

There Ought To Be A Law Contest Opens

In conjunction with Consumer Education Week to be celebrated April 24-30, Attorney General Fred Cowan's Consumer Protection Division is spending a "There Ought To Be A Law" contest. The contest is open to all Kentuckians 18 years of age and older. Persons wishing to enter the contest are responsible to submit their own ideas for consumer legislation.

Entries will be judged based upon practicality of the submitted proposal and the proposed law's potential impact upon and benefit to consumers in Kentucky. Entries should be typed or written legibly, should include a brief explanation (500 words or less) of a proposal for consumer legislation and why you believe the proposed law is needed. Submit entries no later than April 12, to: "There Ought To Be A Law" Consumer Protection Division, Office of Attorney General, 209 St. Clair Street, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. Be sure to include your name, return address and telephone number with your entry.

All entries will be reviewed and the winners of the contest will be invited to Frankfort for an awards ceremony, lunch, and a tour of the State Capitol during Consumer Education Week.

Condition of Beef Cows Is Critical at Calving

Because of hay and pasture shortages last fall, many Kentucky cows are now too thin at the start of this calving season.

Smart farmers will begin a supplemental feeding program to enable their cows to calve easier and to be rebred earlier.

The flesh condition of spring calving cows, both before and after calves are born, is a definite indicator of the cows' ability to produce milk and their capability to be quickly rebred.

To be profitable in the beef business, cows should be rebred so that calving occurs every 365 days, said Nelson Gay, professor in beef sciences with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Cows in good condition with ample stores of body fat will return to cycling earlier after they calve," Gay said. "Earlier rebreeding keeps them on a profitable one calf per year system."

The gestation period of cattle is about 282 days, he said. That means a cow must cycle and rebreed within 83 days following calving. Normally, for cows in good condition and which did not have problems at calving, cycling occurs 50 to 60 days after the calf is born. This allows for a four- or five-week period to be rebred.

"However, cows which are thin at calving will take longer to breed, or they may not rebreed at all in 60 to 90 days exposure to the bull," Gay said.

Although it is impractical to weigh cows close to calving, Gay said a simple visual inspection can be effective to detect relative fatness.

"By recognizing differences in body condition," he said, "one can plan a supplemental feeding program so that cows are maintained in satisfactory condition for best performance through calving and rebreeding."

Artist's Weekend Set April 8, 9

The Paintsville's Art League's 4th annual April Artist's Weekend will be held April 8 and 9 at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park's May Lodge. The exhibit will be open from noon until 2 p.m. and from 4 until 6 p.m. on Saturday, April 9. There will be demonstrations and lectures both Friday evening and on Saturday.

Artists, working in any two-dimensional media, may submit up to four pieces of artwork for the show and competition. Cash awards totalling $550 will be given, and there will be at least $1,600 in purchase awards.

For more information, call 606/297-2448 (evenings only) or 606/789-3778. For lodge reservations, call 1-800-633-3381 in Kentucky, or outside Kentucky, call 1-800-325-0142.

ELECTRIC SHOCK

One of the first lessons for new owners of pets have to learn is how to think like their animals in order to prevent household accidents. As with humans, ordinary household accidents account for an astounding percentage of emergencies with pets.

The trick is in prevention, in learning to see potential problem areas and correct the danger.

One of the more common household dangers to pets is electric shock, which may range from mild to fatal, and which is usually easily preventable by simply being careful with the placement of electric cords.

Young puppies and kittens love to chew on things, partly from curiosity and partly from teething, and some never outgrow it. Little wonder, then, that chewing on electric cords is the most common cause of electric shock.

The severity of the injury varies with several factors, including the intensity of the voltage, the severity and depth of the bite through the insulation and the pathway of the current through the body.

Essentially what happens is that electrical energy is converted in the animal's body into heat energy, which causes burns at the points of entry and exit, and sometimes in the flesh it passes through. A more severe shock may cause nerve damage or destruction, including damage to the brain, and possibly kidney damage as well. Cardiac standstill or fibrillation, convulsions, circulatory collapse and pulmonary congestion are all possibilities.

First aid is simple. First be sure the animal is free of the source of electricity. If it is not, cut off the current by pulling the plug or throwing the circuit breaker. This is to protect you. If you touch the animal while the wire is still "live" you will not get the animal loose, you'll only shock yourself.

If the animal is still breathing, get it to a veterinarian as soon as possible. If it is not breathing, mouth to mouth or other artificial respiration may be effective.

