P'burg Village Adds Creditor, Is Up For Sale

By Ron Marstin

Even as the unfinished shopping center is scheduled to be sold to pay off some of the developers' debts, another contractor last week joined the long line of creditors asserting claims against W&G Prestonsburg Associates, the firm that created Prestonsburg Village.

The C.C. Sheffield Company asked Floyd Circuit Court for enforcement of a $138,000 materialman's lien for labor and materials furnished between Nov. 1984 and April 1986. Ten such petitions have earlier been filed, asserting claims totalling $815,775, according to court records. They include a $575,825 claim by the Tag Coal Company.

By virtue of court decisions handed down last fall, the property owned by developers John W. Waits, of Crestwood, and Robert M. Greer, Jr., of Armonk, N.Y. will be offered for sale at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 13, by Special Commissioner James A. Combs.

The sale has been ordered to satisfy (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

Union Lawsuit Would Force Dues Checkoff

Teamsters Say They Represent School Workers

By Ron Marstin

A Teamsters Union official filed suit in Floyd Circuit Court last week in an effort to force the Floyd Board of Education to deduct union dues from the paychecks of those employees who ask them to.

Jerry T. Vincent, secretary-treasurer of the 4000-member Teamsters Local 783 in Louisville, said the union asked Superintendent Ray Brackett in March and April to start deducting $11 a month in membership dues for the 275 board employees—bus drivers, custodians, cooks, and clerks—who signed authorization cards. The board has refused the union request, he said.

The union official cited a state law directing local boards of education to "adopt policies . . . which will provide for deductions from salaries of its employees . . . whenever a request is presented to the board by said employees."

Because the board has approved payroll deductions for other employee associations, its refusal to do so for the Teamsters is discriminatory, the union suit says. An official in the Floyd schools' payroll department acknowledged last week that membership dues are deducted for the KEA and KASA, organizations representing teachers and supervisory personnel, respectively.

The union lawsuit, filed Thursday by attorney Leonard Franklin Janes, asks the court to affirm the union's rights and force the board to compensate them for lost membership fees. Janes is a member of the Louisville law firm of Segal, Isenberg, Sales, Stewart and Cutler.

Assistant Supt. Ron Hager said recently that the Board of Education does not recognize the Teamsters (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

New Tax Revenue Breathes Life Into Failing Allen Fire Dept.

By Ron Marstin

With tax revenues giving the once-embattled fire company a new lease on life, trustees of the Allen Volunteer Fire Department will make a new bid to draw Bull Creek into its coverage area.

The 26-year-old Allen station is one of four rural fire departments—the others are in Garrett, Maytown and Wayland—which began collecting taxes this year as a result of decisions by Floyd Fiscal Court in 1985 to declare those sections fire protection districts.

The decision has meant that Allen Fire Department—formerly dependent largely on voluntary contributions, which amounted in 1984 to $7,800—has collected nearly $21,000 this year in property taxes levied at a rate of a dollar per $1,000 of assessed value.

In addition, the department receives state support of $2,000 and, along with the county's other 15 rural fire departments, a fiscal court contribution of $2,000 annually.

The new revenue has enabled Allen firefighters to purchase a used fire truck for $25,000 and to buy their concrete-block firehouse for $30,000, said Fire Chief Roy Compton.

When, in the fall of 1985, the department sought fiscal court recognition of its service area as a special taxing district, opposition from a few Bull Creek residents resulted in the sundering of that section from the proposed coverage area. But Allen fire officials believe that new developments make more persuasive their argument that Bull Creek householders would be well served by sheltering under the Allen umbrella.

For one thing, a February survey of the district's firefighting capability by the Insurance Services Organization (ISO), an agency employed by underwriters to rate fire districts for insurance purposes, has resulted in the elevation of the Allen area from a Class 9 designation to Class 6 for all residents within 1,000 feet of an approved hydrant.

The dramatically-improved rating comes at a time when construction of a water system on Prater Creek, which falls within the Allen fire district borders, offers many residents there the chance of having fire hydrants nearby, and when Floyd Fiscal Court has budgeted $500,000 to install hydrants in all rural areas served by public water systems.

Insurance agent Denzil Allen told a meeting of Allen-area residents Monday that those who benefit from the new ISO classification could see their homeowners insurance premiums reduced by as much as $212 on a $50,000 frame house.

Another agent, Blaine Hall, told the (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Funding Available, But... Literacy Push Here Takes Spring, Summer Vacation

By Louise Houghton

In nearly half of the school districts in Kentucky, adult literacy classes won't end this year with the close of the regular school session. Instead, those 56 districts will offer adult classes into the summer months, funded by special extension grants from the state Department of Education.

But Floyd county, where one out of every eight adults cannot read beyond the fourth-grade level, isn't one of them. Here, where nearly half of the adult population did not finish the eighth grade, the school district's adult classes ended in January and won't start up again until August.

Cosetta Newsome, supervisor of adult education for this county, says she received no notice of the summer extension grants. According to state education officials, the extension program was announced in late March at the department's spring conference, held in Louisville. Newsome attended the conference, but apparently missed the session in which the program was announced.

However, when state officials found out this week that Floyd county had been left out, they called Newsome to offer extra money to hold the classes this summer. Newsome turned them down, said an incredulous Anita Nelam, spokesperson for the education department.

According to Newsome, whose sister is one of the teachers in the adult education program, summer classes are not feasible here. Teachers like to have their summers off, she said, and some of them need that time to take classes themselves to keep their certification current.

The same reason—the teachers' preference—explains why adult classes here shut down in January, according to Newsome. Floyd county's adult education program, which is only a minor part of her responsibilities, was given approval last summer for 600 teaching hours during the 1986-87 school year. That was divided equally among five teachers, for 120 hours each.

Since the teachers here traditionally have held classes two nights a week for three hours each evening, all the available hours were used up in about 20 weeks after the beginning of the school year. That has been the case for at least the last several years, according to Newsome. She said she has considered making the classes available all year long, but believes the teachers would not cooperate.

"You can hardly get them to do that," she said. "I don't believe they would do it. For more hours, more pay, naturally they would."

The situation may be better next year, she hopes, if her request for a total of 850 teaching hours is approved. That works out to 170 hours for each of the five teachers, which will mean that each

Warrant Issued For Lake Boat Operator

A warrant has been sworn out for the arrest of Jimmy F. Blair, of Pikeville, following a boating incident Sunday at Dewey Lake.

According to Kentucky Water Patrolman Dean Ratliff, Blair was operating his boat in a dangerous manner and, when he was pulled over, had a strong odor of alcohol on his breath. The criminal complaint also states that Blair assaulted the patrolman by striking him with his fist, resisted arrest, cursed the officer loudly, and escaped by operating his boat in a very reckless manner.

Bail was set at $5,000. Blair had not been arrested Tuesday.

Primary Election Results Few Backed By Floyd Voters Will Carry Democrat Banner

By Ron Marstin

Although he ran a distant fourth statewide, Dr. Grady Stumbo was the clear choice of Floyd voters for governor in last week's primary election. He won all 48 precincts here, capturing 76 percent of the county vote.

Only on Prater Creek did Wallace Wilkinson, the Lexington businessman who upset former governor John Y. Brown, Jr. to win the state Democratic nomination, come close to beating Stumbo. Voters at the Dana polls gave Wilkinson 186 to Stumbo's 197 votes.

Wilkinson also made a respectable showing in Betsy Layne, while Lt.-Gov. Steven L. Beshear ran strongly on Toler Creek.

The Floyd tally in the governor's race: Stumbo 10,094, Wilkinson 1,801, Beshear 1,206, and Julian Carroll 151.

Similarly, in the contest for lieutenant governor, it was the east Kentucky candidate who took the lion's share here: Pike Judge-Executive Paul Patton—who ran third behind Midway horsebreeder Breton Jones and Attorney General Dave Armstrong statewide—was the clear victor in this county, polling 8,135 votes to Armstrong's 1,642 and Jones's 1,075.

For attorney general, Floyd Democrats chose Todd Hollenbach, 3,207, over Raymond Kirk, 2,980, and Fred Cowan, 2,163. On the state level, however, Cowan, a four-term state representative from Louisville, opened a wide lead, capturing more than 50 percent of the votes. Hollenbach, who is Jefferson county commonwealth's attorney, received about 40 percent and Kirk, a Lexington lawyer, 10 percent.

State Rep. Roger Noe, of Harlan, with 2,702 votes, was the leader here for state superintendent of public instruction, in a close race with former state Superintendent Raymond Barber, 2,589, and Rowan county superintendent John Brock, 2,356.

Brock, who said he did not favor state interference in local districts—of the kind permitted under the "academic bankruptcy" law that Noe helped write—won the nomination in a narrow victory over the state legislator.

Joint Effort Meant To Lure Investors Here

By Louise Houghton

"Unless we have something special to offer," said Morgan county Judge-Executive Sid Stewart, "we're just not going to get" industrial development in this area. Businesses simply have no reason to locate further east than Winchester, he believes.

So three area development districts—Big Sandy, Gateway and Kentucky River—are in the process of putting together "something special"—a package of incentives that they hope will convince businesses that their future lies in eastern Kentucky.

"I look at it as just buying ourselves some jobs," Stewart said.

The keystone in the package, expected to become a reality by July, will be free land supplied with water, gas and electricity. Specialized training for prospective employees will be another element, provided through the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (EKCEP). Other possibilities, not firmly nailed down yet, are to offer businesses an exemption from paying certain taxes and to give them an actual "cash incentive" to set up shop here, according to Stewart.

Members of the Big Sandy Area Development District, which includes Floyd and four other nearby counties, voted in February to join the other two ADDs in buying a 100-acre industrial site near the Mountain Parkway in Wolfe county, for $105,000. That deal now is "right on the verge" of being complete, Stewart said, with the only holdup being the funding schedule of the Big Sandy ADD. Although the other two ADDs already have chipped in their one-third shares of $35,000 each, the Big Sandy ADD follows a different schedule and its contribution cannot be approved until July 1, according to director Roger Recktenwald.

The site is farmland right now, according to Stewart, and includes only about 20 acres of flat land. But running beneath the topsoil is a 41-inch seam of coal, and he said that local businessmen have estimated that the coal could pay for the cost of acquiring the land. In the process of clearing and mining the area, he anticipates the creation of a "split-level" site that will at least double the amount of level surface.

School Injury Spawns Lawsuit

By Ron Marstin

If a boy gets into a fight at school, his parents are liable for any injuries he causes, an Allen couple assert in a suit filed last week in Floyd Circuit Court.

It is the second suit filed in May in which parents seek damages for school playground incidents occurring last year.

In the current suit, William and Roberta Stephens name Jackie and Edna Click, of Manton, as defendants in an action seeking compensation for facial injuries their son sustained last May at Martin Elementary School.

John Kelly Stephens, then 10 and in the fourth grade, suffered a broken jaw and damage to his face and teeth when he was "violently pushed to the ground" by Christopher Click, then 11 and a sixth-grader, the suit alleges. Click's parents are responsible for their son's "intentional assault" on the younger boy, plaintiffs claim. The Floyd Board of Education is not named as a party to the action.

Career Built On Skills Honed In School Basketball Program

By Joe Porter

David Ace Harrington spent only two and a half years in Prestonsburg, yet the Prestonsburg High graduate considers this is home and the place that has most influenced him to become the successful businessman he is today.

Born in Memphis, Tenn., Harrington was a basketball player on Fred Setser's team at Treadwell Junior High in Memphis when the team won the city championship two years in a row. Then, when Setser became Prestonsburg's coach the following year, he invited Harrington to play for Prestonsburg. Setser had a good crop of sophomores that year—1972-73—and, in an effort to build a winning tradition, he brought Harrington here and arranged for him to live with the C.J. McNally family on Trimble Branch. "My mother wasn't too big on the idea," Harrington said, "but we convinced her once she came to Prestonsburg and met the McNallys."

Being on his own made Harrington more independent and made him mature more quickly. He calls it a positive experience, having lived in a small town like Prestonsburg, where family values and the importance of education was stressed by parents and teachers like A.G. Crider.

"I feel very fortunate to have moved away from home at an early age and to have played for Coach Setser," Harrington said. "And, just as importantly, to have lived with people like C.J. and Deana McNally. Mr. McNally is a very successful businessman, and I saw him accomplish things and that impressed me."

Setser succeeded in building up the basketball program and, in Harrington's senior year, the Blackcats were district champs and finished with a 28-3 record. "We kicked tail our senior year," Harrington said. "We have the best record of any team ever at Prestonsburg."

Harrington never became the professional basketball player he once dreamed of being, but he left Prestonsburg with a winning attitude and the belief instilled in him by his parents, Coach Setser, and the McNallys, that he could be successful if he worked hard.

With only mediocre grades at Prestonsburg High, he made the dean's list every semester at Aquinas Junior College in Nashville. Then he transferred to Vanderbilt University, where he graduated with a double major in business and economics. It was while at Vanderbilt that he got his first taste for being an entrepreneur. He started several small businesses with other students, like selling snow tires to students at wholesale prices; he sold pizzas and frisbees with Vanderbilt printed on them; he also operated an airport taxi service. And with what he earned on these enterprises he paid his way through school.

After graduating in 1979, Harrington started Mid-Tenn Associates, Inc., a business that sold Homelite products. In 1981, the business expanded into equipment rentals and added a division Mid-Tenn Equipment and Supply, that eventually became Nashville's largest Ryder truck dealer. Then in 1983 Harrington started MTA Distributors, serving as the sole distributor for Honda engines, generators, and water pumps. At that point, Harrington's father joined the company as vice president of sales for MTA. The company now employs 31 people with two warehouse locations and a current gross of over $3 million a year.

Harrington is 31 and lives in Nashville with his wife Cheryl and their baby daughter Tina Marie. His latest venture is a franchise with the A.L. Williams Corporation of Atlanta, the largest seller of mutual funds and life insurance in the United States. The franchise employs nine agents.

Yet Harrington isn't the only basketball player who graduated in 1975 and became successful. That was the year that Gorman Collins, Jr., Robbie Herrick, Kip McNally, Dennis Walker, Dave Flanery, and Del Jagers played for Coach Setser. Not surprisingly all went on in school. Collins is now general manager of WQHY-FM, WDOC-AM radio; Kip McNally is a CPA and just received his law degree; Herrick is a dentist in Prestonsburg; Jagers is an engineer; Flanery is a CPA; and Walker is a sales rep for Quorum Corporation.

What Harrington says he got from Coach Setser—and what he thinks the other ballplayers got as well—was a never-quit attitude. "We got that ingrained in us," Harrington said. "Coach Setser was hard on us, but it was good for us. I learned that your attitude is the most important thing."

Harrington got his drive from sports and attributes his success in business to that. "The instinct of never quitting came from basketball," Harrington said. "It's like if you're driving in for a lay up with the basketball, if you stop in the lane you're going to get run over. It's the same with my company. We would have gotten run over by the competition if we hadn't worked hard and kept going."

Some of the ballplayers have moved away and Coach Setser is now a coach and principal in New Jersey, but Harrington still comes back to Prestonsburg two or three times a year to visit the McNallys and see old friends. "There is a certain point in your life when you consider a place your home," Harrington said. "I'll always consider Prestonsburg my home and, when I come back, it feels like home."

Truck-Driving Course Appeals To Many

Bob Bierman thinks the best way to see the world is through the windshield of a truck.

"Some people say truck driving is the last frontier. I think being a professional truck driver is a wonderful way to earn a living," Bierman said.

After serving nine years as principal of Bowling Green State Vocational-Technical School, Bierman, 49, will be moving from his office in June to become principal of the new Transportation Occupations Center in Bowling Green. The center will be operated by the Department of Education's Office of Vocational Education.

The Bowling Green school has been rolling 12 new students a week in its trucking class. The opening of the Transportation Occupations Center in June will increase the number of instructors from 13 to 19 and provide space for up to 24 students at a time in the three-week program.

The state vocational-technical schools system has one other truck driving program, at Mayo State Vocational-Technical School in Paintsville.

The students entering the truck-driving program are from all over the country and varied backgrounds.

"We've had dislocated oil workers, X-ray technicians, welders, husband-and-wife teams, and even retired people who want to travel and see the country," Bierman said.

Although Bierman has spent most of his professional career as a teacher and principal, he has indulged his interest in trucks by driving part-time nearly all his life.

"I used to drive a truck for extra money during summer breaks. And I still do a lot of driving at night for my father-in-law, who owns a trucking firm," he said.

All those years on the road made Bierman aware of the need for truck drivers with professional training. He was delighted three years ago when the truck-driving program was started at Bowling Green State Vocational-Technical School.

"We began in a small way, but the program really grew. By March 1986, we had graduated 526 students," he said.

During the first few days of the three-week course, students learn rules and regulations, practice reading road maps and fill out road logs and other paper work.

"The first thing we teach them is how to back the vehicle up in a straight line. That's one of the hardest things to do with a truck," Bierman said.

Next the students are taken out on the road and shown the proper gear-shifting procedures to get the most horsepower and fuel efficiency.

"After the students are comfortable on lightly traveled roads we move them out onto I-65 for some real highway driving. Then we take them downtown and teach them how to drive in the city," Bierman said.

