is time for the patient to obtain a second opinion.

Equally competent physicians may differ about the treatment of choice for a particular condition. If the treating physician recommends surgery for a nonemergency condition, a second opinion might be advisable. Medicare pays for second opinions at the same rate it pays for other services.

All surgery—even surgery that is considered to be minor—involves some risk. If both medical and surgical treatment are expected to be equally effective for a condition, medical treatment would be preferred. And even if it develops that medical treatment is not effective, surgery is always an option.

Patients have a right to a second opinion, and good physicians do not object to this practice. It not only helps the patient make an informed decision about the advisability of surgery, it helps reassure the physician that his or her decision was a correct one.

It is, of course, possible that a second physician will disagree with the recommendation of the first physician. If this occurs, the patient can return to the first physician for a more detailed discussion of the problem or may seek a third opinion. In either case, the patient will be in a better position to decide an important question that may literally be a matter of life and death.

A free booklet on surgery, "A Second Opinion", is available at your Social Security office.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Honored by Family

A birthday and anniversary celebration was observed by members of the Cecil family, January 28, at the home at Harold, of Lee and Mae Cecil. The celebration was in honor of Mr. Cecil on his 92nd birthday and also the 72nd wedding anniversary of Lee and Mae Cecil.

Attending the celebration were family members, with four generations present. Those attending were Homer and Faye Cecil and boys, Paula Layne, Billy and Lora Williams, Nick and Kaye Pugh and family, Renee, Tonya and Brian, Debbie and sons, Nathan and Joshua, Donna and Brian Meade, son, Wesley, and daughter, Tiffany, Denise and Stuart Isaac, their daughter, Cora, and husband, Joe Osborne.

The anniversary cake was baked by their granddaughter, Kaye Pugh, and they received many nice gifts.

Ignoring Carseat Law Called Gamble With Children's Lives

Kentuckians gamble with their most precious resource every day. State law requires that young children be restrained while riding in automobiles, but only 30 percent of Kentucky children ride in safety devices, according to a 1986 statewide survey.

"Not using child safety seats or seat belts is a gamble," said Darlene Goodrich of the Department for Health Services, "because a child safety seat can literally make the difference between life and death in an accident."

Goodrich directs the department's child safety seat program operated through local and district health departments. National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week is Feb. 8-14, and officials are emphasizing parental awareness and proper use of safety seats.

Kentuckians have a long way to go, she says, in realizing the importance of using child safety seats, as evidenced by a September 1986 University of Kentucky-Kentucky State Police survey, "1986 Safety Belt and Child Safety Seat Usage Rates in Kentucky."

The survey showed that 30.2 percent of children under age four used either a safety seat or belt in 1986, compared to 29.1 percent in 1985, 30.3 percent in 1984, 24.2 percent in 1983, and 15.4 percent in 1982—the year the safety seat law took effect.

"Obviously the law has made some impact but not nearly enough," she said. "Many parents just don't realize how dangerous it is for children to ride unrestrained in automobiles."

Just how dangerous is it? In a collision, a child held in an adult's arms can be crushed between the adult and the dashboard, studies have demonstrated. Even if the adult wears a seat belt, the child is in danger—the adult can't hold onto the child in collisions at speeds as slow as 30 miles per hour.

Cloth child carriers that are strapped to an adult and allow an infant to rest on the adult's abdomen are dangerous in a vehicle. In crash tests, these carriers rip open at the seams. Also unsafe is an improperly installed safety seat.

Spend A Day With The Billion Dollar Traders

Enter the fortuitous world of high financial speculation and trading on the encore presentation of "The Billion Dollar Day: An Enterprise Special," airing Wednesday, February 25, at 8:30 p.m. on KET.

Travel through the exciting international money markets of the world where billions of pounds, dollars, marks and yen are bought and traded for high profits—or huge losses. "The Billion Dollar Day" shows a risky, but addictive, game of electronic poker accompanied by stress and a potential for huge profits.

In Hong Kong meet William Wong, lured from Citibank by arch-rival Chemical Bank of New York's Hong Kong office. Wong earns "mega-bucks" for himself and his banking concern. However, he can be swept out with the ticker tape at his feet if he makes a bad speculation.

Also featured is speculative Richard Hill who is on the payroll of Barclays Bank/London. His objective is to make hundreds of thousands of dollars in profits for his aggressive and competitive bank.

Finally "The Billion Dollar Day: An Enterprise Special" tours the frenzied world of Rony Schlapfer, a private speculator in New York. Schlapfer is a modern day "hired gun" who works for a syndicate of 13 wealthy investors. They can play his venture game with minimum bids of $500,000 each with hopes of 50 percent or higher investment returns.

"If the seat is not installed properly," said Goodrich, "a child strapped to a seat can fly around in the vehicle during an accident. The added weight of the seat adds more force to the impact."

"It's very simple—absolutely the only safe way for a child to ride in a vehicle is in an approved safety seat."

Goodrich points out that seats made for use in vehicles have a sticker that says the product meets federally-approved highway safety standards. Instructions that accompany safety seats should be followed strictly.

Kentucky has safety-seat loaner programs through health departments in 114 counties. The Department for Health Services is working to expand the program to the state's remaining counties.

"The loaner programs enable low-income Kentuckians to comply with the law," said Goodrich. "Through these programs, we try to make parents aware of the necessity of using the seats and show them how to properly install and use the seats."

Anyone interested in more information about loaner programs should contact Goodrich at (502) 564-2154. Information also is available from local or district health departments.

(1) In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that Branham & Baker Coal Co., Inc., 328 North Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653, has filed a major revision to an application for a permit for a surface coal mining and reclamation operation of approximately 304.5 acres located ¾ miles north of Hippo in Floyd county.

(2) The proposed operation is approximately 0.75 miles south from State Route 850 junction with Pitts Fork County Road and located 0.2 miles south of Reffitt Branch of Pitts Fork of Left Fork of Middle Creek. The latitude is 37° 33' 03". The longitude is 82° 51' 30". The surface area is owned by Maurice Allen, Harrison Shepherd, Bill & Viola May, Taylor Reffitt, and Tiny Hicks.

(3) The proposed operation is located on the Martin U.S.G.S. 7½ minute quadrangle map. The operation used the surface, contour, and auger method of mining. The application also includes a proposed land use change from the steep slope forest land pre-mining land use to a gentle and flat scope hayland and pastureland. Postmining land use (with A.O.C. variance request) on Maurice Allen and Taylor Reffitt. The application includes a proposed method of operation change from area mining to contour and auger mining with a borrow area.

(4) The application has been filed for public inspection at the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Prestonsburg Regional Office, 503 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653. Written comments, objections, or requests for a formal hearing must be filed with the Director of the Division of Permits, 6th Floor, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Ky., 40601.

This is the final advertisement of this application; all comments, objections, or requests for a permit conference must be received within thirty (30) days of today's date.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

BUSINESS MEALS AND ENTERTAINMENT (New Rules for 1987)

Only 80% of business meal and entertainment expenses will be deductible effective for tax years beginning after 1986. That means the new rule applies to you as of January 1, 1987, if you are a calendar-year taxpayer, and it applies to you on the first day of your 1987 fiscal year if you are a fiscal-year taxpayer.

Taxes and tips must be included in the total expense before applying the 20% reduction, and any portion of a business meal that is "lavish and extravagant" must be subtracted before the 20% adjustment.

There are exceptions to the 80% rule; that is, in some cases the expense is 100% deductible. For example, employers will still be able to deduct 100% of the cost of food and beverages for employee parties and picnics, small business gifts of food or beverages, and expenses for samples or promotional items for the general public (such as food samples in a supermarket or tickets given to the first 100 customers).

Where meal and entertainment expense reimbursement is treated as compensation to the recipient, it is fully deductible by the payor. Employers can reimburse employees for 100% of business meal and entertainment costs and take a deduction for 80%. The fully reimbursed employee takes no deduction. During 1987 and 1988, meals that are part of a "qualified banquet meeting" at a business seminar or convention are fully deductible if there's a speaker at the meal, 40 or more people attend, most are away from home, and the cost of the food isn't separately stated.

The new rules apply to all business meals, including those that are part of business travel away from home.

Review the new rules with your accountant and adjust your recordkeeping system as needed. Otherwise, the IRS could lump all expenses into the 80% category and you could miss deductions to which you are entitled.

Wins Conference Award Survey Indicates...

Michelle Watson, 17, a senior at Prestonsburg High School, won first place in the Job Interview competition at the Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) Regional Career Development Conference held at Cumberland College on January 17. She will represent Region VI DECA at the State Career Development Conference in Louisville in March.

Watson is enrolled in a retailing class at the high school and her DECA sponsor is Mrs. Judy H. Combs. She is the daughter of Joe and Gypsy Hicks, of David.

Vo-Ed Programs Should Stress Math, Science, Verbal Skills

Kentucky vocational education programs need to put increased emphasis on math, science, and verbal skills, and there is also a need for more publicity and promotional efforts.

These findings came from a survey made as part of a research and development project, funded by the Office of Vocational Education, Kentucky Department of Education. It was conducted by Ann Visnic and Dr. Ralph O'Brien of Northern Kentucky University.

Titled "Innovative Vocational Education Business Linkages," the project dealt with employer perceptions of vocational students, programs, and services. The study revealed that there is a trend to place responsibility for attitude and interpersonal skills on vocational education, as well as job skills.

