A CENTER OF CONTROVERSY, this coal tipple sits in the middle of Hueysville, and residents fear that it will reopen.

18th Red, White & Blue Day Slated Saturday in Martin

By B.A. Heinze

Red, White, and Blue Day will be held Saturday at Martin with a day-long schedule of events which will culminate with a fireworks display at dusk. The patriotic observance will, with its 18th annual celebration, honor veterans of World War II and the Constitution.

Saturday's activities will begin with the 5K run starting at Finance Hollow and following Old Route 80 to finish at the parking lot of the First Guaranty National Bank. This will be followed by the antique car show at 10 a.m. with vintage machines expected from different parts of the state as well as adjoining states. Also scheduled at 10 a.m. is a horse shoe tournament.

The flag-raising ceremonies will be held at 11:30 a.m. at the Martin Grade School grounds where members of the

Will Pay Honor To WWII Vets, Constitution

D.A.V., Amvets, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars will participate. State and local officials will also be present as will Mayor Raymond Griffith, Mrs. Marcella Bailey, founder of Red, White, and Blue Day, and parade marshals, Monroe Vanderpool, of Hippo, and Earrit Hayes, of Martin, both World War II veterans.

There will be displays of arts and crafts all day, refreshment booths, and an appearance by perennial patriotic favorite, Uncle Sam.

Among political figures expected to be present is Wallace Wilkinson, Democratic nominee for governor.

Highlight of the day will be the parade beginning at 2 p.m. and led by Grand Marshals Vanderpool and Hayes. Nearly every high school in the county will be represented by its band members with others expected from nearby counties. There will be floats and beauty queens including the newly crowned Miss Red, White, and Blue to add to the parade's attractions.

Following the parade, there will be live entertainment at the municipal parking lot with country, bluegrass, and other good music for listeners, singers, or dancers. This will continue until the fireworks display which will be held at dusk to conclude the 18th consecutive Red, White, and Blue Day.

Hueysville Residents View Bid To Re-Open Tipple with Dismay

By Tim Sizemore

Although it has been two years since black dust hung in a perpetual cloud over the town, the rumbling of coal trucks disturbed the normally tranquil community, and residents sometimes were blocked from access to their homes and businesses, the possibility of a return to those conditions was the focus of a tense meeting last Wednesday between residents of Hueysville, state stripmining officials, and representatives of the C. C. Craft Estate which has applied for a permit to operate a tipple, there.

Those concerned gathered in a vacant store next to the postoffice with members of the C. C. Craft family seeking a permit to re-open the operation there of a coal tipple shut down two years ago, while Hueysville residents protested the move citing it as both a nuisance and a health hazard.

Irene Hayes, former postmistress at Hueysville, said that no effort had been made previously to keep down the dust caused by the operation or to prevent trucks blocking access to homes and businesses of Hueysville residents. At one time, the postal service attempted to relocate the postoffice because its location was considered dirty and dangerous. "When it rained, black water washed down and pooled in front of the postoffice," she added.

The processing plant, according to Hueysville residents, was cited several times for failure to comply with state regulations governing the operation of a tipple. In addition, they said, at times the noise and dust levels became unbearable despite their requesting sprayers be kept in repair and used to settle the dust which they say sometimes hung over the valley like a cloud.

The tipple, constructed by Beaver Elkhorn Fuels, Inc. in 1978 when it leased the site of a coal loading dock from the late C. C. Craft, is said to have operated for several months without a permit.

Del Kerwin Martin and his brother,

Knott county District Judge Graham Martin, both of Hindman, owned and operated the plant from 1979 until it was sold in 1982 to Envest Coal Company, owned by Ted H. Law, of Alderson, W. Va., who closed the tipple in 1986. At that time it was taken over by the C. C. Craft Estate, whose application in December, 1986 for a state permit was denied because of technical reasons.

In addition to coal dust and noise, hazards cited include coal trucks lining up, blocking access to the community postoffice and to several homes. Talmadge and Mae Allen said that the running truck motors caused noxious fumes to such an extent that it prohibited being outside. A veteran of 41 years as a miner who has lived in the area all his life, Allen says he has lived with the noise and dust caused by the tipple.

MISS JENNY WILEY, Erica Lynn Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Van Turner, of Minnie, and a freshman at PCC, had a big smile for those along the parade route, here, Saturday.

OPEN AT LAST, the roadwork on new 80 is completed and a stronger railroad tunnel promises a safe journey after more than a year of construction.

Sheriff and D.O.T. in News Over Weight Limit Question

By Tim Sizemore

August 5 marked an incident involving coal hauling regulations between Sheriff Henry C. Hale and the Department of Transportation. Even though it occurred more than two months ago, almost in the realm of history for newspaper coverage, and was settled within a few days, the incident is receiving this week widespread though belated coverage.

Sheriff Hale, like many Eastern Kentucky officials, is in the coal hauling business. The trouble began when Department of Transportation officers cited two of Hale's trucks for being overweight, for not having a $360 special license plate that allows extended weight and for not having a $250 Highway Usage Tax Decal for each of his trucks. The D.O.T. officers were ordered by officials in Frankfort to impound the two trucks along with trucks owned by others. The trucks were not weighed on the site due to traffic congestion, but officers said that they appeared to be overweight and they intended to weigh them when they reached the Allen State Garage and impoundment area. They also claim that while they wrote the tickets, one of the sheriff's drivers went to a nearby store and phoned Hale. Following this, D.O.T. officers said that as the trucks were being brought to the impoundment area a deputy managed to get in front of the two trucks owned by Hale and lead them out of the convoy onto Hale's property. Two deputies then removed the 42,000 pound weight limit tags and replaced them with 82,000 pound limit tags, according to the D.O.T. officials.

Sheriff Hale is said to have held the citations and told the transportation officers that they had exceeded their authority, saying they had no right to impound his trucks because County Attorney David Barber had recommended dismissal of the tickets.

Sheriff Hale said in his defense that he had no problem with the Department of Transportation and that the matter had been settled more than two months ago.

He said that he had no idea that the trucks had been impounded. He pointed out that instead of the customary warning citation of three days for a first offense, his trucks had been ticketed. The reason he parked his trucks on his lot, he said, was because of vandalism and theft of CB's at the state garage, and that he told the officer that the trucks would sit until the decals were purchased. Hale added that he is unsure of the law and feels that it is vague concerning new regulations.

County Attorney Barber says that no one's truck should be impounded for a first offense. Commenting on the weight issue he said, "To say a truck looks overweight is like saying a person looks dead and charging a person with murder." He says that when he spoke with an official of the Department of Transportation in Frankfort, he told Barber that his handling of the matter was perfectly acceptable to him.

Broadform Deed Review, New US 23 Hopes Dashed

By B.A. Heinze

Recent events in both Frankfort and Washington, D. C. are viewed with mixed reaction here.

Those who held some hope that the Kentucky Supreme Court would grant a rehearing on its earlier 1984 broadform deed ruling were more disappointed than surprised by the court's denial of the request for review of its ruling which in effect struck down legislation which provided some protection against stripmining to surface owners.

State Rep. Greg Stumbo, of Prestonsburg, who introduced the 1984 legislation, said that he and Rep. Clayton Little, of Virgie, expect to introduce a constitutional amendment in the 1988 session that would give the same protection to landowners that the 1984 law did.

On the other hand, an attorney for a group of coal companies, Richard Ward, said the ruling is good because "it lets people know exactly where they stand." He added that coal companies were already paying landowners damages for stripmining coal, but that the new ruling makes the practice more uniform. He denied that most deeds may come under the protected period of 1956 to July, this year, saying that the reverse will be found.

This refers to the only change made in the court's July ruling which said that payment of damages did not apply to land conveyed by boardform deed between May 4, 1956 and the effective date of the opinion. Since the opinion of the court was not final until September 24, mineral owners could have transferred property during that time and avoided payment to surface owners for damage caused by later mining. Under the change that loophole has been closed, and payment must be made for surface damage caused by mining under a broadform deed transferred after July 2, the opinion's initial date.

The section of the 1984 law struck down said, in part, that "in the absence of clear and convincing evidence to the contrary" the intention of the parties signing the deed "was that the coal be extracted only by the method or methods of commercial coal extraction commonly known to be in use in Kentucky in the area affected at the time" the deeds were signed.

A similar law was passed and upheld in Tennessee.

Literacy Council Seeks Business Leaders' Help

By B.A. Heinze

Literacy is good business. That will be the message given to civic and business leaders of the area at a Literacy Awareness Business Luncheon to be held at the Holiday Inn, here, at noon tomorrow (Thursday).

Sponsored by the Floyd County Literacy Council, Floyd County Rotary Club, Pike County Literacy Council, plus Project Literacy U.S., the meeting will highlight Literacy Awareness Week proclaimed in Floyd county by Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo and in Prestonsburg by Mayor Ann Latta as October 12-16. The luncheon is one of 200 similar gatherings being held throughout the nation this week as part of the national campaign against illiteracy.

It is estimated that between 10 and 15 percent of the nation's work force reads and writes at the fourth grade level or below, and in Kentucky, more than 400,000 adults are functionally illiterate. Through the work of the Floyd County Adult Literacy Council, a concerted effort is being made to combat problem of illiteracy in this county.

Business leaders will be encouraged to give an incentive to employees to study for their G.E.D., according to Daniel J. Greene, chairman of the Literacy Council. The City of Prestonsburg offers a 1% salary increase for anyone who obtains their G.E.D., and Greene pointed to Winn Dixie's regulation that prohibits them from hiring an employee unless they have, or are in the process of obtaining, either a high school diploma or G.E.D.

"To keep our economy healthy and to attract new technology, Floyd county must be able to have skilled employees," Marcie Menster, coordinator of the Literacy Council, said. "Our goals for the luncheon are to heighten community awareness of local literacy activities and to increase community support."

The council coordinates countywide efforts for adults in need of basic skills and G.E.D. training in order to help the unemployed, underemployed, and career displaced to improve their opportunities for gainful employment. Among the goals of the council are bringing the literacy problem to public attention, publicizing and promoting present efforts as well as finding new ones, and the formation of a partnership with local business and civic leaders.

More information on the luncheon or the council's programs may be obtained by calling 886-8811.

World of Technology Days Set At Morehead

More than 1,500 high school students from Eastern Kentucky and Southern Ohio are expected to visit Morehead State University for World of Technology Days, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 21-22.

