

FIREFIGHTER APPRECIATION WEEK, AUGUST 8-15, was announced during Monday's Prestonsburg City Council meeting. Mayor Ann Latta presented Fire Chief Thomas Blackburn with the proclamation.

Middle Creek Fire Tax Proposal Is Met By Protests, Close Vote

By Tim Sizemore

Angry protests and calls for a recount greeted officers of the Middle Creek Volunteer Fire Department, last Tuesday night, as a forum of residents in a straw ballot voted in the affirmative for a district fire tax.

The meeting, called to inform residents about the new tax and how they would benefit from the proposal, quickly turned into angry exchanges between those holding pro and con views about the tax.

The pro tax people claimed that the money is needed to pay routine operating expenses and to purchase new equipment. They said that failure of people to donate their fair share had put operation of the department in jeopardy and that without the tax they would be forced to close. Glen Vaughn, president of the department, told the assembly "We are without funds to continue."

Those in opposition to the tax voiced concern about the department's lack of manpower and whether they could meet the criteria of the Insurance Securities Commission. As one of those opposed put it "We would not get the service we would pay for." Another bone of contention was the excluding of Spurlock Creek from the Middle Creek fire district. Residents of that area complained that they would be left without fire protection with neither the Prestonsburg nor the Middle Creek departments obligated to service the area.

Prestonsburg Fire Chief Thomas Blackburn was present at the meeting to explain Prestonsburg's position on out of city limits fires. Blackburn said that his department would cover five road miles from the city limits if the homeowner had subscribed to the service offered by the city at a fee of one dollar per thousand of property value. President Vaughn asked Blackburn if the Middle Creek department folded whether Prestonsburg would respond to a fire in the area, to which Blackburn replied "If that happens, I hope people will line up to subscribe to our service." He also added that he was prohibited from entering any other department's territory without a request for mutual assistance.

Denzil Allen, of the Allen and Hatton Insurance Agency, spoke to the group about savings they could expect if Middle Creek was upgraded from a class 10 ten to a class nine fire department. A home insured for $25,000 could realize a yearly savings of $125; for $50,000 a net savings of $150, Allen said. Loraine Prater confronted Allen with the fact that her insurance rates had risen three times since the establishment of the department. Allen replied that the rate hike was over an entire area and that insurance rates were not decided on an individual basis. Many residents complained that they had to cancel their policies because of soaring rates.

Glen Vaughn went on to explain how the tax money would be administered saying that a board would be elected by the community and that no member of the fire department would be allowed to serve as a trustee. He explained that a ceiling would be placed on the tax so that the rates could not be raised without public consent.

When several members of the department threatened to resign if the tax was not passed, those opposed countered that they are being coerced into accepting the levy.

Board, MCCC Join Efforts In Drug Abuse Prevention

By Jeff Weddle

Drug and alcohol abuse in Floyd county schools will be soon under seige, the result of a cooperative effort between the Board of Education and Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, it was announced during last Wednesday's school board meeting.

MCCC will act as a subcontractor in the joint drug abuse prevention program, said David Turner, county Physical Education Coordinator, who will help coordinate the program.

Turner said the program is designed mainly to prevent illicit drug usage, and that while "We are probably among the lowest with this problem in the state, everyone knows it exists. As to what extent it is, here, I don't know."

He added that the program is something that has been badly needed for some time, but that organizers will have to proceed with caution. "We have to be careful," he said. "You can overdo a program and cause what you're trying to prevent. It's a very delicate thing."

Mike Vance, personnel director at MCCC said yesterday that his agency will provide one full-time instructor, as well as teacher and administration training for the drug abuse program. Vance said it will be implemented over a three-year period. The first year, he said, will be used to determine the type of prevention program to be used in schools county-wide. The remaining two years will be used to implement the chosen program.

Vance said alcohol is the drug most abused by students in county schools, adding that both males and females abuse alcohol, and that if it is not unheard of to see 11-year-old girls drinking. He cited that several years ago he encountered a 13-year-old with a drinking problem.

Marijuana is the next most prevalent drug in the area, said Vance, but that there is not a great problem here with the "harder" street drugs found in larger cities.

Drug awareness counselling will be incorporated into existing health and science classes, said Turner.

Funds for the drug program—$23,207—are expected to come from the federal government by way of a state Dept. of Education grant. Turner said the grant application was mailed after Wednesday's meeting, and he expects to hear soon that the money has been awarded. If all goes as planned, MCCC will add about $6 thousand, for a total of $29 thousand.

MCC also is collaborating with the board in the application for state funds for the education of handicapped children. The agency currently has in place a program for handicapped preschool children which includes, among other features, a screening process, diagnosis, plus program planning and coordination. It employs a multi-disciplinary staff, and offers home-based services. An integrated pre-school is set to open August 17.

Other business before the board centered on hirings, resignations and transfers. Twenty-two certified personnel were either hired or transferred to positions Brackett described as better suited to their credentials.

Among the transfers were Tim Salisbury, from McDowell to Martin Elementary; Lolita B. Kendrick, remediation, from Martin to McDowell Elementary; Donna Gray, remediation, from kindergarten to Martin; Vicki K. Prater, kindergarten, from Maytown to Martin; William J. Stevens Bound To Grand Jury; Held on Bond

By Tim Sizemore

At a preliminary hearing held Monday, Gary Gene Stevens, 36, of Betsy Layne was bound over to the Grand Jury in the murder of Michael Robinette.

Stevens is accused of the shotgun slaying of Robinette, 36, of Betsy Layne, at the home of his estranged wife, Debra Stevens.

State Police Detective Jim Stevens testified at the hearing that Stevens went to the home of his mother and got a 12-gauge shotgun and some shells.

The shooting which occurred around 11:30 p.m. was not discovered until the next morning by a state trooper and the victim's wife.

Mrs. Stevens testified that she did not have a phone and fearing that her husband would return and kill her, she barricaded the doors and sat up all night with a 20-gauge shotgun.

PCC Is Recipient Of $26,204 Grant

The Kentucky Energy Cabinet has awarded Prestonsburg Community College a grant of $26,204 for fiscal year 87-88.

"This grant will help Prestonsburg Community College in providing continuing education and training to miners in order that they can upgrade their education and skill levels," said Energy Secretary George E. Evans, Jr.

The grant provided to Kentucky schools that offer mining related education programs are part of the Energy Cabinet's continuing efforts on behalf of the Kentucky mining industry.

Police Car Purchase Spurs Off Duty Use Debate, Here

By Jeff Weddle

Prestonsburg's police department has purchased nine previously used cruisers, which, added to the five already in the fleet, means every officer will now have their own vehicle. Officers will be responsible for washing and otherwise maintaining the cars. The debate in Monday's city council meeting: Should officers be permitted to drive the cars home after their shifts, or should the cars remain parked behind city hall?

In a sometimes spirited exchange, Mayor Ann Latta sparred with Councilman Thomas Tackett over the issue. Tackett said the officers would have better morale and take better care of the vehicles if allowed to take them home. Latta raised the questions of cost effectiveness and insurance coverage, especially with regard to officers who live outside the city limits. She further wondered aloud if it would be appropriate to thus provide police officers free transportation to and from work without providing similar benefits to other city employees.

City Administrator Fred James reminded council members that prior to the purchase of the vehicles, he had asked each of them if the cars should remain parked at city hall or be taken home. He said each council member had said they should remain parked.

To this, Tackett and Councilman William Callihan took strong exception. Though James amended his claim that Tackett had agreed—"You're right," he said, "you're the only one who said no," he remained firm on Callihan's earlier position. Callihan, who was in agreement with Tackett, hotly denied he had ever been for parking the cars.

For his part, Police Chief Elmo Allen said he is for the officers taking the cars home. He noted that the cars had been purchased as surplus from the city of Louisville for a combined total of $7,500, several already equipped with features such as blue lights and prisoner cages. This saved the city about $4,000, said Allen. "With what we paid for these cars and the savings we made on the equipment, the city really doesn't have much of an investment. I think they should give my officers a chance, even if it's just on a trial basis," he said.

In District Court

Sentenced in Floyd District Court, following guilty pleas or verdicts, were Berry Tackett, 23, Ligon, D.U.I., 60 days in jail, $1,207.50 fine; Billy D. Brewer, 26, Teaberry, D.U.I., 10 days in jail, $707.50 fine.

Correction: Stella Marie Sammons listed last week as being committed to Eastern State in fact was arrested for disorderly conduct, resisting arrest, assault 4th class and sentenced to one year, probated, and fined $47.50. Martha Slusher was committed to Eastern State on similar charges.

Long, Hot Summer Vacation Over for County Students

By Jeff Weddle

Summer vacation has once again slipped away from Floyd county's school children, and classes resume in all county schools, Monday, August 17.

The long, hot summer might keep its grip on the region for a while longer, but in Floyd schools, the students and teachers should keep cool. According to Supt. Ray Brackett, when work is finished in the next few days at Prestonsburg High School, the last facility in the county without such equipment, all county schools will be air-conditioned.

Brackett said that the air-conditioning units at PHS should be operational, at the latest, a few days after school opens. He said it is possible they will be working when school begins. Likewise, repair on air-conditioners at Allen Central should be completed when school opens.

The air-conditioners at PHS were purchased with funds raised by the school itself. Brackett said the board of education only paid for installation and wiring. Staffing these cool schools will apparently not be a problem this year. "We have staffing now at the 99 percent level," said Brackett. "Right now we're better staffed than we have been at this point in recent years."

He attributed the many filled positions to a large number of job applicants and fewer retirements. Another reason many positions are filled, he said, is because a number of teachers have been transferred to new positions for which their credentials make them better suited. Along with the full compliment of teachers will be approximately 9,800 students across the county, said Brackett.

In addition to classes beginning next Monday, all teachers are to report to their respective schools today (Wednesday). An in-service day for faculty throughout the county will be held Thursday at Allen Central, and Friday, the teachers again report to their respective schools.

Dwale Man Is Killed By Train, Saturday

Harry Steven Prince, 24, was killed Saturday night after being struck by a train near his home at Dwale.

According to Trooper Kenneth Frost of Kentucky State Police Post nine, Pikeville, Prince was apparently walking along the tracks at about 2:20 a.m. when he was hit by the eastbound CSX locomotive. The train was pulling 123 empty cars.

Prince was taken to Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin, where he was pronounced dead at 8:22 a.m. by Dr. Prem Verma. The body was taken Sunday, to Lexington for autopsy.

Prince was born June 15, 1963, a son of Harry and Geraldine Nelson Prince, of Dwale. He was employed by Goble's Heating and Cooling, Allen.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by one brother, Tim Prince, of (See Story No. 6, Page 4)

Seeks Information

I am seeking information on Franklin and Lucinda Hazelwood. Franklin was born about 1820. We think in Washington Co. Ky. We know that he married Lucinda Brown on Feb. 12, 1844, in Mercer Co. Ky. She was the daughter of Chaffin Brown and Jane Linch. They were married by Rev. S. Hatch. William Ramsey made oath that Lucinda was 21, and that she lived in Mercer Co. Ky. Eight children were born to Franklin and Lucinda. But we have found only seven.

Mary Jane b. 1845, John Q. b. 1849, Vivian b. 1854, Chinisa b. 1857, William T. b. 1847, Marion B. b. 1850, Elizabeth b. 1856.

The first record we have of Franklin was in Marion Co. Kentucky. Starting in 1843, and we can find him there each year through 1848. Marion Co., Ky. Commissioner's book Vol. 1, page 11, list Franklin Hazelwood, one white male over 21, and on the same page, next line or so, shows a Richard D. Haselwood, white male over 21.

In 1849 and 1850 we find Franklin in Washington Co. Ky. and the 1850 Federal Census, Micro-film-roll, 432 page 221, Aug. 13, 1850, lists his son Quinton J. as being born in Mercer Co., Ky. and is one year old. As of yet I don't know where he was in 1851, and 1852. But we do find Franklin in Trimble Co., Ky. starting in 1853, and we find him each year through 1867. We do not know where they were in 1868 or 1869 but his son John Q. Hazelwood was living on Dry Fork, in Trimble Co. Ky. in 1868. From 1870 through 1872 we find Franklin and Lucinda living in Harding Co., Ky. Also in 1872 in Harding Co. we find one of his son's Marion Hazelwood living on Vally Crick, in the third district.

In 1867 Marion Boldue Haselwood: My great grandfather moved to Larue Co., but did not stay long, returning to Harding Co., to live near his father and mother. After 1872 we find Lucinda. John Q. Marion B. and for the first time other Hazelwoods...living in Larue Co., and listing their post office as Buffalo.

Any information on Hazelwood (Haselwood) will be appreciated. I will reimburse your postage. I will pay a $200 reward for information that proves who Franklin's father was, and who his grandfather was.

On the Job—

While shopping at Walmart on Thursday, August 6, I left my purse in the cart and turned my back on it while a clerk was helping me look for an item. The cart was nearby and out of my sight for a very brief time. Someone took the cart and disappeared immediately. The clerk helped me search and notified the proper personnel quickly.

I went up front and identified my purse (light beige with a hand-painted pelican). Imagine what went through my mind: the keys to two cars and home were there, assorted charge cards, complete address/phone file with a multitude of personal information, and enough money to cause plenty of anguish. All the time, I was torn between maintaining my composure and wondering what or when or who was doing anything to get that purse back to me. I felt completely helpless!

After about twenty minutes, a "big" security man brought the cart back with my purse. Everything was there. Please watch those purses, ladies. The thief ran away, but I caught the lesson.

Thanks are heartily extended to the Security Personnel at Walmart for saving me. I am so glad you are on the job.

We Remember When

Many of us can remember when, and talk of sins against nature itself in the coal, timber, and people of Kentucky's eastern coalfields.

I am originally from the vicinity of a little coal camp named Esco, no longer there, but near Pikeville, Kentucky.

Counting dollars many people did not get rich over the years.

By and large, most of us emerged richly blessed with several comforts of life, and a unique love for each other, found nowhere else in the country.

I love the mountains, and mountain people.

My health will not let me live in the mountains, but my love for you runs deep, and will never die.

God bless and keep you!

Those against the tax claimed that children had voted for the proposal and that the votes had not been properly counted. Vaughn, who refused a recount, stated "We are at this time going to pursue the fire tax before the fiscal court."

MDA Benefit Slated Today at Holiday Inn

A Fashion Show and Charity Auction with all proceeds to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association will be held today (Wednesday) at 6 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, Prestonsburg. Sponsored by the Bank Josephine, First Commonwealth Bank and the Holiday Inn, the festivities will begin with the fashion show hosted by a celebrity emcee and the Big Sandy Area's own poster child, Johnny Jones. This will be followed by the auction featuring original paintings and other works of art, weekend vacations and much more. There will be an admission charge, and refreshments will be served.

MDA neither requests nor receives government tax-supported grants in its fight against 40 neuromuscular diseases but relies entirely on the generosity and continued support of businesses, corporations and individuals to carry on its fight and continue the free services provided.

For additional information please contact Denise Lee, 886-0001, Donna Roope, 886-9101, or Butch Bradley, 886-2321.

Historical Society Opens Quilt Contest

Are you one of the thousands of Kentuckians who enjoy quilting? If so, you may wish to enter a quilt contest sponsored by the Kentucky Historical Society. The winner of the contest will receive $1,000, for which he or she will make a full-size quilt using the pieced pattern entitled "The Kentucky Star." The quilt will become the property of the historical society.

To enter, interested Kentuckians should send a 16-inch-square block using the Kentucky Star pattern and containing a sample of their quilting ability. The color scheme of the block is up to the individual. All entries must be received by Oct. 15 and be accompanied by an official entry blank, which can be obtained by writing: Quilt Contest, Kentucky Historical Society, P.O. Box H, Frankfort, Ky. 40602-2108.

All of the blocks will be exhibited in the Kentucky History Museum in Frankfort, where they will be judged by a panel of independent judges and then returned to their owners. The winner of the cash award will be announced Nov. 6 during the society's annual meeting in Frankfort. The finished quilt is to be presented to the society at its annual meeting in November, 1988.

Allen said the department would have better morale if officers kept the cruisers around the clock. He later outlined other advantages, such as quicker response time if officers have immediate access to their cruisers. Allen also noted the cars should last longer if officers keep them at home to perform routine maintenance.

This was supported by Patrolman Chuck Akers, who said officers were delighted to be assigned the cruisers, and were enthusiastically doing repair and body work on them until they learned the city's plan to park the cars downtown when not in use. Akers said the officers were disheartened when told of those plans.

Councilman Adrian Blackburn asked Allen what the policy of other agencies is, such as the Kentucky State Police and Lexington's Metro Police, which assign a vehicle to each officer. Allen replied that those departments allow cars to be taken home after each shift. Sgt. Sue Blackburn added that the cruisers being seen, even if the officer is not on duty, serves as a deterrent to crime.

Callihan agreed on the deterrent factor, averring that he'd like to park a cruiser in front of his home, "even if it didn't have a motor in it."

Tackett said that not only would it be good for the officers to have the cruisers at their homes, it would be safer for the cars as well. To this, Latta asked, "Safer than parked behind the police station?" Tackett reasoned the officers could keep a better eye on the vehicles at their homes.

No decision was made on the matter, but James and City Attorney Larry Brown were instructed to compile liability information on the cars being driven outside city limits and by off-duty officers for the next council meeting.

In other business, council listened for about an hour to a presentation by a representative of the Kentucky Municipal League, Otis Fonda, regarding the city becoming a member of the league's insurance pool.

Fonda told council members that membership in the league would help make sure that the city's insurance premiums stay at a fairly even rate. He cited traditional cycles experienced by commercial insurance carriers and predicted "as sure as Sunday follows Saturday," commercial insurance rates will always increase. This, he said would not happen with KML coverage.

The KML works on the basis of member cities paying "contributions," which are de facto premiums. The league, which has only been operational since July 1, has a base of $300 thousand now, and has re-insurance to cover up to $1 million in claims.

Member cities will be charged the same basic rates, based on their size and the number of potential hazards. Premiums for each city will be based on these rates. Fonda said Prestonsburg's premiums will be calculated before the city council's August 24 meeting.

