Three Are Killed in Collision On Auxier Road, Friday Evening

By B.A. Heinze

Another fatal traffic accident on the Auxier Road claimed three lives in a head-on collision, early Friday evening.

Dead are Dr. William H. Graves, his wife, Louise B. Houghton, both members of the Prestonsburg Community College faculty, and James David Elliott, electrician for the Redwood Coal Company at Evanston.

Authorities believe that Elliott, driving north toward Paintsville, crossed the center line directly into the path of Dr. Graves and his wife, who were traveling south toward Prestonsburg. Cause of the accident, which occurred across from the National Guard Armory at 8:20 p.m., has not been established.

Dr. Graves and Ms. Houghton came here just a year ago, in August, from Florida. He was an assistant professor of history, and she taught several English and writing classes at Prestonsburg Community College. Ms. Houghton was a member of The Times editorial staff from January until late June when she rejoined the faculty at PCC.

"They were top-notch people in every way. They exemplified the best attributes of the teaching profession," Dr.

Louise Houghton

Dr. William Graves

Robert Allen, academic dean at the college, said. "They will be greatly missed."

Dr. Graves held both master's and Ph.D degrees in American History from Florida State University and had published numerous articles on the American West. He had taught at the universities of Northern Iowa, Wyoming, Florida State and Tallahassee Community College.

Among the 47 indictments returned, the most common offense listed if that of theft by deception with 13 thus listed. Larry Calhoun was indicted for receiving stolen property, having in his

Also charged with receiving stolen property are Peggy Conn, 31 1/2 books of Quality Stamps from Price's Pic Pac, Prestonsburg; Glenn Dale Frasure and Bill Keathley, "pop" valued at $100 or more, from John M. ## Council, Here, Discusses Health Insurance Change

By Kurt Pickering

Prestonsburg City Council has dropped Mountain Trails as its health insurance provider, returning to Blue Cross/Blue Shield coverage through an option 2000 policy submitted by Hall and Clark Insurance of Prestonsburg.

Council members voted to take the action in its meeting Monday night, following the recommendation of a committee appointed last month by Mayor Ann Latta. The matter came up three weeks ago when the mayor told members that Mountain Trails had been put into rehabilitation by the state due to apparent insufficient resources to cover an expanding policy base.

City Manager Fred James asked the return to Blue Cross be made retroactive to Sept. 1 because "information brought to us the latter part of last week (makes us) very concerned about what would happen should we have a claim now on Mountain Trails." The city will have to pay for September twice, since this month's premium to Mountain Trails was paid in August. But James pointed out that valid insurance on city employees is the primary concern. He said he will look into recovering the September payment, but replied the effort will probably be futile.

Charles Fain of Blue Cross has received permission to make the policy retroactive to Sept. 1 if the necessary paperwork is taken care of today (Wednesday) or tomorrow at the latest.

Before the vote, Councilmen William R. Callihan and William O. Goebel, III, asked Fain some particulars. Callihan asked if it was possible to get a plan such as that available to some state employees which includes prescription drugs for $5 per prescription. Fain said that option is available only through Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) plans, which are not feasible in this area because no area physicians will participate in an HMO.

A LEGEND IN BRONZE was unveiled by sculptor, Sam McKinney, and Verna Perkins, wife of the late Congressman Carl D. Perkins.

Perkins Statue Unveiled In Ceremony at Hindman

By Tim Sizemore

A notable collection of regional political and civic leaders gathered at Hindman last Friday to pay tribute to a man who changed the face of Appalachia, the late Congressman Carl D. Perkins.

State and federal legislators, two ex-governors and politicians from surrounding counties came to witness the unveiling of a life-sized bronze statue of the late congressman by Letcher county artist Sam McKinney.

Perkins, who was elected to Congress in 1949 and held the office until his death in 1984, was a native of Knott county and always called Hindman his home. Perkins was instrumental in the passage of much social legislation, including the Coal Mine Health and Safety Act, the Vocational Education Act and the school lunch program.

When a committee of Knott county residents first approached McKinney about doing the sculpture, he was a little apprehensive. "It was like trying to transform a legend into bronze" McKinney said.

School Tax Hike Little Over '86

The Times erred last week in its report of the property tax assessment increase proposed by the Board of Education. The increase, if passed, would be four percent above that of last year, or 33.9 up from 32.4 cents per $100 valuation—not 40¢.

The increase would bring the school property tax up to that originally asked by the board last year, or an effective rate of 34 cents per $100 assessed property valuation. This is a 79% increase over 1985 when the rate was 19¢ per $100 valuation.

A public hearing will be held in the Prestonsburg High School cafeteria at 7 p.m., next Wednesday, September 23, for comment on the proposed increase.

Squirrel Festival Takes Visitors On Journey Back To Good Old Days

By Tim Sizemore

If you are a person in search of fun the old-fashioned way, maybe you should pay a visit to the annual Slone Mountain Squirrel Festival.

The festival, now in its sixth year, has steadily gained in popularity, both locally and regionally. Thousands of people gather at the event to experience the pleasure of eating wild game such as deer, ground hog, and of course, squirrel. Another crowd pleaser is the variety of music, from rock to Bluegrass, for which three stages are provided.

The preparation for the event begins months earlier, with hunts being organized to procure the game. Many people who have never tasted anything more bizarre than bologna or potted meat are pleasantly surprised by the unique flavors and aromas that were commonplace to our ancestors.

Another feature that is a special favorite of youngsters are the traditional games. For those really wanting to get a grip on things, there are the greasy pig and pole contest. Hundreds of children stand at the edge of a large circle and wait for the moment that the squealing swine is turned loose, giving them a chance for immortality in the family album. The greasy pole is another goey thrill for an adventurous youngster. Besides winning a prize of $20, the winner gets to wear the badge of victory, grease from head to toe. Also held at the festival are traditional sack races and horse shoe pitching contests, to allow a closet champion to show off his or her skills.

When it is time to eat, there is plenty of good home cooking to choose from. Besides game, other mountain delicacies such as chicken and dumplings, shuck beans, sweet potatoes and a pot-pourri of desserts are available. The people stand in a line that might stretch a quarter of a mile, but they have no fear of being turned away from the table, for there is plenty for all. Many people who do not wish to brave the line, bring picnic lunches.

The site of the festival is a hilltop at McDowell. The property has been landscaped to create a pleasant parklike atmosphere where hundreds sit under the tall poplars and enjoy their lunches while they chat with family or friends or listen to the live music.

Craftspeople from around the state attend the festival to sell their handmade wares and make new friends. Terry Ratliff, of Manton, a furniture maker, sets up his drawing horse each year to demonstrate how our ancestors made chairs. He says that the atmosphere alone is worth the trip, even if he doesn't sell anything. If you are in the market for a quilt, homemade soup, or a hand-crafted dulcimer, you are in the right place, and the craftspeople are always happy to answer questions or maybe let you join in.

Tom Whitaker, local artist and professor at Prestonsburg Community College, says that the thing he likes best about the festival is the genuineness of the people. "They're just down home folks," he commented.

The festival was the dream of Ray and Kelly Slone and at first was planned to be a family reunion, but later they decided that it should be a tribute to the area. The brothers, with the help of Carlos

Says Sentence Just

Praises be to Judge Hollie Conley and Assistant Commonwealth Attorney, Albert Burchett, for taking such an adamant stand regarding the recently publicized rape trial of two men in Floyd county.

What concerns me is to think that jurors who were obviously convinced that these two men were guilty would be concerned that they were being too severely punished with a 10-year sentence!

Rape is a crime of violence and aggression. The physical and psychological repercussions of this crime for the victim far surpass the 10-year sentence received by the perpetrators. And when you consider the age of the victim, who was reportedly only sixteen, a lifetime sentence for these two offenders could not compensate this victim for the irretrievable years she will spend trying to overcome this assault.

It was with great disdain that a fellow colleague of mine was among the jurors who petitioned to have the verdict in this case overturned. I sincerely hope that this community does not consider the opinion of one person reflective of the opinions of all employees at Mountain Comprehensive Care Center. I, personally, do not consider a 16-year old's frame of reference and judgement legitimate grounds to excuse the vicious crime of rape. In fact, many of us must have escaped rape by "luck instead of conduct" in our teenage years. It is the responsibility of adults not to take advantage of minors, not the responsibility of minors to try and second guess adults. Until we really understand the responsibilities inherent in being an adult, this culture will continue to foster the "good old boy" syndrome... "boys will be boys", and men will continue to receive no indictment at all to minor sentences for the crimes of sexual assault.

I consider the recent conviction at least a step in the right direction: The upholding of this verdict... a renewal of my faith in our local judiciary system.

Asks Court Decision To Be Reversed

I feel that the decision, made by the Ky. Supreme Court, in striking down the 1984 Broad Form Deed legislation is very unfair. It is an injustice to the taxpayers and landowners, here in Kentucky.

Back in the late 1880's and early 1900's, there were no strip mining and augering methods when the older generation signed away their minerals. They did not understand what they were signing. Most of them could not read or write and their signatures were made with an X. If they didn't know how to write their names, how did they know what was written on the deeds? They did not realize or understand what they were agreeing to. They did not know what value the minerals would bring them and their future generations. They took small amounts of money or a dress or whatever someone who talked big and influenced them to sign away the rights to their minerals and land.

I'm a retired-disabled miner and am not against anyone working. I want to see people work and have jobs, however I don't feel it is right for big oil or coal companies to destroy the land surface that we property owners and taxpayers have paid for and paid taxes on. The landowners have paid taxes on their property for years, whereas the companies that claim the mineral rights have not. Landowners need to be compensated for and agreements reached before the surface of their properties are disturbed. I don't intend to lie down and let big companies come onto my property and take over.

I would not agree to give or sign away any rights that I thought would harm my children, grandchildren, or future generations; and I'm sure that is how our forefathers felt.

We, as members of the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition want to protect our land and rights as taxpayers. We need a reversal on the Court's decision in order to protect the rights of all citizens of the Commonwealth. I'd like to ask all the citizens of Kentucky for their support on this issue.

PALMER HARRIS

Difference Of Opinion

Dale McKinney's early morning raving and ravings about politics has gone too far. Accordingly, I register my public dissent. I recently heard Mr. McKinney criticize Charles Glass, the American hostage, who escaped from custody, from his terrorist captors. Mr. McKinney for some reason, seems to think that the national media should not be publicizing Mr. Glass' heroic escape. Frankly, I think Mr. Glass is a hero, and I'm delighted with the publicity surrounding his escape.

It's about time these hideous hostage takers got some bad publicity. It's a lot better than selling them arms.

Moreheads' Trio Programs Receive Education Grants

Betty Moran, director of Morehead State University's Academic Services Center, has received two grants from the U.S. Department of Education for continued funding of MSU's Trio Programs.

The Special Services Program, received a grant of $118,783. The program is designed to assist current MSU students, who are educationally or economically disadvantaged, first generation college students, or physically handicapped, and need academic support to successfully complete college courses.

A second component of the Trio Programs, the Educational Talent Search Program, received a grant of $104,681 and is directed towards high school students who have academic talent, but need financial support to enroll in post-secondary education.

Talent Search counselors, providing college information, fee assessments, degree programs, and admissions requirements visit 21 high schools in 17 counties in the MSU area. Drop-out students, desiring to return to school, also are assisted by the Talent Search staff, Moran said.

The third component, Upward Bound, received a federal grant in May and is designed to encourage students to complete high school studies and continue on to college. Students spend class time on the MSU campus during the school year and in the summer.

Moran, who has been at MSU since 1974, also is vice president of the eight-state Southeastern Association of Educational Opportunity Programs Personnel.

Students at Workshop Are Advised by Writers

By Tim Sizemore

A writers workshop held for gifted Floyd county students may lead to future authors of Ernest Hemmingway or Pearl Buck caliber coming from the ranks of our schools.

The seminar, held for the second year at Jenny Wiley State Park, is sponsored by The Floyd County Schools Community Partnership Committee. Since its beginnings in 1986, the workshop has sought to instill a love of writing in high school students in this county.

The workshop includes among its instructors gifted and talented writers whose names read like an Appalachian literary digest. Among those participating this year were Elliot Wigginton, creator of the Fox Fire books; Gurney Norman, fiction writer; Albert Stewart, former editor of Appalachian Heritage magazine and poet; Al Smith, journalist and host of KET's Comment on Kentucky; Loyal Jones, author and director of the Appalachian Center at Berea College; Ann Johnson, of KET's Headwaters program; Angie DeBord, playwright, and Alice Kinder, author.

The students attended sessions held in different meeting rooms at the lodge in order to become acquainted with the various aspects of the writing profession.

Al Smith told his group that the best way to begin writing is to keep a daily journal, and Loyal Jones' advice was to read works by local writers and become more aware of the heritage we all share.

One of the purposes of the workshop is to stimulate interest in a newly created student publication, "MOUNTAIN MAGIC." The magazine is in its third year of publication.

A Terrible Waste

"If you're not dodging cars, you're dodging rocks," so Coroner Roger Nelson was quoted this week as saying of the stretch of hazardous highway between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. He estimates 15 persons have lost their lives on this heavily traveled two-lane segment of US 23. It is poorly engineered with unstable sandstone cliffs on one side, the river on the other—and those who travel it are caught in the middle. Many who work in Paintsville travel Old 23, over Abbott Mountain. This isn't the greatest road in the state, but it's far safer than US 23. But what can those who work at the hospital, American Standard, or who live in or near Van Lear do? They literally run the gauntlet twice each day. If they're lucky, they survive. Last Friday night, three didn't. It's a terrible waste, and we all lose.

His wife, Ms. Houghton, was a graduate of Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Mo., and received her master's degree in political science from the University of Northern Iowa where she was a graduate assistant. She had also done postgraduate work at Florida State University. Their deaths mark the third among PCC faculty members due to traffic accidents. In January, 1985, Mrs. Susan Sparks Nutter was fatally injured in a collision on Ky. 114 near Salyersville. Friday night's accident took place on a segment of U.S. 23 between Paintsville and Prestonsburg which is subject to unusually heavy traffic. It has long been the focus of public censure and is even now scheduled for debate in the U.S. Senate. Coroner Roger Nelson said that he estimates 15 people have been killed on the seven-mile stretch during the past six years. Not all of these fatalities have been from traffic accidents; some have been the result of fallen rock from cliffs above the road. "The road's a deathtrap. If you're not dodging cars, you're dodging rocks coming off the hill," Nelson said. Dr. Allen said that Dr. Graves and Ms. Houghton had bought a home near Van Lear some months ago and had planned to stay in the area indefinitely. The college has established a memorial scholarship fund which will bear the names of the two instructors. A memorial service was held in the auditorium of Prestonsburg Community College, yesterday (Tuesday), at 11:30 a.m. The families have requested that expressions of sympathy be made in the form of donations to the Dr. William H. Graves-Louise B. Houghton Scholarship Fund. Dr. Graves is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ruth L. Graves, of Ocala, Fla.; one sister, Sandra Graves Gough, and his grandfather, William L. University facilities and the encouragement of art department head Tom Sternal, McKinney began the project early last summer. Officials taking part in the dedication ceremonies spoke of the esteem in which the late congressman was held. Among these were former Governor Bert T. Combs, former governor and United States Senator Wendell Ford, Dr. Grady Stumbo and the late representative's son, Congressman Chris Perkins. Governor Combs reviewed the accomplishments of Carl Perkins and told of his commitment to his people. He told the audience that the name of Carl Perkins would live on forever as being synonymous with honesty and unselfish public service. The late legislator's son, Chris Perkins, emotionally told the group that his father's dream would live on and that more work was needed to insure that his accomplishments and ideas were carried out. The ceremony ended with the unveiling of the statue by the late congressman's widow, Verna Perkins, and the artist, Sam McKinney.

Implementation of a countywide emergency medical services system was asked in a resolution adopted at Monday's meeting of the Floyd fiscal court. The annual display of livestock and handicrafts and the festivities associated with the Floyd County Fair will begin today (Wednesday) at Archer Park, here. The Floyd County Board of Education has received $533,825 of the $711,767 approved by HEW for repair of flood-damaged school properties. Dead is William DeRossett, 53, of Kendallville, Ind., formerly of Buck's Branch, near Martin. There died: A. Vincent Adams, 65, of Dinwood, September 10; Mary Ellen Hall, 40, of Columbus, O., formerly of Betsy Layne, September 6, in a Columbus hospital; Fountain Vire, 80, of Louisa, formerly of Thomas, last Thursday in a Louisa hospital; Sam Cross, 78, of Ligon, Monday at the McDowell hospital.

For the second time within 10 days a falling meteorite landed at Betsy Layne recently. The meteorite weighed 35 pounds, was 18 inches long, and irregular in width and thickness. According to County Attorney Forrest D. Short, indictments were returned by the grand jury this week against three men on cattle rustling charges after theft of a number of cattle from a farm owned by W. L. Stumbo, near Martin. Prestonsburg's WPA street widening program reached Court Street this week, when workers under the direction of A. J. Archer, began excavation preparatory to adding approximately six feet of pavement to the width of the street. There died: Wes Hicks, 76, Sunday at the home of a son at Mousie.

HONORED FOR HER CULTURAL CONTRIBUTIONS, Mrs. Kathryn Stumbo Frazier accepts the order of Kentucky Colonel from park Manager Leon Russell.