Students who pass a road test the third week are employed by the J.B. Hunt Truck Co., which has a contract with the school. "They work as second-test drivers for eight weeks. At the end of that period they're road-tested again and given their first truck," Bierman said.

There is always a high demand for new drivers in the trucking industry.

"Although the job requires a person to be away from home for long periods of time, it's perfect for a single person without family responsibilities," Bierman said. "It's a good way to travel and see the country at someone else's expense."

Parents Should Act Now to Secure Birth Records of Kindergarteners

"Begin early," is the advice being given by school officials here to parents needing to apply to Frankfort for birth records of children starting school next fall.

Floyd school nurse Jennifer Martin is coordinating the effort here to see that all youngsters beginning kindergarten in August come to school with the necessary records in hand—TB and shot records, physical exam, and birth certificate.

The birth certificate is the record Martin is worried about. "They have to have it the day they come to school—and there is a backlog of applications in Frankfort," she said.

For parents who must write to the Kentucky Office of Vital Statistics for a copy of a child's birth record, two- to four-week delays may be experienced because of new federal regulations, officials said. Omar Greeman, registrar at the office, said an Internal Revenue Service regulation and a new law dealing with the problem of illegal alien workers are going to increase the demand for birth certificate copies. The IRS now requires dependents four and over to have Social Security numbers for them; birth certificates are needed to obtain them.

For Martin, the implication is clear: parents of children turning five before October 1 and so eligible for kindergarten should not delay in applying for their birth record. Applications are available from Floyd Health Department registrar Peggy Gibson.

Teachers Urged To Enter Constitutional Contest

A professor of government at Eastern Kentucky University will coordinate a state-wide competition this fall on the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Dr. Paul Blanchard will be the contact person for Kentucky high school teachers—especially those who teach social studies—who wish to participate in the program.

"Recent news stories have highlighted several activities sponsored by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the Constitution, chaired by former Chief Justice Warren Burger," Blanchard said. "A major activity of the Bicentennial Commission is the National Bicentennial Competition on the Constitution, or NBCC. This is a classroom-oriented activity in which many Kentucky high school teachers can participate," he said.

Teachers of U.S. history, civics, government, and political science are particularly urged to consider becoming involved in this program, Blanchard said.

The program will be available during the fall 1987 semester.

The National Bicentennial Competition provides high school students with a six-week instructional program designed to foster an understanding of the fundamental principles of our constitutional republic and the history of its development.

Following this instruction, entire classes will be invited to compete as teams in district, state and national competitions. Participation in this portion of the program is not mandatory.

Students in classes not wishing to compete will receive an award certificate signed by their U.S. Representative or another public official upon completion of the course of study.

Ten teachers in each congressional district will be provided with complete sets of instructional materials for the six-week course of study free of charge. Other teachers will be able to participate at a nominal cost. In addition, training and technical assistance will be provided to participating teachers at no cost to their school districts.

Anyone who is interested in participating in this program, or would like more information, may contact: Dr. Paul Blanchard, state coordinator NBCC-Kentucky, Department of Government, Wallac 317, Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky. 40475, or call (606) 622-5931.

Despite Supermarket Competition

Program Helps Struggling Families Hold On To Spring Garden Tradition

By Louise Houghton

Nine-year-old Dave McCoy led the way past his mother's new corn seedlings, barely showing above the brown dirt, past rows of newly-planted tomatoes, white with Sevin dust, and just-sprouted halfrunner beans and mustard greens. "Here's the cucumbers," he said, poking with the tip of one crutch at a mound of earth where pairs of new leaves were beginning to sprout.

He leaned over carefully, favoring the injured knee that has kept him out of school recently, and plucked up a tiny weed with pointed leaves. "That's a morning glory," he declared with the assurance of an experienced gardener.

Young McCoy, a third-grader at Martin Elementary School, is heir to an eastern Kentucky tradition of growing food for the family table, although it's a pursuit many people here have given up now that fresh vegetables are available at every supermarket and greengrocer's. Those people don't know what they are missing, believes his father, Gene McCoy, who relishes the taste of a plump home-grown tomato.

But for the McCoy family, vegetable gardening is more than just a matter of tradition or preference. With three children at home and Gene McCoy unable to work due to heart problems, it's a necessity. By canning or freezing much of what they grow, the family manages to make the garden last all year long.

For the last four years, the McCosys have participated in the "small farm" program, operated by the Christian Appalachian Project, which distributes seeds and fertilizer to low-income rural families every spring. The program is helping about 325 families in Floyd, Knott and Magoffin counties put in gardens this spring, according to coordinator Donna Yellen.

Along with onion sets, seedling peppers and tomatoes, seeds for watermelon, cucumbers, beans, cabbage, corn and other vegetables, and fifty-pound bags of potatoes and fertilizer, the participants also are given some flower seeds, Yellen said, because the spirit needs food as much as the body does. "Sometimes those flowers are just as important as those taters," she explained.

Each of the families is visited at least twice during the growing season so that CAP employees can bring them extra seeds, seedlings, pesticide, or, in the fall, canning supplies and freezer bags. The employees also are supposed to provide gardening advice during their visits, but Yellen, a New Yorker, said things haven't worked out that way.

"It's totally the opposite," she said. "I know nothing, compared to the people here." Most of the participants are very knowledgeable farmers who have been working in family gardens since they were younger than Dave McCoy, she has found.

One of the highlights of the program, she added, has been the friendliness of the participants and their eagerness to share the fruits of their labor. She rarely visits a home where she is not offered a cup of coffee or a cold soda pop, and when she leaves, it's with her hands full of onions, early peas, a sack of potatoes or a poke of greens.

"I feel like I get a hundred times more than what I give out," she said.

In addition, the gardeners often help each other, even without meeting face-to-face. It's not unusual, Yellen said, that when she visits a family to bring them young tomato plants, she comes away with a batch of sweet potato slips they have sprouted. These, in turn, will be passed around to the other gardeners.

Since the participants must be willing to work in order to benefit from the programs, she said, the gardening effort is not a hand-out. "It's not something that you get for nothing," she emphasized. Instead, the approach tries to make families self-sufficient and lets them take pride in what they produce.

A further aim of the program is to help "build relationships" between CAP and the people it seeks to serve, according to Yellen. Those who get involved with CAP through the small farm program often go on to enter other programs as well, such as literacy training or health care. The McCoy children will attend CAP's summer camp near Dewey Lake this year, she said.

Most of the small farm participants grow their gardens right at home, but the McCosys' rented home at Frogtown on Left Beaver has little room for a garden and the soil is poor. So, instead, they are cultivating a large plot at the community garden near the river in Martin, another CAP project. Created out of unused and flood-prone land owned by the Chessie railroad system, the community garden space is available for use by anyone in the area, rich or poor, who wants to garden and lacks a place to do it, Yellen said.

Most of the available gardening room is already claimed for this season, however.

The McCosys and one or two other gardeners were there, planting tomatoes and discussing their beans, on a hot morning in late May when Yellen came by for a visit. While his mother Pam McCoy wielded a hoe, Dave McCoy pulled weeds by hand and his brother Luke, 5, tried to learn the difference between a cucumber and a morning glory. His father, just out of the hospital after his most recent bout with heart problems, directed operations.

As Yellen headed back to her truck, Gene McCoy thanked her for helping to get him to the hospital earlier, and said he regretted not having any fresh vegetables to send with her.

"You come back later on in the summer," he called cheerily, "when things are ripe!"

How far can a butterfly fly? According to Ranger Rick magazine, the world's champion butterfly long-distance flier is a kind of painted lady. Each spring hundreds of thousands of painted ladies leave their winter homes in North Africa and Asia Minor. Most stop off in southern England and spend the summer there. But a few painted ladies fly on to northern Iceland near the Arctic Circle. That's nearly 4000 miles, or almost one sixth of the way around the world!

Auto Technican Training Earns Kentucky High Marks

Kentucky has been ranked number one as the state having the most automotive technician training programs certified by the National Automotive Technicians Education Foundation or NATEF.

Thirty-one automotive technician training programs in Kentucky vocational-technical schools are certified by NATEF, a subsidiary of the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence.

"I understand the evaluation is a very rigorous one, and we are really pleased to have so many of our programs earn certification," said Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald.

Currently, 37 states across the nation are participating in the NATEF evaluation, which examines automotive technician training programs in relation to nationally accepted standards of quality in purpose, administration, learning resources, finances, student services, instruction, equipment, facilities, instructional staff, and cooperative work agreements.

California was a runner-up to Kentucky with 28 programs certified by NATEF.

Tom Harris, state NATEF certification coordinator for the Department of Education's Office of Vocational Education, said workshops are being conducted across the state to help all vocational-technical schools earn NATEF certification.

Not even the remote frozen north has escaped pollution. Researchers discovered that the one pristine Arctic is almost as dirty as some American cities. The culprit is soot—the majority of which comes from the Soviet Union. That soot, scientists say, could absorb enough heat from the sun to appreciably warm the north polar region and alter world climates.

Union as bargaining agent for its workers. Moreover, the union authorization cards signed by employees were not officially presented to the board and, in some instances, were incomplete, he said. In recent months, Teamster officials have been trying to organize non-teaching school employees in Floyd, Pike, Wolfe and Knott counties. The union, which already represents about 900 Jefferson county school workers, filed suits in April seeking to force Pike and Knott boards of education to start deducting union dues.

group that homeowners insured under the costly Kentucky Fair Plan could expect their annual premiums to drop from $619 to $353 on a $50,000 frame home—a saving of $266—as a result of the new classification.

Hall called the Class 6 rating “astounding” and Allen, who said no other rural fire department in the county enjoys as good a rating, recalled that the rapid improvement in the Allen district’s fire services had “seemed like an impossible task.”

Joining the Allen district’s coverage area will now be more attractive to Bull Creek residents, Allen officials said, not only on account of the improved ISO rating but also because the subscription fee for fire protection offered by the Prestonsburg Fire Department—which was only $25 annually when Bull Creek residents first rejected Allen’s advances—has since been raised substantially. Rural subscribers to the city fire protection plan now pay from $100 to $150 annually, depending on their distance from the city.

“The best thing that could happen to us was when Prestonsburg raised its fee,” said attorney Eric Hall, one of the Allen Fire Department’s seven trustees. “This time we’ve got something to sell.”

A petition to amend the Allen fire district boundaries to include Bull Creek will likely be presented to Floyd Fiscal Court at its July 17 meeting, Allen fire officials said.

Such a move could be blocked only if it were opposed by 51 percent of property owners in the area to be annexed, Hall told Monday’s meeting. About eight Bull Creek residents at the meeting indicated they would have no objection to being made part of the Allen fire district.

The district currently includes New and Old Allen, Beaver Creek as far south as the Martin city limit, Arkansas Creek to the mouth of Pickle Bean hollow, Dwale, Prater Creek as far as the Prater grade school, and the Big Sandy valley from the edge of the Bull Creek watershed to the Kentucky Machinery plant at Ivel.

Two years ago, Allen Fire Department appeared moribund, housed in a leaky building on which the lease had expired, reduced to seven dispirited firefighters, and owning only a decrepit, 1962-vintage fire truck.

The department, which now lists 15 firefighters, has launched a recruiting and fundraising drive and plans to establish a women’s auxiliary.

In the future, fire officials plan to see hydrants installed at Allen, to offer classes in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, to improve fire-call response, and to seek an even better ISO rating, Compton said.

In 1985, “we were fighting to get back on our feet. People took a chance on us,” the fire chief said, “and we came through for them.”

Jimmy “Gabe” Turner, of Drift, was the overwhelming choice of his fellow-countians for Third District railroad commissioner, winning 5,366 votes compared to 1,617 for J. E. Combs and 761 for Susanna M. Bullard. Turner lost overall, however, with Combs (28,775) winning handily over Turner (22,819). Bullard (13,371) and Harry D. Green (9,913).

In his campaign advertisements, Combs said he favored abolishing the railroad commission, which he said “costs taxpayers $100,000 a year” and involves “no duties.” Turner defended the panel as a necessary watchdog over the rail industry.

Drexell Davis, Jr. ran ahead of Bob Babbage in the race for state auditor here, 3,982 to 3,625. Babbage, a Lexington councilman, won the nomination by a wide margin, however.

Alma Waddell’s Floyd connections served her well: she was the top vote-getter here for secretary of state. However, she came in only fourth in the state race, which was won by former Jefferson judge-executive Bremer Ehrler.

Robert Mead CPA was the winner here, as in the state generally, in the treasurer’s race.

In local contests, Prestonsburg attorney Jerry Patton won in 32 precincts to upset Commonwealth’s Attorney James R. Allen, 6,381 to 5,312. Allen has held the post since 1975.

David Hereford failed in his bid to oust longtime Circuit Court Clerk Frank DeRossett, who won in all but six precincts and polled 7,512 votes to the challenger’s 4,732. DeRossett begins his sixth term as clerk.

It was not the first time the two candidates had squared off for the job: In 1963, DeRossett beat Hereford by just five votes to become clerk.

In Prestonsburg, five of the six incumbents seeking reelection to the city council were the top votegetters. They are: William R. Callihan 713, Adrian “Abo” Blackburn 669, Thomas “Rube” Tackett 631, Gary D. Brown 621, and William O. Goebel III 613.

Paul E. Joseph (600), Charles G. Hale (518), and Jim Yates (515) round out the top eight. Councilman Harry Ray Porter came in ninth, with 503 votes.

Of the 17 council candidates, all but the lowest votegetter—James Gibson, with 117—will advance to the November election, when the eight council seats will be filled.

State Forestry Division Reports On Tree Sales

Over 12 million tree seedlings in 20 varieties were sold by the Kentucky Division of Forestry nurseries from spring through fall 1986, up 2 million from 1985 and nearly 4 million from 1983.

The division’s two nurseries annually raise the seedlings for sale to Kentucky landowners in an effort to return idle and eroding land to forests. With the exception of white pine and Scotch pine, which are two years old when shipped, all other seedlings are one year old.

A breakdown of the tree seedling sales records show that 5.5 million were sold for mined land reclamation purposes, either for the reclamation of current operations or the restoration of sites under the abandoned mine land program. The planting of trees on these sites not only helps stabilize the soil, but also can provide a future source of revenue from harvested trees.

Individual private landowners purchased nearly 3.3 million seedlings, many of which will be used to plant old fields that are no longer usable or needed for farming operations. Many of these landowners received assistance from division foresters in selecting the right species for their sites.

The forestry industry purchased over 2.2 million seedlings either to reforest some of their own lands or to give to private landowners under various company programs.

Approximately 346,000 seedlings were sold to various federal agencies such as the Daniel Boone National Forest. Sales to order states and individuals outside Kentucky accounted for 949,000 seedlings.

Gas and electricity already are supplied to the area. The nearby town of Hazel Green is in the process of getting funding for a new water system, which would mean that an extra line of less than two miles would bring water to the industrial site. “If that doesn’t come through, we’ve got some problems,” he acknowledged, but added that wells probably could be drilled at the site.

Stewart also said that he has spoken with several state legislators about getting the area designated as an “enterprise zone.” Intended as a tool for underdeveloped areas with high unemployment, the enterprise zone designation would allow companies locating there to be exempt from paying sales tax on certain equipment and construction materials, according to an official with the state Commerce Cabinet. The designation also would allow local authorities to grant lower tax rates for those companies, the official said.

As a fourth element of the package, Stewart envisions paying businesses a “cash incentive” to move to the Wolfe county site. “I don’t know what it would amount to,” he said, but pointed out that if each of the three ADDS would contribute $33,000 per year, the incentive would add up to half a million dollars in five years.

No businesses have expressed an interest in the Wolfe county site yet, Stewart said, but plans are in the works to produce a video advertisement that will be shown to “hundreds of firms.”

Enterprise Zones

Authorized By Law

Current state law allows for the establishment of 10 “enterprise zones” in Kentucky, and nine already have been designated, according to Commerce Cabinet officials. More zones could be authorized, but this would require action by the state General Assembly.

The existing zones are in Ashland, Covington, Louisville, Lexington, Owensboro, Paducah, Campbell county, Knox county and Fulton-Hickman counties.

The designation is granted by the state Enterprise Zone Authority based primarily on need, particularly high unemployment in an area. Also taken into consideration is the amount of local effort that a community is willing to provide, such as road construction or the extension of utilities.

In order to qualify for tax incentives within an enterprise zone, a new business must agree to hire at least 25 percent of its work force from among the residents of the zone, long-term unemployed people or those receiving public assistance. For an existing business to qualify for the incentives, it must create a 20 percent increase in either its total work force or its capital investment. Both new and existing businesses must have at least 50 percent of their employees perform substantially all of their services within the enterprise zone.

Fifteen Graduate At Mountain Top School

The Mountain Top Preschool and Kindergarten finished its third year by graduating 11 preschoolers and four kindergartners Tuesday in the David School gym.

During the ceremony, the students performed a play, “Let’s take a Walk in the Woods.” Each student was a different animal, and all had a role in the story.

The students also showed off their musical ability by playing two numbers as a rhythm band.

The preschool and kindergarten was founded as an integral part of the educational services provided by the David School, by the director, Danny Greene and Sr. Donna Schauf. The school attempts to provide a positive school experience early, so that the drop-out problem can be averted. The school facility is an abandoned Boy Scout cabin overlooking the town of David. Sr. Donna, the program’s director, has two assistant teachers, Linda Webb and Juanita Shepherd.