The largest city involved at present is Paintsville, though Danville is expected to decide today whether to join, and Frankfort will make a decision within 30 days, said Fonda.

Cities are not required to advertise for bids. James said a decision on an insurance carrier will be made at the next council meeting.

Mayor Ann Latta closed the meeting by presenting Fire Chief Thomas Blackburn with a proclamation in praise of the Prestonsburg Fire Department, and announced the week of August 8-15 to be "Firefighter Appreciation Week" here.

Council members Harry Ray Porter, Margie Osborne and Frank Adams were not present at the meeting.

MCC Picnic Honors Former Staff Member

By Tim Sizemore

The 15th annual Community Mental Health Picnic, held July 29 at Dewey Dam received a new name honoring the late Shirley Hughes. It is now The Shirley Hughes Mental Health Picnic.

Sponsored by Mountain Comprehensive Care and Eastern State Hospital, the picnic drew a crowd estimated at 400 people. Dr. Jerzy Wysocki, retired psychiatrist at Eastern State who served as master of ceremonies, led the tribute to Shirley Hughes, describing her as a great humanitarian.

Mrs. Hughes taught many years in the Floyd county school system, and for the last 12 years before her death in October, 1986, she was employed by Mountain Comprehensive Care as a social worker. She believed in community involvement and proved her commitment to this idea by being a friend to those needing help.

The picnic was a community venture with food and door prizes donated by local churches and the Golden Years Rest Home. Prestonsburg Job Corps students helped with the cookout.

Mike Vance, personnel director for Mountain Comprehensive Care, said that he was proud to be a part of the tribute and said of Mrs. Hughes "This is one way we can honor Shirley. It is a living memorial."

Stratton Branch Man Faces Drug Charges

A raid conducted by sheriffs deputies ended with the arrest of a Stratton Branch man and the netting of a quantity of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

Paul Crider, Jr., 19, of the Stratton Branch area, was arrested Wednesday at one p.m. after an undercover officer, the previous day, had made a pot buy at his home. The raid on Crider's home was conducted by officers George Hale, John Blackburn, Harold Johnson and Anthony Castle. A search of the premises netted four ounces of processed marijuana, some pills and drug-related paraphernalia. The deputies were acting on a search warrant which included the suspect's home and two adjoining out-buildings. Crider was immediately placed under arrest, charged with trafficking in a controlled substance and lodged in the county jail.

In two other unrelated incidents, deputies harvested several marijuana crops. About 30 plants were seized in all, 15 on Arkansas Creek and the remainder on Big Mud. No suspects have been arrested at this time.

Tiger Mosquito Seen As Disease Spreader

The U.S. arrival of a mosquito which efficiently spreads several diseases, and hundreds of visitors who may carry some of them, has the president of North America's largest group of professional entomologists concerned.

The Asian tiger mosquito is a notorious spreader, or vector, of several disease: among them, LaCrosse encephalitis, and four types of Dengue (pronounced ding-y) fever. Athletes and tourists attending the Pan-Am games may bring dengue fever into the country, providing a reservoir from which it could spread.

LaCrosse encephalitis is already here, but until now lacked as suitable a vector as the tiger mosquito.

Formally called, Aedes albopictus, the tiger mosquito was first found in the United States two years ago in Texas. Since then it has spread through the Southeast and up the Mississippi River into Kentucky and Indiana. It was when they reached Indiana that Fred Knapp became concerned.

Knapp, a University of Kentucky medical entomologist, is president of the 1,500-member American Registry of Professional Entomologists.

Tiger mosquitoes, unlike some other species, pass diseases along to their offspring. One mosquito which bites one diseased person could produce several hundred infected offspring. Although as few as 5 percent of the offspring survive, over the course of a summer more than a dozen generations can be produced. Thus, the potential spread from even a single mosquito is still quite large.

The Pan-Am games, to be held in Indianapolis, are the particular cause of Knapp's concern. The games will attract thousands of athletes and tourists from several countries where dengue fever is common. There was an outbreak of dengue fever in Cuba in 1981. More than 344,000 people came down with hemorrhagic fever, the worst type of dengue. There were 158 deaths from the disease. Cuba will be sending a delegation to the Pan-Am games, as will several other South American and Caribbean nations in which dengue fever is present.

The most recent case of the fever in the United States was in 1980. The last U.S. epidemic of the fever, also called breakbone fever because of its profoundly debilitating effects, was in Louisiana in 1945. Knapp's worry is that without appropriate concern and control measures among public health officials, the disease could become re-established in the United States.

Magoffin Back in Business With Partial Budget Order

Garbage, which for weeks has lined Magoffin county roads, will soon be picked up, and county employees will go back to work thanks to a ruling by Circuit Judge John R. Morgan, who Friday broke a stalemate of five weeks and passed a budget for Magoffin county.

In a controversial move, Morgan did in one fell swoop what the Magoffin fiscal court has failed to do since July 1—adopt at least a partial budget for the county. The result had essentially been the cessation of government services there since then.

The fiscal court has been ensnared in 2-2 deadlock, with Judge-Executive Paul Salyer and Magistrate Ray Adams opposing Magistrates Ell Howard and Joey Isaac. It is the second time in two years that a judge has stepped in to make sure the county has a budget. Last year the same men divided along the same lines. At that time, Howard and Isaac relented and agreed to Salyer's proposed budget only under the threat of jail.

State law prohibits county government from incurring any expenses without a budget, so when the fiscal court failed to adopt his proposed $1.7 million budget in July, Salyer ordered county services to stop, as well as cutting off electricity to most parts of the courthouse.

What can I, one citizen, do to make my schools better?

- Send your own children to school every day. Supervise their homework. Encourage them to learn. Remember, your children's education is free. It is their scholarship for the future.
- Thank a teacher. Kentucky's teachers work hard and care about their pupils. A kind word from you will make their tough job much easier.
- Vote. Elect the most qualified people you can find to the public offices responsible for the schools.
- Pay your taxes. Taxes support the schools.
- Keep yourself informed about school policies and the academic performance of your schools. Your local newspaper, radio and TV, and your school newspaper are good sources. Attend local school board meetings to hear for yourself what is being planned for your schools.
- Volunteer. Volunteers can help schools save money that can then be used to improve instructional programs. Some of the ways citizens and parents can help teachers to teach and children to learn are serving as lunchroom or library aides, helping load and unload school buses, making copies, tutoring, coaching in academics, and supporting academic booster clubs.
- Tell your elected representatives what you think of your schools. Share your ideas for improvement and reform.
- Join With other citizens to find ways to help the schools. Sometimes several voices are better than just one speaking alone.
- Don't give up. Creating an academically superior system of public education cannot be done overnight. Only sustained public insistence on high quality in teaching, learning, and management of the schools will yield a first-rate system of public education.
- Believe. Kentucky can become as famous for its public schools as it is for its bluegrass and green mountains.

If you need information, advice, or assistance related to public education, write to the superintendent of public instruction.

impasse during a fiscal court meeting last Thursday. On Wednesday, Morgan had ordered a budget be adopted by 6 p.m., Thursday, or court members would face contempt charges. The court remained deadlocked and, rather than sentencing the judge and magistrates to jail, Morgan adopted the budget himself.

Though Morgan's ruling paved the way for Magoffin county to resume business, there were those, including Floyd county Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, who were not pleased with the order. Stumbo, who attended the meeting, was quoted afterwards as saying "All he (Morgan) proved was that he could turn the lights and the air conditioning on."

Stumbo and two other area judge-executives, John B. Calliham, Martin county, and Homer Sawyer, Knott county, attended because of their concern that such a decision could have an adverse effect on the power of the judge-executive's office. According to state law, only judge-executives have the authority to submit a budget to the fiscal court.

Some of the problems in Magoffin fiscal court apparently stem from the desire of both sides to have greater control of road funds. During Thursday's meeting, Salyer, in a compromise attempt, suggested the county's road fund be divided four ways, with one quarter going to each magistrate and one to Salyer to use at his discretion throughout the county. Howard objected to the proposal, saying "I don't want him getting credit for roads in my district."

Another point of contention is the refusal of Howard and Isaac to vote compensation to Sheriff Chalmer Wireman for some of the expenses of his office. Wireman has said that without the county paying for his vehicle, a night dispatcher and expenses for transporting prisoners, he will have to close his office except from 9 to 4. He is said to be considering resigning.

Along with problems in the sheriff's office, the Magoffin county jail will remain closed for a while, forcing state police to continue their recent policy of taking drunk drivers home, rather than arresting them.

Other areas of controversy include funding the position of county finance officer; the road supervisor's salary; the wages of road laborers; a request for a $30,000 transfer account; and spending for crushed stone and gravel.

There is still concern that state officials won't approve the budget as passed by Morgan. His ruling did not provide for paying past due bills or legal advertising. The fiscal court owes $5,200 in past due advertising expenses, including routine newspaper advertisements for such things as county supplies, delinquent taxpayer lists and sample ballots for elections.

Such advertising is required by law. At Thursday's meeting the magistrates were told repeatedly by Department for Local Government officials they must at least budget funds for past expenses, but still they failed to do so. Salyer and Adams suggested budgeting $4,000 for past due advertising bills, and Howard and Isaacs countered with a proposal of $2,000. A vote was taken with the 2-2 deadlock continuing.

The Layne reunion will be at Tom's Creek Free Will Baptist Church dining hall, starting at 11 a.m. Everyone is welcome.

The Office of Veterans' Reemployment Rights provides reemployment assistance to veterans, reservists and members of the National Guard. During fiscal year 1985, the office advised approximately 202,000 individuals of their reemployment rights at time of separation from active duty, responded to approximately 30,000 inquiries, and opened and processed about 1,850 reemployment rights cases, according to the U.S. Labor Department.

MAY THE FLAME GROW BRIGHTER

Kosair Charities Grants $190,200 To Help Kids Hear Better

Kosair Charities is helping Kentucky Children to hear better through a $190,200 grant made to the Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children. According to William D. Minix, Executive Director of the Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children, the policy of that state agency is to conduct its programs in such a manner that no child under 21 years of age will be denied benefits of diagnosis and treatment of handicaps. Currently, treatment of hearing impaired children is a key area of development through the Commission.

Jack Proctor, Executive Director of Kosair Charities, explains that the grant which has been made to the Commission is vital to obtaining new equipment which is needed to improve and expand the Commission's ability to diagnose and treat hearing impaired children. "The good health of children is Kosair Charities' only concern", noted Proctor. When Polio epidemics were rampant in Kentucky, Kosair was a leader in helping kids and their parents to cope with the disease. Today, explains Proctor, Kosair is involved in many aspects of funding health diagnosis and care for children. As the official charitable arm of Kosair Shriners in Kentucky and Southern Indiana, Kosair Charities provided more than $2,000,000 for the care of Kentuckiana kids during 1986.

Grant Makes Equipment Purchase Possible

The grant which Kosair Charities has made will span a 3-year period and funds will be used to purchase and upgrade hearing diagnostic equipment throughout Kentucky.

Ironically, many parents do not realize their children can receive hearing help through the Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children. That help is available at 21 locations throughout Kentucky, as follows: Murray, Paducah, Madisonville, Hopkinsville, Bowling Green, Henderson, Owensboro, Danville, Elizabethtown, Harlan, Morehead, Somerset, Louisville, Covington, Ashland, Lexington, Pikeville, Maysville, Barbourville, Hazard and Whitesburg. Parents who do not reside in those immediate areas can receive help for hearing impaired children by traveling to the nearest location or by calling their county health department for advice and assistance.

Thomas M. Dunn, Director of the Commission's Speech and Hearing Services Program, has dedicated his entire career to helping kids hear better. "When I started work years ago, ears were absolutely horrible ... Mastoidectomies were rampant ... now we find problems early through our program", says Dunn. As a result of progress which has been made in diagnosing hearing problems early in a child's life, many youngsters are now leading normal and productive lives, according to experts in the field. The program which is partially funded by Kosair Charities and carried out by the Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children makes the future even more promising for hearing-impaired children.

Look For Early Signals In Children

Tom Dunn stresses that hearing impairment in children can be evidenced in many ways such as speech impediment, short attention span and related behavior. The team of highly skilled specialists which staff clinics throughout Kentucky also note that chronic ear aches, nasal and throat congestion and other complications of ears, nose and throat can be directly related to hearing impairment. All those factors are checked free at the Commission's clinics throughout Kentucky.

Parents Have Help Readily Available

The good news is that the Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children can diagnose hearing impairments and then follow up with parents and their family physicians to implement proper treatment. Family income (high or low) should not stand in the way of treatment for children who are suspected of having hearing problems, according to Mr. Minix of the Commission and Mr. Proctor of Kosair Charities. Treatment for children who cannot pay is free, while families who can pay for treatment are encouraged to seek private care or are charged on a sliding scale according to family income when private care sources are not available.

In conjunction with the Commission, most schools across Kentucky have hearing testing programs available to test children who are in Kindergarten and grades one (1) through three (3). Last year, hearing screening was provided for 233,532 Kentucky children.

For more information regarding hearing tests or treatment for your children contact the local Health Department office in your county, or write to: Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children, 982 Eastern Parkway, Louisville, Kentucky 40217. Those who wish to contribute to this program may do so by contacting: Kosair Charities, 982 Eastern Parkway, Louisville, Kentucky 40217.

Honored by SuperAmerica

Linda Risner, native of Prestonsburg and manager of the SuperAmerica store at 2129 South Main Street, in Akron, Ohio, was honored at a graduation dinner for completion of a week-long management training workshop, according to R.D. Davis, eastern region vice president of SuperAmerica's Southern Division.

During the workshop, participants were exposed to a broad spectrum of job-related activities including customer service, inventory control, merchandising, delegation, interpersonal communication, staff motivation and interviewing skills.

Risner joined the company in 1985 as a cashier.

Meeting Cancellation

The meeting of the Executive Committee of the Council on Higher Education, announced for August 10, 1987, was cancelled.

ARIES Week of August 16-22, 1987
(March 21-April 20)
 Do not foster any hopes where love and romance are concerned. You could become involved in a sordid affair.
TAURUS
(April 21-May 20)
 Pursue a new line of thought where finances are concerned. You need to make up with a former colleague who could hold the key to success.
GEMINI
(May 21-June 20)
 Take a trip to an adventurous place that is fascinating and where you can glean some information that would be valuable to a future partnership.
CANCER
(June 21-July 22)
 Your desire to make it all the way to the top will be aided and abetted by someone who admires your way of doing things. This is a good week to change your appearance.
LEO
(July 23-Aug. 22)
 A trip to a far-off place will give you something to think about. A career change is in the wind.
VIRGO
(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 Get in touch with one whose cultural background is not like your own. Learn from this individual and become more at one with the world of yesteryear.
LIBRA
(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 You will want to explore the artistic side of your nature now. Your ability to cope with the abstract will be put to the test.
SCORPIO
(Oct. 23-Nov. 22)
 You will find that life is passing you by and wish to do something about it. Don't listen to the voice of dissension while doing your bit for the future.
SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 A person whom you trust and admire could stab you in the back without warning. The shock you receive will remain with you for a long time to come.
CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 Don't believe everything you read and hear. Gossip will not be reliable. Be passive when you make comments about one who was once important to you.
AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 A forthcoming trip could stand in the way of common sense and your everyday job.
PISCES
(Feb. 19-March 20)
 An old friend will return bringing glad tidings and happy news. You will be pleased by what you read in the mail.

What animal is earning a reputation as a fertilizer, garbage disposer and source of protein? According to International Wildlife magazine, the earthworm, of which there are some 3,000 species, will eat through all kinds of organic waste and recycle them as fertilizer. In addition, for every ten pounds of garbage that earthworms consume, they produce a pound of meat that tastes like chicken. Although scattered tribes around the world have traditionally eaten worms, experts think it's unlikely the wormburger will ever replace the hamburger on our menus.

DON'T LET WINTER TAKE YOUR HEATING BILLS FOR A RIDE.

When temperatures take the plunge this winter, your heating bills needn't climb. Not if you're on Columbia's Budget Payment Plan.

The plan averages your bills into 12 equal payments, so there are no peaks and valleys because of the weather. Instead, the monthly amount stays the same... higher than you now pay in the summer, but a lot lower in the winter.

Rather than ups and downs, your gas bills stay on a smooth, even track all year 'round.

It's easy to be a Budget Payment customer, too. All you do is pay the "Budget Amount" on your August bill, and you'll be billed that amount every month. Your meter will continue to be read as usual, and each month's bill will continue to show the amount of gas you used. A review in March determines if your budget amount needs to be adjusted because of weather.

Another good idea: sign on for Checkfree® too. It automatically makes your gas payment from your checking account each month, so you save time, postage and check charges.

Join the Columbia Budget Payment Plan. You'll take the ups and downs out of your heating bills...and leave the high cost of winter behind.

Farm Fatalities At 5-Year Low

25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver B. Hughes, of Blue River, will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary, August 11. They were married August 11, 1962 by the late Rev. Forster Prater. Mrs. Hughes is the former Dollie Webb. They are the parents of four children, Lisa Reynolds and Gracie Hayes, of Prestonsburg, Teresa Hughes, of Lexington, Ricky Hughes, of Blue River. They also have three grandchildren.

Nineteen Kentuckians were killed in farm-related accidents during the first six months of 1987, the lowest toll for that period in at least the last five years.

The reduction in the state's farm fatality rate, down from 21 during the same period last year, 22 in 1985 and 30 in 1984, runs counter to the national trend, says David Finney, Kentucky Farm Bureau safety director.

While no exact nationwide count of farm deaths is made, the National Safety Council reported that farming bypassed mining as the most dangerous occupation in 1986. The council estimates that there were 52 deaths per 100,000 workers last year, just above the rate for mining, placed at 50 for every 100,000 workers.

Finney says the declining accidental death rate among Kentucky farmers may be due to a number of factors, including smaller numbers of working farmers, more attention to safety and increased use of protective equipment such as rollbars, reinforced cabs and seat belts on tractors.

If farm fatalities during the second half of this year come in at or below average, the 1987 total could wind up the lowest for a full year since Farm Bureau began monitoring agricultural deaths in 1983. Last year's toll was placed at 44.