Sponsored by MSU's College of Applied Sciences and Technology, the program offers high school and vocational students the opportunity to learn about various aspects of technology and programs in those areas offered by Morehead State, according to Dr. Donald Applegate, WOT planning committee chair.

The students will tour exhibits and see demonstrations both days from 9 to 11:30 a.m. in Reed Hall and Lloyd Cassidy Building, followed by lunch in Adron Doran University Center. In addition, a fashion show at 11 a.m. will be held both days in the Crager Room of the University Center. MSU students will serve as guides for the high school students.

Programs featured in the displays will include agribusiness, animal science, horsemanship, horticulture, interior design, fashion merchandising, vocational home economics, drafting and design, electronics, robotics, graphic arts, nursing, radiology, mining and many others.

All activities are open to the public.

Cultural Exchange Program Seeks Hosts

Intercambio Internacional de Estudiantes, A.C. a cultural exchange program, is offering local families the opportunity to share their home life with a young boy or girl from Central America. Children will arrive during November, December, or January for a 8 to 9 week stay.

Founded in 1959, the Intercambio Program has successfully arranged for well over 50,000 children and families to meet and experience one another's cultures. Intercambio is designed for younger children, ages 13 to 17, who are looking for a home which has a youngster of the same age, sex and of similar interests.

These children are sponsored by their own parents, are covered by insurance for health and accident, and will bring their own spending money. Besides the goal of personal formation for the child, Intercambio is taking a big step toward establishing international friendships.

Families interested in providing room, board, and sharing their activities can learn more about Intercambio by calling toll-free 1-800-437-4170, or writing Intercambio, 3122 Broadway, Fargo, ND 58102.

The Office of Administrative Services of the Cabinet for Human Resources is the agency's purchasing and data processing unit, responsible for over 1.3 million financial transactions per year and the maintenance of seven million records.

200 Kentucky Children Are Awaiting Adoption

There are more than 200 Kentucky children who are waiting to be adopted. Parental rights have been terminated and these children have been freed for adoption by Kentucky courts. They are mostly older children or groups of three or more brothers and sisters who need to be placed together. They may be handicapped children or black children of any age. These children, through no fault of their own, are without a permanent family in which to grow and mature into adults.

This smiling blonde, brown-eyed young lady is 14-year old Charlotte, who is one example of the children waiting. Charlotte is an outgoing and happy child. Charlotte likes animals, especially the foster parents' dog, "Rags". Charlotte is initially shy and is slow to make friends, but is friendly when she gets to know you. She gets along well with both adults and children. Charlotte enjoys school where she is in special education classes. Her academics have improved this past six months. Charlotte is active in a baptist church youth group and Sunday school.

She has had a number of moves in her short life. In the past there have been reports that she is occasionally defiant. Charlotte has a typical teenager's interest in clothes and hairstyles. She also enjoys helping with household chores. Charlotte is in good health except for having neurofibromatosis. This is an hereditary disease that in 15% of the cases could cause tumors that could effect the neurological system. Charlotte needs to be seen yearly to monitor this condition. At this time this condition is not presenting any problems for her.

Charlotte is eager for an adoptive family where she can stay. An adoption subsidy is available to help a family meet Charlotte's needs. If you're the family to provide a loving, stable home for Charlotte, please call the Special Needs Adoption Program at 1-800-432-9346 toll free anytime.

Bottom of Barrel Bunch To Play at Berea Festival

Berea College's 14th annual Celebration of Traditional Music will feature the popular McLain Family Band, some old-time musicians who performed together in 1930's, and our own Bottom of the Barrel Bunch.

The festival opens Thursday, Oct. 29, with a street dance at 8 p.m. Concerts by festival musicians begin at 7:30 p.m., Friday and Saturday, in Phelps Stokes Chapel. Also on Saturday, instrumental workshops will be in session all day at the Alumni Building where, at 2 p.m., a symposium will be led by Dr. W.K. McNeil of the Ozark Folk Center, Mountain View, Arkansas. A Sunday concert of hymns, at 9 a.m. in the Alumni Building, will close the celebration.

The annual festival is held "simply to feature old-time traditional music," says Loyal Jones, director of the College's Appalachian Center. Bluegrass and other newer forms of music are fine, Jones added, but the purpose of this festival is to encourage the old styles that aren't heard so much anymore.

Among the old-time musicians performing this year will be Wade and Julia Mainer from North Carolina. In the mid-1930's, Wade was a member of Mainer's Mountaineers, a band that experimented with new harmonies and string styles that influenced country and Bluegrass music. The band recorded for Bluebird, RCA Victor and King Records and was heard on radio stations as widely scattered as WBT in Charlotte, WWL in New Orleans and XENT, Matera, Mexico.

"Pappy" Sherrill and Dewitt "Snuffy" Jenkins, two other musicians who played with Mainer's Mountaineers and other bands in the Southeast, also will perform. Jenkins is regarded as the first banjo player to popularize the intricate three-finger style of picking that later was perfected by such Bluegrass greats as Earl Scruggs and Don Reno.

The McLain Family Band of Berea is returning to the college celebration after an absence of several years. The McLains travel throughout the United States and have performed in many foreign countries.

Other festival performers will include Clyde Davenport, a Kentucky fiddler; Ernie Carpenter, fiddler, and ballad singer Phyllis Marks from West Virginia; The Queen Family Band from Jackson County, North Carolina; The Bottom of the Barrel Bunch, a band of young traditional musicians from Eastern Kentucky, and instrumentalist and folklorist Frank Proffitt, Jr. who has been artist in residence at several colleges in North Carolina.

Tickets for the Friday and Saturday concerts will be sold at the door of Phelps Stokes Chapel. Following the evening concerts, Dr. John Ramsay, director of the Berea College Recreation Extension, will lead square dances at the Alumni Building.

Dr. McNeil's topic for the Saturday symposium will be "The Relationship Between Ozark and Appalachian Music: Similarities and Differences." McNeil, a native of Canton, N.C., is the author of "Ghost Stories From the American South." All Saturday events at the Alumni Building are free.

ple once and doesn't care to repeat the experience, adding that nothing was done by the companies to solve the problems.

Six homes and a new church are located within 300 feet of the tipple. Under the 1977 federal stripmine act a coal tipple cannot be operated within 300 feet of private homes, however a tipple operating before July 6, 1984 may qualify for exemptions to the act because of prior existing rights.

Among the less than pleasant recollections of life when the tipple was in operation were that "The children couldn't even play in the grass without getting filthy," and houses which had to be painted every year because of the settling black dust which saturated insulation and furnace filters.

Mrs. Hayes pointed out that the failure to grant a permit will not jeopardize any local jobs since truckers formerly using the tipple were from a Virginia-based company and that only one man operated the tipple, itself.

Glenn Craft, of Springfield, representing the C. C. Craft Estate, expressed confidence that a permit will be granted. His former neighbors continue to hope their fears of a return to the past are not realized.

Water Gap Resident Supports Menagerie

By Tim Sizemore

How much is that doggie in the window? Well it's not for sale if it's one of 20 dogs owned by Alka Clark of Town Branch.

Clark, who has been an animal lover all her life, just can't stand to part with one of her precious canines. "I just love them all," she says as she surveys her family of pooches.

"I've raised many of them on the bottle, and I try to name them all," she said as she went down a list of her favorites.

A native of Floyd county, she lived for 13 years in Cincinnati before moving back to Kentucky in 1961. She has had a varied life, holding positions in a restaurant, managing a grocery store and working at the Floyd county courthouse.

She says that it takes a lot of work, but that she enjoys it. When asked what her favorite breed of dog is, she said Red-bone but she also seems partial to any mixed breed needing a home. "I love dogs, and I hate to see them killed," she commented.

The dogs are kept in a variety of lots and pens, and some are chained up under the floor. Alka tries to spend time with each dog and says that they love the attention.

Besides the menagerie of dogs, she also has cats. "I call one Boody and one Tommy and one's just a big white cat," she says.

So if you're ever on Town Branch and want to see a real animal lover, you won't be barking up the wrong tree if you visit Alka Clark.

Rabies Case Is Confirmed

By B.A. Heinze

Four people in the Regina area of Pike county are now undergoing a series of painful anti-rabies shots after a hunting dog was confirmed last week to have died of rabies.

This is the first confirmed case of rabies in a domestic animal in at least 17 years in either Pike or Floyd counties, according to health officials. Gary E. Coleman, of the Pike County Health Department, said that this is the first such case there since he joined the department in 1969. Earl Compton, head of the Floyd County Health Department, checked records back to 1970, finding no confirmed cases of rabies in domestic animals. He said that in the late 1950's an outbreak of rabies in wildlife throughout the state caused the dread disease to spread to an unusual number of domestic animals.

Last year, a grey fox caught near here was found to be rabid and several people underwent a series of anti-rabies injections. This year, a red bat was also found to carry the disease but no one was exposed to it.

The current Pike county case began when a Walker hound was brought to the office of a veterinarian, here, October 4. After examination of the hunting dog, the owner was advised to have it destroyed and sent for rabies testing. This he refused to do and was then told opinion striking down the law. Dissenting were Justices Joseph Lambert, James Stephenson, and Donald Wintersheimer.

Just as unwelcome to most, particularly those who must travel U.S. 23, was the news that the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Transportation had dropped the heavily traveled link between Prestonsburg and Paintsville from the list of projects to be funded. Representative Chris Perkins had earlier succeeded in getting a $2.5 million appropriation for improvements through the House, but with lack of support in the senate, prospects for either improvement of the existing road or building of an alternate route are dim.

Senator Mitch McConnell, in a letter to Burl Wells Spurlock, president of the First Commonwealth Bank, here, said of the prospects for U.S. 23 funding, "I am not overly optimistic about its chances of survival. If it is not included, then the possibility exists that the project could be accepted when House and Senate conferees meet to resolve differences in the two spending bills." Most concede that the outlook is bleak.

ficers also claimed that Deputy Sheriff George Hale threatened to cite them as a traffic hazard after the sheriff's trucks were stopped. Deputy Hale, however, says that trucks were backed up on a railroad track and all he wanted them to do was move up and unblock the tracks.

Sheriff Hale, who has been in full compliance with the law for two months, wonders why the incident has come to the forefront now.

to keep the animal confined and to watch it.

When it died a few days later, the owner took its head to the Pike County Health Department to be sent to the rabies laboratory in Frankfort.

This week, the report came back positive—the dog had rabies.

The owner of the dog, his son, and two others who handled the animal are now undergoing treatment.