Council voted unanimously to follow the recommendation of the insurance committee, chaired by Dr. Gary Brown, to accept the Hall and Clark bid. Five other bids were submitted. Mayor Latta reported that Kirby Ison, district engineer with the state highway department, has for the fourth time denied a request to place a traffic light at the intersection of US 23 and Arnold Avenue. Latta said Ison's letter cited a study and traffic count but did not state figures. Further, Latta said she had been told she would be made aware of the study but was not, and that it had been completed for some time "since July—and there's been construction going on there since July. I don't know how they could have gotten any kind of accurate count." She said she had protested the decision in a return letter to Ison, and had also written state Transportation Secretary C. Leslie Dawson to ask that the decision be overturned. The mayor's concern goes beyond the amount of traffic at the intersection. She pointed out that from the intersection of US 23 and the Mountain Parkway (Kentucky 11) coming into town, "you have a 55-mile an hour zone into a blind curve ending in a 35-mile an hour zone at the (Bert Combs) bridge." Councilwoman Margie N. Osborne commented that "the speed limit should be dropped to 35 there at the Western Sizzlin'." Latta responded, "We have asked (the state) to drop the speed limit, we've asked them to do a lot of things." Representatives of the Jenny Wiley Festival asked for council's review and approval of a monument to pioneer and legend Jenny Wiley. Festival co-founder Maxine S. Bierman and her group displayed a drawing of the monument, which will be placed on the grounds at the Municipal Building. Hirons Memorial Works, Inc., of Mt. Orab, Ohio, will produce the memorial and hopes to have it ready by Oct. 10, in time for this year's Jenny Wiley Festival. Council gave its approval. The monument will contain a brief history of Jenny Wiley, artwork of the legendary figure and a dedication to the memory of E.L. Bierman, Maxine Bierman's late husband and Festival co-founder. Passed on second reading was an ordinance setting a $15 per day fee for the use of the municipal parking lot by non-profit organizations, with an exemption granted to the Jenny Wiley Festival. The fee is expected to defray cleanup costs. Council also briefly reviewed bids from three firms to refurbish the city's 1974 Mack C.F. Pumper Fire truck. The bids ranged from a low of $27,396 from Worldwide Equipment, of Allen, (to $31,336 from Allegheny-Ona, a West Virginia firm), to a high of $54,622 from the Appleton, Wis., firm of Pierce Manufacturing. Since the high was nearly double the low, council voted to table awarding the bid pending a review of all three bids by James and City Fire Chief Tom Blackburn. Council also authorized James to work up advertisements for a new truck, funded partly through the Big Sandy ADD grant announced at the previous council meeting. In other action, council declared one of its recently-acquired police cruisers surplus so it can be sold, probably to the city of Salyersville; agreed to allow First Baptist Church to build a sidewalk that will include a small piece of city property on the edge of the Richmond Plaza parking lot; authorized Mayor Latta to appoint Mrs. Dixon Nunnery to the Archer Park board, replacing Lois May, who has been serving on the board despite declining reappointment when her term expired in March; heard a complaint from "about five" citizens, relayed by Councilman Callihan, that no police officer was on hand at Prestonsburg Elementary School when classes let out Monday, which James and Police Chief Elmo Allen promised to investigate; received an invitation from Prestonsburg Community College to attend an observance today (Wednesday) of the 200th birthday of the U.S. Constitution; and heard complaints, also relayed by Callihan, that motorists are ignoring newly-erected stop signs on both ends of the new Goble Roberts bridge. Council also tabled the gasoline report in the absence of Councilman Thomas J. Tackett, and authorized James to seek better bids, to be presented in writing at the next council meeting. Council members present were Adrian Blackburn, Brown, Callihan, Goebel and Osborne; absent were Frank A. Adams, Harry Ray Porter and Tackett. The next scheduled council session is Monday, Sept. 28.

P'burg Gets ARC Grant

Prestonsburg is among 16 Kentucky cities that will receive grants totaling $100,000 from the Appalachian Regional Commission Downtown Revitalization Program, Gov. Martha Layne Collins announced recently. The grant program is designed to provide funds to assist Appalachian cities develop healthy central business districts. The grants range from $4,000 to Flemingsburg up to $6,500 to several cities, of which Prestonsburg is one. Gov. Collins said funding for ARC programs has been reduced in recent years; however, the grants awarded this year will continue to promote creation of jobs and renewal of commerce in Appalachian downtown areas. Other cities selected to receive grants are Ashland, Berea, Corbin, Flemingsburg, Greenup, Harlan, Jackson, Lancaster, Louisa, Middlesboro, Paintsville, Richmond, Russell Springs, Somerset, and Warfield. The ARC Downtown Revitalization Program is administered in Kentucky by the Department of Local Government. Grants are awarded on the basis of the cities' commitment to upgrade downtown business districts to encourage community-wide economic development. Cities in the 49 Appalachian counties in Kentucky are eligible for grants through this program.

Auxier-Inez Road Work To Be Let

A 2.9-mile reconstruction project on Kentucky 3, the Auxier-Inez road in Martin county is scheduled for contract letting, September 18. The Transportation Cabinet recently authorized $10.7 million for the construction phase of the project. The work involves reconstruction of Kentucky 3 from 2,112 feet east of the Johnson county line to 1,056 feet west of Sandlick Branch. The work is part of a comprehensive plan to reconstruct 18.1 miles of Kentucky 3 from Auxier to the Inez Bypass. The project will upgrade the road, making travel safer and more convenient for motorists. All phases of the project sections are estimated to cost $79.2 million and are being financed with Resource Recovery funds.

Two Sentenced On Rape Charge

By B.A. Heinze
Despite an attempt by seven jurors to overturn the sentence they had earlier delivered, Michael Clifton, 21, and Mike Woods, 22, were sentenced by Circuit Judge Hollie B. Conley, Friday, to 10 years in prison. In a hearing held August 28, Judge Conley denied the petition to overturn conviction of the two on a 1986 rape charge. Some of those signing the petition sought to have the case retired, although if it had been granted, the motion would have, in effect, declared the defendants innocent. Five of the seven jurors who signed the petition said they had not read it, and all but one still felt the guilty verdict should stand. Most of them said, however, they felt the sentence was too severe in view of the circumstances. Ten-year prison terms are the minimum allowed under state law in first-degree rape convictions. Clifton and Woods, both of Allen, were convicted of the rape of a 16-year-old girl. A request has been filed with the Kentucky Court of Appeals to overturn the verdict, but if this is not successful, the two will, under state law, be required to serve at least five years before they will be eligible for parole.

Festival Leaders Honored For Work

By Tim Sizemore
Last Saturday at May Lodge, two women, Mrs. Edith Fitzpatrick James and Mrs. Kathryn Stumbo Frazier, were honored whose contribution to mountain heritage cannot be over-estimated. They were honored by friends and relatives in a ceremony conducted at the park for their years of service in preserving the customs and culture of our area and for founding the Highlands Folk Festival. Mrs. James, founder of the festival, was unable to attend the awards ceremony, but Mrs. Frazier was on hand to tell of the great contribution made by Mrs. James and her many accomplishments. The ceremony came as a surprise to Mrs. Frazier, who had been introducing festival acts. The idea for the tribute was conceived by Prestonsburg businessman James J. Carter, who said that the two had made such a contribution to the preservation of our culture that he felt that it only fitting that they should be recognized for their achievements. Among the honors bestowed on them, they were named Kentucky Colonels by proclamation of Governor Martha Layne Collins. Other awards included honorary captaincy of the Belle of Louisville, and presentation of a signed print by Kentucky Heritage artist Russell May. Park Director Leon Russell said that the annual festival was one of the highlights of the year. "When I need to know something about the area, I ask Mrs. Kathryn or Mrs. Edith, and they never fail to help me," Russell said.

For Dr. Richard Terrie, it was literally like discovering new worlds when, in 1984, he found a possible breeding ground for planets around the star Beta Pictoris.

"It was really unbelievable," recalls Terrie, a planetary astronomer at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. "We put together the images and all of the sudden there was something we couldn't explain."

Terrie's observation, made with Dr. Bradford Smith of the University of Arizona in Tucson, was only the first of several recent milestones in the search for other planets, and possibly other life, in the galaxy. What they found, a thin disk of dust surrounding that distant star, supports the more intriguing suggestion that solar systems may come as part and parcel with the birth of all stars.

"People have seen more and more evidence for these disks around all types of young stars," says Dr. Lee Hartmann of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Mass. "Indeed, the presence of an extended halo of dust and gas may be the norm rather than the exception."

Future research, using advanced detection techniques both on the ground and in space, may also provide important clues about how our own solar system formed—and perhaps seriously challenge the notion of its uniqueness.

To find the tell-tale signs of planet formation, astronomers begin by studying the miracle of a star's birth out of a vast cloud of gas and dust in space. This cloud slowly contracts into a fiery ball. The tremendous energies generated by the contraction are transformed into motion, and, as the embryonic star begins to spin, some gas and dust are left behind in a rotating cloud.

As the star's spin slows, the gas and dust around it is drawn out into a flat disk. In this orbiting disk, the captured dust particles engage in a sort of cosmic demolition derby, banging into one another over and over again for millions of years.

Eventually, a few careening particles stick together to form irregular clumps that, once large enough, develop weak gravitational fields that attract more gas and dust. In a process that may take longer than a half-billion years, these gaseous clumps turn into more solid bodies and, finally, into planets.

Our sun and its solar system are thought to have formed out of a similar process some 4½ billion years ago. The Beta Pictoris system, by contrast, is less than a billion years old and about twice as massive as the sun. It is 53 light-years away (a light-year is the distance that light travels in one year—about 6 trillion miles). New photographs show that the dust in the disk around this "sun" has already progressed from a sandlike stage to a more pebblelike stage.

Beta Pictoris is only one candidate for planetary evolution among the Milky Way's billions of stars. Recent studies have revealed more than a half-dozen others, including:

*HL Tauri. Dr. Steven Beckwith of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., and Dr. Anneila Sargent of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena have found a disk of gas in "Keplerian orbit" around this star, 500 light-years away, in the constellation Taurus. The disk material appears to follow the third law of planetary motion described by Johannes Kepler in the 17th century, with the gas and dust closest to the star revolving faster than material farther out—just as the Earth revolves around the sun faster than the outermost planet, Pluto. "The material forms a very elongated structure, so it looks like a disk centered on the star and lying nearly edge on as seen from the Earth," Sargent says. "As far as we can tell, the dust grains have not yet started to coalesce."

*Fu Orionis. Located some 1,600 light-years away in the constellation Orion, this star belongs to a class that periodically flares to brightnesses hundreds of times that of the sun. Hartmann, who has studied the object with Dr. Scott Kenyon, also with the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, believes the star flares because of gas and dust falling on its surface from a surrounding disk. "This star—and others of its class—may be at an early stage before the actual beginning of a planetary evolution," Hartmann says. According to the theory, the dust eventually begins clumping together and starts clearing out the disk, leaving less of it to fall on the central star. The star, then, becomes more stable and the flares cease.

*T Tauri. This complex star system that lies near HL Tauri offers evidence for being accompanied by a massive gas cloud. Indeed, Dr. Benjamin Zuckerman of the University of California in Los Angeles and his colleagues have observed a cloud in Keplerian orbit around one or both stars in this suspected double, or binary, star system. These systems traditionally have been considered unfavorable environments for planetary formation because of the intricate and interlocking motions of the two stars.

*Six nearby stars. A survey by astronomers at the National Optical Astronomy Observatories and the University of Arizona of some 50 stars within 12 light-years of Earth showed six with signs of surrounding dust clouds that could be linked to the presence of planets. One of these stars, Epsilon Eridani, made headlines recently when a team of Canadian astronomers reported compelling evidence of a body two to five times the size of Jupiter in its vicinity. Using a new technique for analyzing starlight, the astronomers detected slight wobbles in the star's motion, possibly caused by the gravitational tug of a planet. The Canadian scientists reported similar observations for Gamma Cephei, a star about 48 light-years away from Earth.

Although an increasing number of suspected solar systems keeps turning up, finding them isn't easy. First, the stars are extremely far from Earth, requiring ever-larger, more expensive telescopes. Even with giant optical telescopes, possible planets around other "suns" are difficult to detect because their faint light is overwhelmed by the brightness of the nearby star. It's like trying to see a candle on top of the Empire State Building from 100 miles away—with the sunrise in the background.

Prior to modern detection techniques, astronomers primarily relied on indirect methods to infer the existence of a planet in orbit around a star. For example, they used similar—but much less accurate—techniques to those used by the Canadian astronomers to calculate any deviation in a star's motion along what should otherwise be a straight path.

Today's techniques are more direct. "The main difference is that we don't detect planets themselves, but the material out of which they are made," Beckwith says. "It's much easier to detect planetary material before planets actually form."

Increasingly, astronomers look for evidence of this material at infrared wave lengths, which can help detect "cooler" material, such as orbiting dust. Typically, a star's surface is some 7,000 degrees Fahrenheit, Hartmann notes, while the surrounding dust will only be about 300 degrees Fahrenheit. The Infrared Astronomical Satellite (IRAS) of 1983 identified some two dozen stars with "infrared excess," an additional emission indicating the presence of some "cool" material extending beyond those stars.

In a ground-base effort, Dr. Stephen Strom of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and his colleagues search for possible planetary environments by looking at the "stellar wind" ejected from a star. Imagine a star-disk system as an LP record with an orange at its center. If this "record" is tilted toward the Earth, a high-velocity stream of particles would be seen squirting from only the top of the "orange." The opaque, extended disk of gas and dust, or "record," would mask any wind emerging from the other side of the star. "By observing the winds, we can learn something about the disks," says Strom, who so far has found 16 objects that follow this pattern.

The Hubble Space Telescope, which will improve detection techniques by at least tenfold when launched in 1988, should "allow us to resolve these disks and to track their histories," Strom says. While astronomers have found the dust thought to be the building blocks of planets, they now want to watch the construction process. "The next step will be to look for evolutionary characteristics," Beckwith says. "The interesting question is how does dust and gas condense into planets?" To help answer that question, Beckwith and Sargent are looking for disk systems at different stages of development.

One future instrument that could help is the Circumstellar Imaging Telescope, currently being developed by Richard Terrie, which should be capable of detecting Jupiter-sized planets near stars up to 32 light-years away.

"We've understood stars and their evolution," Terrie says. "Now we are on the threshold of understanding the evolution of solar systems."

Presbyterian Men Church Picnic Set

The annual church picnic of the First Presbyterian Church will be held Sunday, October 20, at the Dewey Dam Spillway, Pavilion 3, at 5:30 p.m. The Men's Fellowship of the Church are planning the activity, and with the traditional hot dog and hamburgers fare.

All members and friends of the church are urged to attend.

Before it can obtain enough food to add one ounce to its body weight, the sea sponge must filter a ton of water through its pores.

Kentucky Quilts To Be Exhibited in Australia

"Covering Kentucky," a collection of antique Kentucky quilts, will go on exhibit in Sydney, Australia Nov. 6-15. The exhibition, which also includes a small concurrent show of Australian quilts, is being sponsored by The Kentucky Quilt Project of Louisville and the Women's Committee of the National Trust of Australia.

Mrs. Shelly Zegart, of Louisville, director of The Kentucky Quilt Project, and Mrs. Marie Louise Lacazette, of Versailles, curators of the show, will accompany it to Australia. The exhibition will be opened at a luncheon on Nov. 6, hosted by Mrs. Laurence W. Lane, Jr., wife of the U.S. Ambassador to Australia.

Mrs. Zegart, a nationally known quilt collector, quilt authority, lecturer and author, will take 25 of her finest antique Kentucky-made designs for exhibit. Mrs. Lacazette, a direct descendant of some of the state's foremost pioneer families, has retained many of their quilts in her collection. She will take 15 of her most notable designs for exhibition in Australia. Both women plan to present lectures and tours in conjunction with the exhibit.

Dr. Annette Gero, an Australian quilt collector, will mount that country's position of the show. Gero first began documenting Australian quilts after studying with Shelly Zegart and The Kentucky Quilt Project several years ago. "Currently in Australia, there is a great deal of interest and research into their quilt heritage," noted Mrs. Zegart. "This exhibition, the lectures and tours will help increase that awareness."

In 1982, The Kentucky Quilt Project, a non-profit organization, made a major museum exhibition of 19th century Kentucky quilts which traveled internationally for two years with the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service. The exhibition was acclaimed nationally for its concept, its depth and its creation of movement by other states to conduct similar surveys and exhibitions.

Sale of Champion Ham To Fund Scholarship

A $34,000 sale of the Grand Champion Country Ham at the Kentucky State Fair Country Ham Breakfast has provided the initial contribution to a newly announced Charles E. Barnhart Scholarship Fund to support academic excellence at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Named after the dean, the scholarship fund was announced as part of Dr. Barnhart's induction into the Saddle and Sirloln Club, a portrait gallery of nationally recognized livestock leaders. Dr. Virgil Hayes, chairman of the UK Department of Animal Sciences, presented the portrait and announced the scholarship.

The ham was purchased by Anna Hirtton, 4, granddaughter of Louisville developer Al Schneider. The 17 and ¼-pound ham was produced by Harper's Country Hams of Clinton. The buyer designated the scholarship to receive the funds.