"Of course anything could happen but I'm hoping for a further decline as we go into the most dangerous farming months—the harvest season," Finney said.

The 19 victims recorded from January through June died in accidents in 17 Kentucky counties. Eight of the fatal accidents involved a tractor, six were associated with the use of other farm equipment and three occurred during woodcutting. The cause of the remaining two deaths, including one victim struck by lightning, was classed as miscellaneous.

Although tractors retained their normal status as the most dangerous piece of farm equipment, the proportion of tractor-related deaths was substantially lower than in an earlier survey.

The eight fatalities involving tractors this year comprised 42 percent of the total of 19 deaths, substantially below last year's rate, when the first six months saw 14 tractor accidents, representing 66 percent of the total of 21.

Ages of the 1987 victims ranged from 5 to 88 years. Seventeen of the nineteen accidents occurred in the afternoon or evening hours, 18 of the victims were male.

Two counties—Madison and Grant—recorded two farm fatalities each in the six-month report. Counties with one fatality each included Union, Hardin, Cumberland, Wayne, Marion, Boyle, Franklin, Pendleton, Bracken, Mason, Lewis, Bourbon, Menifee, Jackson and Owsley.

HONORED WITH RECEPTION

Mrs. Maxine S. Bierman, Deputy Grand Matron of District Five, Order of the Eastern Star of Kentucky, was honored with a reception at her country home at East Point by her family, Sharon and Fred Bingham, and Karen and Jeff Bingham, Saturday evening, August 1.

The country motif was carried out throughout the home. The serving table was covered with a patchwork linen cloth, and had for its centerpiece, a crystal bowl holding an arrangement of summer sun heliopsis, intertwined with mountain ferns, and antique lace, and adorned with a floating candle.

Mrs. Bierman's daughters, Sharon and Karen Bingham, presided at the punch bowl, and guests helped themselves to a variety of hors d'oeuvres, fruit, and homemade cookies. Guests were Sharon Paschal, A.G.M., and Dorothy Rinert, Fairdale No. 560, District 1; Guy L. Overbey, A.G.P., and Mary Fynn Overbey, Madeline No. 64, Greenville District 14; Barbara Gullett, Grand Conductress, and Mattie Hall, Wheelwright; Lenore Gullett, P.G.M., Pauline Rice, Alois Rice, and Julia Castle, Paintsville, No. 520; Anna Ray Combs, G.C.C.M., Rose of Sharon, No. 570, District 6; Ruth B. Those 55 or Older Offered Job Training

The Department for Employment Services is recruiting unemployed people 55 years old and older for its new Job Training Partnership Act program.

"We believe as many as 10,144 people in the Floyd county area we serve could be served in this program," said Thomas Hereford, III, field office manager of the Prestonsburg office.

"People who have never worked outside the home before, who have been out of the labor force for many years or who have lost their jobs because of the economy are the ones our program is designed to help," he said. "Training is provided."

People interested in the program should visit the Prestonsburg Department for Employment Services office on North Lake Drive, or call 886-2396, and ask for Glenda Hall.

"Potential trainees who lack a high school diploma or who may need some refresher courses should not be reluctant to apply for this program," Mr. Hereford said. "There is something available for everyone. Presently, our enrollment is limited to 60, but if area residents demonstrate an interest in this type of program, we will make every attempt to expand our offerings."

Wins Scholarships

Brian Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wallace, of Prestonsburg, has been awarded a State Grant, Pell Grant, Athletic Scholarship for Baseball, General College Scholarship, a Christian Leadership Scholarship and a Baptist Matching Scholarship at Georgetown College, according to Dr. David Forman, Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid.

Brian, a 1987 graduate of Prestonsburg High School has participated in a number of school activities including president of junior and senior classes, National Honor Society, basketball and baseball, and received the Jack Frost Wells Memorial Award. Wallace is a member of the First Baptist Church of Prestonsburg.

Census Bureau To Collect Employment Data Here

The Census Bureau will collect data on employment and unemployment from area residents the week of August 17-22, according to William F. Hill, director of the bureau's Charlotte regional office.

The local data will contribute to August's national labor force picture to be released September 4th by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The national civilian unemployment rate for June of this year was 6.1 percent. The last time the unemployment rate was this low as in December 1979 when it was 5.9 percent.

The Census Bureau's Current Population Survey collects the employment and unemployment data each month from approximately 120,000 people in 57,000 sample households. Information supplied by individuals is kept confidential by law. Only statistical totals are published.

Perkins Announces Funding For Employment Programs

WASHINGTON—Congressman Carl C. Perkins has announced that this week the House of Representatives has approved legislation which funds the Rural Concentrated Employment Program at a level of $8 million for the coming year. "This program is only available in one congressional district in each of four states—Kentucky, Wisconsin, Montana and Minnesota. Kentucky has been able to receive a lion's share of the appropriated money in the past," said the Congressman. "I will continue to see that this practice is continued." The money that is appropriated is allocated to the various programs that are now part of the Job Training Partnership Act, JTPA. The primary goal of JTPA and the Rural Concentrated Employment Programs has been to set up programs at the local level that will help to provide work and educational experience that lead to permanent employment. Some of the programs that the Rural Concentrated Employment Program fund's will help to continue include the On the Job Training Program, Public Sector Training, which attempts to place people in local agencies, Dropout Prevention, and Joint Classroom Training with Vocational Education programs. "I am pleased to see that we will be receiving this money," stated Perkins. "I think it will continue to advance our employment goals in Eastern Kentucky."

“On The Shoulders of Giants:” SIR ISAAC NEWTON AND THE PRINCIPIA

By WILLIAM G. SCHULZ, Smithsonian News Service

When a bout of plague swept through England in the mid-1660s, anyone who could fled to the countryside in hope of escaping the dreaded Black Death. Among them was a Cambridge University scholar who returned on several occasions to his ancestral estate where he spent many hours in the solitude of his garden. One day, the story goes, he watched an apple fall from a tree, an event that inspired one of the young man's most profound insights—that the force of gravity extends everywhere.

Although researchers today are unable to confirm the story, “We know that in this period Isaac Newton did a lot of preliminary work on gravitation and calculus,” Dr. Paul Theerman, a historian of science at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., says. But the story's accuracy is a minor point. For Newton eventually committed his ideas to paper and, 300 years ago, in July 1687, his Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy—more popularly known as the Principia from the original Latin text—was published, setting off a revolution in physics and creating a still-valid model for successful scientific investigation.

In the Principia, Newton proposed his well-known Laws of Motion: that acceleration is proportional to force, that objects have inertia (that is, once put into motion they continue moving in a straight line) and that every action causes an equal and opposite reaction. He also set forth his Law of Universal Gravitation. It states—in mathematical form—that the force of attraction that exists between all bodies is greater between heavier objects than lighter ones and that gravity is stronger the closer objects are to one another. The objects Newton had in mind included the sun, moon, Earth and other planets. He applied the mathematical concepts of Principia to accurately explain for the first time the motions of these bodies, to determine the shape of the Earth and to plot the elliptical orbits of comets.

Newton once wrote that he “stood on the shoulders of Giants,” meaning that his work drew from other great minds in history, such as Copernicus, Descartes, Galileo and Kepler. Likewise, Newtonian physics has been built upon by scientists over the last three centuries, including Albert Einstein and his work on relativity and today's investigators of quantum physics. Newton's theories provided the framework for these developments.

This year, scientists and historians are remembering Newton and his greatness in a variety of ways. At the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, for example, an exhibition, “Newton and the Principia: 300 Years,” is on display through Sept. 23. The exhibition portrays the life and influence of Newton through more than 70 rare books, manuscripts, prints, astronomical instruments and other artifacts.

The Smithsonian, in conjunction with the University of Maryland in College Park, also sponsored a recent symposium that brought together a mix of scientists and historians to discuss Newton's life and work. The Principia and its influence were a major theme of that conference.

“Today, the Principia is more honored than read,” Dr. I. Bernard Cohen, an emeritus professor of history from Harvard University and one of the symposium's participants, says. The majority of the text is mathematical and, “a formidable exercise, even for mathematicians.” Various publishers, Cohen notes, have given explanatory introductions of translations. But, “the Principia is still sometimes thought of as an exercise in Greek geometrics.” In reality, the work is completely filled with the calculus—a branch of mathematics Newton invented to plot the change in relationships of objects in motion.

“The physics overshadows the calculus—unless you're a mathematician you don't pick up on it,” Theerman adds. “Newton's general course of study was in logic and geometry, but his primary interest was mathematics.”

“He was one of the top physicists of all time,” Theerman continues, “and probably one of the best minds in human history.” After a childhood that was materially comfortable, yet emotionally unsettling—his father died months before Newton's birth in 1642, and his mother left the child with her mother to live with her new husband—he entered Trinity College at Cambridge University.

At Cambridge, the studious Newton was out of place with a student body infamous for carousing. His hard work paid off, though, when Newton was named a full professor at age 27 with an endowed position that provided him a comfortable salary. With minimal teaching duties, he had the time to pursue his interests in depth.

Newton's wide-ranging intellect also led him to study theology and the pseudoscience of alchemy, pursuits that seem far afield of today's scientific disciplines. But a man of Newton's intelligence would not have studied alchemy if he didn't think it was important, says Dr. B.J.T. Dobbs, another symposium participant and a historian at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. He had access to the many systems of thought that arose during the Renaissance which he could hardly ignore. And Newton did have a purpose, she says—to find a unified truth of God and nature. “He investigated everything around him and used every possible resource.”

Although nothing of scientific merit came from Newton's chemical studies, one symposium participant, Dr. Peter Spargo of the University of Cape Town in South Africa, says that Newton's work in this area gives a sense of his dedication to his studies. Newton spent his own money on chemicals and equipment, Spargo says. He was systematic and thorough with his work, using careful measures and paying attention to temperatures.

One of Newton's greatest stumbling blocks, Spargo says, was obtaining pure materials from apothecaries. As a chemist himself, Spargo adds, “I have the most vivid images of the horror of laboratories of that day.” Ventilation was poor, he says, and furnaces created unbearable heat. “Only a chemist could understand the drive—the passion to work under such conditions.”

In the latter part of Newton's life he devoted more time to theology, Theerman says. “He was great friends with the Enlightenment philosopher John Locke,” he continues, and throughout Newton's writings, his interest in how God relates to the natural world is evident. Newton once wrote, “It is the perfection of God's works that they are all done with the greatest simplicity. He is the God of order and not of confusion.”

“He was one of the top physicists of all time, and probably one of the best minds in human history.”

After publication of the Principia, Newton's ideas spread quickly throughout England and Europe. The event touched off professional criticism—most notably, a dispute with mathematician Gottfried Wilhelm von Leibniz who claimed to have invented the calculus. Newton retreated to the solitude of his work, but he had become a public figure and was elected a member of Parliament in 1689. Later, in 1699, he was selected to head the London Mint where he oversaw the production and issue of a new set of English coinage. Benjamin Franklin once sought him out—in vain—on a trip to England.

In 1703, Newton became president of the Royal Society of London, a group interested in studying and promoting science. One of its more prestigious members was the famed astronomer Edmond Haley, who had urged Newton to write the Principia. In fact, the Smithsonian's Theerman says, Newton found the various disputes over his work so upsetting that his supporters often had to encourage him to publish.

This was true when Newton published his second monograph, The Opticks. In some ways, that work—which dealt in part with the nature of light—received a better reception and had a wider audience, Theerman says. It was written in English, rather than Latin, and contained more “kitchen physics”—experiments instead of mathematical proofs. One speaker at the symposium suggested that, in this monograph, Newton caught a glimpse of particle physics. Light is made up of atomic particles known as photons, and Newton showed that white light results from combining all other colors of light in the visible range of the spectrum.

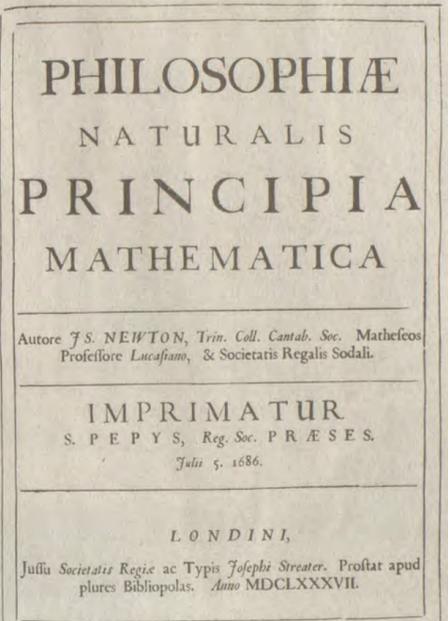

Despite his prominent social position—he was knighted in 1705—Newton never married and was somewhat of a recluse, Theerman continues. “He was a very serious and studious person, and could be difficult, especially if convinced he was right. Newton supposedly laughed only once in his life.” He died in 1727 at age 84.

Aside from Newton's idiosyncrasies—he was also somewhat prone to making mathematical errors, such as one recently discovered in the Principia by a University of Chicago physics student—the impact of his work remains. The Principia, Theerman says, is still valuable reading. Newton's system of mathematical proofs, he says, “had a long-lasting effect on the ‘philosophy’ of physics—the way science is done.”

Canning in '87...

New Answers To Old Questions

Home canning may be as old as the hills, but each year more research comes to light regarding the safest and best way to put up your fresh fruits and vegetables. Fudeko Maruyama, Extension foods and nutrition specialist with the UK College of Agriculture, recently returned from a canning workshop at Pennsylvania State University where she learned the latest USDA-approved canning techniques. Here, she answers several questions raised at the workshop.

Question: New directions for jams and jellies from General Foods say that it is not necessary to process. They recommend simply inverting the jars. Is it safe?

Answer: There is risk of spoilage, especially from mold growth if you just invert jars (presumably to sterilize the lids). Also, if contents spill you may get burned.

Question: I'm shopping for a boiling-water canner. What features are important?

Answer: If you plan to can in quart jars, be sure to buy a canner deep enough to allow water to cover the tops of quart jars. A smooth bottom (not ridged) allows quicker, more efficient heating if using an electric range. Avoid too large a canner. The diameter should not be more than four inches greater than the burner.

Question: I've heard that home canning or freezing doesn't save any money. Is that true?

Answer: A rule of thumb is that if you purchase produce at a grocery or super-market to can or freeze it is not economical even if you don't count your time and effort. If you have a garden or if you can purchase good quality produce at a discount you can save money by preserving at home.

Question: I can't find rubber rings for my old-fashioned zinc caps. Are there any substitutes?

Answer: Zinc caps have been phased out and rubber rings are no longer made. Some leftover rings may still be available in stores, but two piece lids are replacing the old zinc caps.

Question: I like to can tomatoes in my pressure canner because it saves time and I don't have to fool with a big canner full of boiling water. Is five pounds pressure for 10 minutes adequate?

Answer: No. You should process 10 minutes at 10 pounds pressure.

Question: Why does my sauerkraut turn pink?

Answer: The color is due to an enzyme produced by yeast in your kraut. Presence of yeast indicates your kraut is spoiling.

Question: I like to make old-fashioned dill pickles that cure for eight weeks, but my first batch spoiled. Why?

Answer: Early cucumbers (and cabbage) sometimes don't have enough sugar to ferment (cure) properly, causing the product to spoil. By August the vegetables should be fine for this use.

Political Humorist Is Returning to KET

From Lt. Col. Oliver North in suburban Washington, D.C. to Jim and Tammy Bakker in California, political satirist Mark Russell sends his comedic jabs coast to coast on his next comedy special on KET. Tune in for the "Mark Russell Comedy Special" Wednesday, August 26 at 9 on KET.

Fans in the Kentucky area will have the opportunity this fall to see Russell, armed with his trademark baby grand piano, take aim at the greats and would-be-greats with comedic bits and caustic one-liners. The Friends of KET, an organization promoting and supporting The Kentucky Network, will present "Another Gala Evening With Mark Russell" Friday, September 25 at the Drawbridge Inn, Ft. Mitchell. Tickets are available by calling KET at (606) 233-3000.

Russell appeared in Kentucky last year to a sell-out audience when the Friends of KET hosted a similar event in Lexington.

Legendary Magic Of Houdini Told

The magic and mystique of legendary magician and escape artist Harry Houdini comes to life when "Houdini!" encores Wednesday, August 26 at 9:30 p.m. on KET.

Houdini was born more than 100 years ago, but the legend of the man who turned magic into an art form continues.

In his early teens, an American named Ehrich Weiss read a biography about a well-known French illusionist, Robert Houdin. As a youngster, Weiss had dabbled in magic acts, but reading this book did the trick. Weiss changed his first name to Harry, added an "i" to Houdin for a last name, dubbed himself "The King of Cards" and took his show on the road.

Following Houdini's death, a 1928 biography influenced a young magician just as Houdini had been transformed many years earlier. The magician was Sidney Radner and he talks about his memories in "Houdini!"

Also interviewed for the special are Houdini's niece, Marie Blood of Pinehurst, N.C.; Harry Blackstone, Jr., television star and magician, whose father was Houdini's contemporary and sometime rival; and Henry Muller, owner of the Houdini Magical Hall of Fame in Niagara Falls, Canada.

"Houdini!" is produced by Wisconsin Public Television.

The United States produces more than twice as many cars each year as babies.

GS Troop Leaders Need in County

Leaders for Girl Scout troops in Floyd county are needed on all levels, and the Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council is asking local volunteers. The Council includes 54 other counties in the state.

Girl Scouting is an organization based on ethical values that opens up a world of opportunity for youth, working in partnership with adult volunteers. It is a continuous adventure in learning that offers girls a broad range of activities which address both their current interests and their future roles as women. Girls are introduced to the worlds of science, the arts, the outdoors and people.

Those who have never been a leader and fear they may not know how should realize the only qualifications necessary are the desire to work with girls and a willingness to give time. The Council will help with the rest by giving training in the areas of basic leadership, outdoor skills and other program enrichment.