The kindergarten graduates were: Rachel Cavins, Melanie Hackworth, Johnnie Holbrook, and Chad Shepherd. The preschool graduates were: Brandon Bentley, Michael Holbrook, Megan Panning, Joshua Shepherd, Kyle Shepherd, Christy Shepherd, George Thornsby, Ginger Thornsby, Jennifer Whitt, Dalton Samons, and Amy Shepherd.

Louisville to Host Safety Conference

Louisville will once again play host to what has become one of the nation’s premier health and safety conferences. The Governor’s Safety and Health Conference will be held June 3-5 at the Commonwealth Convention Center.

This year’s conference, the third annual, will feature safety experts representing labor, management, government and educational groups. Even though the perspectives of the groups involved may differ, the focus of the conference will be improved workplace safety within the commonwealth’s varying industries.

The conference program will include 27 technical workshops and six general session speakers, each of whom is a nationally recognized safety advocate.

Kiwanis Club Honors Seniors; Five Given Education Grants

By Joe Porter

The Prestonsburg Kiwanis held its first Scholarship Awards Banquet Thursday night and honored five area high school seniors and their parents. Club officials say it's the start of a tradition.

The Kiwanis in the past has awarded tuition scholarships to students at Prestonsburg Community College, but this is the first year that high school seniors have received money to continue their educations. "This is an honor for these students, and something I think the Kiwanis Club will continue in the future," said Lenny Grant, secretary-treasurer of the organization. "The Kiwanis' whole thrust is toward helping youths."

The way the students were selected was that every high school in the county was invited to pick an outstanding senior based on academics, community service activities, work experience outside of school, and extracurricular activities. "The senior teachers at each school picked the outstanding student," said James Vanhoose, chairman of the scholarship fund, "and they had a very difficult time just picking one."

Then, once selected, the students wrote essays on what the award would mean to them and were interviewed by a committee of judges—four Kiwanis members and three educators from outside the county.

Cathy Janell Horn, from Prestonsburg High, won first place and a check for $400 toward her education. Finishing second were Joey Cecil, of Betsy Layne High, and Kitty Moore of McDowell. Each won $200. Sabrina K. Burke and Sandra Crum, both students at Allen Central, were awarded $100 each. Since Wheelwright High didn't participate, the committee decided to select two students from Allen Central.

"The little money we're giving them this year is just a drop in the bucket compared to what they will need to complete their educations," said Vanhoose. "But it's a start and a way to show them we appreciate what they're doing in school."

Assistant Superintendent Ronald L. Hager was the banquet's feature speaker. Hager called for more funding for education—not for administrators but for teacher salaries and school buildings. "If we want excellence in our schools we must fund excellence," he said. The assistant superintendent also said he is hopeful about plans for building four new county schools, but stressed the continual need for parents and citizens to call on legislators for additional help.

The Prestonsburg Job Corps chorus, directed by Susan Ronning, entertained the banqueters with a rich blend of Gospel and spiritual singing. Vanhoose said that while they could only pick five students the Kiwanis Club appreciates the work being done by all students in Floyd county. "They're our most important asset," Vanhoose said. "If Floyd county is going to grow we're going to need well-educated young people to step in and fill the jobs. If they can't, what kind of future will we have?"

SEA WHIP LESSENS PAIN

Here's a whip that actually may lessen pain—sea whip. Scientists recently have extracted a new class of painkilling and anti-inflammatory drugs from this Caribbean soft coral. According to International Wildlife magazine, the new substances are more potent than commonly prescribed anti-inflammatory drugs. They also relieve pain at least as well as morphine but without its narcotic and addictive side effects. The drugs may one day be used to treat such diseases as arthritis.

Matisse Works Presented

"Matisse In Nice," a half-hour film that explores the rarely seen works produced by Henri Matisse during his first years in the south of France, airs Monday, June 22 at 9:30 p.m. on KET.

Award-winning filmmaker Michael Gill produced and directed this in-depth chronological presentation of Henri Matisse's painting during his early years in Nice.

"Matisse In Nice" tells the story of the artist's sojourn in Nice from 1916 to 1930. The visual subtleties of the city and surrounding countryside had a significant impact on Matisse's work. The artist was obsessed with the idea of the odalisque, the woman of the harem. Both his surroundings and ideas influenced Matisse's work.

Trick or treat! In the middle of the 14th century, in Spain, the style was to wear false beards. It was not long before the country resembled a masquerade party. No one knew who anyone else was!

Kidd, Hamilton Are Wed

Mr. Craig Kidd, of Printer, and Laura R. Hamilton, of Paintsville, were married March 14 at the Drift Pentecostal Church. A reception followed at the Little Rosa Old Regular Baptist Church at McDowell. Bridesmaids were Kristy Hamilton, cousin of the bride, and Lisa Kidd, sister of the groom. Ushers were Tony Kidd, brother of the groom, and Wesley Hamilton, brother of the bride. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Pastor Ted Shannon and music was provided by Taunya Shelton and Peggy Pack. The couple now lives at Paintsville. The bride is a science teacher at Mayo State Vocational school, and the groom is a lab technician for Consolidation Coal Co. of Breathitt county.

For Developmentally Disabled...
Projects Receive State Funds

Eleven special projects, including one in this county, designed to benefit more than 1,500 developmentally disabled Kentuckians, have been awarded $200,000 in grants by the Developmental Disabilities Planning Council in the state Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services. The programs, to be funded for the fiscal year beginning July 1, include early intervention and training programs, child care services and projects to assist families and siblings of developmentally disabled people. Developmental disabilities are severe mental and/or physical handicaps which begin at an early age and usually continue indefinitely. "We're very happy with the proposals that were approved," said department Commissioner Dennis Boyd. "The three statewide programs will reach a maximum number of people with a minimum amount of funding. "Some of the single- and multi-county projects represent first-time funding in those sections of Kentucky." Only a grant to a Bullitt county speech and hearing program is a renewal. Boyd said the 11 selections from 52 applications submitted are the most grants awarded in the four-year history of the program. Council chairman Ed LeMaster of London said he and other members of the project review committee were pleased with the large number of worthwhile proposals submitted. The committee was comprised of Council members and staff, along with staff from the department's Division of Mental Retardation. "The committee made a strong effort to target underserved areas, to fund no more than one project per agency, to balance direct with indirect statewide services and to avoid concentrating grants in just a few areas," said LeMaster. Mountain Comprehensive Care Center here will receive one of the grants—$29,315 to support a program for disabled children and their parents in Floyd and Magoffin counties.

QUILT PRESENTED

A quilt, depicting various Kentucky scenes and made by the sewing circle of the First United Methodist Church, was presented to Leon Russell, manager of May Lodge, last week. The presentation was made by Mesdames Mary Sue Moore and Judy Kittle, on behalf of the members of the sewing group. The quilt, which is to be hung in the stairwell leading to the lodge's dining room, includes sketches of a Kentucky map, the state's bird (the Kentucky cardinal) and flower (the goldenrod), as well as of Loretta Lynn, Jenny Wiley and numerous other representations of this state. Besides the work done by the sewing circle, Tom Price, a local artist who attends this church, is credited with sketching the quilt designs.

Graduates With Honors

Sarah Elizabeth DeRossett was recently graduated with honors from Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta. She was the recipient of the Janet M. Glasgow Memorial Achievement Citation and, as a junior, was one of six students from a class of 110 elected to membership in the Alpha Omega Alpha Medical Honor Society.

She holds a B.S. degree from Eastern Kentucky University and M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Kentucky, and is a graduate of Prestonsburg High School. Before entering medical school, she was on the research faculty at Emory University.

Dr. DeRossett is the author of numerous scientific publications in the areas of neuroscience and pharmacology, and has presented the results of her research at national and international meetings. After completing training in internal medicine at Emory, she plans to specialize in neurology at Johns Hopkins, one of the nation's most prestigious medical institutions.

She is the daughter of Nolene McGuire Hatfield, of Jackson, O., and the late Silas DeRossett. She is married to Dr. Rodney Alsop, who is on the faculty of Georgia State University in Atlanta.

"Alarming" Number of Physicians Forsaking Obstetrics Practice

An "alarming" number of Kentucky physicians have either dropped or sharply curtailed their obstetrics practice in recent years, according to a survey by the Kentucky Medical Association.

Half of those who gave up obstetrics have done so in the last three years, with the trend line moving upward each year. The number rose from nine in 1980 to 26 in 1986.

The survey of 330 physicians specializing in both family practice and OB/GYN, who had practiced obstetrics within the past eight years, revealed that 36% had quit obstetrics by 1986 and another 19% had reduced their practice.

The decline was greatest among family practitioners, where three out of five had left obstetrics by 1986 and another one out of five had cut back.

An analysis of the survey by Gordon Scott Bonham, Ph.D., of the University of Louisville's Urban Studies Center, said that liability insurance problems were reported by 70% of the physicians as the reason for quitting obstetrics.

Bonham's report predicted that the decline in obstetrics practice isn't over, and that a fortune shortage of physicians who care for pregnant women is probable.

"One out of eight physicians (12%) practicing obstetrics in 1986 said they might discontinue this part of their practice in the near future," he wrote. "This was especially true of those who had already reduced their obstetrics practice, where over half (57%) said they had definite plans to end their practice in the immediate future and one-eighth (14%) said they were considering such a measure."

The survey showed that liability insurance is a major expense for physicians, with the amount of coverage carried directly related to current obstetrical practices. Most physicians carry at least $1 million in coverage, with some reporting coverage up to $10 million. Coverage at $3 million or more was carried by 30% of physicians currently practicing obstetrics, compared to only 13% of those who had quit obstetrics by 1986.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: I am a fairly thin woman but all of my life I have had very large breasts. Do I have a greater risk of getting breast cancer? Do heavy women with large breasts have a greater risk?

ANSWER: Scientists do not yet know the exact cause of breast cancer. But researchers trying to understand how breast cancer develops have studied a variety of risk factors.

Some studies have looked at the relationship of weight and the risk of developing breast cancer. Many of these studies have shown that there is a higher rate of breast cancer among heavier women. In particular, the number of women who develop breast cancer after menopause appears to be greater in women who are overweight. The increased rate of breast cancer in heavier women is probably not due to the size of their breasts, but factors which relate to their weight. There is also some evidence that obesity and diets high in fat may increase a woman's risk of developing breast cancer.

To date, no one factor or combination of factors has been found that can be used to predict the risk of breast cancer in an individual. So all women, regardless of the size of their breasts or their weight, should practice breast self-exam (BSE) and see their doctors regularly for a breast exam. Regular check-ups are particularly important for women with large breasts, because a very small lump may be harder to detect in these women. Women should also ask their doctors about having regular breast x-rays (mammograms). Regular breast x-rays are very important for older women and other women at higher risk for breast cancer, since it can detect cancer even before a lump can be felt.

For more information about breast self-exam and mammography, contact the Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER or write Cancer Information Service at McDowell Cancer Network, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536. The Cancer Information Service is a program of the Kentucky Community Cancer Program.

No family practitioners reported premiums as high as $20,000 per year. However, 51% of obstetricians/gynecologists, reported paying $20,000 or more annually.

"Obstetrics is increasingly being limited to obstetrical gynecologists, who are paying much higher amounts for the same liability coverage as family practitioners," Bonham concluded.

Bonham said the shortage may become especially acute in the midwestern part of the state, where only 18% of physicians, who had once practiced obstetrics, plan to continue.

"Midwest Kentucky has relied heavily on family practitioners in the past, but with family practitioners leaving obstetrics, only one in five physicians in that region will practice obstetrics in a few years," he observed.

The sharpest decline in obstetrics practice has occurred in the northeastern part of the state, where 42% of those surveyed said they had eliminated their practices. Close behind was the midwest section of Kentucky, where 39% reported they had left obstetrics.

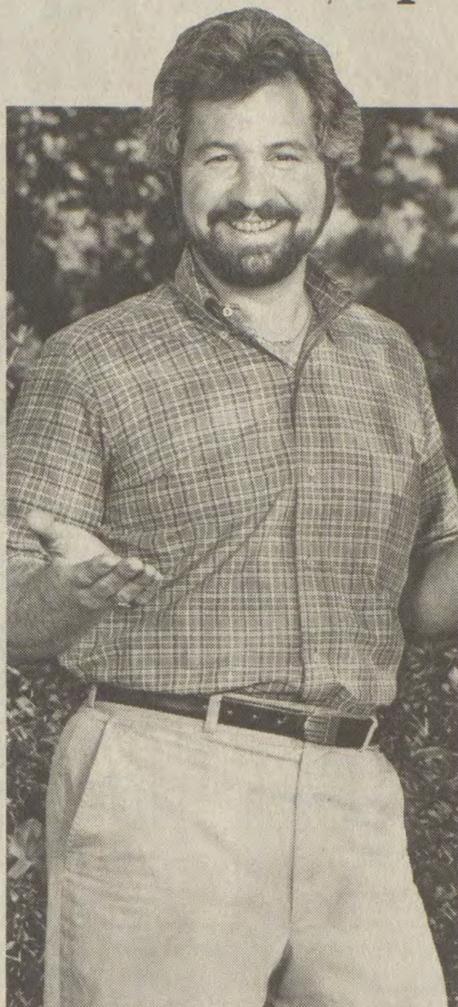

(The northeast region includes the 42 Kentucky counties that make up the Bluegrass, Gateway, Fivco and Buffalo Trace area development districts. The midwest region includes the 39 counties that are in the Barren River, Lake Cumberland and Lincoln Trail area development districts.)

The survey showed that 30% of Kentucky physicians who practiced obstetrics during the past eight years have been sued, Bonham said, but only 6% had actually gone to trial.

"Among all Kentucky physicians who were sued, about one-fourth of the lawsuits resulted in a settlement to the patient, one-third resulted in acquittal of the physicians or dismissal of the case, a few were dropped by the plaintiff, and the remainder were unresolved," Bonham wrote.

During 1986, the Kentucky Medical Association had 648 members who listed family practice as their specialty and 295 who specialized in obstetrics/gynecology.

TAKING CARE OF YOURSELF

A recent study by the over-the-counter drug industry shows that Americans generally know when it is appropriate to see a doctor and when we can safely treat ourselves. The study, sponsored by The Proprietary Association and based on a representative sample of the U.S. population, found that being overweight is the health problem that American adults complain about the most. That is followed by less persistent ailments such as upset stomach and indigestion, muscle aches and pains, minor eye problems, headache, fatigue, cuts and scratches, and the common cold. Nonprescription drugs are used most often for transient problems, while Americans seek out a doctor or dentist for such problems as skin infections, ulcers, asthma, and tooth pain.

Your pharmacist can help you select the best over-the-counter products to meet your particular needs. There are so many products available that making the best choice can be difficult without professional guidance. At COOLEY APOTHECARY we're here to answer your questions. You'll find us located at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106 and open Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4. MasterCard and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments.

HANDY HINT: According to the above-mentioned study, Americans tend to seek a doctor's advice when treating "flu."

At Pikeville College...

Portrait Given, Nurses Graduate

A portrait of Elizabeth Akers Elliott was unveiled in May at the third annual pinning ceremony of the Pikeville College nursing program bearing her name. Graduates, students, families, and friends filled Christman Auditorium where W.E. "Bill" Elliott Jr., on behalf of the Elliott family, presented the portrait to the College. Following the unveiling, Mr. W. Ernest Elliott talked about the reasons he decided to contribute to the establishment of a nursing program named in honor of his late wife. "All she ever wanted to do was be a nurse. But in those days, you couldn't be married and be a nurse, so she had to give up her dream. This program, named in her honor, would have made her very happy; as it has, me, here today."

The program graduated 19 student nurses, including the 50th student graduate of the three-year old associate degree program. Program Director Celia Fish said, "We're proud of this class and of this program. It is fulfilling a need in our region. We also feel that our graduates are some of the finest nurses anywhere."

Two awards were given during the Saturday afternoon event. Judith Carr, of Virgie, was given the Nursing Department Award for having the highest grade point average in her graduating class. Margaret Lowe, of Pikeville, was chosen Outstanding Nursing Student, an award voted on by the members of her nursing class and known as the award for "the person the students would most like to have caring for them."

A special choral prelude was performed by the Pikeville College Chorale, under the direction of Jerry Waddell. The group, resplendent in new choral robes donated by the Pikeville College Alumni Association, performed a 30-minute prelude including classical and spiritual selections.

A nursing pinning ceremony is held each year. It is the occasion where graduating nursing students receive their unique Pikeville College nursing program pin, designed by the faculty and students of the first graduating class. This pin, placed on the nursing uniform collar, is traditionally worn throughout the nursing career.

The nineteen students who receive pins are Edith M. Alvin, Dorton, graduating with honors; Judith Ann Carr, Virgie, also graduating with honors; Nadine M. Collins, Pikeville; Jamie Lee Keene, Pikeville; Nancy S. Leedy, Pikeville; Billie Annjenett Little, Melvin; Margaret Janney Lowe, Regina; Ann Maggard, Jenkins; Antionette N. Martin, Pikeville; Lisa M. Meade, Stanville; Karen F. Mitchell, Wheelwright; Linda Kay Moore, Pikeville; Zuann Kay Morris, Pikeville; Tammy Lee Newsom, Dorton; Rebecca Ann Owens, Pikeville; Martha Ellen Parker, Allen; Vicki Owens Robinson, Elkhorn City; Betty Jo Smith, Jenkins; and Elizabeth Ann Stiltner, Grundy, Virginia.