Dr. Barnhart, who has been dean of the Ag College since 1969, was recognized by the Saddle and Sirloln Club for his record as a scientist, outstanding administrator and one of the nation's highly respected agriculturists. He joined the UK College of Agriculture in 1948 and has held various positions during his career.

YOUR AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY wants you to know that we have the means of saving half of all cancer patients. Fourteen cancers—which had poor prognoses only a few decades ago—are now being cured in many cases. The list includes breast cancer, hodgkin's disease, and acute lymphocytic leukemia, a childhood cancer that used to be almost always fatal. In fact, today, over 3 million men, women and children have been saved from cancer. That's why you are needed to volunteer your time and talents to help the American Cancer Society. ## Moratorium Agreement Set In Surface Mine Litigation

Natural Resources Secretary Mary Helen Miller signed a settlement agreement on Wednesday, September 9, to end the year-old lawsuit filed against the state's administration of the surface mining primacy program.

The agreement, to be submitted to Kentucky's United States Eastern District Judge Bertlesman, primarily addresses aspects of the program left over from the early 1980's when the surface mining land was first implemented by Kentucky. Provisions are also made for increasing the state's computerization of mining sites, increased use of helicopter overflights, development of additional training programs for inspectors, and completion of hydrological and acidity studies.

A federal appropriation of $13 million spread over the next three years is a provision of the agreement which must be in place before the requirements go into effect. Secretary Miller reports that, based on her meetings in Washington, the state is anticipating full federal funding of the settlement.

The settlement signed on Tuesday was preceded by two other proposed agreements which Secretary Miller rejected because they did not adequately reflect the participation of all coal-related interests both in Kentucky and in Washington.

The lawsuit, brought by attorneys for the National Wildlife Federation and the Kentucky Resources Council, sought more thorough record-keeping by parties responsible for mine site abandonment, the correction of on-site violations, and the resolution of pending penalty assessments. A hydrological study mandated in the agreement will address current acidity problems on some mine sites as well as provide valuable technical information for future engineering designs for coal removal.

Miller concluded that "the settlement will not be easy to implement. It is an ambitious amount of work within specified time limits. Nonetheless, the federal monies give us the opportunity to address the lingering problems of the interim program and enhance our present program consequently. Kentucky will then be able to look forward to administering the surface mining act rather than continue to be hampered by old problems. We have a great challenge before us, but I am convinced we can achieve these tasks. It is in Kentucky's best interest that we do."

The attorneys for the plaintiffs have agreed to a two and one-half year moratorium against further legal action on the settlement which will allow the Cabinet time to have improvements in place before defending those same programs again in litigation.

Huge Surface Mine May Become New Community With UK Help

A 17,000-acre reclaimed surface mine in Perry county may someday be a thriving community of homes, shops and industries.

Cyprus Coal Co., owner and operator of the Star Fire property, has contracted with the University of Kentucky to help develop a land-use plan which they may lead to such a development. The property lies about midway between Hazard and Hindman, an area where large expanses of level land are virtually nonexistent.

The contract, worth $60,000, is being hailed as a first step in what could become the largest-ever partnership between UK and a minerals company.

"This project is about being able to mine the coal and at the same time doing it in a way that retains the usefulness of the land," said UK president David P. Roselle.

If successful, the project could become a model for reclamation of mined land in the entire Appalachian region, says John Tate, property supervisor for Southern Realty, a Cyprus subsidiary.

Under the initial contract, the Kentucky Geological Survey will determine the land-related needs in the area and will propose directions to take to make the best use of the land. This first report is expected to be completed by Dec. 31.

Researchers in the Kentucky Geological Survey will study issues such as surface and ground water resources, slope stabilization, and how best to configure the huge amounts of soil and rock that are removed during the mining operation.

Also, other UK researchers will conduct socio-economic studies to assess the impact the development would have on the region. Industrial planning specialists will determine how best to make the property attractive to industry and other employers. College of Agriculture researchers will study cattle grazing, vegetation, and wildlife issues.

David Adams, UK extension agent for Perry county, says cattle grazing could be an important interim use of the land between mining and industrial or residential development. He also envisions the possibility of commercial fish production in the new ponds and lakes created during the mining process.

In the longer run, Adams thinks the creation of suitable land for industries and homes will have a major impact on the area.

"There are very few sites for industry to locate in this area, and most of the level sites are in the floodplain," he says.

He also pointed out that the lack of good homesites has pushed the price of even modest homes higher than those in larger cities such as Lexington.

Although mining is already underway on part of the land, Adams points out that the proposed development is a long-term project that is likely to continue into the next century.

Planning To Retire

December is a favorite time of the year for Big Sandy Area people to retire. However, September is the time you should be thinking about it. Too many people wait until the last minute and often find that the process of retirement may take a little longer than they expected.

Generally, we like to have people contact us about three months before they are ready to retire. That gives them and us plenty of time to go over their plans, process the application, and have benefits start the month they quit work.

In considering various retirement options under Social Security, a person should note the following:

EARLY RETIREMENT—Benefits can be paid as early as 62. Such benefits are reduced for each month before 65, up to 20 percent for a worker who starts receiving benefits at 62. A widow or widower may apply for Social Security survivors benefits on the earnings record of a deceased spouse as early as 60.

DELAYED RETIREMENT—People who delay retirement past 65 receive a 3 percent retirement credit for each year (4 percent for each month) after 65 up to 70 that they do not get a benefit. Starting in 1990, the delayed retirement credit will increase gradually until it reaches 8 percent by the year 2009.

EFFECT OF EARNINGS—There is a limit to how much a person can earn and still receive all Social Security benefits. The amount of the annual earnings limit depends on one's age and changes each year with increases in general wage levels. A monthly test is applied the first year of retirement, which makes it possible for a person to retire at any time of the year without having earnings in the months before retirement reduce benefits. For people who plan to continue to work after retirement, it's important to let Social Security know how much they expect to earn.

MEDICARE—People don't have to retire to get Medicare. A person who plans to keep working after 65 can still get Medicare by applying at any Social Security office 2 or 3 months before 65. Medicare provides help with hospital and doctor bills for people 65 and over, certain disabled people under 65, and people with permanent kidney failure.

EFFECT OF OTHER TYPES OF INCOME—To encourage people to plan for their retirement using Social Security as a base, the law provides that, in general, only income from wages and self-employment affect Social Security benefits. This means that income from savings, private insurance, and other income may not affect benefits. However, the public pension offset may affect a spouse's Social Security benefits if he or she also receives a pension from Federal, State, or local government employment not covered by Social Security. Also people who become eligible for both a Social Security benefit as a retired or disabled worker and a pension from work not covered under Social Security may have their Social Security benefit reduced.

If you want to plan your retirement call the Big Sandy Area Social Security office for an appointment with one of our retirement counselors. We work out what is best for you.

More information about required reports can be obtained at the Big Sandy Area Social Security office located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

Deciding When Children Can Care For Themselves

As children go back to school this fall, many working parents are looking into alternatives for after school care. With the high costs of daycare and babysitting, some families are considering allowing their children to look after themselves when they come home from school.

The biggest factor to look at when deciding between supervised care and self-care is whether the child is able to look after himself properly.

"Eight years old is the absolute minimum age for a child to be left on his own," said University of Kentucky Extension sociologist Gary Hansen. Eight is the earliest age at which most

Everybody's Science The Lean Look

The public is demanding leaner meat and the U.S. Department of Agriculture is listening.

Dr. Aubrey Cartwright, an animal physiologist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Georgetown, Del., is using electronic equipment to look at the size of fat cells in chickens and how that might affect how much chickens eat. Chickens, like people, have natural sensors that tell them when they've had enough to eat. They also have fat-detection mechanisms that Cartwright believes regulate body fat percentages based only on the size of fat cells, not the actual amount of fat in chickens. Cartwright hopes that once he understands how this works he can find a way to trick chickens into thinking they have more fat than they actually have.

Other ARS scientists are also taking advantage of the latest equipment and techniques to look closely at how animals produce fat, rather than concentrating on crossbreeding.

Dr. Gary J. Hausman, an animal physiologist in Athens, Ga., has found a way to predict genetic leanness in pig fetuses. If blood and tissue samples show a high level of a swine growth hormone coupled with a low level of a key enzyme, the fetus will develop into a genetically lean piglet. The immediate benefit is knowing before birth whether a piglet is worth raising for breeding, rather than spending time and money caring for the pig and then finding out the adult pig is genetically programmed to be fat.

Hausman and colleagues are also testing the effects of hormones and other substances on the development of fat cells, work that could someday lead to "anti-fat pills" or food supplement for pigs, and possibly even people.

Many other scientists are also studying the enzymes that help animals convert feed to fat. If they can learn how these enzymes work, they may be able to control where, and how much, fat is formed.

If the new inside look at livestock delivers what it promises, trimming meat with a knife will go the way of the neighborhood butcher. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture) children have the basic skills needed to take care of themselves.

However, Hansen was quick to point out that not every eight-year-old is ready to be left alone. Parents should evaluate the abilities of their children before making a decision.

Hansen said that before he is left to take care of himself, a child should be able to:

- understand and remember verbal or written instructions
- read and write well enough to take telephone messages
- operate locks in doors
- use a telephone to contact an adult for help

—understand what community resources (such as the police) are available to him and when they should be contacted

Parents should sit down with the child and discuss what to do in special situations, such as if a stranger comes to the door or if the electricity goes off. A designated helper, either a parent or a neighbor, should always be available to the child if help is needed. The child should also be able to handle minor first aid, such as band-aids for cuts, without adult assistance.

If the child is expected to use appliances such as the stove or vacuum cleaner, he should know how to operate them safely.

But the most important thing to consider, Hansen said, is whether the child feels safe when home alone. If he is uncomfortable about either the amount of his responsibility in the house or his safety in the neighborhood, it would be wise to look into a different form of after-school care.

During the 1985 program year, the U.S. Department of Labor's Job Corps operated 106 centers providing training in a residential setting for disadvantaged youths, according to the department's annual report.

Centre Leads Nation In Alumni Support

Centre College has retained its No. 1 national ranking for alumni participation in annual giving for the fourth consecutive year and has set a national record in that category for the third straight year.

Centre received annual donations from 75.3 percent of its alumni in 1986-87 as 5,962 of its 7,918 alumni contributed to the College's Annual Fund. The Annual Fund also reached a record level—more than $1.4 million, or a 16 percent increase from 1985-86.

"The extraordinary efforts by our alumni in annual giving have again enhanced Centre's distinction as the nation's No. 1 college for alumni loyalty," said Centre President Richard L. Morrill. "The alumni's ever-increasing support speaks eloquently about their belief in Centre's academic stature and is a vital element in the College's strategic plan to serve as a national model for the small, academically selective college (those with 1,000 or fewer students)."

In 1986-87, Centre finished ahead of Williams College (Mass.), which was second with 68.7 percent, and Dartmouth College (N.H.), which was third with 65 percent.

The national average for alumni participation was 22.6 percent in 1985-86, the most recent year for which such a figure is available, according to the Council for Financial Aid to Education.

Centre's previous national record was 75.1 percent in 1985-86. Centre first set the national record in 1984-85 with a participation rate of 74.1 percent. That broke the record of 72.2 percent that Princeton University set in 1959.

The grand total of donations and grants to Centre in 1986-87 (the year ended July 31, 1987) was a record $5.6 million. Contributions to the Annual Fund are earmarked for operating expenses. Most of the other money the college receives is applied to its endowment (currently $42 million), restricted funds and capital projects.

Since July 1982, Centre has been awarded more than $7.2 million in grants from 17 national foundations.

Centre is recognized as a national leader in fund-raising, particularly among small colleges. This summer Centre received a prestigious national honor for having the best overall fund-raising program in 1985-86 among colleges with fewer than 10,000 alumni/ae.

Centre was one of only four colleges and universities that won the award for total development—the highest award—in the CASE/U.S. Steel Achievement in Mobilizing Support (AIMS) recognition program. It was Centre's eighth consecutive major award and 11th overall in annual competition sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education and U.S. Steel.

The other winners were three of the nation's leading colleges and universities: Princeton University (doctorate-granting institution); Wesleyan University (comprehensive institution); and Swarthmore College (general baccalaureate institution with more than 10,000 alumni/ae).

Founded in 1819, Centre is the nation's 13th oldest independent liberal arts college. It is coeducational, with a tradition of academic excellence.

Centre anticipates a record enrollment of 870 students when classes begin Sept. 14.

Settlement Reached On Made In America Case

Attorney General David L. Armstrong announced recently that a settlement has been reached with Nutone, Inc. of Cincinnati who through Hall Mack, of Harrodsburg, manufactures bathroom products.

Armstrong filed suit against Hall Mack and its parent company in May, alleging that the defendants violated the Consumer Protection Act by packaging items which were marked to imply that these items were manufactured in the United States when, in fact, they were made in Taiwan.

Under the terms of the settlement, Nutone will pay civil penalties of $120,000 which is the largest such penalty ever obtained by the Consumer Protection Division. The company is also stopped from mislabeling its products sold in Kentucky under the Hall Mack line.

"This case is unique," Armstrong said. "To our knowledge, no other consumer office in any other state has sued a manufacturer under its Consumer Protection Act for mislabeling their goods as to country of origin. The terms of this settlement truly do restore credibility to the phrase, 'Made in America.'"

Armstrong said the order, which was signed today by Mercer Circuit Judge Stephen M. Shewmaker, calls for Nutone to make full restitution to all consumers who return their mismatched goods. The company also must provide labels, signs and other information advising consumers of the mismatched products and of their right to return those products upon proof of purchase.

Morris Fork Craft Fair To Be Held September 26

Morris Fork Craft, Inc., a non-profit organization of more than 80 craft producers living in nine southeastern Kentucky counties, will hold its 9th annual craft fair at the Morris Fork Community Center, Saturday, September 26, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Blacksmithing, basket-making, quilting, spinning, toy and doll making, chair-making, weaving and woodwork are among the authentic mountain craft demonstrations planned for the day. Handmade items will be accepted from other than craft members for judging and ribbons will be awarded. Craft members' products will be on sale in the sales room. Free snacks will be provided.

Entertainment this year will be provided by local talent, featuring country and gospel music and cloggers.

Morris Folk Crafts operates out of the old Morris Folk schoolhouse located in a corner of Breathitt county between Booneville and Buckhorn just off Kentucky Route 28.

The Morris Fork Board of Directors (which is elected from among the craft producers) invites you to come and enjoy the handicrafts that are marketed nationwide through festivals and mail orders. For further information, phone 606-398-2194, or write: Morris Folk Crafts, Route 1, Box 179, Booneville, Kentucky 41314.

Anniversary Invitations Contain Printing Error

Invitations sent out to help advertise Our Lady of the Way Hospital's upcoming 40th anniversary celebrations contain a printing error. According to the hospital's public relations consultant, Gwen Hall, the mistake was not noticed until hundreds of invitations had been mailed.

"The community commemorative celebration in downtown Martin is scheduled for Saturday, September 26," said Hall, "not Sunday as the invitation reads. The Mass of Thanksgiving is scheduled for Sunday, September 27 as stated in the invitation."

"These celebrations are open to everyone, and the events were planned with the general public in mind. We are especially hopeful that former patients and employees will join us in celebrating the 40 years of which they have been an integral part," said Hall.

A correctly printed invitation to the general public appears elsewhere in this issue.

Water Rescue Training Meet Set In October

A Water Rescue Training meeting, sponsored by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, is scheduled Oct. 27, 28 and 29 at the Carriage House Motor Hotel, Paintsville, for members of police, fire, sheriff, rescue, park, and conservation agencies which are called upon to assist with water rescue.

The training is free, however, those attending are required to pay for meals, coffee breaks, and lodging for overnight stays.

The training consists of classroom sessions, swimming pool exercises, and water rescue practice at a nearby lake. The revival of near drowning victims, as well as such commonly misunderstood concepts as the survival of victims underwater for up to an hour, eating and swimming, and wearing heavy clothing in deep water, will be discussed. Up-to-date water rescue techniques and equipment will be demonstrated.

The Corps of Engineers is sponsoring this program in an effort to reduce the number of drownings at its project lakes in Kentucky, West Virginia, and Virginia.

People who need overnight accommodations should contact Resource Manager, Big Sandy Area, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, P.O. Box 730, Louisa, Ky. 41230-0730 or call (606) 638-9646.

EKU Meet To Examine Young Driver Issues

Young driver programs will be examined in the traffic safety section of the fourth annual Justice, Safety, and Loss Prevention Conference scheduled Friday, Oct. 9, at Eastern Kentucky University.

The conference will involve concurrent sections on corrections, fire safety, police studies, security, and traffic safety.

It will be held in the Perkins Building, EKVU.

Topics scheduled for the traffic safety section include high school driver education, commercial driving programs, driver testing issues, and unique programs targeting young drivers.

"We want to find better ways to achieve safer highways," said Ray Ochs, moderator of the traffic safety section and an assistant professor in the EKVU Department of Loss Prevention and Safety.

"One of the best ways to do that is through education of younger drivers."

Featured speakers will include traffic authorities from the Kentucky Department of Education, the Kentucky State Police, and the Yellow Cab Drivers Training School in Louisville.

The conference fee includes the awards luncheon honoring distinguished leaders in each of the five discipline of the conference.