Volunteer leaders are needed for all age levels. These include Daisy Girl Scouts, kindergarten or age 5; Brownie Girl Scouts, first through third grades; Junior Girl Scouts, third through sixth grades; Cadette Girl Scouts, sixth through ninth grade; and Senior Girl Scouts, ninth through twelfth grades.

Those who would be willing to be a Troop Leader in Floyd county or to volunteer for another position such as assistant troop leader, driver for field trips, making phone calls or teaching a craft, contact Wilma Castle, Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council Field Executive, at (606) 789-7115.

Annette Newsome Turner

Annette Newsome Turner was born Sept. 25, 1921, at Ligon, Ky. and died July 28, 1987 at McDowell Appalachian Hospital.

She was the daughter of the late Milford Newsome and Dona Hall Newsome and the oldest of their three children. Her brother, Elmer "Bub" Newsome, of Fairborne Ohio, and her sister, Leviathan Newsome Jones, of Prestonsburg, Ky., survive her.

Annette was reared on Left Beaver Creek, was a high school graduate and attended Caney College.

On August 12, 1939, she married Arnold Turner and, true to her vow, faithfully loved and served him "until death did they part."

From this marriage came four children, Donise Turner, Joan Chaffins, Anita Gibson, and Arnold Turner, Jr., all of whom she loved to the uttermost, sparing not a single act of love or sacrifice for them while in this life.

She equally loved and accepted as her own her son-in-laws, Phillip Chaffins, and David Gibson, and her daughter-in-law, Libby Turner.

In the latter years she fully enjoyed loving and doing for her seven grandchildren, Brian Gibson, Anthony Gibson, Lisa Chaffins, Lora Chaffins, Brent Turner, Ryan Turner and Joe Turner, and one granddaughter-in-law Michelle Gibson.

Factual details of Annette's life cannot begin to describe her. As a wife to Arnold, she was in every way the wife she vowed to be. As a mother, she tirelessly and sacrificially gave of her time, patience, and understanding, teaching them by example what a mother's love really means.

As a grandmother, lovingly called "Mamaw," she was always a source of joy, strength, and security—always knowing what each one needed as they spent their special time with her.

During Annette's life, she labored at various tasks and jobs, concluded her working career in 1970, after working 16 years at the hospital now known as McDowell Appalachian Hospital. Along her way in life, she met and earned the friendship of countless co-workers, neighbors, and acquaintances, who mourn her passing with the family.

At this time, comfort and hope is given by the fact that in 1985 Annette accepted Jesus Christ as her saviour and served Him as Lord for the rest of her life. In this life, she became a member of the First Baptist Church of McDowell, but now being "absent from the body," she is "present with the Lord."

As the Apostle Paul wrote, the hope and joy of those who survive is the expectation of seeing her again, in the "presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at His coming."

The family wishes to thank each and every person, who through word or deed showed kindness to Annette in her illness, or to the family. So much was done by so many, that we could not attempt to name them. However, a special thanks is expressed for the extraordinary compassion and care for Annette shown by McDowell Appalachian Hospital's doctors, nurses and staff. Finally our love and appreciation for those special friends and church family at the First Baptist Church of McDowell will not fade, for your loving kindness.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of daughter, Lorraine Hamilton, who passed away July 4, 1949.

Thirty-eight years have passed and gone, but darling your sweet memory still lives on within us, for you did not go alone. Your sweet voice and smiling face is something time cannot erase. You were so young, just ten—but Jesus said come and live with Him. You budded on earth to bloom in Heaven. You are not forgotten, loved one, nor will you ever be as long as life and memory last, we will remember thee.

Written by your mother, Cecelia Hamilton.

Sadly missed by mother and sister.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Arnold Hunter
September 29, 1922-August 10, 1986

As we walked down life's cold pathway, We felt no pain or care, For though we often stumbled, we knew Our dad was there.

To comfort, lead, and guide us, His love a warm embrace, Sheltering us through all we did, A light in a dark place.

His faith in God and mankind, held strong through stormy days, No disappointment, heartache, his goodness mar or faze.

His hands though worn and calloused, Carried us down each our ways. His eyes watched o'er us ever, A light in a dark place

And though that light has now been dimmed, And happiness seems gone, Through pain and sorrow, suffering, we slowly walk alone.

We will be ever thankful, for time cannot erase. Our gift of love from the great man, A light in a dark place.

"None knew thee but to love thee"

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MINE

Pursuant to Application Number 436-0074 Revision No. 1

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that 3-M Development Company, Inc., P.O. Box 196, Virgie, Kentucky 41572, has filed an application for a revision to a surface coal mining and reclamation operation. The operation disturbs approximately 18.2 surface acres and will underlie an additional 6.6 acres. The operation is located 1.6 miles northwest of Thomas in Floyd county.

The proposed operation is approximately 1.2 miles northwest from KY 194's junction with KY 881 and located 0.1 miles east of Mill Branch. The latitude is 37° 41' 57". The longitude is 82° 36' 25". The surface area is owned by New South Coal Company, Gene Leslie, and Cline Burchett heirs.

The proposed operation is located on the Thomas U.S.G.S. 7 1/2 minute quadrangle map. The operation uses the contour strip and auger method of mining. The application includes a proposed land use change from the forest pre-mining land use to a fish and wildlife habitat post-mining land use.

The application has been filed for public inspection at the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Prestonsburg Regional Office, 503 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653. Written comments, objections, or requests for a formal hearing must be filed with the Director of the Division of Permits, #2 Hudson Hollow, U.S. 127 South, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601, and received within 30 days of today's date.

Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: My 70-year-old aunt has cancer of the pancreas. Her doctors have advised that she have no treatment for the time being while she is feeling well, but mentioned doing surgery called "by-pass" or giving her chemotherapy if she begins to have symptoms. Why can't they just remove the pancreas and cure her? How will a by-pass help her?

ANSWER: Surgery to remove the pancreas is seldom advised for the treatment of pancreatic cancer. This surgery is usually not well tolerated by the patient and only rarely provides a cure.

Because the pancreas is located deep within the abdomen and the patient does not have early symptoms, pancreatic cancer is rarely found in an early stage when it could be completely removed and cured by surgery. The operation to remove the pancreas is extensive and has a high risk of severe side effects. The only candidates for this procedure are patients whose disease is confined to the area of the pancreas called the head, and who are in good enough health to withstand the rigors of this surgery. Even in this case, the cure rate is very low—the five year cure rate is less than 10 percent.

The "by-pass" surgery, often advised for patients in your aunt's situation, will not extend her life but may make her more comfortable. Cancer of the pancreas can cause a blockage of the flow of bile from the bile duct. This blockage can cause symptoms such as jaundice (yellowing of the skin) often with severe itching. A by-pass reroutes the bile from the first section of the small intestine to the next section of the small intestine.

While chemotherapy and radiation treatments will not cure or control this disease, they may ease the symptoms when the disease begins to progress. At that time, your aunt's doctors may advise treatment for her, if it will achieve more comfort.

It is understandable that the advice to delay treatment is upsetting. Yet, your aunt's doctors must weigh the risks and benefits of the available treatment options. When the chance of cure is so low, the comfort of the patient takes on the greatest meaning in planning the treatment.

'Home Fires' may be the best cable movie yet

By Frank Lovece

In "Home Fires," as in real life, nothing much happens but a lot goes on. This Showtime production is nowhere near as frenetic as the average TV movie, and in spirit is closer to feature films than to TV. The four-hour, two-part drama debuts Sunday and Monday, Aug. 16 and 17.

Guy Boyd

"Home Fires" traces a few days in the life of Charlie Ash (Guy Boyd), a harried attorney whose last name is most appropriate. In court, his integrity finds no favor with a judge whose mind is already made up. His first wife has gone insane and phones him with dire warnings from the asylum. His much younger new wife, Cath (Amy Steel), is rapidly growing old trying to raise his three children. And the children, unlike typical TV kids, are just trying to get by as best they can.

Like a good novel, the movie (written by Gill Dennis) takes its time to define each character separately. When their lives converge after the first half-hour, you already know them individually. And then they interact so believably that it's almost like eavesdropping on a real family.

But this is drama, not real life, and drama requires conflict. While most TV shows (and most movies, for that matter) concentrate on visual outer conflict, "Home Fires" ingeniously presents the characters' inner conflicts. Cath struggles with an unwanted suitor she'd regretfully slept with. Elder son Sam (Max Perlich) carries an inarticulate frustration with school and family. And Charlie tries to build a negligence case despite contradictions, misinformation and shredded documents.

Because "Home Fires" doesn't move as rapidly as a TV movie, it takes a few minutes to appreciate its rhythm. It does drag at times — director Michael Uno includes extended shots of cars turning into driveways and people pulling things out of envelopes, rather than cutting right to the point.

But his leisurely pace is deceptive. Soon enough, the cuts and transitions between the characters and their lives takes on the hectic but muted rhythm of everyday comings and goings. At four hours over two nights, "Home Fires" is not too long. What it is, perhaps, is the best made-for-cable movie yet.

SOAP BEAN

On 'GL,' Kacie Wesley has two careers at once

By Marie Michaels

For Kacie Wesley, who plays singer Chelsea Reardon on "Guiding Light," there was never any question that she was destined for a show-business career.

Kacie Wesley

While in high school in Morganfield, Ky., she acted in school plays. And at age 18 she had already performed at Nashville's Grand Ole Opry.

"Singing at the Grand Ole Opry was one of the biggest thrills of my life," Wesley says. "I even remember the songs I sang - 'You Ain't Woman Enough to Take My Man' and 'Satin Sheets.'"

She is determined to have a singing career along with her acting career. She recently cowrote "Any Way You Want Me," a song that she performs with pop-soul star Bobby Womack on his latest album. And her musical style is gradually changing from country-western to pop.

"I'm going to continue to write music and to sing," she says. "Hopefully I'll do some serious recording someday."

For "GL," Wesley recently recorded "Don't Stop Dreamin'," which is used to complement romantic scenes on the soap. "The song is appropriate for the show because all of the characters in Springfield are dreamers," she says. "Don't Stop Dreamin'" also served as the soundtrack for a tribute to the late cast member Charita Bauer during the show's 50th anniversary celebration.

This month, Wesley goes to California to record four songs for a demo tape, which she hopes will land her a recording contract. At the same time, though, she is putting a lot of effort into her role on "GL."

"I still find it hard settling into the routine of a soap," she confides. "The biggest thing you have to overcome is the fact that there's so much to learn. But when you get over that anxiety, it becomes easier and easier. You eventually find your niche and make it work for you."

"I want Chelsea to be human, not plastic," she adds. "I'd like her to be an independent woman of the '80s. I want her to be strong and to believe in herself and her music, and not to have to live through her boyfriend (Philip Spaulding, played by Grant Alexander), as she does now."

"But all of this is really up to the people who write 'GL,'" she admits.

Laurie Anderson meets alter ego on 'Off Center'

By Paul Elie

Performance artist Laurie Anderson has directed movies, made records, published a book, scored a film, topped the British pop charts, plugged American Express, and starred in a seven-hour mixed media project with a scope as broad as its title: "United States."

Laurie Anderson

So one might think that filming ten one-minute prologues for "Alive from Off Center," a PBS showcase for off-the-wall artists, would be easy. She could knock them off in the morning before she cranks up her plexiglas violin, right? Wrong. Anderson has complicated matters by casting a most challenging co-star: a video clone of herself. This week the pair introduce Dibble and Kriegman's "Operation X," airing Monday, Aug. 17. (Check local listings.) "Creating your clone is very narcissistic, isn't it?" Anderson says. "It seems like such a coy thing to do. It's like constructing your alter ego."

Psychoanalysts take note: Her alter ego is a tacky, overweight man ("maybe a shoe salesman," she says). She films the two roles separately, then electronically distorts the clone until he looks like an image from a fun-house mirror. Artist and clone meet in the editing room.

"We traded a bit, but mostly I tried to be the straight man," Anderson says. One prologue features the clone at a recording session. In another, he hosts an ersatz "Masterpiece Theater."

Anderson is often the only human performer in her work. Projects such as "Alive From Off Center" make her eager to return to live performance. "Television is a lonely medium," she explains. "You make it alone, and you watch it with two or three other people, or alone. It's more exciting when people are there."

•"Operation X" is a surreal half-hour created by video artists Teddy Dibble and Mitchell Kriegman. The pair attempt a kind of comedy that is specific to TV, not borrowed from the stage or the movies. While their main inspiration is '50s comedian Ernie Kovacs, this show also reflects the influence of video sicko Michael O'Donoghue ("Saturday Night Live"). "It's like a video midway," Dibble says, "all sorts of images, with no sense of their logical relation." Says Kriegman: "It's like a bad dream."

HEAD OF THE CLASS

Brian Robbins plays the good-looking, oh-so-cool Eric in ABC's "Head of the Class," airing WEDNESDAY, AUG. 19.

ASK TONI

Remember this show? What happened to it?

By Toni Reinhold

About ten years ago there was a show about a divorced mother and her son and daughter. The son had two good friends, one a big guy and the other a neat-looking guy. What was the name of the show? Did Tempestt Bledsoe ("The Cosby Show") play the daughter? - S.S., Corbin, Ky.

Nelson (l.), Berry

You must be thinking of "What's Happening!" an ABC sitcom that aired from 1976 to 1979. It starred Ernest Thomas as Roger "Raj" Thomas (the son), Fred Berry as Rerun (the big guy) and Haywood Nelson as Wayne (the neat-looking guy). Mabel King played Mrs. Thomas, and Danielle Spencer played the daughter, Dee. Tempestt Bledsoe was not in the cast. You might also remember Shirley (Shirley Hemphill), who worked at Rob's, the soda shop where the characters hung out. "What's Happening Now!" an all-new version of the series starring all the original cast members but Berry and King, has aired in syndication since 1985.

Where was Tony Curtis born? What is his real name? - P.B., Santa Barbara, Calif.
 Curtis was born in New York City on June 1, 1925. His given name is Bernard Schwartz. His father, Mono Schwartz, was also an actor. Curtis' New York accent is most evident in one of his early films, "The Black Shield of Falworth" (1954).

I heard that Mel Brooks is married to a famous actress. Which one? - A.T., Mankato, Minn.

Brooks married actress Anne Bancroft in 1964. She is best known for her roles in the films "The Miracle Worker" (1962) and "The Graduate" (1967). They have a son, Maximilian. Brooks also has three children from an earlier marriage.

What happened to Johnny Olsen, the announcer for "The Price Is Right"? Who is the new announcer? Where can we write to the show? - R.G., Idaho Falls, Idaho
 Olsen died and was replaced by Rod Roddy. Send mail to the show at CBS Television City, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036.

(Send your letters to Toni Reinhold, United Feature Syndicate, 200 Park Ave., Room 602, New York, N.Y. 10166. Due to the large volume of mail, personal replies cannot be given.)

Everybody's Science
To Balance Blood Sugar, Chromium Swings Both Ways

Your body needs chromium to keep blood sugar from going too high; people knew that. But studies at the Agricultural Research Service show that chromium also keeps it from dropping too low.

Nutrition scientist Richard A. Anderson said, "I don't know of any other nutrient that affects both high and low blood sugar. In fact, I don't know of any drug that raises low blood sugar."

In studies with 76 healthy subjects, Anderson noticed that extra chromium would raise blood sugar levels. He tested his new theory with 8 women being treated for low blood sugar at Georgetown University Hospital in Washington, D.C. They were given chromium supplements and voila! Their blood sugar normalized.

Low blood sugar can make you feel like a wet rag—drowsy, shaky, sweaty, fatigued and mentally dull. This happens a few hours after eating and is not so much a result of how far blood sugar drops but how fast it does. The standard treatment: eat smaller meals more frequently and avoid a lot of sugar.

But you can get chromium from fresh fruits and vegetables, dairy products, whole wheat, meat and beer (yes, we said beer).

"Most of beer's chromium comes from the brewery's vats and pipes of stainless steel, which is 18% chromium," Anderson said.

To keep chromium at a healthy level, he isn't recommending running out to the local pub; he suggests eating a well-balanced diet and avoiding the "chromium thieves": refined sugar and strenuous exercise (like distance running) when the body isn't used to it.

Most Americans get less chromium than the minimum suggested amount, he said.

The first symptom of a deficiency is increased insulin, followed by an abnormally high or low blood sugar level and elevated cholesterol and triglycerides, which increase the risk of heart disease. Anderson is quick to note, however, that these are symptoms of a host of other problems.

Trace elements like chromium haven't been studied much until the last few decades. Anderson's work is part of an overall research thrust in ARS to find out exactly what trace elements are doing for us. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture)

Aids and Cancer

AIDS—the word alone strikes dread into many people. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome has already claimed over 19,000 lives in the United States alone. Although there are a number of promising treatments, there is still no cure.

The cause of AIDS appears to be a virus called HTLV-III. But there is a mystery about AIDS as well. A hundred people are infected with this virus for every one who succumbs to the illness.

Scientists supported by the National Foundation for Cancer Research (NFCR) are investigating the puzzling phenomenon. Their belief is that another virus may be needed to simultaneously attack the victim for full-scale AIDS to develop. This other virus may be HCMV (human Cytomegalo virus), a member of the Herpes family. This virus has also been linked to several forms of cancer.

Dr. Leonard Rosenthal, NFCR project director at Georgetown University, is investigating the link between the two viruses in AIDS victims and in those who have been infected by HTLV-III but have not yet succumbed to the disease. The result could be an important step forward in understanding AIDS, and cancer as well.

The National Foundation for Cancer Research is a private, non-profit organization based in Bethesda, Md. With the help of donors nationwide, it has allocated more than $50 million to basic cancer research over the last decade.

Hackworth-Rice Wed

Jodi Carole Hackworth and Mr. Mark F. Rice, Jr., were united in marriage May 23, in the First Christian Church of Salyersville by Rev. Chester Hatton. The bride is the daughter of Vivian Tackett, of Salyersville, and Joe E. Hackworth, of Riceville.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Donald Paul and Shireen Salyer, of Nashville, Tennessee.

She was escorted by her stepfather, Walter D. Tackett. Her maid of honor was Gwen Hannah and bridesmaids were Rebecca Carpenter, Dee Dee Brown, Cassandra Stone, and junior-bridesmaid was Tara Lee Branham.