Both Coleman and Compton stressed the importance of having rabies shots given to dogs and cats. Compton said that some people inoculate their own dogs, but that the vaccine available to them is not as effective or safe as that given by a veterinarian. "Only a veterinarian can get 'live' vaccine," he said, "and while it costs a little more, it is well worth it."

If exposed to the danger of rabies, an individual is required to undergo a series of six injections which can cost from $500 to $700.

Even if several animals must be immunized, the comparative cost is small.

Mr. Compton said that contrary to popular belief, this season is the one favorable to the spread of rabies, rather than in summer. He cautioned that if an animal does bite anyone, it should be confined, given water and food, and watched. "If it is rabid this will be apparent in 10 to 14 days," he said.

In Non-Meet, Council Views Truck Bids

By Kurt Pickering

Prestonsburg City Council held no official meeting this week after failing to have a quorum, Monday night.

With four Council members present and four absent, it was a near-miss; one more council member on hand would have allowed the meeting to be held. Absent members were Frank A. Adams, Margie N. Osborne, Harry Ray Porter and Thomas J. Tackett; present were Adrian Blackburn, Dr. Gary D. Brown, William R. Callihan and William O. Goebel, III.

Councilman Callihan opened the non-meeting by asking Mayor Ann Latta if he could make a statement, whether on the record or off. "I want to go on record as highly praising (City Manager) (Fred) James and the street department for the excellent job they did cleaning up after the (Jenny Wiley Festival) parade," Callihan said. "I was down there around 10 Saturday night and it was pitiful. I was down there again at 9 Sunday morning and it was pretty well cleaned up. And I've had so many people tell me, by 11 o'clock you'd never know there was a parade."

The statement drew at least one "Amen" and a round of applause in the council chamber.

After checking Roberts' Rules of Order, Mayor Latta then formed the present council members into a committee so as to officially receive bids on a new fire truck. No action could be taken on the bids, but as the Mayor pointed out, "We wouldn't take action tonight anyway—we'd want to study the bids first."

Worldwide Equipment of Prestonsburg submitted two bids, one for $88,659 on a 100,000 gallon-per-minute combination unit mounted on a 1988 International 4 by 4, and an alternate bid for the same unit mounted on a 1988 Mack two-wheeler for $84,159.

The only other bid was from Allegheny Apparatus of Ona, W. Va., for $84,998 on a one-pumper 1987 International 4 by 4 Cab/Chassis. In response to questions, a representative from Allegheny Apparatus said the truck involved is a new unit, despite the 1987 model year. He also stressed that his firm submitted no alternate bid because none was asked for, and that the company had followed the bid specifications item by item "right down the line."

James clarified that Council had called for a four-wheel drive vehicle in its specifications due to "our apparent increase in out-of-city subscriptions."

The rest of the agenda as well as the fire truck bids will be taken up at the next scheduled meeting, October 26.

Three of the four absent members—Adams, Osborne and Porter—are not seeking re-election. All four members present—Blackburn, Brown, Callihan and Goebel—are running in the November election.

Northside Plaza, the name of the project, will be developed by James A. Hughes & Associates, Inc., Prestonsburg, and owners are James A. Hughes & Associates, Inc., James A. Hughes, president, Prestonsburg, and Fletcher Bright Company, Fletcher Bright, president, Chattanooga, Tennessee. UK Eye Doctors Join Eye Institute Staff

The University of Kentucky Medical Center's Ophthalmology Department has joined the staff of the Paintsville Eye Institute, Inc., the area's only Medicare approved Ambulatory Surgery Center, whose chief of staff is Micheal B. Minix, MD.

The UK eye doctors and physiologists began seeing patients at the Paintsville Eye Institute, September 23, using the Paintsville facility as their Eastern Kentucky office. The addition of these 13 ophthalmologists to the Eye Institute provides complete coverage for almost every elective and emergency surgical procedure.

The UK surgeons will provide consultation with Dr. Minix and perform sub-specialty examinations, treatment, and correction for diseases such as corneal transplant, glaucoma, crossed eyes, and retinal surgery, cataract surgery, as well as routine examinations, thus providing convenience for UK's patients, and eliminating the drive to Lexington.

"The Paintsville Eye Institute has also applied to expand its surgical services which are currently limited to eye procedures only, to perform all outpatient surgical procedures, thus saving money for our residents and providing local convenience," said Marcus Minix, administrator for the Institute. "We are developing a facility to also aid in attracting other medical specialists' services as well, which have never been available to the area before, and to provide an alternative facility for local physicians to use for outpatient surgery. Our hearing in Frankfort to expand services, which was scheduled for October 9, has been rescheduled to November 6."

"The contract with the University of Kentucky is an example of progress to bring new medical services to the area. Two medical specialists have been providing services here for the last two years. They are Dr. Robert Woods, ear, nose, and throat physician from Lexington, and Dr. Howard Newmark, cardio-vascular surgeon. If expansion of surgical services is approved, these physicians along with others will be able to provide their surgical services conveniently at the Institute for our area's residents."

The Paintsville Eye Institute, Inc. was licensed in November 1986, by the Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources and Federal Medicare, and is also approved by Blue Cross, Kentucky Medical Assistance, and other third party insurances.

Since its opening, cataract and laser surgery have been the most prominent procedures performed at the Paintsville Eye Institute. In the near future it is anticipated that the area's first corneal transplants will be performed, here.

Irate Customer Held On $10 Robbery Count

By Tim Sizemore

Being short $10 could prove the undoing of a Eastern man, charged with first degree robbery, Monday night.

Larry Crager, 23, thought he didn't receive enough change when he stopped to get gas at the Eastern Chevron. The attendant told Crager that if a mistake had been made he could come back at closing time when he would check the receipts. If he had, indeed, been overcharged, he would give him a refund.

Not satisfied with the attendant's explanation, Crager pulled out a handgun and proceeded to take back the $10 he thought was due him.

The suspect left the scene, and sheriff's Deputies Antony Castle and John Blackburn were alerted by the attendant at 10:22 p.m., Crager was apprehended within 30 minutes.

Crager was arraigned Tuesday morning and now faces the charge of first degree robbery. He is lodged in the Floyd county jail.

Sold Out Again

Well, you did it again! By that, I mean you the folks who came to the Kentucky Apple Festival bought all the apple butter we at the East Point Area Development Club made! And thanks go out to any of you who helped in any way, to bring this about! This is especially true of you in the media, we feel you all did a real fine job of letting folks know of the apple butter in one way or another!

We at the club worked every Saturday from about the middle of August, and three Friday evenings and made 2,525 quarts of apple butter and still ran out before those who came to buy some, got their apple butter. We felt a bit disappointed for some who traveled such long distances to find we had sold out.

And thanks to you people at the 'Times' for the fine support you have always given us!

Fan-tastic Support

It was a cool night. The flag was waving in the wind. The Prestonsburg Blackcats were playing the Leslie County Eagles. At precisely 27 minutes before game time, the Prestonsburg cheerleaders started firing up their capacity crowd of loyal fans. The Prestonsburg band stood on the opposite side of the field awaiting game time so they could march onto the field and play the Star Spangled Banner. While waiting for this, they stood on the sidelines chanting, "Go, Big Red". They took the field at 8 p.m., played the National Anthem, then played their school song, "Loyal and True," while countless fans and cheerleaders formed the traditional tunnel for our beloved Blackcat football team to run through. Excitement was in the air. The Blackcat fans were "fan-tastic," supporting their football team and cheerleaders. The halftime show was great, with the field commander, majorettes, flag corp, and band showing us fans just exactly what a "state bound" band is made of.

Our Blackcat football team played their hearts out, and we dedicated fans love them dearly.

Where were you, Ms. Vandine? Supporting your alma mater, Betsy Layne? Now, psychologically speaking, with all our positive reinforcement, why did we lose? Could we possibly have been out-coached?

MEZZOTINTS
THE NEW MAKEUP MINIMALS

Estee Lauder creates three fashion palettes with a difference. What you see in the container is rich, intense color. What you get on the face is a half-tone. A Mezzotint. A soft-focus color. When you wear them, color and makeup seem minimal. But the effect is deliberately subtle, artfully made up.

The three palettes:

Tailleurs. The basics of any wardrobe.

Sepia Tints. Brown, a major fashion statement, kindled with apricot.

Pressed Flowers. From shy to confident to barely tamed. Come discover Mezzotints at our Estee Lauder Beauty Counter. Then see how something so subtle can be so dynamic.

Security.

Most people spend their lives trying to find security. They try to earn it. Buy it. Steal it. Legislate it. And negotiate for it. But they rarely succeed. As United Methodists, we've found security. True security, the security that comes from depending on each other and on God.

Grazing Conference At Jenny Wiley Lodge

An Extension-sponsored grazing symposium will be held October 20, at the Jenny Wiley State Park, near Prestonsburg, according to Harold Rice, Extension agronomist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Rice, who is coordinating the symposium, said the speakers will focus on a variety of topics, including control of brush using biological techniques, selecting the right species of grass for warm and cool season forage production, controlled grazing systems for mountain pastures and liming and fertilizing hill pastures. The symposium also will feature a discussion of successful grazing systems in mountainous terrain. A tour of Southern Mountains Grazing Association, Inc. will conclude the program. Registration for the conference begins at 9:30 at the May Lodge at the park. The registration fee includes lunch and refreshments. For more information concerning the symposium, contact your county Extension agent for agriculture at 606-886-2668.

Job Corps Helps Thousands Of Kentucky Young People

The U.S. Job Corps program has given thousands of young Kentuckians a second chance since it was founded in 1964. Under this training program, high school dropouts from low-income families have a chance to earn a GED and learn a trade. "The Job Corps' mission is to help young people who need and can benefit from an unusually intensive program operated in a group setting," explained James Daniels, commissioner of the Department for Employment Services. "Its aim is to help these youth become more responsive, employable and productive citizens." The Employment Services department recruits, screens and assigns Job Corps applicants to centers, mostly in the state. During the federal fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, more than 500 young Kentuckians enrolled in Job Corps.

