Floyd County

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, 1987

THE SHOWRING for horses at the Archer Park Fairground was better suited to aquatic events last week, as the Big Sandy broke its banks and flooded low-lying areas in West Prestonsburg. Minor flooding was also seen out in the county but no major problems had been reported by the time the river crested here, Friday.

Fiscal Court Hears Citizens Telling of Varied Trash Woes

By Ron Marstin

—For some, last week's high water was an ideal time to dump the garbage in the creek.

—Some think it's okay to toss plastic milk jugs into the river as long as you punch a couple of holes in them to make them sink.

—There's a bend on KY 122 at Hite where the accumulation of cardboard cups marks the exact time it takes to drink a cola purchased at the Martin Druther's.

Such was the folklore reported Friday at a meeting of Floyd Fiscal Court, where much of the discussion had to do with illegal dumping and where everyone, magistrates and citizens alike, seemed to have a trash tale to tell.

People up the left fork of Oklahoma Hollow near Allen are "about ready to form a posse," said Ken Peters, to protect their neighborhood against those who find it a handy place to offload an old appliance, last year's Christmas decorations, the discarded paneling from a remodeled kitchen, or the week's household refuse.

"Why do people do that?" asked his wife, Patty, who said the culprits must pass by a dumpster at the Allen pool to jettison their trash along the Oklahoma road or the nearby railroad tracks. "We don't dump in your yard," she said of the visitors, "and we don't want them dumping in ours."

Even So, Some Say Situation Is Now Better

Walter Dingus, who lives across the road from the county's Garth Hollow landfill, said he has seen people empty their pickups alongside the road—only minutes from the landfill—in order to save the $5 dumping fee.

Anyone who does it while he's around will be picking it all up again, Dingus warned. "I've seen some of them drive out with more than they drove in with," he said.

Citizen action may not always be prudent, cautioned Left Beaver magistrate Ed Caudill. "You turn some people in, they'll burn you out that night," he said.

But Dingus was insistent. "We can't be intimidated by these people," he said.

Magistrates Gerald DeRossett and Jackie Owens wondered whether the county solid waste agency drove a tough enough bargain with Knott Fiscal Court in allowing Knott to use the Floyd landfill for $35,000 a year after Perry Fiscal Court had upped its fee to $72,000. "It seems like it's too cheap and too long," said Owens of the five-year contract.

Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo defended the deal, however, noting that Knott delivers only a few trucks of garbage a day to the landfill and that Floyd was not forced to hire extra workers or equipment to handle it.

Bob McAninch, chairman of Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc., said later that the agency used its standard pricing formula—which takes into account the volume of garbage a client is expected to dump—in setting the fee for Knott Fiscal Court. "We set a fair price. We're not interested in gouging a sister county," he said.

Flood Danger Past As Rainfall Ceases

By Ron Marstin

Although the Big Sandy River and its tributaries were sufficiently swollen last week to cause concern among some residents in low-lying areas, the river peaked here on Friday without causing serious flooding in this county.

Rain that fell last week on soil already saturated by the previous week's unseasonal snowfall caused the river to rise here by about six inches an hour last Thursday. It crested at 25.48 feet—about eight feet above normal for this time of year—around 2:30 p.m. Friday at the floodwall here, said Bill Harvey Howard, superintendent of Prestonsburg Utilities.

Although minor flooding was reported on Mud Creek and the two arms of Beaver Creek, no major roads were cut and no evacuations were necessary. "The water was over a couple of side roads; that was about it," said Terry Triplett, of the Garrett Volunteer Fire Department.

"Some bottoms overflowed and there may have been some gardens under water but, as far as I know, we had no damage to houses or cars," said Eula Hall, social worker at the Mud Creek Clinic at Grethel.

Apart from a call to rescue a stranded family, the high water caused no unusual activity for Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad, said

Capt. Chuck Akers. "There was nothing that amounted to anything," he said.

Four persons in a four-wheel-drive vehicle became stranded in high water on Cow Creek Thursday night, Akers said. A man, teenage boy, young woman, and baby were in the vehicle, which had begun to take on water when the rescue crew arrived, Akers said. No one was injured.

Howard said his crew closely monitored the river rise, receiving periodic reports on upstream levels from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Dewey Dam. While the city is technically advised to close the floodgate here when the river reaches 22 feet, he decided to leave it open because the water was rising relatively slowly, Howard said. "It's a judgment call," he explained.

Closing the floodgate prevents the Big Sandy from backing up into low-lying areas of downtown Prestonsburg, but it also necessitates pumping water from Trimble Branch into the river, Howard said. In practice, the gate is rarely closed before the river reaches 28 feet, he said.

The utilities agency has four pumps at the mouth of Trimble Branch, each capable of handling 13,000 gallons of water an hour. During floods, the river commonly rises 18 inches an hour and, in the flood of 1957, rose as much as three feet in one hour, Howard said.

Amid Tragedy, Reffitt Family Again Finds Reason for Hope

By Ron Marstin

Beverage Reffitt did not live to see it, but the color began to return Sunday to his frail daughter's cheeks and her skin, unnaturally cool from days on a respirator, glowed with new warmth. Her transplanted liver was beginning to function.

For the Maytown family, it was the first good news in a week that started in tragedy last Monday, when Reffitt, rushing to his ailing daughter's bedside at Pittsburgh's Presbyterian University Hospital, was stricken by a massive heart attack in the taxi that picked him up from the airport. He died within a few miles of his destination.

When he had received news Sunday that his daughter had taken a turn for the worse, Reffitt, 58, had finished the evening shift at Kentucky Hydrocarbon's Warco plant, where he had worked as a compressor operator for 28 years, and had taken the first plane to Pittsburgh, Monday morning. His body was returned to Maytown for burial Friday afternoon.

Around 11 p.m. Saturday, word came that a donor organ was available for Beverly Reffitt, 26, who had been waiting three weeks for it and whose health had so deteriorated in the meantime a machine was hooked up to do her breathing for her.

Beverly Reffitt

Within hours, a surgical team was assembled and, at 3 a.m., Sunday, the 10½-hour operation began that replaced in the young woman the liver that first began to fail 12 years ago. The days immediately after an organ transplant, when the body is apt to reject it, are critical in cases like these. But so far the prognosis is favorable for Beverly Reffitt.

"It looks real good," her brother, Nathan, said Monday. "It has taken up right. It's already filtering her blood. It's doing everything the old liver wasn't doing."

"She still has a long way to go," he cautioned. And friends noted that the family, too, has a long way to go to meet the expenses of Beverly's hospitalization and post-operative care.

"All their resources are exhausted," said Terrie Harris Back, who noted that Henrietta Reffitt will have to bear the costs of a 10-week stay in Pittsburgh—six weeks while her daughter is in hospital and, after that, about four weeks of daily outpatient care. When the bills are finally tallied, they could add up to $250,000 or more, Back said.

Already, people have begun pitching in to help defray the cost—friends, neighbors, fellow members of the First Baptist Church where Beverly once taught Sunday School, former Allen Central High School classmates—raising $6,000, Back said, in the past three weeks. An account has also been opened in her name at the First Commonwealth Bank: anyone wishing to contribute should call Jeannette Harris at 285-9300.

"It's just unreal the people who have come wanting to help" in the wake of his sister's illness and his father's sudden death, Nathan Reffitt said. But it doesn't surprise Harris, who grew up with Henrietta Runyon Reffitt and has known Beverly since she was a toddler. Although the liver disease that showed up when she was 14 slowed the vigorous youngster down, it never dampened her spirit, Harris said.

"She was real active, she was a cheerleader at Maytown grade school, and she had to give it up," Harris recalled. But she went on to graduate from high school and later from Mayo Vocational School and has worked for six years as a secretary at Action Petroleum in West Prestonsburg.

"Through all that sickness, if you ever asked her how she was, she'd always smile and say, 'I'm just fine; the Lord's taking care of me,'" Harris said. "She has a lot of fight, a lot of backbone."

Appeals Court Upholds MCCC Suit Dismissal

By Ron Marstin

Dismissal in Floyd Circuit Court of a suit brought against the board of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center by a former therapist was upheld last week by the state Court of Appeals, which held that the worker had not made full use of the grievance mechanisms provided by her employer.

Colleen Risner was fired by the director of the Prestonsburg mental health agency in May, 1985. She filed suit in circuit court here soon after, seeking back pay and compensatory and punitive damages, and insisting that reference to her discharge be stricken from her work record.

The appeals court held Friday that, since she had not exhausted all administrative remedies available to her, her suit was premature and was properly dismissed by Floyd Circuit Judge Hollie Conley.

Until Risner's firing has been confirmed by the Mountain Comp Care board chairman, it is not final and so not subject to judicial review, the three-member appeals panel ruled.

In her suit, Risner said she was let go by then-director David E. Bell, Jr. because he thought she had cooperated with state investigators then looking into allegations of mismanagement within the agency.

Risner, who was terminated within weeks of receiving a "most favorable" evaluation by her supervisor, claimed in her lawsuit that as many as 11 agency employees fired or laid off in early 1985 "were suspected of being critical of MCCC management."

Bell denied the allegations, claiming they stemmed from jealousy and "politics."

The former director resigned in August, 1985. He was indicted in February this year by a Floyd Circuit Court grand jury, for allegedly submitting false travel vouchers in 1983 and 1984.

Pillersdorf noted this week that the appeals court did not address the merits of his client's case. "The decision is by no means definitive. We are still going to litigate this case," the attorney said.

Among the options he will consider is to challenge his client's discharge through the mental health agency's appeals mechanism, Pillersdorf said. Risner has since taken a job in Florida, he said.

ONE OF THE OLDER HOMES in Prestonsburg was destroyed by fire, Saturday afternoon, despite the efforts of the fire department. The former N.M. White residence was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ferguson, Jr., who lost most of the contents, including a number of valuable antiques.

Caudill May Appear Friday For Sentence

By Ron Marstin

Unless his attorney can win a stay of sentence, Third District Magistrate Ed Caudill is scheduled to appear Friday before Pike Circuit Judge Will T. Scott to give any reason why he should not start serving the one-year prison sentence handed down after his July, 1985 conviction of illegally endorsing and cashing a county check in 1982.

A state appeals court last December affirmed Caudill's conviction in Pike Circuit Court and the Kentucky Supreme Court declined last month to review the case.

Attorney Ned Pillersdorf has indicated he will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review the case. He has claimed (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Task Force Rebuffs Move To Abolish RR Commission

By Joe Porter

The Kentucky Railroad Commission received a boost of confidence, April 3, when state legislators on a Task Force on Elections and Constitutional Amendments rebuffed a proposal to abolish the commission.

The bill to eliminate the commission, sponsored by Rep. Mark Farrow, a banker from Stamping Ground, would require a constitutional amendment to become law. Yet, according to a staff administrator for the legislative Research Commission, task force members leaned more toward overhauling the railroad commission—giving it broader powers and more operating funds—rather than abolishing it.

"I would say the railroad commission serves a purpose, and the idea of funding it is meritorious," said Rep. John Harper, of Shepherdsville. The Courier-Journal also reported that Rep. Jim Yates, of Shively, came to the defense of the commission and said it was only agency that helped him when he has had problems with railroad maintenance in his district.

While the bill ran into criticism, it did have a few supporters, and the task force ended making no conclusion. The bill is scheduled to go through the legislative process beginning in January 1988, and if passed by both houses, it could be put on the ballot in November 1988. Railroad Commissioner Jimmy Gabe Turner, of Drift, is confident now the bill will never become law. "If it ever is put on the ballot, it will be soundly defeated by the people," Turner said.

Raymond Kirk, general counsel for the railroad commission, addressed the task force and criticized the railroads for their excessive shipping rates. "They set their own rates, and they're not regulated," Kirk said after the meeting. He called the tariffs "arbitrary and capricious," and said it's gotten so bad in eastern Kentucky that shipping costs now equal or exceed the cost of producing the coal. "They're putting a lot of small operators out of business and playing ball with the big companies," Kirk said.

The railroad commission's attorney believes that lowering shipping charges would be one solution to the high unemployment in eastern Kentucky. "The biggest problem with coal is that it can't compete with oil because of its high production and transportation costs," Kirk said.

Kirk reminded the legislators that the Kentucky Railroad Commission was granted certification by the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate intrastate tariffs and that they would do it if they had the personnel and funds to enforce their rulings.

Moon Myth and Folklore May Have Basis in Fact

What brings April showers? Some experts say the moon! Myth and folklore surround the moon's connection to weather. "Pale moon, rain soon; face white, rain chance slight." "Sharp horns threaten windy weather." "Clear moon is a frost moon." "The number of stars in the moon's halo is the number of days before a storm."

Evidence is piling up in support of these sayings and superstitions. Scientists have found an atmospheric tidal wind, similar to the ocean's tides, which ebbs and flows under the moon's phase. The moon's position in relation to the sun and earth also affects solar winds and their interaction with earth's atmosphere. Several studies have directly linked lunar phase with precipitation.

Tides in the air are similar to those in the ocean. At the earth's surface, the speed of these tides, called lunar winds, is about 1/20th of a mile per hour. Although they are too low to be felt, scientists detect them by studying variations in weather patterns. High and low tides in the air occur twice daily. There also are high stages that are equivalent to the ocean's spring tide.

Herbert Henstock reported in Science magazine that changes in temperature were tidally induced by the moon. Examining the lowest daily temperatures over several years, he found the lowest monthly temperatures occurred within 48 hours of the full moon. He also noted summer temperatures fell less than winter temperatures, a phenomenon parallel to ocean tides.

Earth's atmosphere creates an electric circuit between solar flare particles and terrestrial weather. The moon's position in relation to the sun and earth will either deflect or attract such particles into earth's atmosphere. These particles influence weather.

William R. Corliss, in his book "Tornadoes, Dark Days, Anomalous Precipitation, And Related Weather Phenomena" reports world-wide evidence that thunderstorm frequency increases during new and full moon. The moon's orbit through the terrestrial magnetosphere alters the numbers of charged solar particles reaching the earth and disturbs the terrestrial-atmospheric electrical current and thunderstorm formation.

According to Dr. Geoffrey Keller, assistant director for the National Science Foundation, "Researchers, after pouring over weather records going back 91 years, discovered that chances for a heavy rainfall in the week after new moon and full moon were up to three times greater than for the weeks preceding the new moon."

T.H. Carpenter, R.L. Holle, and J.J. Fernandez-Partagas published a study in Monthly Weather Review which demonstrated a significant relationship between lunar phases and the formation of tropical storms and hurricanes. Using records of violent storm formation in the North Atlantic and the Pacific Northwest, the researchers found 20 percent more hurricanes and typhoons formed near new and full moon than near quarters during a 78-year period, with a stronger peak at new moon than at full.

In 1962, three meteorologists, D.A. Bradley, M.A. Woodbury, and G.W. Brier, published a paper in Science magazine showing a definite lunar periodicity in heavy precipitation. In weather records from 1900 to 1949, they found a marked tendency for extreme precipitation in North America to be recorded near the middle of the first and third weeks of the synodic month, especially on the third to fifth days after both new and full moon. E.E. Adderley and E.G. Bowen, researchers in Sydney, Australia reported similar results derived from records of 50 weather stations in New Zealand over a 25-year period.

Iver A. Lund of the United States Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories in Bedford, Massachusetts reported in 1962 to the American Meteorological Society that he studied 58 years of records from 10 cities. During the second and fourth quarters of the moon, there was more sunshine than not, and during the first and third quarters, there were more clouds than not.

Llewellyn's Moon Sign Book gives weather predictions based on lunar phase. Here's what the Moon Sign Book predicts for the United States this April:

Zone 1: Beautiful spring weather is predicted for this zone during April: warmer temperatures than usual, blue skies and light pleasant showers. Showers should fall April 4, 6, 11, 15, 17, 19, 24, 28, and 29. Downpours come on the 4th and 29th.

New England will have its share of pleasant weather, and the nice weather will extend down the Atlantic seaboard. Georgia and Florida will have many pleasant, balmy days. Wind coming on the 6th will be strong, and more strong winds are due on the 10th. Watch the 21st. Strong winds are again due on this date.

Zone 2: You'll see beautiful weather during April: warmer than usual with pleasant skies. Expect light rain on April 5, 6, 11, 15, 17, 19, 20, 24, and 28. Expect downpours on the 4th and 29th.

Mississippi and Alabama will have many balmy days. Michigan and Wisconsin will see many days of extremely pleasant weather. High winds will be forecast, with possible tornadoes on the 6th, 10th and 21st.

Zone 3: The eastern portion of this zone will be warm during April with light rain. From Fargo, North Dakota, to Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, April will be very chilly and windy, setting record low temperatures. West of this line will be colder than usual. The entire region should expect light rain on April 5, 6, 11, 17, 19, 20, 24, and 28, and heavy rain on the 4th, 15th, and 29th. Tornado risk dates are April 6, 10, and 21.

Zone 4: Eastern zone four will be chilly. Between Cheyenne and Salt Lake City, and west of this line, extremely wet weather is predicted. Moderate rain will occur on April 5, 6, 11, 17, 19, 20, 24, and 28; heavy rain on 4, 15, and 29. Mountain creeks will flood due to rain, making travel difficult. Winds accompanying rain on the 19th will cause poor visibility and travel hazards.

Zone 5: April temperatures will be average, but it will be wet. Only desert areas will escape rain. Moderately heavy rains will occur on April 5, 6, 11, 15, 17, 19, 20, 24, and 28; downpours will occur 4, 15, and 29. Watch for flooding, and vicious wind/rain storms on the 6th, 10th, and 29th.

Zone 6: Eastern Alaska will be very wet during April, and western Alaska, average. Hawaii will have a wet April. Rains will occur on April 6, 11, 15, 17, 19,

Open Obstetrical Practice in Martin

The administration and medical staff of Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin this week announced the opening of a new obstetrics and gynecology practice adjacent to the Martin Clinic across from the hospital.

Obstetrician/gynecologist Kirshnarao S. Potnis, M.D., and his wife, Karen Fujikawa Potnis, a certified nurse-midwife, will begin practice here April 23. Dr. Potnis was certified by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology in 1972. He entered a voluntary recertification cycle and was recertified in 1986.

Dr. Potnis is a fellow of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and the American College of Surgeons. He is a native of Vengula, India and graduated from the Seth G.S. Medical College of the University of Bombay, India. Dr. Potnis did his internship at Bridgeport Hospital in Bridgeport, Connecticut and his residency at the State University of New York at Buffalo Affiliated Hospitals. She has taught medicine at the State University of New York at Buffalo and the University of Mississippi School of Medicine.

Dr. Potnis comes to Floyd county from Kuhn Memorial State Hospital (KMSH) in Vicksburg, Mississippi where he has been chief of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology since 1974 and Medical Director since 1978. Dr. Potnis taught family medicine residents and nurse-midwifery students at KMSH for the University of Mississippi School of Medicine. He was also in part-time private practice with two certified nurse-midwives.

Karen Fujikawa Potnis is a native of California. She received a bachelor of science degree in Nutrition from the University of California at Davis in 1975. In 1977, she earned her bachelor of science in nursing from the University of California in San Francisco. She worked as a public health nurse in the Mississippi delta region while earning her certification as a pediatrics nurse practitioner from the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson. After completing those studies, she worked for two and a half years as a pediatrics nurse practitioner for the Health Department of Port Gibson, MS. In 1983, she attended the School of Nurse-Midwifery of the University of Mississippi. Since 1984 she has worked as a nurse-midwife at Kuhn Memorial State Hospital in Vicksburg, MS. She also had a private practice called the Vicksburg OB-GYN Clinic with her husband and another certified nurse-midwife.

Floyd To Share In Snow Funds

Floyd county is one of the counties which will share, in the $155,000 Gov. Martha Layne Collins has pledged of Rural Secondary Special Emergency funds for distribution to 35 Kentucky counties to help with the cost of snow and ice removal incurred in the April 2 snowstorm that dumped nearly three feet of snow on some parts of the state.

Collins said the money, which should be received by the counties within the next two weeks, will be applied toward the cleanup efforts of county roads.

"Many of the rural areas experienced problems with fallen trees and mudslides that were caused by the heavy, wet snow that accumulated in east and southeast Kentucky," said Collins.

State Transportation Secretary C. Leslie Dawson said the 27 counties that were hit hardest by the snowstorm will be receiving $5,000, and another eight Kentucky counties will be receiving $2,500.

Allocations of $5,000 will be sent to Floyd, Boyd, Fleming, Breathitt, Estill, Lee, Magoffin, Menifee, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Powell, Wolfe, Bell, Clay, Harlan, Jackson, Knox, Laurel, Leslie, Whitley, Johnson, Knott, Lawrence, Letcher, Martin and Pike counties.