For more information about the traffic safety program, call the Traffic Safety Institute at EKVU at (606) 622-2236.

East Ky. Power To Delay Construction

East Kentucky Power Cooperative's board of directors voted Wednesday to delay commercial operation of its proposed J.K. Smith plant in Clark county from 1992 until 2001.

In making the decision, the board reviewed the projected power needs of East Kentucky's 18 member system cooperatives, future industrial electricity needs, and the effect of the cooperative's new power exchange agreement with Cincinnati Gas & Electric (CG&E).

The recently signed agreement between East Kentucky and CG&E allows the two utilities to exchange electricity during their peak seasons and defers the cooperative's need for additional generating capacity. East Kentucky had previously forecast that it would need additional power capacity during the 1990-1991 heating season.

When the Smith plant was planned in the late 1970s, growth rates for the system were forecast at 13-14 percent. By late 1981, electric growth had slowed to 5.2 percent. Recent load forecasts predict the system's demand for electricity will increase approximately 3.2 percent annually through 2006.

At that rate, East Kentucky can delay its need for additional generating capacity until 1995, according to a power supply study recently completed by Stanley Consultants. Plans call for East Kentucky to meet electricity demands at that time through a combination of energy management techniques, purchased power, and the addition of small oil-fired combustion turbines.

The board's action is the fourth major change in the project since construction began near Trapp in Clark county in 1981: Unit I has been delayed several times and Unit II was canceled in 1982. "The 2001 construction date appears to be the least expensive option for the Smith site," said Bob Miller, East Kentucky's Member and Public Relations Division director. "It remains the lowest cost alternative over a wide range of loads, plant costs, interest rates and fuel prices."

East Kentucky provides wholesale electric power to 18 member distribution cooperatives who in turn serve the needs of some 300,000 homes and businesses in the eastern two-thirds of the state.

Ripped Off AS Usual—

Consumers Facing Higher Milk Prices

Tight milk supplies in Kentucky and other southern states have pushed up retail milk prices by as much as 10 cents a gallon, even though the national supply of milk is abundant.

During July, milk production in the southern states was down seven percent from year earlier levels—primarily, because of weather and U.S. Department of Agriculture programs that paid some dairy farmers to leave business, according to Bob Beck, University of Kentucky Extension agricultural economist.

The result, Beck said, is that milk supplies dwindled below demand in some states.

Another factor that may put a higher price on milk in the grocery stores of the South is increased consumption of the product—up nationally some two to three percent over last year.

While Kentucky and other southeastern states have a milk shortage, Upper Midwestern states, such as Wisconsin and Minnesota, are expected to have surpluses, but those won't likely be used to augment the meager supplies elsewhere, Beck said.

The problem, Beck said, is that a high percentage of Grade A milk (the type used for fluid milk) in the Upper Midwest is used for manufactured products such as cheese, butter and dried milk.

"Manufacturers that have both the machinery and the employees to process the milk likely will not want to divert any of their supplies to other regions without some sort of 'give-up' charge added on to the price," Beck said.

Beck expects the tight milk situation to ease as fall approaches and milk production increases seasonally. However, whether prices will respond by decreasing is unclear.

"The wholesale price of milk increased by about six cents a gallon when milk became scarcer; retailers bumped that up to 10 cents a gallon. Somewhere in the process from farm to grocery store shelf, an additional four cents were absorbed," Beck said.

AARP Travel Service Has European Tour

More European winter holiday options than ever before are now being offered for the 1987-1988 season to the 25 million members of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

The AARP Travel Service's new winter brochure features a choice of 17 destinations. Included are the favorite stops of London and the Costa del Sol, as well as new combination programs like Paris and Nice or Cannes on the Riviera. Whatever the trip, the agenda is formulated with the interests of the over-50 traveler in mind.

"We know that the well-known stereotype has vacationing mature Americans being herded quickly from city to city in tightly packaged tours," says Hal Norvell, Manager of AARP's Travel Service office. Research indicates, however, that many older travelers would rather spend holidays abroad by setting up housekeeping in just one or two places for a more leisurely length of time.

Norvell says that is why the 5-year-old Winter Europe Hosted Holiday program is among the most popular offered by the AARP Travel Service. Participating members live in destinations like Paris, Rome, Vienna, Majorca, Tenerife and the Costa del Sol, with a first-class hotel

SOREMOUTH
COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA
Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association

It's somewhat obscure in Kentucky, yet it can affect humans and for that reason sheep and goat farmers should be aware of contagious ecthyma, more commonly known as "sore mouth."

It is encountered in all parts of the world, is most common in late summer and fall, and seems to be confined to sheep, goats and man except for a few reports of dogs infected from eating infected carcasses.

"Sore mouth" is caused by a poxvirus which is highly resistant to desiccation, and which has been recovered from dried crusts after as long as 12 years.

Small, reddened pimples on the lips of the animal are the first sign, which soon become blisters which rupture and produce pus prior to forming a scab. Lesions are multiple, and may become so close and so numerous they seem to cover the entire lip. Similar lesions may occur inside the mouth.

The disease may be spread to non-immune ewes through nursing, where it affects the udder, and may occasionally be seen on the feet.

In one to four weeks the disease will run its course, and the lesions will heal, usually without scarring. Recovered animals are usually immune.

Probably more important than the disease itself are the secondary problems it can bring about. For example, the mouths of nursing lambs and kids may become so sore they fail to eat, and so become weak and lose weight. They may also become lame from lesions on the feet. In ewes, mastitis may result from the infection.

Persons who handle infected sheep or goats should wear rubber gloves and scrub thoroughly with soap and water when finished. The virus is transmitted by direct contact. It produces a disease called "orf" in humans, which causes lesions on the hand and face not unlike those in sheep.

Advice from your veterinarian is helpful, because in the early stages "sore mouth" can be confused with ulcerative dermatosis, which requires a different treatment.

A vaccine is available, but should not be used in flocks free of the disease. Antibiotic and/or antiseptic treatment may help prevent secondary infections.

Your veterinarian can diagnose and prescribe effective treatment, as well as preventive measures and management techniques to keep the disease from spreading.

Misconceptions About Lice Call For Some Nit Picking

Every year, in Kentucky and the rest of the nation, kids come home from their first few weeks of school with head lice, and parents become overly concerned and unduly accusative.

"One of the first things people do is assume that the lice were brought to school by a child who does not bathe regularly. And then they assume that the lice are carriers of filth and disease. Neither case is true," said JoAnn Johnson, a registered pharmacist in Princeton.

"Head lice do not carry disease and, unlike body lice, they don't care how often you bathe, or whether you ride to school in a chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce, or walk along the railroad tracks kicking a rock to school," Johnson said. "So there's no reason to get worried, and no reason to look for someone to blame."

Chris Christensen, Extension entomologist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, said the lice are transmitted from child to child by the sharing of caps, combs, scarves and barrettes. And once infested, a child can pass the crawly critters on to other members of the household.

The lice themselves are difficult to find. They're less than one-fourth inch long and will scurry away from light. So, as the hair is parted in searching for them, they will run to other areas of the scalp.

"The most effective way to inspect for head lice is to look behind the ears or along the neckline for egg cases, called nits, cemented to hair about one-fourth inch from the scalp," Christensen said. Use gloves and disposable wooden tongue depressors or applicator sticks for the inspection. Nits can be transferred from head to head under a fingernail if inspections are done without gloves.

"If lice are found, but there is no excessive irritation of the skin or infection as a result of excessive scratching, then a visit to a physician is probably not necessary. Pharmacists are well-equipped to deal with head lice," Johnson said.

Current recommendations to get rid of head lice include the use of shampoos containing pyrethrins, natural derivatives of chrysanthemums. Individuals sensitive to ragweed should not use pyrethrin shampoos. Lindane, the principal ingredient in once-popular prescription products, is not recommended for babies, young children, or pregnant women.

Most over-the-counter products include a very fine toothed comb. The comb is an important part of successful treatment.

"The cement holding the nits to the hair is not dissolved by the shampoo, nor are the nits killed. You must 'nit-pick' to get the nits, the eggs, out of the hair to prevent re-infestation," Johnson said. The comb is used to help pick nits.

All clothing, bedding and towels used by an infested person must be washed in very hot, 140 degree F water. Articles which cannot be washed or dry cleaned should be sealed in a plastic bag for 35 days. Brushes and combs should be soaked for 10 minutes in the pyrethrin shampoo.

"It is important that every family member be inspected and treated if necessary, since re-infestations are very likely if any infested family members go untreated," Johnson said.

Many drug stores, and all Kentucky County Extension offices, have free literature on the prevention and treatment of head lice infestations. Stop by the Extension office and ask for publication ENT-44, or call a local drug store and ask about literature from the pyrethrin shampoo manufacturers.

Golden Anniversary

Sam and Laura Vanderpool Shepherd celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary August 22. They were married August 21, 1937. A surprise dinner was given by their children and other relatives at the home of Tramble Shepherd, of Hueysville.

The couple are the parents of 12 children, Clyde, Sam Jr., Jimmy, Windell and Pauline, all of Michigan; Bobby, Gary, and Gail, all of Indiana, Mitchell, Charles and Shelby, in Kentucky. One son, High, is deceased. They also have 33 grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren.

Approximately 100 guests attended. Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd express their appreciation to everyone who participated in this golden celebration.

Dry Weather Harms Nearly All Crops

"The overall dry conditions prevailing in the Commonwealth are affecting all crops, but especially soybeans," said Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell.

Soil moisture as of Friday, Sept. 4, was 71 percent very short, 28 percent short and only 1 percent adequate. Also, most reporting stations across the state have shown weekly highs in the 90s since mid-July.

"The low soil moisture and the high temperatures have really stressed the growing crops," Boswell said.

Tobacco harvest is advancing at a near record rate, with burley cutting 80 percent complete by Sunday, Sept. 6. This is the most advanced burley cutting rate since 1957. This compares with 57 percent a year ago and the five-year average of 49 percent cut by this date.

Dark tobacco is 72 percent advanced. Tobacco which was set later has been more affected by the dry weather and yields will be less on the later fields. Yield and quality has been good on most early fields of both burley and dark tobacco.

The condition of housed tobacco is fair to mostly good. The primary concern is that tobacco is drying too rapidly rather than curing properly.

Corn for grain harvest became very active last week and was 11 percent complete by Sept. 6. This compares with 9 percent a year ago and 4 percent for the average. With 75 percent of the corn mature, reporters expect an early harvesting season.

Most early fields are producing good to excellent yields. Later corn has suffered from the hot, dry weather since mid-July. Overall, the corn condition was rated 2 percent very poor, 8 percent poor, 18 percent fair, 63 percent good and 9 percent excellent.

The condition of the 1987 soybean crop declines every day without rain. Soybean condition as of Sept. 4 was reported as 4 percent very poor, 26 percent poor, 52 percent fair and 18 percent good.

Pods are dropping and not filling out properly. Yields are quite promising on early planted fields, but rain must be received soon, if some of the later planted fields are to produce a crop.

Approximately 21 percent of the soybeans are at or beyond the leaf dropping stage of maturity. This is comparable to a year ago, but ahead of the five-year average of 12 percent. A few of the earliest fields are being harvested.

The pasture situation is serious in many counties. Statewide, the condition is 33 percent very poor, 35 percent poor, 27 percent fair, 4 percent good and 1 percent excellent. General rains and cooler temperatures are needed to give pastures a chance.

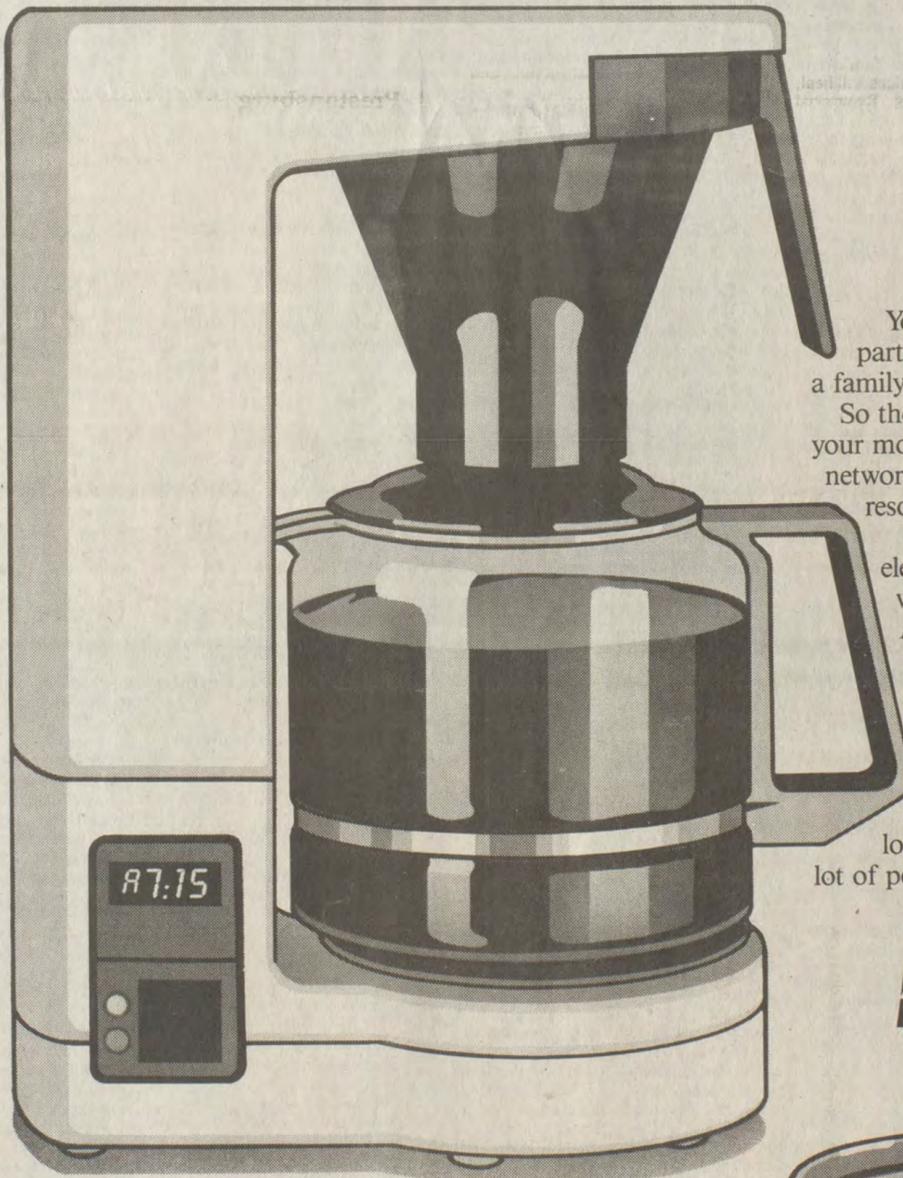

A number of livestock producers report they are already feeding hay. Hay supplies are mostly adequate for normal winter feeding, but in most years, very little hay is fed before Thanksgiving. Also, late hay cuttings will be short because of dry conditions.

Because of the rotation of the earth, an object can be thrown farther if it is thrown west.

If an object travelled at the speed of sound it would take 14 years to reach the sun.

Certified Cities Team Here To Review P'burg

A Certified Cities evaluation team was in Prestonsburg Tuesday, September 8, to review the community's application for the 1987 Certified Cities award of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce.

The Certified Cities program annually recognizes Kentucky communities that meet strict requirements for encouraging economic development.

According to Jeff Eger, Certified Cities director for the Kentucky Chamber, the evaluation team also serves another purpose.

"The evaluation teams are there to assist the communities in their efforts to identify and eliminate obstacles to economic growth," said Eger. "Also, we want to help communities capitalize on their assets. That's really what the Certified Cities program is all about."

Prestonsburg evaluation team members include: Wes Blondell, Vaughn and Melton, engineers-architects; Eger, J. Michael Gurnee, city of Ashland; Bill McDonald, Howard K. Bell consulting engineers, inc.; and Molly Webb, Ashland area convention and visitors center.

Governor Martha Layne Collins has called the Certified Cities program, "The best mechanism for achieving local economic development." Earl Fischer, Chairman of the Board of the Kentucky Chamber and Vice President of Operations for Western Kentucky Gas Company in Owensboro, agreed.

"The first step in economic development is getting your city ready for jobs," said Fischer. "Once community leaders take the initiative, then good things happen."

Last year the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce presented awards to 41 communities from across the state. Now in its sixth year, the Certified Cities program replaces the Kentucky Chamber's All-Kentucky Cities competition.

This year's Certified Cities will be announced in October, with the popular awards luncheon set for November 12 at the Lexington Marriott.

Two of her works, "Just Like Daddy," colored pencil and "Sunrise, Sunset," an abstract watercolor, are featured in Kentucky Showcase I, Kentucky Highlands Museum, Ashland, from September 1-30. The opening reception was held Sept. 5.

"Bonnie Blue Flag," watercolor pictured above, is included in the Images From The Mountains traveling exhibit, an exhibit of 23 Appalachian artists selected from 160 entries. This exhibit opened Sept. 13, at the U.K. Center for the Arts, Lexington. The exhibit will be on display until September 30.