Head Injury Awareness Week Is Proclaimed

Governor Martha Layne Collins has proclaimed the third week of October to be "Head Injury Awareness Week" in the state of Kentucky. "We pray that this will support the prevention of auto and motorcycle accidents which cause most of the head injuries among young people," commented F. W. Kephart, president of the Kentucky Head Injury Foundation, Inc. There are no specific statistics on the prevalence and incidence of traumatic head injury in Kentucky, according to Kephart, but one Kentucky expert estimates that there is a 25 percent higher rate here than in the other states. Injury to the human brain causes emotional as well as physical problems both for the victim and his or her family, the spokesman said, adding that in many cases healing does not take place and the problems remain for life. "Prevention is the only real cure," Kephart stated, "so we appeal to everyone to use seat and shoulder safety belts for all passengers in the car. Once the brain has been damaged," he continued, "it will never be exactly the same again." The Kentucky Head Injury Foundation is one-year-old organization dedicated to furthering understanding of traumatic brain injury, and encouraging the establishment of services for victims and their families. Goals of the KHIF include establishment of head injury support groups throughout the commonwealth, and the furtherance of head injury rehabilitation efforts. More information on the group may be obtained by writing: KHIF, P.O. Box 4131, Lexington, Ky. 40544.

Kentucky has two types of facilities. Great Onyx at Mammoth Cave, the smallest center in the country, Pine Knot and Frenchburg are Civilian Conservation Centers. They are located on government lands and managed by the U.S. Interior and Agriculture departments for the federal Labor Department. Earle C. Clements at Morganfield, the nation's largest; Whitney M. Young Jr. at Simpsonville; and Carl D. Perkins at Prestonsburg are operated by private organizations under contracts with DOL. The six facilities have a combined enrollment capacity of 3,575. Four of the centers are coed; Pine Knot and Prestonsburg are restricted to men. "The conservation centers at Pine Knot and Frenchburg in the Daniel Boone National Forest have been recognized nationally because of corps members' efforts fighting forest fires, especially in western states," Daniels said. "We are very proud of them for the favorable attention they've received." Job Corps offers training in more than 160 different skills, although not all courses are offered at each of the 103 centers across the country. Training runs the gamut from auto repair to welding, from brick masonry to carpentry to culinary arts to word processing. The larger centers offer broader curricula than the smaller ones. Before entering a training program, corps members complete a two week orientation course and an occupational exploration program. "This helps them make practical career choices," Daniels said. The maximum enrollment period for Job Corps is two years, but the average stay is 18 months. Members of Job Corps earn allowances while they learn, beginning with $40 a month upon arrival at a center, with the potential to increase to $100 a month after nine months, based on performance and merit. "The main objectives of this program are to help each corps member improve his or her education, learn a skill and get a job," Daniels said.

Garrett Harvest Festival

Neither freezing weather, threat of rain, nor hint of snow which one shivering individual swore would descend at any moment, kept spectators from lining the streets of Garrett to applaud the Garrett Harvest Festival.

The festival, which was held October 3, featured such political figures as Congressman Chris Perkins, Floyd County Court Clerk Carla Boyd and Magistrate Jackie Owens. Television's alien Alf and a magic bunny thrilled the kiddies, and both adults and children enjoyed the antics of the Hillbilly Shriners who turned out in force.

Garrett beauty queens braved the cold with a smile and a wave, while Allen Central's Rebel Band warmed things up with a lively marching tune.

The festival not only offered all the excitement and glitter of the larger parades, but it also offered the comradery that can only be found in a small community.

Wood Power Makes Sense As Way To Save Oil Use

Without touching one lumber quality tree, power from wood chips could save seven million barrels of oil per day for future use by using existing technology to harvest dead and junk wood, a University of Kentucky forester said.

Don Graves, Extension forestry specialist with UK's College of Agriculture, said there are enough dead trees, culls, thinnings, branches and waste tree tops to provide power at the current rate of usage for the next 25 years.

That includes wood left after commercial logging operations, strip mining and land clearing operations in which the "waste" product is usually burned, sometimes at taxpayer expense.

It also includes harvest of fallen trees in the forest and harvest of "junk" trees with little or no commercial value as timber.

"Over five billion tons of wood are rotting in the U.S. today," Graves said. "Every bit of it could be converted to wood chips which can be used to power anything that coal or oil powers."

Collecting that energy would not hurt the forests, he said. It would help them.

"Harvesting dead wood helps in the fight against forest fires," he said. "If the estimated 25 to 30 billion tons of dead and junk wood could be harvested now, it would leave the forests in superior condition."

A forest fire feeds on dead wood which clutters the ground to generate enough heat to burn the live, green trees. Without the dead wood to generate that kind of heat, the live trees will not burn so easily. Even a deliberately set fire usually will only char a live, green tree or burn some of its twigs, if the dead wood is not present.

U.S. Forest Service statistics report that 1.8 million acres per year are lost to forest fires each year. At 100 tons per acre, the estimated amount of wood fiber per acre, that is about 1.8 million tons of wood fiber destroyed by fire, much of which could have been saved if dead wood had been harvested.

The massive amounts of junk and deadwood in forests make good forest management practices difficult, Graves said.

Harvesting overcrowded forests of junk trees with no commercial value allows the desired varieties more room and nutrition to grow better. Harvesting overmature trees, which have reached the point of maturity where they stop growing, allows younger trees more chance to get their share of necessary nutrients, sunlight and moisture.

Such "environmental harvesting" does not deplete forest resources as some people believe, Graves said. It enhances the forest's future value as a resource.

Until recently, this kind of harvesting was not economically feasible. It would cost more to remove the "junk wood" than could be realized on the market place. However, the recent development of new technology which allows whole trees while still in the forest to be converted into chips in moments and dumped into waiting vans for delivery to market promises new interest in this area.

"Biothermal energy from waste wood can become a major energy supplement to conventional energy sources at much lower cost," Graves said. "Most states have at least some wooded areas, but even if only the major wood producing states shifted large amounts of their power needs to low-cost wood energy, the economic benefits would be enormous."

Shakespearean Comedy Slated at MSU, Oct. 26

Arts in Morehead (AIM) will present the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival's Outreach '87 production of the Shakespearean comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Monday, Oct. 26, at 8 p.m. in Button Auditorium at Morehead State University.

Admission will be by season membership in AIM's Concert and Lecture Series or by general admission tickets available at the door. MSU students with valid I.D. cards will be admitted free.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" is considered as Shakespeare's most outrageous comedy, according to David Pursley, director. It involves the lives and loves of three distinct communities—the Court of Athens, a band of local tradesmen and some representatives of the Fairy Kingdom.

Pursley has chosen to develop a "provocative and daring production, set in modern times, including glimpses into the times and settings of the past."

The North Carolina Shakespeare Festival was organized in 1977 as a resident professional theatre company providing students with a program of classical theatre productions, particularly those of Shakespeare's plays. The group tours to colleges and universities during the fall and to high schools throughout the state and southern region during the summer.

The Morehead appearance of the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival was made possible in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts through the Southern Arts Foundation of which the Kentucky Arts Council is a member.

Ex-Social Security Head Says Disabled Program in Jeopardy

The Social Security Administration's "dogmatic and autocratic" attitude toward state agencies is destroying the effectiveness of the Social Security disability program, former Acting Social Security Commissioner Martha McSteen said Tuesday.

Mrs. McSteen, chief legislative counsel for the 4.5-million-member National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, told the House Ways and Means Committee the federal agency's attitude is creating a "climate of crisis" and destroying what was once a sense of shared responsibility between state Disability Determination Services and Social Security.

In fact, Mrs. McSteen testified, Social Security's dogmatic and autocratic directives "are themselves an impediment to restoring stability to the program and its operations."

Not only has the Social Security Administration set productivity quotas which are unrealistic given current budget and staff resources, but the quotas fail to take into account state differences, she told the Ways and Means Subcommittee on Social Security.

Orders which ignore differences between states, both in terms of caseload, backlog and staffing, can only be disruptive, she said.

These unrealistic orders result in states' "cutting corners—looking for ways to get around requirements of the law," Mrs. McSteen said. States with large case backlogs are understandably overburdened, but even those states meeting productivity goals do so only "at a severe price in job-related stress," she quoted one state manager as saying.

However, Mrs. McSteen said, the real victims of the Social Security Administration's drive for increased productivity in the face of budget and staff cuts are the disabled.

For example, Social Security's insistence on claimants filling out their own forms to save staff time all too often results in claims not properly developed and documented. In such cases, the disability determination service has only two choices—decide against the claimant on the basis of incomplete information or send it back to the local office for additional information.

"Given the constraints now imposed on Disability Determination Services, I am fearful that appropriate, quality decisions will be very difficult to come by," Mrs. McSteen said.

Calling on Congress to order the Social Security Administration to reopen improved communication with state and regional agencies, Mrs. McSteen said only such an action would enable the federal agency to restore confidence and stability.

"Federal and state agencies, on a state-by-state basis, in an atmosphere of mutual respect and cooperation, must together set reasonable and attainable productivity and budgetary goals," she said. Otherwise, disabled Americans will no longer be able to "rely on the equity, accuracy and timeliness of disability decisions."

Garth School To Try New Voting Machines

First use of the new electronic voting machines, expected to see their first use by the public in the March 8 presidential primary, was made yesterday (Tuesday) in a mock election at the Garth Vocational School. Students in business courses voted their choice of officers of both the A.M. and P.M. Vica Clubs.

Nominees of the A.M. groups are as follows:

President—Angie Reynolds, James Campbell, Paul Shepherd; Vice President—Lee Compton; Treasurer—Tracy Burchett, Phillip Chaffins; Reporter—Linda Huhn; Parliamentarian—Chris Lumpkins; Chaplain—Brian Clark; Secretary—Angela Akers, Stephen Johnson.

For the P.M., nominees follow: President—Larry Bryant, Beverly Conley, Wes Hamilton; Vice President—Paul Reynolds, Matthew White; Secretary—Jennifer Hall; Treasurer—Tony Collins; Reporter—Wayne Branham; Parliamentarian—Tony Butler; Chaplain—Deanna Rose.

County Clerk Carla Bolton, who is making the voting machines available to the students, said the new machines are really simpler than the ones now in use. "Of course," she added, "they will take a little getting used to."

Election results were expected to be available Tuesday afternoon.

For Your Good Health—Nutrition, Diet, Fitness

BORED WITH YOUR WORK-OUT?...Has the exercising you used to look forward to suddenly become a crashing bore? Don't throw in the towel, but do try something new. Switching to something different, says Good Housekeeping in its November issue, can motivate you to exercise all over again. And varying your routine can reduce chances of injuring the muscle groups that you use doing only one kind of exercise. For example, if you take an aerobics class three times a week, try cutting out one class and spend that time with a less body-stress sport like swimming, walking, yoga or a stretching class. This will give overworked muscles a break while a new set of muscles get toned.