Allocations of $2,500 will be sent to Bath, Carter, Elliott, Greenup, Lewis, Mason, Nicholas and Rowan counties.

KBA Is Chief Sponsor Summer Special Games

The Kentucky Bankers Association has announced that the banking industry will be the premier sponsor of the 1987 Special Olympics Summer Games.

"We have asked all 333 of our member banks to come together to support the Summer Games, and the response has been overwhelming," commented Ballard W. Cassady, Jr. executive vice president of the Kentucky Bankers Association. "This will be the first time in recent history that the industry has pulled together to support a major charity," he continued.

"Special Olympics was chosen by the industry after considerable research. They appealed to us for several reasons. Most important, they are a statewide charity that touches just about every community where we have a member bank. Also, the Special Olympics appeals to us because of the values they represent," Mr. Cassady added.

In Kentucky, over 12,000 participants train regularly to be special olympians. This year the Summer Games will be held in Bowling Green, June 7-9, 1987 is a special year for the Olympians because they will be competing to qualify for the international games to be held at the University of Notre Dame, Saint Mary's College, South Bend, Indiana, July 31-August 8.

"With the banking industry's support, registration fees for athletes will be lowered from $40 to $25. This fee is generally raised by the area Special Olympics offices to allow their athletes to participate. Eventually, more athletes will be able to participate due to the reduced registration fee," remarked Dave Kerchner, executive director of Kentucky Special Olympics.

"It is through each member bank's involvement that we were able to make this happen. The KBA believes it shows local bank's commitment and dedication to their communities."

GROUP OF ROBBERS BESTED BY CHILDREN

A large, broken toy horse plays a major role in a comedy of errors about a band of robbers who keep stumbling over a group of children. "The Horse Without a Head," a "Wonderworks" special, airs Saturday, May 2, at 8 p.m. on KET.

An overly enthusiastic, bumbling group of robbers devise an intricate plan to steal three mail bags filled with money from the Dijon-Paris express. Despite a series of mishaps, the money is taken successfully and hidden in a deserted warehouse. The key to the warehouse, however, is lost after it is placed in a large, wooden, headless horse. This less-than-grand steed belongs to a group of spirited children who discover the key.

The robbers' search for the key and the children's search for the door which the key opens results in a riotous comedy of errors.

T.E.B. Clarke wrote the teleplay which is based on Paul Berna's "A Hundred Million Francs."

CARD OF THANKS

We, the family of Sam T. Mead, of McDowell, express our sincere appreciation to all of our friends and neighbors who came to visit at the funeral home, sent flowers, prepared food, sent cards, and expressed their sympathy in any way during the time of our bereavement.

We're especially grateful to Reverend Clinton Dean Moore, who arranged the evening prayer service by contacting members of the Old Regular Baptist ministers and members who came so willingly to participate. We appreciate Bro. Jimmy Hall's comforting message and the prayers of Bro. Bill Tackett and Bro. Moore.

Also, we're so thankful to have had Rev. Adrian Hall and Sister Olive Rose Hall of the Left Beaver Baptist Church, who were responsible for conducting the funeral memorial service. We thank them for their helpfulness in arranging to have so many of the good members to sing and for their comforting words during the service. We thank Rev. Russell Jacobs, as well, for this message.

The Hall Funeral directors always do such an excellent and professional job. We're thankful to have had them take care of our father in their beautiful facility. They're an asset to the community and to the Floyd County area.

We thank all of you. You are all WONDERFUL people!

DeRossett and Owens also urged that the $5 landfill fee be abolished, as an incentive for people to use the facility. "If anyone is good enough to take their garbage up there, they shouldn't be charged," DeRossett said.

But Ecology Officer Cleveland Tackett said doing away with the fee would discourage some from using the regular weekly garbage pickup. And McAninch argued later that the worst illegal dumping in recent county history occurred prior to 1981, when there were four county landfills, none of them charging a fee.

Some dissatisfaction with the solid waste agency's Knott county contract arose from news reports that Knott residents would be able to use the Floyd landfill free, McAninch said. The reports, originally carried in a Knott newspaper and later reported on a Floyd radio broadcast, were incorrect: the landfill fee applies to householders in both counties, he said.

Bill Arms, of East Point, urged the court to initiate a campaign to educate the public about the dangers of pollution, which he said will destroy drinking water sources for coming generations. "Now the river's up, it looks like a train transporting garbage to Ohio," he said. "Our citizens are really ignorant of what that is doing to them."

In other business: The court authorized the judge-executive to advertise for bids on fire hydrants. Stumbo said he hoped to see hydrants installed within 1000 feet of every home served by a water line of at least four-inch diameter. The installation of the hydrants should mean a significant reduction in homeowners' insurance premiums, he said.

Jailer Lawrence Hale submitted a $208,664 budget for 1987-88. State subsidies make up most of the anticipated income ($135,688), with another $28,404 coming from court costs and $14,000 in state payments for the upkeep of inmates awaiting transfer to state prisons. Most of the expenditures ($156,315) are for staff salaries.

David Allan Jones was hired as a deputy jailer at an hourly rate of $6.10. As a condition of receiving Community Development Block Grant funds, the county adopted a resolution forbidding discrimination in public housing units or by private landlords renting more than four housing units.

Twenty-ton weight limits were set on four county roads: the Mare Creek road, Turkey Creek, Left Fork of Toler Creek, and the Little Mud Creek road from the end of the blacktop to the head of the hollow.

The county attorney will be asked to determine whether a section of road on the left fork of Oklahoma Hollow is a private, public, or county road. The issue is of importance to landowners there, some of whom have put a chain across the road to prevent access by dirt bike riders and illegal dumpers.

Monroe Vanderpool was reappointed to the Beaver Elkhorn Water District Commission and Ernie Moore was also appointed to the panel, replacing James Scott, who resigned some years ago.

Paul Hunt Thompson was reappointed to the board of the Floyd Housing Authority. Billy Merritt was recalled as a county road worker after being laid off for the winter months; Norman P. Bentley was hired for the road crew at $6.16 an hour.

Road Fund Hearing Attendance Is Nil

By Ron Marstin

A public hearing held Friday to elicit comments on how County Road Aid funds should be spent in the 1987-88 fiscal year drew only one written comment. No one appeared at the advertised hearing, moreover, which was held in the courthouse annex here.

The county expects to receive $686,005 for county road work in the coming year; in addition, $30,000 remains of this year's county road aid.

Another hearing usually scheduled at this time—on disposition of federal revenue-sharing money—was not necessary this year because the funds have been discontinued. Revenue-sharing money amounted to $156,357 last year; in its heyday, the federal contribution came to as much as $480,000, most of it earmarked for road maintenance.

One effect of the funding loss can be seen in the county's aging equipment, said First District Magistrate Gerald DeRossett. "We need a dump truck and a backhoe, and the county doesn't even have a mower, but there's no money to buy new equipment," he said.

The one written comment being received on use of County Road Aid funds came from a Branham's Creek resi-

A commission hearing is scheduled April 28 at 10 a.m. in Circuit Court room at the courthouse, here. On the agenda are matters dealing with illegal dumping on Oklahoma Creek and unsafe crossings at Cliff, Dwale, McDowell, and Price. It will be the first hearing held in Floyd county since the railroad commission set a precedent two years ago of holding them outside Frankfort. Turner urges all citizens to bring concerns and complaints forward at this time.

ed the magistrate's Sixth Amendment right to be tried by a jury in the district in which the crime occurred was violated when a state prosecutor succeeded in having the trial moved from Floyd to Pike county.

Pending the U.S. Supreme Court's decision, Pillersdorf said this week he has asked the state high court to order a stay in the execution of Caudill's sentence. He hopes the state court will announce its decision this week, the attorney said Monday.

"Infant University" Offers Day Care Too

A story last week on Floyd county's licensed day care centers overlooked one facility: it is the Infant University operated in Martin with the help of a Christian Appalachian Project grant.

The day care facility, located in the building that used to be St. Juliana Catholic Church, takes children at a younger age than any other day care center in the county: children are enrolled from six weeks of age through 3½ years, said Pat Gallagher, director of the program.

As its name suggests, the Infant University offers a curriculum in art, music, science, and math, scaled to the youngsters' abilities. It has been in operation for five years, first at Mountain Christian Academy, later under sponsorship of St. Martha Catholic Church. It is licensed for 40 children and has a current enrollment of 24.

Fees are set at $40 a week, or $8 a day, with a second child paying half the fee. "Something could be worked out" with any parents unable to afford the fee, Gallagher said. Hours are from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. and a hot meal and two snacks are served.

Martin Receives Grant For Police Protection

Police protection in the city of Martin has been improved as the result of a state grant announced recently by Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

A $4,464 grant from the Area Development Fund was awarded to Martin to offset costs of a police cruiser and seven hand-held radio units. According to local officials, the addition of this equipment will enhance the police department's ability to better serve community residents.

The Big Sandy Area Development Fund is a capital projects program administered by the Department of Local Government in the Office of the Governor.

The state's 15 area development districts make recommendations to the department on the basis of state law and policy for project funding.

dent, who asked for repairs to be done there, said Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo. As it happens, the Branham's Creek road is about to be included in the state-maintained roads system, he said.

Magistrate Jackie Owens asked for drainage work to be done on roads at Eastern and Maytown—"two of the worst swamps I've got"—and for work on the Johns Branch road and some streets in Dwale.

The lack of interest in the road hearing was neither unusual nor significant, said Stumbo. Individual magistrates can submit their road work priorities on a monthly basis, he said. And, in any event, the available money is no goldmine. "It has to pay for everything. Labor, Social Security, material, fuel, it all comes out of this," he said. "It's not just for blacktop."

By comparison, of some $470,000 in state road funds spent in the county this year, only $77,000 went to buy blacktop, Stumbo said. And, while the county dutifully lists its priorities each year, only a fraction of the work gets done.

Of the list of projects submitted to the state last year, only the Cow Creek road was paved, Stumbo said.

Bits and Pieces

WINTER DREAMS

Despite snow and hail and sleet and rain, not only does the postman make his rounds, but spring has definitely and finally sprung. Crocus, daffodils and tulips have made their appearance, the redbud and dogwood trees are having their spring fling, and the apple trees came through the snowstorm without blemish. If any further proof of spring's arrival is needed, I have tons—well, at least 480 pounds—of topsoil and cow manure plus peat moss, to dig into my flower beds, or what I hope will be flower beds.

Yes, the best gardening season is past. That is, of course, late winter when all one can do is look at gardening books and envision gaudiose displays to rival, if not surpass, those famed ones of Babylon.

But now that the planting season is upon us, one's sights are set a little lower, and it's time to get down to the nitty-gritty—mostly gritty—business of toting, spading, digging, planting.

Then, if things work out even a fraction as well as those winter dreams, we must give a little credit to our Partner.

EASTER EGGS

My mother has a special way of fixing Easter Eggs, and while I'm sure this won't be news to some, I have, over the years, found that a surprising number of people have never heard of doing them this way.

Instead of just dying hard-boiled eggs, Mom removed the small end of the eggs, using contents then or later. After being washed, dried, and dyed, they were candied with any small candies—candycorn, jelly beans, bubble gum, peanuts, even coins. (My children liked lemon drops.) The ends were then sealed with soft, easy-to-handle paper, and believe me, they make a great change from cold, boiled eggs. Of course, now you can buy the plastic shells, but I still think real eggshells are more fun to fix. Then, too, if you start saving them a few weeks before Easter, you can easily have enough for every child in the neighborhood.

NIGHTMARE ALLEY

The girls in the office not only suggested, they all but hog-tied me, made the appointment, and shoved me in the hairdresser's door, Friday. Even though I don't have to look at myself, they do, and apparently, the prospect has been far from pleasing. Okay, so now I hope you're happy. Just call me, 'Curley,' but not Moe or Larry.

I have also been getting tactful and not so tactful hints about the glories of dieting, diet groups, low-calorie meals, ad infinitum.

This has, no doubt, led to my being plagued, lately, by a recurring dream, or is it a nightmare, in which I don a bathing suit for the first time this season, and—well, you know how dreams are—suddenly I find myself tearing madly through crowded streets, at high noon, no less, yes, in said suit with all sorts of excess poundage on public view. The dream(?) ends when I reach the diet group's door and wake myself up yelling, "Help!"

Now, see what you've done, girls?

Labor-Management Meet Set Tuesday

Labor and management representatives from Floyd, Pike, Martin, Johnson, and Magoffin counties will meet to establish a Labor-Management Committee and elect a 12-member board of directors at 6 p.m., next Tuesday at May Lodge. The board of directors will be composed of six representatives each from labor and management, with a chairman and co-chairman from each group. By-laws will also be adopted at this time.

The proposed by-laws contain a provision that the Labor-Management Committee "will not intervene in labor-management disputes, but rather will concentrate on improving communications between labor and management through informal meetings and programs."

A steering committee, made up of representatives of various labor and business groups in the area, met March 31 to draw up recommendations for the April 28 organizational meeting.

The meeting is open to the public, and anyone who is interested is welcome to attend and participate. John McCauley, of the office of Labor-Management Relations said the committee will work best with the combined efforts of the board of directors and an active membership. "You need various other representatives feeding input into the board," McCauley said.

The idea of a Labor-Management Committee is new in the area and reflects a growing awareness of the need to work together, set aside the traditional adversarial positions, and realize together economic growth for the area.

Three Escapees Back in Custody; 2 Yet at Large

By Louise Houghton

Three of the four men who escaped from the Floyd county jail by overpowering a guard, April 10, were back in custody last week, according to sheriff's deputies, here. The fourth was still at large, Tuesday, as was Julian D. Tackett, 18, of Magoffin county, who escaped in a separate incident, March 25.

Tony Manns, 17, of Salyersville, who was being held here while awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary, turned himself in to the Magoffin county sheriff's department, Friday morning. He had been sentenced to seven years in prison after pleading guilty last month to auto theft, vandalism and criminal solicitation, and now is charged with escape as well.

Dennis J. Horn, 18, of Allen gave himself up to Lexington police, last Tuesday, and was brought back here, Wednesday. He had been held here on auto theft charges, and now also is charged with escape.

James E. Porter, 22, of Dwale, was arrested last week in Long county, Ga., where his mother lives, after she notified local authorities of his whereabouts. Floyd Sheriff Henry Hale is trying to arrange extradition so that he can be brought here for trial, but deputies said Porter is fighting that move.

Porter was brought back here last month from the same Georgia county, where he fled after allegedly stabbing another Dwale man in the chest with a knife less than a month after Porter finished serving a one-year jail term here for criminal trespass. At the time of the escape, he was being held here on first-degree assault charges.

Still at large this week is Sammy J. Preston, 43, of Salyersville, charged in Magoffin county with attempted murder. He and the other three prisoners escaped on the evening of April 10 when a jailer here unlocked a cell to admit a new prisoner and the inmates gained possession of the keys. A car parked near the jail was stolen during the escape, but has since been recovered.

Probe Continues In Ohio Death

By Ron Marstin

An investigation was continuing this week into the cause of death of a young Mt. Vernon, Ohio, woman whose body was returned here for burial on Sunday.

Mrs. Tammie Gail Hall, 27, died last Thursday at Mansfield (Ohio) General Hospital. Richland County (Ohio) Coroner William L. Jeffery found that she died of a skull fracture. He ruled the death accidental.

Det. Sgt. Michael Bowers, of the Mt. Vernon Police Department, said Hall's death is under investigation but is not being handled as a homicide at this time. About a dozen persons who were present at a party with her at the time she was injured are being interviewed, he said.

Mrs. Hall was taken to Knox Community Hospital in Mt. Vernon around 5:30 a.m. Saturday, April 11, after she was found lying at the foot of a basement staircase in the house where the party was being held, Bowers said. She was transferred two days later to the head injury unit at Mansfield General Hospital, where she died.

Toxicology tests had been ordered but the results were not yet available, Bowers said Tuesday.

Born July 27, 1959 in Columbus, Ohio, she was the daughter of Marjorie Marie Lewis, of Pikeville, and the late Alvin Craft and was a member of Westland Baptist Church.

In addition to her mother, she is survived by her husband, Randall J. Hall; a son, Joshua Nichols; four brothers, Alvin Thomas Lewis and Paul Douglas Lewis, both of Mt. Vernon, Russell Irvin Lewis, of Betsy Layne, and John Allen Lewis, of Pikeville; and a sister, Sherry Case, of Allen.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday, April 19, at 1 p.m. at the Island Creek Free Will Baptist Church in Pikeville. Burial was in the Maynard cemetery at Stanville under direction of Hall Funeral Home.

MARQUEE

MY LIFE AS A DOG (PG-13-Skouras Pictures) Starring Tomas von Bromssen, Anton Glanzelius. ★ ★ ★

By J.T. YURKO

Don't let the title "My Life as a Dog" turn you off. This is one of the most delightful films to show up on any screen, foreign or domestic, in a long, long time. The story of the trials and tribulations of a young boy growing up in Sweden in the late 1950s is charming without being cute, poignant without the mush, and funny without the silliness.

The title refers to the boy's philosophy in life, a life not without a measure of misfortune. His father is always absent, working wherever he can find employment. His mother is kind and loving, but she is also sickly. The boy is to live with his uncle in a small village in the country, and there he undergoes the trials and tribulations everyone suffers while turning into a teenager.

He deals with his problems by putting them into perspective. He reads that the Russians have put a dog into space, but they have no way to bring him back. The dog will just circle the earth for four months until the food runs out. In a way, the boy feels like that dog — sent to strange places, given food and shelter, but unable to go home.

The film is the winner of the Swedish equivalent of the Academy Awards. The young boy is played by Anton Glanzelius, and his performance won the Best Actor award, even though he was barely 11 at the time.

Director Lasse Hallstrom's style, which strikes a remarkable balance between comedy and tragedy, is a far cry from the lugubrious tone of many of Ingmar Bergman's films. In an interview, Hallstrom told me he's a fan of the films Czech director Milos Forman made while he was still in Prague, which have much the same nestled, small-town wit about them. Forman went on to direct "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

If this film is any indication, the same success that awaited Forman could easily come to Hallstrom. Catch a rising star.

Complaints Investigated

Ms. Houghton's recent article (3/18/87) on the Ombudsman Program helped to meet one of the goals of that program, namely, to make the general public aware that residents of long term care and nursing homes are entitled to quality care. The Ombudsman Program's primary goal is to help residents or family and friends of residents in these homes to resolve problems regarding care. The ombudsman investigates every complaint and reports to the appropriate agency. Others are involved in this effort of assuring quality care in the facilities of the Big Sandy Region, including the Department for Social Services, Guardianship, Adult Protective Services, and personnel in the Division of Licensing and Regulations—all in the Cabinet for Human Resources. These agencies, along with the Big Sandy Long Term Care Ombudsman Program act on complaints relating to poor quality of care. Complaints, regardless of their nature, origin, or personal opinions of validity, are investigated by these agencies, serving as a network to insure that residents' rights are not being violated.

If you readers have a concern regarding a long term care facility in the Big Sandy Region, encourage them to contact one of the agencies listed above. As consumers of health care they have their right. If they would like more information regarding the local Ombudsman Program, become a volunteer, or would like to report a concern, they may call 886-9402. They may write or call without giving their name.

Pulling Together

After attending the Board of Education meeting April 1, I would like to know why members of the South East Floyd County Concerned Citizens are not willing to consider another site for the McDowell-Wheelwright consolidation?

All I've heard them say is people from Minnie are advocating the Minnie site. From what I've heard and seen the people of Minnie are ready to compromise and the SEFCCC are the ones in fact that are not willing to compromise.

People, we are going to have to pull together and not farther apart if we want our children to have a school that all of Kentucky would be proud of. Cheap shots at people with different view points isn't what I call pulling together, and this isn't going to help in getting our school built.

Please let us all meet and discuss this matter like adults, not like kids fighting over a new toy. This school is not a toy and will not be given to one side or the other. It has to be shared.

Split the Money

I am a student at McDowell High School. I thought I would voice my opinion about the consolidation about of McDowell and Wheelwright schools.

I saw the letter from Wheelwright students. I agreed with most of the things they had to say, but I was opposed to some of the statements. I really don't think that the Minnie site is fair to Wheelwright students, but, on the other hand, I don't think the Hi Hat site is fair to my fellow classmates and me.

The letter mentioned a student who attended Wheelwright and lived at Weeksbury. I live at Wayland. I have to catch two buses every morning. If that new school is built, I will probably not be able to attend it.