"Catnip," a watercolor, is included in the Lexington Art League-New Member Exhibit from Sept. 1-28, Loudoun House, Castlewood Park, Lexington.

National Guard Armory To Get Storage Buildings

Governor Martha Layne Collins announced recently that the Kentucky Department of Military Affairs has received nearly $1,000,000 from the federal government to assist in alleviating a critical space shortage at 13 Kentucky Army National Guard armories.

The Prestonsburg armory will receive $100,000.

The Kentucky Guard has experienced tremendous equipment growth during the past few years, as the U.S. Army has allocated military supplies to every Kentucky Guard unit. That equipment includes items like generators, camouflage systems, tents and chemical defensive equipment. The equipment has improved the quality of training for the individual Guard members and their entire units. But the additional equipment has far exceeded the storage capacity of the Kentucky Guard.

"Our most critical problem is storage space," according to Adjutant General Billy G. Wellman. "The Kentucky Guard continues to grow and the Guard's mission has expanded so that we must be prepared to deploy trained combat units on short notice. Over recent years, the Army has assigned modern battlefield equipment to us and continues to do so while we have no available storage space."

The Chief of the National Guard Bureau in Washington has appropriated $977,500 to relieve the storage shortfall. The money will be used for pre-engineering design, site preparation and actual construction of the buildings. A siting investigation will be conducted at each of the 13 armories to insure that adequate land is available for the building.

While the construction of the buildings will help the armories store their equipment better, Adjutant General Wellman says, it will by no means solve the space problem.

The only state funds to be used are contingency funds mandated by Kentucky contracting laws. (The laws require that the state set aside funds to cover contingencies like cost overruns and liabilities, should they occur.)

Local economies of the communities where the buildings are to be constructed will be helped, as the work will be done by private companies.

Grain Sorghum May Be Way To Reclaim Stripped Land

Grain sorghum looks promising as a way to return surface-mined land to productive agricultural use, according to University of Kentucky agricultural researchers.

R.I. Barnhisel, agronomist, and Morris Bitzer, Extension grains specialist with the UK College of Agriculture, recently hosted a field day in Muhlenberg county to explain why the university felt grain sorghum appears to be a better crop for the strip-mined land than other crops—say corn or soybeans.

The university research is important because federal law now requires coal operators to return mined farmland to its original productivity. That's expensive, and not everything works. Several crops may be used under current regulations, but until the past two years, little data were available to compare yield variations among the different crops, Barnhisel said.

If grain sorghum can help rejuvenate the soil and produce a more satisfactory yield at the same time, the economic benefits to the farmer are obvious.

"The sorghum has several traits that may reduce the risks for crop failure," Barnhisel said. "It withstands drought better than corn for one thing."

Bitzer said university personnel tested corn and soybeans as well as grain sorghum on two different sites in Muhlenberg county over the past several years.

"The results were not consistent for the corn and soybeans," he said. "Part of the problem may have been external. The deer liked the soybeans too much."

They got the beans. Last year, the corn results were just terrible. However, good yields are expected this year in corn."

The grain sorghum tests, however, showed consistent results in both sites. Where the subsoil ranged from 24 inches to 40 inches deep and was treated with lime, yields were highest, Barnhisel said.

"If you're going to grow crops on reclaimed mineland," Bitzer said, "grain sorghum looks like a good bet."

Research on improving reclaimed mineland will continue for at least another year, Barnhisel said.

$15.00 Seed Corn, Big Hit Farmers

When the financial crisis hit the farming industry a few years ago, Mike Williams didn't just sit around and wait for help to come. He used his farming and seed corn experience to find a cheaper source of seed corn. While companies all around him continue to sell seed corn at $50 to $70 per bag, Mike sells the same top yielding single cross hybrids for $15 per bag.

What's wrong with the seed? That's a fair question. The truth is there's nothing wrong with it. Mike buys from a major seed company, grades the seed in six sizes, treats it, and bags it (80,000 kernels per bag) at WSF Equipment & Salvage, his company in Monon, Indiana.

For years Mike has been growing seed corn and selling it to the same companies he now buys from. With recent government set-aside programs, many seed companies ended up with surplus seed corn. Mike realized that the companies needed to get rid of their surplus seed and that the farmers needed to find a way to cut costs, so he went into the sales end of the business.

"I've got one philosophy," Mike says, "If you buy right, you can sell right. If we get it bought right, why not pass the savings on? The farmers will keep coming back because they'll learn that they can trust what I tell them."

Arthur Buschman bought and planted twelve bags of the seed on his farm in Painesville, Ohio, and has been happy with the results. "It looks every bit as good as the other corn we planted. Each plant has a good sturdy stalk and it has a beautiful, deep green color. It did just as well as any $60 seed I've ever had."

laws that apply to the big seed companies apply to WSF Equipment & Salvage. Before the company purchases any seed, they grow samples of it at their test nursery in Florida.

"We watch the corn grow," Mike explains. "We know that the corn is fertile, that there aren't a lot of off-types, selfs, or anything that will affect the quality of the corn. I know which pedigrees are top yielders and which ones to avoid. When the corn gets to the farmer, I feel 100% comfortable with what he's planting, because I know everything about that corn."

Driving to Monon, Indiana to pick up the seed represents the best "deal" to the farmers; if you plant 75 bags of the seed, and save $50 per bag, you've saved $3750 just for the drive. But for any farmer who can't come to him, Mike is happy to arrange commercial delivery. Smaller orders can be shipped UPS; larger orders are sent by over-the-road freight carrier. Shipping charges are added to the cost of the seed.

"You have to ask what luxuries you need," says Mike, "Other seed companies have hats, jackets, dealers, and delivery...plus cars for their sales managers to drive. What we have is the same corn, cheap. Like my Grandpa always said, "If you don't spend much, you don't need to make as much."

For more information on the $15 seed, contact WSF Equipment & Salvage, Rural Route 1, Box 43, Monon IN 47959, or call In. Res. (219) 253-6671, 800-321-3177.

Cadet Shepherd Completes ROTC Field Training

Cadet Glenda S. Shepherd, daughter of Ruie M. Shepherd, of Auxier, and Ballard L. Shepherd, of Prestonsburg, has completed a U.S. Air Force ROTC field training encampment at McConnell Air Force Base, Kansas.

Field training, attended by cadets normally between their second and third year of college, gives an opportunity to evaluate each student's potential as an officer, according to an Air Force spokesman.

The summer's curriculum consists of orientations on jet aircraft, career opportunities, human relations education and equal opportunity training. Physical fitness and survival training is also emphasized.

The field training is four weeks, but cadets in the two-year ROTC program receive an additional two weeks of instruction in the development of air power and the contemporary Air Force.

Shepherd is a student at the University of Kentucky, Lexington.

Stir-Frying...The Only Way To Fry

From the American Institute for Cancer Research

Frying can be a delicious way to prepare many foods, but the fat added by this cooking method can be a real problem. The strong link between dietary fat and health problems, such as cancer and heart disease, have led most health and nutrition authorities to recommend limiting fat in our diets. The American Institute for Cancer Research, for example, in its Dietary Guidelines for Lower Cancer Risk, recommends reducing fat intake from the current average of 40 percent of calories, to 30 percent or lower.

One method of frying, however, which uses very little oil and is extremely effective in preserving nutrients in food is stir-frying.

This cooking technique originated in the Orient, but has become popular around the world. Stir-frying involves cooking foods quickly over high heat with just a small amount of vegetable oil, either in an oriental style wok, a heavy frying pan or even an electric skillet. In addition to holding nutrients, stir-fried foods maintain their flavor and color as well, making them a favorite of gourmet cooks.

The key to successful stir-frying is to chop the vegetables and/or meat you are preparing into very thin or small pieces. Cutting vegetables on the bias or in julienne strips provides more surface area that speeds cooking. For optimum tenderness, meat should be sliced very thinly across the grain, which is easier if you freeze the meat until just firm (about 45-60 minutes) and use a very sharp knife.

Since stir-fry food cooks so quickly, be sure to have all your ingredients ready before you start. Some vegetables may need to be steamed for a short time before you can stir-fry them. The usual order of stir-fry cooking is: first, pungent seasonings (such as garlic or ginger root); next, slower cooking vegetables (such as carrots, broccoli or green beans); then, quick cooking vegetables (such as mushrooms, pea pods or cabbage); and finally, meat, fish or chicken.

BROCCOLI AND BEEF CANTONESE

This delicious stir-fry dish exemplifies good nutrition in two ways: lean cuts of meat are used in small portions to keep fat content low and lots of vegetables are included for vitamins and low-calorie volume. Some brown rice is all you need for a complete meal.

- 1 lb. boneless top round steak or flank steak
  - 1/3 cup water
  - 1 1/2 tbsp. cornstarch
  - 4 tsp. soy sauce
  - 1/2 cup dry sherry
  - 1 1/2 tsp. ground ginger
  - 1 tsp. garlic powder
  - 2 tbsp. salad oil
  - 1/4 lb. mushrooms, sliced
  - 2 10-oz. packages frozen broccoli florets, partially thawed
  - 1 cup water chestnuts, sliced
  - 2 cups bean sprouts (or 1 16-oz. can, drained)
  - 1 cup green onions, diagonally sliced
- Trim all fat from the meat, then freeze slightly. When firm, slice the meat across the grain into strips 1 to 2 inches long, 1/8th inch thick.
- In a small bowl mix the water with cornstarch until smooth. Mix in the soy sauce, sherry, ginger and garlic powder.
- In wok, heavy skillet, or electric skillet, heat 1 tablespoon oil until very hot. Add half the meat, stirring constantly, until it is lightly browned. Remove it from the pan and cook the second half of the meat, without adding more oil.

Remove second batch of meat from the pan, add 1 tablespoon of oil to the pan, if needed, and add mushrooms. Brown lightly, then return meat to the pan. Add broccoli, water chestnuts, and cornstarch mixture.

Bring to a boil, while stirring. Continue cooking and stirring until sauce is unthickened and clear. Stir in bean sprouts and onions, allow them to heat, and then serve immediately with brown rice.

This will produce 6 servings, each containing about 266 calories and only 5 grams of fat.

LRC Proposes Changes In State Constitution

Sweeping changes in Kentucky's 90-year-old constitution were proposed in a report issued recently to the Legislative Research Commission by the Special Commission on Constitutional Review.

The panel, chaired by Chief Appeals Court Judge James W. Howerton of Paducah, proposed 77 changes in the 1891 constitution.

The top priority in the commission's 175-page report would be establishing a Kentucky Emergency Budget Board comprised of representatives from all three branches of government, who would be charged with making budget cuts in times of revenue shortfalls.

The second-most needed constitutional change, the report said, is making the superintendent of public instruction an appointed position, with the choice made by a board of election which had both appointed and elected members.

Other amendment proposals included allowing the governor to retain the powers of office when out of state, combining the duties of the lieutenant governor with those of the secretary of state, allowing the governor and lieutenant governor candidates to slate during primary elections, and abolishing the offices of treasurer, agriculture commissioner and school superintendent while permitting other statewide officeholders to run for two successive terms.

The commission also proposed removing the constitutional ban on state lotteries.

Many of these proposals, including succession for statewide officials and making the school superintendent an appointive position, have been defeated when proposed to citizens in the form of constitutional amendments.

Under Kentucky's constitution, up to four amendments may be placed on the ballot by the General Assembly every two years. Several proposals may be drafted into one broad amendment.

The commission was created by the 1986 General Assembly and included legislators, local officials, media members and representatives from the judicial branch of government. The panel held its first meeting in February.

Following are the 10 highest-ranked constitutional changes proposed:

•Creation of a Kentucky Emergency Budget Board of executive, legislative and judicial representatives, who would cut the budget when revenues fall below a certain projected level.

•Change the state board of education to include seven elected members from each Congressional district and six appointed members, who would then appoint the state school superintendent.

•Allow the General Assembly to permit cities and counties to levy a variety of taxes on the local level.

•Repeal sections of the constitution which currently regulate the way businesses can operate.

•Prohibit discrimination based on race, color, religion, national origin, gender, age or physical or mental handicap.

•Create a new section to provide some limited form of sovereign immunity for cities and local government officials.

•A requirement for the General Assembly to provide adequate and uniform support for a free and quality primary and secondary education system and to adequately support a system of universities and colleges.

The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club News

The GFWC/KFWC Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club held its annual late summer picnic recently at the home of clubmember, Mrs. Elizabeth Duff, Garrett. It was reported that outdoor eating was never better than from the various covered dishes served on Mrs. Duff's patio in the cool of a late summer evening.

The new club president, Mrs. Louise West, presided over a business session later, at which she announced the various federation meetings, both state and district level, for the new club year.

The club discussed its annual sale of pecans and decided to again take part in this project. The pecans have now been ordered and should be in time to sell for Thanksgiving baking.

The club's Christmas party will be held December 7 at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, to which husbands will be invited, or in the case of single members, a friend.

The next club meeting will be held at the home of clubmember, Mrs. Maxine Martin, one mile south of Wayland on KY 7, September 21, at which time a federation speaker will be present to conduct the program.

Those attending the picnic were Marie Mullins, Marcella Bradley, Lula Coburn, Joann Hall, Vera Allen, LaFaye Hughes, Blanche Bamer, Maxine Martin, Louise West, and the hostess, Elizabeth Duff.

Journey To The Outback In KET Special, Sept. 23

The poetry of Australia's foremost poet and balladeer, Andrew Barton Paterson, comes to life in "Banjo's Australia," an hourlong special premiering Wednesday, September 23 at 8 p.m. on KET.

Paterson, better known by his pen name "Banjo," was born in 1864 and spent much of his youth in the outback of Australia. He led a full life as a poet, sportsman, lawyer, journalist (covering the Boer War in South Africa and the Chinese Boxer Rebellion), expert horseman, novelist, and author of children's stories. He penned the "Man from Snowy River," which inspired the feature film of the same name. He also wrote "Waltzing Matilda," the unofficial national anthem of Australia.

The first filmed biography of Paterson's life and career, "Banjo's Australia," presents some of his best work. "In the Droving Days," one of Paterson's most moving poems, was filmed on the Saltbush plain country of southern New South Wales. The poem, read by Harold Baigent (familiar to American audiences as the gravelly voiced narrator of the film "Mad Max"), is an old man's nostalgic recollection of his youth. "Pioneers" is a tribute to the settlers who first colonized Australia and is illustrated with archival film.

Other works featured include "Lost," a beautifully written account of the death of a child in the outback; "Brumbies Run," filmed in the rugged and spectacular Snowy Mountain country of Victoria, shows the dangerous sport of rounding up wild horses; and "Mulga Bill's Bicycle," a hilarious look at the antics of a loudmouthed country yokel trying to come to terms with a newfangled invention—the bicycle.

The film is produced by Stanza Productions Pty. Ltd.

White, Spielman Poised For Heisman Battle

Will this be the year that a defensive player is finally recognized as college football's best player, or will Lorenzo White live up to his billing, and return the Heisman Trophy to its customary runner, an offensive backfield player?

Last season, Vinny Testaverde, Miami quarterback, captured Heisman honors, becoming the first non-runner to win the coveted title in several years. Once again a running back is being touted as the top candidate to receive the Downtown Athletic Club award. Lorenzo White, a Michigan State tailback, has long been rated as a major Heisman threat, but injuries and other reasons have prevented his winning the trophy.

This season, White, finally healthy, is poised to challenge the more highly rated college players for the most respected award given to a collegiate performer.

White, 128 yards and two touchdowns in one game this year, has got off to a solid beginning, but his budget asset this season could be the fact that one of his toughest challengers is a defensive performer.

The New York Downtown Athletic Club, giver of the Heisman Trophy, has shown prejudice toward defensive players, but last season gave attention and consideration to Chris Spielman.

Spielman, linebacker for Ohio State, finished number 10 in last year's voting, and has enjoyed success already this season.

Rated as one of the best linebackers to ever play at Ohio State, Spielman excels in pass coverage and picked off two last Sunday against West Virginia.

Spielman, playing in the nationally publicized Buckeye program, has been the biggest attention getter on the defensive side this year, but last year finished second in voting to another defender.

Gordie Lockbaum, a two-way player for Holly Cross, finished fifth in the 1986 Heisman race but rarely gets the media attention needed to win a major award.

Lockbaum, 5'11," 195-pound senior, finished third in the nation in all-purpose yardage a year ago while leading the nation in scoring, crossing the goal line 22 times.

But Lockbaum is at a disadvantage. Playing in Division IAA doesn't exactly help his cause for the simple reason that a small college player has never won a Heisman Trophy.

Other running backs across the nation have opportunities to bring the highest rated award back to the backfield. White and Lockbaum are expected to be the front runners if healthy for the duration but will be challenged by the likes of Lars Tate, Georgia, Gaston Green, UCLA, and Thurman Thomas, Oklahoma State.

Tate, a senior runner, is one of the nation's rushing leaders, and in the season opener, recorded Georgia's first 200-yard rushing game since the days of Hershel Walker, a former Heisman winner.

Tate, against Virginia, ran for 218 yards and two touchdowns in the season opener. The bruising runner backed that performance up last Saturday with a four-touchdown day, tying a school record while rambling for 132 yards.

Two South Eastern Conference running backs have claimed Heisman Trophies recently—Walker with Georgia, and Bo Jackson with Auburn, and Tate is currently following in their footsteps.