Ashley and Lindsey Brown and Britany Carpenter were the flowergirls, with Brad Howard as ring bearer.

Tim Braham served as best man with Dean Reed, Chuck Tackett, Tommy Carpenter, and Bruce Fraley as ushers.

Mrs. Jayne Hensley presided at the guest book.

A reception followed at the Magoffin county High School cafeteria. Assisting were Brenda Prater, Benita Connelley, Kathy Barnett, Tammy Dyer, and Kristina Howard.

The bride is employed by Magoffin County Board of Education. The groom is a student of Morehead State University. They are residing at Salyersville.

Some Alcoholics Don't Want Help They Need From Others

To appease his wife after his second drunk driving arrest, George reluctantly agreed to accompany her to an alcoholism treatment center for a consultation.

George figured that after letting the therapist slap his hand, he'd promise to be a good boy and be on his way. But when George arrived at the center, he was surprised to find more than a therapist waiting for him. In addition to his wife, were two grown sons, his boss, and Bert, his long-time friend.

They calmly told George exactly how his drinking had affected their lives.

His sons recalled how they'd avoided bringing friends home for fear they'd find him drunk. His boss detailed George's declining work performance. Bert told of how he and other friends were excluding George from social functions because of his unpredictable behavior.

But his wife described the most painful incidents of all—the hurtful arguments, their declining sex life, her constant fear he would drink and drive once too often and kill himself.

George listened with teeth clenched, feeling he'd been ambushed about a problem that "just wasn't that bad." But after brooding for a week over what he'd heard, he decided that maybe he did need to seek help and entered the treatment program the same day.

George is only one of the countless alcoholics and drug abusers for whom the downward spiral of substance abuse has been reversed through intervention. An intervention is a way for people concerned about someone's drinking or drug problem to join together and confront that person in a loving, but firm manner.

Usually it's a family's last desperate attempt to get the substance abuser to seek help after angry accusations and empty ultimatums have failed.

An intervention usually begins with a family member—most often a spouse—reporting to a treatment center therapist that a loved one with a problem with drugs or alcohol has resisted seeking help. The therapist will then assist in assembling the people most affected by that person's drinking or drug use. Those experiencing their own substance abuse problems are excluded.

Each person is then carefully instructed on how to describe specific examples of how the alcoholic or drug abuser's problem has affected his or her life. Accusations or generalizations are prohibited. For instance, instead of blaming him or her for always being late, group members should cite examples of when he or she missed an important meeting or forgot a child's birthday because of drinking or drug use.

Each group member must also be willing to clearly state what the consequences will be if the alcoholic or drug abuser won't seek help. Those repercussions could include forcing him or her to leave home or firing him or her from a job.

Substance abusers' reactions to such confrontations are usually mixed. Some admit they're having problems and agree to enter treatment immediately.

Others, like George, are extremely angry. But even when someone initially refuses to seek help, many will enter treatment within a short time, particularly if the family has adhered to its ultimatums.

But even if the substance abuser refuses treatment, an intervention is never a failure. Family members who may have been too afraid to speak up can take comfort in the fact they did everything they could for the alcoholic or drug abuser. They then can begin rebuilding their own lives with the aid of support groups such as Al-Anon.

While some people are reluctant to confront an alcoholic or drug abuser through an intervention, it's important for them to consider whether they'd allow that person to suffer from another life-threatening illness such as cancer.

Intervention then is a vital step anyone close to the alcoholic or drug abuser should consider, because without help, that person will never get better.

MSU Re-establishes School of Education

In keeping with the return of teacher education to prominence at the national level, Morehead State University has re-established its School of Education, effective Aug. 1.

"The re-formation of the School of Education emphasizes MSU's commitment," said MSU President C. Nelson Grote. "This action says to the public that teacher education is important to Morehead State. The new school also provides us a more effective administrative structure," Dr. Grote added.

"Our roots are in teacher education as this University in its early years was primarily a teachers college. MSU has a proud heritage both in preparing teachers for the classroom and, once there, providing for their professional development," Dr. Grote said.

According to national data, there is a graying core of teachers and administrators across the nation who are rapidly reaching retirement age. "Add to that replacement rate, the number of new teachers who will be needed to meet the 'baby echo' demand and it becomes evident that teacher education must return to the prominence it once held," Dr. Grote said.

"MSU will be ready to meet that increased demand for teachers," the president said. "The re-establishment of school also is symbolic of the renewal of our partnership with the public schools."

The reorganization provides for better utilization of the faculty and staff which in turn will enable the University to increase its level of service to the region's schools, according to Dr. Larry

W. Jones, dean of the College of Professional Studies.

Housed within the College of Professional Studies, the school will be headed by an associate dean of education. A national search is under way now for this administrator.

Under the new structure, approved by the MSU Board of Regents in May, there will be three distinct units: Elementary, Reading and Special Education with Dr. Paul R. McGhee as coordinator; Leadership and Secondary Education with Dr. Aleda Jean Wilson as coordinator, and an Educational Service Unit with Dr. Eugene F. Thibadeau as director.

Nearly 900 undergraduate and graduate students were enrolled last fall in teacher education courses at MSU's main and regional campuses. Approximately 37 full-time faculty members and four part-time faculty members comprise the teaching faculty.

"There was another factor to be considered in creating a clearer identity for MSU's teacher education program," Dr. Grote said. "This is our year of record with the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education. The heightened visibility for teacher education will only enhance our NCATE report," he added.

Hall Reunion

A reunion for the family of the late Rev. Will Hall, of Bull Creek, will be held Sunday, Aug. 16. The reunion will be held at the Silver Lake Lions Club in Silver Lake, Ind., all day, and everyone is welcome.

Academic All-American

The National Secondary Education Council has announced that Timothy E. Hubbard has been named an Academic All-American.

The NSEC has established the Academic All-American Scholar Award Program in order to offer deserved recognition to superior students who excel in the Academic disciplines. The Academic All-American Scholars must earn a 3.3 or better grade point average. Only scholars selected by a secondary school instructor, counselor, or other qualified sponsor are accepted. These scholars are also eligible for other awards given by the NSEC.

Hubbard, who attends Morehead State University, was nominated for this national award by Dr. John Phillely.

Hubbard will appear in the Academic All-American Scholar Directory, which is published nationally.

The Council selects Academic All-American Scholars upon the exclusive recommendations of teachers, coaches, counselors, and other qualified sponsors. Once awarded, the students may be recognized by the NSEC for other honors.

He is the son of John Paul and Wilda Hubbard, of Auxier.

Summer Desserts that are just peachy

From the American Institute for Cancer Research

Peaches are at their peak right now—one of nature's best answers to the often competing demands of a sweet tooth and sound nutrition. This delectable fruit was first cultivated in China during the tenth century, B.C. and was introduced on this continent by early Spanish explorers. Today, we consume more peaches than any other fruit except the apple.

Peaches are ripe when their background color is creamy or yellowish; their reddish blush is an indication of variety rather than ripeness. Peaches that are gray-green in color, however, were harvested too early and may never ripen. A ripe peach should be firm but not hard, blemish-free and covered with smooth, unwrinkled skin. The distinctive aroma of peach nectar is the final test of ripeness.

Firm peaches should be ripened at room temperature, stored in one layer (to avoid bruising) and kept out of direct sunlight. When slightly soft to the touch they are ready to eat and should be stored in the refrigerator unless eaten promptly.

The best way to peel a peach is to first blanch it in boiling water for 30 seconds. Then try these superb peach desserts...

FRESH PEACH FROZEN YOGURT

Simple and delicious, this sweet, refreshing treat can be prepared days or weeks in advance. It's low in fat and the peaches provide lots of beta-carotene, a form of vitamin A linked to lower cancer risk.

2 large fresh peaches, peeled and chopped (about 2 cups)

- 1 egg white
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1 cup plain lowfat yogurt
- 1/3 cup sugar

Combine all ingredients except yogurt in a large bowl of mixer. Beat at high speed 5 minutes or until light and almost doubled in volume. Fold in yogurt.

Pour into container, cover and freeze. Let soften slightly before serving. This will provide 4 servings, about 3/4 to 1 cup in size, and each containing only 1 gram of fat and about 130 calories.

If you are making this outside of peach season, peaches that are frozen or canned in extra light syrup can also be used.

FRUIT COMPOTE

Both peaches and apricots contribute beta-carotene to this light dessert. The juice concentrate adds a slightly different taste and consistency than are found in other compotes.

3/4 lb. fresh apricots, halved (or 1-16 oz. can in extra light syrup)

- 2 medium peaches, peeled and sliced
- 1 cup pineapple chunks, fresh or canned in juice

1-6 oz. can frozen mixed citrus juice concentrate

Put all ingredients together in bowl. Leave in refrigerator until thawed, then mix and serve. You'll get about 6 servings, 3/4 cup in size, with almost no fat and only 105 to 120 calories per serving.

PEACHES WITH RASPBERRIES

This dessert can make a simple, but elegant ending to a summer meal. It is an excellent way to not only enjoy the taste and healthful benefits of a fresh peach, but also to work in the wonderful taste of fresh raspberries during their much too short season.

For each serving:

- 1 fresh ripe peach (or 2 canned peach halves, packed in water)
- 1/2 cup fresh raspberries
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1/2 tsp. sugar

Combine the raspberries with the vanilla and sugar. Refrigerate for 1 hour.

If using canned peaches, drain and use as is. For fresh peaches, peel first and then split in half.

Use two peach halves per serving. Spoon raspberry, vanilla, sugar mixture into peaches, chill and serve.

Each serving contains about 75 calories and virtually no fat.

Morris Hall Recalls Professional Baseball Career

Every youngster, since the first day they put their Little League baseball uniform on until the day they finally hang up their cleats, dreams of playing professional baseball.

Not many make it. The dream is blind to its own near impossibilities and difficulties. Most of those youngsters eventually spend their mature careers as baseball fans rather than players.

But some do reach their goals. Morris 'Tootsie' Hall did.

Hall, Wheelwright High School graduate, played three years of professional baseball in the Brooklyn Dodgers organization.

As a tender 17-year-old, Hall was signed and shipped out to Colorado. Fresh out of high school, he was suddenly on his own, not to mention trying to adjust from high school competition to the pros.

During his playing days, Hall met such greats as Maury Wills, Pee Wee Reese, and Jackie Robinson. Hall has many interesting stories to tell and a magnitude of information to relate. Recently, we stopped by his Left Beaver home to listen in some of this storytelling and information giving.

ALTON: You signed a baseball contract at the age of 17 and left home. What kind of change was that for you?

MORRIS: I had to learn real quick that baseball was a business. You had to play by their rules. You had to be on time. It's a sport, but it's also a business, and they expect you to give 100 percent every day that you play. They expect you to play to win. I guess the biggest adjustment was leaving home and living in a hotel. One thing I remember is when I met the team in Denver. We had to get on a bus and go to Pueblo, Colorado. That's where our home team was then. I'll never forget, we pulled in at night on the bus, and the manager said 'Ok, rookie, go find a place to stay. There's a motel over there, and there's one over here. Be at the field at 3:30 tomorrow. If you're late you'll be fined. I had to adjust to things like that. Being able to roll with the punches you might say, but it was all for my own good. I learned discipline real quick, just coming out of high school. The team was in a pennant race, and I had to adjust to that too, and meeting different players from different areas, and learning to communicate with them.

ALTON: Who were some of the more notable players that you played against.

MORRIS: I played with Jim Gintee who later played with Houston. Then I played with Maury Wills, a player that fans will remember who played shortstop for the Dodgers. Carl Spooner that pitched in a World Series. I warmed him up before a game. I never got to catch him in a game, but I got to warm him up. The people that were playing with the Dodgers in New York were Jackie Robinson, Duke Snider, Campanella, Pee Wee Reese from Louisville, and I got to know all those people. I was there a week with them, taking batting practice and catching batting practice.

ALTON: That's a pretty nice experience for a 17-year-old wasn't it?

MORRIS: It certainly was. They treated me like a king. They were really good to me, and helped me all they could. The thing I got excited about while I was in New York was I got to personally see Jackie Robinson steal home. He was one of my favorite players. One of my favorite hitters back in those days was Stan Musial. I guess everybody has their favorites.

ALTON: How did the Dodgers find out about you? You're from Wheelwright, and they are from New York.

MORRIS: The high school state tournament in Louisville. I played for Wheelwright High, and our team went to the state tournament, and the scouts saw me there. They asked me if I would be interested in signing with them. I got offers from several ball clubs; the Milwaukee Braves, the Chicago White Sox, and the Dodgers.

ALTON: When you first started playing baseball did you ever think that you could play professional baseball?

MORRIS: That was my dream as a boy, to play in a world series. I always wanted to play professional baseball, and someday play in a world series. I always thought I had the ability to do it, but regardless of how much ability you have, you need experience to go with it. All I needed was a little experience, baseball savvy they call it.

ALTON: What happened to bring your career to an end?

MORRIS: The thing with me was more of a money thing. They paid you for the three months that you played, and the other nine months you had to work. I got married, and I couldn't sup-

A BIG LINE: This mass of humanity represents one of the biggest Trojan offensive lines of the 1980's. With quickness, and size, Coach Roger Johnson thinks they should also provide solid pass protection. Catching those passes will probably be Shawn Roop, Shawn McKenzie, and Steve Cole, all pictured above.

Wheelwright Continues Hope For Post Season Appearance

In keeping with pre-season tradition, Roger Johnson, Wheelwright High School head football coach, has listed his number one 1987 priority as making the playoffs.

This goal isn't shared by Johnson and the Trojans alone. Most coaches and teams seem, at this time of year, to think post season play is within their grasp.

Last season Johnson said that making the playoffs was then his main objective. Wheelwright failed to accomplish this goal, but their players and coaches haven't lost faith. Before a recent workout, Johnson again said that post-season play was his goal, and this time the Trojan mentor may be able to back up what he says.

"We've got a lot of experience this year, and our seniors have shown good leadership," Johnson said. "We've got a lot of quickness, and good size to go with it."

Known as a running team the past several seasons, Wheelwright is expected to have one of their best backfields of the 1980's, if not individually, definitely in depth.

"We've got a strong backfield," Coach Johnson stated. "We'll be more balanced there than we have been in the past couple of years."

Led by Doug Little, and Handy Jackson, the Wheelwright running back corps features three key ingredients most coaches look for at all positions—size, speed, and experience.

Little, a three-year starter in the Trojan backfield, gives Wheelwright both production and different options to work with.

Running at both halfback and fullback, Little, a 5'11," 190-pound senior, rambled for over 700 yards in 1986, and with the extra year of growth, the Trojans are expecting even bigger numbers from their tough runner. Little, possessing good open field ability, ran back several kickoffs for touchdowns last season.

Complimenting Little with his speed and quick moves will be Handy Jackson, a fleet-footed junior that proved himself effective late in the 1986 campaign.

Jackson, 5'6," 145-pounds, started the final four games one season ago, rolling up over 200 yards in his brief stint.

"Handy's working real hard this year, and he's shown real good quickness. We expect a good season from him," Johnson said about his young tailback prospect.

"Actually we've got five or six boys that we can use, and not lose a lot from the first ones we run out there. Vic Cotton started six games for us last year, and Benjy McCay looks good. Chad Hall ran JV fullback last year and was real impressive."

Wheelwright returns several talented members of last year's backfield, but the key to their success doesn't necessarily lie in capable backs.

As with every backfield, Trojan runners will need help up front, and should get it from a massive offensive line, one of the biggest Wheelwright has had in several years.

"From tackle to tackle, we'll average about 225-pounds, and with that kind of line, we should be able to run the ball," Johnson speculated. "We also think they'll be quick enough to give us some pass protection so we'll probably be putting the ball in the air more than we did last year."

Two main actors in Wheelwright's passing show are expected to be Bobby Hood, and senior tight end Steve Cole. Hood, a sophomore, saw action late last season, and is slated as the Trojans' top prospect at quarterback.

Roger Johnson says Wheelwright will run an offensive mixture of rushing and passing. When the Trojans decide to throw the football, Hood will more than likely be looking for Cole, a three-year starter at the tight end position. Shawn Roop and Shawn McKenzie are also expected to be receiving threats at wide out positions.

Offensively Wheelwright should be able to move the football. Scoring points has been a Trojan problem during the past couple of seasons, but with a huge line and talented skill position players, the offensive punch may be more powerful in 1987.

Defensively Wheelwright should be their normal, physical selves. An aggressive defensive team in the past, the Trojans have the tools to once again stop people, evidence enough is their offensive line. Most of those performers are expected to pull a double shift this season.

Paul Little, a senior defensive tackle, will probably be Wheelwright's big weapon defensively. Little, 235 pounds, earned a spot on the Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference defensive squad for his play a year ago.

Along with Little, Wheelwright returns 16 experienced players from last year's 5-5 squad. Boasting this experience, and talent, Johnson thinks this is the year the Trojans will in fact, reach the playoffs.

"I believe we'll have a better team than we had last year," Johnson said.

"We've got a lot better attitude this season, and sometimes that alone means a couple more wins."

"Our goal is to get into the playoffs, and I think we've got a better chance this year, even though they changed the districts around," the coach continued. "I feel like we were in a tougher district last year, and the winner and runner-up advance this year. That helps our chances too."

Wheelwright, in a sub-district with Betsy Layne, Paintsville, and Pikeville in 1986, will join Allen Central in the new district, along with Paintsville, Raceland, Fairview, and Hazard.

"I don't really think the competition will be any tougher. The only gripe I had about the new district is the amount of travel time it will cause."

This is the opposition Wheelwright will have to deal with on their way toward a possible playoff spot, and if the line holds up, the Trojans may deal with it successfully.

"Our line will have to stay healthy," Johnson mentioned as a key to his team's success. "We're not that deep on our lines. We may move some of our backs to the offensive line. We used Vic Cotton there some last year, and got good playing time out of him."

Not only does Wheelwright have a tough district to contend with, their regular schedule, featuring Johnson Central and Sheldon Clark, isn't exactly their easiest ever.