You also mentioned using fences to protect students from falling off the cliff, and, yes, it could happen, but at least you won't fall off a cliff at Minnie.

I say that we should split the funds available and renovate both schools.

Adkins' Death Ruled Accident

Moses Adkins, whose body was found around 9:50 a.m., Monday, in Branham's Creek, has been ruled an accidental drowning, according to Coroner Roger Nelson.

Adkins, 39, was born at Galveston, March 17, 1948, a son of the late Andy and Mindy Newsome Adkins. He was a construction worker.

He is survived by a daughter, Lisa Jane Adkins, of Lorraine, O.; a sister, Laura Adkins, of Baltimore, Md.; three half-brothers, Melvin, and Frank Adkins, and Jay Lee Adams, all of Galveston; four half-sisters, Florence Newsome, of Ligon, Martha Adkins, of Endicott, Gracie Adkins and Bernice Rogers, both of Galveston.

Funeral services have been tentatively set for Friday at 10 a.m. at the Little Rachael Regular Baptist Church. Officiating ministers will be Alex Hall, Milford Adams, Green Howell, and James Hamilton. Burial will be made in the family cemetery at Galveston under direction of Carter Funeral Home.

Funds are authorized under the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), Title III, to assist workers who have been displaced due to plant closures, foreign competition and changes in technology and industry. JTPA is administered by the Labor Department's Employment and Training Administration.

Can Reduce Waste

On March 27-29 the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition held a toxics workshop at the Hindman Settlement School. The message delivered by Mr. David Sarokin, consultant to the N.J. Dept. of Environmental Protection, was one of great hope and optimism that the technology is here to cut toxic waste dramatically and end the need for building any more waste facilities.

Mr. Sarokin stated that the Environmental Protection Agency has just released a report on waste reduction, stating that it was feasible for waste in this country to be reduced by thirty-three percent in the next five years. The Office of Technology Assessment went further than that in their report, stating that a 50 percent reduction of waste was possible over the same time span. The best news was that many times this can be achieved while creating savings for the company that initiates the waste reduction practices.

Mr. Sarokin stated that as long as easy disposal options were available, such as landfill or incinerators, management would choose these easy methods over being more creative in their thinking about the production process. That is why in New Jersey a bill is being drawn up to force waste reduction practices first before any new waste facilities are built.

Here in Kentucky so far our political leaders have only given us lip service when it comes to waste reduction and recycling. Instead the Natural Resources Cabinet continues to permit waste facilities, a trend that is only going to lead to more endangerment of the citizenry.

Elections for Sale?

Must elections be bought? What has happened to the old fashioned way? Then they earned it; now it seems it must be bought. Common Cause states that the 1986 Congressional candidates spend close to $400 million, four times the amount spent a decade ago.

Also, may I add, if we want any help in eastern Kentucky, we must support the candidate for governor from our part of the state or be left holding the bag.

SOAP BEAT

A mother-daughter team is writing 'Ryan's Hope'

By Marie Michaels

Many soap opera viewers would envy Eleanor Mancusi, who grew up with "Ryan's Hope" and is now serving, along with her mother, Claire Labine, as co-headwriter of the soap.

Mancusi and Labine

Longtime viewers of "Ryan's Hope" will remember that Labine and her former writing partner, Paul Avila Mayer, created the show and co-wrote it until about three years ago. Labine was working as a consultant for "Ryan's Hope" when she was asked to write for the soap again while the current headwriting team, Millee Taggart and Tom King, worked on another project.

Labine agreed, if she could be teamed with her daughter, a "Ryan's Hope" associate writer for the past year.

"I wanted to do this as soon as the show asked me," says Labine, "but only if Eleanor would write the show with me.

agonized over how to ask Eleanor to work on the project, even though I knew she'd do it to help me out. I didn't want to ask her to do anything that might inhibit her as a writer."

Labine needn't have worried. Mancusi immediately agreed to team with her mom, and the two have spent many long, hard days at the "Ryan's Hope" office and additional time together after hours discussing the plot lines.

"At home, Mom and I talk about plot lines, while my husband and father talk about sports," says Mancusi with a laugh.

"We work well together, because we have a different approach to the work," adds Mancusi, who, much to Labine's delight, began writing as a child.

As with all soaps, the "Ryan's Hope" writers don't write for just one character; they write for every character that appears on a given day. But there are usually one or two characters for whom the writer has a special affinity.

Labine and Mancusi are no exception. Labine admits that she has special feelings about John Ryan and Lizzie Ransome (played by Jason Adams and Catherine Larsen), while Mancusi says that she identifies with Ryan and Rick Hyde (played by Yasmine Bleeth and Grant Show).

Compete in State Math Finals

The Math Counts team of Mountain Christian Academy placed ninth in state competition in Lexington, April 4, higher than any other team from this part of the state. MCA earned a spot in the state finals by placing first in the Big Sandy divisional competition March 7 at Prestonsburg Community College.

The competition is open to junior high students and is sponsored by the state chapter of the National Society of Professional Engineers.

Sr. Monica Schieber, MCA coach, said students had been preparing for a year and half for the competition. The team met one day a week for one hour. "We carry the program to offer a challenge to the seventh and eighth graders and to better prepare them for their senior high studies," Schieber said.

This year marked the third time MCA has competed in Math Counts and the first time it has advanced to the state level.

In-Service Training Targets Slow Learner

Youngsters who appear to be slower learners, who are considered "low-achievers," sometimes get less support and attention from teachers who may be unaware that they tend to give more time to the "good" students.

Special training in spotting these tendencies and developing better interaction techniques is offered through Teacher Expectations and Student Achievements, an in-service program for teachers of all subjects.

The Kentucky Department of Education will provide grants to pay for the training and for substitute teachers. Thirteen districts are now involved in the training. Twenty additional districts will be selected to implement the program in the fall.

Research shows that low-achieving students often receive less support and motivation from their teachers than do their more academically successful peers. The TESA program begins with a three-hour workshop, and continues with practice sessions, coaching one another in the classroom, and more workshops over five months.

For information, call (502) 564-2264 or write Thomas J. Vest, Kentucky Department of Education, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Abandoned Mines Unsafe For Adventure Seekers

"It was stupid to go in there" were the words of a St. Louis, Mo., teenager critically injured while exploring an abandoned iron mine last September, typical of many such occurrences each year, according to the Labor Department's Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA).

The teenager was the victim of a boulder "the size of a pick-up truck" that dislodged and pinned the youth as he attempted to climb out of the mine. Over 200 rescuers tried and failed to free him before a hydraulic jack finally was used to lift the rock far enough to pull his legs out.

Year after year, abandoned mines and quarries claim the lives of teenagers, adults and children. These hazardous sites have caused suffocations, drownings, as well as head, neck, and back injuries in accidents involving trespassers at abandoned or intermittently idle mining properties.

Abandoned properties are especially dangerous during the spring when thawing from winter storms makes dirt loose around pits and quarries. Idle or intermittently operated underground mines may have oxygen-deficient air, an explosive atmosphere or poor roof conditions.

MSHA advises families, amateur prospectors, hikers and others to become familiar with the hazards associated with abandoned mines and quarries and act to avoid them. The agency also alerts mine operators to the dangerous consequences which threaten trespassers on their mining properties.

Proclaims American Home Week

Judge John M. Stumbo signed a proclamation, recently, declaring April 26-May 2 American Home Week as Ellen Holbrook, at left, and Dorothy Harris, president of the Big Sandy Board of Realtors, looked on. Each year at this time emphasis is placed on the constitutional right to own, use, or transfer private property, which in most cases is a home.

As part of the American Home Week observance, the Big Sandy Board of Realtor will hold a blood drive from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., April 28, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., April 30 and May 1, at the Central Kentucky Blood Center, here.

Consol Prexy Sees Better Coal Future

The president of Consolidation Coal Company painted a bright picture for coal in the longer term, but said the next three to five years could be "a tough period."

B.R. Brown, who also is Consol's chief executive office, told the coal Summit II conference in Lexington, last week, that the coal industry is burdened with excess production capacity, poor financial performance and high regional unemployment.

"For the first time since the oil embargo," Brown said, "we are competing vigorously with gas and oil." At the same time, new nuclear capacity coming on line also is putting a damper on coal.

"In fact, this year may go into the record for the greatest addition to nuclear capacity ever. Eleven plants are scheduled to come on-stream in 1987—ten east of the Mississippi. Five existing units on the TVA system have been out of service since late 1985. They are coming back—all 5,500 megawatts' worth," Brown said.

The Consol president said that since the mid-1970s, new nuclear capacity either met growing demand or displaced oil and gas. But he added that today, for the first time, nuclear is displacing coal. Nuclear power coming on line this year is equivalent to 30 million tons of coal, Brown said.

Nevertheless, despite excess production capacity that exists at present for oil, gas and coal, Brown said he believed that excess capacity will work its way out of the market and that "taking up the slack will be the major trend in energy markets as we move into the 1990s." He also pointed out that, unlike oil and gas, coal has a rich reserve base to meet any pickup in future demand.

Brown noted that more oil is being burned and that new oil fields in the North Sea and Alaska are depleting. "When that non-OPEC capacity is wrung out, we'll be back where we started—with scarce reserves." Brown expects oil prices to be in the upper-$20 range, in real terms, by 1995 and said that natural gas prices would begin climbing even sooner.

Brown pointed out that there will be few new nuclear units in the 1990s. "The generation of atomic power plants that was ordered between 1956 and 1978 is coming to an end. After 1990, our utility systems will have to look to fossil fuels or imports to meet growing demand."

Shakertown Plans More River Trips

How did the Shakers get their produce to the river down these high cliffs? When were the palisades formed? Who built High Bridge? What kind of bird is that? These are a few of the many questions heard daily by the crew of the riverboat, Dixie Belle. To address these and other special interests, Shakertown at Pleasant Hill has announced River Venture programs for the 1987 season.

According to Dixie Belle Captain F. W. Kephart, passengers have indicated an interest in longer rides with more opportunities for experiencing the history, lore and natural wonders of the Kentucky River. Eleven Saturday morning River Ventures have been scheduled to meet this demand.

The two-hour River Venture riverboat rides will feature guest speakers and informal discussion on topics of Kentucky River history and natural environment.

The Shaker community at Pleasant Hill was intimately a part of the river's life. As early as 1814, the Shakers operated mills and ferry boats on the Kentucky. The dramatic limestone cliffs that line the river's meandering gorge contain an unequalled collection of plant life. Birds by the thousands nest and feed among the cliffs, trees and bushes.

Since 1981, visitors to Shakertown have been able to explore the area of Shaker river trade and the scenic beauty of the region aboard the paddlewheel, Dixie Belle. This year, beginning April 25, one-hour riverboat rides depart historic Shaker Landing every morning and afternoon through November 1.

To interpret important sites of Shaker downriver trade, trips through Kentucky River Lock and Dam No. 7 were instituted in 1985. The two-hour evening cruises are regularly available when locks are in operation, on weekends from late May through mid-October. The first lock trip for 1987 is Friday, May 22, from 6 to 8 p.m.

River Ventures begin May 23, highlighting "Wildflower and Herbs of the Kentucky River Valley." Shakertown's herbalist, Debbie Larkin Pope, will speak and lead the discussion.

Other River Ventures following: June 13, "Birds and Wildlife Along the River;" June 27, "History of Navigation on the Kentucky River;" July 11, "Yarns and Lore of the Kentucky River;" July 25, "The Famous High Bridge;" August 8, "River Trade of the Shakers;" August 22, "The Flow of Early Kentucky History;" September 12, "Geology of the Kentucky River Palisades;" September 19, "Paul Sawyer's Kentucky River;" September 26, "Bird Migrations through the Bluegrass;" and October 10, "Steamboats of the Kentucky River."

All riverboat departures are subject to river and weather conditions, and previous charters. Those who plan a riverboat trip should call ahead to confirm times of departure. Reservations will be accepted for the River Venture excursions.

Shakertown is America's only national historic landmark with all services, touring, dining, lodging and shopping, housed in original 19th century buildings. Located on 2800 acres of Shaker farmlands in the Bluegrass region of Kentucky, it is 25 miles southeast of Lexington, and 80 miles southeast of Louisville.

For further information or reservations write, Shakertown at Pleasant Hill, 3500 Lexington Road, Harrodsburg, Kentucky 40330 or call (606) 734-5411.

Unlike my opponent, I am more than willing to discuss any and all of my positions with the voting public before the election. I want people to know how I feel the way the Circuit Clerk's office should be run. I'm running on my record—I'LL PLAY IT.

I have always been fair and honest with everybody. Traveling throughout this county, I have met many people who have personal experiences to tell about the way they've been treated in the Circuit Clerk's office. Some have not been treated fairly and others have been made to feel they have no right to ask questions. This office is supposed to be for ALL THE PEOPLE and not just for a few.

I have a RECORD of fair play—I have a RECORD of honesty. I want to establish a RECORD of being the best Clerk I can possibly be. You won't be insulted in my office. I look forward to having you bring your problems to me and I will try to help you solve them. I won't turn you away without trying.

I PLEDGE HONESTY, INTEGRITY AND SERVICE TO YOU, the citizens of Floyd County...I would like to be your full-time WORKING CLERK. Give me a chance to prove to you what I can do for the office...YOU WON'T BE SORRY YOU DID.

Crunchy, Bumpy Lawns Benefit From Rolling

Many Kentucky homeowners complain that their lawns have become so rough and bumpy it is difficult to walk across them comfortably.

The problem may be worms. But killing the worms is not the best solution according to a University of Kentucky lawn expert.

"This problem occurs most often in older lawns on good, well-drained soil. Earthworms and night crawlers seem to be the cause," said A.J. Powell, Extension turf specialist at UK.

During late winter and early spring, the worms' surface burrows frequently become filled with water. As the water freezes and thaws it causes the ground to heave and swell, becoming very uneven.

This also can occur in the summer, when the worms leave small mounds, called castings, on the soil surface. The castings harden during dry weather, making the lawn lumpy and crunchy.

"Sometimes it feels as though you are walking on marbles, or pingpong balls," Powell said.

But killing the earthworms that caused the problem is not an ideal solution.

"Earthworms are very beneficial in reducing thatch and improving tilth," Powell said. Thatch is a spongy, organic layer of roots and stems that builds up at the soil surface. As thatch increases, the rooting into the soil decreases, reducing the lawn's drought tolerance.

"Thatch also serves as a cafeteria for insects and disease, increasing the chances that a disease or insect problem will take hold," Powell said.

"Rolling a bumpy lawn with a water-ballast roller may be the best thing to do. Water can be added or drained to adjust the weight of the roller to the slope and condition of the lawn and the source of power available to move it. Use the roller when the lawn is moist, but not wet. Dethatching the lawn in two directions also can help to correct the problem. Neither rolling or dethatching will kill the worms," Powell said.

Air Force Graduate

Airman Martin W. Dye, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andy J. Dye Sr., of Printer, has graduated from the U.S. Air Force aerospace ground equipment mechanic course at Chanute Air Force Base, Ill. He is a 1986 graduate of McDowell High School.

Odometer Fraud Is A Costly Business

Dollar for dollar, odometer fraud is a costly business for consumers. The most recent estimates are that the annual cost to consumers is in excess of three billion dollars.

The little digital dial that sits within the speedometer in the instrument cluster of a car's dashboard is often the only reliable means of indicating a used car's actual mileage, and when it has been tampered with, potential buyers are deprived of a key indicator of the vehicle's condition.

"The value of a used car goes down as the mileage goes up," according to Diane Steed, Administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Transportation. "What makes odometer fraud especially costly is that consumers may be paying $1,000 or more too much for high-mileage used cars with odometers that have been altered to show fewer miles driven."

A federal law, part of the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act, is designed to insure that sellers of used vehicles—both car dealers and private citizens—disclose true mileage. The law also has sanctions to penalize individuals who are guilty of rolling back or disconnecting the mileage indicator, or by giving incorrect information on its accuracy.

Accurate Readings Required
To combat the widespread deception against unsuspecting buyers, the federal law requires accurate disclosure of odometer readings when a car is sold. It gives victimized consumers a legal basis to act, allows state attorneys general to sue on behalf of defrauded consumers and authorizes the federal government to bring civil and criminal actions against violators. Odometer fraud is now a felony, punishable by up to 3 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

The law requires that the seller of a vehicle state in writing whether the odometer reading is the true mileage, the mileage in excess of 99,999 or not the true mileage.

Most states now require that the odometer reading be written on the title of the vehicle when it is sold. Beginning in 1989, the odometer reading must be entered on the title in all states.

Specifically, the required disclosure statement must include the following: odometer reading at time of transfer, date of transfer, seller's name and signature, make, body type, year, model and vehicle identification number of the vehicle, a statement indicating the odometer reflects actual miles driven or that the odometer is inaccurate. The statement must also include the buyer's name, address and signature, odometer servicing requirements, and a statement that failure to comply with the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act of 1972 may result in the seller being liable for damages and subject to penalties under the act.

Cautious Buyer Is Best Defense
The best defense against this form of consumer fraud is development of cautious buying habits. The following hints may help save time and money:

"Check the vehicle for evidence of tampering, such as marks on the odometer, or misaligned numbers. Check the mileage entered on oil stickers, inspection stickers and tire warranty cards.

"The tires may also provide additional information on the car's condition. If the odometer reading is less than 25,000 miles, the vehicle should have original tires. All four tires should be the same brand and will usually be radial tires.

"If the odometer reading is entered on the vehicle title, check the reading against previous titles on file with your state's department of motor vehicles.

"Try to contact previous owners. If the vehicle was owned by a resident of your state, the department of motor vehicles should have the name and address.

"Be wary of buying a vehicle with low mileage that was formerly a leased vehicle. Leased vehicles are driven an average of 30,000 miles a year and a high percentage later have their odometers rolled back.

An impartial mechanic may be able to provide additional information on the vehicle's condition based on brake wear or other physical evidence. And, a potential used car buyer should never hesitate to seek mileage disclosure statements from the dealer.

The federal law also requires written notice of odometer servicing. When an odometer is serviced, repaired or replaced and cannot be adjusted to reflect the true mileage, it must be set at zero. A sticker indicating the true mileage before service and the date of the service must be attached to the left door frame.

Victim's Rights

Individuals who believe they have been victimized by odometer tampering can sue the seller for damages, and may want to consult an attorney about the advisability of a lawsuit because they must be able to prove the odometer mileage was misrepresented, who was responsible for the misrepresentation and that there was intent to defraud.

Individuals who win their lawsuit may be awarded $1,500 or three times the amount of damages, whichever is greater, plus court costs and reasonable attorney fees. State attorneys general can also bring civil actions on behalf of consumers.

In order to report a violation to the federal government, contact the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Odometer Fraud Staff, 400 Seventh Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590. Although the federal government cannot take action on behalf of consumers, their information is important to overall law enforcement efforts.

How 30 Days of Better Hearing Changed My Life!

Families everywhere are enjoying the benefits of a new discovery that makes better hearing possible, even in noisy surroundings. Could this be you? If so, call 886-3773 today for our very special trial offer.

"For years I was shy in groups, even at home, due to a hearing loss. Didn't enter into conversations easily. By the time I understood what was said, the group had moved onto another subject.

"Recently I learned about ASP, the first generation of smart hearing instruments. Designed to cut out distracting background noise and let in the sounds I wanted to hear. I was interested and my ASP dispenser let me make up my mind with a 30-day trial.

"Am I happy now! The new ASP really works! It senses changes in noise levels automatically, and adjusts automatically.

"It pulls in words I want to hear and blocks the noise that used to disturb my hearing. It's great to be part of the family group again!"

Excel Sets April 25 As Scholarship Day

Saturday, April 25, has been scheduled as Spring Scholarship Competition Day at the Paintsville campus of Excel College.

When the competition is completed, according to Director Bob Porter, more than $8,000 in student scholarships will have been awarded. High school seniors from a five-county area have been invited to participate in this competition.

The testing program begins at 10 a.m. and includes a Business Aptitude Test, the Thurstone Mental Alertness Exam, the SRA (an arithmetic exercise) and a 50-word phonetic scramble. Collectively, Porter explained, the raw scores will be used to determine the winners of the competition.

Winners of the competition will be announced by May 11, according to Porter. Scholarships include one full scholarship of $3,975.00; one partial scholarship of $1,000; and eight scholarships of $500 each. All scholarships are applicable to courses of study at Excel College in Paintsville.

The day's competition also includes, in addition to the 70 minute testing program, a catered luncheon, a tour of the school, its classrooms, labs and equipment, and a briefing by Porter.

OLW Hospital Volunteers Honored

Our Lady of the Way Hospital honored its year-round volunteers with a luncheon at May Lodge in Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, April 15.