Other findings concluded that: "vocational education needs to take the initiative in approaching business and industry;

"traditional linkages—such as co-op programs and representatives from business serving on advisory committees—remain successful.

Regarding employer perceptions, the survey also found that:

*65 percent gave vocational education a positive response.

*75 percent believed that vocational education had a high or exceptional economic value.

*64 percent felt vocational education should prepare students for specific skills.

*More than 40 percent of businesses surveyed indicated they had not been approached by vocational educators—neither for input nor advice.

*95 percent of the employers would hire or consider hiring vocational trainees. In addition, 95 percent had a medium to high level of satisfaction with vocational education trainees.

*Companies expressed interest in working with vocational education as advisory committee members and/or by donating equipment.

Among the recommendations is the creation of a vocational task force to develop an action plan based on issues raised by the study. Another called for development of a linkage model for use throughout the state. A third suggested examining the vocational education curriculum at all levels, and finally, exploring networking possibilities within the business community to develop new dialogue.

More information about the study is available from the Research and Development Unit, Office of Vocational Education, in the Kentucky Department of Education.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Grover Johnson, of Buckingham, express our thanks and appreciation to the many friends and neighbors who showed love and respect to us in our hour of deep sorrow when our loving, husband and father, Grover, was called to rest. We thank everyone who came, gave flowers, food or offered a kind word. A special thank you to the funeral directors. Everyone was so kind. We greatly appreciate the Joppa Regular Baptist Church for all their preaching and kind words. May God bless you, each and everyone.

Grethel Homemakers met on Feb. 2, with Arietta Hall presiding. Devotions were led by Glenna Evans on the topic, "Building Blocks of America."
 The lesson, "Scherenschnitte—the Art of Paper-Cutting," was taught by Floyd Co. Extension Agent Frances Pitts. Each homemaker chose a pattern, supplied by Mrs. Pitts, and made a sample copy.
 April 27-May 1 is the Homemakers' Spring Tour to Williamsburg, Virginia. March 25-26, is the "Fiber, Fabric, Fashion, and Fun Expo." Sewing techniques workshops, and exhibits are planned.
 Homemakers present: Arietta Hall, Brenda Hall, Barbara C. Newman, Shirley Hamilton, Christine Crisp, Glenna Evans, Joyce Collins, and Eileen Martin.

Will Celebrate 60 Years Together

On Sunday, Feb. 15, Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan Crum will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary at their home, 72 North Jackson Street, South Webster, Ohio, with an open house from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Relatives and friends are invited to drop in between those hours to enjoy cake and coffee. No gifts please.
 The couple exchanged nuptial vows at McDowell on Feb. 15, 1927, with the Reverend Andy Friend officiating. Mrs. Crum, 79, is the former Velma Hall, daughter of the late James Emory and Minda Moore Hall, of McDowell. Mr. Crum is a son of the late Hezzie Carr and Nancy Jane Smiley Crum, of Dana. Mr. Crum, 83, worked as a surveyor, coal miner and railroad man. The couple later formed and kept a store, retiring in 1956. They are both over 50 years members of the Beaver Old Regular Baptist Church of Minnie and now attend the Little Ettie Old Regular Baptist Church in Stockdale, Ohio.

After Many Years The Flu Virus Still Eludes Effective Care

By VICKI MOESER
Smithsonian News Service

December 1918. The war to end all wars had just ended, but another, more insidious killer was doing battle around the world. President Woodrow Wilson, the first president to leave American soil while in office, and his entourage probably gave little thought to the danger as they sailed to France to participate in the Paris Peace Conference.

But that was not to change. The conference opened in January, and delegations from all Big Four nations were riddled with outbreaks of a variety of maladies for the next few months. Then, one evening in early April, Wilson began to cough. Walking became difficult and his temperature soared to 103 degrees.

The onset of the president's symptoms was so sudden and so severe that his personal physician initially suspected poisoning. The doctor's eventual diagnosis: influenza. Wilson, who had always been frail, never quite regained his usual state of health after his bout with the Spanish flu.

That worldwide epidemic—a pandemic—was particularly vicious. Scientists theorize that the Spanish flu may have originated in the United States in the spring of 1918. Within four months, the "grippe" rounded the globe, sweeping through Europe, North Africa, India, China and Hawaii. The virus, which spread in three "waves," was unusual in that it struck healthy, able-bodied people between the ages of 20 and 40 as easily as "typical" flu victims—the very young, the very old and those with chronic illnesses.

When the disease subsided in the spring of 1919, 21 million people around the world had died of Spanish flu and complications of pneumonia. In the United States alone, the flu claimed more than a half-million lives from September 1918 to June 1919, more than the combined battle deaths of U.S. troops in World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

That pandemic sparked a frenzy of research that continues today. Though much has been learned about the highly infectious influenza viruses—which may well be the most studied microbes on Earth—ways to stop the bugs from spreading still elude researchers.

A breakthrough in the research came in 1933 when scientists at England's National Institute for Medical Research isolated the tiny influenza virus. (The antibiotic penicillin, which unfortunately has no effect on viral flu, was accidentally discovered a few years earlier in another laboratory in England during related research.)

The deadly virus that touched off the Spanish flu pandemic has never been found—but not for lack of trying. In 1951, a team of scientists ventured to Teller Mission, Alaska, a town which lost half its population during the Great Pandemic. Bodies of victims were exhumed from frozen tundra graves and tissue was taken from lungs and other cold-preserved organs in an effort to find and revive the virus.

Those efforts were unsuccessful, but Dr. William Jordan, Jr., director of the microbiology and infectious diseases program at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md., says that scientists have a pretty good idea what the bug was. "Through serological archaeology—that is, studying the antibodies in the serum of people of different ages—evidence suggests the Spanish flu was a virulent strain of influenza A, similar to one since found only in swine."

One reason the highly infectious flu bug continues to be a problem, according to scientists, is the virus' extreme mutability. "The influenza virus is constantly changing," says Dr. Ramunas Kondratas, a historian of medicine and a curator in the Medical Sciences Division at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History. "It is basically a parasite, entering healthy cells, multiplying and mutating quickly. The ability of the virus to change its surface proteins so rapidly foils the body's attempts to develop immunity. Thus, antibodies—manufactured in response to vaccination or a bout with the disease—are not able to fight the new, mutated virus and they become obsolete. That's how the flu attacks again and again."

Jordan sums it up this way: "About the only thing you can predict about the influenza virus is its unpredictability. A minor change in the influenza virus' two major antigenic proteins, hemagglutinin and neuraminidase, is known as a drift. Drifts occur every few years, preventing us from developing any kind of permanent immunity."

"A major change in the antigenic structure is known as a shift. When a shift occurs, a pandemic is usually the result. The Spanish flu was probably the result of a shift. So were the 1957 Asian flu and the '68 Hong Kong flu."

Officials estimate that last shift cost the United States more than 70,000 lives and $3.5 billion in medical expenses and lost work days.

There are many minor variations of the influenza viruses floating around the world, but there are only three major types of influenza known to science: A, B and C. Influenza A is most widespread and responsible for most pandemics. This season's Taiwan flu falls into this category, and scientists speculate that the pandemic of 1918-1919 was caused by an A virus. Type B also causes epidemics, though less frequently than A, and chiefly among children. Influenza C is found only occasionally and rarely causes serious health problems.

Influenza, which may have gotten its name during a 16th-century outbreak in Italy where the disease was attributed to the influence of the stars, strikes the northern hemisphere mainly during the cold months. Influenza usually begins in November and peaks in February, although the flu bug can and does bite during the summer.

Flu epidemics are prevalent during the winter for a number of reasons. One is that colds (often caused by rhino and corona viruses) are more common, so there is a lot more coughing and sneezing than usual. The influenza viruses, which are extremely contagious, thrive indoors where there is little ventilation and people are crowded together. Dried and cracked nasal passages associated with winter's low humidity seem to be a favored destination for the airborne viruses.

Doctors agree that the best way to avoid catching the flu, especially for people considered at high risk, is a flu shot, a vaccine that induces immunity by artificially stimulating antibodies. Vaccines in the United States are made with inactivated (killed) whole or split viruses. The effectiveness of the vaccination depends on how well the killed virus matches the circulating flu variant.

Live, attenuated (modified) virus vaccines currently used in the Soviet Union are being tested in the United States. "The idea of the live vaccine," according to Jordan, "is to come as close to mimicking the natural infection as possible to get better immunity. This kind of vaccine is administered via the nasal passages in an attempt to stimulate antibodies where the virus enters the body." Jordan is also encouraged by research on the use of interferon as a means to block viral reproduction.

An oral, antiviral medicine has been shown to be effective for prophylaxis against influenza A, but is useless against type B. The drug, amantadine, taken before exposure to the flu, will prevent infection about as well as a vaccine or shorten the duration of the illness and reduce the severity of symptoms by keeping the virus from initiating new growth in the respiratory tract. Amantadine is not for everyone, however. Some people taking the drug have reported side effects such as insomnia and irritability.

Influenza viruses have been found in ducks, horses and swine. Dogs, as well as several other species of birds also harbor the virus, which is antigenically related to human influenza. "As long as there are animal hosts for the disease," the Smithsonian's Kondratas says, "the virus, in one form or another, will continually be transmitted back and forth from animals to humans."

There are two theories to explain how this occurs. One theory holds that, when a virus can no longer spread among humans, it infects the animals. At some future time, perhaps generations later when a population has no antibodies against that strain, it reattacks humans. The other theory proposes that cross-breeding between an animal strain of the influenza virus and a human strain produces a hybrid against which humans have no immunity.