"We've got a tough schedule," Johnson agreed. "We've got two 3A schools, and Prestonsburg, a 2A school, but we feel confident with our schedule."

The Trojans, if they are to see post season action, will have to get off to a quick start. Three of their first four games are against district foes. Two of those are on the road.

Wheelwright will open the season August 21, taking on Elkhorn City at Brackett Field. Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. All told, the Trojans will play 11 regular season games, six at home and five on the road. After playing Thursday, October 8, at Virgie, Wheelwright will wrap up the regular season with three consecutive home games.

Coach Johnson says his team has size. That's obvious when they step on the field. The coach also says his team has quickness. That too is easily seen. What isn't noticeable to everyone is the attitude. Johnson thinks this year's version of the Trojans aren't only physically ready to challenge, but may be better prepared mentally.

Bobcats Enjoying Transition Toward Football Excellence

In 1985 the Betsy Layne Bobcats finished the football season with a 3-6 record. Only two years after that mediocre season, the Bobcats are looking forward to a campaign in which they could possibly contend with the area's best teams.

The road from being everyone's whipping boy to an expected winning program hasn't been without it's difficulties for Betsy Layne High School.

Last season Jack Hall, former head coach, led the Bobcats to their first winning season ever, 6-4, but Jack Hall was fired.

Hall's firing resulted in several heated debates. Many Bobcat players decided they would not play football this year, and what could have been an even better season for Betsy Layne had taken an unexpected downward swing even before the first center snap.

But decisions changed. All but two eligible returnees reported for summer tryouts, and once again hope is high in Bobcat land.

"We lost some good kids, but I think that we have the kids that can fill those positions," new head coach Vince Tucker recently said. "I feel that with the people we have we can play with anybody on our schedule, with the exception of maybe Belfry. They always field strong teams there."

In the past two years, Belfry has challenged for a state 3A title, and Coach Tucker says the Pirates might be more than Betsy Layne is ready for, but beating Belfry isn't an important Bobcat objective anyway.

"We want to continue on the winning season we had last year," Tucker, an assistant in 1986, said. "At least we want a 6-4 record, but I look at the schedule and think that we might finish as high as 8-2."

"I feel that we'll have a good shot at our sub-district too," Tucker continued. "It's going to be a battle, but with the players that we have, we'll definitely have a chance at it."

The Bobcats are looking forward to their best season ever, and that might be exactly what it will take to contend in their new district and class. Betsy Layne made the move up to 2A football, and into a district with Whitesburg, Prestonsburg, Morgan County, MC Napier, and Leslie County.

With the memory of a winning season fresh in their minds, and the recent controversy no longer a factor, the Bobcats may in fact be ready to compete in one of the state's toughest districts.

Betsy Layne lost three impact players from last year's 6-4 squad, but return several talented, and experienced skill position players.

Along with a new coach, Betsy Layne will be under the direction of a new quarterback, senior Dwight Jarrell. With Jarrell with a strong arm at the helm, the Bobcats may open their offense up.

"He does have a good arm which should help our passing game," Tucker said. "We'll probably throw the ball more than we did last year, because of Dwight's strong arm, but he needs work on the short pass. That will come with work though."

Jarrell, a place kicker and defensive back last year, will direct what is expected to be an explosive offense.

Other than the quarterback change and a void along the offensive line, the offense returns intact. Matt Conn, senior end, and John Bush, a wing back, teamed last year to form a talented duo of receivers. Conn is described by Vince Tucker as having great hands, and Bush both ran and caught the football effectively.

The 5'8," 160-pound Bush displayed inside running strength while showing speed enough to be a deep passing threat in the Betsy Layne passing game. Bush, a senior, also proved effective as a defensive back last season.

Running the football is where Betsy Layne will probably be the strongest. This is where tailback Todd Sturgill comes in. Sturgill, a three-year starter in the Bobcat backfield, is one of the top running back prospects in the area. The 6'2," 175-pound senior scored 13 touchdowns last year, and could post even better numbers this year if his offensive line does the job.

Teaming with Sturgill will be Keith Hall, a fullback, who provided an offensive weapon as a pass receiver in the 1986 campaign. Hall, a 5'10," 185-pound junior, also has the strength to run inside.

Dale Spurlock and Chris Kidd, a pair of seniors, add depth and experience to the talented Betsy Layne backfield. Quarterback Dwight Jarrell, along with his strong arm, has good running speed, and may prove to be yet another effective runner.

Betsy Layne has the talent to put together an effective offense, especially if their line can once again open holes. Dave Recznik, 6'2," 225-pounds, could be a force in that area, as could players such as Chris Hayes, Ronald Conn, Lee Adkins, and Cody Blackburn.

All have size and experience to give in assisting the Bobcat offense. Betsy Layne is expected to throw the football more this season, and run their offense from a different set.

In the previous three seasons, the Bobcats operated from the side saddle T, but Vince Tucker plans to add and take away from previous offensive looks.

"With the type of offense we ran last year, teams just keyed on our quarterback," Tucker explained. "We're planning on moving the quarterback behind the center. We'll run from different sets, and we'll run a lot of misdirection plays."

"Really, I don't think any team will be able to key our quarterback, or anyone else and say watch him and he'll lead us to the ball. We'll run a lot of different plays, and hopefully that will keep opposing defenses honest."

Defensively Betsy Layne will rely heavily on some of the regular offensive performers such as Bush, and Sturgill. Dave Recznik, with his size, may also see duty on the defensive line, although he will only be a sophomore.

The Bobcats will need to find replacements for Joey Cecil, starting linebacker, and Benton Nunemaker, defensive line, but other than that Betsy Layne also returns as was on the defensive side.

The Betsy Layne football program has apparently weathered their mid-summer storm. Vince Tucker has given out equipment to 50 players, giving the indication that football in Bobcat land is at an all time high where interest is concerned.

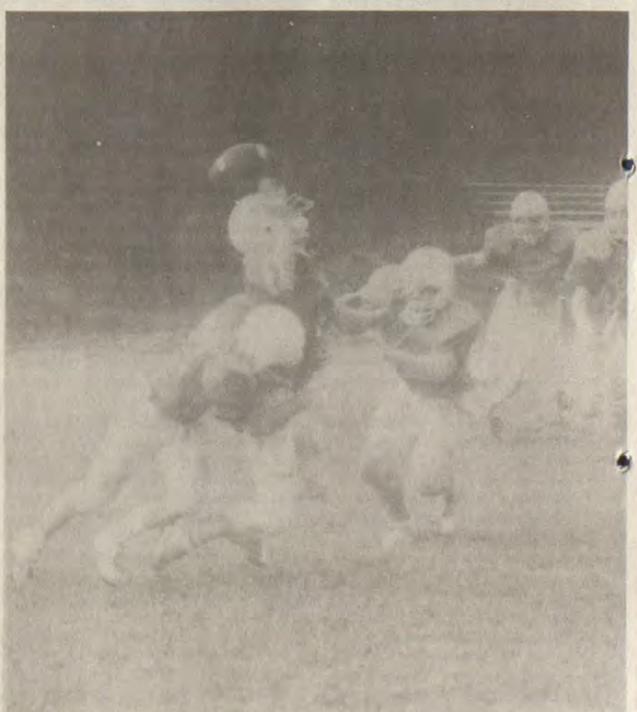

With eligible players officially marking their return, Bobcat fans are again confident that 1987 should again be a winning season. Their success may be a while in coming though.

"When a new coach comes in and puts in a new offense and defense it takes the players a while to adjust to it," Tucker mentioned. "We've got two scrimmages before our first game, and hopefully, we can use those to correct the mistakes that we're going to make and get them straightened out."

"We've had a good turnout. The players realized that we had to go on, and the ones that come out for two a day practices are the ones you know want to play. With the players we've had come out, I feel like we'll be all right this season."

Betsy Layne will open their season August 21 at Fleming-Neon. The Bobcats will play a 10-game schedule this season, five at home. Of the Bobcats five-district games, only two will be played at home.

The Betsy Layne program has experienced change recently. A change in coaching and a change in certain positions will have an effect one way or the other, but Bobcat fans hope one change continues this year; a change from their losing ways of past years.

AN EARLY TASTE: The Betsy Layne defensive introduces new quarterback Dwight Jarrell to the life of a football passer. Jarrell didn't approve of the hit, and some Bobcat players then displayed their aggressiveness.

Morris Hall Recalls Career...

port myself and my wife on my salary so that was one of the reasons. They told me that if I would just hang in there I was going to make it some day, but I decided to call it quits.

ALTON: I guess Daryl Strawberry or Don Mattingly never had that problem did they?

MORRIS: No, I don't think so. The least they can sign you for today is $6,000 for the three months. When I was playing a lot of the players were just making $200-$250 a month, but I was making $600 a month for three months out of the year. That discouraged a lot of the players. That was a big adjustment to make, to play the season, travel home and work, then go back to spring training.

ALTON: Other than money, the players obviously get paid more today, how has baseball changed since you played?

MORRIS: I think it's changed a lot where they recruit players from college rather than sign them from their camps. They still have their tryout camps, but it's very seldom when they sign anyone because of the money. It's not like you're playing ball for the money, but it is a business. Somebody asked Duke Snider what he played baseball for and he said, 'I play for money.' You play because you love it, but you can't play for nothing, because there is a lot of expense. When I played, you paid your own way at home. You had to buy your own catcher's mitts, your spikes. They furnished a uniform and bats. You've got all those expenses at home. When you went on the road, they gave you meal money, but you had to consider all those things. When I played, they could offer you any contract, and it was up to you to accept it or reject it. Today things are quite different, but I think the major thing is the recruiting from college.

ALTON: You have lived the dream that most youngsters dream of which is to play professional baseball. What would be your advice to a young player that possibly had the talent to make it?

MORRIS: I really think that any young athlete should think about his education first. Unless he's 17, 18, and they're giving him a tremendous bonus. He can always go to college, but if he isn't getting a tremendous bonus, his education is really more important. I think he should go to college if he can, and play baseball in college, and then wait for the draft.

ALTON: Your experience in baseball made you, compared to most people around here at that time, somewhat of a baseball expert. Did you ever want to go into coaching, maybe at the high school level?

MORRIS: If you love the game then you want to stay around it. It would be exciting to teach young players. I've always stressed that if they don't learn the fundamentals they'll never be a winning team. Up in our area that's what they're lacking, someone to teach them the fundamentals. In basketball, baseball or any sport you have to know how to play it before you can play it, and before you can be a winner. I guess every player would like to be a coach and hand down their knowledge to the younger players so they can be the best at it.

ALTON: You played three years in the Dodger organization then you left. How much did you miss baseball after you quit?

MORRIS: Quite a bit. It's kind of like your first love. When you start at an early age... it was like a God given talent. If you have a talent for it, and like to do it then you'll fall in love with it. You have this desire to be the best at what you're doing. Not that you want to be in the spotlight, it's just that you want to be a winner.

ALTON: Is there something special about baseball that attracts a certain type of athlete? A person doesn't have to be big, or incredibly strong to play the game. What kind of makeup does it take to be a good baseball player?

MORRIS: The three basic things, you have to be able to do are run, hit, and throw. I think the key thing, especially on defense, is anticipating the play, and knowing what you're going to do even before it happens. If the ball is hit to me what am I going to do with it? And you should know what you're going to do with it. The most exciting thing is when you're up to bat. You don't know what the pitcher is going to throw, but the key to that is his hand, and concentration. Any good hitter will tell you that it's a matter of concentration. When a hitter goes into a slump a lot of times they just lose their concentration more than anything. It's like a basketball player getting too much practice, they get stale.

ALTON: You were a catcher, but what was your favorite part of baseball? What did you enjoy doing most?

MORRIS: I guess everybody likes to hit, but one of my favorite parts was the strategy of trying to get the hitters out. Mixing the pitches up so the hitter wouldn't know what the pitcher was going to throw. One of the biggest thrills of catching is having a three-two count and throw the changeup. A lot of people don't want to do that, but it's one of the most effective pitches in baseball. Catching the game, and throwing runners out were the most important parts to me. More so than hitting. Of course it's all important. You have to score runs before you can win. I guess I was more defensive minded.

NOTE: Due to the length of this conversation the remainder will appear in next week's issue. In it Hall discusses his theories on the souped up baseball, pitcher's scuffing, and the high and tight pitch. Also local baseball will be discussed, as well as the golden oldie years of Wheelwright baseball.

In 1953 Morris 'Tootsie' Hall signed a baseball contract with the Brooklyn Dodgers. As a catcher then and a fan now, he has witnessed baseball from a first hand view. The Wheelwright native will also re-kindle some memories of days gone by in next week's issue.

SHORT SPORTS

Although the 1987 high school football season doesn't officially start until August 21, two local teams will get a full contact test this Saturday night.

Allen Central and Wheelwright will strap on the helmets, and lock shoulder pads with outside opposition for the first time in a Gridorama at Jenkins.

Allen Central, playing in their second year of varsity football, will take on Whitesburg at 7, and Wheelwright will do battle with Fleming-Neon at 8.

The final outcome will go down as neither a win nor loss, but gridorama contests are conducted in the same manner as regular season matchups, with the exception of a team's kicking game. Both punts and kickoffs will assume a designated position on the field rather than have the kickers go about their chores.

Both Allen Central and Wheelwright will be tuning up for their season openers, August 21. The Rebels are scheduled to travel to Jenkins while Wheelwright will be at home taking on Elkhorn City.

Just after they cut talented wide receiver Tony Hill, the Dallas Cowboys were dealt another severe blow to that position.

Mike Sherrard, Dallas' top draft choice in 1986, suffered a broken leg in practice last week, leaving the Cowboys with only one effective receiver, Mike Renfro, coming back from last season.

Sherrard, an all-American from UCLA, caught 41 passes for five touchdowns while averaging 18 yards per catch. He is expected to be out for most, if not all, of the upcoming season. With Hill and Sherrard both gone, Dallas loses almost one-third of their total receptions in 1986. The team is now counting heavily on rookie draft choices Kelvin Martin, of Boston College, and Everett Gay from Texas.

Joe Niekro, veteran righthanded pitcher, received a 10-day suspension from the American League last Wednesday after apparently tampering with a baseball.

Niekro, now pitching for the Minnesota Twins, was searched during a game against California last Monday night. After several pitches were discovered scuffed, the umpires approached the mound to check Niekro.

The veteran knuckleballer tossed away an emory board which caught the umpire's attention. Sand paper was also found on Niekro.

Niekro's story is only one of many strange occurrences this baseball season which has included the cutting open of a baseball, and confiscated and x-raying of several homerun hitter's bats.

The Navy, and the Los Angeles Raiders have apparently ended their football connection, and to no great amusement of the Raiders.

This past week, the Navy announced that Napoleon McCallum, Los Angeles halfback, will not be available to the Raiders for the 1987 football season.

McCallum, a graduate of the Naval Academy, was sharing time between his duties with the Navy and the Raiders, but will dedicate his total attention toward active duty in the armed forces. The 6'2," 215-pound McCallum finished last season as the Raiders' second leading rusher, rolling up 536 yards on 142 carries with one touchdown. McCallum also caught 13 passes out of the backfield plus providing LA with a dangerous kick returner.

The 1987 NFL pre-season kicked off the past weekend with two games, but the pre-season won't fully begin until Thursday night. A full slate is scheduled for this weekend with two games, Thursday night, and one, Friday.

The Cincinnati Bengals will get their first taste of full contact opposition, Saturday night, when they travel to Tampa Bay.

Two games will be televised, Sunday. At 1:30 ABC will air the New York Giants at New England contest, and following that, at 8 p.m., ESPN will televise their first of four pre-season games which matches Chicago against the Dolphins in Miami.

Professional football honored seven more of it's past performers, inducting them into the Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, Saturday afternoon.

The new members included Len Dawson, quarterback, Don Maynard, wide receiver, Larry Csonka, fullback, John Henry Johnson, halfback, 'Mean' Joe Greene, defensive tackle, Jim Langer, center, and Gene Upshaw, guard.

He stays. He stays not. Tony goes. Tony goes not.

Plucking off daisy pedals may not be as an effective way of determining a final roster as it is in making certain a prospective love, but in some fashion NFL teams will have to trim their rosters down soon.

Coaches and management still have some time to address this problem fully, but regardless of the time, this difficult job has to be done.

From the 60 plus players brought in to summer camp, to the 45-man season limit, tough decisions will have to be made, along with definite mistakes.

Already this season, Dallas has cut Tony Hill, their leading receiver from last year, and now the Cowboys are hurting at that position, especially after Mike Sherrard suffered a season-ending injury. Now, maybe Dallas is saying they could have lived with Hill's extra pounds and difficult attitude.

In past years other mistakes have been made. Last year, Buddy Ryan and the Philadelphia Eagles cut Earnest Jackson, a former 1,000-yard rusher.

Philadelphia's leading rusher in their 5-10-1 season was Keith Byars with 577 yards. In the meantime, Jackson rambled for over 900 yards with Pittsburgh.

Some veteran players, such as Hill and Jackson, occasionally get the ax, but more times than not it's due to an attitude problem rather than a talent one. These guys are rapidly swallowed up by other teams. The guys hurt most by pre-season slicing are the rookies, particularly the ones chosen in the final four rounds.

These are the guys who serve a critical purpose during the draft then are thrown away like yesterday's newspaper. They fill out the final rounds of the draft, that's the purpose, then are cut after the first couple of weeks of practice.

The NFL draft consists of 12 rounds now, but the owners want to increase it to 15 rounds. Maybe they want to cut more people next season. Actually if the draft was only eight rounds, everyone would be better off. After that, possible players could be signed to free agent contracts rather than be the number 11,000th player chosen.

Morehead State had three players signed through free agency, but this doesn't necessarily mean they have a spot on their team's roster.

No one does. Veteran players who no longer run fast or hit the sled hard, are sent packing, especially if they are carrying a huge contract. Usually these guys are out of a job too, because not many teams want to pick up a million dollar old man.

Cutting the rosters down, deciding who should be kept, and who should be cut isn't the only problem facing NFL owners.

With the threat of a player's strike staring them in their collective faces, cutting players may not be a problem at all. Owners and the Players' Union are currently trying to iron out differences between themselves.