Melissa Hancock, Beth Pratt, Melissa Triplett and Louise West received certificates and pens as tokens of appreciation for the hours and help they have given to the hospital. Hancock and West were given special recognition and service pins for five years of volunteer service. Two volunteers, Sister Deanna Wood and Faye Patton, were unable to attend the dinner. They will receive their certificates and gifts later.

EASTERN KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY

A SCHOOL OF OPPORTUNITY

EKU is a School of Opportunity, a student-oriented university where teaching is our principal responsibility.

If you are a Kentucky high school graduate, you will be admitted without conditions for the 1987 Fall Semester to pursue baccalaureate programs if you have completed the Pre-College Curriculum or scored at certain levels on the ACT or if you are in the upper-half of your graduating class. If you do not meet one of these standards, we will admit you to pursue baccalaureate programs with the condition that the courses that you missed in the Pre-College Curriculum will be made-up as a part of your program of studies at EKU.

In addition, EKU offers a number of community college (associate degree) programs. The completion of the Pre-College Curriculum is not a requirement for admission to these programs.

At EKU we strongly encourage high school students to complete the Pre-College Curriculum. But if you did not complete it, we are still prepared to admit you to EKU where teaching students is our first priority.

If you have questions or need additional information, contact:

Dr. John D. Rowlett
Vice President for Academic Affairs and Research and Dean of the Faculties
Eastern Kentucky University

VA Raises Maximum Loan Interest Rate

In response to mortgage market pressures, the Veterans Administration raised its maximum home loan interest rate from 8.5 percent to 9.5 percent, effective April 13.

The increase was made to bring the maximum VA approved rate closer in line with the mortgage market, which has moved up in recent weeks.

At 9.5 percent, the latest rate is still low enough that little or no decline in the number of new and refinanced loans is expected, say VA home loan guaranty experts.

The number of home loan guaranties requested during the last six months is running at 40,000 a month.

VA loan counselors recommend veterans consider refinancing when the loan rate is two percentage points or more below the rate fixed in the existing mortgage. Because of high interest rates over the past few years, there are more than 700,000 veterans with mortgage rates of 11.5 percent or more who thus should be considering refinancing.

In the past three years, the VA rate was lowered 15 times, from 13.5 percent on May 8, 1984 to 8.5 percent on January 19. The latest change is the first increase in more than two years.

Applying For Survivors' Benefits

By JIM KELLY
Social Security District Director
Anyone who believes that he or she may be eligible for Social Security survivors benefits should apply for them as soon as possible after the worker's death. Application can be made at any Social Security office. In some cases, benefits may not be payable for any month before the month of application. The application process can be quicker if you have your records when you contact Social Security. However, the application should not be delayed. The people at the Social Security office can suggest other evidence that may be submitted.

Some of the evidence needed to support an application for survivors benefits includes:

- The applicant's and the deceased worker's Social Security numbers.
- Proof of the applicant's age.
- Proof of marriage, if the person is applying for widow's or widower's benefits.
- Proof of the worker's death.
- Children's birth certificates if they are applying for benefits.
- The deceased worker's Form W-2 (or federal tax return if self-employed) for the most recent tax year.
- Proof of support if application is being made for benefits as a dependent parent or grandchild of the deceased worker.

Bicentennial Observance

On Wednesday, April 29, the Social Security Division of Prestonsburg Community College will commemorate the 200th Anniversary of the Constitutional Convention with a program designed to give area residents perspective on the event. The program will include brief presentations by Dr. Thomas Matijasic, Dr. William Graves and Mr. Robert McAninch. The program will begin at 3:05 p.m. in Pike Auditorium and last about an hour. The public is invited.

Stormy, Lifelong Romance Is Subject of "Love Story"

Some people, it is said, fall in love at first sight. Such was not the case with Williams Hatchard and Philippa Jameson, the two principal characters in "Love Song," a two-part "Masterpiece Theatre" presentation premiering Sunday, May 10, at 10 p.m. on KET.

William and Philippa meet on their first day at Cambridge University and quickly decide they loathe each other. Their individual scholarly ambitions and differing ideas on almost everything drive them into a fierce rivalry.

Eventually a series of events draws William and Philippa together. "Love Song" spans their relationship from its stormy beginnings to middle and old age when, to the constant delight of their Cambridge University colleagues, their rivalry still blazes.

Their roles are shared by Michael Kitchen and Diana Hardcastle who play the contentious pair in their earlier years, and Constance Cummings and Maurice Denham who take the couple into middle and old age.

The two-part program, based on the short story by Jeffrey Archer, concludes Sunday, May 17 at 10 p.m. on KET. "Masterpiece Theatre" repeats Fridays at 8 p.m.

The figure drawings of Prestonsburg Community College art students will be on display at the PCC Library April 20-May 1. A reception with many of the young artists present will be held Tuesday, April 29 from 6-8 p.m. The public is invited.

Progress

In his two terms as county judge/executive, Paul Patton has made a measurable difference in the lives of the people he serves. Among his accomplishments as chief administrator of the geographically largest, and perhaps most complex, Kentucky county are:

- developing the state's most comprehensive rural solid waste program;
- improving the condition of roads and bridges, nearly doubling the miles of blacktopped roads;
- expanding the senior citizens meals program by 100 percent;
- increasing the county's fire protection facilities more than twofold;
- reducing administrative costs by 47 percent while raising employee hourly wages and
- increasing public water supplies to rural residents by 500 percent.

That's what we mean when we say Paul Patton has a record of proven progress!

Air Quality Better
But Still Not Good

The quality of our air has improved significantly since the Clean Air Act was passed more than a decade ago. However, the country remains plagued by a lethal array of chemical air pollutants—many of which have been largely ignored by federal regulators.

The 1970 Clean Air Act gives the federal government authority to control all airborne toxic chemicals. But according to the National Wildlife Federation's annual Environmental Quality Index, only six out of approximately 2,000 substances have been regulated. The others are spewed largely uncontrolled into the environment.

Studies show that more than 62 million pounds of highly toxic chemicals are released annually into the air from some 300 manufacturing plants in 34 states. The list includes more than 8 million pounds of methylene chloride and some 3 million pounds of benzene and butadiene. All are known or suspected cancer-causing substances.

Acid rain, too, remains a serious problem in many parts of the country. Although the Reagan administration announced last year that action on acid rain is necessary, the levels of the pollutants that cause it—sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides—continue to edge upward.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, the amount of these pollutants in the air increased 2 percent each in 1984 over the previous year. The sulfur and nitrogen emissions are essentially caused by automobile exhaust and industries using coal and other fossil fuel-burning boilers and power plants. They are known to be hazardous to humans, particularly to individuals with respiratory diseases.

Acid rain also is taking a heavy toll on the environment. New evidence shows that at least 75 percent of the lakes in New Hampshire and Rhode Island and at least 60 percent of those in Massachusetts and Maine will be seriously damaged if acid rainfall continues.

In the upper Midwest region, EPA researchers found that 43 percent of the lakes could become devoid of all life as a result of high acidity. In addition, a Brookhaven National Laboratory study indicated that acid rain can cause accelerated weathering of homes, buildings and other structures. As a result, some people may have to repaint, replace rusted fences and do other outdoor maintenance more frequently. Such maintenance can cost each resident of Chicago an estimated $45 annually, each Cleveland resident $28, and each Louisville resident $15.

Another pollutant threatening metropolitan areas is ozone. According to Jane Hathaway, legislative representative with the National Wildlife Federation, "Unlike ozone in the upper atmosphere, which absorbs destructive solar radiation, ozone produced at ground level is harmful—and millions of people are affected." Lower atmosphere ozone is formed when gasoline vapors and other hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides react in the air with sunlight.

Regulated since 1970, ozone levels declined nationally by about 10 percent between 1983 and 1984. However, EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas announced last summer that more than a third of the 84 metropolitan areas being monitored will fail to meet the law's Dec. 31 deadline for reducing ozone pollution to safe levels.

Ozone is considered a serious human health threat, and at present nearly 80 million Americans are breathing unsafe levels of the gas. Recent studies have found that even if cities meet federal requirements, the current ozone standard does not provide sufficient protection.

Other research shows that plants are also at risk from ozone. A University of Wisconsin study discovered that typical summer ozone concentrations can reduce the growth rate of soybeans and wheat by as much as 25 percent. The study also noted that ozone can slow tree growth anywhere from one to 10 percent a year, depending on the severity of the pollution.

YOU'RE WELL-EQUIPPED TO DETECT A GAS LEAK.

Fortunately, natural gas leaks are rare. But if one should occur, you have everything it takes to spot the telltale signs...the ability to see, hear and smell.

INSIDE

The most obvious sign is the smell. Natural gas by itself usually is odorless, so gas companies add a distinctive odor to gas.

If you smell this telltale odor in your home, don't use matches, electrical switches or appliances. Leave the house immediately, then call the gas company from a neighbor's home or pay telephone. Remain near your home until a gas company representative arrives and checks the cause of the odor.

OUTSIDE

You may detect a natural gas leak anywhere gas lines or facilities are located. Sometimes, the sign may be the odor. But in rural areas, natural gas pipelines may contain non-odorized gas. A leak of non-scented gas means little or no odor will be present. So count on your other senses as well.

Look or listen for these signs. Anywhere a gas line is located, a leak may cause:

- a blowing or hissing sound
- dirt being blown into the air
- water bubbling or being blown into the air at a pond, creek or river
- brown patches in vegetation on or near a gas line right-of-way
- fire coming from the ground or burning above it

If you detect any sign of a leak, follow these steps quickly: 1) shut down any motorized equipment or other sources of ignition in use; 2) leave the area at once, and warn others to stay away; and 3) find a telephone away from the area to call the gas company, and the fire and police departments. DO NOT try to extinguish a gas fire or operate any pipeline valves.

Chances are you'll never need to recognize a natural gas leak. But just in case, we think it's important for you to be able to detect signs of trouble. Together, we'll keep natural gas service safe and efficient.

Williams Stars In Bellow Story

From sleeping upside-down in an attic closet in the hit television series "Mork & Mindy" to starring in such box office hits as "The World According to Garp" and "Moscow on the Hudson," Robin Williams' career has included night club comedy, television and film.

This master of improvisational comedy will make his "Great Performance" debut in a new dramatization of Saul Bellow's modern classic, "Seize the Day." It airs Monday, May 4, at 8:30 on KET.

Williams portrays Tony Wilhelm, a failed actor-turned-salesman battling a major mid-life crisis. His marriage has ended. He has lost his job. Tony Wilhelm must begin again. All through the drama, Wilhelm battles these maladies while struggling to gain his father's love.

Adding to his scarred psychological makeup is a less than reputable therapist. Also starring will be Jerry Stiller, Joseph Wiseman and Katherine Borowitz. Author Saul Bellow has a minor role in the drama as a man in the hallway.

Jerry Patton is running for Commonwealth Attorney because he knows Floyd County needs a hard working trial lawyer to prosecute crime.

The present Commonwealth Attorney ran unsuccessfully for County Judge-Executive in 1985 and chose not to resign his position as Commonwealth Attorney even though he abandoned that office for several months to campaign while continuing to draw his salary which our hard-earned taxpayers' money paid for.

James Allen's expense report states that he spent $140,272.00 seeking a job which paid $29,484.00 per year for a four year term. His motive for spending more than he could have expected to be paid in salary is a mystery which he has never offered an explanation for.

His only comment is found in his February 13, 1985, Floyd County Times Ad where he stated "I believe that the most assistance I can give to our people is through service as Floyd County Judge-Executive.

We obviously have a man in the Commonwealth Attorney's office who has shown he does not really want the job. We have a candidate, Jerry Patton, who does. Elect him and put an end to musical chair politics in Floyd County.

RABIES

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA
Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association

There's always the danger that repeated warnings will seem repetitious and finally become boring, but the fact remains that the incidence of rabies is up considerably and continues to pose a serious threat to domestic animals and through them to humans.

*The Kentucky Department of Health Services' epidemiological report notes that there was an increase of 152 percent in the number of confirmed cases of rabies in 1986 over 1985. The report further notes that the increase is confirmed cases was not attributable to the number of animals examined (1,810 in 1986, 1,611 in 1985) but because of an increase in the number of animals which tested positive.

In Kentucky the main reservoir seems to be wild animals, which represented only one-third of the animals tested but more than four-fifths of the animals which tested positive. Among these skunks were the chief reservoir (70) followed by foxes (12) and one raccoon. Among domestic animals, there were ten rabid dogs, three horses and two cattle.

The confirmed cases came from 40 of Kentucky's 120 counties, with 17 of them in Christian county and ten in Madison county. Mostly the counties in which rabies was found are in central or western Kentucky.

There was also a sizeable increase in the number of animal bites reported in 1986, some 3,085 as opposed to 1,044 in 1985. This was like better reporting.

Rabies is a viral disease which is usually spread by animal bites. The virus is present in high concentrations in the saliva of infected animals, and while it can enter the body through mucous membranes or open abrasions, this is rare. It almost always enters the body through a bite, then invades the nerve tissue and makes its way to the central nervous system.

Once rabies symptoms appear in animals or humans, the disease is incurable and usually fatal. Kentucky's last documented case in a human was in 1979.

In animals, it is seen in two forms, "dumb" and "furious." The furious form is more easily recognizable.

Vaccination of pets and awareness on the part of people are the only effective barriers between wild animals and humans, and the rabies vaccination clinics often seen during the spring are ultimately designed for human protection.

Various vaccines are available and are highly effective if properly used. Your veterinarian is qualified to prescribe and administer the proper type of vaccine. He is also kept informed of the incidence of rabies in your community.

Remember, while vaccines are sometimes available in drug stores, you should not attempt these shots yourself. Improper vaccination can harm your animal, and you will not be legally protected if you give the shots yourself.

Your veterinarian is trained in proper diagnosis and vaccination, and gives you valid legal certification that your animal has been vaccinated.

Louise King faced a frightening prospect, radical mastectomy. "Initially, accepting this operation wasn't easy. Then, I was told I would have to travel 200 miles away from home for the treatment. The fear began. If only the Breast Center at Highlands had been there. The Breast Center is a dream that I want to see fulfilled." Louise has been working to realize that dream as a visible spokesperson in the fund raising effort.

Louise King dodged a real lady-killer. Breast cancer.

"In 1981 I was told I needed to have major breast surgery. Then, there I was, 200 miles away from my home and family...feeling very much alone. If only the Breast Center had been there."

As the Breast Center opens, that dream becomes reality.

First State Treasurer Had Complex Job

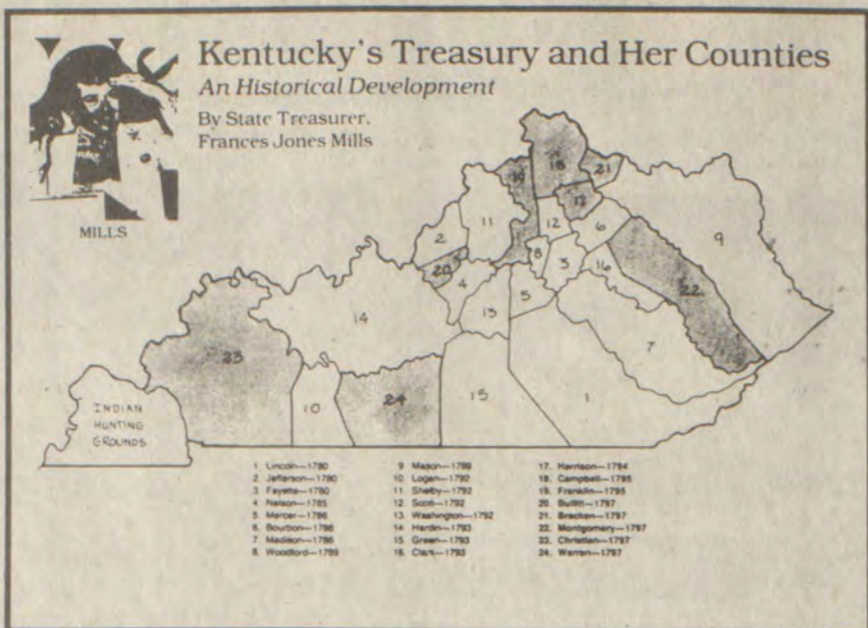

Kentucky's first State Treasurer, John Logan, accepted a one-year appointment from Governor Isaac Shelby, and slayed 15 years to guide the infant Commonwealth through a nightmarish effort to finance a new government with everything from Dutch ducatoons, French Louis, Prussian Fredericks, Italian lire, Arabic tomonds to more accepted coin as the Spanish dollar or "pieces of eight."

Compounding the problems of sorting through this foreign money maze, his predicament was further complicated by paper printed by Virginia, Pennsylvania and North Carolina. These states in printing money to finance the Revolutionary War, found themselves with a problem when the Federal government failed to redeem the paper. Much of this paper found its way into Kentucky and was traded at drastically reduced ratios of as low as $1000 in paper to one dollar in silver. The most stable currency, by far, for this fledgling government was not money, but receipts on goods such as tobacco.

Ironically, Treasurer Logan was required to execute bond with security in the sum of more than one-third million dollars. State revenues were then coming in so slowly, that he had to borrow money to pay members of the legislature and to meet outstanding bills. In the period 1793 to 1796, the legislature formed the counties of Harrison, Franklin, Campbell, Bullitt, Christian, Montgomery, Bracken and Warren.

Harrison was the eighth county formed after Kentucky became a state. It was created from parts of Bourbon and Scott counties and named after Col. Benjamin Harrison, who was at the time a representative from Bourbon county in the Kentucky legislature. Cynthiana, the county seat and chief town, was the scene of fierce fighting during the Civil War. On July 17, 1862, the Confederate General John Hunt Morgan, with a force of 816 men, attacked the Federal forces consisting mainly of home guards and numbering nearly 500. The Federal troops were overpowered and defeated with three-fourths of their number killed, wounded or captured. The second battle of Cynthiana was to be a victory for the Federal forces.

Franklin county was established in 1794, out of parts of Woodford, Mercer and Shelby counties, and named in honor of patriot and statesman, Benjamin Franklin.

Franklin, Frankfort, the capital of the Commonwealth since the year after its admission into the Union, derived its name from Stephen Frank, an early settler of Bryan's Station. Frank, along with others were on their way from Bryan's Station to Mann's Salt Licks for the purpose of procuring salt; while encamped on the bank of the Kentucky River, where the town of Frankfort now stands, they were attacked by Indians and Frank was killed. The first general assembly convened in Lexington and the second, which was in Frankfort, was in session for 48 days.

Campbell county was created in 1794, out of parts of Mason, Scott and Harrison. It contained so much territory that Pendleton, Boone, Kenton and part of Grant counties have since been created out of it. Situated in the northern part of the state, it was named in honor of Col. John Campbell, who was a native of Ireland. He came to Kentucky at an early period and the State of Virginia granted him four thousand acres of land, which was located immediately below Louisville. Campbell became one of the most wealthy landowners of the State.

Bullitt county was established in 1796 and named in honor of Col. Alexander Scott Bullitt. Col. Bullitt was a delegate to the convention which framed Kentucky's Constitution, and he was serving as Lt. Governor when Bullitt county was created. The county is situated in the northwest middle of the state and bounded on the north by Jefferson, east by Spencer, south by Nelson, and on the west by Hardin and Meade counties. Shepherdsville is the county seat and was incorporated in 1793. The first salt works erected in Kentucky was about 3 miles from Shepherdsville.

Christian county was formed in the year 1796, and named in honor of Col. William Christian, a former native of Augusta County, Virginia. He married the sister of Patrick Henry and emigrated to Kentucky in 1785. Jefferson Davis, who was to become President of the Confederate States of America, was born in Christian county in the part that is now Todd county. Hopkinsville, the county seat, was laid out in 1799.

Montgomery county was established in 1796, out of part of Clark county. Since that date, portions of its then territory have been taken to form the counties of Floyd, Clay, Bath, Harlan, Perry, Lawrence, Pike, Morgan, Breathitt, Letcher, Owsley, Johnson, Powell, Magoffin, Wolfe, Menifee, Lee and Martin—in all 18 counties. General Richard Montgomery, in memory of whom this county was named, was a Major General in the American Revolutionary Army. Mount Sterling, the county seat, was originally called Little Mountain before 1782.

Bracken, the 23rd county in order of formation, was organized in 1796, out of parts of Mason and Campbell counties. The county derived its name from two creeks, Big and Little Bracken, which were named after William Bracken, a hunter and pioneer who settled upon one of those creeks. Augusta, the county seat is located on the Ohio River and was referred to in writings of that time as "one of the most beautiful situations on the Ohio River, with a fine harbor."