SAUNA OR STEAM...What's the difference between sauna and steam baths, and what can each do for you? Good Housekeeping's November issue explains: A sauna is filled with dry heat from hot coals; a steam bath is heated with vaporized hot water and is cooler than a sauna, though the 100% humidity makes it feel just as hot. Whichever you use, all the perspiring you do can make you feel great, but there are no scientific studies that prove that the heat can heal illness or slim you down. Nor can a sweaty stint flush toxins from your system. There's no harm in working up a good passive sweat, as long as you're healthy, you don't have a circulatory disease, you're not pregnant, and you stay in the sauna or steam bath no longer than the guidelines recommend. Just don't expect miracles!

WRIST AND ANKLE WEIGHTS...They're a great way to get more out of your exercise routine: They help improve muscle tone, strength, and stamina. But, beginners beware, cautions Good Housekeeping in its November issue, you may not be ready for weights which are best used only after you have mastered your exercise routines. Some tips on how to use them: + Never wear ankle weights for high-impact aerobics, including jogging. + Wear only wrist weights during low-impact aerobics, including walking. + Use both for calisthenics and see results faster.

Be sure to consult your doctor before you start an exercise program or use weights.

MEN AND CALCIUM...Recent studies show that calcium may be just as important for men as it is for women in preventing certain illnesses, reports Good Housekeeping in its November issue. Researchers have found that:

In cases of high blood pressure, certain patients can significantly reduce their hypertension by upping their calcium intake.

Calcium supplements seem to prevent abnormal-cell growth in patients at risk for colon cancer.

And calcium may partially block the body's absorption of saturated fat, lowering blood cholesterol, and therefore may reduce the risk of heart disease.

Conference On Needs Of Retarded Offered

The board of the Kentucky Association of Retarded Citizens (KARC) met in Frankfort September 19.

Rick Christman, executive director of Blue Grass ARC, announced plans for a two-day conference to be held in Frankfort October 24-25. Yair Riback, legislative analyst with Legislative Research Commission, will present the findings of LRC's study on needs of Kentucky adults with mental retardation.

A key speaker will be Marti Ford, of ARC/US Governmental Affairs Office in Washington, who will discuss the proposal in Congress that will allow states to utilize federal funds to develop community-based services that presently are available only for intermediate care facilities.

Other topics to be presented include the matter of preferential awarding of state contracts to prison and handicapped industries; the Bill of Rights for people with developmental disabilities; the implementation of the 1986 bill that changed how special education units will be distributed; the proposal for Kentucky's implementation of federal mandates for early intervention programs; procedures for the commitment of persons to state mental retardation facilities; and zoning problems and the establishment of group homes.

The final sessions will allow for setting some priorities for lobbying and learning how to be effective in presenting these priorities to legislators.

Further information about the conference can be obtained from the KARC Office, 833, E. Main St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call (502-875-5225).

CAN THE CITY COUNCIL DO ANYTHING TO PROVIDE ACTIVITIES FOR OUR YOUNG PEOPLE?

"It is essential that the city offer activity centers or programs which will enhance the personal growth and development of our youth. We must include programs to encourage their staying in school and to discourage their trying drugs or becoming involved in crime. The council should develop a plan to educate itself and the community in these areas. It should explore viable alternatives which can be offered to young people and then work toward the implementation of a city-wide plan for youth. Some inexpensive ideas are youth centers, mini-parks, bike-paths and trails."

MIKE VANCE is both knowledgeable and experienced in these areas. Give the City of Prestonsburg full advantage of that knowledge and experience...

OLW Anniversary Celebration

Hugs, laughter, tears and stories were the greetings exchanged by employees, former employees, doctors, board members and associates of Our Lady of the Way Hospital who traveled from various parts of Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana to celebrate the institution's 40th anniversary in Floyd county September 26 and 27.

Two events, an outdoor community commemorative celebration and an indoor Mass of Thanksgiving, celebrated the hospital's anniversary.

Sister of Divine Providence Marie Gangwish of Hindman, former chaplain of Our Lady of the Way Hospital, led the prayer service which opened the weekend celebration.

Biblical accounts read by Our Lady of Way's nursing director, Charlotte Lawson, and chaplain, Sister of St. Francis Charlene Young, emphasized the service's theme that "forty" is associated with new developments in the history of God's mighty actions. The Pentecostal Travelers of drift sang "Jehovah" in four-part harmony.

Waneta Newsome, health care coordinator; Pauline Wallace, former nurse aide; and Margaret Hoover, personnel director lit candles for deceased employees and medical staff.

"We were poor and we worked hard but we were happy because we had such a spirit," commented Waneta Newsome, who spoke on the adversities of the past. "If one of us was in trouble, all of us were in it together."

Sister of Divine Providence Janet O'Neill who administered the hospital for 14 years, spoke of accreditation and personnel.

Sister Pat Saul, Associate Administrator, Sister Mary Fanning chief executive officer and Margaret Hoover presented $100 savings bonds to employees who had served the hospital for more than 20 years. Honored were: Wanda Allen, 20 years; Helen Bradley, 37 years; Polly Crum, 21 years; Nannie Tackett, 22 years; Annette Vannucci, 31 years and Pearl Waddles, 23 years. Dr. Lowell Martin was also honored for 20 years of service.

Dr. Martin in accepting the award joked "The faces have changed some over the years. The rules change every three months and... the paperwork changes every three minutes."

A final award, a plaque and a check for $500, was given to Waneta Newsome for "40 years of work, love, tears and prayers."

Doug Deck, Chief Operating Officer, and John Ohmel, Human Resources Director, of "sister hospital" Good Samaritan in Dayton, O. presented Our Lady of the Way Hospital with an automatic blood pressure monitor for its operating room.

At the reception which followed, participants were served cake and soft drinks and Scrubby Bear distributed free anniversary balloons and brochures and keychains.

The anniversary celebration's climax was the Mass of Thanksgiving held Sunday at St. Martha Church, Prestonsburg. Bishop J. Kendrick Williams, Auxiliary Bishop of the Diocese of Covington, and Father Joseph Muench, pastor of St. Martha Church, concelebrated the Sunday Mass.

In his homily, Bishop Williams said it was "the faith that moves mountains" that enabled three sisters of a teaching order to successfully establish a Catholic hospital. A potluck-style ham dinner prepared by St. Martha parishioners followed the Mass.

JENNY WILEY FESTIVAL '87

Good, old-fashioned transportation with no fuel tax, either.

Was there a prize for most unusual hood ornament?

Jenny Wiley Festival director, Mrs. Maxine Bierman, and Mayor Ann Latta were among parade dignitaries.

Members of El Hasa Shrine held flags on high as they marched.

Good pickin' and strummin' were enjoyed, too.

These youngsters were in the spirit of the day with Indian dress and war whoops.

Judge John M. Stumbo rode shotgun on a stagecoach with Rep. Chris Perkins, County Attorney David Barber and others.

Clowns and children go to make any parade a success.

Members of Masonic Lodges joined in the parade by fellow Mason, Wm. M. (Bosh) Petry.

Gary Hopkins hit the water with a mighty splash when Mike Warrix hit the target.

The Jenny Wiley marker was unveiled and dedicated Saturday morning.

This pampered pooch was held up to better view the goings on.

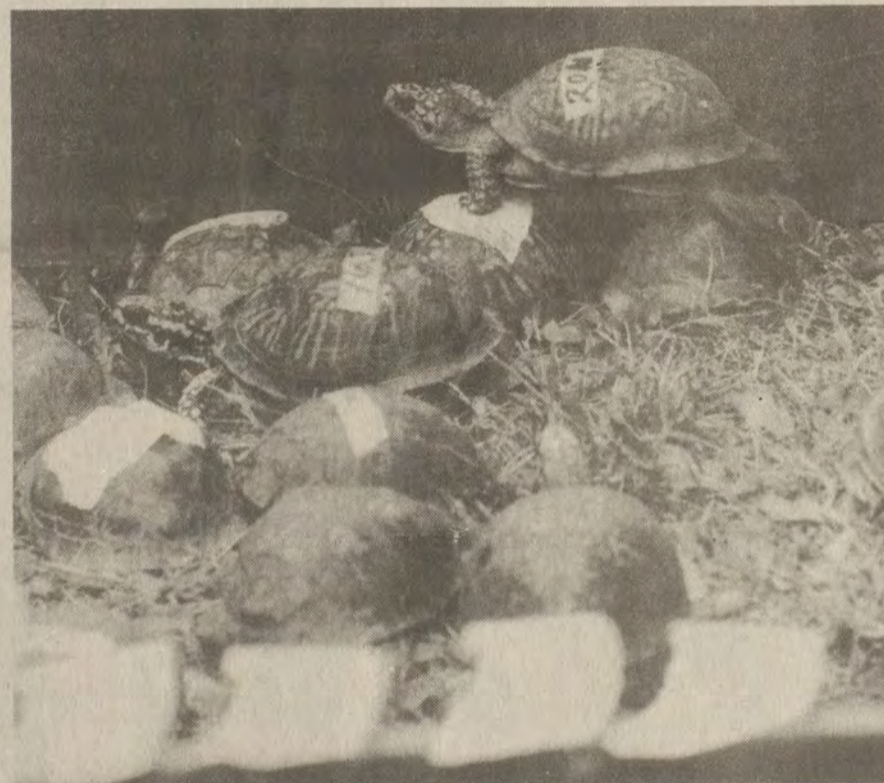

This young brave seems ready to blaze a new trail in unexplored territory.

This child-sized choo-choo was popular with the younger set.

And what would any parade be without the Shriners and their high-spirited antics?

We failed to get their names, but it is obvious who is top turtle in this crowd.

Stacey Johnson, Miss Floyd County, was just one of those who made the parade more attractive.

Rachel Cavins, of David, held very still while Laura Hereford gave her a first class face painting.

Magistrate Jackie Edford Owens and family joined in the Jenny Wiley Festival parade.

Listening as Mayor Ann Latta spoke was Rep. Greg Stumbo and daughter, and Miss Jenny Wiley, Erica Lynn Turner.

This float depicted an Indian village from tepee to cook pot.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: My grandmother has been sick for a long time and now has a very advanced cancer. She is living in our home and we have provided nursing care for her. She seems to be going down hill quite quickly, and the doctor says it is only a matter of time. I'm scared because I don't know what to expect before she dies. I'm afraid it will be painful and traumatic for her, and I want to help in any way I can.

ANSWER: This is a common question from many friends and relatives of terminally ill patients. It is understandable that you are concerned and want to be prepared.