Conservation District Urges Respect for Soil, Water, Air

The Floyd County Conservation District is encouraging local churches, organizations and individuals to join the nationwide observance of Soil and Water Stewardship Week, May 24-31. The local district, which promotes soil and water conservation measures throughout the year, is providing literature and speakers to draw attention to the need for help, hope, and healing to bind the economic and resource wounds on America's farms and ranches.

Lloyd Wells, chairman of the Floyd Conservation District, said the survival and welfare of farmers and the land they till must be a matter of deep concern to all people. "While the grain bins are now full and there is no shortage of fiber and building materials, we all need to be reminded of the serious loss that could result from damage to our basic natural resources—soil, water and air, said Wells.

Since 1955 the National Association of Conservation Districts has sponsored Soil and Water Stewardship Week, in cooperation with nearly 3,000 conservation districts, as one way to emphasize the importance of good stewardship of basic soil and water resources.

Materials especially designed to carry the 1987 theme of "Help, Hope, and Healing" have been distributed by the Floyd Conservation District, which has an office at 105 Court Street. The phone number is 886-3128.

The Continental Divide is a ridge of high ground which runs irregularly north and south through the Rocky Mountains.

Strawberries Plentiful But Season Expected To Be Short

The April frosts apparently did little damage to Kentucky's strawberry crop. An excellent harvest is now underway and strawberries are reported to be plentiful in all locations of the state, said University of Kentucky Extension horticulturist Winston Dunwell.

Another way to freeze strawberries is to measure one quart of berries and combine them with 1/2 cup sugar that has been mixed with 1/2 teaspoon ascorbic acid. Sprinkle the sugar mixture over berries and turn berries gently until the sugar dissolves and juice is formed. Then package them in freezer containers and freeze. Burrier said the berries can be crushed or sliced before the sugar mixture is added.

"Hot, dry weather, however, has made this year's picking season much shorter than the usual four to six weeks. We expect that the season may be as short as two weeks. Those who plan to pick berries from the many pick-your-own berry farms need to do so as soon as possible," Dunwell said.

Because this year's bumper crop will have to be picked within such a short season, homeowners may find that they have too many to eat all of them fresh and may want to freeze them for later use. They may also want to buy berries for freezing.

"Strawberries are easy to freeze for later use," said University of Kentucky Extension home economist Sue Burrier. Ripe strawberries are high in vitamins C and A and without sugar are truly a low-calorie delight at only 55 Calories per cup, she said.

Pick only fully ripened, bright red berries. They should be plump and have a natural shine and bright green, fresh looking caps. Eat them fresh within two days, she said.

To freeze berries, Burrier said wash the berries in cold water first. Then drain and remove caps. Sprinkle the whole berries lightly with sugar and spread them out in one layer on a tray, cover with a plastic wrap before freezing them. Once the berries are frozen, put them in a package and return to the freezer.

Chamber Honors Its Retiring Directors

The Kentucky Chamber recently honored 20 business leaders who were ending their three-year terms on the Kentucky Chamber's Board of Directors.

The honors ceremony took place at the Kentucky Chamber's Annual Directors Banquet last week in Owensboro.

"We greatly appreciate their service on our board," said Burl Spurlock, Immediate Past Chairman of the Board for the Kentucky Chamber. Spurlock is President of First Commonwealth Bank in Prestonsburg.

"The Kentucky Chamber has grown tremendously during their term," Spurlock added. "All the time and effort that each director puts into this organization has paid off. I'm proud to have had the chance to work with them in trying to make Kentucky's business climate as good as it can possibly be."

FELINE LEUKEMIA

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA
Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association
While there is still much to be learned about feline leukemia, a growing body of knowledge seems to indicate that the spread of this often fatal disease can be effectively controlled.

Actually a viral disease complex, it is caused by a DNA-containing virus found throughout the world, called feline leukemia virus. The virus is present in the infected cat's salivary secretions, as well as in respiratory secretions, feces and urine. It is spread through grooming habits such as licking, by sneezing and biting and by shared litter boxes and feeding facilities.

Pregnant cats can transfer the virus in the womb or in the colostrum, though infestation occurs primarily through ingestion. Usually, prolonged contact is necessary. Indications are that exposure does not necessarily mean infection, nor does infection necessarily mean infection for life.

Initial symptoms are usually varying degrees of fever, malaise, loss of appetite, lymph node enlargement and a decrease in both white and red blood cells as well as platelets. Defense mechanisms and the immune system are weakened, and death frequently occurs from pneumonia, intestinal or blood infections, pyothorax (accumulated pus in the chest). About 95 per cent of cats will survive the initial phase. About five per cent of these will become carriers and/or die in the second phase.

When animals relapse, they are afflicted with bone marrow suppression, cancers, eye lesions, neurological disorders and reproductive failures. In addition, infected cats may be plagued with a host of other infections—including bladder and respiratory infections, slow healing abscesses, arthritis, others—brought about by lowered immunity.

There is no evidence that the disease can be transmitted to or affect humans, but infected cats should be isolated from other cats to limit spread of the disease.

Within the past few months, a vaccine effective against feline leukemia has been introduced and should be available from any licensed veterinarian in Kentucky. Information about this vaccine will not be found in any of the standard reference works because it is too new. Therefore, questions about the proper age for vaccination, side-effects and other information an informed owner might want to know must be asked of your veterinarian.

Meanwhile, if your favorite pet is already infected all is not hopeless. Supportive treatments are often effective for long periods of time, and limiting the amount of stress on the animal and providing a wholesome diet and plenty of attention frequently keep the animal (and the owner) sufficiently ahead of serious infections.

Thank You For Keeping A Friend In The Clerk's Office

I would like to express my appreciation to the voters of Floyd County for allowing me to serve you for another term. I thank each one of you for the support and kind words expressed to me as I visited with you over the past few weeks. It is with deep gratitude that I acknowledge the endorsement of those attorneys of the Floyd Co. Bar Association and their kind comments regarding the operation of this office. I am also grateful for the favorable comments I received in regard to my campaign advertisements in which I determined to maintain the same high standards to which I have always adhered. My past record of honesty, efficiency and good friendly service to the people of Floyd County speaks for me. I have never felt any good purpose could ever be served by abusing the character of another human being. As your Circuit Court Clerk, I can assure you that my office staff and myself will provide the same dependable and efficient service you have enjoyed in the past. Remember, you still have a Friend in the Clerk's office.

Foreign Language Study Is On Rise Among Kentucky Students

The number of Kentucky students studying foreign languages has increased steadily, from 35,884 in the 1983-84 school year to 55,996 this year, the Kentucky Department of Education reports.

The most widely taught foreign languages in Kentucky are Spanish, French, Latin and German. Russian and Japanese have been added to some school's curriculum. Next year, Atherton High School in Jefferson county will offer Chinese.

Some school systems offer Spanish, French, and German to elementary students, whom research shows are at a prime age for learning a second language.

"The increased emphasis on foreign languages is due partly to a growing awareness of our need to compete in a global economy and to improve world relations," Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said. "Americans will not be able to get jobs in foreign trade without learning the language."

More students are studying foreign languages to prepare for college, also. The Commonwealth Diploma, which is awarded to Kentucky high school graduates who take advanced courses, requires advanced foreign language study. The International Baccalaureate Programs in Covington and Ashland also require more, and more intensive, foreign language courses, beginning in elementary school.

"It's obvious from the thousands of Kentucky students who participated in foreign language festivals this year that interest in other countries and cultures is growing markedly," McDonald said.

Teacher certification requirements now include an option for those planning to teach in elementary schools to include foreign languages in their preparation, and this will likely increase foreign language offerings in the state's colleges and universities.

The arrival of Japanese businesses to Kentucky also heightens the interest in, and need for, an understanding and appreciation of the Japanese language and culture. Several Kentucky schools and colleges are believed to be taking steps to meet this need.

On the other hand, the University of Kentucky began offering language and cultural enrichment classes last September on Saturday mornings for 50

The Daughters of the American Revolution asks each one of us "What does the Constitution mean to you?" The Constitution protects every citizen's personal liberty.

Along with Japanese students, more than 1,000 other foreign-born students attend Kentucky's schools and are studying English as a foreign language.

Bell Inspires Method Of Analyzing Fabrics

At the Smithsonian Museum of American History in Washington, D.C., the flag that inspired the national anthem is on display only three minutes in every hour, when a curtain rises and falls to the melody of the "Star Spangled Banner."

The flag used to hang in plain sight all day, but the deterioration of the fabric led museum experts to protect it from light except for brief appearances.

Museum directors everywhere are concerned about similar deterioration in fabrics far older than the Fort McHenry flag. Until now, they had to depend on visual inspection to determine condition. The only way they could analyze fabrics called for vaporizing, burning or chemically altering the cloth. In short, you had to destroy part of the fabric you wanted to preserve.

Help has come from an unlikely source—the U.S. Department of Agriculture. J. Michael Gould, a chemist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Peoria, Illinois, worked out a new way to analyze cellulose in straw and other crop residues.

Gould bombards crop fibers with rapid pulses of intense infrared light that cause the fibers to emit a steady, almost musical, tone that tells a lot about the structure of the fibers. ("No," said Gould wearily, "they don't play 'Turkey in the Straw.'")

A professor of textile science at Virginia Polytechnic Institute read about Gould's method and wondered if it would help her find out how much air and sunlight degraded textiles.

"The technique sounded most promising for cotton," she said, "which is 90 percent cellulose."

She asked Gould to analyze cotton fragments from an Indian breech cloth and other items found at archeological sites in Arizona. Sure enough, the two scientists were able to identify changes in the Indian artifacts resulting from centuries of oxidation.

Once museum curators know for sure that a particular fabric is deteriorating, she pointed out, they can take steps to slow down the damage by lowering the oxygen level in the display case or reducing exposure to sunlight, as is done at the Smithsonian.

It's a fresh approach to an old idea, says Gould, who credits Alexander Graham Bell with describing the technique in a long-forgotten paper 107 years ago. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture)

Conservation Contest Winners

Jon Barry Bowling, left, a student at Garrett Elementary School, submitted the best of 925 entries from Floyd county in this year's essay contest sponsored by the Floyd County Conservation District and the Louisville Courier-Journal. Runner-up was Gregory Alan Tackett, a student at John M. Stumbo Elementary School.

In the poster contest conducted simultaneously, Nelson Ryan Newman, right, a sixth-grader at Stumbo Elementary, was named first-place winner out of a total of 1,735 entries. Runner-up was Patricia Lynn Baldrige, student at Maytown Grade School.

This year's subject for both essays and posters was "Fish and Wildlife, Our Responsibilities Today and Tomorrow." The top-ranked entries by Bowling and Newman will be sent to the Courier-Journal for judging in a statewide competition.

The local winners were honored here on May 9 at the annual awards banquet of the conservation district. Assistance with the contest also was provided by the U.S. Soil Service and the Floyd county superintendent's office.

Disabled Could Be Referred To Rehabilitation Services

By JIM KELLY
Social Security District Director
When a person applies for Social Security disability benefits, information about his or her impairment may be sent to the State's vocational rehabilitation agency because a claim for Social Security is also a claim for rehabilitation services, Jim Kelly, Social Security District Director for the Big Sandy Area, said recently.

The applicant for Social Security disability benefits then may be contacted about services that may help the person regain the ability to work. If a person receiving Social Security Disability or Supplemental Security Income fails to cooperate with the Vocational Rehabilitation Counselors or refuses services his or her check will be stopped. If rehabilitation services are accepted, the rehabilitation agency will provide a program designed to enable the individual to return to work.

In addition, Kelly said, benefits may be continued during the time rehabilitation services are being received even though the person has recovered medically before the rehabilitation program is completed.

Participating in a Vocational Rehabilitation Program will not effect a DISABLED person's Social Security benefits.

More information about Social Security disability benefits and possible rehabilitation services is available at the Big Sandy Area Social Security office located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

Kimberly Diane Rose, daughter of Marsha and Johnny Lewis Rose, formerly of West Prestonsburg, will graduate this month from Ypsilanti (Michigan) High School and plans to attend Washtenaw Community College on a two-year scholarship.

She is a member of the National Honor Society and was elected Outstanding Student at her vocational school. She participated in state V.I.C.A. competition as a medical student.

She is the granddaughter of Evaline and Robert Lee Rose, of Ypsilanti, formerly of West Prestonsburg. Her great-grandmother was the late Millie Wallen.

To Open Boys' State

Maj. Gen. Billy C. Wellman, Kentucky adjutant general, will be the opening speaker for the 47th session of Kentucky Boys' State to be held at Morehead State University June 7-12.

More than 300 youth from across the state will participate in mock government sessions designed to provide practical lessons in city and state government. The program is sponsored each year by the Kentucky American Legion.

Kentucky Girls' State, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, will be held at MSU June 8-13. Boys' and Girls' State delegates will have the opportunity to observe a special meeting of Morehead's city council, set for 7:30 p.m. Monday, June 8, in Button Auditorium.

Gen. Wellman, will address Boys' State delegates on Sunday, June 7, at 7:30 p.m. in Breckinridge Auditorium. The Ashland native and MSU alumnus began his full-time career with the Kentucky National Guard in 1957 as a personnel officer and in 1960 became staff assistant for the 201st Engineer Battalion which he later commanded.

He held various other posts with the State Headquarters before being named adjutant general by former Gov. Julian M. Carroll in 1977. Reappointed to the post by former Gov. John Y. Brown in 1977, he also served Gov. Brown as Justice Cabinet secretary and Kentucky State Police commissioner. Gov. Martha Layne Collins reappointed him adjutant general in December 1983.

Throughout the week, Boys' State delegates will be gaining practical lessons in government at the state and city level. They will develop a two-party political system and serve as legislators, introducing, debating and acting on bills as in the Kentucky General Assembly. They also will elect officials for mythical cities.

Why There Was A Convention —The Incompetent Congress

By WILLIAM R. HAWKINS

The constitutional convention which met 200 years ago this month to establish a new form of government did so because the existing system had failed. The government under the Articles of Confederation was weak and disorganized. It had only one branch, the Congress, which over the period 1781-1787 had shown its incompetence. Thus the delegates gathered in Philadelphia were convinced that the new government must not be centered on Congress as was the old.

John Jay, who as Secretary for Foreign Affairs was particularly frustrated by the short-comings of the Confederation, wrote to George Washington in January, 1787: "Would giving any further degree of authority to Congress do the business? I think not." Congress contained "so many wills, and those wills moved by such a variety of contradictory motives and inducements" that their actions were always "feebly done." Jay was convinced of the need for increased Federal authority, but it must be placed in new branches independent of the Congress. A separation of powers. The convention must "divide the sovereignty into its proper departments. Let Congress legislate—let others execute—let others judge."

The principle of separation of powers is usually discussed in terms of checks and balances, a framework that stresses an overlapping of authority between branches and the ability of each to interfere with the actions of the others. However, in 1787 the framers were more interested in the freedom and power of the new executive and judiciary branches they felt were needed to provide effective government.

James Madison's well-known statement in Federalist Paper number 51 (a paper devoted to the separation of powers) reflects these priorities: "In framing a government which is to be administered by men over men, the great difficulty lies in this: you must first enable the government to control the governed and in the next place, oblige it control itself." The concept of checks and balances refers to the second objective; the independence of the President and the courts to the first.

Madison goes on to speak of the need to "guard against dangerous encroachments" by the Congress into the affairs of the other branches, particularly the Presidency. Congress is to be divided into two separate houses with different modes of election and be "as little connected" as possible in order to weaken it whereas the Executive "should be fortified."

The idea of a separation of powers was not new. Aristotle, Montesquieu, and Blackstone had all written about it, and their works were quite familiar to the framers; but the contribution of John Adams should not be overlooked. Adams was not at the Philadelphia convention, as he was ambassador to England, but he had written on the subject for twenty years. His 1776 tract Thoughts on Government argued that an all-powerful legislature would grow ambitious and avaricious. It was structurally unsuited to perform executive or judicial duties, thus these duties must be taken from it. The executive should have an absolute veto over the legislature and have exclusive control of appointments in the administration. How the executive was elected was secondary to the assurance that the executive could maintain his independence from the legislature.

Looking back at events in 1808, even with the Presidency in the hands of his political opponents, Adams maintained his views and urged the public to support their Presidents "in their independence, and turn a deaf ear to all false charges against them...But if you suffer them to be overawed and shackled in the exercise of their constitutional power...you will soon repent of it in bitter anguish."

Adams influenced several state constitutions and in 1779 wrote the Massachusetts constitution. He drew sharp lines between the legislative, executive and judicial branches, strengthening the last two at the expense of the first. Article XXX of the Declaration of Rights states Adam's views: "In the government of the Commonwealth, the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers." Corresponding restrictions were imposed on the other branches.