Gaston Green, UCLA halfback, was held to under 100 yards for the first time since the middle of the 1986 season but is considered a major Heisman threat. Green rambled for over 1100 yards last season.

Battling for the Heisman Trophy won't be the only race Green will be in this season. In winning the Pac-10 rushing championship last season, Green ran for 1,139 yards, edging out Stanford all-American Brad Muster, who compiled 1,053. Muster also mustered 565 yards on 61 pass receptions.

Thurman Thomas, Oklahoma State running back, has also been rated high on many pre-season Heisman Trophy lists.

Heading the list of quarterbacks who could possibly follow in Testaverde's Heisman winning footsteps in Florida's Kerwin Bell.

Bell enjoyed a solid season when healthy in 1986, but injuries have slowed the Gator passer throughout his career. The injury bug has already bitten Bell this season, in the form of a slight shoulder separation opening day against Miami.

Bell responded this past Saturday by hitting on 11 of his 14 passing attempts for 148 yards and one touchdown.

The Florida quarterback is a major candidate for all-American honors, but has been overshadowed so far by the record-setting performances by Steve Taylor.

Taylor, Nebraska's quarterback, set a rushing record for Cornhusker quarterbacks in the season opener, and passed for 217 yards and five touchdowns against number three UCLA, Saturday.

But Washington passer Chris Chandler has passed his way past all opposing college passers, definitely lodging himself as a legitimate Heisman candidate.

In two games, Chandler, a senior, has thrown for 517 yards, and four touchdowns. Chandler has completed 31 of 62 attempts, but has thrown three interceptions.

Many names appear near even when the race for the Heisman Trophy is considered. Injuries, too, will play a part in the final voting, as they have with Lorenzo White, and Kerwin Bell in the past.

If healthy, White is considered by many as the favorite, followed by Lockbaum, and Spielman. Not always does the Heisman Trophy go to the best player, but normally the best offensive player, and usually to the best backfield player.

In the past, running backs have dominated the final figuring and probably will this season.

SHORT SPORTS

The University of Kentucky kicked it's 1987 football season off with a bang Saturday afternoon, destroying Utah State, 41-0.

The Wildcats rolled up a total of 530 offensive yards and never allowed Utah State inside the 45-yard line in winning the season opener.

During the game, kicker Joey Worley became the all-time leading scorer in UK history, bringing his career total to 189 and breaking a 50-year-old record.

The Wildcats will continue their drive toward a possible winning season this Saturday when Indiana, 35-13 winner over Rice last weekend, comes calling at Commonwealth Stadium. Game time is 1:30.

Morehead State University also enjoyed success Saturday, shutting out Kentucky State, 37-0, in Morehead. MSU intercepted five passes, a school record, and received two touchdowns each from Rodney Gorden and D.D. Harrison in evening their record at 1-1.

The Eagles will take to the road this weekend, traveling to Virginia for a contest against James Madison.

Elsewhere across the state, Eastern Kentucky University dropped a 10-0 decision to UT-Chattanooga. The Colonels, number three ranked in division IAA, managed only 78 total yards. They will be in action against Marshall this weekend. The game is scheduled for 7 at Richmond.

The Louisville Cardinals, set to play at Purdue this Saturday, fell victim to Cincinnati, 25-0; Cumberland turned back Evansville, 26-21, for their second victory; Georgetown, improving to 2-0, blasted Tiffin, 41-14, and Union lost it's second consecutive game to start the season, falling to Millsaps, 31-9.

Western Kentucky University, idle this past week, will return to action this Saturday with an intra-state contest at home against Murray State.

If St. Louis hadn't already caused enough trouble, the New York Mets received a devastating blow last weekend. Losing to St. Louis was enough, but the Mets also lost Ron Darling for the remainder of the season Friday night.

Darling, a righthanded starting pitcher, suffered strained ligaments in his thumb during New York's loss to the Cardinals.

The Mets, this season, have been without starters Dwight Gooden, Sid Fernandez, and Rick Aguilera for extended periods of time. Bullpen ace Roger McDowell has also missed time due to injuries this season.

New York has trailed St. Louis most of the season, and lost one of their few chances to take over first place by losing to the Cards, Friday night. Entering their three-game weekend series at Shea Stadium, the Mets trailed by only one and one-half game.

But when the Cardinals left New York, they carried with them a two and one-half game lead after winning two of the three games.

The National Football League Players' Union has set a strike deadline for September 22, and a walkout is expected at that time.

The players and owners have disagreed on several issues, but free agency is apparently the most hotly contested at this moment.

Bargaining continued last Sunday after a five-hour meeting, Saturday. Most people expect a players' walkout to come next Tuesday, but NFL management says that professional football will continue without a hitch.

The owners have announced their intention of playing with free agents, and (Continued on Next Page)

RUDE WELCOME: Prestonsburg quarterback Brent Hackworth, 18, gets a rude welcome back after throwing a pass against Betsy Layne. Hackworth, seeing limited action Friday night, has been nursing a sore toe.

Harris Leads Prestonsburg In District Win Over Betsy Layne

In a noisy Prestonsburg High School locker room, Johnny Ray Harris enthusiastically made three marks on a sheet of paper then turned to share the accomplishment with his teammates.

Harris, Blackcat tailback and defensive back, wasn't celebrating the marks but what they signified his three touchdowns in the game just concluded.

The 5'7", 145-pound Harris had put the final notch in his football belt for the night, and with Prestonsburg's victory over Betsy Layne, Friday night, had proved to be a complete success for the Blackcat player.

Harris, a senior, was a member of Prestonsburg's 'glory' seasons of 1984-85. Accustomed to winning, he, along with all Blackcat players and coaches, suffered from a dismal 1-8 1986 campaign.

All during the spring and summer Harris talked of football and how this year would be better for his Blackcat team.

With the help of their tiny tailback, the Blackcats took their first step toward making this season a successful one. A winning season isn't necessarily what Prestonsburg wants, but the playoffs are.

Friday night, with a 29-2 victory over Betsy Layne, the Blackcats captured their first district win of the season, evening their record at 1-1 against district competition.

Harris scored three of the four Prestonsburg touchdowns, and the Blackcat defense shut out Betsy Layne until late in the fourth quarter, dropping the Bobcats to 1-2 overall, and 0-1 in the district.

Betsy Layne, against a tough Blackcat defense, managed only 151 total yards. Rarely did the Bobcats generate any offense, and when they did, they ended it themselves, being flagged for 119 penalty yards, and turning the football over four times.

"We just couldn't generate anything out there. It's that simple," Vince Tucker, Betsy Layne head coach, said. "The kids will have to re-evaluate themselves, and see if they really want it enough."

On seven of their 14 possessions the Bobcats were limited to three plays and a punt. Two more offensive possessions consisted of turnovers on the first play.

Betsy Layne stumbled into Blackcat territory only three times during Friday night play at Prestonsburg and failed to put points on the board on those few occasions.

In the second quarter, the Bobcats marched into enemy territory as far as the 25-yard line, but back-to-back plays that netted a minus nine yards and an illegal procedure call pushed Betsy Layne backwards.

Again the second quarter, this time late, the Bobcats found themselves across the 50-yard line. Dwight Jarrel, Bobcat quarterback, connected with his tailback Todd Sturgill for a seven-yard pass play, moving the football to the Prestonsburg 30.

Following a running play that went for nothing, Jarrel again went searching for Sturgill, but this time found Tim Trusty instead. Trusty, Blackcat junior defensive back, picked the pass off at the 12-yard-line, and with 31 seconds remaining, returned the interception back to the 45-yard line.

Not until late in the contest could Betsy Layne mount another drive. Aided by a Blackcat personal foul, Betsy Layne marched to the Prestonsburg five. With a first and goal from there, the Bobcats were once again denied the opportunity to score.

Betsy Layne failed to move any closer on their following four attempts, and finally made a place for themselves on the scoreboard thanks to the defense.

With 34 seconds remaining in the game, Betsy Layne defenders trapped the Blackcats back in their own end zone, posting the two-point safety.

Coach Tucker shook his head after the game, obviously disappointed, and possibly confused as to why his expected explosive offensive unit has scored only 10 points in three games this season. Tucker's disappointment was easily detected—almost as easy as Prestonsburg's excitement in their post-game locker room celebration.

Leading the celebration was Johnny

Ray Harris, just as he had led the Blackcats' efforts on the football field.

With 8:58 remaining in the opening quarter, Harris crossed the goal line with Prestonsburg's first score, capping off a seven-play, 61-yard drive.

Jimmy Joe Crace, Prestonsburg fullback, set up Harris' 12-yard touchdown run with a 28-yard gallop the play before.

Crace finished the game as the Blackcats' second leading rusher, rolling up 84 yards on 12 carries.

Harris led the team and the game with 85 yards from scrimmage on 11 carries plus 103 yards on kickoff, and punt returns. Soon after Harris put the Blackcats up by six points, he added another touchdown, returning a punt 65 yards for a touchdown 126 seconds after his first.

Leading, 13-0, Prestonsburg padded their advantage just before halftime when quarterback Tim Trusty scored on a 14-yard run with 4:13 showing on the second quarter clock.

Battling to get back into the contest, Betsy Layne proved to be their own worst enemy in the third quarter, turning an 80-yard touchdown pass into a 10-yard penalty.

Dwight Jarrel combined with wide receiver Stacy Hall for the pass, catch, and run that ended up in the Bobcat end zone, but the officials tossed the flag, saying Betsy Layne was guilty of holding.

Betsy Layne failed to recover from the call, and after surrendering the football on downs, surrendered a third touchdown to Harris, a 34-yard scamper with 34 seconds left in the third quarter.

Brent Hackworth added a fourth quarter 25-yard field goal to cap off Prestonsburg's scoring night. The Blackcats compiled a total of 243 yards, 169 of those coming from the running efforts of Harris and Crace.

Todd Sturgill, senior tailback, led the Bobcats in rushing with 53 yards while hauling down three Dwight Jarrel passes for 27 yards.

Betsy Layne, 1-2 on the season, will travel to Pikeville this Saturday to take on the powerful Panthers.

defeating the Rebels, 29-8, in high school football action Friday night.

Allen Central, 1-3 on the season, turned the football over a total of five times in losing their third game of the season.

Johns Creek ran up and down the Betsy Layne field following Rebel turnovers, converting forced change of possessions into two touchdowns and a field goal.

"We've got to get better as the season goes along," Donnie Daniels, Allen Central head coach said. "We didn't play like it was our fourth game of the season. We played more like it was our first game. Actually we played better our first two games than we did this past one."

Johns Creek scored twice in the first quarter, and added a touchdown in the second to take a 19-0 halftime lead. The Bearcats went on to roll up 29 points against Allen Central's defense, but it wasn't because of a defensive breakdown.

"Our defense played a good game," Daniels said. "We just gave them good field position on turnovers. I thought our defense did a good job considering the field position we gave them."

Allen Central twice gave the Bearcats possession in Rebel territory, once following a fumble on the 12, and again after a fumbled snap on a punt attempt. That miscue allowed Johns Creek to claim possession on the Rebel 30-yard line.

"They really had only two good drives in the game," Daniels continued about his team's defensive efforts. "If we hadn't turned the football over, I think it would have been a two-touchdown game."

This may have brought more meaning to the Rebels' lone score of the game.

Allen Central, facing a tough defensive effort from Johns Creek, were shutout until the final seconds of the game.

Darren Conn, with 12 seconds remaining in the contest, connected with Robbie Click for a four-yard scoring toss. Anthony Redrick ran the two-point conversion in for the final scoring margin.

Conn, Allen Central's senior quarterback, finished the night with five completions on 11 attempts for 64 yards, and the touchdown pass.

Mickey Parsons, a highly successful runner for the Rebels, finished as his team's top rusher, gaining 61 yards on 20 carries. Jeff Hughes, senior fullback, gained 36 yards on 10 carries.

Parsons, a sophomore runner, leads Allen Central in rushing, and is one of the county's top ground gainers. In three games, Parsons has rambled for over 281 yards. He missed the Paintsville contest.

In his last two games Parsons has carried the football a total of 49 times, but Daniels hints that he may slow down on the amount of times his youthful runner totes the pigskin.

"We were trying to slack off on his carries against Johns Creek," Daniels said. "Jeff Hughes is a good back also, but Mickey might have a little bit more speed, and after we got behind, Friday night, we were trying to get the big play."

Parsons, Hughes, and their Rebel teammates will be trying to break their three-game losing streak this Friday night, but the opponent may be Allen Central's toughest of the season.

The Rebels will take on Raceland this Friday night at Wheelwright High School's football field. The game will be the Rebels first district contest ever.

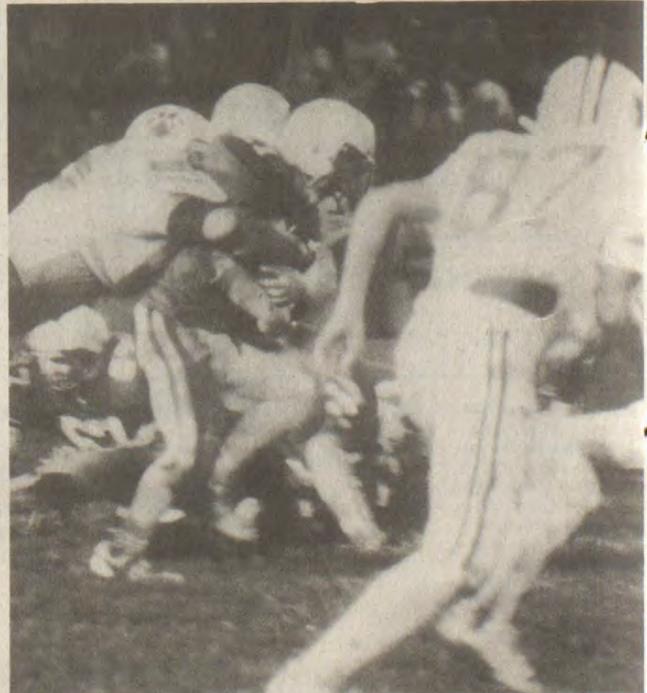

"They're one of the best teams in the state," Daniels said of Raceland. "They are a good team, but they can be beat. We just have to do a lot of work this week to prepare for them."

The Rebels are in a district, and eligible for the playoffs for the first time ever, and Daniels is hoping for a solid start toward the initial campaign.

"I would like to stay close in the first half. That way we'll have an opportunity to win in the second half," Daniels noted. "If we can have the lead, or at least be tied at halftime then the momentum for the second half will be on our side."

Raceland, normally a state contender in 1A, is once again rated as one of Kentucky's top teams, and the odds-on favorite to win a district title.

Game time is scheduled for 8 Friday night at Wheelwright High School's field.

IN THE GRASP: Johnny Ray Harris isn't going anywhere on this play, but the Prestonsburg runner did break loose for three touchdowns. He and fullback Jimmy Joe Crace combined for 167 yards rushing.

NFL News And Notes

Upsets appeared to be the football order of the day, and no less than five shockers were served up when the National Football League opened its doors for regular season business Sunday afternoon.

Along with unexpected wins from unexpected winners, points, and many of them came as a side dish to the main upset course.

Down in Florida some Buccaneers were enjoying a bird feast, eating the Atlanta Falcons alive. Tampa Bay drafted Vinny Testaverde in an effort to improve their lackluster offense, and on opening day they received five touchdown passes.

But Testaverde didn't figure in any one of those scores. Steve Deberg tossed all five in leading the Bucs to a 48-10 trouncing of Atlanta.

Atlanta, not expected to be a playoff challenger, was the favorite in their game against Tampa Bay, but the Bucs, scoring over 20 points' only twice last season, rolled up the highest point out-pout of the first NFL week.

The Falcons weren't the only team surprised Sunday. The Cleveland Browns were ambushed in New Orleans. The defending AFC Central division champion fell 28-21 to the Saints.

St. Louis, in an NFC East matchup, upset Dallas, 24-13, by scoring three touchdowns in the last two minutes.

Trailing 13-3, the Cardinals scored a torrid scoring spurt, cutting the Dallas advantage to 13-10 with 1:58 remaining in the contest, and pulled off the unexpected with two more scores before the final horn sounded.

The Houston Oilers, once down by 13 points in the first half, kept pace in their division, by out scoring the Los Angeles Rams 20-3, earning a 20-16 victory.

The Oilers, playing in one of the NFL's weakest divisions, were one of three teams from the four team AFC Central to earn victories Sunday.

The Pittsburgh Steelers raced out to a 17-3 halftime lead, and cruised to a 30-17 victory over highly rated San Francisco.

Other than Pittsburgh, and Houston, the Cincinnati Bengals represented the Central Division with a win, defeating Indianapolis 23-21.

The Central Division, other than Houston, will find the going just a little bit tougher this coming week. The Oilers will be playing in Buffalo, but Cleveland and Pittsburgh will meet in Cleveland while Cincinnati plays at home against San Francisco.

In other games figuring to have playoff implications, from this past week New England defeated Miami 28-21, despite four turnovers, and three Dan Marino touchdown passes in the first half.

The Patriots, after trailing 21-7 in the first half, out scored Miami 21-0 since that point, pulling off the intra-divisional matchup. The Dolphins missed the playoffs last season, losing their three of their first four games.