Although many of us think of this as a very traumatic time for the patient, many people die very peacefully, while asleep or at rest. Many patients with advanced cancer have little or no pain. However, if she does have pain it can often be treated and managed so that it does not cause great discomfort.

There are no right or wrong ways to face the end of life. But many people with a terminal illness have been able to find peace of mind by coming to terms with their emotions, and beliefs about their lives, and about dying.

Your grandmother may be experiencing many emotions. She may be sad, depressed, angry, scared or all of these. These are normal feelings when someone is very ill and realizes that he or she will not live as long as they might have hoped.

Each of us must face death, and accept it in our own way. Sometimes people prefer to work through their feelings alone, but it often helps to share. The emotions and thoughts that go along with advanced cancer are understandable and expected, and it is not necessary to hide them. This may also be a time for her to resolve any personal or spiritual problems that are troubling her.

You can help your grandmother by listening when she wants to talk and by being honest, and sensitive to her feelings. She may also find it helpful to talk to someone who is not a family member. Arranging a visit from a clergy person, or a friend, may be comforting to her.

Being a friend or relative of a terminally ill patient can be very difficult. Often, it is helpful to talk to someone about your fears and concerns. Hospice workers are professionals and volunteers who are specially trained to help patients, friends and relatives cope with terminal illness.

For more information about hospice and a free booklet called Advanced Cancer, call the Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER or write the McDowell Cancer Network, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536. The Cancer Information Service is a program of the Kentucky Cancer Information Service.

The famous painting of Washington crossing the Delaware was actually done in Dusseldorf, Germany with the Rhine as a model of the river.

The KVMA has moved into new offices at the Lexington Center, and all officers can be reached through that office. Mailing address is Box 12737, Lexington, Ky. 40583-2737. Phone number is 606-233-0062.

Job Success Remains Linked To Education

Education continues to be a key determinant of labor market success, according to data released by the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. In March 1987, college graduates had a very low rate of unemployment—2.5 percent—and much higher rates of labor force participation than persons with less education. Highlights from these data, obtained through the Current Population Survey, follow.

—The educational level of the adult labor force (25 to 64 years old) is continuing to rise; this is particularly evident in the increase in the proportion of workers—particularly women—with 4 years of college or more. One out of four members of the labor force now has a college degree, and women represent 40 percent of college-educated workers.

—College graduates have the highest rates of labor force participation—whether male or female, white, black, or Hispanic. Overall, 88 percent of all college graduates (25 to 64 years old) were in the labor force in March 1987. In contrast, the participation rate for persons with a high-school education was 77 percent, and that for persons who completed less than 4 years of high school was 61 percent. Women with a college degree had a labor force participation rate of 80 percent, 14 points less than that for college-educated men.

—Black and Hispanic workers remain much less likely than white workers to have a college degree. About 1 out of 4 white workers have attended college for 4 years or more, compared with one out of seven blacks and one out of nine Hispanics. Whites also are more likely to have completed high school. Fourteen percent of white workers drop out of high school, compared with 24 percent of black and 40 percent of Hispanic workers.

—In March 1987, as in other years, the lowest rates of unemployment were recorded by college graduates. The unemployment rate for college graduates (25 to 64 years of age) was 2.5 percent, compared with 4.5 percent for those with 1 to 3 years of college, 6.3 percent for high school graduates, and 11.1 percent for high school dropouts.

—College graduates are heavily concentrated in managerial and professional specialty occupations. Three out of four professional specialty workers and almost half of all executives, administrators, and managers are college graduates.

Pharmacy Footnotes
By HAROLD COOLEY
ONE FROM THE HEART

The term coronary insufficiency is used to describe the circumstance in which the heart's need for oxygen is greater than its supply of oxygen. When this occurs, heart pain or angina pectoris results. Angina pectoris occurs especially during exercise, exertion, or emotional stress. Although any disease that causes a decrease in the flow of blood to the heart can cause it, the most common cause is thought to be fatty deposits that narrow the blood vessels of the heart. Treatment for an attack of heart pain is rest and drugs that open the blood vessels to permit more oxygen to reach the heart. These drugs are commonly called vasodilators. A physician's major goal is to control the pain with these drugs with as little change as possible in the patient's normal activities.

COOLEY APOTHECARY wants you to know that if your physician prescribes medication for you or a member of your family that we maintain the highest standards of the pharmaceutical profession. Learn for yourself why your friends and neighbors already rely on us. Complete patient profiles are maintained to aid us in checking for possible drug interactions. It also allows us to quickly give you any information you need for income tax and insurance purposes. We are located at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT:
Heart pain is experienced not as pain in other parts of the body but as a squeezing sensation in the breastbone area.

HABIT VIEW

HBO's '1st & Ten' series has an irresistible charm

By Frank Lovece

One advantage of made-for-cable series is that, unlike their broadcast network counterparts, they're filmed a handful of episodes at a time - which means less ratings considerations, less weekly deadlines and less pressure to please the largest possible audience. Of course, this doesn't mean that every cable series is golden. But it does mean that they can dare to be different.

infighting and deception; an aging star feels comeback desperation; and money-and-sex temptations are dangled in front of kids who have become famous too quickly.

What's worst, on the other hand, is the dialogue, which is either stiffly written or just delivered that way, unintentionally, by performers chosen more for their size and looks than for their acting capabilities. Some of them (such as Seattle Seahawk rookie Brian Bosworth) bring genuine gridiron experience to the screen, and their blustery background shows. Even the normally loose and believable O.J. Simpson struggles with his lines. Ironically, though, former Oakland Raiders lineman John Matuszak, playing an over-the-hill star, turns in the most realistic and touching performance of all.

Except for Delta Burke, that is. The "Designing Women" co-star continues here as team owner Diane Barrow, the role that introduced her to TV audiences. Viewers who know her only as a sassy Southerner will be pleasantly surprised to see her playing an astute (if naive) executive.

Since it aims at simulating real life, there's lots of cheesecake and beefcake on "1st & Ten." But let's face it, football stars can be extremely sexist creatures. It's a point in the series' favor that such dark sides aren't glossed over.

Delta Burke

The risks and rewards of being different are apparent in "1st & Ten: Going for Broke," the fourth cycle of HBO's football drama series. The series has an irresistible charm, like a pug-nosed dog that is too cute and ugly to dislike. This week's episode airs Sunday, Oct. 18 and Wednesday, Oct. 21. What's best about "1st & Ten" is its soap-opera story line. A newly promoted general manager is faced with business-vs.-friendship decisions; the front-office is plagued by a psychotic vigilante who uses electronic equipment to locate and kill suspected criminals. (70 min.) (R)

A cat's paw, the Himalayan mountains, a car bumper in Iceland. Highly strange places to find insecticides.
But there they were. In soil from these and other unusual places—almost always brought back by vacationing friends—scientists have found 72 new strains of a soil bacterium that kills insect pests.

today in $40 million worth of commercial insecticides. The three new strains await patents.
The cat's new Bt, which killed mosquitoes in lab tests but hasn't been tested in the field yet, came to the lab in a strange way.
'A scientist from another lab walked in one day and said, 'Your lab always smells like my cat Fluffie's feet.' So almost as a joke we gave her a dish and told her to imprint Fluffie's paw on it,' Martin said.
Results: a Bt variety dubbed fluffiensis. 'She got it from her clay kitty litter,' Travers said.
But the similar odor was from the Bt itself. 'It has a very distinctive odor, like wet dog fur or fermented grain,' he said.
The Bt-rich soil from the car bumper in Iceland and from the Himalayas was brought by an adventurous friend who likes mountain climbing. 'We made him collect and carry jars full of soil at almost 19,000 feet,' Martin said.
After exploring Nutt Cave in West Virginia, he also scraped cave soil off his dirty clothes for Travers and Martin. In it, they found two new strains and named them nutti and cavi.
The two scientists isolated the Bt from the soil samples with a new chemical technique they developed using sodium acetate.
'It's a lot faster,' Martin said. 'The 24 strains known before we started work took about 85 years to find. Our technique turned up 72 more strains in just two years.' (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture).

Plants for Cities

By JIM BENSON

That tree on the corner is one of your best neighbors. And that park in the next block is more than just another pretty place.

According to Harold B. Tukey, Jr., director of the Center for Urban Horticulture at the University of Washington-Seattle, plants are one of the most important elements of the modern city, but one of the most overlooked.

Plants in cities do many important things: they provide privacy, they provide food to gardeners, they protect us from the harsh effects of climate and their natural beauty has a calming effect on harried city dwellers. Until recently, the people who grew plants looked to agriculture for answers, but agriculture is not giving appropriate answers for urban environments.

For example, two trees of the same species, planted on opposite sides of a building, grow differently because one gets more light in the morning and the other gets more light in the afternoon. "The plants are very different than when they're growing in an agricultural situation, where so many shade trees are grown," said Tukey. "So you have to acclimate the plant to the city. And no one knew that."

Tukey said that one-third of the landscape plantings in Seattle fail because landscapers, city planners, and the horticultural industry don't know enough about how plants adapt to urban areas. He said that research needs for urban plants include site-specific projects to accommodate the vast differences in urban plant environments. Specifically:

- *How do plants grow and develop under different conditions of light?
- *How do air and water move through urban soils?
- *How can we control insect pests in densely populated areas?
- *What new plants can we develop for urban use?

Drawing from his experience at the 7-year-old Center for Urban Horticulture, Tukey said that interest in urban plants has never been greater. The Center attracts some 40,000 visitors annually.

Tukey recently presented the 20th B. Y. Morrison Memorial Lecture, which is sponsored annually by USDA's Agricultural Research Service. The 1987 lecture was co-sponsored by the Ohio Florist Short Course, the largest gathering of professional flower growers, wholesalers and retailers in the U.S. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture).

Another Use for Vitamin C

By SEAN ADAMS

It prevents scurvy. It helps the body absorb iron. It helps heal injuries.

And it helps keep fruits and vegetables from turning brown—for a short time.

It's vitamin C. And now, derivatives of vitamin C and other compounds prevent browning of cut apples for much longer—up to 48 hours. In the future, they could help keep salad-bar-style fruits and vegetables fresh.

Fresh fruits and vegetables begin to turn brown once they are cut, sliced or peeled. Until banned by the Food and Drug Administration last year for use on raw fruits and vegetables, sulfites were the most effective and widely used compounds for slowing down the browning process. FDA banned use of sulfites for this purpose because they can cause allergic reactions—and even death—in some people, primarily asthmatics.