Given the flu virus' unstable characteristics, medical officials offer little hope that the bug will be wiped out anytime soon. "Influenza, while a viral disease, is not like measles or smallpox," Kondratas says. "Those viruses are stable and respond to vaccines that have been instrumental in eradicating, or at least controlling, those and other scourges, while influenza remains one of our last great infectious plagues."

Flu Pandemic Sparked Antiseptic, Paper Industries

The deadly 1918-1919 influenza pandemic—an epidemic of global proportions—not only paved the way for our current understanding of the influenza virus, it also altered aspects of our lifestyle, researchers at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C., say.

For one, the pandemic gave new life to the antiseptic industry, according to Dr. JoAnne Brown, a post-doctoral research fellow in the museum's Medical Sciences Division. "All kinds of wild things happened during the Spanish flu outbreak," says Brown, who is writing a book on the cultural history of cleanliness in the United States. "People carried little bottles of carbolic acid around with them, and when they got on a street car, they sprinkled a ring around their feet, hoping to ward off flu germs. Others sprayed disinfectant in buses and on the streets in futile attempts to kill the virus."

"Youngsters tied camphor bags around their necks, and some cities enforced ordinances requiring citizens to wear gauze face masks in public."

Such behavior isn't uncommon in the face of epidemics, Dr. Ramunas Kondratas, a curator in the Medical Sciences Division, notes. "A major health crisis can push desperate people to try anything, including all kinds of quack therapies."

Brown points out that, after the 1918-1919 flu pandemic, some commercial habits were changed. "In the 1920s," she says, "the paper industry really took off in restaurants. Most soda fountains, for example, quit using glasses and turned instead to paper cups. Shortly after, paper tissues came along, originally intended for use as disposable face cloths. After a consumer survey in the late '20s, however, the manufacturer found that people were using the product in place of cloth handkerchiefs—and thus was born the advertising slogan, "A germ-filled handkerchief is a menace to society."

In addition to his father, he is survived by his wife, Susan Gray Preston; three sons, John Herbert Preston, of Meta, William Douglas and Joseph Blakely Preston, both of Pikeville; three daughters, Sandra Sue Sheldon, of McCombs, O., Wynn Lee Preston, of Findlay, O., and Elizabeth Lynn Preston, of Pikeville; three brothers, Ray Preston, of Brooksville, Fla., Chester Preston, of Pikeville, and Woodrow Preston, of Lexington.

Funeral services were held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 31, at the Justice Funeral Home chapel with the Revs. Glenn Mollette and Charles Elswick officiating. Burial was made in the Johnson Memorial Park, Pikeville. Military rites were observed at the gravesite.

Harry T. Hill

Former Floyd County Clerk Harry T. Hill, of Abbott Creek, died Friday at Riverview Manor Nursing Home following a long illness. He was 91 years old.

During World War II, Mr. Hill served as clerk of the selective service board of Floyd county. A retired farmer, he had owned and operated a general store on Abbott and was a former school teacher. He had also been in the insurance business and worked as an old-age pension case worker. A member of the Baptist Church, he was a Master Mason, member of Zebulon Lodge No. 273, F&AM, and at the time of his death, he was the oldest living past master.

He was a son of the late James K. (Polk) and Samantha Jane May Hill and was born February 4, 1896.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fannie Howard Hill; two sons, Bill F. Hill, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Chester Hill, of New Ellenton, S.C.; a daughter, Hazel Irene Holland, of Hamilton, O.; five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Masonic funeral rites were conducted Saturday evening.

Funeral services were conducted at 2 p.m., Sunday, in the chapel of the Floyd Funeral Home by the Rev. Steve Hopkins. Burial was made in the Hill cemetery on the Abbott road.

In Memory Of

John F. Wallace
Feb. 6, 1984

Three years ago today, the Lord looked down below
He saw your pain and suffering
He said it's time to go

The death angel gently touched you
You softly went to sleep
I stood there my heart breaking
In God's love you would keep
Your memories are so precious
Each and every passing day
I love you oh! so dearly
Since you have gone away.

Sadly missed by your wife Mrs. Pauline Wallace.

Woman Joins Husband, Dogs With Burial in Pet Cemetery

By JACK HICKS
(Reprinted by permission of The Cincinnati Enquirer).

Barney and Jeanette Ellis Kendall were so devoted to their beloved canines, Honey and Ichobod, they wanted to spend eternity with them.

Now Mrs. Kendall, like her husband 10 years ago, is to be buried in the Pines Pet Cemetery near Lebanon, Ohio, where the two Chihuahuas were buried in the early 1970s.

Mrs. Kendall, 74, died Sunday at her Pleasant Ridge home.

Mr. Garnett Kendall, known as Barney, died in 1975, and his body was donated to science. Two years later his cremated remains were interred in the Pines Pet Cemetery.

He was the first human buried there. Cemetery spokeswoman Barbara Thomes said there are four humans buried among the grave of 11,000 dogs and cats.

Human burials must be approved by cemetery officials, and because of space limitations, the bodies first must be cremated, Thomes said.

Laura V. May, Mrs. Kendall's niece who lives in Covington, said Monday that the dogs were a large part of the couple's life. "They had them for many years. They (the dogs) died of old age." "Everyone who knew them knew Ichobod and Honey," May said. The dogs' names always were included on the couple's Christmas cards. Ichobod and Honey were treated very well, in fact pampered, May said. "My aunt would stand over a stove in 120° heat cooking tongue or liver for Ichobod and Honey. These dogs didn't know what dog food was."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kendall requested that their remains be buried in the pet cemetery, May said. The cemetery lot contains room for five burials, and one place is left for May's dog, Poopsy.

Mrs. Kendall was a native of Prestonsburg, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis, and formerly lived in Northern Kentucky. She was retired after 28 years as an operator for the Western Union Co. Other survivors include a niece, Marinelle Donley, Erlanger.

A private funeral service is planned, with cremation to follow. There is no visitation. Allison & Rose Funeral Home, Covington, is in charge of arrangements. Memorials may be made to the Neediest Kids of All.

Although the cemetery lot is available for Poopsy, May said she is considering a freeze-dried process when her own pet's time comes. "It costs $500, but you can keep it right there in the living room," she said.

Hattie Frazier Wright

Hattie Frazier Wright, 95, of State Road Fork, died Sunday at the Riverview Manor Nursing Home following an extended illness.

Born December 25, 1891 in Wise county, Virginia, she was the daughter of the late Liburn and Carolyne Qualls Frazier. She was a member of the Bonanza Free Will Baptist Church and was preceded in death by her husband, Columbus Wright, in 1978.

Survivors include a daughter, Irene Dotson, of State Road Fork; two sons, Austin Wright, of Troy, O., Dewey Wright, of Eaton Rapids, Mich.; two sisters, Nettie Smith, of Sandusky, O., Mellie Allen, of Middle Creek; two brothers, Rube and Willard Frazier, both of Lima, O.; 22 grandchildren and several great and great-great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at 1 p.m., Tuesday, at the Bonanza Free Will Baptist Church with the Revs. J.A. Dickerson and Bobby Joe Spencer officiating. Burial was made in Highland Memorial Park at Staffordsville under direction of the Carter Funeral Home.

Active pallbearers were members of the Middle Creek Volunteer Fire Department.

Honorary pallbearers were Wayne Adams, Danny Adams, Rick Adams, James Wright, Paul Wright, Clyde Wright, George Wright, and Larry Dotson.

Tyler Lee Adkins

Tyler Lee Adkins, infant son of Donnie Wayne and Monica McKinney Akers, of Dana, was stillborn last Wednesday, February 4, at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, in Lexington.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by one brother, Adam Wayne Akers, of Dana; maternal grandparents, James B. and Norma McKinney, of Harold; and paternal grandparents, Deway and Mary Evelyn Akers, also of Dana.

Funeral services were conducted at noon Saturday in the Hall Funeral Home chapel with Rev. Ed Kidd officiating. Burial was made in the Akers cemetery at Prater Creek.

Harold L. Senterfeit

Harold L. Senterfeit, 57, of Emma, died Friday at the Veteran's Administration Hospital in Lexington, following a long illness.

He was born December 12, 1929 at Batesburg, South Carolina, a son of the late Paul and Essie Lee Senterfeit Ward. He was an Army veteran of the Korean War, where he received two Purple Hearts. He was a member of the AmVets, the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post at Prestonsburg, and the Disabled American Veterans, Andy J. Blanton Chapter 18, and was a Kentucky Colonel. He was baptized in the Baptist Church of Batesburg, South Carolina.

He is survived by his wife, Mabel Weddington Senterfeit; a sister, Madge Hallman, of Batesburg, S.C.; two half-sisters, Miriam Ward Quattlebaum, of Leesville, S.C., and Helen Ward Hallman, of Monetta, South Carolina.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Hall Funeral Home chapel with Tincy Crisp and Jack Howard officiating. Burial was made in the Weddington cemetery at Emma.

The D.A.V., Chapter 18, of Auxier, conducted military services at the Hall Funeral Home chapel.

Active pallbearers were Eddie Akers, Ernest C. Burchett, Jack Cobb, Joe David Weddington, Jr., Fred Goble, Eddie Chaffins, Robert Harris and Marvin Goodman.

Honorary pallbearers were David Potts, Joe Weddington, Sr., Dr. Henry Campbell, Taylor Harris, Curt Reed Burchett, and E.K. Sexton.