In cold weather, there may be hazards to large animals as well. Heaters for water tanks should be checked frequently to see that they are not leaking stray voltage into the water itself through frayed insulation. Electric heaters in barns are extremely dangerous and really shouldn't be used, yet in emergencies sometimes still turn up. They should be continually monitored, both for the open heating elements and the cord overheating.

Sometimes treatment for electric shock is effective, especially if the injuries are somewhat minor. Most effective, however, is prevention.

Did you know that your veterinarian can give you some pointers on prevention and also on first aid measures? Over the years, veterinarians accumulate a wealth of information on how accidents happen, and they'd really rather help you prevent them than see the animals injured.

Rash of Accidents Plague P'burg Area

By Monica J. Clark

The last few days in Prestonsburg could be likened to a demolition derby at a county fair.

Thirteen fender benders were reported within a five-day period, the majority of which were due to the rain slickened roadways, according to Prestonsburg police.

The rash of accidents in the city occurred Thursday through Monday and resulted in only one injury. Chandra Nelson was treated and released from Highlands Regional Medical Center, after the vehicle she was driving collided with another car on U.S. 23 as it was turning into the Hardee's parking lot.

Mayo School Sets 50th Anniversary Observance

Mayo State Vocational-Technical School's long service to the Eastern Kentucky area will be recognized during the institution's 50th anniversary celebration, April 14.

Among special speakers will be former Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler who will speak on vocational and technical education in the state from 1938 to the present. Chandler will also close the ceremonies with his unique delivery of "My Old Kentucky Home."

Other speakers will include Dr. Ann Bardwell, director, office of Vocational Education; Dr. Jack Foster, secretary, Education and Arts Cabinet; Dr. John Brock, superintendent of public instruction; Jesse Conley and C. W. Combs, principal and assistant principal, respectively, of Mayo; Bronelle Skaggs, vocation education regional administrator and Robert Marsh of the First National Bank of Paintsville. The Mayo Glee Club will entertain with musical selections.

Activities will run from 10:30 a.m. till 12 noon.

IDENTIFY REMITTANCES WHEN PAYING TAXES

To ensure any payments made to their tax accounts are correctly credited, taxpayers should include identifying information on their checks or money orders, says the Internal Revenue Service.

Taxpayers should write their taxpayer identification number (social security number or employer identification number), their daytime telephone number, the tax year, and the number of the tax form they are filing on the front of the check or money order.

The IRS advises taxpayers to submit individual checks or money orders with each tax return filed (e.g., Form 1040, 1040-ES, etc.) for easy association. Taxpayers who owe more than one type of tax liability should submit separate payments. These liabilities may include taxes owed for estimated tax payments, employment tax, additional tax, etc.

These simple steps will help ensure proper crediting to the accounts intended.

MIDDLE-AGE SPREAD

It's not inevitable, says Good Housekeeping's April issue, reporting on recent research that shows a regimen of regular, moderate exercise and a sensible, low-fat diet can prevent or even reverse it. Middle-age spread is an increase in the percentage of fat, which tends to collect in the stomach area, hips, and thighs. So even if you keep your weight down, middle-age spread can occur unless you exercise regularly. Try weight-bearing exercises, like brisk walking, jogging, and aerobics. They help you retain muscle and help build up bone density, a main factor in preventing osteoporosis.

UNWANTED INTERACTION

It is possible for a woman to become pregnant even though she was conscientious about taking birth control pills. The answer for this seemingly impossible situation lies with an unwanted drug interaction. It is possible that a certain drug being taken concurrently with the Pill could reduce the Pill's effectiveness as a birth-control device. The Pill consists of female hormones which can react with other drugs. Some of these interacting drugs belong to families of tranquilizers, antibiotics, antidepressants, and corticosteroids. For instance, some antibiotics cause the hormonal contents of the Pill to be absorbed more slowly by the body, or excreted more quickly. Women should ask the pharmacist for guidance in this area.

COOLEY APOTHECARY carries what you would expect to find in a well inventoried drug store including whatever medications your physician may prescribe. Our patient profile system allows us to check for drug allergies and interactions. We are very proud to be able to provide families in this area with all their over the counter needs as well. You'll find us located at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106 and open Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-3. Master Charge and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments.

HINT:

The barbiturate/Pill interaction carries with it a 25-fold increased risk of pregnancy.

Tame your taxes with an IRA account at First Commonwealth Bank.

While helping yourself toward a more comfortable retirement, you may still qualify for a full tax deduction. Most people do. Full deductions are still available on new IRA's, or deposits to existing accounts.