In an AFC West matchup, Kansas City, a playoff team last season, received a 95 yard kickoff return from rookie Paul Palmer with just under two minutes left to pull out a 20-13 victory. Kansas City, known last season as a passing team, also got a long touchdown run from rookie fullback Christian Okoye, 6'1", 255 pounds. With Okoye combining with Palmer, the Chiefs showed that this season they can also run the football.

In the same division, the Denver Broncos thumped Seattle. The defending AFC champion Broncos were recipients of a 339 yard passing day from John Elway in defeating Seattle 40-17. The Sea Hawks have been touted as the team most likely to de-throw Denver in the West.

Over in the NFC, the Washington Redskins, behind Doug Williams, held off Philadelphia 34-24 in an Eastern Division matchup.

Williams, a rarely used backup quarterback, was forced into action when starter Jay Schroeder went out with a sprained shoulder. After playing only one down in the NFL in the past five years, Williams threw for over 270 yards, and two touchdowns.

The Chicago Bears, Super Bowl champions from two years ago, proved they can win without Jim McMahon, defeating New York Monday night.

Backup quarterback Mike Tomczak threw for two touchdowns, and ran for another in leading Chicago to a 34-19 victory over the defending champion Giants.

With the loss the Giants became the 12th of 14 teams to lose on the road.

Looking forward to week two, possibly the last week for a while, some games bearing playoff interest include the AFC West matchup between Kansas City, and Seattle. The Chiefs are 1-0, and Seattle is 0-1.

Elsewhere in the AFC, the Pittsburgh Steelers will be traveling to Cleveland for a Central Division battle with the Browns. Cleveland is rated as the top team in that division, but trail the other three divisional teams by one full game.

But they may easily make up that ground this week. The Bengals will play at home, but against San Francisco, who may be a different team after losing big to Pittsburgh.

Over in the Eastern Division, the New England Patriots will be taking on their second consecutive divisional foe. Fresh on the heels of their victory over Miami, the Patriots will travel to the Big Apple, taking on the New York Jets Monday night.

The Patriots won the AFC East last season, holding off the Jets, who finished with an identical record, 10-6, as New England did.

In the NFC East, New York will have it's other team playing somewhere near the Big Apple, taking on divisional foe Dallas, but the Cowboys no longer present the challenge they did in past years.

The first week of action held many interesting results, but the most important game is off the field.

The NFL Players' Union has set a strike date for September 22. Negotiations have been continued, and the players presented a revised version on their position yesterday.

A strike is considered inevitable, but the length of one is expected to be short. The owners have also hinted that they may play with whomever is available.

Championship Coon Hunt Is Scheduled Saturday

Coon hunting has become the fastest growing outdoor sport in the United States, and the Big Sandy Coon Hunters Association is celebrating with a championship tournament.

Hunters from across Kentucky, and throughout surrounding states, are expected to converge on Stephens Branch at Cliff this Saturday afternoon.

The United States Coal Championship, as the event is being called, will begin with sign-ins at 3 p.m., Saturday, at Cliff.

The hunt, a first annual event, will give hunters two hours of time in the woods, and a deadline to report back has been set for 6 a.m., Sunday morning.

"We're not in it to earn money," Robert Moore, of the Big Sandy Coon Hunters Association, said. "We just want to give hunters an opportunity to have fun. They are people who love coon hunting just like there are people who love golf, and so forth," Moore continued. "They are dedicated, and work hard at it."

Hunters will meet on Stephens Branch Road at Cliff, but according to Moore, they have the freedom to choose their territory.

"They don't have to hunt here," Moore said. "They will probably be going all over the state. They can go anywhere they want to hunt as long as they are back before the deadline Sunday."

In Eastern Kentucky, where coons are the least bountiful, one coon can be found per square mile, according to state surveys.

Western Kentucky has the most coons per square mile, 10-12, of any area in the state.

WRONG RECEIVER: This Dwight Jarrel pass, intended for Todd Sturgill, found its way into the hands of defensive back Tim Trusty.

Kentucky Fishing Report

Frankfort, Ky., September 14—Fishing activity over the September 12-13 weekend was light to moderate statewide. Intermittent showers fell over much of the state hampering fishermen but helping improve fishing conditions. Bass, bluegill and crappie were reported caught with the best consistency. The lake-by-lake rundown, as reported by conservation officers or creel clerks at each lake:

The Sporting Times

Money is the root of all evil. We hear this constantly and probably with good reason. Money, or the need for it, has prompted people to rob, cheat, kill, and endanger their families.

Money may indeed be the root of all evil, but in today's society of big dog eat little dog unless little dog is rich, money is more than the root of all evil. It is the root of all, good or bad.

People can't eat without money. They can't feed their families without money, and some can't even sleep without money.

Unfortunately, our country is built around financial means—it means that if you don't have money you can't accomplish much.

Financing an automobile takes large sums of money. So does financing a home, and believe it or not, so does financing a baseball team.

Oh no, not a professional team, they are more than self supporting. Down lower, where it really counts is where the money problem comes in.

This past spring some local interested persons combined their knowledge, ability, and eagerness and began a summer youth league baseball team for Floyd county youngsters between the ages of 16 and 18.

Just take a wild guess at the first problem they encountered. Yep, you guessed it—money. Financially the program was as young as it was in actual existence, and bare to the bone would describe both situations.

Due to area businesses and their generosity, Floyd county did receive a baseball team, allowing 20 county players the opportunity to further their skills, and playing experience.

That first year team finished with a 6-9-1 record, not exactly much to write home about, but this year's team won six more games than did last year's squad.

From those meager initial efforts a legitimate baseball program has been given life in Floyd county. No longer do local players have to travel during the summer if they wish to play baseball. American Legion baseball, too.

One of the most respected and most talented of all summer leagues, American Legion baseball is the closest thing to professional baseball this county has had in a long time and probably ever will have.

And it's here. Senior Babe Ruth, as the team was called last summer, has made the transition to American Legion, and will play under Martin's Post 283.

One of the reasons for establishing the program was to give local youngsters an opportunity to continue their baseball careers, and have the opportunity to sharpen their skills during the summer rather than have them go unused.

"One of the reasons why Steve Hamilton said he didn't like recruiting players from eastern Kentucky was that they are fundamentally weak," Gary Frazier, the team's executive director, said recently. "I asked him how that could be corrected and he said give them the chance to play. This is what we're trying to do."

Hamilton, Morehead State University's head baseball coach and athletics director, has come under much criticism for not recruiting players from this area, but as one local baseball person stated, "Why would he want a player from here that he would have to work with, who might help him when he's a junior, when Hamilton could get a player from Cincinnati that could help him as a freshman."

This has been one interest of the American Legion baseball program, not only here but across the nation. Legion baseball is closely followed by college recruiters, and professional scouts, giving players of those programs additional recognition.

One problem all summer league programs face is the fact that they are not self-supporting. Dependent on outside funding, they have to be a combined project of a total community.

In it's initial season, the local team received solid support from the surrounding area, and fund-raising projects have been scheduled for this fall.

A roadblock across the county is currently being discussed for October 17, and raffle projects are in the works.

With 11 players, eight of them at least part-time starters, returning Floyd county is expected to have better success as far as wins and losses go. With four key additions already having been made, the current roster stands at 15 players. Four spots remain open and will be filled this spring.

If any businesses or individuals are interested in supporting, financially or otherwise, this baseball effort, they are encouraged to contact Gary Frazier at 377-6202. Your support will definitely be appreciated.

The America's Cup may be held in the United States the next time around, unless legal matters interfere with previous intentions.

The San Diego Yacht Club recently announced plans to hold the Cup race off the shores of California in 1991, but legal disputes have erupted from New Zealand.

San Diego has received 19 entries thus far at a fee of $25,000. The legal dispute involving New Zealand could wash that all out to sea later this month.

Brian Bosworth, popular and highly publicized linebacker for Seattle, is planning to challenge the National Football League in court.

The league recently ruled that Bosworth couldn't wear his favorite number 44, the one he displayed so proudly at Oklahoma.

NFL rules state that linebackers must wear a number either in the 50s or 90s, but Bosworth's agent says the league is picking on Bosworth because they want to teach him a lesson.

Bosworth left Oklahoma after his junior year, missed the regular draft, and went in a supplemental pick later in the summer. His agent, Gary Wichard, says the NFL, because of this, is trying to get back at the flamboyant rookie.

Wichard is also upset that the NFL would allow Carl Mecklenburg, linebacker for Denver, to wear number 77. The league says Mecklenburg was a defensive lineman before becoming a linebacker, thus making the number legal.

In Sunday's game against Denver, Bosworth had number 44 taped to his ankles.

Season Long Problem Haunts Trojans In Loss To Hazard

The Wheelwright Trojans have suffered with the common football disease known as fumbleitis this year, and renewed symptoms surfaced again last Friday night.

The Trojans coughed the football up a total of four times against Hazard, and eventually lost the game in double overtime, 14-8.

"We must be leading the state in turnovers," Wheelwright head coach Roger Johnson said. "We were driving the ball real well in the second quarter. I mean 12 and 13 yards at a pop, but what do we do—fumble."

To add insult to injury, the Hazard loss was to a district team. Wheelwright's third district defeat this season.

Now Johnson says the pressure is off. "We can still win the EKMC. That was our second goal. We can go out and have some fun. We can play football the way it was meant to be played, without pressure. Hopefully, we can win some games and have some fun playing football."

The Trojan mentor, expecting to have finally found the correct playoff chemistry, has admitted that his Wheelwright team is now out of any playoff contention, and it came on a disappointing note.

"Every game, like the Fairview game, we should have won," Johnson reflected, looking back on what might have been. "A call cost us that one, and I felt that if we could have ever gotten that one big play against Paintsville, we could have won that game."

This past Friday, and Wheelwright's most recent district loss, injuries played a key role in the Trojans' loss.

Johnson looked on as his starting center Chris Thornberry left the field. Soon after, Shawn McKenzie, starting defensive back, and backup quarterback, went out.

McKenzie had been spelling Bobby Hood, starting quarterback, who suffered an injury in the third quarter. Starting defensive end Craig Martin was also forced from the contest.

"If we had those players I feel that we would have beaten their team by two touchdowns, because we were driving the football until the injuries set in," Johnson said.

The Trojans, for the second consecutive game, allowed a touchdown on their first defensive effort, and after Hazard added a safety, Wheelwright found themselves trailing, 8-0.

With just over 10 minutes remaining in the game, the Trojans tied the score when fullback Doug Little crossed the goal line from three yards out. Handy Jackson added the two-point conversion, tying the score at eight.

In the second overtime period, Hazard scored six points, claiming the victory, their first of the season.

Turnovers, Wheelwright's problem the entire season, eventually created a loser out of the Trojans, who are now 1-3 on the season.

Their four turnovers in Friday's game brought their total to 18 on the season. The Trojans have been beneficiaries of only five.

"That isn't that bad for four games, the five turnovers we've gotten that is," Johnson said. "But 18 for us; that's ridiculous."

Johnson figures his Trojans are running a race for the state title in turnovers with Allen Central, who have also had problems when trying to hang onto the football. The Rebels had five in their game Friday night against Johns Creek.

The Trojans will take on Johns Creek this Friday night, and Johnson hopes his Wheelwright team can finally control the pigskin.

In four games this season, the Trojans are averaging over four turnovers per contest, while getting just above one per outing.

The Wheelwright injury list, filled against Hazard, is expected to dwindle as the Trojans prepare for their road trip to Johns Creek. All injured troops are expected to be back in action for Friday's contest.

With the playoffs apparently out of reach for 1987, Johnson is sending his Trojan players out to have fun, win a conference title, and possibly bring back a winning season to Wheelwright High School.

Giants Turn Back Challenge As Cincinnati Falls Off Set Pace

One main requirement of any champion is to successfully meet all challenges. The San Francisco Giants, this past weekend, met one of their greatest challenges of the season, and now are merely waiting to be crowned Western Division champions.

The Giants haven't won the NL West—not mathematically anyway, but the six game lead they built on second placed Cincinnati could prove to be an impossible hurdle for the Reds to vault, especially with less than three weeks left in the season.

First, San Francisco took care of business in Houston, winning two of three games from the then second placed Astros.

After that successful series, the Giants rolled into Cincinnati, faced with yet another challenge from a Western Division challenger.

The Reds, going into the recent three game weekend series, trailed San Francisco by five games, but Cincinnati people were hoping for a series sweep.

That didn't happen. In fact, the Giants won two of the three games, leaving Cincinnati one game better off than when they had first came.

The Reds opened the series the way their fans had hoped they would—with a victory, but lost the following two contests to fall six games off the pace.

Cincinnati, in the opening game victory, defeated the Giants 4-3 as lefty Dennis Rasmussen recorded his second victory in a Reds' uniform.

Dave Parker, and Dave Concepcion, two of Cincinnati's veteran performers, proved worthy of the pennant challenge, driving in all four Reds' runs. Parker collected two RBIs in the first with a double, and Concepcion repeated the exact feat in the second inning.

Trailing by only four games, Cincinnati seemed primed to finally make their move on the Giants, but in keeping with this season's post-all-star game tradition, San Francisco denied the Reds that opportunity.

Rick Reuschel, Giants right handed starter, scattered six hits through nine innings Saturday as San Francisco turned back Cincinnati 7-1. Reuschel, 12-7 on the season, also drove in three runs with a double in the sixth inning.

Will Clark and Candy Maldonado hit one homerun each to give Reuschel the win, his fourth in five starts for the Giants.

The 38-year-old right hander has proven to be the lift the Giants needed, and most people expected when he was acquired from the Pittsburgh Pirates August 31.

Reuschel was a trade project of the Cincinnati Reds, but the Reds felt the future was more important than the present, and refused to give up young prospects for a proven veteran pitcher.

With 11 complete games, Reuschel is tied for the most in the national league, and is one of the reasons why San Francisco pitchers boast the best NL earned run average.

Ted Power, Cincinnati's starter, was tagged with the loss. Power, 10-11, has now lost his last four pitching decisions. San Francisco continued their assault on Western Division foes, drilling the Reds 6-1 Sunday afternoon, stretching their lead to six games.

The Giants, leading 2-1, rallied to score three times with two out in the seventh inning, blowing the game open, and destroying Cincinnati's chances.

Tom Browning, the Reds most successful pitcher in the past month, had held the Giants at bay through six and two-thirds innings, but was lifted in the seventh. With two out and two men on Frank Williams relieved Browning, and proceeded to allow San Francisco three runs in the inning, two charged to Browning.

The Giants added another run in the eighth inning when Eddie Milner scored on a Mike Aldrete double.

Mike LaCoss, former Red, earned the victory for San Francisco, giving up the one run in six innings of work. Giant relievers shut Cincinnati out over the final three innings.

San Francisco pitching allowed only six runs in the three game series, helping out their league best earned run average of 3.68.

This past week may not have been the greatest one in Cincinnati Reds' history. Not only did the Reds put themselves in an almost impossible situation where the pennant is concerned, they are also losing their third base coach, and hitting instructor, along with possibly their manager, and key players.

Tracy Jones, highly rated outfielder, has expressed his discontent toward manager Pete Rose, and Rose has been rumored as leaving Cincinnati for Chicago, and Billy Demars has already called it quits.

Margè Shott, controversial Reds owner, has now began her grumbling toward the number of scouts Cincinnati employs.

One of the greatest franchises of the 1970s finally built a program of respect in the 80s, but instead of winning, the Big Red Machine may soon be a back biting embarrassment of it's former self.

Pete Rose said the Reds were an unemotional team, and Monday they echoed their manager's thoughts, losing 3-2 to lowly Atlanta.

Cincinnati managed only four hits Monday, three of those coming in the fourth inning when they scored one of their runs.

Atlanta scored two runs in the seventh inning, and held the Reds off in the ninth, sending Guy Hoffman down to his 10th loss against nine wins.

The Reds wrapped up their two game series in Atlanta last night, and after taking today off, will play in Los Angeles. The Reds have a one day, two game series planned, playing a double header Thursday.

Cincinnati, enjoying another day off Friday, will travel on to San Francisco for day games Saturday and Sunday, before returning home Tuesday to open a three game series with San Diego.

Fuel Tank Tips

What's the most important piece of safety equipment on your outboard motor? Well, for me it's definitely the fuel tank.

Gasoline, as every boater knows, is a very volatile substance. That's why the fuel tank is a very important piece of equipment. It's one item not to be taken for granted.

Before you head out on the lake or river next time, take a few moments to inspect your fuel tank. In fact, tear this column out for easy references when inspecting your tank. Look for leaks, large dents that might turn into leaks and loose or damaged fittings. Also, check your fuel lines for deterioration. The U.S. Coast Guard has made a point of this due to alcohol extended fuels.

If you find any problems, it's probably time to invest in a new tank. Don't be one of those boaters who take the explosive power of six gallons of gas for granted. Just one spark or wind-blown cigarette butt could spell disaster.

Here's some good advice on fuel tank features from the friendly people at OMC Parts & Accessories, who make fuel tanks for Johnson® and Evinrude® outboards.

Fuel line fittings—"Start by shopping at the dealership where you bought the motor," advises Dave Hartke, a fuel systems specialist at OMC in Waukegan, Ill. "The dealer can sell you a tank with fittings engineered to match your motor. We see a lot of after-market tanks that use fuel line adapters which may offer some compromises. The biggest problem is usually restricted fuel flow at the primer bulb or tank outlet. This may not allow enough fuel to reach the motor at full throttle, which can be disastrous, causing it to run so lean that the motor is ruined.