Hens in America lay enough eggs in a single year to go around the earth 100 times.

Lucinda Slone Janow

Lucinda Slone Janow, 67, of Eastern, died Monday at the Knott County Health Center in Hindman, following a long illness.

She was born September 18, 1919 at Pippa Passes, a daughter of the late Linzie D. and Minerva Slone. Preceded in death by her husband, John Janow, in 1981, she was a member of the Lackey Free Will Baptist Church for 10 years.

She is survived by one daughter, Jearline Slone, of Lackey; one brother, Edward Slone, of Shelby, O.; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted today (Wednesday) at 11 a.m. at the Lackey Free Will Baptist Church with ministers of the church officiating. Burial will be made in the Chandler cemetery at Lackey, under direction of the Hall Funeral Home.

Dewey Banks

Dewey Banks, 87, of Weeksbury, died Friday at the McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital.

He was born February 2, 1900 in Breathitt county, a son of the late Henry and Nancy Banks. A retired miner, he was a member of the U.M.W.A., Local No. 5899 at Wheelwright and a member of the Wheelwright Free Will Baptist Church. His wife, Polly Johnson Banks, preceded him in death in 1984.

Surviving are two sons, Charlie Banks, of Wheatfield, Ind., and Elmer Banks, of Cadillac, Mich.; four daughters, Marie Banks, in Ohio, Sarah Hamilton, Patsy Cesco and Joan Isaac, all of Weeksbury; 15 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at noon, Tuesday, at the Wheelwright Free Will Baptist Church at Bypro with the Rev. Louis Ferrari officiating. Burial was made in the Johnson cemetery at Speight in Pike county.

William Mitchell

William Mitchell, 68, of Dwale, died last Thursday at the Highlands Regional Hospital.

A retired miner, he was a son of the late John Dee and Viola Hall Mitchell and was born May 31, 1918 at Craynor.

He is survived by his wife, Lizzie Hamilton Mitchell; four sons, McKinley Mitchell, of Prestonsburg, Andy, Raymond, and Kines Ray Mitchell, all of Dwale; four daughters, Bertha Hunter, also of Dwale, Frances Adkins, of Kingman, Ariz., Bonnie Lafferty, of Allen, Geneva Stanley, of Clyde, O.; a brother, Andy Mitchell, of Tram; two sisters, Nan Paige and Verde Martin, both of Teaberry; 17 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Nelson-Frazier Funeral Home chapel with Henry Crider and David Garrett officiating. Burial was made in the Newsome cemetery at Craynor.

Park Business Up

In the face of increased tourism competition from surrounding states, Kentucky's state parks increased business by 5 percent in 1986. Each 1 percent increase in sales represents $100,000 in additional revenue for the state.

The most notable increase was in the number of lodge and cottage rooms rented. The number of total units rented rose by over 8,000 or 3 percent.

June Hudson, commissioner of parks, said, "We have experienced an increase in occupancy at our parks due to a more concentrated effort by department employees to attract group business during the winter months."

The number of rounds played at golf courses in Kentucky state parks rose by 14,500 or 7 percent, museum visitations by 21,000 or 8 percent and the number of camping sites occupied jumped by 5 percent.

"The cool, clear weather during the autumn of 1986 enhanced the colors of the fall foliage, attracting more visitors to our parks," noted Hudson.

The secretary of the Tourism Cabinet, G. Wendell Combs, said, "These increases in business are due in part to lower gasoline prices and the improved economy in Kentucky and the surrounding states."

Garrett Elem. Enters Governor's Cup Comp

Garrett Elementary School will participate in the second annual Governor's Cup Competition sponsored by the Kentucky Academic Association.

The Governor's Cup Competition is a three-tiered academic competition conducted on the district, regional, and state levels featuring both the middle grades (6-8) and high school (9-12) divisions. Over 500 schools are participating in the event this year.

District competition involving 10,000 students is scheduled for February 14, at 122 schools throughout the state. Over 4,600 students will advance to the regional competition on February 28. (The sixteen regions reflect the same geographical boundaries as the KHSAA basketball regions.) The state competition in Louisville on March 15-16 will culminate in a school receiving the prestigious Governor's Cup. Teams and individual winners will also be recognized for their achievements.

The Governor's Cup Competition features four categories of competition. Team events include quick recall and creative expression/future problem solving; individual events are written assessment and English composition.

The Garrett school will participate in the 58th District competition on Feb. 14 at Paintsville High School. The following students will represent the school:

Quick Recall: Johnny Slone, captain, Kevin Wallace, Heather Watson, and Robby Sexton. Mathematics: Robby Sexton, Stacy Moore, and Rodney Slone. Science: Hank Slone, Johnny Slone, and Kevin Wallace. English Composition: Regina Crager, Myra Patton, and Rebecca Isaac. Creative Expression: Johnny Slone, Kevin Wallace, Heather Watson, and Alesia Howard. Social Studies: Jameson Martin, Amy Patton, and April Reed. Language Arts: Heather Watson, Angela Moore, and Tonya Goble. Quick Recall Alternates: Hank Slone, Tonya Shepherd, Diane Martin, and Dannette Slone.

The students are coached by Stanton Watson, Helen Martin and Patricia Martin.

Scientists Involved In Nazi War Crimes?

German scientists put the first American man on the moon; did they also help commit Nazi war crimes?

"The Nazi Connection," a "Frontline" documentary, airs Thursday, February 26, at 9:00 p.m. on KET. The program examines the war records and Nazi activities of some of these German scientists, and the role of American officials who brought them to the United States to work on the rocket program.

Slave labor was used to build the underground Nazi rocket facility at Nordhausen, Germany. Rocket scientist Wernher von Braun frequently visited the factory and scientist Arthur Rudolph was chief of production there. Both had knowledge of the use of concentration camp inmates.

While both von Braun and Rudolph deny responsibility for working conditions at Nordhausen and the nearby concentration camp, Dora, at least 20,000 inmates died of starvation, fatigue, illness and outright murder.

At the war's end, American scientist Robert Staver was ordered by the U.S. Army to find the German scientists before the Russians did. When they are finally discovered, he recommended to the Pentagon that von Braun and 100 members of his team be rushed to the U.S. "It was kept very hush-hush," said Staver.

Von Braun and his team were decorated as heroes, living in the U.S. for 30 years, untroubled by the past. But in 1979, the Justice Department established an office to investigate and deport Nazi war criminals. In 1984, the U.S. Government threatened to prosecute Arthur Rudolph, former head of production of the Saturn 5 rocket, for Nazi war crimes at Nordhausen. He relinquished his citizenship and returned to Germany, where he was interviewed for "Frontline."

"Frontline" is produced by a consortium of public television stations: KCTS/Seattle, WGBH/Boston, WNET/New York, WPBT/Miami and WTWS/

Stress Of Handicaps Is Conference Topic

Parents, educators and others will learn how to cope with the stress of dealing with a handicapped child at the Bluegrass Parent-Professional Conference on Children with Handicaps on April 4 and 5 at the Executive Inn in Louisville.

Legal rights of parents, financial planning, sibling relationships, early intervention, transition programs and related services are some of the subjects to be discussed. John and Cindy Burd, parents of a handicapped child and the coordinators of Colorado's parent conferences, will speak at noon Saturday. On Sunday, Carol Inman of the national special education office in Washington, D.C., will discuss "Where Do We Go From Here?"

For information about costs, registration and financial assistance, call Sandy Stetson, Office of Education for Exceptional Children, Kentucky Department of Education, at (502) 564-4970, or Dr. Denzel Edge, University of Louisville, at (502) 588-6421.

The BOX SEAT
 Recovering, finally, from Super Bowl's super hype

By Marty Linehan

Before last month's Super Bowl XXI, the six winning quarterbacks of the last six Super Bowl games had first names that started with the letter "J": Jim Plunkett (twice), Joe Montana (twice), Joe Theismann and Jim McMahon. We got that important information from a local sportscaster broadcasting from California two nights before the big game.

That's the kind of stuff the Super Bowl reporters were down to. At least it wasn't another stupid question, like the one asked Giants' tight end Mark Bavaro: "If you were 10 years older, what would your thoughts be on the Vietnam War?"

There were too many reporters, not enough ballplayers and too much time to ask too many questions. There were roughly 2,500 journalists, including 500 from CBS, the network that televised the game. And they had all week to think up wild questions to ask the 90 ballplayers (45, actually, since half the 90 players weren't asked anything).

And everyone wanted to get into the act. It's such a good deal for the writers that even disc-jockey types tried to get a week in the sun, complete with free meals, the Super Bowl party and a free NFL gift.

It was a far cry from Super Bowl I, when one-on-one interviews were possible and the National Football League was begging for headlines and TV spots. There was a grand

Teri Austin is doing what she always wanted to do

By Lynn Hoogenboom

Teri Austin no longer finds herself glancing nervously at "Knots Landing" scripts when they come in.

Teri Austin

"This season I have a contract," she says with a laugh. "Now I open the script and say, 'Where am I?' Not 'Am I?'"

Austin, of course, plays Jill Bennett, the young lawyer with whom Gary Ewing (Ted Shackelford) has fallen in love on the popular CBS Thursday-night soap. Before arriving in Los Angeles, Austin, 27, did Canadian theater, television and radio, but she had never worked on a soap.