Here is how it works under the new tax law: If you don't participate in any kind of retirement plan where you work, you can claim a full IRA deduction on deposits up to $2,000 regardless of your income. Or, if you do participate in a retirement plan and your adjusted gross income is less than $40,000 jointly if married, or $25,000 if single, you also qualify for a full deduction.

Even if your income is higher, partial deductions may still apply.

At First Commonwealth, you can open an IRA for any amount. You can add to it weekly, monthly, or with annual deposits. And right now, First Commonwealth is paying a very attractive rate on all IRA accounts, new or existing.

To learn more, stop in at any First Commonwealth branch or phone 886-2321 and talk with Sarah Howard. Ask for our free IRA brochures and plan now to open or add to a valuable First Commonwealth IRA.

RAISE FUNDS FOR CHARITY — EFFORTLESSLY

Americans have always been aware of the importance of helping the less fortunate. People once spent long hours going door to door to raise funds for charity. Yet today's busy lifestyles do not often permit time for this vital fundraising task.

Now, consumer products companies have developed an easy way for people to fit fundraising for charity into their tight schedules.

Known as cause-related marketing, a growing number of companies and local retailers make donations to local and national "causes" based on a percentage of product sales or receipt of proofs of purchase. Busy people, by themselves or as part of a group, can participate every time they grocery shop just by collecting special package symbols and mailing them in.

For example, this March and April, groups can help local Ronald McDonald Houses nationwide by purchasing a variety of Scott Paper Company products with specially marked packages and sending in the Scott Universal Product Code (UPC) symbols. For each UPC symbol received, Scott will donate $0.05 to the local house in addition to a contribution based on local retail sales.

"One person's UPC symbol may not seem like much, but collectively they add up to many dollars," comments Dan Bunde, Scott's Ronald McDonald House program coordinator. Scott Paper has contributed almost $3 million to Ronald McDonald Houses since the program began three years ago.

For your group's next service project, consider a consumer products collect 'n' save campaign. Scott Paper Company offers ten tips for organizing a successful campaign.

1. Create a short, catchy slogan that sums up the purpose of the campaign. Use your slogan in all communication.
2. Explain how a collect 'n' save campaign works and what is to be collected. Some products

- require a UPC symbol; some another part of the package. Others may even require a purchase receipt.
 3. Designate one member of your group to receive all collected symbols, and mail them in together to ensure your charity gets a donation for every symbol collected.
 4. Set a goal for the number of symbols you expect to collect and translate that into dollars so your group will grasp the potential financial scope of their effort.
 5. Ask people to join this effort; don't expect them to volunteer. Assign them a quota of symbols and provide a timetable.
 6. Kick off your campaign with an event — a breakfast, lunch, dinner, party, etc. Set up a lively program that reinforces the campaign purpose, notes the timetable, and explains how the funds will help the recipient group. If possible, secure a speaker with ties to the charity and invite members of the recipient group to the kickoff as well.
 7. Publicize your campaign in the local press. Inform local retailers of your campaign plans and seek their support. If your funds will go to a local group, advise their leadership in advance that you are working for them.
 8. Communicate regularly with your members. Make communication upbeat and informative.
 9. After the campaign send personal thank you letters to all participants, issue a final report, and evaluate the results.
 10. Have a follow-up event for all participants and award modest tokens of appreciation.
- Remember: Collect 'n' save campaigns are the modern way to fit fundraising work into today's active schedules.

Students Enact Life Situations In Weddle's Sociology Course

By Joe Porter

In a frenzy the young woman slams the phone down, paces her bedroom, and rants, "No more failure, no more problems, no more hell on earth!" With that, she puts the revolver to her chest and pulls the trigger. The shot rings out, and people gasp as they watched her slump to the floor. No, it's not a suicide, but a presentation in Leo Weddle's Modern Social Problems class at Prestonsburg Community College.

The students in Professor Weddle's class take a creative approach to learning the subject. Just studying cases and theories out of a book isn't good enough; the students must research, and then, using their imaginations, create life-like situations in order to thoroughly learn the material from the inside.

The class concentrates on eight social problems; the breakdown of the American family, suicide, health and sickness, crime, poverty, aging, death and dying, and alcoholism. Then the 35 member class is broken down into groups, where four or five students in each group pick one of the topics and devote themselves to learning it.

Weddle describes himself as the facilitator, who after the first few classes are used to explain the syllabus and methods, gives the students free rein to create situations in order to demonstrate the problems. "I use extreme flexibility," Weddle says. "I go with the flow. If they say they would like to try this I'll usually let them. I might offer suggestions, but what I'm interested in is creativity, excitement, and interest."