"A tank from the motor manufacturer will be designed to provide the proper fuel flow rate at all RPMs," Hartke said.

Tank construction—"The tank should be made of heavy-gauge steel, not the thinner metal used in lawn mower gas cans," Hartke advises. "The best tanks will also have a weld seam around the base, which is stronger and less prone to leakage than a crimped or press-fit seam.

"Accidents can occur when internal pressure builds up to the point of bursting poor-quality tanks," Hartke said. "This pressure usually occurs due to changing temperatures. You may fill the tank up early in the morning when the air is cool, but by noon the tank is sitting in the sun and the gas vapor expands.

"OMC tanks are designed as pressure vessels, using the same principles that apply to propane tanks, for example. They can withstand internal pressures of up to 25 pounds per square inch," Hartke emphasized.

Safety cap—"An important feature to look for is a two-position cap, like the one found on your car's radiator," Hartke explained. "This allows internal pressure to escape as you open the cap and directs it downward rather than onto the operator."

One-way venting—A unique feature found on OMC's tank is a one-way vent built into the quick-disconnect fuel line fitting. OMC's fuel lines disconnect at both the tank and the motor. When the line is disconnected at the tank the vent closes automatically to prevent gas vapors from escaping, into your car trunk, for example. When the fuel line is connected, the one-way vent allows air to enter the tank but keeps the dangerous fumes from leaving the tank.

Convenience features—Some other nice touches found on better-quality tanks include a retaining chain or other device to keep you from dropping the cap into the lake or sand, and brackets on the tank to wrap extra fuel line around and keep it out of the way and off the bottom of the boat. This reduces the chance of a kinked line restricting fuel flow and should help the lines last longer. Also, lines should be checked for deterioration due to the effects of blended fuels. Alcohol extended fuels may also cause corrosion in the tanks.

A fuel level gauge is handy. Check to see if the gauge lens is made of glass or plastic. Plastic lenses often yellow or cloud up with age, according to OMC's Hartke.

It should be stressed that these tips mostly apply to portable fuel tanks and not the built-in types found in professionally constructed bass boats. That is a topic for another column!

Weekend Will Honor Ky's Vietnam Vets

A 33-hour marathon of music, speeches, food and other entertainment will be featured Saturday and Sunday, September 26 and 27 at Masterson Station Park, Lexington, as Kentucky honors its 117,000 Vietnam veterans. Included among those being remembered are 1,330 veterans from Floyd county.

An entrance fee will be used to establish several programs initiated by the Kentucky chapters of Vietnam Veterans of America. The programs include an emergency food bank, state-wide education and loans, a half-way house for homeless vets and funding for the State Vietnam Veteran's Memorial in Frankfort.

Former Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler will kick off the event at 3 p.m., Saturday, by singing "My Old Kentucky Home." Featured among the speakers is Mrs. Charles E. Shelton, wife of the only, officially listed American POW. Formerly from Owensboro, she now lives in California. Other well-known Kentuckians expected to appear include Governor Martha Layne Collins, Democratic gubernatorial nominee Wallace Wilkinson, former University of Kentucky basketball star Dan Issel, Lexington horse farm owner Anita Madden, Barbara Bailey, of WKYT-TV, Mindy Shannon, of WLEX-TV, Dave Michaels, of WKQQ-FM radio, and Jim Helvachis, who is in charge of funding for the State Memorial.

Several entertainment groups are scheduled to appear throughout the weekend including Doug Breeding and the Bunch, The Cumberlands, The Trendells, Debbie Sledge from Sister Sledge, National Velvet, and more.

Jim Mullen, president of Vietnam Veterans of America Lexington chapter, said he believed this to be the "first event of its type in Kentucky for veterans of any war."

Co-sponsored by the Kentucky chapters of Vietnam Veterans of America and WKQQ-FM radio, the event is expected to draw a crowd of several thousand people not only from Kentucky, but from surrounding states.

Advanced tickets will go on sale Monday, September 14, at all Ticket Master outlets. Refreshments will be available and there will be plenty of room for tent camping, Mullen said. The gates will open at 1 p.m. Saturday.

THE NURSING MOTHER

New products for the increasing number of women who are returning to breast feeding have been developed. One such product is the breast pump. Available in different styles, one type is used to remove milk to reduce the pain and discomfort due to the build-up of milk in the breast. The other type has a bottle attached to it. As the breast milk is removed, it goes into the bottle to be fed to the infant later. This is helpful for the working mother, or in a situation when nursing would be inconvenient. Often, nursing women develop sore nipples. There are special creams available to help relieve the irritation. Nursing pads are also available that can be placed inside the bra to absorb leakage.

COOLEY APOTHECARY can provide you and your family with your total prescription needs as well as any over-the-counter remedies you require. Our entire staff keeps up to date on the latest developments in our industry. You'll find us at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. ## NEA Launches Campaign Against AIDS in Schools

National Education Association President Mary Hatwood Futrell held a press conference last Thursday at NEA headquarters to announce that "the NEA is launching a war against AIDS in our public schools"—with education as the major weapon.

"We must face the AIDS epidemic—and its impact on young people and our schools—head-on," says Futrell.

An informal assessment of AIDS cases in schools, conducted by NEA, has revealed that there are 684 cases of young people under 19 who have contracted AIDS. The U.S. Public Health Service estimates that 3,000 children will have the disease by 1991 and that virtually all will die.

"Our chief hope now," says Futrell, "is education, education that recognizes the most fatal diseases—from heart failure to lung cancer—are, to a great degree, generated or aggravated by life-style decisions."

NEA's offensive against AIDS, notes Futrell, will aim to help America's young people make life-style decisions that reduce their chances of contracting the AIDS virus.

As part of the NEA offensive against AIDS, NEA, the U.S. Public Health Service, the National Association of School Nurses, Inc., and Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, a private sector leader in health education, have formed a health information network to combat the disease.

This network's first project—a booklet, "The Facts About AIDS"—was distributed earlier this month to the Association's 1.86 million members in the U.S. and overseas. The booklet, timed to reach teachers before "AIDS Prevention Month" in October, was specially prepared for NEA by the U.S. Public Health Service and includes an introduction by U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Kopp.

"NEA wanted to help teachers," says Futrell, "be in a better position to answer student questions about AIDS."

To be effective, Futrell points out, AIDS education must be a community, not just a school, process. America's communities, says Futrell, must "decide what should be taught about AIDS—and in what manner."

To help develop consensus about AIDS education at the community level, NEA is helping three community AIDS projects that will be launched this fall in Burnsville, Minnesota, Camden, New Jersey, and Anne Arundel County, Maryland.

"Through these projects," says Futrell, "we hope to provide models for other communities across the country—and help avoid the kind of hysteria that accompanied the recent AIDS controversy in Arcadia, Florida."

ASK TONI

When did the new Darrin join the 'Bewitched' cast?

By Toni Reinhold

How long did "Bewitched" air? How many episodes are in reruns? When did Dick Sargent replace Dick York? - C.M.B., Waterbury, Conn.

Dick York

The series aired from 1964 to 1972, and 252 episodes are now in syndication. York portrayed Darrin Stephens from 1964 to 1969, when he was replaced by Sargent, who played the role until the series ended.

How many movies did Deanna Durbin appear in? Will you list them? Can I expect to see her movies on TV or rent them on tape? - K.L., Mayfield Heights, Ohio

A charming actress with a pixie-like face and endearing manner, Durbin appeared in 21 films during her career. An actress and singer, she became a contract player for Universal Studios in 1936, appearing in such films as "Three Smart Girls" (1936), "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" (1939) and "Christmas Holiday" (1944). Check the catalog at your local video store or write to your local movie channel to request that her films be aired.

I'd like to know who originally sang "I'm in the Mood for Love." Was it a man or a woman? - M.L., Pittston, Pa. This immortal song was first performed by Frances Langford, who was very much a woman, in the film "Every Night at Eight" (1935).

Whatever became of Ward Bond from the "Wagon Train" series? - M.J., Maysville, N.C.

This fine film and TV actor died in 1960 at the age of 57. He made his film debut in "Salute" (1929), and went on to star in such movies as "Drums Along the Mohawk" (1939) and "Mr. Roberts" (1955). A diversified performer, he appeared on the '50s TV dramatic anthologies "The Bigelow Theatre," "General Electric Theatre" and "Star Stage," and starred as Maj. Seth Adams in "Wagon Train" from 1957 to 1965. When he died, he left the shotgun he had used as a prop in the series to his good friend John Wayne.

'Gallagher's Overboard' is offensive and mindless

By Frank Lovece

The self-mockingly titled "Gallagher's Overboard," which airs on Showtime on Tuesday, Sept. 22, and Friday, Sept. 25, is the comedian's 10th cable special, so he is undoubtedly popular. But while someone, somewhere, must be predisposed to like Gallagher, anyone with a sense of taste will be inclined to dispose of him. Nothing on cable - not the Playboy Channel, not MTV - is as unfunny or offensive.

Gallagher

Gallagher bills himself as a prop-comic, a comedian who uses props to garner laughs and make his points. Actually, he uses them to prop up his feeble sense of comedy. He sets out not to amuse but simply to disgust his audience, offering as his trademark a bit in which he squeezes fake bird-droppings from a plastic seagull suspended over the audience. While being gross and disgusting in order to make an artistic point can be admirable,

Gallagher's act is grossness for the sake of itself, a mindless indulgence of the right to free speech. Unfortunately, his fans not only tolerate his moronic behavior - they seem to revel in it. The audience at this Long Beach, Calif., concert wear raincoats and carry umbrellas to protect themselves from the droppings, water and sticky pieces of fruit he throws at them. At one point, they writhe in masochistic pleasure as he waves a fat-woman doll that excretes God-knows-what from between its legs. It's more deliberately disgusting than anything at a heavy-metal concert. When Gallagher has exhausted his repulsive repertoire, he turns to politics, jabbing lamely at targets that span from one end of the political spectrum to the other. The audience first laughs at, then actively cheers his reactionary jokes, such as his proposal that we should ship prisoners to Beirut and then check them off when they get kidnapped. Amid the cheers and applause you can practically see the raincoated rabble nudging each other in agreement. Ironically, Gallagher seems to know exactly what he's doing and who he's appealing to. "It doesn't have to make a lot of sense in America," he tells the audience. "It only has to be original." P.T. Barnum couldn't have said it better.

THIS WEEK

For Ron Perlman, playing the beast is ennobling

By Paul Elie

The strangest series of the new season may be CBS's "Beauty and the Beast," which premieres Friday, Sept. 25.

Ron Perlman

The series depicts two worlds - the Manhattan social whirl of assistant district attorney Catherine Chandler (Linda Hamilton) and the underground lair of Vincent (Ron Perlman), a hideously deformed man-beast who has joined a utopian community that exists beneath the city's subways. When Chandler is beaten by muggers, Vincent rescues her and nurses her back to health, sparking an incredible, seemingly impossible secret romance.

"I've never had a chance to play a role so honest and heroic," Perlman says. "Vincent has had to overcome so much that he's risen to a level of great regality. I wish I could be so noble."

Monstrous roles are Perlman's specialty. As an Ulam tribesman in "Quest for Fire" (1981) and as a depraved, hunchbacked monk in "The Name of the Rose" (1986), his features were hidden by makeup.

Now, as Vincent, he is admirable in spite of his looks, a "superhuman Hamlet" with the face of a lion and the unruly blond hair of the most wigged-out hippie.

"I've always been enamored with performances in which the actor loses himself in his work," Perlman says. "I've just taken it a step further."

Perlman is himself something of a cross between a Hamlet and a hippie. He rhapsodizes about how the series depicts "epic love," and describes Vincent as "high-level humanity," comparing him to Albert Schweitzer and Mahatma Gandhi.

"He's completely self-actualized," Perlman says. "He's noble, compassionate, heroic, just and courageous. He's so sure of himself that he lives for the world."

"He's rubbing off on me," he adds. "I have an incredible sense of well-being because I spend so many hours a day playing Vincent. In some ways my whole life has changed. It's engaging and totally satisfying."

CBS is airing the series at 8 p.m. (E.T.), perhaps hoping to reach the sort of young, comic book-reading viewers that made "The Incredible Hulk" a Friday-night hit in the '70s. But Perlman insists that the series is not for kids.

"I'm trying to appeal to the human condition in its most sublime form," he says. "You're not going to see me breaking through a door every week."

Sandi Ferguson says 'AW' is the perfect job for her

By Marie Michaels

Although Sandi Ferguson, who portrays debutante Amanda Cory on "Another World," seems right at home in front of the cameras, the role is her first foray into the world of daytime.

Sandi Ferguson

"I performed in local stage productions while in high school, and I was involved with theater workshops while I attended community college back home in Pittsburgh," says Ferguson, who majored in communications and journalism just in case her career as an actress didn't flourish. Before coming to New York City, Ferguson appeared in local commercials, industrial films and theater productions, such as "The Barber of Seville" at the Pittsburgh Opera. She admits that she hasn't had extensive professional acting training.

"I was doing very well in Pittsburgh when my manager suggested that I come up to New York City to see if I could get a role on a soap," she recalls. "Once I arrived in New York, everything happened very fast." She landed her "AW" role after auditions with four different soaps over a four-month period.

"I believe that I have the perfect job for me at the moment," Ferguson says. "Working on 'AW' is a great training ground for me, and living in the city I have access to the best instructors and acting coaches.

"Amanda is very spunky, lively, and she's a nice person, although she does have a rebellious streak in her," she says of her character. "She comes from a very wealthy family, so if there's something she wants she'll go after it until she gets it. But although she takes her family's wealth for granted sometimes, she doesn't rely on the money. She's determined to stand on her own two feet."

Since Ferguson is just settling into the role, for now she's content to go with what the show's writers give her to do on screen. But she does have ideas about what she'd like to see done with Amanda in the future.

"I'd like to make myself a little bit more comfortable with the job and the role right now," she says. But eventually I think it would be challenging to tackle a story line that would have Amanda involved with something heavy, like alcoholism or drugs."

Harvest Season at Shakertown Is Time of Traditional Chores

"So all hands were employed by laying up for the table..." reads a Pleasant Hill Shaker Journal of September 1839. One hundred forty-eight years later, the Shaker Village of Pleasant Hill, near Harrodsburg, is again filled with the sights and sounds of fall activity. September 19-20, and 26-27 have been designated September Harvest Week-ends.

As the diligence of the 19th century Shaker community bore fruit in well-supplied cellars, kitchens, workshops and dwellings, so the restored village celebrates the gathering time today with traditional activities.

Visitors are invited to taste cider as it flows from the apple press in the orchard...smell the aroma of herb breads baking in the oven of the dwelling...see molasses bubbling beside the horse-powered sorghum mill...hear the blacksmith hammer at his anvil...experience the Meeting House filled with Shaker music and dance.

Village interpreters performing year-round domestic chores of weaving, spinning, broommaking and coopering are joined each September by visiting artisans, and singers and dancers from Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and Virginia.

After more than a decade of festival activity, Shaker Village of Pleasant Hill continues to introduce crafts of the past, work of the season and education through the joy of the senses. The gentle sound of pull knife on wood, as a craftsman shapes a wooden pitchfork, is heard beside the wool dyer at work above her cauldron. Tinsmiths demonstrate the versatility of the material that was the plastic of the 19th century. An artisan decorates tinware in the fashion of that time.

Throughout the historic Shaker Village, joiner, oval box maker, pole lathe turner and leatherworker display their trades. Splints of ash are made, then used to weave baskets. The snip of the silhouette cutter's scissors produces an image made before the age of the camera. The strength and refinement of silk can be felt as the cocoons are unwound.

Visitors who have enjoyed the spectacular beauty of the Kentucky River palisades aboard the sternwheeler Dixie Belle, will have a new opportunity to experience the history and natural wonders of the area. Three River Venture programs expand on the regular daily schedule of one-hour riverboat rides.

A FAMILIAR SCENE AT SHAKERTOWN where the work of harvest time as it was is still attended to in the traditional mode.

Workshops To Teach School Improvement

The Prichard Committee has just invited 5,000 Kentuckians to sharpen their skills at working to improve their local schools.

Committee Chairman Wade Mountz announced six Citizen Action Workshops for this fall. The topic of the workshops, Mountz said, is "How to make a difference in your schools." Workshops will be held at the Quality Inn in Ashland, Tuesday, September 29; at Ashland Oil in Lexington, Thursday, October 1; at the Hindman Settlement School in Hindman, Tuesday, October 6; at the Community College in Paducah, Friday, October 9; at the High School Cafeteria in Glasgow, Saturday, October 10; and at the Community College in Somerset, Tuesday, October 13. All workshops begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 4 p.m.

According to Mountz, the committee had such a good response to similar workshops held last spring that additional workshops are needed. "We found about 150 people across Kentucky who want to roll up their sleeves and work in their communities. This is a way to support them and encourage more to come forward," he said.

Each workshop will address how to organize a local group, recruit members, motivate a group, work with local schools and plan for results.

Participants must register in advance, paying a fee which covers meals and materials. Requests for registration materials can be made by calling the committee's office in Lexington at 606-233-9849.