Warren county was created in 1796 out of part of Logan, and named in honor of General Joseph Warren, the hero of Bunker Hill. He was one of the most distinguished patriots of the American Revolutionary War. Bowling Green, the county seat boasted at an early age a handsome public park and fountain and a superior water works. The first railroad in Kentucky was in Warren county and was over a mile long. The cars were drawn by horses.

Homebound Kentuckians Also Have A Health Care Advocate

Kentuckians in nursing homes or hospitals—places visited by state and local officials and patient advocates—have obvious avenues to pursue complaints about inadequate health care.

But what about people who are able to remain in their own homes as long as they receive the proper medical attention? Where can they turn to gain the same protection of their rights guaranteed to people living in institutions?

In 1986 the Cabinet for Human Resources created just such a position with the establishment of the In-Home Services Ombudsman, a new effort within the cabinet's existing Ombudsman services. Viola Brawner, former director of the Franklin County Council on Aging and a well-known advocate for senior citizens, now serves in the role of Kentucky's In-Home Services Ombudsman.

Human Resources Secretary Al Austin said the growth of home care programs means a need for more professional help for the elderly treated in their homes. "There are an estimated 33,000 Kentuckians now receiving some sort of medical treatment in their own residences as opposed to being institutionalized," he said. "It allows greater personal independence and, in most cases, is less costly to the patient or to medical insurance programs such as Medicaid.

"Yet for some time now we have been encouraging the growth of home care, home health, homemaker-health aide and other in-home medical services without attempting to provide any avenue to intervene and resolve problems. With the experience Viola Brawner has brought to the job, we are beginning to better serve both the system and the individual patient."

John Clayton, CHR Ombudsman, said the need addressed through the In-Home Services Ombudsman is that of providing a third-party to mediate problems.

"A nursing home resident complaining of poor quality medical care or failure of the facility to meet individual needs may turn to the Long-term Care Ombudsman or state adult protection workers or even the Division of Licensing and Regulations," Clayton said. "Often the resulting 'official review' clears up minor problems or differences of opinion.

"We are making the natural extension of that same protection and ability to have a third-party serve as an advocate for the patient being treated in his or her own home. These people are frail. The providers are not highly regulated or frequently inspected. We're trying to mediate and resolve differences."

Clayton said that should efforts to resolve the issue fail and involve a quality of care issue, the matter would be turned over to the proper local and state licensing agencies for investigation and action.

Persons wanting more information on assistance from the In-Home Services Ombudsman may call the Frankfort office toll-free at 1-800-372-2973.

TIMID COUNTRY DOCTOR TAKES UP SUSPECT HOBBY

Is Dr. Edmund Bickleigh a faithful, henpecked husband? Or a clever philandering playboy? Find out when "Mystery!" presents an encore performance of "Malice Aforethought" beginning Saturday, May 9, at 9 p.m. on KET.

Based on Francis Iles' work, this four-part presentation of "Malice Aforethought" stars Hywel Bennett, Judy Parfitt and Cheryl Campbell.

Bickleigh silently suffers from contempt openly displayed by his overbearing wife, Julia. He begins to receive admiring attention from the young and seductive Madeleine Cranmere. As a result of these seductive signals, Julia's rein on his happiness becomes intolerable.

The timid country doctor takes up the hobby of murder. With increasingly unprofessional conduct, Dr. Bickleigh slowly and methodically goes about putting a murderous scheme into action.

The good doctor is arrested and brought to trial for a murder. However, Bickleigh remains calmly convinced that even Scotland Yard cannot prove its case against him.

Wheelwright Students Get The Lowdown on Cancer

Pat Tyson, regional coordinator of the McDowell Cancer Network, Hyden, and Dr. Gan Maddiwar, field liaison for the Commission on Cancer at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin, spoke about cancer prevention to 25 Wheelwright High School students April 8.

Dr. Maddiwar said that one of every three persons gets cancer but 80 percent of all cancers are preventable. Since tobacco use and poor diet account for 65 percent of the risks associated with cancer, Tyson and Maddiwar discouraged tobacco use of any kind and encouraged the students to eat a low-fat, high-fiber diet.

They also spoke and presented slides about cancer risks associated with alcohol, occupational exposures, estrogens, radiation and viruses.

Early detection and prompt treatment make many cancers curable today. But Tyson made a strong case for prevention by reminding students that they wouldn't walk in front of an approaching car just because they know the resources exist to fix a broken leg. She suggested that the students avoid risky lifestyles as they would an approaching car.

For additional information, Tyson and Maddiwar offered numerous pamphlets and a toll-free number, 1-800-4-CANCER.

Two of the students remained after the presentation to discuss personal concerns about cancer.

Tyson and Maddiwar gave their presentation at the request of Wheelwright teacher Doris Osborne. Similar programs can be arranged by contacting Tyson at 672-2133 or Maddiwar at 285-3276.

The Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments to the Constitution of the United States of America, was adopted as a single unit on December 15, 1791. It guaranteed the rights of the individual and placed limitations on the federal and state governments. The Daughters of the American Revolution honors the men who worked for an effective government.

THE VIRGINIA SPIRIT

By J.O. BOND

Some events might become forgotten if not, in being remembered, be told. That is why I am here.

You must accept the truth that permeates this story. It was told to me—and possibly to others still living—by a participant in the happenings. I dared not question the veracity of that narrator; throughout my childhood I knew that Dad was a stern man, a widely respected medical doctor, a truthful person not at all given to frivolity, especially when addressing matters of supernatural phenomena that his scientific training could not elucidate. Moreover, my adult acquaintance with Dad for many years—until the simultaneously occurring death of my father and birth of his namesake, my youngest son—has but firmly enhanced the high esteem in which I hold the integrity of the giver of this tale. This is a true story.

I knew Aunt Mollie as an elderly white-haired lady of great presence. Her sparkling eyes, aristocratic carriage and contagious smile demanded the credence I accorded to the reports of her youthful beauty and charm that extended far outside the bounds of the community of Flat Gap in Johnson county, Kentucky. Her educational pursuits and social indulgences carried her to places as distant as Roanoke, Virginia.

The heavy spring rains had soaked the fields and swelled the creek at Flat Gap. Another day of storms that lasted into the darkness of night foretold an approaching creek overflow that would flood the pasture field. Grandmother Esther and her eldest son, Charlie, decided to retrieve from the threatened meadow the valuable milk cow that was in peril.

Shep, the farm's friendly collie, always followed and led anyone's foray into the fields. And so he did on this night as Dad and his mother searched by lantern light for Old Alice. The usual helpfulness from Shep rather mysteriously came to an end as they travelled along the banks of the creek. Sounds from the bushes that lined the stream falsely suggested that Old Alice was there. Shep refused their commands to get the animal; instead he cringed and whimpered at their feet. The rustling noise ceased, and came again as they moved downstream. Again the call for Old Alice was unheeded and Shep's whining was his only response. Yet a third rustling of the creek-bank flora conjured imaginings of a panther or some other frightening beast that was stalking their search.

With a manly courage more expressed than felt, or perhaps born of a fear that said its prayers, Dad asked for the lantern to step down the bank to investigate. As he held the light aloft a man emerged and stood silently before them. The gentleman, well attired with top hat and gloves, was a total stranger to them. He made no verbal reply to their questions as to whom he was or whence he came or was going. Dad approached him and he silently stepped back down the bank of the stream and was not again seen. Shep let out a joyous bark and led them to the fence corner where Old Alice welcomed the rescue.

Schools were out for the summer. Benevolent weather and passable roads invited travel. Aunt Mollie announced her plans. She would return to Roanoke for a visit again with her schoolmate Deborah Farnsworth—and for more adventures that came with the romantic buggy rides along the Blue Ridge trails with Debbie's handsome brother Jefferson. Aunt Mollie hoped he had fully recovered from the critical illness that consumed his spring vacation from the Virginia Military Institute.

The journey to Roanoke was uneventful, as far as we know, but the visit was not. Jeff's convalescence was well along and he insisted that Mollie's ongoing presence would assure for both of them a long and happy life. She believed that and they married in August.

The enraptured newlyweds journeyed to Kentucky and to Flat Gap where Mollie proudly introduced Jefferson Farnsworth to her friends and family. The magnificent couple made instant friends of the Kentuckians—with one exception. Shep dropped his tail and slunk away when Jeff came on the scene. Neither hostility or rude inquisitiveness marred the bridegroom's acceptance by his brother-in-law, Charlie, and his mother-in-law, Esther. Nevertheless, their awe-filled ensuing private discussion marvelled that they had restrained gasps of recognition as they were introduced to the gentleman who had emerged from the creek-bank at flood times.

Aunt Mollie and Jeff returned to continue their ecstatic lives in Virginia. Happiness was brief. Winter's cold blasts ended the couple's joys when pneumonia took Jeff away on Thanksgiving eve.

Aunt Mollie's grieving soon became a lifetime sealing of her lips, and a probable closing of her controllable mind, concerning the joys and sorrows of the Virginia union.

Dad's conversations at the Farnsworth funeral revealed that on the 24th day of April in that year, pneumonia had taken Jeff Farnsworth to the door of death, and in his delirium of that evening he was thought to be entering through that door.

Grandmother confirmed, upon Dad's return from Virginia, that the big flood at Flat Gap crested during the night of April 24.

Thank you for meditating with me about this strange happening.

KET Show Depicts 1954 Libel Trial

Has a respected war correspondent been publicly maligned by a well-known syndicated columnist? "A Case of Libel" focuses on such charges made by journalist Dennis Corcoran (Gordon Pinsent) against conservative writer Boyd Bendix (Daniel J. Travanti).

The fictionalized account of this 1954 libel trial will encore on the "American Playhouse" series Tuesday, May 5, at 9 p.m. on KET.

Armed with an idealistic vision of justice and vindication, Corcoran decides to sue Bendix for libel. He retains famous trial attorney Robert Sloane (Edward Asner). Sloane is not receptive to Corcoran's decision to sue because of the long-term involvement, financial and emotional exhaustion, and potential harassment of his family.

Although he is sympathetic to the situation, Sloane tries to dissuade Corcoran from suing, citing the difficulties in proving a libel case in court. Corcoran, in turn, accuses Sloane of being caught up in the lucrative world of corporate law and lecture tours, and not interested in the case. His conscience pricked, Sloane decides to represent Corcoran.

After testimony from both Bendix and Fred Alston, Corcoran's magazine editor and longtime friend, Sloane realizes they will not be able to prove damages and will have to try for malice.

After a series of courtroom setbacks, Sloane vigorously questions and goads Bendix into revealing the personal vengeance and misconstrued self-righteousness that underlie his slander against Corcoran. Malice is proven and the case is won.

"A Case of Libel," part of the "American Playhouse" series, was produced by Nederlander TV and Film Productions.

Delegate Selection Plan Ready For Public Review

The Chairman of the Democratic Party of Kentucky advised that the Delegate Selection Plan for the 1988 Democratic National Convention is now ready for a 30-day public review and comment period.

The Presidential Primary will be held on March 8, 1988, and Kentucky has a total of 60 delegates and 18 alternates.

The first step of the Delegate Selection Process will take place on April 2, 1988 at 2 p.m. There will be 36 delegates and 12 alternates elected at these Congressional District Caucuses. Locations of these caucuses will be advertised on March 19, 1988. Congressional District delegates and alternates shall be allocated among Presidential preference and uncommitted in proportion to the percentage of the primary vote in each Congressional District. Seven pledged party leaders and elected official delegates will be selected by the Kentucky State Central Executive Committee on June 11, 1988. These delegate positions shall be allocated among presidential preferences according to the state-wide primary vote, except that preferences which have not attained the 15% threshold on a statewide basis shall not be entitled to any of these positions.

Twelve at-large delegates and six alternates will be selected by the Kentucky State Central Executive Committee on June 11, 1988. At-large delegate and alternate positions shall be allocated among the Presidential preferences according to the state-wide primary vote, except that preferences which have not attained a 15% threshold on a statewide basis shall not be entitled to any at-large positions.

The remaining five delegates will be unpledged party and elected officials and will be members of the Democratic National Committee from Kentucky. Any interested Democrat can see the plan at Kentucky Democratic Headquarters in Frankfort or can call toll free 1-800-372-7600 and have the plan mailed to them. Anyone wishing to make comments should do so in writing to Chairman Edward M. Coleman, State Democratic Headquarters, P.O. Box 694, Frankfort, Kentucky 40602. The adoption of the plan will be discussed at the next meeting of the State Central Executive Committee meeting in Frankfort.

DENTURE ADHESIVES

There are just about as many adhesives to keep dentures in place as there are toothpastes. Some of them are paste, others are powder. Care should be taken when using these products. Sometimes, people who continually use adhesives cannot tell if their dentures are out of alignment and need an adjustment. If dentures do get out of alignment, they put pressure on various areas of the gum, creating painful sores and perhaps causing damage to the mouth itself. If dentures are not cleaned regularly, prolonged use of adhesives may stimulate the growth of bacteria, causing bad breath and infections in the mouth. Before using adhesive products, cleanse dentures thoroughly. If gum irritation or pressure is noticed, see the dentist.

At COOLEY APOTHECARY, we consider each of our customers very important. You will see this reflected in many different ways. First, we offer you fast, efficient service in meeting all your pharmaceutical needs. Secondly, our staff is here to answer any questions you have concerning any product that we have available. Our registered pharmacist is always on hand to be of assistance when it is required. At #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106 we also maintain family prescription records and have plenty of free parking. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT: To avoid permanent staining and bad breath, brush dentures at least once daily.

Grigsby Remembers Purple Flash, Considers Political Future

In the past, Pete Grigsby played a good game and also coached a good game. Now the native Floyd countian talks a good game, something that might be a big asset if he decides to make politics his future.

Grigsby's past is paved with golden memories. He recently reflected on some of those memories while revealing his thoughts of a possible political future.

ALTON: Really you don't have a high school to identify with. Do you miss having Martin around?

PETE: I certainly do, and the people of Garrett, Wayland and Maytown miss having their high school around. I think it would be safe to say that a majority of people would say they miss their high schools, and they do not identify very well with Allen Central. One of the major problems we had was getting people to identify with any program at Allen Central, not just athletics, and for people to think that that was their school.

ALTON: If you had played at a bigger school—maybe this is a better question—how did Martin, being a small school, improve your basketball performance?

PETE: Just like I said, I got the opportunity to play. It helped me become what I was athletically. What if I had been at a bigger school? Henry Clay, Seneca, Thomas Jefferson, or somewhere like that wouldn't have let me on the varsity until I was a sophomore. I could have played two years, and might have ended up at the same college, who knows, but how much better a player would I have been because of that program. I think I was a better player, because I got to participate longer and more.

ALTON: Your career—playing at Martin and UK, all the educational positions you have held—your career has been somewhat a dream to most people. What stands out as your biggest memory?

PETE: As a player, I'll really have to take you through two or three steps because I've never really put it in that kind of concept. As a player, of course my biggest thrill was making all state. That was the greatest accomplishment, and just playing in high school, and of course going to UK on a scholarship. As a coach my biggest achievement and thrill was going to the state tournament the first time, and to win the 15th region championship. As a school administrator the various and many programs I implemented and had a direct hand in. For instance all year head start, improvements in special ed in high school, expansion of special ed in school districts, centralizing the food service program, improving the math curriculum and English curriculum in grade school and later in high school, adding programs, and just many things. Adding and improving the athletic program as well as the academic programs, through adding more sports to the athletic programs with organized athletics in the grade schools. I've got a list of them, I'll tell you, but I guess becoming superintendent would be the epitome of my professional career. Being superintendent, taking my first team, and later two other teams to the state tournament, and as a player making all-state, I summarized it in parts, because that is the way my life has been, but all in education.

ALTON: If you could do it all over, start as a freshman at Martin High School and know what you know now, would you do anything differently?

PETE: One thing, I would have done differently, but it doesn't have anything to do with Martin. I would have stayed at Martin. You see, we got hung up in 52-53 with the situation at UK by the 1948 team's shaving points, and my freshman year Coach Rupp practiced us all year against the varsity, and he said you're my sophomores. We got penalized by the NCAA and UK didn't play a game my freshman year. We sneaked around and played a few freshman games but they didn't catch us. I would have redshirted, I would have demanded to be redshirted my freshman year, or gone to another university. What I'm saying is, we, the whole group of men, and right here they are (pointing to a calendar on his office's back wall) were penalized for something that Ralph Beard and some of those other guys did in 1948. That was unfair. I think we were all done unfairly, and I would have done differently. I look back on my career, my total career, that affected my playing days, going to UK and sitting out my first year. These guys didn't graduate. They got to come back and get their master's, and there we were scheduled. Coach Rupp had scheduled us to play as sophomores on a rebuilding year because Hagan, Ramsey, Tsiropolis, would have already graduated. Instead they graduated, came back and played the next year, and got their master's. We were all treated as sophomores, and I didn't get the advantage of a good freshman year. We had to practice every day against those all-Americans, and that's a big adjustment for an 18-year-old guy to go against those guys.

It might hurt your confidence just a bit. ALTON: You spoke of UK's penalty that year from the NCAA. You guys hadn't done anything wrong, yet you received the penalty. Don't you think the NCAA should reorganize their rulings, or somehow find a way to protect the innocent? At least not punish them.

PETE: Certainly. I think they owe that whole group of young men who was disassociated with the crime or whatever was done, and the university was treated very harshly. You know, the university can stand things like that, but players like myself couldn't. We can never recover from that. We used a year's eligibility. We didn't get to use our freshman year, and we didn't get to play freshman games. Back then, see, freshman didn't get to play on the varsity. They played their freshman schedule. We didn't get to develop as freshman. Now, it made UK a great team in '53-'54, but they didn't let us go and play in the NCAA tournament after we won everything. I mean, we really got bad treatment from the NCAA, and they didn't care about the individual. They didn't care about all of us who got lost in the shuffle, so to speak. It affected everyone of us. Today every member of that team is somewhat bitter against the NCAA for not looking at the individual boy's cases. What they had done to us, they had really deprived us quite a bit really. All of us were athletic enough to play anywhere in the United States, but they froze us at that university.

ALTON: This is really only one of the things the NCAA has done that people don't agree with. But looking at their situation, their backs are really against the wall because college athletics have become big business. Everybody wants their share so they have to do something to control it. Do you think it has already gone too far to be controlled, or is it a case of being blown out of proportion by the media.

PETE: I think the NCAA should control it, and control it better. The problems we had with the NCAA looking up from an administrative viewpoint and the ball players is that it isn't distributed equally or fairly. Most of the time the problem is hooked together as one lump sum, like they looked at us at UK. They could care less about the boys that had to pay the price. We had to pay the price for what Beard and some of those other players did. Anybody would agree, it was one of the harshest punishments and penalties ever handed down by the NCAA, and that was 30 some years ago. And it was over something that the group didn't even do, but I'm not saying that they shouldn't police an organization better. I am saying they need a better set of rules and better probes to fit the individual situation in trying to apply the same standard all over the United States. Everything is different. I mean the violations for each school that gets in trouble that they try to police, it's a different situation. I think they should judge each case on its own merits, as an individual unit. Not as a whole.

ALTON: Everybody has somebody they would like to thank for what they are, what they've accomplished, who does Pete Grigsby have to thank?

PETE: Denzil Halbert at Martin, and Adolph Rupp at UK.

ALTON: This is a question, and problem that comes up for every young person from a small community within eastern Kentucky, a small, family oriented community, to go to a major school. Not necessarily an athlete, but all students, making the transition. Is there anything we can do to prepare the student for it? Maybe it's just a part of

THE SPORTING TIMES

Boredom is a forerunner to depression, and depression is a direct link to suicide. This is what stress experts tell us.

Rain, rain go away. Come again on a non-baseball day. We are all missing high school baseball, and you are denying us our rights to watch our young stars perform.

It's just about to drive me crazy, because I don't have a lot to do without it. A person can take only so much of these reruns of last night's hockey fights, and this rugby stuff just doesn't cut it.

Rainy days don't leave us with very many alternatives. Especially me, because even my job greatly involves high school baseball.

Due to this tragic position, and the unwillingness of the weather to cooperate, I've been limited to sitting at home, searching for mentally, and physically time—occupying activities.

It isn't fair either. Ron Marstin still gets to write his articles. Even worse is the fact that he'll come up with some interesting material which will also enable him to get a compliment here and there. Me, well here I am with nothing. This may not be anything strange, but usually I have a whole lot of nothing. Right now I've got even less than that.