Today, the principle of the separation of powers is under attack. The encroachments and ambitions of Congress feared by Jay, Madison, Adams, and most of the other framers are in clear view. Congress in its budgetary micromanagement of programs, its dictation of military strategy and its attempts to write and interpret treaties (particularly in arms control negotiations), is seeking executive power, while in its many investigations, inquisitorial hearings, contempt citations, and special prosecutors it is seeking both judicial and executive powers. At every turn, Congress seeks to intimidate officials in other branches into accepting rather than confronting its bid to control all aspects of government policy.

But history shows that a Congress-centered system cannot provide effective government. It can disrupt or paralyze, but it cannot lead. This was well known in 1787 and motivated a complete change in the structure of government. At what cost will this lesson be relearned today?

When Trees Get the Shakes

By LINDA COOKE

Trees as well as people can get the shakes, and it doesn't do either of them any good.

Back in the 1960's, engineers perfected a contraption that harvests cherries mechanically by shaking the tree until the fruit falls off. The cherries fall into canvas catchers, roll onto conveyors, and are transported into bins.

The invention caught on quickly in Michigan, where both sweet and sour cherries are big business. Today, 98 percent of the state's cherry crop is harvested with shakers.

The trouble is that too much shaking is cutting the productive life of Michigan's orchards from 30 years to less than 20.

"You might say that the operation was a success, but the patient died," says Galen K. Brown, a U.S. Department of Agriculture engineer.

Brown, who works in East Lansing, Michigan, for the Agricultural Research Service, reports that both young and old trees are being shaken too long and too violently.

"Trunk shakers designed for full-grown trees are being used on young trees that are easy to damage," Brown says. Tests have shown that more than two-thirds of young trees suffer trunk damage after the first three years of mechanical harvesting.

Brown also finds that growers frequently shake trees of all ages too many times. The ARS engineer thinks the repeated shaking is hard on trees and recommends instead one continuous 10-second shake, or until cherries fall off.

Brown and his colleagues also are protecting the bark with better padding over the clamps that grab the tree.

"Some commercial clamp pads applied more than five times the pressure that bark can stand without damage," he reports.

When the bark is cracked or broken, diseases and insects can find their way into the tree. One prolific pest, the American plum borer, can dig into a young tree and reproduce. Its offspring can chew their way clear around the tree.

"Our goal," says Brown, "is to harvest cherry trees mechanically with no injury at all." (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture)

National Award Winner

Patrick F. McKinney, a student at Betsy Layne High School, has been named a United States National Award Winner in home economics. His biography will appear in the official yearbook of the U.S. Achievement Academy. He was nominated for the honor by home economics teacher Patricia A. Huffman. He is the son of Frank and Ivalée McKinney, of Craynor, and the grandson of Lacy Tackett Webb and Mary A. McKinney, both of Craynor.

Dental Care And The Elderly

The fastest growing segment of the American population is the elderly—people over the age of 65. At the turn of century, just four percent of the population held "senior citizen" status. By 1980, about 10 percent of the population was in this age group. It's predicted that by the year 2030, 22 percent—55 million Americans—will be senior citizens.

This sizeable, quickly-growing segment of society has special dental health care problems and needs, many of them the result of common misconceptions. According to the Kentucky Dental Society, many elderly Americans neglect their dental health because they assume that dental problems are an inevitable part of the aging process. But this isn't the case. Preventive dental care, focusing on daily brushing and flossing, regular dental visits and a well-balanced diet, can maintain dental health well into the later years.

One of the most disturbing statistics of all with regard to the elderly is this—only about 35 percent of people over the age of 65 see a dentist in any given year.

Many people believe, for example, that tooth loss is a normal part of getting older. While it is true that tooth loss does occur among the elderly, much of it can be prevented. Most tooth loss in adults is due to gum disease, which is caused by plaque, a bacterial film constantly forming in the mouth.

Careful attention to plaque removal through daily brushing and flossing and semi-annual dental checkups and cleanings can help older adults ward off this major dental health problem.

Fortunately, the percentage of older Americans who have lost their natural teeth is decreasing gradually, thanks to today's emphasis on preventive dentistry. Still, over half of all Americans over the age of 65 have lost all of their teeth. And in 1975, an estimated 21 percent of the total United States population wore either full or partial dentures. (That was down from the 36 percent reported in 1960, however.)

Many elderly people who have already lost their teeth and wear dentures also neglect their dental health, remaining unaware that the need for regular dental checkups continues even with dentures. The mouth is constantly changing, and only a dentist can make the adjustments necessary to ensure proper denture fit.

Dental health is a lifelong process, and teeth are meant to last a lifetime. With consistent dental care, many elderly Americans can keep their smiles glowing for years to come.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: Lately it seems like a lot of people I know have gotten cancer or have known someone who has cancer. I know that scientists and doctors insist that cancer is not contagious, but I still wonder if it is. What is a contagious disease? Didn't researchers learn that viruses cause cancer? Doesn't that mean that is contagious? Have any vaccines been developed against these viruses?

ANSWER: A contagious disease is one which is passed from a person who has the disease to others with whom he or she comes into contact. Some contagious diseases are passed in casual contact, such as chicken pox (caused by a virus) and strep throat (caused by a bacteria). Other contagious diseases are passed only through intimate contact, such as genital herpes (a virus) and gonorrhea (a bacteria).

Cancer is not contagious. It cannot be spread from person to person by sneezing, coughing, kissing or in any other way. If cancer were contagious we would expect to see cancer epidemics, much the way we have epidemics of the flu or chicken pox. Also, doctors, nurses and others caring for cancer patients would have increased rates of cancer, and this is not the case.

The association of certain viruses to the development of cancer has caused some renewed concern that cancer may be spread from person to person.

Some studies have shown that certain viruses can increase the risk of cancer in a wide spectrum of animal species. This does not mean that cancer is contagious. Stated simply, the answer is that viral infections that increase the risk of some cancers may be contagious, but that cancer itself is not.

Although some viruses are associated with human cancer, other co-factors acting with the virus are probably needed for cancer to develop. The needed "co-factor" may be another virus, a hormone, or an environmental factor. Co-factors are thought to be needed because only a small percent of persons who have these viruses ever develop cancer.

It is possible that vaccines will be developed against viruses linked to human cancers. There is now a vaccine against hepatitis B virus that may reduce the risk of liver cancer. Another approach to preventing cancers related to viruses may be by reducing exposure to possible co-factors as they are identified.

For information on any cancer-related subject call 1-800-4-CANCER or write Cancer Information Service at McDowell Cancer Network, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536. The Cancer Information Service is a program of the Kentucky Community Cancer Program.

THANK YOU!

I would like to thank each of you who voted for me in the May 26 Primary Election

My objective in the Primary was to make the voters of Prestonsburg aware of my qualifications and my sincere interest in the welfare of our city.

It is my hope for the Fall campaign to visit with each voter and to discuss those issues which face our city. I feel that a council member should be willing to discuss issues openly and be prepared to seek responsible solutions in an informed manner. My focus for the Fall will be to demonstrate my capability in facing the issues.

Thanks Again

Preventive Health Exhibit Is Winner

The Christian Appalachian Project's preventive health program in Floyd county was recently recognized for excellence in public health education by the Big Sandy Area Development District.

The program received a trophy for having the most outstanding health service provider exhibit at the second annual Well/Fest on May 16 in Prestonsburg in the municipal building's parking lot.

The Christian Appalachian Project participated with about 32 other exhibitors in the health fair. Similar health fairs are held all over the state each year.

A health trivia game called "Healthy Choices" was the preventive health program's exhibit. Participants walked on a game board answering questions on personal health, nutrition, exercise, home environment, and mental health. They moved according to the roll of a big dice. If a participant answered questions in all the categories correctly, then he or she received a T-shirt. "We gave out 100 shirts," Jean Marie Donohue said, "And we could have given more."

Volunteers operating the exhibit also dispensed raisins, apples, oranges, bananas, orange juice, and water which were donated by local grocery stores.

New Computer System To Improve Food Stamp Process in Kentucky

Cabinet for Human Resources officials recently announced the debut of one of the most modern statewide food stamp delivery systems in the United States, able to handle the entire eligibility process from application to issuance of benefits with improved speed and efficiency.

Human Resources Secretary Al Austin said the cabinet's Department for Social Insurance, which administers the federal food stamp program in Kentucky, has been operating a pilot of the statewide computer network since March 2.

"The Kentucky Automated Management and Eligibility System (KAMES) began its dress rehearsal by processing applicant information between the department's central offices here in Frankfort and the Mercer county office in Harrodsburg," Austin said. "To date, offices in Lawrenceburg and Springfield also have been successfully brought online."

"In June, the Department for Social Insurance will begin bringing a larger number of local offices onto KAMES monthly until the system is in use statewide by the end of the year."

The food stamp program is the largest public assistance program in the state, benefiting one out of every seven Kentuckians.

Austin said, "This is only a first step after nearly two years of careful research and planning. Kentucky has become a national leader in terms of modernizing and enhancing its ability to provide benefits to eligible citizens."

Austin said the KAMES food stamp project will eventually be expanded to include Kentucky's two other major public assistance programs: Medical Assistance (Medicaid) and Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

Social Insurance Commissioner Mike Robinson said new applicants for food stamps in the pilot counties are benefiting from the KAMES project.

"Under the present system in use here as well as in most other states, it normally takes 30 days to process, verify and issue benefits to a new applicant," he said. "The first week of the pilot in Harrodsburg, new clients were receiving their coupons within 48 hours of visiting the local office."

Robinson said the KAMES network would not only improve delivery of services to clients, but also will reduce the mountains of paperwork and further reduce overissuance of benefits due to either human error or criminal fraud.

KAMES computers will store information when the client first applies, update that data as either eligibility guidelines or client income changes and make eligibility and benefit determinations based upon the federally-set standards and by cross-checking other sources of information.

KAMES was developed by EDS Federal Corporation of Dallas, Texas. The Cabinet for Human Resources and the U.S. Department of Agriculture each will pay half of the approximately $20 million cost, covering development of the system, purchase of the computer software and local office equipment and staff training in all 120 counties.

The state and federal governments also will split the estimated $5.3 million dollar first-year operational cost of KAMES. Most of that amount will be paid to the state Department of Information Systems to maintain the KAMES program hardware as part of the state computer system.

Robinson said savings directly attributable to KAMES—reduced overissuance of food stamps, printing, postage and equipment costs and more efficient use of personnel—are being estimated at approximately $5.7 million by the end of the first full year the system is in operation.

"This isn't a money-making venture, but the savings should at least equal the annual cost of operating the system," he said.

"KAMES isn't just newer, bigger and better. It's the opening of a process of providing more effective service more efficiently to the Kentuckians who need the most from their government with the least red tape or human error."

Violence, Victims Focus Of Death Penalty Seminar

Families of murder victims and public defenders—groups that sometimes find themselves in adversarial roles—came together recently to exchange views and share perspectives on capital punishment.

One of the main themes was agreement on the need for alternative sentences that would keep dangerous killers off the streets without executing them.

"I want to feel safe again," said Sharon Tewksbury of Cincinnati, whose husband was stabbed to death in a 1983 convenience store robbery. "My fear is that my husband's killer will be free to kill again, and I believe he will kill again. That is the only reason I cling to the death penalty."

Tewksbury, a board member of an organization called Parents of Murdered Children, was one of seven victims' advocates, with differing views on the death penalty, who addressed the audience of more than 150 publicly paid attorneys who represent indigent people accused of crimes.

The attorneys' from 12 states, were in Louisville for a seminar sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Public Advocacy on how to defend accused murderers who may be or are sentenced to death.

"Homicide victims' families are often ignored, misunderstood and mistreated by prosecutors and defense lawyers alike," said Kevin McNally, Death Penalty Coordinator for the Department of Public Advocacy. "Our hope is that this discussion will help public defenders who represent capital clients better understand the families of victims."

"While it's easier for a lawyer to do his or her job by shutting out this pain and anguish, such an approach adds to the suffering of the survivors."

The lawyers "had more compassion for us than I ever expected of a defense attorney," said Martha Tonnie, whose son was killed in 1977, and who is one of the co-leaders of the Greater Cincinnati Chapter of Parents of Murdered Children.

Joe Byrne, whose wife was raped and killed in 1985, told the group, "The only way I would support giving up the death penalty would be if the killer got life in prison, meaning no parole, he would die in prison."

The death penalty, said South Carolina attorney David Bruck, "is the one sentence where, if you make a mistake, you can't fix it."

Bruck, who represents 13 death row inmates, spoke on the subject of how violence, even when sanctioned by government, victimizes society as a whole.

"We won't leave here tonight with the answer to the problem of violence in our society," said Atlanta attorney Millard Farmer, senior counsel with Team Defense Project, Inc. "But we will have gone a long way toward understanding the problem better by seeing each others' points of view."

One survivor, Susan, who requested to be otherwise anonymous, commented, "by sharing my grief with (the) audience and by their willingness for a few brief moments to join me in my sorrow, I was able to heal a little. Afterwards I felt cleansed and good inside. I can't tell you how wonderful that is or how much it meant to me."

"We have to do everything we can to make sure people who commit a violent crime never do so again," said Bruck. "But shaving people's heads and executing them is no part of the answer. Indeed, it's part of the problem."

Attached is further information about survivors and the death penalty. The original St. Nicholas was a 4th century Turkish bishop. According to legend he dropped a bag of gold coins down a chimney into a stocking a poor girl had hung up by the fireplace to dry.

Bud Newsome Named Athlete Of The Year

Betsy Layne High School senior Bud Newsome, by a poll of all basketball, baseball, and football coaches, was recently named as Floyd county's high school athlete of the year.

Newsome, in his final year as a Bobcat, excelled in all three major sports while also participating in the regional golf tournament played last Tuesday.

This, along with his performances on the field and court, was the reason most often given by coaches who selected Newsome for this year's honor.

The 5'11" 165 pound Bud Newsome served Betsy Layne football as a starting quarterback, throwing for almost one thousand yards, and starting as a defensive back.

"He has some natural ability, but most of his ability comes from his quick mind," Bobcat football coach Jack Hall said. "Bud is intelligent, and he is easy to coach."

While leading Betsy Layne to their first ever winning season, Newsome not only directed the offense, he also served as a major blocker for Bobcat backs who ran from the famous Jack Hall single T offensive set.

"Bud was one of our main blockers," Hall said. "That isn't an easy thing to ask of a person his size, but Bud is a tough kid. His blocking is what impressed me the most."

As Betsy Layne's football season came to an end, Bud Newsome said goodbye to his Bobcat gridiron career and hung up his football cleats for the final time.

From the grass of Mile High Field, to the floor of the D. W. Howard fieldhouse, Newsome continued his athletic success for Bobcat sports fans.

During the 1985-86 season Newsome's basketball action was limited to reserve duty, but with the arrival of new coach, Craynor Slone, Bud Newsome also arrived on the Betsy Layne basketball scene.

"He was a person that was a leader for us on the floor, and a leader for us off the floor," Slone said. "He broke the press for us and gave us a good point guard."

In the 1986-87 season, Newsome accounted for 23 points per game, scoring 11 himself while averaging six assists a contest.

"Scoring wasn't where Bud helped us the most," Slone said. "He handled the ball most of the time, and he played real good defense. Without Bud it would have been real hard for us to win."

Newsome didn't receive as much attention for his basketball skills as he did from his football ability. Possessing a strong arm, quick feet, and an unwillingness to go down, Newsome impressed several football people.

Union College head football coach

John Ross expressed interest in the Bobcat quarterback, and Newsome was also named to the Kentucky all-star squad, a team scheduled to play a similar squad from West Virginia.

But Newsome declined all football offers, looking forward to an athletic future filled with only baseball. "He was the difference in us having a successful season, rather than us having just a mediocre season, but that goes back all through his high school career," Betsy Layne baseball coach Junior Newsome commented.

Newsome finished his final baseball year at Betsy Layne as the team's top hitter and pitcher. In 92 plate appearances he collected a total of 44 hits for an impressive .478 batting average. Newsome's 44 hits led the Bobcats, as did his 30 runs scored, and his 21 stolen bases. In 92 plate appearances Bud Newsome struck out a grand total of three times.

The University of Kentucky, Morehead State University, and just about every small college in the area has shown interest in his baseball ability, partly for his bat, and partly for his success on the mound.

Newsome's 4-4 record won't impress many people, but his record doesn't tell the whole story either. In 50 and one third innings the Bobcat lefty struck out 68 hitters, walked only 26, while surrendering 17 earned runs, seven in his final game. Newsome gave up 46 hits in those 50 plus innings.

Newsome, with his accomplishments on the baseball diamond, has been named as a member of this year's East squad, which will play a three game series soon against Kentucky's best players from the Western part of the Bluegrass state.

"Bud is the type of athlete that does everything well," Junior Newsome praised. "He's just a well rounded athlete, but I think his future is in baseball."

"He is an excellent worker, and an easy player to coach," Newsome continued. "You can tell him how to do something once, and he does it. I guess that just goes back to his intelligence."

In being named Floyd county's high school athlete of the year, Bud Newsome received four of the possible eight votes, coaches couldn't vote for their own out distancing Allen Central's Roger Horne, and Johnny Isaac of Wheelwright. Both received two votes each.