"Initially, I found it very difficult," she says. "I would get sentences that said things like, 'You know what I mean,' and I wouldn't know what I meant. I would go to the writers and say, 'Please tell me what I mean.' Now I've gotten used to playing things a little ambiguously, and it actually makes it pretty interesting."

In Canada, she subsidized her acting by co-hosting the Canadian TV show "Thrill of a Lifetime," which offered to fulfill viewers' fondest desires — like playing hockey with Wayne Gretzky, for instance.

"We would arrange whatever their thrill was," says Austin, "then we would interview them. It was all off-the-cuff, and even though we taped, we rarely stopped the tape, so it was like doing a live show. They would always give me the interviews with the people who were, like, comatose. I would say, 'Here we are with ...,' and I would look over and their eyes would be glazing over, and it would be like they were on Mars. I would say things like, 'You had a good time on your thrill, didn't you?' just trying to get them to nod. But the show allowed me to go off, work in theater and make my $1.98 a day."

Acting is what Austin always knew she wanted to do. "I like being other people," she says. "When I got old enough to know, I thought, 'Well, either I'll be crazy or I'll be an actor.'"

"When I was a kid, I'd be downstairs watching Fred Astaire movies. Remember that movie where he tilted that chair over and walked on it? Well, I'd be practicing, and you'd hear the furniture crashing downstairs. And my mother would say, 'What is going on down there?'"

"If I can keep working as an actress for the rest of my life and never do anything else but this, I'll be very happy."

Search Is On For Miss Floyd County

The Prestonsburg Junior and Senior Women's Clubs have begun their search for Miss Floyd County 1987. This year's pageant, called "Springtime on Parade," will be held Saturday, April 18, at Prestonsburg High School. It is open to female residents or students attending school in Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Morgan or Knott counties who are between the ages of 17 and 26 and have never been married.

The pageant is a franchised preliminary for the Miss Kentucky pageant. Contestants are judged on talent, a personal interview, and their presentation in evening gowns and bathing suits. The winner will receive a scholarship, a wardrobe from area merchants, and an expense-paid trip to Louisville for the Miss Kentucky competition. Runners-up also will receive scholarships.

Anyone interested in more details may contact April Adams at 886-8922 or Robin Smith at 886-2597 after 6 p.m. Entry deadline is March 6.

A layer of paper toweling in the vegetable compartment of your refrigerator will absorb excess moisture.

Disabled Vets Present Flag

Mothers of Multiples Schedule Convention

The Taylor County Mothers of Twins Support Group in Campbellsville, will be the host of the 1987 Kentucky Mothers of Multiples State Convention on Saturday, March 21 at the Cumberland House Family Restaurant in Campbellsville from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

If you are a mother of twins or multiples and would like more information about the convention, you may write to the Taylor County Mothers of Twins Support Group, c/o Sheila Lobb, 102 Twin Creeks Rd., Campbellsville, Ky. 42718, before February 20. Wayland Council Meets

The Wayland City Council has voted to hold its meetings on the first Saturday of each month at 12 noon at the city hall. The meetings had been held on Sundays at 6 p.m., but this proved to be inconvenient for the public and for city council members. First meeting under the revised schedule was held February 7.

CPR Courses Offered

Railroad Commission Lists Floyd Projects

The Kentucky Railroad Commission has four projects targeted for immediate action in Floyd county—a cleanup of garbage dumping on Oklahoma Creek on property owned by C & O Railroad, repair of the grade crossing at Cliff, additional work for the grade crossing at Dwale, and the installation of a new grade crossing at Price—according to Raymond Douglas Kirk, attorney and spokesman for the commission.

According to Kirk, "notices have been sent to county officials requesting their joint cooperation and directives have been forwarded to C & O Railroad specifying the work to be performed."

The cleanup on Oklahoma Creek will be a major project and will require the cooperation of the county attorney, commonwealth attorney, fiscal court, and the railroad commission, Kirk said.

Kirk added that a hearing will be conducted on February 12, in Frankfort, at 10:30 a.m. regarding the installation of a new grade crossing at Price. The public is invited to attend.

"Boogers, Spooks & Scares: An Oral History"

By A.G. SPENCER

So far in this column, we have examined some very specific events in this region's history since the arrival of the white man. However, there is more to the background of a people than battles fought and schemes gone awry. Perhaps one of the strongest areas of identity for eastern Kentuckians lies in our tall-tales and oral history.

Surely everyone can remember at least a few occasions when the power went off. With a terrific thunderstorm raging violently outside, candles are lit and stories are passed down from one generation to the next. During the spinning of these yarns, children huddle close by in the floor at the feet of the story-teller. Or perhaps they perch on a couch with their feet drawn up for protection. Regardless, you can be sure that they sit wide-eyed and spellbound.

In rural regions such as this, most tall tales gravitate around the animals and customs of the land. One such type of tale concerns snake-handling. My great-uncle used to tell about a preacher who hired local boys to poke at the sacred serpents for a long time in order to tire them. No mention was made as to how this might disillusion the regard in which these young fellows held organized religion.

At any rate, there was apparently enough of the devil in them to decide that things might get really interesting, as well as resolve whatever religious doubts the boys harbored, if the snakes weren't exercised before the sermon but were instead allowed to enter the fray fresh and rested.

As both the service and the temperature inside the stuffy old church got hotter, possibly from the preacher's fire and brimstone sermon, the preacher felt moved to handle the snakes. When he drew one big cane rattler from the box, it attempted to strike him. Frightened, the preacher tossed the even more frightened reptile onto the audience, whereupon some real movement began.

The members of the congregation who were alertly paying attention to the sermon saw the snake coming and ducked out of the way, nearly trampling their brethren in the process. In a matter of seconds, even those sleeping in the pews had emptied out through the door.

A very old preacher in the county confirms the stories of snake handling, claiming to have been a practitioner himself in his younger days. He went on to say that he had been preaching a revival one evening when the spirit moved him to take the serpent out of the closed box he kept it in right next to the pulpit. He handled the snake for some time while he continued to work his sermon up to a fever pitch. After the snake had been passed through the congregation without incident, the snake was put safely away.

Later that evening, exhorted by his parishioners to handle the serpent again, the preacher did, only to get severely bitten and nearly die. When he recovered, some local folk asked the reverend why he was bitten the second time but not the first, if indeed it was faith that protected them all. The preacher replied that when he had handled the snake the first time, he did so because the spirit of God bade him to do so. The second time, he did so only because the people wished him to, and God was not behind that action. This incident, he claimed, clearly demonstrated the need to have God in every facet of your life.

Not all candlelight tales revolved around snake handlers. Over on Salt Lick there persisted a rumor of ghostly activity. One of the farmers there had a small mule that used to work pulling carts in the mines. One night around ten o'clock, a young courting couple actually saw a ghost chasing the donkey down the dirt road. The poor animal seemed to be terrified half out of its wits, braying and making all sorts of weird, unearthly noises.

The aforementioned scene so frightened the young couple that the young man fled for home and the girl, faint from having witnessed the strange spectacle, was barely able to support herself to get into the house. No explanation for this happening was ever uncovered. Odder still, the man's unabashed cowardice didn't cool the ardor of his young lady, who later married him. At the time of this writing, they have been wed for 51 years.

There have also been some inexplicable events up around Right Beaver Creek. A rare phenomenon appeared there about 1901, when the area was still sparsely settled. My great-grandfather was one of many witnesses to an apparition of a small baby dressed in white floating through the night air. A year or so went by with people crossing the creek together, as they were frightened and seeking protection.

Later that next year, a man killed a white owl while 'coon hunting, and all appearances of the baby in white ceased. That would seem to provide an explanation, except for the fact that none of the people who witnessed the apparition drank, and all but two of the throng were regular church-goers.

Until next week, health!

Illiteracy Can Pose Problem For Patients

Approximately 400,000 adults cannot read in the state of Kentucky, and one out of three adults is functionally illiterate. Kentucky ranks lowest in literacy of all the states.

Literacy has nothing to do with intelligence. Many people who cannot read are highly intelligent, have incredible coping skills, and have excellent memories. They just have never learned to read. Reading classes for adults are held throughout the county in the daytime and evening. For information on classes, call 886-8811.

Literacy and health are interrelated. Doctors and pharmacists are sensitive to illiteracy, and can label medications by numbers and can color code pills. By being made aware that the patient may have trouble reading, the doctor or pharmacist can adjust to the patient's needs and can be very thorough in explaining the medications.

Able to read or not, all patients should ask their doctor or pharmacist questions if they do not understand their medication or treatment. When purchasing over the counter drugs, people who cannot read should ask assistance from their pharmacist to help them pick out the correct medication. Taking medication in the wrong dosage could lead to serious health problems.

P-burg, Paintsville View Joint Industrial Effort

"Economic development is long past coming, and I think we need to take a serious look at this," said councilor William O. Goebel, III at Monday's City Council meeting about an ordinance creating a joint industrial development authority between Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

Mayor Ann R. Latta, who is spearheading the idea with Paintsville Mayor Robert Wiley, said that both cities would benefit regardless of where the new industries or businesses are eventually located.

The ordinance states that the cities are "mutually desirous of promoting and aiding in the development of real properties located between the boundaries for continued growth and improvement." The purpose of the authority would be to "aid in the acquisition, retention, and development of land for industrial and commercial purposes, parks and subdivisions."

The council heard the first reading of the ordinance and welcomed the proposal. The mayor now plans to consult with First Commonwealth Bank President Burl Wells Spurlock and other business leaders before appointing three members for the six-member authority. Members will serve a four-year term.