The old contract runs out August 31, and if a new one isn't adopted, the players are apparently going to walk out, and why shouldn't they?

The average player's contract is close to $200,000, and many of those make much more than that sum. Kickers, and clipboard keepers bring the total down to 200 grand. This is, after all, walking around money for Jed Clampett. Why should these poor, unfortunate football players be forced to struggle at this poverty level.

Actual salary negotiations aren't a part of the discussions, but items leading up to more or less money are. Problems causing distance between the two sides include free agency. The players want it. The owners do not. Free agency is what drove professional baseball wages up by about 200 percent in three years or so.

It isn't hard to see why each side holds their particular view on this free agency stuff. Drug testing, ugh! This is a sore spot for players, and maybe coaches. Owners are in the business to make money, and they can't if their equipment runs afoul. Say maybe having players on drugs.

Players do not like the random testing, because, in their words, it infringes upon their privacy, and it's embarrassing. It very well could be.

But with drug testing, Stanley Wilson and Pete Johnson wouldn't have ran the football much. This, too, may be a reason not to like the player testing.

Players also want things such as guaranteed contracts so veteran players can't be cut during the season, or even in pre-season. They first have to make the active roster, though. Pension benefits and an increased roster size are also wants of the players.

If they win, owners won't be faced with as big a problem of trimming the roster, but they should wait and see how many players they'll need this season.

Next year the problem will all come back, though. The owners want to increase the draft to 15 rounds. About the only reason available here is the theory

Panic Time May Be Near As Cincinnati Feels SF Heat

Pete Rose, in a recent television interview, said that it wasn't time to panic. Rose, Cincinnati Reds manager, was addressing his team's pitching problems, and the possibility of a future trade.

"After all we're still in first place. I don't think it's time to panic, and I don't think it's time to go out and make a trade. I believe in the guys we've got, and I think they will still come through and do the job for us."

Rose stated his feelings before Cincinnati left Riverfront Stadium on their way to the West Coast and the San Francisco Giants.

One reason why the Reds manager didn't foresee an immediate tragedy was because Cincinnati held a three-and-one-half game lead over second place Houston, and were up five games on the Giants, third in the National League West.

Ron Robinson sent Cincinnati westward on a winning note, throwing the Reds to a 6-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers, Wednesday night. Robinson pitched six innings, giving up two runs as Cincinnati, 6-3, during the homestand ended a nine-game stretch at home.

Robinson had just shown some of that effective pitching Rose had forecasted, and Robinson's efforts were just a hint of things to come.

In their four game weekend series at San Francisco, Reds' pitching gave up only 13 earned runs, but Cincinnati dropped all four games, allowing the Giants to creep to within one game of the top divisional spot.

San Francisco, posting below a 3.00 earned run average in their previous 19 games, received solid starting pitching to dump the offensively slumping Reds.

In the four games, Cincinnati managed only six runs on a total of 20 hits, while witnessing two complete games, and two more Giant pitchers making it into the ninth inning before needing relief help.

Mike Lacoss, former Cincinnati pitcher, was the first Giants' starter to shutdown the Reds, enjoying a complete game performance Friday night.

Cincinnati scored first, one run in the opening inning, when Kal Daniels, activated Friday, walked and scored on an Eric Davis single.

The Giants got even in the bottom of the fourth inning on Will Clark's 22nd homerun, a solo shot off Cincinnati starter and loser Bill Gullickson.

Gullickson, the league's top homerun pitcher, surrendered another longball in the sixth inning, a two-run game winner off the bat of third baseman Kevin Mitchell.

Lacoss held the Reds scoreless over the final eight innings, earning his second victory over his former teammates in just a week, this time 3-1.

THE SPORTING TIMES

that the NFL wants to last longer than a professional boxing bout.

Owners also want to hold summer camps.

What! These guys can't work the year round. This is an outrage.

They also want to increase fine penalties. The owners are planning to fine players $1,500 if they report late for summer camp, and other penalties to be trippled.

Goodness. That will be a lot of laps around the football field.

The fans would also add their demand into this contract. Owners will be forced to sign their best draft choices, and veteran players so the true owners, the fans, can get the most from their viewing dollars.

Hey, Cincinnati! Pay attention. This would hit you hard, wouldn't it. It would also give the Queen City a winner.

A lot of room remains between the two sides, and a strike might occur. The only true loser will be the fan, who deserves better. Last season the NFL drew more fans overall than they ever had, which included an average of over 60,000 per regular season game.

We play. We play not. Heck with fan consideration. Heck with fan consideration, yes.

The Reds, one of the National League's top offensive teams, were apparently in a slump, and that became obvious Saturday afternoon when Atlee Hammaker tossed a four-hitter against them.

Hammaker, 7-8, scattered four hits through nine innings of work as San Francisco downed the Reds 5-2, beating lefthander Tom Browning, who dropped to 5-9.

The Giants scored four runs in the first inning, and rode the right arm of Hammaker as he threw their second consecutive complete game. Hammaker lost a shutout bid in the eighth inning when Eric Davis slammed a solo home run, his 31st of the season.

Davis cranked his 32nd home run the following day, a two-run shot, but Cincinnati continued to lose, falling 3-2 to the Giants.

Will Clark continue his personal assault on Reds' pitching, collecting his 24th home run in the first inning, his fourth consecutive game with a home run. The Giants added one run in the first, and another in the third, taking a 3-0 lead, and Mike Krukow did the rest. At least until the ninth inning.

Barry Larkin broke up Krukow's perfect game with a single in the sixth inning, but the Reds failed to do any more damage until Davis' home run in the final frame. The bullpen then did the rest, shutting down Cincinnati to protect the Giants third consecutive victory.

Now trailing by only two games, San Francisco took advantage of shoddy Cincinnati defensive play to down the Reds, 5-2, thus sweeping the doubleheader and the series.

The Reds committed three errors in the second inning, allowing San Francisco to score three unearned runs, plus the Giants earned another score.

While Cincinnati was giving the Giants runs, they were busy struggling again, this time against Kelly Downs, San Francisco's effective rookie.

Downs went into the ninth inning before needing relief help but succeeded in pulling the Giants to within one game of West leading Cincinnati. With their recent pitching heroics, San Francisco, a team that suffered early from a lack of pitching, now owns the third best staff in the National league.

The Giants sent Cincinnati packing with a four-game losing streak, and only a one-game lead. But the Reds did get some help as San Diego swept Houston in a three-game series, keeping the Astros at bay, three games out.

Cincinnati limped into Los Angeles hoping that a change of scenery would provide comfort to their ailing offense, but what the Reds saw was more of the same sight, tough opposing pitching.

The Reds had beaten him only five days before, but Fernando Valenzuela is sometimes tougher in Dodger Stadium. The south of the border lefty was that for five innings, shutting out Cincinnati, but the Reds hit Valenzuela for three runs in the sixth, taking a one-run lead.

Los Angeles promptly tied the score in the bottom of the inning when John Shelby, nine RBIs in his last 11 games, singled in Ken Landreaux. Landreaux had earlier reached base off Frank Williams, in relief of Ron Robinson.

Robinson, Cincinnati's starting pitcher, worked five innings, giving up two runs, but lost his winning opportunity when the Dodgers tied the score off Williams in the sixth. Robinson was going for his sixth win of the season, and his third in a row.

The Reds again grabbed a one-run in the seventh inning. Eric Davis walked, stole second and third, and scored on Dave Parker's third hit of the game, an RBI single to right field.

Williams, pitching the sixth and seventh innings, was rewarded with the win after he and John Franco held LA scoreless, allowing the Reds to rebound from a four-game losing streak with the 4-3 victory. Franco pitched the final two frames to record his 20th save of the season.

San Francisco defeated Houston Monday night to remain only one game back of the Reds. While the Reds finish up in LA, the Giants and Astros will go head to head.

Cincinnati will wind up their four-game series in Los Angeles with night games scheduled for tonight and Thursday. Bill Gullickson, 10-9, will pitch for the Reds, Wednesday, and five-game winner Tom Browning will get the nod for Thursday's contest.

After leaving LA, the Reds will travel to San Diego for one game, Friday night, an off day, Saturday, and a doubleheader, Sunday afternoon. Cincinnati will return home to open a three-game series with Pittsburgh, Tuesday night.

NOTE: Cincinnati Reds catcher Bo Diaz was named the National League's player of the month for July. Diaz received his honor this past Wednesday night. Reds center fielder Eric Davis earlier received the same honor for the months of April and May.

Mario Soto, Reds pitcher, started Monday for the team's double A squad, throwing 89 pitches. Soto has been clocked at near 90 miles per hour, and is expected to move up to Nashville for additional work. According to reports, Soto only needs to pitch himself back into shape before moving all the way up. The Reds are expecting Soto to be on their major league roster for September, and October if they make it that far. Eric Davis now has 42 stolen bases, and needs only eight home runs to become the first player ever to steal at least 40 bases, and hit 40 home runs.

In other baseball news, the Philadelphia Phillies released former Red Tom Hume, and Kevin Gross, Phillies pitcher, was thrown out of Monday's game after umpires discovered sandpaper in his possession.

Phil Niekro, former Cleveland pitcher, was traded from the Indians to Toronto this past weekend.

Softball Tourney Slated at Allen

A softball tournament, established to help support a Floyd County American Legion baseball team, will be held the last weekend of August at Allen Park.

The tournament, limited to 16 teams, will begin Friday evening, August 28, with the first game starting at 6. The double elimination event will run through Sunday evening, or until a champion is decided.

Entry fee for this tournament has been set at $80 dollars plus each team will supply their own Blue Dot softballs. Trophies will be given to the top four finishers, and a most hits, plus RBI award will be given.

All proceeds from the entry fees, as well as concessions, will go directly toward funding an American Legion baseball team for the summer of 1988.

A 16-18 program was established this summer in Floyd county, and next year the team is planning to go the American Legion route.

Any sponsors or coaches wishing to enter this softball tournament should call 349-3939 or see Alton Huff by August 21.

The Floyd County American Legion team will feature players from Floyd, Johnson, and Magoffin counties. Its main objective is giving area youths an extra baseball opportunity.

Kentucky Fishing Report

Frankfort, Ky., August 10—Fishing activity over the August 8-9 weekend was light statewide. Many of the lakes continue to have a large amount of pleasure boating traffic during the weekends. Fishing conditions have shown little change and some lake levels have dropped considerably over the past week. The lake-by-lake rundown, as reported by conservation officers or creel clerks at each lake:

KENTUCKY: Creel Clerk Buddy Boyd reports that white bass were hitting slab spoons over flats near old river banks 22-30 feet deep; black bass were hitting plastic worms and jig-and-rind combinations off deep rocky points and secondary creek drop offs 7-14 feet deep; clear, falling, two feet below summer pool and 87 degrees.

BARKLEY: Creel Clerk Norman Brantley reports that white bass were hitting deep runners trolled over old river channel banks and the mouths of tributaries 10-20 feet deep; catfish were hitting catalpa worms and cut bait along the mouths of main creeks 10-35 feet deep; bluegill were hitting flies around willow fly hatches on rocky banks; clear, falling, two foot below summer pool and 87 degrees.

BARREN RIVER: Creel Clerk Ralph Shipley reports that bluegill were hitting crickets off deep banks 6-10 feet deep; black bass were hitting plastic worms or jiggling rinds off rocky points at night 15-20 feet deep; in the tailwaters, catfish were being caught on minnows and nightcrawlers; clear, stable at summer pool and 90 degrees.

NOLIN: Conservation Officer Sammie Renfro reports that bluegill were hitting red worms, crickets and wax worms off rocky banks 2-10 feet deep; black bass were active at night on plastic worms and crankbaits off deep points in 15-20 feet of water; clear to murky, falling, six feet below summer pool and 88 degrees.

ROUGH RIVER: Conservation Officer Gerry Rau reports that bluegill were hitting worms and nightcrawlers off rocky ledges 4-10 feet deep; black bass were hitting plastic worms and crankbaits at night off rocky points and drop offs 2-8 feet deep; clear, stable at summer pool and 85 degrees.

TAYLORSVILLE: Creel Clerk Bruce Raine reports that black bass were taking plastic worms along tree lines in the mouths of creeks 10-15 feet deep; bluegill were hitting worms and crickets off shallow banks 2-6 feet deep; clear to murky, falling, one foot below summer pool and 89 degrees.

HERRINGTON: Conservation Officer Charles Goode reports that bluegill were hitting crickets off points and drop offs 4-6 feet deep; hybrid rockfish were hitting spinners along channel drop offs 15-18 feet deep; due to low water level, some ramps are closed; clear, falling, 19 feet below summer pool and 88 degrees.

GREEN RIVER: Creel Clerk John Williams reports that crappie were taking minnows around stickups in 6-10 feet of water; white bass were hitting spoons over mud flats 20-25 feet deep; murky, stable at summer pool and 88 degrees.

CUMBERLAND: Conservation Officer Mike Bowman reports that black bass were hitting plastic worms along stump rows 5-15 feet deep; bluegill were hitting worms and crickets over brush piles 5-15 feet deep; clear, falling, 16 feet below summer pool and 86 degrees.

DALE HOLLOW: Conservation Officer Marvin Edwards reports that black bass were hitting plastic worms at night off steep banks and over weed beds in 5-20 feet of water; bluegill were hitting worms and crickets off deep banks 5-15 feet deep; clear, falling, one foot below summer pool and 87 degrees.

LAUREL: Conservation Officer Bob Delph reports that trout were hitting worms, cheese and corn at night over main lake drop offs 20-30 feet deep; catfish were taking nightcrawlers and cut bait at night in wooded coves near the bottom; clear, falling, 15 feet below summer pool and 86 degrees.

CAVE RUN: Creel Clerk Sonny Kearns reports that black bass were hitting plastic worms and surface lures over brush piles 1-18 feet deep; muskie were hitting crankbaits trolled over creek channels 10-20 feet deep; clear, stable at summer pool and 88 degrees.

PAINTSVILLE: Creel Clerk Jim Marshall reports that black bass were hitting spinnerbaits and crankbaits around stump rows 1-10 feet deep; bluegill were hitting red worms over brush piles 5-12 feet deep; clear, falling, one foot below summer pool and 84 degrees.

BUCKHORN: Conservation Officer Jamon Halvaksz reports that black bass were hitting top-water lures and spinnerbaits at night off rocky banks 1-3 feet deep; bluegill were taking worms and crickets over beds 2-6 feet deep; some muskie were being taken in the tailwaters; clear, stable at summer pool and 87 degrees.

GRAYSON: Conservation Officer Jeff Adams reports that black bass were hitting plastic worms along stump rows and off rocky points 3-4 feet deep; bluegill were hitting red worms over mud flats 4-6 feet deep; clear, stable at summer pool and 86 degrees.

DEWEY: Creel Clerk Jim Marshall reports that black bass were hitting crankbaits and spinnerbaits along stump rows about 1-6 feet deep; crappie were active on minnows over brush piles about 20 feet deep; clear to murky, falling, one and one-half foot below summer pool and 82 degrees.

FISHTRAP: Conservation Officer Jim McCown reports that bluegill were hitting crickets and worms along shoreline stump rows in about 6 feet of water; black bass were taking plastic worms at night up to 12 feet deep; clear, stable at summer pool and 84 degrees.

Coaching Kits Available For Football Leagues

The National Youth Sports Coaches Association (NYSCA) has announced that Riddell, Inc., has made available free of charge 15,000 complete football coaching kits for youth football coaches completing the NYSCA football certification program.

According to Fred Engh, NYSCA president, "The coaching kit is one of the finest tools ever developed to help youth coaches understand all the mechanics of coaching football."

The kits contain information on coaching offense, defense, the passing and kicking game, and other important information for coaches on how to coach.

NYSCA is a national, non-profit organization. One of its main functions is offering a certification program to help football and all sports leagues understand how to make sports a fun experience for children.

For information on how your league can train its coaches, contact NYSCA for the state or local coordinator in your area. Write NYSCA, 2611 Old Okeechobee Road, West Palm Beach, Florida 33409.

Kentucky Afield... Wildlife Art Show Begins September 1

Over 30 Kentucky artists will be exhibiting wildlife related artwork at the Kentucky State Capitol art lobby for the 1987 Kentucky Art and Wildlife Show.

Co-sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the Kentucky Department of the Arts, the exhibit will be open for public viewing from September 1-October 1, during the hours of 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1-5 p.m. on Sundays. The show will include 54 pieces of artwork depicting wildlife through a various number of art media.

According to John Boone, artist with the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, the works on display will cover a wide range of forms from folk art to realism.

"We will have a very good variety of works ranging from wood carvings, pencil drawings and ceramics to oil paintings and several other types of two and three dimensional artwork, all of which will depict or relate to wildlife," said Boone.

"I think anyone who enjoys art, wildlife or both will find the show quite interesting and enjoyable," Boone added.

Two dimensional pieces will be displayed in the capitol art lobby located in the east wing (Mansion side) of the capitol building. The 23 three-dimensional pieces of artwork will be exhibited in glass cases in the central hallway of the first floor. There will be signs posted in both areas directing viewers to each display.

Hilltopper Lighting Project On Schedule

Western Kentucky football is scheduled to play under the lights for the first time ever in L.T. Smith this fall.

The Hilltopper Athletic Foundation (HAF), WKU's official athletic boosters organization, has contracted with Musco Sports Lighting Company to install the modern lighting system in Smith Stadium and work is underway in preparation for the beginning of the 1987 gridiron season.

The system, which will cost $124,980, will be in place and ready to go no later than Sept. 19 (the Murray State game), according to commitments made by Musco officials. In addition, the Middle Tennessee game (Sept. 26) would be played at night. And, if work progresses in a timely manner, it is also possible that the '87 opener with Gardner-Webb (Sept. 5) may be played at night. Plans are being made to kick off evening games in Smith Stadium at 7:30 p.m. (Central Time).

"This is a quality lighting set-up that should prove to be a great benefit for our entire athletic program, not just football, for years to come," said Gary West, Executive Director of the Athletic Foundation. "We feel that the addition of lights in Smith Stadium could change the entire social atmosphere of football at Western and help improve our attendance on those hot, sunny September Saturdays. In fact, we have already seen an increase in interest in football season tickets among our members."