Other county athletes getting attention were McDowell's Brian Hall, and Allen Central's Ronnie Ousley. Johnny Ray Harris, Prestonsburg High School, was the only non-senior receiving a vote during the poll of county coaches.

Last year's athlete of the year in Floyd county, John Goble, is now a member of the Kentucky Wildcat football squad.

According to Betsy Layne baseball coach Junior Newsome, Bud Newsome is planning on possibly attending Cumberland College, where he is expected to be a member of their baseball squad.

NOTE: Allen Central basketball coach Johnny Martin was unavailable during the conducting of this poll, but his vote would have had no bearing on the final outcome. The Floyd County Times Sports Section would like to congratulate Bud Newsome on his accomplishments, and send out a special salute to all Floyd county seniors for their efforts on and off the fields and courts of this county.

Hall Named As McDowell's First Governor's Scholar

McDowell High School basketball fans, and their opponents' fans are familiar with the name Lenny Hall because of impressive performances on the hardwood.

The 6'3" Daredevil junior scored over 15 points per game last season, to go with 10 rebounds and close to three blocked shots every basketball outing.

In his last three games of the 1986-87 season, Hall averaged over 20 points a contest, and is rated as the premier prospect in the 58th district for next year.

Some opposing coaches have projected him as possibly being the 15th region's best player in '87-'88, and a sure shot for at least small college basketball.

Hall's basketball ability has impressed just about everyone who has seen him perform, but there is another side to Lenny Hall that might be even more impressive than his roundball results.

On the basketball court is where most people have become acquainted with the McDowell teenager, but in the classroom is where he does his best work.

Through five semesters at McDowell High School, Lenny Hall has maintained a 3.8 grade point average while taking courses such as trigonometry and physics, along with other advanced areas of study.

"Sometimes you can find a young person who is athletically inclined, and sometimes you can find a young person who is academically inclined, but it's rare when they are both a good student and a good athlete," McDowell principal Gary Frazier said. "Lenny has excelled at both, and neither appears to be suffering."

Last year, as a sophomore, Hall was a starter on the Daredevil baseball team. This season he elected not to play, devoting his spring to academics.

"He said he was a little tired," his father, George Hall, said. "He's on the academic team too, and they met when most of the games were going on. He told me that he knew he would never be a professional baseball player, so he decided to be on the academic team."

Recently, Lenny Hall was selected to the Governor's Scholar program, becoming the first McDowell student to receive this honor.

In selecting Governor's Scholar recipients, grade point average and American College Test scores are two areas highly considered. Hall's 3.8 GPA is impressive indeed, but the 26 he scored on the ACT might even overshadow the previous feat.

By being named to the Governor's Scholar program Hall will receive instruction in college level courses for a five-week period starting June 21 at Centre College.

During his nearly 11 years of school Lenny Hall has never made below a grade of B, and this isn't expected to change when final academic evaluation comes out for this spring semester.

"In the past he wasn't that serious about it," George Hall said. "But this year he's more serious about his grades, and he's worked hard. I don't want to sound like I'm bragging, but I'm proud of Lenny."

According to McDowell academic advisor Bob Hall, Lenny Hall has expressed his desire to major in either accounting or pre-law, but is not certain where he will continue his higher education.

Hall's good grades and athletic ability shouldn't surprise anyone. His brother, Brad Hall, a 1986 McDowell graduate, maintained almost a 4.0 grade point average at McDowell, while leading the Daredevil basketball team in scoring and rebounding.

Brad Hall, after making Berea College's junior varsity basketball team, transferred to Morehead State where, this past spring semester, he made the Dean's List.

"I don't know where they got it from," George Hall said about his boys. "They must get it from their mother's side. When I was young it took two armed guards just to get me on the bus to go to school."

Lenny Hall has never had to be forced into what he has accomplished. Some of it came naturally, and some as a result of hard work.

Former Daredevil basketball coach Ricky Hall has often remarked positively on Hall's all-out hustle on the basketball court. Hall's first starting opportunity came when he was a sophomore, thanks to his defensive ability. Since then Lenny Hall has worked himself into a solid offensive player.

"Lenny is just a well-rounded kid," Gary Frazier said. "He is a good student, a good athlete, and an all-round good kid."

"He's a pleasure to be around, and he certainly has a bright future."

Music Reaches State Tennis Tourney

Brent Music, a senior at Prestonsburg High School, has had an outstanding year for the P.H.S. tennis team.

Finishing the regular season play with a record of 16 wins and 1 loss, Music was selected by Coach Lois Howard to represent the team at the Regional Tournament held at Ashland, May 16th and 23rd, in singles.

Music reached last year's finals in regional play, making him the number 2 seed in this year's tournament. Music's first round was against Sheldon-Clark's Charlie Hardin. In a tough match, Music won 6-1, 3-6, 6-3. Next Music faced David Johnson from Boyd county, winning over Johnson 6-1, 6-1. In semi-finals play, Music was matched against Yano Touma, of Russell, Music again winning a tough match, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2. Music then advanced to the finals, and for the second straight year, met Toby Bryan of Boyd county. In one of the best matches of the tournament, Bryan won over Music 6-2, 6-4.

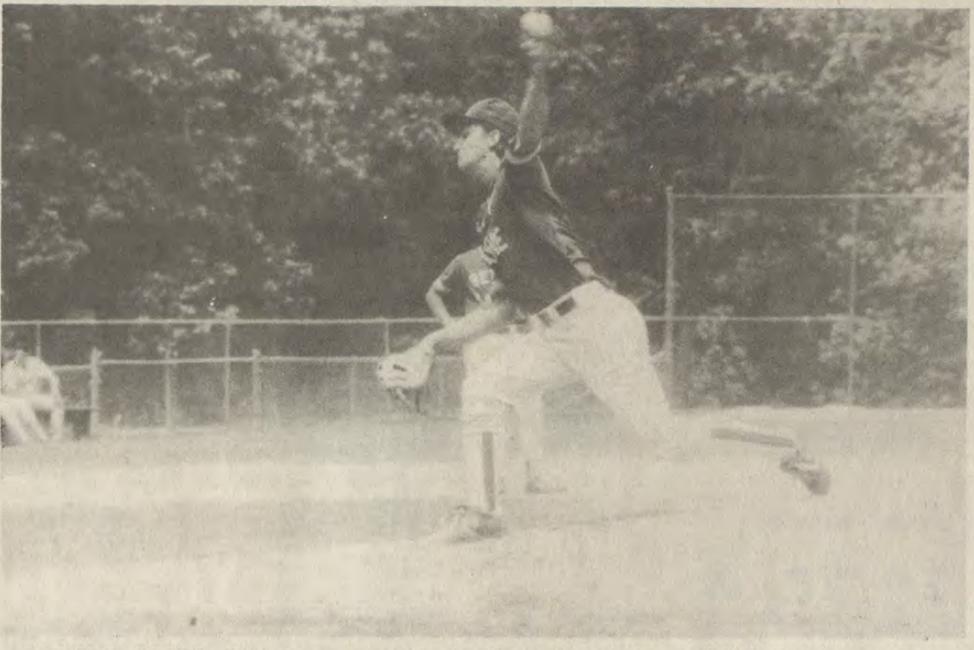

Placing second in regional competition entitles Music to a trip to the State High School Tennis Tournament to be held in Lexington, June 4-6. Music's first round in state competition will be against the very strong Steve Rueff, who is seeded number seven in the tournament. Rueff is representing Trinity High School in Louisville. Music's match will begin at 3:15 p.m. Thursday at the University of Kentucky tennis courts.

Babe Ruth Workout Set

A senior Babe Ruth team workout has been set for this Sunday at 6:00.

All senior Babe Ruth players are to report to Allen Park at the designated time.

A complete workout, in anticipation of Wednesday's opener with Knott County, will be held so players are expected to come prepared.

HIS BEST SPORT: Betsy Layne coach Junior Newsome says baseball is Bud Newsome's best sport. On the mound Newsome finished with a 4-4 record, and at the plate he hit almost .500 for the season.

Betsy Layne, Prestonsburg Provide Bulk Of County's Senior Babe Ruth

What was scheduled as a Senior Babe Ruth tryout turned into a day of batting practice Sunday as the exact number of players planning on being carried this year—19—participated in the tryout.

Due to several other county players taking their baseball desires elsewhere, the turnout was less in numbers than initially expected, but certainly not less in talent.

A total of 19 of the county's best diamond performers will make up this year's squad, representing all Floyd county schools except Wheelwright.

Betsy Layne High School and Prestonsburg High School provided the bulk of Sunday's tryout, and will now serve as a vital part of Floyd County's Senior Babe Ruth squad.

Between the two schools, they provided 11 players, most of whom are expected to see considerable action during the upcoming season.

Bobcat starters of this past year, Dwight Jarrell, Kevin Spurlock, and Brad Hall could be everyday players with Randall Spurlock being a regular in the starting pitching rotation.

Jarrell, Kevin Spurlock, and Hall all hit over .300 on the season. Dwight Jarrell may be the best junior in Floyd county, and Kevin Spurlock proved to be a top notch defensive third baseman.

Randall Spurlock finished as Betsy Layne's winningest pitcher, ending the season with a 6-4 record and is a small college baseball prospect.

Two other Betsy Layne students, who elected to sit out this past season, showed ability during Sunday's workout. Brad Hall, and Thomas Hall should see considerable action, especially with additional work.

Prestonsburg High School added five players to the Senior Babe Ruth roster, including Blackcat starters Johnny Ray Harris and Mark Tipton. Harris, a speed merchant with a quick bat, and small strike zone, provided Russell Shepherd with one of the best leadoff men in the region while Tipton enjoyed success from the mound.

Harris also has a quick bat to go with his quick feet, and plays a strong outfield; he may also see action at second base. Tipton has as much natural ability as any pitcher in this county, but needs two things, work and more work.

Ronnie Baldrige, also a 1987 Blackcat, is another player who falls into Tipton's category. Fundamentals, and playing time are the only things between him and a much improved player.

Shawn Hicks and Chris Ellis are Prestonsburg products, but neither played high school baseball. Many people describe Hicks' play at shortstop, as the second Wizard, while Ellis could see action in the outfield.

McDowell provided four players to Senior Babe Ruth, including starting Daredevils shortstop Brian Hall, third baseman Jeff Crisp, outfielder Scott Tackett, and John Crisp.

Brian Hall was rated as one of the district's top talents before the season began, and proved why during the season. He may be moved from short to left field, his natural position. Jeff Crisp played a solid third base for coach David Hall this past year, and swung a potent bat late in the season.

Scott Tackett may be the most gutsy player in the county, regardless of the sport. His hustle and desire to play have won him playing time in the past and should again. John Crisp, only a sophomore, hasn't seen much game experience but will this summer.

Nathan Shelton, Kelly Nickles, and Darrin Conn represented Allen Central Sunday, and will during the rapidly approaching season. Shelton, the Rebels top pitcher, will be one of the regular starting pitchers, and may see action either at first base or in right field.

Nickles was the Rebels top outfielder, and one of the top center fielders in the region. Along with Jarrell, and whoever else may be out there with them, these two can provide a strong defensive showing.

Darrin Conn started at first for Allen Central, behind the plate, and in right field. Possessing a strong bat and a good arm, Conn may give to this squad what he gave to Donnie Daniels, versatility. Mountain Christian Academy, a school without baseball, gave Tony Kidd, an impressive player, to Floyd county's squad.

Although Kidd doesn't have the advantage of playing high school baseball, his talents are obvious and most are already polished. Kidd has a strong arm, and may see some action on the mound.

This is the group of young men who have decided to represent their home county this summer, while improving their baseball skills. Several players have received good coaching in the past, but some haven't played since last summer, if then.

Floyd County's Senior Babe Ruth squad has some definite talent, but more importantly, it will give 19 young people the opportunity to play baseball this summer. If they come away having learned something they didn't already know then it served its purpose. If the players look back after the season and say they had fun then it served its purpose as well.

The Senior Babe Ruth season will begin Wednesday June 10 with a double header against Knott county. Game time is 5:30 at the Knott County high school field.

The Sporting Times

When an umpire or referee makes a call it stands. Even though he or she may immediately realize their initial judgment was incorrect they can't go back and correct it.

When a coach makes a decision that later comes back to haunt his team he can't go back and change the play. It's in the past, and the past stands as is.

We have all made mistakes, incorrect decisions and actions that we would like to erase. But we can't.

It is said that hind-sight is 20-20. After the mistake we then know what we should have been done, but didn't. If we could right our wrongs the world would have perfect people. But we can't, and we aren't.

Tonight, however, the Floyd County School Board has an opportunity to correct what many Betsy Layne football parents feel was a major mistake—the firing of Jack Hall.

The school board recently voted to dismiss Hall as Bobcat football coach, but in tonight's meeting the board has an opportunity to do what we all wish for, the chance to change a previous action.

Although Hall received notice that he would not be re-hired as a coach at Betsy Layne High School, acting superintendent Ron Hager says legally Jack Hall could again be named as the Bobcats' football coach.

According to one parent, a petition was submitted to the school board a couple of weeks ago which contained most of the parents of Betsy Layne football players signatures. Several players have also expressed their intentions of not playing football next season if Jack Hall isn't back as the coach.

Who will suffer here if Hall isn't kept? Not Jack Hall. He is an excellent coach who could find a job just about anywhere. Not me. Someone will be there, and I can work with them as well as Jack Hall.

Not the school board. They will still be making decisions and drawing paychecks. Who it will hurt is the young people of Betsy Layne High School. They are the ones who benefitted from Jack Hall's football knowledge and coaching ability. These innocent players and fans are the people who will suffer.

SHORT SPORTS

Wheelwright High School brought home the hardware following the recent Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference awards ceremony.

The football Trojans placed six players on the all-conference football squad. Defensively, seniors Johnny Isaac and John Justice were honored along with junior defensive lineman Paul Little.

Wheelwright placed three players on the all-offensive squad as well. Tony Hutton and Doug Little, the Trojans' talented backfield tandem, were honored, as was Stevie Little. Doug Little is only a junior.

In basketball, Wheelwright captured the conference's title, while placing four players on the all-conference squad. Seniors Johnny Isaac and Tony Hutton were named to this team, as were juniors Tommy Jones and Jason Cook.

Trojan first-year basketball coach Monroe Jones was honored as the Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference coach of the year.

Twice before Alysheba has come from behind to earn a victory. In both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness Stakes Alysheba overtook Bet Twice to capture the first two legs of horse racing's triple crown.

This Saturday they will line up again to run the Belmont Stakes, the final race of the triple crown circuit.

If Alysheba wins the Belmont he will also claim the highest horseracing honor, along with an added purse of $3 million for his owners. Starting time is 4:30.

The Belmont is one mile and a half, and at the end awaits immortality for Alysheba and the people behind him if he captures this final leg of the triple crown.

Yogi Berra once said it ain't over till it's over. Yogi may have been talking of a baseball game but the intention behind this famous quote fits each and every situation.

For Dwight Gooden it was almost over, but remember what Yogi said. Gooden was certainly a man downed by his own doing, but it wasn't over for Dwight Gooden. After off-season problems this past winter, Gooden entered a drug re-hab center to straighten out problems with cocaine.

Gooden apparently whipped the drug difficulty but has had problems trying to control his fastball. A power pitcher for the New York Mets, Gooden amazed millions with his ability, earning major honors before his 20th birthday.

Somewhere between then and now, the young righthander ran into personnel problems. After out-dueling the drug problem Gooden was sent to Tidewater in an attempt to regain what had been lost.

With the Tides Gooden struggled with his control, but never quit. This Friday night Dwight Gooden will be back in a major league uniform, making his first start of the year for the Mets. Gooden knew his career wasn't over, because it ain't over till it's over.

Possible Mr. Basketball candidates will be in action this Friday night at Paintsville High School when the Kentucky junior all-stars will do battle with an area team made up of sophomore prospects.

Among those participating on the statewide squad will be Clay County's

Why? Why do they have to suffer? This is the question being asked, but apparently no answer has been found. Hall did his job. He led Betsy Layne to their first winning season ever.

Winning isn't enough, you say. Well, maybe you never watched Jack Hall work with his players. Maybe you don't know the self-confidence he built in them. Jack Hall is a positive man, who shares his bright outlook on life with everyone he comes in contact with.

Jack Hall is a man Betsy Layne students do not need to lose. Don't run another good man off. We lost one of the best football coaches in the state when Philip Haywood was forced to leave Prestonsburg. Don't do it again.

Take advantage of this second chance, a second chance that might just enrich some of our lives later. We need Jack Hall. Jack Hall doesn't need us. He has been successful before, and he will be successful again, so why not let him be successful with our young people, your children rather than someone else's.

The school board is expected to rule on this matter tonight, either re-hiring Jack Hall or selecting a new coach.

In other action concerning county athletics, the board is expected to name Johnny Ray Turner as the new McDowell coach to replace resigning Ricky Hall.

Turner, a former basketball coach at Salyersville High School, now Magoffin County High, has been approved of by most McDowell fans and faculty, but the board will probably make it official tonight.

Prestonsburg High School is also in need of a basketball coach, but principal Robert May says this item of business may not be challenged this meeting. May said that Prestonsburg had some more time to make a final decision and that extra time may be needed.