County Attorney David A. Barber appeared at the council meeting in an effort to work out a solution to a city fire code violation in the county annex building. County officials are presently storing large tires in a main floor hallway, and while Barber concedes that the tires are technically in violation of the fire code, he said the building is a concrete structure and that the exits—fire doors—are cleared.

"If the situation presented an actual health or safety hazard we would be the first to remove them," Barber said later, "but since it's just a technical violation we would appreciate it if we could store them there to prevent them being stolen."

Fire Chief Thomas A. Blackburn, however, took issue with the county attorney's position. "They're in violation of state law. Those tires need to be moved," he said. According to Blackburn, a five-gallon can of kerosene was also found in the building. He said if the tires ever caught fire they would produce a black toxic smoke that would rise and trap the people on the floor above. "They would be dead before we ever got to them," he said. "The cost of lives far exceeds the cost of tires stolen by county employees."

Councilor Thomas J. Tackett warned the council against handcuffing the city fire officials from carrying out their jobs and said the fire code should be enforced regardless of whether it is a house, bank, school, or public building. Councilor Goebel called for cooperation in order to solve the problem.

The city is currently losing $1,500 a year on its city-wide parking operation, and the council discussed ways to make parking in downtown Prestonsburg more cost-effective. Councilor William R. Callihan is studying the costs of repairing and replacing meters. The council also questioned the practice of granting free parking to jurors in the municipal parking lot, and asked City Administrator Fred A. James to investigate whether the city can't be reimbursed by the state for the lost revenue.

Mayor Latta announced that she has approved a recommendation by the Park Board and appointed board member Ralph Little director of Archer Park. C. Richard Clark will replace Little on the board.

"WHERE REVIVAL IS HAPPENING."

CARD OF THANKS
At this moment of our deep sorrow in having lost one of our beloved, a most kind and sincere man, a true friend and neighbor, a man of religious principles, and above all, a most cherished husband, father, grandfather, and always the shining star to everyone in his family.

We extend our most sincere thanks and words of appreciation to all of you: friends, neighbors, Martin Methodist Church and members, Rev. Mabry Holbrook, Rev. Ted Shannon, the singers, those who prepared the grave, for sending flowers, food, for the comforting of words, and to the Hall Funeral Home for its kind and efficient services.

Our deepest gratitude is sincerely given to Dr. Lowell Martin and staff at Our Lady of the Way Hospital for the kind and tender care they gave to our dearly beloved. Our special thanks to Sr. Margaret Jacobs, Joann Rudder, Waneta Newsome, RN, Sr. Judy Elder, Amy Pritt, and Evelyn Martin for the loving care given to our loved one during his sickness.

FAMILY OF SANFORD OUSLEY

The Northern Kentucky Easter Seal Center at Covington provided rehabilitation services to 3,315 children and adults this past year.

These praying hands are a symbol for love, consideration, unselfish sacrifice, and true and loyal friendship. Berlie Samons was a living example of each of these.

The family expresses their deepest appreciation for the cards, flowers, phone calls and visits each of you made; nothing could eliminate the grief, but your support helped in easing the pain. We also thank the fourth floor nurses at Pikeville Methodist Hospital, Respiratory Therapists, and Drs. Jerry King and Bill Tom Fannin for their special health care, the Hall Funeral Home, the Cole Springs Baptist Church, and the ministers: John George Blackburn, Ted Shannon, Bee Johnson, Banner Mann and Billy Jones.

Martin Without Water 24 Hours After Main Broken by Road Work

WHEN THE TOWN OF MARTIN was left without water for 24 hours after a eight-inch water main was broken during Ky. 80 road work, the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad began delivery of bottled water as shown above at Our Lady of the Way Hospital.

Martin was without water for 24 hours after a backhoe operator working to repair a collapsed section of KY 80 severed an eight-inch water line, around 4:30 p.m. Friday. The water was not restored until 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

The water main, part of Martin's newly-installed water system, had not yet been added to highway engineering maps, according to Charles Reichenbach, the state Highway Department's district construction engineer. The maps showed only a four-inch line, about 25 feet from where the repair crew was working.

The mishap occurred while a London Bridge Company crew was working to repair a section of new KY 80 which collapsed into a Buck's Branch railroad tunnel last October. The London, Ky. firm has a $1.2 million contract to repair the highway.

While some city officials accused the company of leaving the job without telling them about the break, London Bridge president Bill Howard said his workers did not leave until Martin officials told them city utility workers would repair the break.

Utility worker Barry Risner said that by the time city workers agreed to repair the line they did not have much choice, since most of the London Bridge crew, including the backhoe operator, had left the scene.

He and fellow worker Bill Hackworth arrived on site soon after residents began reporting falling water pressure. The London Bridge crew acknowledged they had broken the main while digging a ditch to drain water from their worksite, Risner said. "We figured they'd fix it back since they were the ones who tore it out," he said.

By the time they had consulted with Mayor Pro Tem Earrit Hayes and returned to the scene, however, all but the repair crew foreman and one other worker had gone home, Risner said. "The foreman said they'd pay for it we fixed it," Risner said.

Risner said city officials had not warned the London Bridge crew of the existence of the eight-inch water main because no one knew they would be digging in that area. The damaged main brings water over Bucks Branch from Prestonsburg Utilities' Middle Creek line. The break caused all the water to drain from Martin's 200,000-gallon tank, Risner said.

Some residents hauled water from the homes of friends and relatives served by the Beaver Elkhorn Water District. A 500-gallon water tank was set up at Our Lady of the Way Hospital by Allen Volunteer Fire Department and the local Office of Disaster and Emergency Services, and water coolers were brought into the hospital from Hall Funeral Home, which is on the Beaver Elkhorn system.

Assistant Chief Robert Comstock said the Martin Volunteer Fire Department filled its tankers Friday night from Beaver Creek and asked the Allen, Prestonsburg, and Maytown fire departments to keep their tankers full in case of a fire in Martin. No fires broke out during the water emergency, however.

Another View

Poor bleeding-heart Mary Lou Hauck of the Kentucky Coalition Against the Death Penalty; my heart pumps swamp water for her and her cause. If one or more of her family were gruesomely murdered, she would change her tune and be instigating a lynch mob.

Hauck's statement that people escape the death penalty because they are more privileged, have more money or influence, or have a more capable or less-burdened defense attorney is rhetoric baloney and a cop-out.

Persons convicted of a capital crime deserve the death penalty. Those that can't afford an attorney are appointed very capable defense attorneys or are represented by the ACLU, which is the alma mater for most criminal defense lawyers.

The millions that Hauck says are spent on the system perpetuating the death penalty would multiply 50 times over if the death penalty were abolished. Each individual tax dollar would be spent educating a murderer so that he or she would be more clever the next time they blow somebody's brains out or amuse themselves by stabbing and dismembering some elderly person. If a person murders, and his or her impoverished upbringing, or drug related background is attributed to the cause, 95 percent of that cause would have never existed if bleeding-hearts like Hauck stopped dreaming up social programs that encourages the "impoverished" to sit in idleness and dream up more ways to rape society.

Where Does Fault Lie?

Wednesday, January 28, an excellent program was aired on KET. Then the following morning, the Lexington Herald-Leader carried an article on alcohol, drug abuse, quoting Governor Collins.

Teen-age alcohol and drug abuse, teen-age pregnancy, suicide and school drop-out concerns were presented in a very frightening way. Does this mean we parents are failing in the upbringing of our children?

During Governor John Y. Brown, Jr.'s tenure of office, Prestonsburg had meetings at our library dealing with the teen-age alcohol and drug abuse situation. This group met regularly for two years, but is a sad fact that our schools, businesses, and majority of our citizens were not interested enough to try and help.

Where does the fault lie? How much do we love our children?

Sugar And Your Dental Health

(Second of three-part series on preventive dental health care presented by Kentucky Mountain Dental Hygienists' Association.)

It is common knowledge that sugar adversely affects dental health. But it is a common misconception that only white and brown sugar, sucrose, is dentally harmful.

Dental researchers now know that all types of sugars can promote tooth decay. These sugars include sucrose, fructose (fruit sugar), glucose, lactose (milk sugar) and maltose (grain sugar).

The sugar in foods mixes with plaque, a thin, sticky, colorless film of bacteria that constantly forms in the mouth. This combination creates an acid that attacks tooth enamel and causes decay.

Viet Vets Organize

Vietnam veterans are invited to organize a Floyd county chapter of Vietnam Veterans of America, a national organization aimed at promoting the veterans' image and welfare, at a meeting scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 18, at the National Guard Armory, beginning at 6:30 p.m. Glen Coleman, chairman of the Kentucky Council of Vietnam Veterans, will be there, as will Claude Ratliff, veterans employment representative with the local Department of Employment Services office. Call 886-1341 and leave your name with Peggy.

It would be difficult to eliminate all foods containing sugar from your diet, since the nutrients found in these foods are essential to your health.

The object is to eat retentive (or sticky) sugars less frequently and not throughout the day. Learn to use foods that contain sugars wisely.

To help you do that, the Kentucky Mountain Dental Hygienists' Association offers the following low-sugar recipe:

- FRUITY YOGURT SHAKE
- 1/2 cup fresh fruit (strawberries, blueberries, peaches)
  - 3/4 cup plain yogurt
  - 1 1/2 tsp. honey, if needed
- Puree fruit in blender (strain out seeds if necessary). Add yogurt and honey to pureed fruit and blend again. Makes one large shake.