The weather really affects me. Rain is depressing, and it makes my knees hurt. Worse than this, though, is that I can't get my much-needed fix of high school baseball.

It doesn't bother my wife. No way. She enjoys rainy weather, and even more, now. She doesn't have to keep my baseball scorebook.

Yea, over there she sits. Curled up on the couch with a magazine. "Hey Jo, what are you reading?" "What! The National Enquirer. You've read that thing all day. What could be so interesting in it?"

Hum. It's better than nothing. Maybe I'll check one out. After all, I have an inquiry' mind. Yep, very simple, and sometimes strange.

Now, I know these things aren't the most respected of our major print media outlet, but somebody likes it. Let's just see what the Inquirer has to offer.

This one looks interesting. It has Nancy on the cover with a headline announcing her heartbreaking childhood. How sad.

Oh great! Here is a story on a man who has been hiccupping for 64 years. He says he has let out about 430 million of these annoying things.

So far this has been as boring as these past few rainy days. I just can't get interested in this type stuff.

Hey, wait a minute. Here's a sports item! "Wacky Superstitions of Sports Stars." It says Darrell Waltrip eats two bananas before each race. Uh, excuse me, Mr. Waltrip but if I were you I wouldn't enter the world of drag racing. With this habit it could be damaging to your stomach's well being.

According to this article John McEnroe makes a point not to step on any lines while the ball is dead. Probably because his foot is always in his mouth during a match.

I find this one extremely interesting. Dave Kingman always pulls a hair from the leg of his hitting instructor before he goes to the plate. I've always wondered, with the way he hits the ball, why Kingman has been traded so much. Now we all know. No team wants a hairless legged batting instructor. It could be bad for the macho image.

Baseball players always seem to be developing new superstitions, and some of them are strange to say the least.

Almost every fan knows of Wade Boggs and his chicken fest. The Boston third baseman eats of the feathered fowl before each game. Heck, Wade, I eat chicken too, but I still can't hit.

Tommy Lasorda is famous for his appetite, and his different taste for food. The jolly round ole Dodge manager, says this article, eats linguine before a game. I guess this one speaks for itself.

Philadelphia reliever Kent Tekulve won't pitch with his uniform pockets unbuttoned. Tekulve is a class player. How do I know? At least it's his pockets.

Ozzie Virgil wears a necklace with a bullet on it as a good luck charm. It seems as if Virgil was accidentally shot, but the bullet just entered his hand, doing no major damage. The Atlanta catcher thinks since he survived this bullet, he may survive a season. He keeps the bullet close to his heart. Virgil showed himself to be a solid catcher with the Phillies, but since coming to Atlanta it might be said that the Braves' backstop is a bit gun-shy.

Pitcher Al Holland always wants a $5 bill in his pocket when he performs. I can't blame him either. You never can tell when a reliever will be shipped out. It's always nice to have some lunch money to take with you.

Smokin' Joe Niekro lines up cigarettes on the dugout steps. After each inning he lights up. Bill Matlock won't walk in front of an umpire when going to the plate. He has no reservations about pushing them through.

You know, I bet David Letterman would enjoy having some of this stuff. He's a man who is used to never getting laughs.

Hey! I just looked out, and guess what? The sun is trying desperately to beat the clouds. This is a game I don't want to miss. Let's all go out and cheer for the sun.

If Mr. Shiny wins then we can have high school baseball again. I'll have something to work on, and I won't pass my boredom on to you.

Rebels Sweep Prestonsburg In Saturday Double Header

Saturday brought sunshine to the area, and Prestonsburg and Allen Central celebrated with a double header at Allen Park.

However, Russell Shepherd's Blackcats didn't enjoy the day as much as Allen Central did. The Rebels, behind solid pitching from Nathan Shelton and timely hitting off the bat of Darrin Conn, defeated Prestonsburg, 5-3, in the first game.

Allen Central came back in the second contest to post their second victory of the day, completing a doubleheader sweep of Prestonsburg with an 8-7 win.

In the first game, Shelton went the distance against the Blackcats to record his second pitching victory of the season. The other came over Betsy Layne on the season's first day.

The slender Rebel lefthander, in keeping his undefeated string alive, worked the full seven innings, giving up three runs with only one of those earned.

Shelton struck out seven in his seven innings of work while walking only two. The junior junk thrower continues to give opposing teams fits, and combine this with some hard-hitting from Darrin Conn and what you have as an end product is another Allen Central victory.

After failing to bring Todd Duff, who singled and stole second, around in the first inning, the Rebels collected their first run of the game in the second inning when third baseman Rady Martin drilled a homerun off starter and loser Mark Tipton.

Martin's shot didn't rattle Prestonsburg though. With one out in the top of the third, Brian Wallace doubled, and later rode home on a Joey Griffith single to tie the contest.

In the bottom of the third, Todd Duff collected his second consecutive hit, a one-out single, but once again the Allen Central second sacker wasn't brought around.

Roger Horne ended the threat when he grounded into a 6-4-3 double play, but Allen Central bounced back with three runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Sophomore catcher Kevin Webb started the inning off with a single. Following a groundout, a walk, and a Robbie Click single that scored Webb, Conn slapped a two-one pitch for a double, driving in two runs to give the Rebels a 4-1 lead.

Prestonsburg cut the Allen Central advantage to only two runs when, with two out in the top of the fifth, Harris singled, advanced to second on an error, and came around to score on a Brian Wallace single.

The Blackcats had another scoring opportunity in the sixth inning, but saw that chance slip by when runners were left on first and third.

Darrin Conn once again built the Allen Central lead to three runs with an RBI single in the home half of the sixth inning. This gave Nathan Shelton room to breathe on the mound, but when three Blackcats reached safety with only one out things began to get stuffy.

Thomas Nairn, after the leadoff hitter struck out, singled to begin a last inning rally that could have meant trouble for Shelton and the Rebels.

After Nairn's hit, Harris reached first on a fielder's choice while Wallace followed by also reaching safely.

Nairn eventually circled the bases for another Blackcat run, but unfortunately for Prestonsburg, it was the final run they would score.

Shelton, who bent several times but never broke, slammed the door on the Blackcats, and at the same time preserved Allen Central's third victory of the season by coaxing Tim Trusty to ground out and Joey Griffith to pop out to end the game.

In Saturday's second contest, yet another of these Junior Varsity games, the Rebels scored four runs in the first inning, and added four more in the second to turn back Prestonsburg once again, this time by a score of 8-7.

Freshman shortstop Mickey Parsons led the Allen Central hit parade with a triple and two singles. Parsons also drove in three runs while scoring two.

John Hancock, in relief of Randy Hansford, picked up the win. Hancock threw three and one third innings, surrendering three runs while striking out three and walking three.

Hansford, who started for Allen Central, was lifted in the second inning in favor of Hancock.

Brian Wallace led Prestonsburg at the plate with three singles and a walk. Wallace, one of the region's top hitters, went six for seven in the two games, including two doubles in the opener.

PHS Tennis Squad Downs Knott Co. High

Prestonsburg will also travel to Morehead State University on Saturday to play in an all day meet with five other schools.

SHORT SPORTS

During his baseball career Mike Schmidt has hit many homeruns, but when he finally hangs up his spikes the one Schmidt will remember most is the one which occurred Saturday afternoon.

With two runners on in the top of the ninth, and Philadelphia trailing by one run, Schmidt launched one over the Three Rivers Stadium fence off Don Robinson.

The blast proved to be the game winner as the Phillies defeated Pittsburgh 8-6. Mike Schmidt will cherish the victory, but getting number 500 may stay just a bit longer than winning a baseball game on April 18, 1987.

The Philadelphia third baseman, with this homer, became the 14th person to hit at least 500 round trippers in a career.

If Schmidt can hit 20 more homers this year he will move into ninth place on the all-time homerun list, passing Ted Williams and Willie McCovey who each have 519.

The Kentucky High School Athletic Association last Friday turned down proposals that would have brought back spring football practice to the high school ranks, and forced the KHSAA to have at least two women on its Board of Controls.

Two separate proposals were brought before the board. One to conduct workouts without contact, while the other preferred two weeks of practice in full pads if so desired by individual coaches.

Both were denied by the KHSAA, and for at least until next season, there will be no spring drills. There haven't been since 1971.

The other proposal to require at least two women on the Board of Controls was also voted down, but not as soundly as was the spring practice idea. Proponents of requiring the KHSAA to have at least two women said that black athletes were represented because a like law forced the Board of Controls to have two black members. Supporters went away saying that women athletes still had no representation.

Former Cincinnati Reds' outfielder Eddie Miller, now a member of the San Francisco Giants, has been placed on the 21-day disabled list.

Milner, this past week, agreed to voluntary drug testing and was set to enter a correctional center this past Monday.

The 31-year-old speedster will undergo treatment expected to last at least four weeks. At the time of his admittance to drug use Milner was hitting .222.

According to reports, Milner approached Giants' management asking for help. The type of drugs in question wasn't revealed, and Milner is expected to be dealt with by the league according

Cincinnati Turns Tables On Astros

During the run for a Western Division title last season the Houston Astros beat Cincinnati 14 of the 18 times the two clubs went head to head.

This was one factor as to why the Reds came up short when October rolled around. It's a new season, and a fresh start for Cincinnati, and they have made the most of this opportunity.

The Reds, in a four-game weekend series against Houston, won three, keeping their good start alive while putting some ground between themselves and last year's division winner, the Astros.

Cincinnati, after winning six of their first eight games, welcomed Houston in to Riverfront Stadium, Friday night, by defeating the Astros in a slug fest, 9-8. Rightfielder Dave Parker slammed a three-run homerun, and shortstop Kurt Stilwell later added his first career homerun, a grand slam, as the Reds gave reliever Rob Murphy his second victory of the season.

Cincinnati has lived by the long ball so far in this young season, and Saturday afternoon Cal Daniels kept the round tripper parade marching through the Queen City.

Daniels led off the sixth inning with an opposite field shot that cleared the left field wall. The Reds proceeded to score four more runs in the bottom of the sixth to blow open a 1-0 game.

One of those runs was driven in by third baseman Buddy Bell. Bell's double scored Eric Davis, and gave the veteran third sacker his 100th run batted in of his major league career.

Bill Gullickson took advantage of some offensive support, going on to post a four-hit shutout and his third win of the season, 8-0.

Through their first 13 games, the Reds have lived up to their billing as the top team in the NL West, but one weakness has shown its ugly head. Without Mario Soto, Cincinnati starting pitching has struggled, especially lefty Tom Browning.

Two seasons ago Browning won 20 games for the Reds, but last season and thus far in 1987, he hasn't shown his form of two seasons ago. Sunday proved to be only more of what Browning has gone through on the mound.

Bill Doran found the lefty's offerings much to his liking. The Houston second baseman drilled two homeruns and collected three RBIs in back of Mike Scott, who took the win in the 7-3 doubleheader opener.

Cincinnati, however, bounced back in the second game, and before packing their bags for a trip to the West Coast, handed Houston another weekend loss.

Leadoff hitter Cal Daniels swatted his fifth homerun of the season to get the Reds off and running. When the dust had cleared, Cincinnati owned a 6-2 victory. Ted Power earned the win while Houston starter Danny Darwin suffered the loss.

A well oiled Big Red Machine rolled into San Diego, Monday night, to kick off a four-game series, and the Reds certainly got things going in a big way.

Thanks to every hitter swinging the bat well early, Cincinnati leads the National League in team batting average, .286, runs scored, and homeruns, slugging 27 long balls.

In the other dugout, San Diego pitchers have given up more homeruns, 25, than any other staff in the league. These numbers pointed toward a big offensive series for Cincinnati, especially in the four-bagger department.

It didn't take long for the Reds' bats to begin drilling Padre starter Storm Davis. In the top of the second inning Eric Davis, who came in hitting .476, singled to open the inning. Third basemen Buddy Bell followed with a triple, and later scored when Bo Diaz collected his 13th RBI of the year with a groundout too short.

Guy Hoffman, a February addition for the Reds, has been posted to a two-run lead, but failed to protect it when he surrendered two San Diego runs in the bottom of the second.

Hoffman wasn't worry though, because in the top of the fourth, Cincinnati re-claimed the lead when with one out Diaz and Concepcion collected back-to-back singles. Ron Oester plated both with a triple, and later scored himself on a Cal Daniels triple.

This time Hoffman, historically a slow starter, held the Padres in check, giving the Reds an opportunity to pad their 5-2 lead.

They did just that in the sixth inning. Oester, Daniels, and Kurt Stilwell all hit safely, giving Cincinnati two more runs, and then the numbers proved themselves correct. With the league's top homerun hitting team going against the team that has surrendered the most homeruns, a long ball was inevitable.

Dave Parker made it so in the sixth with his fourth one of the season, a two-run shot off Craig Lefferts' first offering after coming in for relief services.

Cincinnati added another run in the seventh inning. Kurt Stilwell, a surprise offensively with his close to .300 average, drove home the 10th Reds' run with a bases-loaded single.

They weren't done either. In the top of the ninth, Daniels drove in two more runs, giving him 14 RBIs for the year which is only one off the National League pace.

The Reds collected a total of 18 hits, the 10th time this season they have had at least nine hits in a game. Oester led the hit parade with a four-for-four performance. During all this offensive action, Hoffman righted himself on the mound, keeping San Diego in check through eight innings before being lifted in the ninth for a pinchhitter.

Righthander Frank Williams relieved Hoffman in the final frame, and gave up a run but then slammed the door to give the Reds their 10th win of the season against only three losses. This record represents the best Cincinnati start since 1980.

The Reds and Padres hooked up last with Mario Soto slated as the Cincinnati starter. Soto hasn't pitched since last season, but if no complications occur then the star righthander will become a regular in the starting rotation.

After Cincinnati concludes their series with the Padres they will travel to Houston for a three-game weekend series with the Astros.

The Milwaukee Brewers tied a major league mark by winning their 13th game to start the season, Monday night.

Atlanta did hold the record for most consecutive wins to start a season. The Braves get that mark in 1982.

The city of Phoenix, Arizona, the Suns' basketball team, and the National Basketball Association continues to suffer from the pain inflicted by professional basketball's most recent drug scandal.

Friday, three current Phoenix players, and two former players were indicted on charges of trafficking in narcotics.

The three include Jay Humphries, James Edwards, and Grant Gondrezick. Also Suns forward Walter Davis has been suspended without pay after he announced his use of cocaine.

Rookie William Bedford has also been rumored as being part of the suspected drug involvement but has been granted immunity from charges in return for testimony against the five named in the indictment.

Records are made to be broken, and Milwaukee has broken one that every Brewer can be happy with. Saturday, the Brewers defeated Texas to improve their undefeated record to 11-0.

Their winning ways continued Sunday as Milwaukee set a new record for the most consecutive wins to begin a season.

The old record for the American League was 11 set in 1981 by the Oakland A's, but with a 6-4 win over the Rangers, Sunday, Milwaukee improved that by one.

Other than setting new standards for opening a season, the Brewers have put themselves in the top spot of the American League East. Known as heavy hitters, Milwaukee has finally received strong pitching, and if this continues, they could continue to pose problems for the remainder of the Eastern Division.

It is bad enough to be injured while playing, but to get hurt while sitting in the dugout minding your own business is terrible.

Just ask John Tudor. He was an innocent bystander in Sunday's Mets-Cardinals affair when out of the sea of green comes an out of control catcher.

That out of control catcher, Barry Lyons, of the New York Mets, crashed into the St. Louis dugout, smashed into John Tudor, and broke a bone in the pitcher's leg.

As a result the Cardinal starting lefthander will be out at least three months.

Tudor may request being moved into relief duty. If not a starter, he would have been in the bullpen minding someone else's business, and out of the way of Lyons.

Possible Political Future

PETE: We could help our students to prepare for college, major college campuses, a little more than we do in some respects. I'm talking about age maturity really. I'm not saying this because of athletics, but I think our students get out of school too early, as a whole, as a rule. I don't think that they are ready to go to a big college campus. Most of them are not, particularly when they graduate from this county. Success often comes to those who have some physical and mental maturity, not necessarily intelligence, social maturity. I think that we graduate too many of our kids at 17, and they're not ready, and I think this is what happens to the Todd Mays, Dan Halls, and Steve Smiths maybe. No, Steve stuck it out at NC State. I've always felt this, but you can't do it in Floyd county. Now, a lot of other schools will get their athletes, and better students to graduate later. But on the other side, this is just a weakness that I see. Then on the other side of the coin, when you come from our environment, our culture, it's going to be a big change regardless of how much preparation you're given. From Floyd county, Magoffin county, Pike county, Johnson county schools, you step on a campus with 20 to 27 thousand students, it's quite an adjustment. Thirty years ago when I was going to the university it was only seven, eight, 10 thousand, and even then it was a big adjustment. We would stand in line to register, and I saw kids who couldn't stand the pressure of standing in line. It's an all day ordeal, and they would just tear their cards up and say to heck with this. They're not prepared for it, and I don't know how you can get them prepared, but I do think it has to do with age, a little more physical, mental, and social maturity. I think we probably graduate them too young. Now the educational side of it people will argue with me. Oh, no. If they are young and intelligent they should go ahead. Push, Push, Push. I'm saying there should be a way to take care of the fast learners in high school, and let their age maturity catch up with their intelligence. Then they could go on through college. It would help those fast learners if we had a better program in our high schools for fast learners. How are you going to take a guy from a small town, or a girl, and put them in a big school, a big city? Now that is cultural shock, and it's going to happen to anybody who tries it.

ALTON: It seems as if you have adjusted to every situation you have been put in. You were a success as a player, as a coach, and as an educator. You've done just about everything that can be done in your field. What does the future hold for you? Could you be persuaded to go back into coaching?

PETE: I'm almost glad you asked that question. In a way I'm glad, and in a way I'm sad. I've been asking myself the same question. When you set goals and you accomplish those goals then you have to reset your goals. I'm really at a crossroad. I don't know. I've been thinking about politics. I sometimes think of going in that direction, but then I say, no, I want to contribute a few more years to education. Then I think maybe it wouldn't be bad to go back into coaching, but then at the high school level one of the reasons why I quit is because I felt I had done all I wanted to do on the high school level. Am I making any sense?

Back then when I coached you couldn't win the state tournament with a mountain team, and I'll tell you why. Like I've told you before, we were small schools. Back then McDowell was 330-340 students at the most in the top four grades. We were competing, and holding our own and winning with some of the Louisville and Lexington schools. You know, they could also whip us with some of our best teams. Back then you had the Males, the Shawnees, and the big city schools had taken over during that time. They had teams that could beat college teams today. I kid you not, some of the more famous Male and Seneca teams could beat college teams today. That's how good they were. I thought, gee whiz, I could coach another 30 years, and McDowell might never win a state championship. So I changed my goals and felt that I had done all I wanted to do, and I had except that one thing. So I went into administration, and I felt I've done all I can do there. I'm looking at politics, and I'm looking at what I can do at the end of my professional career to help education. That's what I'm looking at now. But I am looking at other hills to climb. I don't know what it will be right now.

The Floyd County Times Sports Section hopes you enjoy reading this as much as we enjoyed putting it together. Also a special thanks to Pete Grigsby for sharing his ideas, past, and time with us.

LA, Boston Top Standings As Second Season Tips Off

Preparation time is over. Room for mistakes has disappeared. The winner continues on, but the loser goes home to watch television.

During the past six months most teams have worked to ready themselves for the NBA playoffs, and the rest of the league has battled for the remaining few second season positions.

For 16 of those teams, the hard work has paid off, and as this field dwindles to the finals, two squads will reap the biggest basketball benefits.

The NBA playoffs will tip-off this Thursday night when both conference's top teams will begin their bid for yet another appearance in a championship series.

Magic Johnson, probably this year's most valuable player, will lead his Los Angeles teammates into battle Thursday when the Lakers tangle with the improved Denver Nuggets.

Los Angeles boasts the NBA's best record, and represents the only team owning a Boston Garden victory this year, but more importantly they have the home-court advantage as long as they are in the playoffs.

The Lakers were denied their final appearance last season, when Houston knocked LA out in Western Conference action. Los Angeles is everyone's odds on favorite to return to the top in the West, but Denver won't be easy pickings.

Alex English is one of the NBA's top offensive players. Blair Rasmussen and Danny Schayes has improved dramatically during the season to give Denver a strong inside game to go with triple-double guard Fat Lever.

The team some say has the fire power to topple Los Angeles will also begin its playoff road Thursday night. The Dallas Mavericks are talented, strong inside with Sam Perkins and James Donaldson, and Don Blackmon isn't shabby in the backcourt.

Dallas starts five quality players, but when they dig into their bench the Mavs do not lose much. Rookie forward Roy Traylor gives Dallas strength and adds talent to their youth movement.