The course is structured so that two or three class periods are spent on each topic. First, the students research the social problem in the library or by interviewing people, then using audio visual aides or by creating scenes, they make their presentation. The presentation is followed by a field trip and a panel discussion, where the students bring in five or six people from the community who are experts or have experience in the field.

Take suicide, which is the third leading killer of young people between the ages of 15 and 23. About her presentation, Yellonda Edmonds, said, "I wanted to make an impact and stress the permanence of suicide. People who have attempted suicide say there's no other way, but suicide isn't an alternative either because it's final. I also wanted to show that there are a lot of causes—not just one." After the shooting took place, another student, Pam Baldrige, narrated the circumstances that led to it: two broken marriages, a failed business, a boyfriend leaving her, and depression worsened by drinking and drugs.

Lieutenant Robert Forsythe and Sergeant C.S. Woodard from the State Police then commented on the details and circumstances of the enactment and answered class questions. "I would rather work a murder anytime than a suicide," Forsythe said. "It's so hard to convince the family that someone they loved would commit a suicide." The lieutenant told the class that for some reason there aren't that many teenage suicides in Eastern Kentucky, that most of the victims are in their thirties, and more often they occur in the winter, often when a person has been laid off work, and that murder-suicides are common.

Weddle credits the community involvement and generous professional people in the area for contributing their knowledge and expertise and making the class successful. "People come from all over this five county area to assist the students in their presentations," he says. He estimates that in the course of the semester as many as 80 professional people will participate. "The big thing from an educational standpoint is that here you have college freshmen talking to doctors, lawyers, judges, undertakers, and social workers, meeting and questioning them." Weddle feels this kind of influence will enrich and have a positive impact on his students.

PROFESSOR LEO WEDDLE is innovative in his teaching methods at Prestonsburg Community College. "If they just get a grade out of the class something is wrong," he says. "They've got to feel what they've learned is going to effect their lives."

On the topic of the breakdown of the American family, students put on a mock wedding with an official minister reciting the vows. Then the students showed a video tape of the same couple quarreling. Then, for its field trip, the class visited the Floyd Circuit Court and watched Judge Hollie Conley conduct a divorce trial with each party represented by a member of the bar. "They thought it out for themselves and then recreated it for the class," Weddle says, a process he calls, "conceptualizing the problem."

Weddle who has been teaching at Prestonsburg for 22 years, received a Masters degree from the University of Kentucky in education with an emphasis in psychology as well as a masters from Morehead State in sociology, emphasizing gerontology. To stay abreast with the course material, he attends seminars around the country and does a lot of reading on trends and social phenomena. He once did a three-month practicum in a nursing home.

Students receive a double grade for their presentations, so they take pains to make them authentic and dramatically interesting. The purpose is to provide the student with more than just abstract ideas. Weddle's idea of "integration" is a process of combining theory and involvement in research in a way so that what they learn is not forgotten a month after the course is over.

To Weddle, social problems are not something to fear, but rather, face. He doesn't believe anybody is helped by cloaking it in myth or cloaking the truth, whether it be a suicide or an aging parent. "We're not trying to be morbid but positive, for example, with aging, people have a sense of denial about it. We take the students to Riverside Nursing home, then bring in a person who is 75 or 80 who is still riding horses and practicing a profession. There is too much emphasis on nursing homes and Alzheimer's disease when 95 percent of the elderly people in this country are leading active lives."

On the topic of death and dying, students have imagined and created wakes and funerals with flowers and a casket and a homily preached. On crime, they have visited jails; and on poverty, students have gone to remote areas in the county and filmed a poverty setting to show in class. "That's the dynamics of the situation," Weddle says. "Let's look at it and see what we can do about it. Let's take a rapidly changing world and make it human, more liveable, more meaningful."

CRIME AT SHOPPING MALLS
The number of shopping centers in the U.S. has increased from 2,000 in 1957 to 28,500 today, and with this growth has been an increase in shopping mall crime—from purse snatching to car theft. Here are some simple rules from The Better Way in Good Housekeeping's March issue, for playing it safe while you're at a shopping mall:

To foil a pickpocket: Keep your handbag with you at all times, tucked firmly under your arm. Never put it on a counter, or on the floor of a dressing room.

To defer a mugger: Be particularly watchful in underground or tiered parking lots. Never approach your car without having your keys already in hand. Check the back seat of your car before getting in. Once you're inside, lock all the doors.