Take Regional Honors In Academic Showcase

Two Allen Central High School students were among the top finishers in the second round of the Sweet Sixteen Academic Showcase held Saturday at Morehead State University. In the regional competition, Kathi Keen won first place in two-dimensional art and Serena Thornsbury was first in creative writing. They will go on to the finals in Lexington, March 25-28.

AIR FORCE GRADUATE

Airman Brian E. Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald R. Hall, of Garrett, has graduated from Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. He is a 1984 graduate of Allen Central High School.

Know All The Facts Before Leasing Car

In the past few years, automobile dealers and manufacturers have been leasing more and more cars to consumers. Before you decide to lease rather than buy your next car, however, there are some basic guidelines you should be aware of, according to Attorney General David L. Armstrong.

"The attraction of leasing is that no down payment may be required from the consumer and the monthly payment can be less than the monthly payment to purchase," Armstrong said. "For those on a tight budget, the advantages of no down payment and smaller monthly payments can be worthwhile. However, it is also important to consider what happens at the end of the lease."

Advertisements for automobile leases are regulated by Regulation M of the Federal Truth in Lending Act. The purpose of the regulation is to assure that specific leasing terms are disclosed so that consumers can compare leasing programs and make an informed decision whether leasing is the best option.

The federal law requires that, whenever one or more of three certain types of terms are listed in a lease ad, known as "triggering terms", then the ad must also contain five specific disclosures.

Triggering terms are:
 *The amount of any payment, such as $200 per month;

*The number of payments required, for example, "48 month lease";

*A statement that any or no down payment, or other payment, is required at the beginning of the lease, such as "no money down" or "only $200 will put you in one of our new cars";

The presence of any of the basic triggering terms requires all five of the following disclosures:

*A statement that the transaction is a lease;

*The total amount of any payment, such as a security deposit or down payment, required at the beginning of the lease, or that no such payment is required;

*The number, amounts, due dates, or periods of scheduled payments under the lease;

*Whether the customer has the option to purchase the car at the end of the lease, and at what time and price, or provide a method for determining the end of lease purchase price; and,

*A statement of the amount (or the method of determining the amount) of any liabilities the lease imposes on the consumer at the end of the lease term, such as exceeding maximum mileage or the difference between the estimated value and the realized value of the car at the end of the lease.

The law also requires that you be told certain terms of the lease, including what kind of insurance you need; any express warranty; any penalty for default or late payment, and conditions for canceling the lease.

"If you decide to lease," Armstrong said, "it is advisable to shop around for the best price and terms." Remember, before you agree to a lease, the law requires that you get a written statement of its cost including advanced payments; number, amounts, and dates of regular payments; the amount you must pay for license, registration, and taxes and any other fees, such as maintenance."

For more information, contact the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, 209 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Crippling strikes one family in five, according to the Easter Seal Society. The Society, which conducts a year-round program of direct rehabilitation services through its affiliates nationwide, is supported mainly by gifts and contributions.

Health Tips For Better Breathing

By Ron Hall, R.T., Lyda Ward, R.T., and Gwen Hall, P.R. Consultant.

Our Lady of the Way Hospital
 Eastern Kentucky's well-known respiratory diseases can't all be avoided. But here are some precautions which can help you breathe more easily.

ASTHMA occurs when the airways in the lungs spasm, thereby restricting the flow of air. These attacks are spontaneous and usually of short duration. Anyone suffering from this condition, especially children, should avoid emotional trauma, stress, cold drafts, pollens, and anything to which you may be allergic.

PNEUMONIA is an inflammation of the lungs. There are several types but the two most common are viral and bacterial. A viral pneumonia will usually run its course in a few days unless it is influenza-based or the person is already weak from a different health problem. Bacterial pneumonia is more serious and often follows another infection of the lungs.

There is no such thing as "walking pneumonia." Any pneumonia should be taken seriously and treated by a physician.

CHRONIC OBSTRUCTIVE PULMONARY DISEASE (COPD) covers a wide range of diseases and complications, such as emphysema, asthma, bronchiectasis and chronic bronchitis. These are chronic diseases, meaning they are conditions with which an individual has lived for some time. The following precautions can help keep a chronic condition from becoming an acute one.

Avoid smoking or any irritant that may cause you difficulty. If you live in an area where there is a large amount of smoke or pollutants in the air, then stay indoors and keep your windows closed. If you have guests in your home who smoke, don't be afraid to ask them to refrain from doing this if it causes you problems.

When venturing outside in cold weather, cover your mouth and your nose; cold air causes infection in the lungs, and in some instances, might produce asthma attacks.

If you use oxygen in your home, follow your doctor's orders. The popular belief is that if a little is good for you, then a lot is better. In this case, it's not true! If you turn your flow rate higher than ordered, you could cause your condition to become much worse... FOLLOW YOUR DOCTOR'S ORDERS!

COAL WORKERS' PNEUMOCONIOSIS (CWP-known here as Black Lung) is caused by inhaled dusts which cause changes in the lungs. CWP has COPD-like qualities and can be treated similarly. Prevention of further exposure or removal of oneself from the dust-laden environment can lead to improved breathing. This works even in the latter stages of this disease!

The COMMON COLD is a respiratory illness familiar to all of us. Symptoms vary from a tickle or scratchy feeling in the throat to a stuffy nose and general fatigue. Thin mucous will usually be excreted by the nose. Rest and fluids (for lung hydration) are the best remedies. Additional treatment can include aspirin, nasal sprays and cold tablets if they are used according to the directions; misuse can cause undesirable side effects.

The common cold is generally harmless, but it can lead to more serious complications such as pneumonia. So treat a cold like a visit from an obnoxious relative—the stay should be no longer than absolutely necessary!

These precautions should be coupled with good health habits. Anytime you

Check Credentials

Persons posing as employees of the Internal Revenue Service occasionally attempt to harass taxpayers or collect money for what the imposter claims are unpaid taxes, the IRS says.

Taxpayers should request to see the credentials of any individual claiming to represent the IRS. Every IRS employee who makes contact with the public is required to carry distinctive identification and must show this when conducting official business. Generally, taxpayers who owe money to the IRS will receive written notification before being contacted in person.

Kentucky taxpayers who doubt the validity of the credentials offered or the identity of telephone callers can verify the person's employment by calling collect the IRS' Internal Security Division in Louisville at (502) 582-5298.

If no answer at the local number, call the Office of Regional Inspector in Cincinnati collect at (513) 684-3564.

Paratroopers, Glider Pilots Are Sought

The 82nd Airborne Division Association, composed of men and women who have served as paratroopers and glider pilots in airborne units during and since World War II, is conducting a national membership drive to locate troopers eligible for membership. If you served as airborne, contact Shirley R. Gossett, National President, 5459 Northcutt Place, Dayton, Oh. 45414, for details of the Association as well as information about the 41st annual Convention, to be held at Astro-Village, Houston, Texas, August 22-24, 1987.

PTA Article Discusses Stress In Children, Means of Relief

Many adults lead stressful lives, but children experience stress, too. In fact, adults often create the situations that cause stress for children.

The February issue of PTA Today, the National PTA's magazine, describes how parents may cause stress in their children's lives, the symptoms children experience, and ways to relieve that stress.

"A certain amount of stress in our lives is inevitable and actually valuable," according to Karen Bauer, assistant professor and director of early childhood and elementary education at Villa Maria College, Erie, Pa.

Bauer believes children and adults experience and react to stress in similar ways. However, when it comes to understanding and controlling stressful situations, children and adults differ. An adult can recognize the physical symptoms indicating stress, but children only know they don't feel well. And while adults are able to identify and comprehend what's causing stress, children may not be mature enough to understand the stressors affecting them.

Parents certainly do not intend to cause children stress, but sometimes their attitudes toward or about children create stressful situations. In PTA Today Bauer says, "Well-meaning, loving parents often put their children before all else. While their intentions are commendable, the reality of such a situation creates problems." Also, many parents decide that their children will be all the things they never could become. In an effort to please a beloved parent, the child may take dance lessons or participate in sports. "Fear of disappointing a parent coupled with lack of interest is a heavy burden for a child," says Bauer.

The author believes signs such as bed-wetting, stuttering, nail biting, irritability, nervous twitches or accident proneness may indicate a child is experiencing stress. However, she points out that parents should take note of any change or increase in a behavior that could indicate a child is under stress.

Parents can help children develop the ability to deal with stress by doing the following:

*Creating a support system. A secure and supportive family environment encourages sharing of fears and problems and helps to control stress.

*Provide new experiences. Children who are sheltered often feel stress in new situations. Allow children to experience the unfamiliar, meet new people and change activities.

*Don't expect children to act like adults. Provide responsibilities that children can accomplish. Praise children for trying.

*Allow independence. Give children the opportunity to solve their own problems and gain confidence in their abilities.

*Limit children's exposure to adult experiences, such as watching excessive violence and sex on TV or having excessive responsibilities in the home.

Other topics covered in the February issue of PTA Today include what parents should know about AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases, why we need to improve youth fitness, and facts about Sudden Infant Death Syndrome. Copies of the February issue entitled, "Fit and Healthy Children," are available for $1 each by sending a check or money order made payable to the National PTA, 700 N. Rush St., Chicago, IL 60611. Subscriptions to the magazine (seven issues a year) are $7.