However, the Mavericks might get a tough challenge, and quick. Seattle lost Alton Lister to injury, but they have Dale Ellis and Tom Chambers which is enough to wreak havoc themselves.

The Lakers! The Mavericks! Wow, these are two incredibly explosive basketball teams. Both are well coached, and both have proven their capability to do the impossible on the hardwood. To beat either would take superman and his brothers.

Basketball fans, meet Akeem, Ralph and the boys.

The twin towers proved themselves superior last year. Sampson has been hurt this season, but this does two things. With his loss the Rockets stayed away from playing LA until the Western Conference finals—if they both advance—and in Sampson's absence, Kurt Peterson has received valuable playing time.

Sampson hasn't returned to full performance on the court, but he is healthy. This engages the successful twin tower attack of the Rockets that, along with Rodney McCray, carried them all the way to the championship series in 1986.

The remainder of the West field should enjoy their presence in the playoffs, make some solid draft choices, and hope they can challenge Dallas, Houston, and LA next season.

In the Eastern Conference, Boston will have the home court advantage as long as they remain alive. The Celtics earned that right, Sunday, by defeating Atlanta, 118-107, in the Garden.

Playing on their home floor is an obvious advantage to any team, but more so to Boston. The Celtics have won 75 of their last 76 games at home. On the road they have a losing record, including a 1-11 slate against Philadelphia, Washington, Detroit, and Milwaukee.

All season long, the boys from Bean Town have struggled due to injuries. First it was Larry Bird, then Kevin McHale, and on through Danny Ainge, Dennis Johnson, and Bill Walton.

K.C. Jones has his troops in the best of physical condition since last season, and if Walton can provide much needed relief from the bench, the Celtics should return to the finals.

the Chicago Bulls. Jordan came close to upending the Celtics himself last year, but the Bulls do not have the horses inside to contend with a front line that averages over 6'10".

Atlanta has been the surprise team of Eastern Conference, if not the NBA, and they will enjoy a home court advantage until they meet Boston. Once again, only if this situation materializes will the Hawks be at a disadvantage due to travel and hostile fans.

Atlanta opens against Indiana, but anything can happen. Meanwhile Washington and Detroit will hook up in other opening round action.

Along with the five-game series featuring Philadelphia and Milwaukee, this could be the best of the early matchups. Both the Bulls and Pistons are talented enough to create excitement, but neither will blow the other one out consistently.

The same is true with Philadelphia and Milwaukee. The Bucks were supposed to be tougher this season than they have shown, but they have some definite talent, as do the 76ers.

Other than giving a slim edge to Boston, the Eastern Conference is wide open. Any one of the eight teams, except maybe the Pacers and Bulls, have a legitimate chance of advancing all the way to the final seven games.

Hey, its crunch time in professional basketball, the only time you'll see millionaires diving for loose basketballs. The only time you'll see offensive stars playing hardnosed defense, and the only time you'll see basketball played this well.

The NBA has enjoyed one of its most successful seasons ever, and it's only half over. One reason why this campaign has received so many positive votes is due to the arrival of this thing called parity.

No longer do professional basketball fans have to watch only LA and Boston enjoy success. The time of equality in the NBA is no longer a hope of the future. It is a reality of today, a reality that has done more for the game than anything in the past several years.

Now as many as seven teams can compete on an equal basis. As present dynasties begin to shake on veteran legs, new powers are rapidly climbing the pedestal of success. Youth is replacing age, and different faces may be cutting down the nets come the final playoff game.

RACCOON ROUNDWORMS

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association Count on it—whenever veterinarians suggest that wild animals don't make good pets, someone is going to accuse them of something sinister.

Yet, the facts back them up. Veterinarians are simply more acutely aware of the dangers that can follow intimate association of humans with wild animals. They are also aware of the lack of medical information about some diseases which affect wild animals and which may infect humans.

The raccoon roundworm is a good example.

Two Children Died

Since 1983, two young children have died from a brain infection which was traced to the common roundworm of raccoons, Baylisascaris procyonis. The children are thought to have had hand-to-mouth contact with items contaminated by raccoon feces, which can contain as many as 100,000 roundworm eggs per gram. Documented infections of domestic animals have been associated with feed or quarters heavily contaminated by raccoon feces, and the disease has been seen in mice, squirrels, rabbits and game birds as well as domestic poultry and swine. It generally produces neurological disorders.

The body of information on the condition is incomplete, and the risk of exposure to rabies and other diseases or injuries is greater than the risk of roundworm contamination—yet there is currently no known therapy for roundworm larval infection in humans. Prevention is the only way to avoid infection, and some recommendations have been put forward.

Hunters and trappers are cautioned to wash thoroughly after handling raccoons, and never to put potentially contaminated gloves or other objects in their mouths. Homeowners should discourage raccoons from living in chimneys or attics. Farmers should prevent animal bedding and feed from being contaminated by raccoon feces.

Ownership Discouraged

Keeping raccoons as pets is discouraged, though it is legal with special permits issued by the Department of Fish and Wildlife, which recently sent permit holders a letter pointing out that while the risk of exposure to roundworm is rare, it is also quite real.

They recommend: (1) that all raccoons be wormed on a regular basis; (2) that young children, who are particularly likely to put foreign objects in their mouths, not be allowed near raccoons or raccoon holding pens; (3) that all handlers remember that eggs may be present in the feces in extremely large numbers, and to be careful not even to wipe their mouths with their hands, pull off gloves with their teeth or do anything which might allow infective eggs in the mouth; (4) in the event that someone associated with raccoons becomes ill, mention the possibility of this parasitic infection to the attending physician.

The problem is one which has just come to the attention of veterinary medical science, and prevention is the only sure course at this time.

Kentucky Fishing Report

Frankfort, Ky., April 20—Fishing activity for the April 18-19 weekend was reported light to heavy across the state. While some lakes in the eastern third of the state are still experiencing high water conditions which are hampering fishermen, excellent weekend weather brought out anglers in full force throughout the rest of the commonwealth. Water temperatures continue to rise at each lake and will soon be reaching optimal zones for the best bass and bluegill fishing of the spring season. The lake-by-lake rundown, as reported by conservation officers or creel clerks at each lake:

KENTUCKY: Crappie were hitting jig-and-rind combinations along rocky banks in 3-6 feet of water; black bass were hitting several types of artificial lures over mud flats in 8-12 feet of water; clear, rising, one foot below summer pool and 64 degrees.

BARKLEY: Crappie were taking minnows and jigs over brush piles, stump beds and tree tops near the bank and over drop-offs in 1-12 feet of water; black bass were hitting crank baits and plastic worms off gravel points in 3-12 feet of water; clear, rising, one foot below summer pool and 66 degrees.

BARREN: Crappie were hitting small jigs and minnows over brush piles 6-10 feet deep; black bass were taking crank baits along rocky points 3-10 feet deep; crappie were active on jigs and minnows and trout were taking red worms in the tailwaters; clear to murky, rising, two feet below summer pool and 61 degrees.

TAYLORSVILLE: Black bass were striking spinner baits and jigs cast and flipped off shallow banks in 2-6 feet of water; bluegill were hitting worms and crickets in the heads of creeks 3-6 feet deep; murky to muddy, falling, three feet above summer pool and 59 degrees.

BUCKHORN: Crappie were being taken on minnows over submerged cover 3-10 feet deep; high water conditions continued to hamper fishermen to some extent; heavy discharge is reported in the tailwaters; murky to muddy, falling, four feet above summer pool and 56 degrees.

FISHTRAP: The lake remains temporarily closed due to high water; 20 feet above summer pool.

Bassin' With the Pros... Bass Are Well Schooled In Competition

Locating a school of bass can be a fisherman's dream... or nightmare. It all depends on whether the angler is ready to deal with a feeding frenzy spawned out of competition.

Bass react like any other fish when it comes to competition for food. If you throw a worm into a school of panfish, for instance, two or three fish are going to attack that worm while two or three more circle the others for any "crumbs." Schooled bass are no different.

Bass group up and suspend in deep water for sensible reasons like oxygen requirements, water temperature, light penetration, etc. And you'll be able to locate schools in deep water structure, on dropoffs and in creek channels.

This competitive sense of the bass for food definitely works to the angler's advantage, as long as the bass enthusiast is prepared with two or more properly rigged rods. When you get into a school of bass and they start hitting, you don't have a long time to capitalize it.

For Guido Hibdon, Johnson Outboards Pro Team member, favorite lure choices for finding schools are crank baits, "those naturalized crank baits or the ones that resemble a little fish."

"If an old big bass has picked himself out a place and you've found one on a certain piece of structure, say a point or big old stump that's a sitting point," Hibdon says, "usually you can put your pattern together real easy by running and hunting those very same things."

Another aspect of bass behavior to be cognitive of is their territorial instinct, and the bigger the bass, the more territorial it is.

"The bigger the bass gets the more he gets that way," states Hibdon. "He'll pick himself a point or something of that sort, and he'll run all the small fish off and just kind of stand his ground. The big fish is slower and he's not apt to get out and run and chase bait fish. He finds an ambush point and kind of stands his ground."

Knowing the bass' sense of competition and understanding its territorial instinct can mean the difference between having a regular cutting or a more than memorable encounter.

Most professional and amateur bass tournaments require all entrants to wear an approved personal flotation device whenever the outboard motor is running. It's a good idea to wear a PFD whenever you're on the water, and now Johnson and Evinrude dealers have made that a little easier with a PFD designed just for bass fishermen. The arm holes are generously cut for ease of movement, and the side laces are adjustable to help keep you cool in any weather. The vests are available in Johnson and Evinrude colors to match your favorite brand.

IT'S A FACT!

Up until 1889, only four natural fibers—cotton, flax, silk and wool—were available to the general public. A French chemist caused a sensation with his fabrics made from "artificial silk"—later known as rayon—and the man-made fabric industry was born.

OUTDOORS WITH ANDY

By A.G. SPENCER

There are a couple of changes in the hierarchy of The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources to report here. Both moves are well-deserved promotions based on the long and meritorious service given by these tireless and dedicated men.

Damian "Mac" Warren, native and resident of Springfield, has been appointed Fourth Wildlife District regional supervisor for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' Division of Law Enforcement. Warren's appointment was effective March 1.

Warren, who has been an employee in the Division of Law Enforcement since October 1969, served as conservation officer for Washington county until 1981, when he became assistant supervisor for the fourth district. Warren replaces Kenneth Merideth, who retired December 31, after 22 years of service with the department.

Warren, 44, lives in Springfield with his wife, Laverne, and three children, Trisha, Bradley and Laura Lee. He is a member of St. Dominic Catholic Church.

The other man in the news is Marion C. Mattingly, a Lawrenceburg resident who has been appointed assistant director for the conservation education division of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, effective March 1.

Mattingly, 37, was employed by the department in 1972 as a wildlife conservation supervisor in the third district and since 1977 has been hunter training officer supervisor.

A native of Washington county, Mattingly is a 1967 graduate of Washington County High School and a 1971 graduate of Eastern Kentucky University, with a degree in wildlife management. Mattingly lives in Anderson county with his wife, Becky, and is a member of Buck Run Baptist Church.

The Division of Conservation Education is in charge of statewide educational programs about wildlife conservation. This division also oversees the hunter education and bowhunter safety education programs, while coordinating and conducting three conservation education camps for fifth and sixth graders during the summer.

The next hunter education program session will be held at Phelps Grade School, Pikeville, April 16-17, 7-10 p.m., with shooting instruction, April 18, at 9 a.m. These classes are open to adults as well as to children age 10 or older. For more information, call Marion Mattingly at (502) 564-4762.

Kentucky's Nongame Wildlife/Natural Areas Program is the subject of a new multi-media program co-produced by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the Kentucky Audubon Council. The program, available from the department's Division of Public Relations, highlights the nongame wildlife program, which seeks to protect rare and endangered species across the state.

The natural areas portion of the program seeks to acquire areas that are significant in terms of their wildlife habitat. The program uses three slide projectors, stereo sound and over 100 slides to entertain and inform audiences about the nongame program.

If your club, group or organization of over 30 members would like to see this presentation, call Bruce Smith at the Division of Public Relations for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources at (502) 564-4336.

Here's the outdoor cooking tip of the week. With the weather fairing up, more people are going to be cooking outdoors as well as fixing critters they got there. Whether you use a store-bought barbecue sauce or, like myself, prefer to make your own brand of poison, try adding a tablespoon or two of honey (some poor misguided souls insist on using sorghum, but no stones of aspersion will be cast here) to the concoction with which to bast your delicacy. Flavor it by smoking with cherry wood or mesquite, and you'll have a feast that neither a king nor a bear could turn a nose up at! Until next week, enjoy the great outdoors and remember—pass the heritage on!

Basketball Camp Slated at MSU

The 10th Annual Tommy Gaither Basketball Camp will be held at Morehead State University this summer giving youngsters from ages eight to 18 an opportunity to receive basketball instruction.

Tommy Gaither, head basketball coach at MSU, will conduct a Team Camp at MSU from June 28-July 2. Each team application must be coordinated through the applicant's high school coach.

The Individual Camp will take place from July 12-16 for resident campers and day campers.

The camps include daily lectures and drills on the basic fundamentals of basketball and a breakdown of the game such as shooting, passing, dribbling, using and setting screens, moving with and without the ball, and much more.

Each camper will also participate in daily game competition and will receive individual instruction and attention.

Team camp reservations must be made by May 15 by calling the MSU basketball office at (606) 783-2400 or by writing to: Coach Tommy Gaither, Operation: Basketball Camp, Inc., Morehead State University, UPO Box 867, Morehead, Ky. 40351.

The team camp is limited to the first 32 applications while the individual camp is limited to the first 250 campers.

Miss Rhonda Fraley, center, above, was crowned 1987 Homecoming Queen by Miss Angie Barnette, who was the previous year's Homecoming Queen, at ceremonies held at Allen Central High School, February 20. Members of the class of 1977-'78 were also honored that evening.

Shortstop Brian Hall led a 12 hit McDowell attack Monday as the Daredevils topped Wheelwright 14-1 at Brackett Field.

Hall, listed as one of the top players in the district, collected four hits in five plate appearances to lead McDowell offensively.

Kevin Hall, Reggie Hall, and Scott Tackett banged out two hits each in support of starting pitcher Jeff Crisp.

McDowell jumped out in front early with four runs in the first inning. With the show of offensive support Crisp took advantage of the opportunity.

The Daredevil righthander silenced

Wheelwright bats in his four innings of work to earn his first win of the season.

With the win McDowell improves to 3-1 on the season, while preparing for a big week of intra-county matchups.

The Daredevils are scheduled to do battle with Prestonsburg in a Thursday double header at Allen park. They will play Wheelwright on the road Saturday before traveling to Prestonsburg Monday.

Wheelwright has a contest scheduled at Prestonsburg today then welcomes the Blackcats to Wheelwright Tuesday afternoon.

Blackcats, Trojans Split In Tuesday Double Header

The Prestonsburg Blackcats hadn't gotten off to a start Russell Shepherd was proud of. After a loss to Lawrence county Monday, the Blackcats fell to 0-6 on the season.

Shepherd says youth is one of the reasons why Prestonsburg has struggled early. Losing some of the best talent in the region is another.

Through their first six games of the season Prestonsburg searched for the missing link to a winning chain, only to experience more disappointments.

Search no more Blackcats. Somewhere Tuesday afternoon Prestonsburg found their missing link and the Wheelwright Trojans suffered from it.

Wheelwright didn't exactly help themselves either, giving Prestonsburg an unearned run in the first, and letting a golden scoring opportunity slip by in the home half of the opening inning.

Blackcat leadoff hitter Johnny Ray Harris lifted a fly ball into left centerfield which was misplayed, and as a result Harris wound up on third base. Joey Griffith singled to plate Harris, and spot starter Todd Justice to a quick 1-0 lead.

Wheelwright loaded the bases in the bottom of the first, but failed to score as Justice fanned Stevie Little to snuff out the Trojan rally.

Prestonsburg padded their lead in the top of the second when Todd Justice led off with a single, Harris later singled, and Joey Griffith reached on an error.

Blackcat shortstop Tim Trusty popped out to first baseman John Justice, but when Wheelwright's Justice went to the ground to catch the popup, Prestonsburg's Justice alertly tagged at third and scored.

Brian Wallace continued his hot hitting with an opposite field single to drive in Harris, and give the Blackcats a three run lead.

Bobby Thornberry gave Wheelwright their first run of the contest in the bottom of the third. The slender Trojan leadoff hitter singled to open the inning, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch, and later scored when Justice wild pitched him home.

Prestonsburg got that run back plus more with Steve Wells' two out double with the bases loaded. Wells drilled a Greg Hall fastball over the head of centerfielder, Stevie Little, to score three Blackcat runs.

The Trojans, unlike years past, didn't surrender. They came back in the bottom of the fourth with two runs, but in the fifth and final frame Wheelwright hit into bad luck before falling in the first game 6-3.

Todd Justice was credited with the win, Prestonsburg's first, while Greg Hall suffered the tough luck loss for Wheelwright.

In yesterday's second game, Wheelwright jumped all over the Blackcats early, scoring two runs in the first inning, and added four runs in the second to jump out to a quick 6-0 lead. Prestonsburg struggled at the plate early, scoring only one run through the first four innings, but their bats came alive in the top of the fifth.

With the bases loaded, and nobody out, Thomas Nairn drilled a grand slam homerun to trim the Trojan lead to one run.

After starting pitcher John Justice suffered with his control, hitting three in the final inning, Wheelwright made a pitching change.

On came Bobby Thornberry to the mound, and up came Thomas Nairn to the plate. Nairn slapped the long ball, but Thornberry settled down to save the game for starter John Justice.

With the win in the second game Monroe Jones and the Wheelwright Trojans improve to 2-3 on the season, already more wins than the Trojans received last year.

More importantly for Wheelwright, they hit Prestonsburg pitching hard Tuesday, and in the field didn't commit an error the second game.

With the loss, Prestonsburg slips to 1-7 on the season.

Kentucky Afield...

Eagles Hatch In Kentucky

For the first time since the 1940s a pair of bald eagles is raising a family in Kentucky.

Two hatching eagles were sighted at a nest on the Ballard Wildlife Management Area in far western Kentucky April 8, according to John MacGregor, the biologist in charge of the nongame program for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

The nest has been monitored on a regular basis since November. The adult eagles built the nest in the winter of 1985-86, but left on their summer migration without laying eggs.

They returned to the site this past winter and resumed what biologists call "housekeeping duties." In March, biologists suspected from the eagles' behavior that they had laid eggs, and on April 8, Wildlife Aide William Hendricks reported that the eagles were sitting low and level on the nest, an indication that they were still incubating the eggs. When he checked the nest again on April 8, Hendricks saw the two young eagles.

The area around the nest has been closed to the public since March 15 to protect the eagles from human disturbance. This area will remain closed until the young eagles are fledged and can fend for themselves. The eaglets should make their first flight some time in July, MacGregor says.

The 8,000 acre wildlife management area, located on the Ohio River in Ballard County, is owned by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and operated as a waterfowl refuge and hunting area. Over 100 bald eagles winter on the area, but until now, none have nested there.

Two other active eagle nests have been reported this year in Kentucky. One of these nests, on Westvaco property in Fulton county, has apparently been abandoned, while eagles are still using the other nest, which is on Land Between the Lakes in Lyon county.

There is still a possibility that the eagles in Lyon county will lay eggs, MacGregor says, explaining that northern eagles generally nest in April, while the "southern schedule" calls for a February or March nesting period. It is common for eagles to work for two or three years on a nest before using it, biologists say.

Populations of bald eagles, our national emblem, declined drastically because of the use of persistent pesticides such as DDT. These compounds affected the eagle's ability to metabolize calcium, so that eggs were laid with weak shells that broke before the young birds could hatch. With the banning of DDT and similar pesticides in the early 1970s, eagle populations began a slow recovery. However, this species is still listed as endangered, MacGregor says.

Fish and wildlife department personnel will monitor the eagle nest daily until the young birds leave, according to MacGregor, who warns would-be eagle watchers that the area surrounding the nest is off limits to the public and that there are heavy state and federal penalties for molesting eagles or other endangered species.

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

Of all the wild critters of North America, the black bear is the most interesting. He occupies a prominent spot in our folklore, literature, myth and even religion. A female of the species will discipline her rowdy children much as her human counterpart would, or should do under the same set of circumstances. The similarity of bear courting tactics to those of young people is little short of unnerving. A bear can walk upright like a man and because of this and other humanlike traits, the Indian thought some sort of special relationship existed between the two.