"Ordinary vitamin C can be used but is effective for only a short time," says Gerald M. Sapers, a food technologist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Philadelphia, who developed the procedures to evaluate these compounds. "The compounds we studied are far more effective than that."

Derivatives of vitamin C, which is also known as ascorbic acid, also controlled browning when mixed with various other compounds. Some of the com-

Good Food...Good Health...
Have It All with Whole Grains

From the American Institute for Cancer Research

There is really no great mystery to whole grains: they are simply all of the grain kernel ground into meal or flour. However, when a grain is refined for today's all-purpose white flour, the highly nutritious germ and bran are removed. While enriched flour has some of the thiamine, niacin, riboflavin and iron added back, other vitamins, minerals and dietary fiber are not replaced.

Whole grains are good sources of vitamin E and fiber, two food elements associated with lower cancer risk, so it's a good idea to include them in your menu planning as often as possible. Here are some ideas for increasing your whole grain consumption so you can "have it all":

- Check the labels on breads and cereals to ensure that a whole grain or whole grain flour is listed first.
- Substitute whole wheat flour for all-purpose flour in many baked goods recipes. One cup of finely milled whole wheat flour (or 7/8 cup if coarsely ground) substitutes for one cup of all-purpose flour.
- Use brown (unpolished) rice in place of white (polished) rice for greater nutrition.
- Try barley in a soup or as a side dish, using whole grain rather than pearl barley.
- Bulgur, a variety of whole wheat, is a fine substitute for rice or potatoes.
- Light-textured, mild-flavored millet can replace rice in most recipes.

ALMOND RAISIN WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

This hearty bread has the sweet flavor of raisins with just a hint of almonds. Nuts are high in fat and so should be consumed sparingly as an "extra". The small amount in this recipe adds flavor and energy content, without adding too much fat or too many calories.

- 3-4 tbsp. honey
- 1 1/2 cups buttermilk (or skim milk plus 2 tsp. lemon juice)
- 1 egg
- 3 cups whole wheat flour
- 1/2 tsp. baking soda
- 3 tsp. baking powder
- 1/3 cup ground almonds
- 1/2 cup raisins

Combine the honey, buttermilk and egg in small bowl. In a large bowl, blend flour, baking soda, baking powder and ground almonds. Add liquid ingredients to the dry blend, stirring with a spoon only until evenly moist. Add raisins and stir just until evenly distributed. Do not overmix.

Sheriffs Support Seatbelt Safety

The Kentucky Sheriffs Association recently requested the Kentucky General Assembly to act immediately to protect all vehicle occupants from preventable death and injury by enactment of additional legislation requiring occupants four years and older to use safety belt restraint systems.

The highway epidemic of traffic accidents kills thousands of people each year. Over 90 percent of all registered automobiles are equipped with safety belt systems, but less than 15% of all Kentuckians currently use these safety belt systems. It is estimated that increasing safety belt usage in Kentucky to 80% would save 252 lives and Kentucky's citizens over 83 million dollars a year.

Kentucky law requires that children under four years of age be protected through the use of a child restraint system but does not provide for older children and adults.

Pour the batter into a greased 5"x9" loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour, or until a wooden pick inserted into center comes clean. If you prefer a stronger taste of almonds, add a few drops of almond extract instead of increasing the volume of nuts and thereby the fat content.

This recipe will produce one loaf, yielding about 12 slices, with each slice containing about 4 grams of fat and 170 to 230 calories.

Earthquake Poster, Essay Contests Open

Earthquake awareness is the focus of statewide poster and essay contests being conducted in October for Kentucky grade, middle and high school students on the theme, "New Madrid: It's Your Fault."

Prizes will be awarded for entries judged first, second and third. Grade and middle school students are eligible for the poster contest. High school students are eligible for competition in the essay contest, according to Ms. Susan Olson, earthquake coordinator for the State Division of Disaster and Emergency Services.

Deadlines for entries for both contests will be Nov. 1, Olson said, and winners will be announced by Thanksgiving. Further information on contest details can be obtained from Olson at the Kentucky Division of Disaster and Emergency Services, Boone National Guard Center, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or by telephone at 502-564-8628.

The contests are being conducted as part of Kentucky earthquake awareness week, Oct. 12-18, as proclaimed by Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

The theme of the contests refers to the New Madrid fault, or seismic zone, that lies adjacent to the western part of the state. The most recent earthquake tremor felt there, which registered 4.5 on the Richter Scale, was Monday, September 28. It was centered 15 miles south of Cairo, Ill, but was strong enough to be felt in Fulton county.

JACKIE EDFORD OWENS
MAGISTRATE, DIST. 2
FLOYD COUNTY

TO THE PEOPLE OF FLOYD COUNTY:

I know most of you read last week's ad by Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo about hazardous waste and the landfill. The way he made it sound was like he rode in on a "white horse" (or a brown mule) and saved us all. People, I'm just telling you like it is. You know if you turn on your television or pick up a newspaper you hear about landfills causing counties and towns all kinds of problems with their air and their water all over the United States. The Fiscal Court is liable for anything brought into the landfill.

People, he made it sound like he had done such a good job managing the money in Solid Waste, but the way I see it is that all they have done is raise the prices since they put it in over the years and forced more and more people to pay by taking them to court or threatening to put it on their property taxes. If they are doing such a good job, why is Floyd County spending right at a million ($1,000,000) a year to take care of our garbage, but we can take care of ALL of Knott County's garbage for only $35,000 a year. There's got to be something wrong somewhere. You've got one thing to remember—The Judge broke the tie to let other counties dump here. He's the man that made this county a regional dump. My motion could have stopped it. THAT'S JUST THE FACT.

People, I also seen that the Judge said that burning garbage could kill you. I guess my 84-year-old Grandma is lucky to be alive today as much garbage that she has burned in her lifetime.

The Judge also said that several landfills were "gleefully eyeballing" Floyd County's waste. You know and I know that's a joke—there ain't no way they are going to let any landfill have our garbage because they would lose a million dollar lollipop. Do you know how big a million dollar lollipop is?

People, my fight on this garbage is far from over. I want to thank everybody for their cards and phone calls supporting our stand against garbage being brought in from other counties. I can tell by the support I have received already that I'm on the right side—THE PEOPLE'S SIDE.

P.S.—I will be asking for a list of this 15-member committee's name, who got them appointed, and if they are drawing a salary. I will report back to the people in the near future.

It Pays To Examine Woodburning Stove

October marks the beginning of another heating season in Kentucky. Furnaces, stoves and fireplaces are being readied for use in homes across the state. Some have already been in use as the weather patterns alternate between cool and warm, damp and dry.

Although some regular maintenance is required in any heating system, Kentuckians with wood heat appliances—either fireplace inserts, free standing stoves or wood furnaces—face a sterner challenge in readying their heaters for the upcoming winter.

Farm Bureau is urging Kentuckians with wood-heated homes or outbuildings to take the necessary time to ensure that all facets of the systems are safe before the first fire is stoked.

Chimneys need to be cleaned and inspected, pipes cleaned and checked, clearances to combustibles examined and wall pass-throughs scrutinized for fire risks. In some cases, homeowners themselves can perform the needed work, in others expert advice or assistance may be required.

Recheck stove and insert manuals and look over your system with a critical eye. But above all, keep an open mind. The risk of an open flame burning regularly inside your home, with all the resulting sparks, ashes, smoke and fire should not be taken lightly.

There are very real dangers involved with wood heat. Maybe with a little help from your friends, those dangers can be kept in check.

NATURAL POISONS

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association

Drought conditions throughout Kentucky have resulted in a situation in which plentiful natural foliage may not be available for all farm animals. The natural result, of course, is that animals are then prone to eat things they might not otherwise eat.

This can be dangerous, even fatal. Acorn poisoning in the fall is a common problem in Kentucky and could be more common this fall because of drought conditions. Gallotannins in the acorns cause gastrointestinal and kidney dysfunction, and kidney damage may be irreversible by the time the condition is noticed and treated.

Clinical signs include loss of appetite, nasal discharge, abdominal pain and constipation, followed by bloody diarrhea.

Another common problem in Kentucky is Taxus cuspidata—the Japanese Yew—an ornamental shrub common throughout the northern two-thirds of the United States. It is popular because of the brightness of its foliage and berries.

It is, however, dramatically poisonous. It contains an alkaloid which causes cardiac arrest and which, once ingested, acts too quickly to be effectively counteracted. In horses, death is often instantaneous. The poison is found in all parts of the plant, both fresh and dried, except the ripe berries. As little foliage as .05 percent of the horse's body weight can be lethal, as little as a few mouths full for most horses.

In cattle, a little more may be needed for a lethal dose, and death may be delayed for a few hours because of the dilution effect of the rumen.

Beware of the buckeye as well. Alkaloids, saponins and other poisonous compounds are present in all parts of the tree or shrub, and young shoots and buckeye seeds are especially poisonous. Symptoms of poisoning from either of these include depression, incoordination, twitching, paralysis and inflammation of the mucous membranes.

Your veterinarian is your only source of help in poisonings, and speed is essential for effective treatment.

Animal owners are advised to keep close watch on grazing animals during periods of difficult grazing and to be especially alert to keep animals away from oak trees, Japanese Yew and buckeye bushes and trees. Your veterinarian can advise you of any other toxic plants which grow in your area.

FIRST CAPTAIN of the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad, Graham Burchett, who served in that capacity for 20 years, is now retired and enjoying the finer things of life. From the looks of that pumpkin, he is doing just as good a job with his gardening as he did leading the Rescue Squad.

Bassin' With the Pros...

Bottom Fishing For Bass

One of the hardest skills for an angler to acquire is bottom fishing. Now, I don't mean 10 feet down in shallow lakes; "bottom" here can mean 20 to 40 feet! "How on earth am I going to get those bass?" I once pondered on an impoundment. Little did I know that my instinctual choice would be supported by bass pros over a year later.

"If you're fishing below 20 feet," states Ken Cook, Evinrude Pro Staff member, "you've got to use baits that sink pretty fast. The things I use are the jigging spoon, a grub, or a plastic worm. My choice depends on the time of year."

"If you're fishing deep water in the summertime, I tend to go with a plastic worm or a plastic grub most of the time. Sometimes I use the jigging spoon in extreme depths—when you get below 40 feet, the jigging spoon or a real compact lure, like a Little George or Tailspinner, is about the only bait that will get down there efficiently."