Remember Your Valentine! Christina's Flowers And Gifts

For those who plan to send flowers for Valentine's Week, Feb. 9-14, here are some tips from Lee and Sue of Christina's Flowers And Gifts in Prestonsburg, KY:

- Order Valentine's Week flower gifts as far in advance as you can. The demand for flowers is great and bad weather can affect supplies, shipments and local deliveries.
- You don't have to buy a dozen. A bouquet, a few flowers or even a single bloom can express your feelings. Florists have a wide variety of floral gifts, to suit everyone's budget. It's the thought that counts.
- Red flowers are very popular at Valentine's Week but most people, according to studies by Florists' Transworld Delivery (FTD), the florist delivery service, indicate people like mixed bouquets just as well.
- Men as well as women like to receive Valentine flowers. There's even been a book published titled, "Real Women Send Flowers."
- Roses may be expensive because they're hard to grow—it takes up to 57 days—and require special care and handling. But then who can put a price on love?

Miss Stumbo-Mr. Hall Wed

Miss Donna Stumbo and Mr. Omery "Chuck" Hall were united in marriage, November 29, 1986, at the Little Nancy Old Regular Baptist Church at Hi Hat, Kentucky. The doubling ceremony was solemnized by Elder Vernon Rose.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Stumbo, of Martin, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Helen Hall and the late Omery Hall, of Hi Hat.

Traditional wedding songs were presented by Mrs. Joan Chaffins, Mrs. Tonda McCoy and Mrs. Nita Compton, Vanessa Clark, cousin of the bride, registered the guests.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a full length traditional white gown with pearl and sequins and a rounded neckline. The bouquet was made of pink carnations, fuchsia, white and mauve roses of satin.

The matron of honor was Kim Meade, and bridesmaids were Sherry Ward, Myra Lawson, and Gayle Stumbo. Flower girl was Leslie Stumbo, niece of the bride, who wore a pink dress with a matching headpiece.

Best man was Freddie C. Hall, brother of the groom, and ushers were Stanley and Roy Hall, brothers of the groom, and Mike Ousley, brother-in-law of the groom. The ring bearer was Jonathan Hall, nephew of the groom.

A reception was held in the church lunchroom, immediately following the ceremony.

The couple are residing at Hi Hat, Ky.

The Kentucky Easter Seal Society owns and operates rehabilitation centers to help people with physical handicapping conditions. Two of the centers are resident camps—Camp Kysoc at Carrollton and Camp Green Shores at McDaniels.

ARIES (March 21-April 20)
 Friends will question your new outlook on life. Finances will improve if you leave well enough alone.

TAURUS (April 21-May 20)
 You will develop a wonderful mental rapport with a new acquaintance in your life. Persuade him or her to work with you on a project.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 Your desire to travel will be fulfilled. A mixture of love and romance is about to become part of your life. Make the most of a new encounter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 If you think that people are going to cater to your whims because you've been kind to them in the past, you're sadly mistaken. Be good to number one for a change.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 This could be a very fruitful week from a business standpoint. Be on the up-and-up with superiors and don't talk down to those who could be helpful to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 A domestic situation will not remedy itself unless you put more effort into a reconciliation of ideals. Encourage another to share a secret with you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 Make the most of a good situation. You may find a bucket of gold at the end of the rainbow after all is said and done where love is concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22)
 Pay bills and don't spend on trifles so long as you haven't settled a long-standing matter that could get you in financial straits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 Your love of adventure will be satisfied by someone who is known to you. If you can curb your desire for revenge, you could reap a great financial harvest as well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 Unfinished work will have to be taken care of before you are able to go on to another project. Dependability is your password now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 You could receive an unexpected telephone call. Those friends out of the past may be discarded for more favorable ones.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 Your sense of values should be updated. Don't live in the past or you may take a wrong turn and miss something important in business.

Children Vulnerable To Scald Injuries

R.N. Diane Denton is burn prevention educator for Kosair Children's Hospital. She works with burn patients, but spends most of her time teaching children and adults how to prevent burns.

Denton says, "our greatest concern is scald injuries. Forty-seven percent (50 children) of all patients treated in the Kosair Children's burn unit in 1986 were treated for accidental scaldings." Many children were burned when they pulled hot objects from a stove. Water heaters set at too high a temperature caused 12 of the scalds. Denton believes it is the responsibility of parents or adult caretakers to make sure that water is not too hot for children and that children are kept away from hot water and food on or recently removed from a stove. A child should never be left alone in a tub or near running water if they can reach the faucet. Handles of pans on a stove should be turned to the center, out of the reach of children.

In 1986, a total of 107 patients were admitted to the Kosair Children's burn unit (the only such unit in Kentucky devoted solely to children). In addition to children treated for scalds, thirty were treated for burns caused by flame, 21 were due to contact with hot objects, one was an electrical burn, two were caused by chemicals.

MILD HYPERTENSION
 Good Housekeeping's February issue reports that research shows that 50% of all those who have mild hypertension may eliminate their need for medication by reducing excess body weight by as little as 10%.

Since 1923 Kentuckians have been helped through the rehabilitation services of the Kentucky Easter Seal Society. In 1986 over 22,000 Kentuckians were served by Easter Seals.

The Kentucky Easter Seal Society provided services to MAXIMIZE the independence of the disabled and MINIMIZE educational, architectural, attitudinal and social barriers.

Story Of Urban Kids Turned Chess Champs

In 1980, an Indianapolis elementary school teacher decided to use his passion for chess to improve the academic skills of a group of inner-city black students. Three years later, they were crowned the Elementary School Chess Champions.

"The Masters of Disaster," taking its name from the label the students adopted, tells the story of their rise when it airs Tuesday, February 10, at 9:30 p.m. on KET.

Based on the belief that most school children were not challenged enough academically, teacher Bob Cotter persuaded his students to form a chess club. "I wanted to provide students with problem-solving skills they could use in later life and also keep them away from the pool halls, drug dealers and shoplifters they are exposed to," said Cotter, who personally paid for equipment and tournament fees.

The chess competitions developed the students' concentration and logic skills. Additionally, Cotter said the chess team improved his relationship with the students. "When I can get close to them through an after-school activity, I can influence them more in a classroom," Cotter said.

The film reveals the dedication and motivation Cotter gave to the children. "When we started, we set a goal of winning the national championship...we never lost sight of that," said Cotter. "The Masters of Disaster" is a production of Indiana University Audio-Visual Center.

Mark Russell Begins New Television Season

The master of political satire, Mark Russell, returns for a new season of comedy specials when the "Mark Russell Comedy Special" airs Wednesday, February 25, at 8:00 p.m. on KET. You will have the best seat in the house when Russell performs "in the round" before a standing-room-only crowd. In a 30-minute monologue, Russell impartially quashes the great and would-be-great of both political parties with comedy bits, original songs and flippant one-liners.

With his trademark baby grand piano for a prop and the day's headlines for material, Russell guides you through the flurries and squalls of a typical capital winter, as he points out those famous Washington landmarks: obfuscation, dilatoriness and inefficiency.

The Mark Russell specials are filmed before an audience at the Katherine Cornell Theatre on the campus of the State University of New York at Buffalo.

THIS BEAUTIFUL IRISH SETTER is also quite intelligent. Adopt her at the Animal Shelter on Sally Stephens Branch road or call 886-3189.

NITRATE POISONING

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA
Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association
Problems caused by the prolonged drought of last summer and fall might not have all cleared up since the heavy fall rains.

Some cattle in western Kentucky died recently after eating sorghum-sudan hay. They were poisoned by excessive nitrates in the hay.

Nitrates accumulate in some forage crops during periods of drought and other adverse growing conditions. Hay from some warm-season annuals, including sorghums, sorghum-sudan hybrids and sudangrass, can become toxic. Corn stalks may also accumulate excess nitrates, however most corn fodder is fed as silage and ensiling reduces the nitrate levels between 40 and 60 percent.

Forages with a nitrate level below .5 percent of dry matter are generally safe to feed. If the level exceeds 1.5 percent, forages should not be fed. Between these two levels, forages should be fed only with caution.

Cattle can tolerate elevated levels of nitrate if they have been introduced to the ration gradually. Start feeding small amounts of forage with elevated nitrate and increase the amount gradually, if you are going to feed it at all. Also, feed small amounts several times a day rather than giving the full day's ration at one feeding. Mix suspect forage with other feeds, such as legume hay, silage or grain.

Cattle fed suspect forage should be watched for signs of acute nitrate poisoning. Typical symptoms include rapid breathing, quick pulse, staggering, muscle tremors and dilated pupils. Emphysema may develop some time after overeating the hay, and pregnant cows may abort after recovering from nitrate poisoning.

Most forages will be safe to feed, but if there is any doubt, forage should be tested.

Your veterinarian can have your forage tested quickly at either the Livestock Disease Diagnostic Center in Lexington or the Breathitt Veterinary Center at Hopkinsville for excess nitrate levels.

You'll likely save money if you discuss nutrition with him. He's not only well informed on potential feed problems, such as excessive nitrate in some hays this year, but also on nutritional requirements, possible deficiencies and problems, and how to avoid problems associated with unwise feeding practices.

Jobs Scarcer In December
The jobless rate in the Big Sandy district rose from a revised 13.0 percent in November to a preliminary 13.8 percent in December. All five counties reported double-digit rates, which ranged from Floyd county's 12.1 percent to Magoffin county's 20.0 percent.

The monthly sample of claimants of unemployment insurance benefits showed 52.6 percent had worked in mining, 16.3 percent in trade, 11.0 percent in services and 10.7 percent in construction.