Brother Bruin is not uncommon in wilderness areas of much of the United States. Recently bear sightings have been reported in several counties in Eastern and South-eastern Kentucky. Anywhere he is not hunted, he becomes quite tame and serves as an irresistible tourist attraction. He is not particularly dangerous, but he's still a wild animal and therefore unpredictable. So, if you should meet up with a bear in the wild or even in a park, don't mess with it. Don't offer it food because, as somebody once said, it is safe enough to feed a bear but decidedly unsafe not to feed it.

The man a park ranger came across one day trying to push a small bear inside the front seat of a station wagon. The man was trying to get the bear under the wheel of the vehicle so he could photograph it sitting beside his wife! Why the man wasn't clobbered is one of those strange things that defy explanation.

Personally, I once observed a man place a terrified child on the back of a bear in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park while the mother captured the scene with a movie camera. The bear had its head stuck in an overturned garbage can and had evidently found a large batch of cookies. Else there might have been a tragedy.

According to the National Geographic Society, white men met the bear and tasted its flesh around 100 years before the Mayflower landed at Plymouth Rock. In 1534, Jacques Cartier's party slaughtered a bear near Newfoundland whose flesh, as the French explorer later wrote, "was as good to eat as that of a two-year-old heifer."

American pioneers set great store by bear fat. They found it "incomparably milder than hog lard and sweet as oil of cloves," or at least one early chronicler did. And while bear steak may have tasted like "heifer meat" to Cartier, a steak from a Wisconsin bear tasted to me like a piece of broiled burlap.

A wonderful animal, the bear has been a very useful one, too. Bear pelts made fine rugs, robes, bed covers and even doors for cabins and teepees.

And above all don't be like

Selective Service System

Young men born on or after January 1, 1960 are required to register with Selective Service within a month of their 18th birthday.

The registration process takes less than five minutes at the post office. A young man fills out a simple form asking only for his name, date of birth, address, telephone number and Social Security number.

Registration helps keep our country prepared with a pool of names to draw from in case of a national emergency... without interfering with people's lives. When you think about it... that's not a lot to ask for a country as great as ours.

IT'S QUICK. IT'S EASY. AND IT'S THE LAW.

UK Coach Pushes Athletic Opportunities for Women

By Louise Houghton

Athletic competition is a training ground for success in the world of work, and many women aren't getting the training they need to succeed in this country, the head volleyball coach at University of Kentucky told a small but intense audience at Prestonsburg Community College, April 14. Women should seize their opportunities to participate in sports, and should fight for more of those chances for their mothers and daughters, said Kathleen DeBoer, former starting forward for the Minnesota Fillies.

"You have the same expectations as men," she told the group, many of whom indicated that they hope to "have it all"—marriage, children, and a demanding, well-paid job. "You don't have the same training."

The real skills that are developed by athletic training are not how to run swiftly, jump high, or throw or hit a ball, according to DeBoer. Players learn those skills, but the long, hard hours of practice also teach the more important values of discipline, self-denial and delayed gratification. The team set-up instills respect for the coach's authority and an appreciation for teamwork rather than individual effort. Sports ideology glorifies hard work as the way to achieve success—a truism that is not always true, she added, but nevertheless motivates many players. And competition teaches players to be aggressive, confident, able to cope with failure and able to respond in high-pressure situations.

"Most of these traits in our society today are also those we associate with men," DeBoer said. The same traits also are often used to describe leaders and leadership, she added.

Several women in the audience nodded in silent agreement as DeBoer made her points. "She really put it well," said student Dana Slone, later. Slone cited the case of her own cousin as an example of DeBoer's point: a competitor in several different sports, the cousin also seems to have more confidence about coping with life. "As far as taking charge of things, he does that," she said.

The coach also pointed out parallels between sports ethics and the ethics followed by businesspeople and politicians. Citing the famous Vince Lombardi quip, "Winning isn't everything—it's the only thing," she noted that both students and alumni at Southern Methodist University have protested the recent suspension of that school's football program due to illegal payments made to players. "Obviously, to them the end justifies the means," DeBoer said.

The use of dangerous steroids to increase athletic ability, by students as young as high school age, also indicates a "win at all cost" mentality, she added.

Although DeBoer was critical of this attitude that makes winning more important than how the game is played, she noted that it does tend to guide business and political decisions in this society. "What was Iran if not an end-justifies-the-means type of situation?" she asked. "Some of that comes from athletics."

The socialization process is quite different for boys and girls in this society, she said, and has a definite impact on success in later life. Boys tend to be task-oriented; they are taught to focus first on getting the job done, and later, if at all, on the feelings of the people involved. Girls, on the other hand, are trained to be relationship-oriented. Their first concern is people's feelings, and the overall goal is subordinate to that.

DeBoer described a soccer game she had observed, played by young children of both sexes. As the players crowded around the ball, one was kicked in the shin and began to cry. The soccer ball, meanwhile, was momentarily unattended.

One small player, a girl, looked at the ball and then turned back to help her hurt friend, DeBoer said. Another player, a boy, looked at the crying child and then went after the ball.

DeBoer stressed that, in her opinion, males and females are not the same and never will be. But their chances for success in society can be more equal, she said, when they receive equal amounts of the training that contributes to success—and that includes athletic training.

"We're not very comfortable with women as physical, aggressive, competitive people," she said. "When we cross that bridge, then we'll have a society that is equal."

Study Indicates... Retirement Is Gradual For Many

By JIM KELLY

Social Security Administrator For many people, retirement is a gradual process, not an abrupt departure from work. About half the persons who apply for Social Security continue to do some work to supplement Social Security benefits and other retirement income.

This supports the principle of Social Security as a base for retirement income, although for many people it is the primary source. When all sources of income are considered, the drop in income when benefits start is not as great as implied by replacement rates, due mainly to temporary income sources such as earnings.

Persons with pensions other than Social Security lost ground during the first 4 years on the rolls while those with Social Security only stayed about even. This was due to the decline—averaging about 20 percent—in the real value of private pensions.

Social Security benefits kept pace with inflation as a result of annual cost-of-living increases.

Twice as many persons, with Social Security benefits only, continued working after retirement than those with Social Security and other pensions. About three-fourths of all non-Social Security pensions were from private employers or unions. The remainder were mostly Federal, State, or local government pensions, plus a small number of railroad and military pensions.

People not yet retired should recognize the fact that Social Security is not designed to provide all of the retirement income, only part of it. The importance of generating retirement income from other sources to meet one's personal or family life-style cannot be overemphasized.

Current beneficiaries should be aware of the Social Security limit on earnings they can have and still get all benefits. In 1987, the limit is $8,160 for beneficiaries 65 through 69 and $6,000 for beneficiaries under age 65. The annual earnings limit does not apply to people age 70 and over. Earnings over the limit reduce the Social Security benefits $1 for each $2 in excess earnings.

You can visit the Big Sandy Area Social Security office located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

FAME

For Anne-Marie Johnson, choices can be limiting

By Lynn Hoogenboom

Anne-Marie Johnson seems to have the world on a string. Since childhood, the 26-year-old actress has known what she wanted to do. "I knew in the sixth grade that acting would be it," she says, "and I've never deviated."

Anne-Marie Johnson

Better still, she has managed to work steadily in a business in which unemployment is often a fact of life. "My first professional gig was 'Different Strokes' in '84," she says. "From that point on, I've worked continuously. I've been very fortunate."

She presently plays Nadine, Raj's social-worker wife, on the syndicated "What's Happening Now!!" She also has a starring role in the feature film "Hollywood Shuffle," which opened last month to favorable reviews. The film takes a biting look at the limited opportunities available for black actors. She plays the girlfriend of Robert Townsend, the film's star, writer and director. "We're still caught in the police, maid, pimp, prostitute level," says Johnson. "It's worse now, because of the backlash over 'The Color Purple.' No one will take a chance."

"I was part of the protest of 'Color Purple,'" she adds, "so I'm partially responsible for the consequences. But believe me, if all they're offering me as a black actress is 'Color Purple' and some other degrading movie, I'd go back to a regular job."

But some critics feel that "What's Happening Now!!" also tends to reinforce racial stereotypes.

"I'm surprised at the criticism, yet not really surprised at it," says Johnson. "It might be kind of a threatening show for a lot of viewers, because it is a reflection of American life, whereas 'The Cosby Show' is such a happy non-tangible show that no one's threatened by it."

"I think it's wonderful that 'The Cosby Show' is on," she continues. "I think it's fantastically written. I think it's giving great opportunities for the children on the show. I just can't relate to it. It's following the same formula as the shows in the '50s. The home is perfect; the wife is perfect; the kids get along."

"I wish every family in America could be like the Huxtables," she laughs. "That's why it works so well. It's non-threatening."

ASK TONI

Who is Lorenzo's mother?

By Toni Reinhold

Is Esther Williams the mother of Lorenzo Lamas? — M.W., Faribault, Minn.

No. His mother is Arlene Dahl, but Esther Williams is his stepmother. Williams married Fernando Lamas, Lorenzo's father, in 1963. Lamas' children, Alejandre and Lorenzo, became her stepdaughter and stepson. She also has two sons and a daughter from her 1945 marriage to radio announcer Ben Gage, which ended in divorce in 1957.

Lorenzo Lamas

Was the TV show "The Waltons" based on a book? If so, who wrote it? Is it still in circulation? — C.Z., Elgin, Ill.

The 1963 film "Spencer's Mountain," with Henry Fonda and Maureen O'Hara, was based on the Earl Hamner Jr. novel. "The Waltons" followed, and Hamner was the creator and narrator of the series. The story is based on his recollections from his childhood.

Check your local library for a copy of the book.

Is the actress who played Mr. Kotter's wife in "Welcome Back Kotter" the same actress who played Bailey Quarters on "WKRP in Cincinnati"? — B.W., Albany, Ga.

No. Julie Kotter was played by Marcia Strassman. Bailey Quarters was played by Jan Smithers.

Is Daniel Hugh Kelly of "Hardcastle and McCormick" the same actor who played Jody in "Family Affair"? — M.F., Klamath Falls, Ore.

No. Jody was played by then child actor Johnnie Whitaker. Daniel Hugh Kelly never starred in a series when he was a child.

Can you give me the names of the people who played in a TV series in the late '50s called "The Millionaire"? — J.B., Totowa Bobo, N.J.

This series, which aired from 1955 to 1960, featured Marvin Miller as Michael Anthony. He was the personal secretary to multimillionaire John Beresford Tipton, whose face was never seen on the TV screen. The fictional Tipton made a habit of giving away sums of $1 million to strangers—but only if they didn't tell anyone except their spouse where they got the money.

George Conn celebrated his 90th birthday April 7 at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, James and Belle Conn, of Allen. Birthday cake and refreshments were served to his wife, Mousie Conn, and Faye Maynard, of Stanville; Mr. and Mrs. John Conn, of Tram; Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery A. Conn, of David; Betty, Stevie and Ricky Conn, of Ivel; Mildred Hall and Emma Gallup, of Allen. He received greetings from Mr. and Mrs. Gall Thompson, of Melbourne, Fla., and Mr. and Mrs. James Curtis Warrix, of West Prestonsburg.

Dootney Says—
‘Whatever Business You’re In You Have To Be the Best at It’

You might think that Prestonsburg has enough video cassette stores, but Dootney Horn won't agree with you. With a new angle—using a broader marketing technique—there's room for one more.

"This is a real competitive business," Horn said. "You've got to have an angle." Horn's angle to put into one word is: more. Stocking more movie titles and having more variety in the different movie categories than any other store in eastern Kentucky.

Called Video U.S.A., the store will only stock up to 1500 movies at a time, but the stock will be constantly changing every week. Besides buying new tapes, Dootney will rotate in 100 new titles a week from a distribution network of 50 video stores in Kentucky, Virginia, and West Virginia that currently rent his tapes in large quantities. His total inventory is 5,000 cassettes. "I don't know of anyone in the United States that has a better selection of movies," Horn said.

The store will open April 24 and be unique in the area in that it is the only one that stocks Beta tapes and machines. "I'm not interested in doing what any other business is doing," Horn said. "My success comes from being different." As well as carrying movies in all the categories: drama, comedy, adventure, adult, children's movies, and cartoons, he will also specialize in horror movies. "I believe we now have 700 horror movies in stock," Horn said.

Horn, who is 59 and lives in the Briarwood section of Prestonsburg, started in the video business in 1985 as a backer for Shows-To-Go, but due to competition and a small inventory, the store was forced out of business in three months. To recoup his losses, Horn tried to liquidate his stock of 93 cassettes, and it was then that he realized a profit could be made by renting those same tapes to other stores who needed more inventory. He made one deal, and then another, and he has been renting, buying, and trading movies ever since with other businesses as far away as Florida.

The local entrepreneur attributes his success and large stock of movies to his mobility. "I love to travel," he said. "If there are movies to buy or trade anywhere, I'll drive there and buy them."

Video U.S.A. will be located on U.S. 23 North next to the Dairy Cheer and will also serve as the office and headquarters for Horn's video accessories business. Besides his rentals, he also manufactures and sells styrofoam inserts and shrink-wrap plastic bags for cassette boxes. In addition, he markets wooden boxes that hold VCR players as part of his video security system business.

"I don't care what it is—whatever you do, be the best at it," Horn said. "Look around at those walls."

"At the bare walls?"
"That's right. As soon as the carpenter puts up shelves, movies will cover those walls. When you come back here again, those walls will be covered with movies. Movies and more movies." IT.

Companies Paying More Heed To Complaints By Consumers

By VIRGINIA H. KNAUER,
Director, U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs

So, you thought you'd been a pretty smart consumer. You analyzed your needs, you compared brands and stores, you checked the warranty, and you took note of the return and exchange policy. When you got home, you followed cleaning and maintenance directions. But something still went wrong, and now your want your complaint resolved. How do you do it? Will anyone listen?

In fact, consumer complaint handling in America is improving. Both business and government leaders are recognizing the importance of resolving consumer complaints when they occur, and even of actively soliciting consumer complaints. And the companies that follow through are amply rewarded through repeat business from customers they otherwise might have lost.

As a consumer, your role is to let a company know when you have a complaint about its product or service. Although approximately one in four purchases results in some type of consumer problem, nearly 70 percent of these problems go unreported to the responsible retailer or manufacturer. But if you do complain, you give the company a chance to improve its service and keep you as a customer, and also to gain new customers by learning from your experience. Indeed, most companies welcome this opportunity.

In the business world, there are profits to be made in actively seeking consumer complaints and resolving them. A 1986 Federal study, the Update to the mid-70's Consumer Complaint Handling in America report, shows that "proactive" complaint handling can result in returns on investment ranging from 15 to 400 percent. The report also shows marked improvement in the resolution of consumer complaints by business and government. More and more businesses are offering toll-free numbers and establishing permanent customer service and complaint-handling departments with well-trained personnel.

But there is still a lot of room for improvement. Each of us, as consumers, can play a role in encouraging manufacturers to be more responsive. My office has published a directory of consumer complaint contacts that also includes some helpful guidelines for effective complaint handling. It's called the Consumer's Resource Handbook, and it's available free by writing the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado, 81009.

Half-Size Memorial Of Vietnam Conflict Will Visit Frankfort

Floyd county friends and relatives of Vietnam War dead or missing-in-action can see a half-scale replica of the Washington, D.C. Vietnam War Memorial when it comes to Frankfort April 27 through May 3. State Treasurer Frances Jones Mills has been working since 1985 to bring the "mini memorial" to Kentucky. She heads a committee of veterans groups and others interested in making it possible for families, friends and service "buddies" to view the replica.

Despite the scaling down of the original, the "wall" is 250 feet long and contains all 58,022 names of those Missing in Action or killed in the Vietnam Conflict. Kentucky has 1,038 of its military listed on the memorial.

"There are many relatives and friends of those missing or killed who will never be able to see the Washington original," said Mills. "When we learned of this 'moving wall', we wanted to bring it to our capitol for Kentuckians to see and appreciate what our men had given in Vietnam."

The memorial will be set up on the northwest corner of the Capitol grounds. Mills and the committee have written to surviving spouses and relatives of the dead or missing in an attempt to get them to Frankfort to visit the memorial. "If they don't have a way to get to Frankfort, we'll try to find them a way," Mills said.

Military personnel from Floyd county, or whose next-of-kin live in this county; whose names are listed on the memorial include Danny E. Blevins, of Tram; Ira C. Brank, of Wheelwright; Andrew J. Campbell, of Langley; Lawrence E. Clark, of Harold; Phillip R. Coleman, of Wayland; James P. Devaney, of Stanville; Donald Hall, of Printer; Donald R. A PRAYER

In memory of Ollie Blackburn.

Thank you, God for the memory of the one we love.

It.

Thank You

In Memoriam of John Crace

One year April 20th you had to leave us, but this year is even more lonely without you.

You filled our lives with joy and you'll always be in our heart.

I often stand at your monument that reads "a trucker to the end" wishing I could hold you once again.

I tried so hard to keep you, but God needed you too. So until the day "we will be known as we are known," then I can be with you my precious husband.

THE JACKIE GLEASON SHOW

By Paul Elie

"The Honeymooners," perhaps the most perfect ever created, was actually a spinoff of sorts. It was really a part of a larger show, "The Jackie Gleason Show." In fact, there were several Jackie Gleason variety shows. The original "Jackie Gleason Show" premiered in 1950, aired for two seasons, then left the struggle work when CBS offered to finance a more elaborate production — and gave a whopping raise to Gleason.

The resulting CBS show, which aired until 1955, was "The Honeymooners," a skit featuring Gleason, Art Carney, Audrey Meadows and Joyce Randolph. The beloved Brooklyn couples became so popular that the next "Jackie Gleason Show" entirely replaced "The Jackie Gleason Show."

But "The Honeymooners" garnered lackluster ratings, so in 1956 Gleason returned with a variety show that featured the old format. After a brief monologue, Gleason would introduce the first skit, bellowing, "And away we go!" The skits usually featured Gleason playing characters like Joe the Bartender, the Repairman and Reggie Van Gleason III. Later Gleason shows strayed further from the original approach. A 1958 variety show teamed Gleason with Buddy Hackett; that show was canceled within three months. "The Jackie Gleason Show: The American Scene Magazine" lasted from 1962-66 and relied on talent contests and musical and celebrity guests, rather than Gleason's blustery charm.

The final "Jackie Gleason Show," which aired from 1966-70, reunited Gleason and Carney. But the old chemistry was missing.

Question: What was Gleason's nickname on the original show?

Answer: "The Great One"

The music shines through on Marvin Gaye special

By Marianne Meyer

In a business where the words "legend" and "genius" are tossed around as often as a basketball in an inner-city high school, Marvin Gaye lived up to the hype.

Marvin Gaye

Music lovers will find it impossible to watch "Motown on Showtime: Marvin Gaye," which premieres Sunday, April 26, and not be moved by the extraordinary quality and range of the man's work.

The hourlong special, hosted by Motown labelmate and frequent collaborator Smokey Robinson, is a video archivist's dream collection of Gaye hits — stretching from 1965 versions of "How Sweet It Is (To Be Loved by You)" and a duet medley with Tina Turner of "I'll Be Doggone" and "Money" to a 1983 version of "I Heard It Through the Grapevine" with Gladys Knight, the Grammy Awards performance of "Sexual Healing" and an awesome, moving "Star Spangled Banner" from the NBA championships.

Along the way, viewers also get two live versions of the classic protest song "What's Goin' On," the Gaye/Tammi Terrell classic "Ain't No Mountain High Enough," rehearsal footage ... let's just say that the clips are great.

But while the special is truly that in a musical sense, the biographical element of the show is surprisingly weak, despite contributions from Motown prez Berry Gordy, the three Mrs. Gayes (two wives, one mom) and others.

Here is a man whose work careened from religious introspection to explicit sexual content, who went into self-imposed exile at mid-career, battled drugs and depression, and was shot dead by his father on April 1, 1984.

There is one hell of a story in Gaye's life, but it is not told here. It's great to have Ashford and Simpson recall the old days at Motown and do a medley of great Gaye duets, but they don't tell you that Tammi Terrell collapsed in Gaye's arms onstage before she died.

By skimming over the dark elements of Gaye's life, this Showtime special chooses to be a nice musical entertainment when it could have been a daring, dramatic documentary about a compelling, troubled talent.

THE OTHER LOVER

A talk show appearance arranged by marketing director Claire Fielding (Lindsay Wagner, r.) for one of her firm's authors (Jack Scalia) leads to an intimate relationship, in "The Other Lover," airing TUESDAY, APRIL 28, on CBS.