"In the 20- to 40-foot range," Cook continues, "I fish either a jigging spoon, Little George, a sonic vibrating lure like a Silver Buddy, or the plastic worm or grub. To fish those baits properly, make your chest or vertical drop to the bottom, and then just pick it up off the bottom with a varying amount of vigorosity. In the winter, you're usually dealing with cold water bass that don't want a real vigorous bait, so lift it up a few inches from the bottom, making it rise a little, then let it fall back down. In the summer, when the water is warmer and the bass are more aggressive and are actively feeding, they normally react better to a more vigorous jigging action, so you pop it up off the bottom maybe two or three feet. In the process of raising it off the bottom, give it three jigs (dart, dart, dart) and then let it down."

Half of the bass Cook caught at a July Pro Bass tournament in Las Vegas, Nev., were 40 feet down and on four pound test line!

"With a line that light you don't have to use a big heavy bait," Cook states. "The light line has good sensitivity and good bait action. I primarily use a four pound test line with an eight ounce jighead on it with a four-inch worm. It gets down pretty fast."

"You don't want your lure to go down like a rock," cautions Cook. "You want some action to it as it descends. I use what they call "doodling," or shaking the worm. That's the hot thing to do in deep water: Get your bait down there and hold it at the desired depth and shake it with your rod tip."

If it has been a while since you last treated your outboard to a tune-up, consider scheduling an appointment with your dealer in the fall or winter months. Don't wait until April or May, when the service department at most dealerships is swamped. The service manager is often looking for work to do in November and December, and many stores run off-season specials. Tune up now, and you'll be ready to go when the fish start biting again.

Richter Portrays Mark Twain At Morehead

The Morehead State University Student Government Association will present television personality Ken Richter in a one-man show, Mark Twain On Tour, Tuesday, Oct. 20, at 8 p.m. in Burton Auditorium. The performance is free and open to the public.

Richters has toured with his one-man production for the past eight years, following three years of research into Mark Twain's public and private life. Richters spends nearly three hours in make-up application to complete the transformation to the elderly Mark Twain.

Twain, best known for The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, and Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, has been called "an outrageous prankster and a gloomy pessimist" and Richters demonstrates this in his performance.

Richters' production began its national tour in Sept. with a series of performances in New York City, Boston and the U.S. Virgin Islands and has been presented over 700 times in the past eight seasons.

In addition to Mark Twain on Tour, Richters has appeared in films and network television shows such as Happy Days, Search for Tomorrow, and Johnny We Hardly Knew Ye. He has appeared as Mark Twain for AT&T, on the Public Broadcasting System, the BBC in England and most recently as spokesman for United Technologies and the World Trade Center Association.

Jobless Rate Declines In Big Sandy District

Jobless rates decreased in 110 Kentucky counties between July and August as the state unemployment rate dropped to the lowest level in almost six years. The jobless rate in the Big Sandy district fell from 15.9 percent in July to 13.6 percent in August. All counties reported rates above 10.0 percent, ranging from 10.8 percent in Martin county to 16.4 percent in Magoffin county. The monthly sample of claimants of unemployment insurance benefits showed 53.7 percent had worked in mining, 16.2 percent in services and 15.3 percent in trade.

Unemployment in Kentucky dropped 1.5 percentage points, from a revised 8.9 percent in July to a preliminary 7.4 percent in August, the lowest rate since October 1981, when it was 7.0 percent.

New jobs in agriculture, education, trade, construction, manufacturing and transportation, communications and utilities accounted for most of the job growth in the state as the number of Kentuckians working increased by 15,700.

DAV Coalition Formed To Restore Corregidor

A joint effort involving the Disabled American Veterans (DAV), the Navy and State Departments, as well as key members of Congress, was launched in a ceremony in Washington, D.C., September 29, to restore and preserve the historic World War II battle site of Corregidor in the Philippines.

Secretary of the Navy James Webb accepted a $34,000 check from the one-million member organization of war-time disabled vets to be used by Navy Construction Battalion (Seabees) working to restore the island fortress made infamous during World War II.

The restoration efforts have been made possible through what DAV officials describe as an unusual cooperative arrangement among various federal agencies, the DAV and Congress.

The plan involves initial clean-up and repair of major monuments and battle sites on Corregidor—which has suffered from many years of neglect, by members of a Navy Seabee battalion assigned to the island. Money for the repair supplies and materials, which the Navy may not allocate, is being donated by the DAV.

Corregidor became famous during World War II as the island headquarters of General Douglas MacArthur and the site where a depleted contingent of American and Filipino soldiers held on through five months of saturation bombings before the island finally fell to Japanese invaders in May 1942.

Forced to flee the island, MacArthur pledged, "I shall return," a promise made good three years later when the island was retaken by American forces.

The DAV, which includes among its membership many who were disabled in defense of Corregidor and subsequent island fighting in the Philippines, pledged $100,000 as initial funds to see the restoration effort launched.

U of L Study Finds Needs Of Elderly Not Being Met

Efforts to provide housing, food, transportation and medical care reached few of Kentucky's senior citizens, according to a study released by the University of Louisville Urban Studies Center.

The study, commissioned by the Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources, also indicated the problem will get worse.

Researchers used 1980 census data and previous needs assessment studies to estimate the number of elderly adults needing 25 types of services. Agencies across the state were surveyed to determine the number actually receiving them.

Twelve percent of those thought to need subsidized housing received the assistance. Of those needing home-delivered meals, 23 percent were served; 6 percent received adult day care, health screening and counseling services.

Home health care and public assistance income supplements were the only services reaching a majority of those in need.

"A large number of people in need are not receiving these services, either because they cannot afford them, or they don't know about them," said Gerard Barber, director of the study.

The study predicts that by the year 2000 the number of elderly people 85 and over will more than double to 88,000. Maintaining present levels of service will require millions of dollars in additional funding, Barber said.

Conservation District Will Meet October 20th

Radon: Part 1

Q. I have read some newspaper stories about radon gas. Can you tell me more about it and how it affects my selling my home or buying a new one?

A. Radon gas is a clear, odorless, radioactive gas formed by the decay of uranium atoms. Uranium atoms are naturally found in soils and rocks.

The radon gas comes up through the soil and can enter homes through cracks in basement floors and crawl spaces, for example.

Radon is found in different levels in different parts of the country. In states in the northeast where industry has used radioactive materials for many years, radon gas is found in housing which has been built over landfills.

In the real estate industry, the relocation companies which move people around the country for businesses are very aware of radon. Their awareness comes from their activity in the highly industrialized states where radon has been a problem.

Some relocation companies are insisting on radon tests before they will allow the people relocating to buy or before they put the homes they are selling for people who are moving on the market.

The tests for radon range from very complicated and long inspections to a very simple can of charcoal. Testing for radon in the home seems to be heading toward the very simple can of charcoal.

The charcoal cans can be purchased at hardware stores and other places. They are then opened in the basement area of the home.

After a period of time, they are sealed and sent to a laboratory. The laboratory conducts a test on the charcoal and determines the level of radon gas present.

The cost of the charcoal cans ranges from $25 to $35 in one area with which we are familiar. This includes the testing by the laboratory and the report to the homeowner.

It is important that the laboratory which does the testing be approved by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). EPA approval is assurance that the laboratory has met their standards, and you can rely on the report.

In time, I would expect tests for radon to become more common. As the testing increases, there probably will be new methods to test more efficiently.

The new methods probably will include economies in packaging the charcoal and efficiencies in laboratory procedures from doing more tests. It is probable, then, that the cost of radon testing will decrease and the tests will become even more widely used.

The Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division conducted 6,047 compliance actions under the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act during fiscal 1986. The actions resulted in civil money penalties totaling $1,676,335 assessed against violators, according to the Labor Department's annual report for fiscal year 1986.

Radon is another topic about which real estate agents must become knowledgeable. They have to know what it is and the conditions that exist in their local market.

The question of radon testing is important when buying or selling a home. Your licensed real estate professional is in a position to answer your questions or obtain the information for you.

A second column will cover what to do about radon gas if it is found in your home.

The Kentucky Real Estate Center is funded by the Kentucky Real Estate Commission to be of assistance to people in the real estate profession and to the general public. That means it can help you to answer your questions about real estate.

Everybody's Science... Slurping It Up

Superslurper. Sounds like a name for one of Cookie Monster's buddies on Sesame Street.

Like Cookie Monster, superslurper is a voracious eater. But superslurper eats moisture, not cookies. And because it can absorb 1,400 times its weight in moisture—a consumption rate Cookie Monster can only envy—it has a variety of commercial and industrial uses. This derivative of corn starch is now used in all kinds of products—body powder, sanitary napkins, baby diapers, electrical conductors in batteries and absorbents in fuel filters, to name a few.

Scientists with USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Peoria, Ill., developed superslurper 13 years ago because they wanted to find new uses for corn starch. There's a large corn surplus, and new products that use corn starch help create a demand for corn. That helps farmers and the companies that produce the products.

Porter To Teach Banjo At PCC, Oct. 17-Dec. 12

Banjo classes for beginners will start Oct. 17 at Prestonsburg Community College.

The classes, taught by Clyde Porter, are set for 10 a.m.-noon, Saturdays through Dec. 12, in Room 105 of the Johnson Building on campus.

Porter, who has played the banjo since he was 10 years old, studied instrumental music at Morehead State University. In addition to the banjo, he plays guitar and bass for a recording studio and has provided instrumental backup for commercial albums.

For information on the banjo classes, contact PCC's Office of Continuing Education and Community Service at 886-3863, ext. 215.

Two companies that superslurper has helped are in small towns in rural America, places where farming is a big part of the local economy.

One is the Central Illinois Manufacturing Company in Bement, Ill. Several years ago, the company began making industrial fuel filters with a superslurper material it calls 'hydrosorb.' As fuel passes through the filter, the material removes any water that may be mixed with it.

The company now makes about 26,000 filters a month, and in four years its workforce has quadrupled from 25 to 100—largely because of the popularity of the filters.

The other company is Polysorb, Inc., of Smelterville, Idaho. About 18 months ago, a family there started a business making a line of superslurper-based products, such as medical and recreation cold packs, fuel filters and bulk absorbents for agricultural uses.

For its factory, Polysorb converted a closed-down bowling alley and recreational facility that had gone out of business when a big mining and smelting company left town in 1981.

A thriving company with 50 employees, Polysorb ended its first year in the black with about $2 million in revenue.

Superslurper is a big reason for the success of both these companies. It's a good example of how scientific research can have a helpful impact by creating jobs, new products for consumers and a market for farmers' crops. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture).