"We've had several good applications, and right now we're just trying to sort through them, and talk to some of the people," the principal said. May has kept his possible selection a secret, refusing to mention any top candidates for the Blackcat coaching job.

Prestonsburg was forced to search for a coach when Jeff Riley decided to leave the high school ranks for a position at Morehead State University.

If Turner is hired at McDowell, he may have the best job in the county. The Daredevils return four players who started at least some games last season.

Two of these players averaged close to 30 points between them, while point guard Henry Webb made solid progress during the season. Also defensive specialist Scott Tackett will be back.

At Prestonsburg the situation is totally reversed. Although the Blackcats have talent returning, they lost four starters to graduation, and their biggest returning player with experience is only 6'1".

If Jack Hall isn't back at Betsy Layne someone will inherit a talented squad there. Coming off a 6-4 season, the Bobcats have several starters back, and according to Hall, these people can play football.

The major question is whether Betsy Layne can field a talented team if Hall doesn't return. His players were loyal to him these past two years, and apparently they intend to be loyal to their coach even if the school board takes him away from them.

hot guard prospect Richie Farmer, and high scoring Paintsville guard Keith Adkins. Brandon Baker, of East Carter, and Greg Napier, of Hazard, round out eastern Kentucky players.

Size shouldn't be a problem for the Kentucky junior all-star squad. Four players stand 6'5" or taller, with Madisonville's 6'8" Chris Bowles topping the list. Scott Boley, 6'7" Larue County center, Doug Johnson, 6'6", of Bardstown, and Caldwell County's 6'5" Mike Gray will also be in action.

Williamstown's Scott Arnold, James Brewer of Bardstown, Rick Henry of Louisville-Waggoner, and Kip Ellington, Graves County's 6-4" prospect, will also be on hand to provide basketball viewing pleasure.

The junior all-star squad will tour Europe this summer, but before they cross the waters local fans will get an opportunity to see Kentucky's top players for next year.

Only four teams are left to decide Kentucky's high school baseball champion. M.C. Napier, who eliminated Paintsville last Thursday, will take on Owensboro in Thursday's second game, following Pleasure Ridge Park and Harrison County.

The PRP-Harrison County game will be played first. The four-team state tournament will be held at Elizabethtown.

Pre-Summer Fishing Tips

Seasonal change is readily apparent to us as the geese head back north, the lilacs start to bloom, and the streetsweepers replace snowplows on the public thoroughfares. But few fishermen are able to read the seasonal changes beneath the waters on their favorite fishing hole.

The time I heard about a fish's calendar I thought someone sold Ole a real tale! The concept of definite seasonal cycles for fish was cemented in 1973 by Al and Ron Linder (who publish the most authoritative magazine I know on the subject, the In-Fisherman) and Bill Binkleman—so it really hasn't been around a long time, but the Linders have developed such a scientific base for this calendar that ignorance of these cycles put the uninformed fisherman at a definite disadvantage.

The two most important elements to remember about any cycle are: (1) water temperature and, (2) the developing food chain and weed growth. No matter what time of year you're on the water, ask yourself questions about the water temperature, weed growth and the food chain and you can pretty well determine where the bass will and will not be. The Linders established the following cycles: Pre-spawn, spawn, post-spawn, pre-summer, summer peak, summer, post-summer, fall turnover, cold water, and frozen water.

One of the most challenging periods of the year is pre-summer. It's the transition period from post-spawn to summer where the bass are establishing what will be their summer pattern. Just what do we mean when we say bass are establishing their patterns?

"Basically, there are three types of bass," answers Linda England, Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member. "You've got your fish that stay in shallow water—a certain percentage of bass are going to stay in shallow water year 'round. A certain percentage are going to move out to deep structure after they're done spawning, and they're going to live their life on that structure. Another small percentage of them are what we call 'roamers', they just move constantly."

"Once the majority of bass move out of the shallow water spawning beds and recover from the spawn, then they go to whatever their normal lifestyle is. As the water temperature rises, their metabolism increases, and they get more and more active. That's what I consider the pre-summer leading into the summer situation."

England prefers to use spinnerbaits, crankbaits and a jig and frog during this cycle. Her tactics differ somewhat on the four types of fishing situations: natural lakes, rivers, creeks and man-made impoundments.

"In that natural lake I'm going to concentrate on the visible cover that's around that lake," England stresses. "I feel that the bass relates to cover and/or structure. And in natural lakes a lot of time you don't have structure as we think of it—as it's been defined by most bass fishermen. You're not going to have pre-channel edges, the old roadbeds, the river channel drop-offs—the things that we consider structure. So I'm going more for cover on natural lakes, and look for any natural points. I'm going to concentrate on any natural structure that would be present but always with an eye towards the cover."

For river fishing, Linda England suggests looking in "the areas where the bass can get back out of the current but yet still be in a striking position, where they can feed easily. The downstream side of any cuts, cuts leading back into shallow backwater areas are always good when bass are in a resting mood. They'll be on the upstream side or right up on that break when they're more active.

"I'm going to look for any type of cut or creek that goes off that river and may be a gathering place for bass. Again, I'm going to look for cover and I'm going to fish the upstream side (to establish my pattern) and if they're in an active mood they'll usually be upstream of any cover; if they're inactive, they'll usually be downstream in that eddy area."

On a creek, England would fish it just like a river. "Basically, I'll be fishing the same types of things. I'll go to a lighter line and smaller lures and a much more quiet approach," she states.

It's on man-made impoundments that England really starts talking about structure.

"I'd be looking more toward the shallow structure for the active bass—all visible structure, all visible cover on this structure, i.e., stumps along the edge of a creek channel. I'd fish them fast with a fast moving bait than can cover a lot of water, such as a crank bait or spinnerbait. I think during that pre-summer stage, structure fish are not really gathered up; they'll be more suspended, more scattered. And in the pre-summer, I'm going to concentrate more on shallow water structure and cover."

Compton Falls Short Of State Golf Tourney

Fred Compton shot a 10 over par 80 last Tuesday, leading the Prestonsburg High School golf team to a sixth place finish in the regional golf tournament played at the Paintsville Country Club. The sophomore turned in a fine 3 over par 37 on the front nine and was cruising along with a steady round until misfortune struck to the tune of double bogeys on both the 17th and 18th hole. Compton's 80 tied him for 6th place overall out of approximately 75 golfers and put him into a playoff with Rowan County's Jeff Parker for the last remaining spot for individuals to go to the state tournament. Parker got a par on the first playoff hole to earn a trip to the state tournament to be played yesterday and today (June 2 and 3) at the Lincoln Trail Golf Course in Vine Grove. Greenup County and Boyd County captured the first two places to qualify for the team competition at the state. Other scores for Prestonsburg included, Doug Marcum 90, Nicholas Dawson 98, Jamie Howell 103. Betsy Layne's Todd Sturgill fired on 81 to just miss the playoff between Compton and Parkes.

GOOD NUMBERS OF LEGAL MUSKIE EXPECTED AT GREEN RIVER THIS YEAR

Muskie fishermen will be glad to hear that a recent study of muskie at Green River Lake showed a good population of muskie are nearing legal size and should provide a good fishery by late this summer.

According to Bonny Lafin, Southwestern Fishery District biologist, more muskie were collected during an electrofishing session earlier this spring than in previous years. Lafin also said a majority of these fish were in the 28-32-inch range.

Green River is also looking good for largemouth and smallmouth. Lafin said good numbers of legal largemouth are present throughout the lake, while most of the good-sized smallmouth were found in the lower lake near the dam.

Pitching Puts Cincinnati On Top Defense Fails To Keep Them There

The Cincinnati Reds went into their game against the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night with an opportunity to put some space between them and San Francisco.

The Giants, National League West leader two days before, had already lost their fifth game in a row, falling to Montreal Saturday afternoon.

Cincinnati, the night before, had defeated the Pirates 13-6, banging out a total of 18 hits to move into a first placed tie with the Giants.

Starting pitching has been the only apparent weakness in the Reds' armor, but Bill Gullickson hasn't been one of those weak starters.

In his previous two starts Gullickson had come through with victories, both of which broke four-game Cincinnati losing streaks. This time the Reds' ace went to work with his team riding the crest of a modest two-game winning streak.

Gullickson made it three victories in a row. After surrendering an unearned run in the second, the big righthander proceeded to shut Pittsburgh out until the eighth inning.

Then the Pirates choked a run out of the stingy Gullickson, but by that time Cincinnati led the game 6-1, thanks to an Eric Davis grand slam.

In the third inning Cincinnati loaded the bases, and with one out Davis cleared them with his 19th home run of the season, a new National League record for the first two months of any year. The grand slam was Davis' third in May, also a record for the most bases loaded long balls in any single month.

The Reds added two runs in the fourth inning, one on a Gullickson RBI single, to send their starting pitcher on his way to a seventh victory on the season.

Gullickson, 7-2, worked eight innings, giving up two runs, as Cincinnati continued to roll, downing Pittsburgh 6-2, while also moving one full game up on San Francisco in the NL West.

Ted Power, struggling lately, continued the Cincinnati pitching staff's efforts to gain respect instead of ridicule. Sunday afternoon Power pitched eight innings himself, giving up seven Pittsburgh hits, and only two runs to claim his fourth victory of the season, 5-2 over the Pirates.

The Reds broke open a 2-2 contest in the sixth inning when Dave Parker silenced the boo birds in Three Rivers Stadium by leading the inning off with his 12th homerun of the year.

Cincinnati went on to score two more runs in that sixth inning, and then rode the arms of Power and John Franco to a 5-2 victory plus a three-game sweep of Pittsburgh.

Franco pitched the ninth inning, giving up one hit while striking out two to earn his ninth save of the year, and keep the Reds one game up on San Francisco.

One week earlier Pittsburgh had taken three straight games from the Reds in Cincinnati, but, with close to 40 hits and 24 runs in three games, Cincinnati reversed the situation on the road.

The Pirate series was one of the best Cincinnati has had offensively, coming within one hit of their single-game season high of base hits, but only 10 runs given up didn't hurt their chances of a sweep.

Following their quick six-game road trip the Reds returned to Riverfront Stadium Monday night, opening a 13-game home stand with St. Louis, before taking on L.A., San Francisco, and Atlanta later.

Cincinnati needed a win against St. Louis to ensure their top divisional standing, but Jerry Reuss failed to change his early-season habit of giving up runs early.

In the second inning St. Louis, 17-6 on the road, jumped all over the Reds lefty for four runs, three coming on Tony Pena's first homerun of the season.

Reuss, trying to regain the effectiveness that made him one of baseball's top pitchers several years ago, struggled with his control as Cincinnati fell behind 4-0 early.

The Reds, thanks to an RBI triple and a two run homerun off the bat of Nick Esasky rallied to take a 5-4 lead in the fourth inning when Ron Oester, after a double, scored on a St. Louis-turned double play.

The Cardinals tied the game in the seventh, scoring one run off Reuss, but in the bottom of the same frame Tracy Jones gave Reuss an opportunity to pick up his first win of the season.

Jones, hitting for Reuss, drilled a towering homerun in the bottom of the seventh inning. The homerun was Jones' sixth of the season to go with 17 RBIs in limited action, but more importantly it gave the Reds a one-run advantage.

Ron Robinson, Cincinnati reliever, retired the Cardinals in order in the eighth, and with two out in the ninth, induced Curt Ford to ground to Barry Larkin, but, with Tommy Herr on third, Larkin misplayed what appeared to be a routine out, allowing Herr to score the tying run.

Gone were any hopes Reuss had of gaining the win, a victory he desperately needed. In his last 14 starts Reuss is 0-9, including three losses this season.

But Larkin's error hurt more than just Jerry Reuss.

The St. Louis Cardinals scored two runs in the top of the tenth inning, pulling out an 8-6 victory and building their Eastern Division lead to three games over Chicago.

Robinson, in relief of Reuss, suffered the loss while Cardinal reliever Todd Worrell picked up the victory, his first of the year.

With the loss, combined with San Francisco's win over Philadelphia, the Reds fall back into a tie with the Giants.

Cincinnati, after closing out their three-game series with St. Louis tonight, will welcome the Los Angeles Dodgers this weekend, before taking on San Francisco Monday and Tuesday of next week.

DEATH TAKES GOOD WOMAN

The body was brought here from Ashland Saturday, and funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon from Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church here, the pastor, Rev. C. H. Nicholls, officiating, assisted by the

Rev. John Barbour, pastor of the Presbyterian Church here. Attesting to the respect in which Mrs. Callihan was universally held here, all Prestonsburg stores closed, and the Prestonsburg schools were dismissed for the afternoon. At 10:45 o'clock Monday morning exercises were conducted at Prestonsburg High School in veneration of the deceased. Prof. T. J. Currey spoke, and Dr. John Barbour recited "Crossing the Bar" in tribute to her. Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church

Family Entertainment Is Feature Of MSU's Appalachian Celebration

Family entertainment will be featured each evening during Morehead State University's 11th annual Appalachian Celebration June 21-27.

The events, scheduled daily at 7:30 p.m., all will be free this year, according to Pete McNeill, special projects coordinator for MSU's Office of Regional Services.

Highlighting the evening entertainment activities will be a performance by the famed McLain Family Band from Berea. Scheduled to play in concert on Thursday, June 25, in the Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center, the McLain Family Band will provide the music for a post-concert public dance.

Now almost as much a tradition as the Celebration itself, the Gathering of Traditional Musicians is slated for Friday, June 26, Duncan Recital Hall.

The program will feature such favorites as Alfred Bailey, the White Horse String Band, J.P. Fraley, Estill Bingham and a Salyersville group, the Bottom of the Barrell Bunch. Dr. Gene Young, MSU associate professor of English, is coordinating the "Gathering."

Launching the week on Sunday, June 21, will be a reception from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., hosted by MSU's Department of Art, in the gallery of Claypool-Young Art Building. In addition to the exhibit, "Building on the Past: Significant Works from the First 25 Years of the Kentucky Guild of Artists and Craftsmen," will be live music by local mountain musicians.

Champion clogger Scotty McKee will lead an evening of clogging and square dancing on Monday, June 22, in the Crager Room, ADUC. McKee also will teach clogging classes—beginning and intermediate—as well as mountain square dancing during the Celebration.

Celebration scholars-in-residence Michael Williams and Marilou Awiatka will be featured on Tuesday's evening program in the Eagle Room, ADUC. A master storyteller, Williams also is a Methodist minister. Awiatka is a noted Cherokee/Appalachian poet and activist.

Gospel Music Night on Wednesday, June 24, will include such diverse groups as the Applegate Family, the Morehead Church of God Choir, the Lighthouse Gospel Quartet, the Scottaires, the Johnson First Church of God Choir and Mervil Whitt. The program, slated for Button Auditorium, is being arranged by C. Roger Lewis of Morehead.

On Saturday, June 27, the Celebration will close with another public dance, led again by McKee, in the Crager Room, ADUC.

The Appalachian Celebration, an annual campus summer event, is designed to emphasize the rich cultural heritage of the region through classes, concerts, exhibits, displays and demonstrations.

Additional information on Celebration events is available from McNeill at (606) 783-2077.

Americans want clean air. Seventy-two percent of those asked in a national survey said controlling air pollution was "very important." According to a 1983 Louis Harris poll, 86 percent of Americans favor strict enforcement of the Clean Air Act. In 1981, only 80 percent felt that strongly. Only 26 percent support weakening automobile emission standards, compared to 38 percent in 1981.

Commerce Cabinet Conference

Will Inform Small Businesses About Federal Research Funds

A conference to assist small businesses in Kentucky take advantage of $2.5 billion available in federal research and development funds is planned June 15 in Frankfort, according to Secretary of Commerce Carroll Knically.

Operators of small businesses and individuals having research capabilities are being invited to a morning seminar at the Capital Plaza Hotel to learn about funds offered by the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) program. Those attending will be told how the program works as well as how to design and develop a successfully competitive project proposal.

"I am confident that we have a number of small businesses throughout Kentucky that could be successful in competing for these research funds if they would but apply," Knically said, "and we hope through this meeting to encourage them to do so."

According to Knically, there are 11 federal agencies which must allocate a portion of their research and development funds to small businesses. Any business with up to 500 employees and having research and development capabilities, is eligible to participate in the program, Knically said.

D. M. Stein, Executive Director of the Commerce Cabinet's Office of Business and Technology, said the SBIR program allows small firms to underwrite development of the next generation of products and to pursue innovative research ideas that may have too high a risk for most lending institutions to be too expensive for the firm to finance on its own or be too early for venture capital firms. Phase I of the program provides up to $50,000 to demonstrate the scientific and technical merit of a research project. Once feasibility has been established, Phase II can provide up to $500,000 for further development, Stein said. The monies have been used to open the doors of about 10-15% of the firms receiving awards.

The June 15 meeting is being sponsored by the Office of Business and Technology and the Kentucky Department of Education. Guest speaker will be Ann Eskesen, president of the Innovation Development Institute and managing editor of a national newsletter devoted to SBIR activities. Eskesen was involved in the passage and subsequent implementation of the SBIR enabling legislation.

Stein said the morning session, beginning at 8:30 a.m., directed mainly at small business owners and individuals with R & D capabilities, will provide detailed information on the SBIR program, and how to be successfully competitive on designing projects and developing proposals for SBIR funding.