Musco, the contractor for the University of Indiana's new football lighting system, has also erected stadium lighting at Eastern Illinois and at Kentucky State. The sports lighting specialist will erect two banks of lights in the upper deck of Smith Stadium and will construct three light towers on the opposite side of the playing field.

The project is being funded by monies raised by the HAF. A steering commit-

OUTDOOR LORE

by Neville Shackelford
UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

The kingfisher, that patrols our streams and ponds in his blue and white cadet uniform, is very different in form and style from ordinary birds. He is larger than a robin, noisier than a black-bird, and his noggin and fore parts are much larger in proportion. These characteristics are made more noticeable by the long feathers of his head, which he raises into a crest, and because of the shortness of his tail. His beak is very long and strong in order to snag fish and hold them fast.

Different from most other birds, too, the kingfisher does not build a nest in a tree or on the ground. Instead, he builds it in a hole in the ground, usually in a tunnel he digs himself. In commenting on this peculiar form of nesting, one-time curator of the American Museum of Natural History, the late Charles M. Chapman, said kingfishers often dug tunnels in banks as deep as six feet.

Both parent kingfishers feed their nestlings, usually from five to eight in number. Although these birds are not averse to eating frogs, crickets, salamanders and insects, the diet of the nestlings runs largely to fish. Wonderful tales are told of kingfishers using fishbones to shore up the earth over and about their nests. Many tributes have also been paid to their architectural skill, but the personal belief is that the lining of fishbones in kingfisher habitations is incidental rather than intentional.

It is interesting to watch a kingfisher angling for his dinner. The spirit that animates him, however, is far from that of his human counterpart. The kingfisher fishes not for fun, but for business. He will perch on a limb over a hole of water or skim silently over the surface of a pond. Let him spot a fin and there is an immediate dash and a splash, and a return to the perch with a wriggling fish in his bill. There he will proceed to bruise his victim by whacking it against his perch and then will swallow it headfirst so that the fins will not stick his throat.

If he misses his quarry, as he often does, he comes up indignant as a wet hen and in kingfisher language, cussin' up a storm.

The voice of a kingfisher sounds like a loud rattle. Close hand, it is not exactly pleasant but coming from a distance, it is not completely unmusical. It is a curious coincidence that it sounds very much like the clicking of a fisherman's reel—a sound that conjures up visions of sun-dappled, shady streams and the rippling blue waters of tree bordered ponds of long ago.

Local Band Wins Contest

On August 1, the finals of the True Value Country Showdown were held at the Martin County fair grounds.

Six acts competed for the right to represent this area in the state finals at Lake Shawnee in Princeton, W. Va. They were judged in various categories, including appearance, talent, stage presence and originality.

The top three finishers were The Cliff Roads Band, a Floyd county based group; Horizon, from Louisa and Joe Ferguson, from Dunlow W. Va.

Parents of Disabled Find Help In Coping thru Mutual Support

"I know just how you feel...my wife and I hurt so much for our young adult daughter. She wants to have a full social life like she sees others having."

The person speaking is the father of a 27-year-old attractive and friendly daughter who is also developmentally disabled. He was responding to the mother of a loving, inquisitive, beautiful daughter who is 13 years old and cannot walk, talk, dress, or feed herself. This mother told of how her heartaches when her older daughters, who have no handicaps, are dancing, talking about boyfriends, and getting ready to go out. Although they involve her as much as possible, this mother can feel the sadness of the youngest.

This mother expressed her feelings and received help and comfort at last week's parents and staff support and training group, sponsored by Mountain Comprehensive Care Center. The parents say they go through some painful stages in their lives that involve feelings of sadness, anger, fear, and isolation...of course, there are also many times of joy, celebration, and hope.

"The little, tiny steps of progress our child takes are so important to us", another father said. "And it seems like everything she gets as far as schooling, recreation...anything we get for her...we have to fight so hard for."

Parents of children with emotional, physical, and learning problems say only other parents of handicapped children know what they go through, know their defeats and triumphs, and can explain and reach out to other parents. Staff who work to develop and implement programs for children and adult dependents with handicaps can share valuable information about what is available, rights guaranteed under federal and state laws, and how to develop needed services.

The support group meeting at C.A.P. Youth Center twice a month on the second and fourth Thursdays, 6:30 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.) breaks up for one hour into two groups for parents of children birth to 13; and another group for teenagers and young adults. The whole group meets for information sharing and planning before and after the small groups meet. The parents decide what will be discussed in the small groups.

The next meeting will be August 13 at the Martin Youth Center. A social hour for teenagers and young adults is held during the meeting with Mountain Comprehensive Care Center and Christian Appalachian Project Staff providing assistance. For parents who could not attend without child care, it will be provided. Also, staff and parents try to provide transportation for parents, if needed.

A picnic will be held at Archer Park from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., Sunday, August 23.

For more information, call Rita Conley or Eileen Schepers at Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, 886-8572.

Excel College Earns CNCE Accreditation

Excel College, Inc., with a main campus located at 215 West Main Street in Clarksburg, West Virginia and branch campuses located in Paintsville and Corbin, has recently been accredited by the Accrediting Commission of the Council for Noncollegiate Continuing Education. CNCE is the primary accrediting agency recognized by the U.S. Secretary of Education serving the noncollegiate continuing education field.

"Based upon the report of an on-site examination team, observations of instructional methods, and review of instructional materials, the Accrediting Commission can attest to the quality of the instructional program," reported Dr. Larry K. Dodds, CNCE Executive Director.

For further information about this accreditation, contact the Council for Noncollegiate Continuing Education, 530 East Main Street, Suite 501, Richmond, VA 23219. Telephone: (804) 648-6742.

The Grand Jury Process

By Attorney General Dave Armstrong

Kentucky's criminal justice system can only work if Kentuckians take part in that system. At sometime in the future, you may have the opportunity to play an active role in the system by serving on the grand jury. Therefore, it is important to know facts about the process.

A grand jury consists of twelve persons, and it is their duty to inquire into every offense for which any person has been accused. The twelve-member panel elects one of its members to serve as foreman. The foreman's duty is to administer an oath, prescribed by the Supreme Court, to each witness who testifies before the grand jury. Upon request of the foreman or the attorney for the commonwealth, the Circuit Court shall subpoena witnesses.

If the defendant wishes to present evidence, he must notify the attorney for the commonwealth in writing. The grand jury has the option to honor or deny the request.

Once the grand jurors receive, in their opinion, sufficient evidence, they issue an indictment—formal charges against the defendant. A minimum of nine concurring jurors are required to return an indictment. Failure to return an indictment does not prevent the charges from being submitted to another grand jury at a later date. However, this does discharge the defendant from custody and a refund of any money or bonds deposited as bail is made.

For more information, call my Victims' Advocacy Division at (502) 564-7600 or write to Attorney General's Office, Capitol Building, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

State's Jobless Drops For June

The number of Kentuckians holding jobs jumped by 13,100 from May to June, helping sixty-eight Kentucky counties report lower unemployment rates during the same period.

In the Big Sandy ADD district, overall there was a 16.1 rate of unemployment with 14,257 employed and 2,733 looking for work. Other counties in the district and their unemployment percentage are Johnson, 15.0; Magoffin, 21.3; Martin, 14.6, and Pike, 17.1.

Other neighboring counties include Knott with 17.4 percent unemployment and Breathitt, 16.9.

June unemployment rates were higher in 50 counties than in May, while in Boyle and Lawrence counties the rates were unchanged, according to figures released recently by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

Kentucky's jobless rate inched upward from a revised 9.0 percent in May to a preliminary 9.1 percent in June as the state's civilian labor force grew by 16,600. Meanwhile, the U.S. unemployment rate dropped from 6.3 percent in June to 6 percent for July, a low last seen in December, 1979.

A comparison of the latest figures with rates recorded in June 1986 showed 63 counties with lower rates and 57 counties with higher rates.

Sixty-three counties reported jobless rates at 10.0 percent or above, compared to 62 in May and 64 in June 1986.

Calloway county reported the lowest rate, 3.8 percent, followed by Trimble with 4.2 percent and Fayette and Woodford with 4.6 percent each.

Elliott county's 22.0 percent rate was the highest, followed by Magoffin with 21.3 percent and Morgan with 18.6 percent.

"The summer break in schools had the biggest impact on Kentucky's employment in June," said state labor market analyst Ed Blackwell. "Students and recent graduates who found summer jobs or full-time work caused a dramatic upswing in the total number of Kentuckians working. Many were new entrants into the labor force, pushing that number up as well."

A seasonal loss of 13,600 jobs in education and 300 related jobs in services offset new jobs gains, Blackwell said. "Hourly workers at schools and colleges are not included among the state's employed if they are not working and not being paid," he explained. "But a big jump in education jobs is posted when they return to work in the fall." School closings also brought a decline in educational services, leading to an overall loss of service jobs.

Agricultural jobs increased by 13,100, the largest growth in a single category between May and June. "We normally see a big jump in farm jobs at this time each year," Blackwell said. "This was the largest monthly increase in agricultural jobs in 12 months. Last year farm jobs increased by 13,400 between May and June."

Trade jobs were up by 3,400, manufacturing jobs increased by 2,500, and construction and finance, insurance and real estate grew by 1,700 each.

Other employment increases included 1,600 in state and local government; 1,000 in a category that includes domestic help, self-employed people and unpaid workers in family businesses; and 700 in transportation, communications and utilities.

The federal estimate of Kentuckians working was 1,547,700 in June, up from 1,534,600 in May and 4,500 more than the June 1986 figure of 1,543,200.

An estimated 155,400 Kentuckians were unemployed in June, up from 151,900 in May and more than in June 1986, when 153,300 of the state's civilian labor force were out of work and the revised unemployment rate was 9.0 percent.

Kentucky's June civilian labor force estimate of 1,703,100 is the highest recorded in 1987. The May estimate was 1,686,500 and the June 1986 report was 1,696,500. The civilian labor force includes non-military people who are working and unemployed people who actively are seeking jobs. It does not include anyone who is unemployed but has not looked for a job for four weeks.

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and are compiled to measure employment trends rather than to actually count people working.

Purple Martin Colony Registry

The purple martin has been under human management longer than any other North American bird species. Even before European colonization of the New World, native American Indians were enticing these companionable birds to nest in their villages by attaching hollowed-out gourds to the support poles of their wigwams. Modern man has continued his gourd-using tradition of attracting nesting martins, but he also mounts elaborate wooden, plastic, or aluminum multi-compartmented bird condos (i.e. "martin houses") on poles for the birds and proudly displays them on his lawns.

Today, however, this totally human-dependent species is experiencing long-term declines within several regions of its breeding range. In an attempt to remedy the situation, the Purple Martin Conservation Association has been formed to help coordinate the management efforts of North America's martin landlords. Through its Colony Registry Program it is attempting to locate and register most of the martin colonies in North America in preparation for several worthwhile projects designed to help the species, including a continent-wide nesting survey.

Your help is needed. If you know of someone who has a martin colony (martin houses or gourds in habited by purple martins); someone trying to attract one; or if you are interested in starting a colony yourself, please write to the P.M.C.A. with the appropriate names and mailing addresses. You can further assist the martin by looking for martin houses or gourds in peoples' yards around your community or during your travels. If you locate some, please try to obtain the mailing addresses from either the street and house numbers, rural mailboxes, phone books, or by stopping to inquire. Please send names and addresses to: Purple Martin Conservation Association, Institute for Research & Community Services, Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, Edinboro, PA 16444.

Coast Guard Academy Appointments Open

The United States Coast Guard Academy has announced that it is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as Cadet, U.S. Coast Guard, Class of 1992. Applications are being accepted for both men and women. Appointments as Coast Guard Cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional appointments or geographical quotas and must be submitted to the Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, prior to December 15, 1987.

Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or American College Testing Assessment (ACT) prior to or including the December 12, 1987 administration for the ACT, and the December 5, 1987 administration for the SAT. The competition for appointment as Cadet is based on the candidate's high school rank, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school extracurricular activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and demonstrate proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

To qualify for the competition, an applicant must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1, 1988. All applicants must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1988. Regulations stipulate that all applicants must have completed three units in English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard Cadets obtain an excellent undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances fully adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses. The constantly updated Academy curriculum leads to a Bachelor of Science degree with a strong academic emphasis on engineering and science. The selected major studies, when combined with varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career. Graduates of the Academy are awarded a Bachelor of Science degree and are commissioned as Ensigns in the United States Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools, in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

The young Academy graduate can look forward to a varied, exciting, and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard Officer. The Coast Guard performs essential humanitarian missions vital to the safety and saving of lives at sea. Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard establishes and coordinates search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintains advanced electronic and other aids to navigation scattered around the globe, operates the icebreakers which clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforces marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

For further information write: Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, CT 06320 or call (203) 444-8501.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Arthur Mosley wishes to thank all those friends, neighbors, and family who helped them in any way upon the passing of their loved one. Thanks for the food, flowers, prayers, and words of comfort expressed. A special thanks to the ministers, Green Boyd, Clinton Jones, Jimmy Hall, and Buford Slone, the staff at McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital, and to the Hall Funeral Home for their kind and courteous services.

TOO MUCH TO STOMACH

Antacids are among the most commonly taken over-the-counter drugs in this country. Yet, while antacids are available without prescription, they are still drugs. And, like many drugs, they can cause problems when combined with other medications. Depending on the formula, the dosage taken, and individual body chemistry, antacids can interfere with the absorption of prescription drugs such as antibiotics, diuretics, and digoxin (a common heart medication). This decrease in absorption could alter or negate the prescription drug's effectiveness. As a result of such concerns, the F.D.A. has proposed expanding the current warning labels on all over-the-counter antacids to include the advice that a consumer taking any prescription medication should always check with his doctor before taking an antacid.

Our pharmacists at COOLEY APOTHECARY are part of a 5,000 year old tradition of service to public health and well-being. Let that tradition of pharmacy serve you and your family by offering you the level of personal attention your family's health deserves. You have a family doctor in whom you place your confidence. Why not a family pharmacist to serve your health needs? At No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106 we will gladly answer any questions about your medication. We have plenty of free parking. MasterCard and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT:
Antacids containing calcium carbonate can cause constipation.

Strip Mine Law Anniversary Little Cause For Celebration

August 3 marked the 10th anniversary of the federal law that regulates strip mining, but environmentalists aren't celebrating. In fact, say officials at the National Wildlife Federation, the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act is not even enforced in many of the nation's coalfields.

Congress passed the Act in 1977 in response to widespread citizen outrage. Better machinery and the need for low-cost coal increased strip mining dramatically in the 1960s. In the absence of controls, however, coal operators made little effort to prevent environmental damage. Scarred hillsides, poisoned streams, landslides, and open pits were the legacy of the mines.

The 1977 law called on coal operators to restore strip-mined lands to their original contours, and to take measures to reduce erosion and acid runoff from mines. (Water becomes acidic when it comes in contact with soils found near many coal seams.) Despite initial enthusiasm, however, environmentalists have been severely disappointed by the strip mining law. According to Cathy Carlson, a lobbyist with the Federation in Washington, D.C., some coal mine operators routinely ignore the law, or take advantage of its loopholes. Compounding these problems, the federal agency responsible for enforcing the law has been crippled by mismanagement and weak leadership.

The problem began, says Carlson, when former Interior Secretary James Watt overhauled the Office of Surface Mining (OSM), the federal agency responsible for implementing the law.

"The regulatory program was barely underway when Watt became Secretary," she said. "In the name of reducing 'unnecessary and burdensome' regulation of the coal industry, Watt rewrote 91 percent of the program's rules, throwing everything into disarray." Among hundreds of changes, Watt even repealed the ban on mining within 100 feet of family burial plots.

According to Carlson, "OSM was devastated. Hundreds of personnel left the agency, and the top-level managers that Watt appointed were openly hostile to the Act."

Although the National Wildlife Federation and other conservation groups were able to get the Watt rules strengthened or repealed in court, the program has never really recovered.

The years of mismanagement have taken their toll. According to a Federation study, between 6,000 and 8,000 strip mines have been left unreclaimed since the Surface Mine Act was passed in 1977. In more than 2,000 cases, coal operators have simply ignored orders from OSM to cease mining. Since 1979, OSM has failed to assess and collect upwards of $200 million in penalties.

OSM also has failed to stop the abuse of gaping loopholes in the original law. Congress moved last May to close the most notorious loophole, the "two-acre exemption." When the 1977 law was passed, Congress agreed to exempt small mining operations that affected areas of two acres or less. Large coal companies, however, quickly took advantage. Some took the "string of pearls" approach, by which operators skipped 50 or 100 feet between each pit, and then claimed each site under the two-acre exemption.

Other companies using the two-acre loophole set up "shell corporations." On paper, several different companies would mine a number of sites in close proximity. Each company, however, shared the same equipment, employees, officers, and stockholders. In fact, it was the same company masked as several different ones.

The two-acre exemption has been repealed, but other loopholes await those who continually evade the law. Hundreds of coal operators have claimed they were engaged in "construction activity" rather than coal mining. The majority of these operators mined the coal, constructed nothing, and left the sites unreclaimed. Other mine operators have notified OSM of their intent to explore for coal prior to actual mining. Many of these "exploration activities" are nothing more than unregulated mines masquerading as exploration sites.

Coal operators who haven't bothered with legal niceties like loopholes have simply ignored the law altogether. With the repeal of the two-acre exemption, environmentalists fear that the number of these "wildcaters" will increase.

OSM officials contend that the agency's problems stem from the Carter era, and that the program is gradually improving. As evidence, they cite OSM's operating budget, which has climbed from a low of $58 million in fiscal 1982 to $106 million in President Reagan's proposed budget for 1988.

Likewise, environmentalists are heartened by the ending of the two-acre exemption and the grudging compliance by many coal companies with reclamation requirements. But, says Cathy Carlson, "After 10 years, it's a national scandal that so much abuse is still occurring." Moreover, the National Wildlife Federation intends to keep up the pressure until the abuse is ended.