The afternoon session, designed for economic development specialists, and others who support small business exports, will look at the SBIR program as a resource to expand, recruit, and retain businesses in Kentucky. She said this session should be of particular interest and help to lawyers, accountants and others who know of companies that could be competitive for these monies.

A registration fee will be charged for each meeting. Mailings have been made to companies, chambers of commerce and others in the public and private sectors. Anyone not receiving information on the meeting, but wishing to attend can contact the Office of Business and Technology, Commerce Cabinet, 2400 Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, 40601, or call Dr. Stein at (502) 564-7670.

Grants To PCC To Foster Arts

Gov. Martha Layne Collins has announced that Floyd county will receive arts grant funds totalling $2,500 from the Kentucky Arts Council, a division of the Kentucky Department of the Arts.

Prestonsburg Community College has received $1,500 in support of a strings program and $1,000 in support of a dance camp.

"We are pleased to see the arts gaining such strong momentum all around the state," said Gov. Martha Layne Collins. "The arts are vitally important to the quality of life for Kentuckians and to economic progress here in the Commonwealth."

In this recent round of grants, a total of $309,035 in state and federal funds was approved by the council for distribution after July 1 to arts groups throughout the state. Council Director Roger Paige noted that a total of over $2,200,000 will go to artists and arts groups during the fiscal year 1987-88. This money includes the Kentucky Arts Council's share from the National Endowment for the Arts as well as new funds recently allocated by the Kentucky Legislature.

The Arts Council, a 16-member citizen board appointed by the governor, receives grant applications and disburses funds. Margaret Trevathan of Murray, chairperson of the council, said, "We have so many good applications for art projects. There is a great deal of interest in the arts all across the state. Unfortunately, we can fund only a small percentage of the applications." She noted that the council depends on the recommendations of evaluation panels made up of arts professionals to help determine which applications take highest priority.

Arts Commissioner Crit Luallen explained that the primary goal of the department is to encourage interest in and expand audiences for the arts, help create new programs and support Kentucky's artists. The department does this through marketing and loan programs for artists as well as the grand program.

The ballpoint pen is said by some to have been invented by two Hungarian brothers—Georg and Ladislao—who agreed on the advantage of quickdrying ink for use in pens. They constructed the prototype and in 1938 applied for a patent.

Slips To Be Repaired

The state will correct a slide on Kentucky 122, the Spurlock-Bucks Branch road, Gov. Martha Collins has announced.

According to state Transportation Secretary C. Leslie Dawson, the project is estimated to cost $7,883 and is being financed with Rural Secondary Special Emergency funds. Dawson noted that the project will be done by state forces and worked into the schedule as soon as time will permit.

The state will also provide materials for the county to make slip repairs on the Ivy Creek road, a project estimated to cost $8,044, Dawson said. The county will be responsible for all phases of the work, he noted.

TV NOSTALGIA

By Paul Elie

Years before starring roles in "Splash" and "Bachelor Party" made him famous, Tom Hanks starred in a sitcom on ABC.

In "Bosom Buddies," which aired from 1980 to 1984, Hanks and Peter Scolar (who now plays Michael Harris on "Newhart") played two female roommates named Hildegard and Buffy. Or rather, they played two male roommates named Henry Desmond and Kip Wilson, who played Hildegard and Buffy. Like "Tootsie" (1982), a hit film of the same era, this series featured men disguised as women.

Henry and Kip worked for an ad agency and shared an apartment in New York City. When their building came up for demolition, they were left without a place to live and Amy Cassidy (Wendie Jo Sperber), the receptionist at the agency, offered to put them up.

There was one problem, though. Amy lived at the Susan B. Anthony Hotel, an all-woman establishment run by a manager (Lily Sinclair) who was determined to keep it that way. So the two dressed in drag and moved in, looking forward to the chances for voyeurism the ruse would create.

During the show's first season, only Amy knew Henry and Kip's true identities - though some of the stunts they pulled made it hard to believe that anyone at the hotel could be fooled. And, to complicate things further, they were always showing up out of disguise, saying they were Hildegard and Buffy's brothers.

"Bosom Buddies" stretched - or dragged - the premise of disguised sexuality to the outer limits. But that was hardly too far for a guy who would go on to love a mermaid.

Question: What pop hit was the series' theme song?

Answer: "My Life" by Billy Joel

GABELEVIEW

Lifetime is offering two sessions of TV therapy

By Marianne Meyer

Can TV help you through the psychological bumpy spots of life? Maybe ...

Dr. Dan Kiley

The Lifetime Network debuts two new series this week, both on the subject of contemporary relationships. "People in Crisis" premieres Monday, June 8, followed immediately by "Our Group." Both shows will air new half-hour episodes on a daily Monday-to-Friday basis.

You might liken "People in Crisis" to "Donahue" with a degree. Dr. Dan Kiley, "Peter Pan Syndrome" author and radio personality, provides guidance to real people and culls reactions from a studio audience on cases ranging from the mild (trouble with household pets) to the major (marital woes). Each show is a three-way exchange among two guests, Dr. Kiley, and the audience and concludes with a suggested course of action. "No counseling show can replace ongoing therapy," Dr. Kiley admits, "but people will discover they're not alone — others have problems like theirs. We encourage communication and, hopefully, the desire to start the process of obtaining professional help."

In "Our Group," Barbara Levy, a practicing therapist at Phoenix House in New York City, leads a dramatized group-therapy session. An ensemble group of actors make up the cast. They represent a typical group-therapy session that will "meet" for interaction and discussion each day. According to co-executive producer Jeff Lawenda, "Even though the show is serialized, with no absolute resolution, there will be a dramatic catharsis which concludes each episode," as one of the characters comes to a realization about himself or herself.

Substantial new series, or a just another form of soap opera? We'll have to wait and see.

PROGRAM NOTES

"Little Steven" Van Zandt stood by Bruce Springsteen for nearly a decade as guitarist for the E Street Band. Now a solo artist, he has made three politically charged albums (the latest is "Freedom - No Compromise") and helped organize the "Sun City" record/video project. All of this should make him one of MTV's more interesting guest VJs. Tune in Tuesday, June 9, and see what he has to show and tell.

SOAP BEAN

Holly Gagnier is happy that Cassie isn't a wimp

By Marie Michaels

"Because I'm a strong actress, I didn't have any problems when I took over the role of Cassie Callison," says Holly Gagnier, who is the third actress to play that role on "One Life to Live." Gagnier joined "OLTL" a few months ago after making the move from California to New York City.

Holly Gagnier

Gagnier, who left the role of Ivy Jannings on "Days of Our Lives" only a couple of weeks before joining "OLTL," pointed out her reasons for the switch.

"I was only supposed to play Ivy for three days on 'Days' in the beginning, and even though the character was later made a regular on the show, I just couldn't wait around anymore for a story line," she says.

"Also, 'Days' already had so many young people. I love 'One Life' because there's a balance of ages, and I think you learn a lot more from the actors who have been a part of the cast for a long time. I also like it that the younger actors on 'One Life' work a lot with the mature actors."

In some ways, Gagnier also likes Cassie more than she liked Ivy.

"Ivy was such a wimp," says Gagnier. "Cassie isn't like that. She's very sensitive and emotional, and she sometimes thinks she's more grown up than she really is, but she's not a wimp. She stands up for herself. As Cassie, there's something different for me to play every day."

"I like the fact that both characters were very real and that people can identify with them," Gagnier continues. "Ivy wasn't out chasing dragons all the time. She was a single working mother who was raising her baby alone. And Cassie is also very down to earth."

Gagnier has had to make some real-life adjustments since she came east, but she insists that she's doing just fine. "The move was a major event in my life," she admits. "I not only changed jobs, I left my family, my home and my friends behind in Los Angeles."

ASK TONI

The 'missing' John Wayne film isn't really missing

By Toni Reinhold

My husband is a fan of John Wayne and has seen all his films. Most seem to be on tape and on TV except "McClintock." What happened to it? Will it ever be on TV? - V.K., Hastings, Neb.

John Wayne

If you're checking video catalogs, you had better double-check your spelling - the film is "McLintock!" It's a 1963 Western/comedy starring Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Stefanie Powers, Patrick Wayne, Yvonne De Carlo, Chill Wills, Bruce Cabot, Jack Kruschen and Jerry Van Dyke. Drop a note to your local movie channel, telling them that you'd like to see it.

Wasn't John Getz of "Marjah" in another series a couple of years ago? What was it called, and when did it air? - D.R.H., Hartshorne, Okla.

He played Dr. Daniel Gentry in the medical drama "Rafferty," which aired on CBS in the fall of 1977. He appeared in another short-lived series, a sitcom called "Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs," which aired from March to April 1984. He was also in the short-lived 1985 series "MacGruder & Loud."

I say Dick Van Dyke was one of the regulars on "The Carol Burnett Show." Everyone says I'm wrong. Am I? - T.O., Wheeling, W.Va.

When comedian Harvey Korman left the show in 1977, he was replaced as a regular by Dick Van Dyke.

I remember a series about Jim Bowie, but I can't recall who starred in it. I'd also like the name of the show that starred one of the actors from "The Big Valley" and was set in New Orleans. - B.A.U., Cleveland, Ohio.

Scott Forbes starred in the title role of "The Adventures of Jim Bowie" (1956-58). The other series you're thinking about was a detective drama, "Bourbon Street Beat." It starred Richard Long (he played Jarrod Barkley on "The Big Valley") and Andrew Duggan and aired during the 1959-60 television season.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of Gary Franklin Lafferty
Born April 23, 1943
Passed away June 9, 1985

We will not say, we cannot say,
That he is dead—he's just away.
With a charming smile,
And a wave of the hand,
He's gone to live in God's fair land
And left us wondering how very fair
It surely is, since his entry there,
And you—o you who often yearn
For those good days when he'd return
Think of him living on, as dear
With the love that's there, and the love
that's here
So think of him as the same, we say
Gary's not dead, he's just away.
Sadly missed by family and friends.
1t.

MSU Slates Annual Stuart Symposium

The ninth annual Jesse Stuart Symposium will be held at Morehead State University, Tuesday, June 23, as part of the week-long Appalachian Celebration.

An annual summer campus event, MSU's Appalachian Celebration features concerts, classes, exhibits and demonstrations emphasizing the rich heritage and culture of the region.

Focusing on Kentucky's renowned author who died two years ago, the Stuart Symposium is sponsored by MSU's Department of English, Foreign Languages and Philosophy.

"Jesse Stuart's Legacy," a talk by Joyce LeMaster, MSU associate professor of English and co-director of the Jesse Stuart Tape Project, will launch the day's events at a 12:15 p.m. luncheon in the Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center.

Reservations will be necessary for the luncheon, but not for the other activities of the day.

Following the luncheon, other guest speakers will discuss Stuart, his books and the Kentucky of his time. Featured speaker for the symposium will be Al Smith, editor and publisher of the London Sentinel-Echo. His topic, "Stuart's Kentucky," will deal with the history of politics and tax support of education in Eastern Kentucky.

"Al Smith is very familiar with Kentucky education and politics," said Dr. Ron Dobler, department chair. "He's also an enthusiastic speaker."

George Brosi, bookseller and Stuart bibliographer, will discuss "Back to the Classroom: Returning Jesse Stuart to the Schools through His Books," at 1:30 p.m. in the Gold Room, ADUC, with Smith's presentation to follow at 2:15 p.m.

As an added attraction, MSU theatre students will present selected readings and dramatic interpretations of Stuart's "The Thread That Runs So True."

In addition to the one-day Symposium, all-day tours of Stuart's home in W-Hollow, Greenup County, will be conducted Monday, June 22, and Wednesday, June 24, by James Stuart, brother of the late author.

Reservations for the W-Hollow tour may be made by calling Pete McNeill, Office of Regional Services, (606) 783-2077.

All symposium events, excluding the luncheon and W-Hollow tour, are free. Reservations for the luncheon and additional information on Symposium activities may be obtained from Dr. Dobler, UPO Box 871, Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky. 40351. Phone: (606) 783-2185. The deadline for reservations for the luncheon is June 19.

Statewide Meeting To Center On Help For The Family In Trouble

An estimated 500 professionals, experienced and knowledgeable about family life in Kentucky, will assemble in Lexington June 3-5 to discuss the changing home scene in the state and ways to strengthen families as a means of addressing some of the Kentucky's social problems.

"Kentucky Families: Together and Safe" is the brainchild of staff of the state's Department for Social Services. The array of two dozen workshops was designed by conference planners to dovetail with the department's emphasis on delivery of family-based services, according to Commissioner Anna Grace Day.

"This is the culmination of two years of altering how Kentucky works with its troubled families and the ways we use the assistance of other professionals similarly dedicated to preserving the family," Day said.

"Preserving the family" is no longer just a new concept in social work in this state," she said. "Most of the same stresses that pressure individuals—work, school, finances, personal relationships—are also forces pushing and pulling on the family as a whole.

"We can't wait to help until a problem has isolated a child or adult. The time and place to help is in the most natural setting—the united family."

The meeting at Lexington's Hyatt Regency Hotel will involve social workers, mental health counselors, public health officers, representatives of the state educational and legal systems, and for the first time in such a setting, more than 100 of Kentucky's foster fathers and mothers.

"As dire as our need is for caring, loving foster parents, it's even more important that we keep the good foster homes we already have," Day said.

"Participation in the sessions by these foster parents will increase their understanding of our family-based services program as well as their knowledge of the other child or family care specialists available to be called upon."

Workshop presenters include Dr. Steven Bavolek, University of Utah, who developed nationally-recognized techniques in nurturing families, Lisa Kaplan, author and director of program development and training at the Northeastern Institute of Danvers, MA., Carl Brown, immediate past president of the National Association of Foster Parents and Fayette District Judge John Paris and members of his juvenile court staff.

Card Series Bears Anti-Drug Message

Gov. Martha Layne Collins and members of her Champions Against Drugs council officially launched the Collectors Card Series on May 28 at stops in Louisville and Lexington.

This week is the first of 22 consecutive weeks that baseball-type cards featuring noted Kentuckians will be issued to persons 17 years of age and younger. The cards also contain a personalized anti-drug abuse message on the back.

The Kentucky State Police, Kentucky Sheriff's Association, Lexington-Fayette County Police Department, and the Louisville and Jefferson County Police Departments are cooperating in the effort.

Drillers Near Deadline

Kentucky water well drillers have only until July 1 to become certified by the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet's Division of Water on the basis of their past experience. After July 1, all drillers seeking certification must have two years' experience working under the supervision of a certified water well driller.

When it was established in July 1984, the Water Well Drillers Certification Program allowed one year in which those who showed proof of experience could become certified without the required work under a certified driller, if the state Water Well Drillers Certification Board approved their experience. In July 1985, the division extended that period for two more years to July 1, 1987.

To meet the other certification requirements, which remain the same, an applicant must be at least 18 years of age, a citizen of the United States or have declared an intention to become a citizen, and pass an examination given by the Division of Water.

Water wells are the source of drinking water for approximately 30 percent of all Kentuckians. The Water Well Drillers Certification Program was established to help reduce potential groundwater contamination from improperly drilled wells.

All water well drillers working in the state must be certified. Certification forms and instructions are available from the Kentucky Water Well Drillers Certification Program, Division of Water, 18 Reilly Road, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

More Vitamin D In Diet May Help Fragile Bones

Vitamin D deficiency among the elderly, especially those who live in colder climates, may be an unrecognized epidemic.

It is definitely related, says one nutritionist, to the fact that about 200,000 Americans suffer from hip fractures each year, costing them $2 billion for medical treatment. Most of the sufferers are elderly.

"One reason for all this breakage is that older people are not getting enough vitamin D from their diets or from exposure to summer sunlight," says Michael F. Holick, of the Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging, at Tufts University. The center is funded by USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

"What's more," says Dr. Holick, "people begin losing bone mass in their thirties, leading to a weakened, sponge-like bone structure in later years. The condition is called osteoporosis."

Although the process speeds up in women after menopause, says the nutritionist, "all people have it sooner or later. And when you have a vitamin D deficiency on top of osteoporosis, you can sharply increase the risk of breaking bones."

In a recent study of 142 patients with fractured hips at a Boston hospital, Holick and his associates found that up to 40 percent had little or none of the circulating form of vitamin D in their blood. Other studies in this country and in Great Britain reveal similar percentages.

More milk is one answer. "The major cause of age-related vitamin D deficiency is a decrease in milk consumption," says Holick.

He points out that few foods contain vitamin D; the best food source is milk. It takes four 8-ounce glasses of milk a day, however, to provide the vitamin D we need.

"People who can't tolerate milk or who simply won't drink that much should take a vitamin D supplement or spend more time in the summer sun," according to Holick.

The right time for exposure can range from 5 or 10 minutes a day around midday for light-skinned people to considerably longer than that for people with darker skin.

Holick says there are sunny days in the winter, too, but points out that manufacture of the sunshine vitamin in the skin stops completely during the winter in latitudes as far north as Boston. One form of the vitamin, in fact, is actually broken down and made inactive by winter sunlight.

About 202,000 individuals were advised of their reemployment rights at time of separation from active duty by the Office of Veterans' Reemployment Rights, according to the Labor Department's Annual Report for Fiscal Year 1985.