Need a Tax Break?

You may still qualify for a full or partial deduction on your tax return.

Morehead Offers Two Nursing Workshops

Morehead State University's Continuing Education Program for nursing and allied health professionals will sponsor a one-day workshop on legal aspects in health care education Friday, April 8, in the Adron Doran University Center and a three day workshop, Pediatric Nursing Assessment II, April 6-8 in Reed Hall.

The legal workshop, designed for nursing administrators and educators, and radiologic and medical technologists, will feature discussions on malpractice cases, the litigation process, and legal issues related to patient acceptance or refusal of health care among other issues. Tamera Todd Colton, registered nurse and practicing attorney with a Louisville law firm, will provide the instruction.

The Pediatric workshop is designed for registered nurses who practice in community health settings in Kentucky, such as local and district health departments. Sessions will provide an update on concepts and skills in the nursing assessment of infants, toddlers, and preschool-aged children.

The faculty will include Karen Parker, a nurse practitioner at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Cincinnati, Ohio, and Michael Sheets, nurse practitioner with the Frenchburg Clinic, an outreach service of St. Claire Medical Center.

Sheets will provide assistance with a laboratory session on Thursday, from 1 to 4 p.m. Participants need to bring a Denver Kit, reflex hammer, and a tuning fork to the workshop. Learning activities will include lecture-discussion, demonstration and practice in peer pairs. Participants should wear clothing suitable to participate in the laboratory practice. On the last day of the workshop, there will be a practice session dealing with the preschool age child.

Additional information and registration is available by calling (606) 783-2635.

ELECT RUSSELL BENTLEY STATE REPRESENTATIVE 92ND DISTRICT

A good, effective state representative should represent all the people and their interests and not just the interests of the few. Russell Bentley will be the type of representative you need and deserve.

Russell Bentley intends to hold regular meetings in the 92nd legislative district if you elect him state representative. Russell believes these forums can be used to inform you about legislative activities and provide the public a means to keep him informed. People that know Russell Bentley realize this is not just an idle promise, but is something he wants to do in order to serve you.

Russell's concern for the education of your children, your family's children and your neighbors' children made him attend the statewide rally in Frankfort recently. Russell wants more quality education and does not want to see cuts that will hurt our children and our schools. Russell is education-minded. He worked at Alice Lloyd College for several years and his wife teaches at Knott Central High School.

As a businessman, Russell knows first hand the need for jobs in this county and his district. A major portion of his time as a legislator will be spent trying to create and attract jobs in his district.

One way jobs can be created for Floyd Countians is to provide tax credits to coal operators in Floyd County that hire people from Floyd County. Employers should be encouraged to hire local people, and thus, financial incentive by the state would help.

At the same time, Russell believes that local legislators must fight for the industry that provides the most jobs in our area—coal. The recent state legislative action to increase workers compensation rates drove more of our small coal operators out of business. Russell Bentley asks, why must we drive the small people out of business, whether it is farming, industrial jobs or coal? Russell Bentley opposes additional taxes that fall upon the coal operator.

Russell Bentley wants to serve you.

He does not want to go down to Frankfort to have a good time and "whoop it up with the boys."

He is not running for state representative so he will have a job. He is running for that office because he wants to serve you and work for a future in Floyd County that will help all of us. This position is too important to give to a person because they simply want a job or want the position handed down to them.

A good representative must work hard. He must vote on all the major legislation after studying it in light of its impact on the 92nd district.

Russell Bentley has the education to be a good legislator. He has the good common sense to represent us and not by used by other interests in the state. He will speak out for all of us. He will represent all of us, not just himself, or a few.

THE VIRGINIA PLAN was drafted by James Madison in 1787 and called for a highly centralized government with three branches, each structured to check the others—executive, legislative and judicial. It was presented to the Constitutional Convention by Edmund Randolph. The John Graham Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution honors these outstanding leaders.

Army Engineer Corp Begins Raising Lakes

Flood control lakes operated by the Army Corps of Engineers are being raised to their summer levels in preparation for the outdoor recreation season.

The lakes, operated by the Corps' Huntington District, are lowered in the fall to increase storage capacity behind the dams for flood control, and raised again in the spring for recreation.

The Huntington office operates 34 flood control dams in parts of West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Virginia. The refilling normally begins about April 1.

This year, the Corps of Engineers began raising 10 of these lakes early, in mid-March, because of past experience with lake levels and a near-drought condition during the winter.

Fishtrap Lake near Pikeville and Grayson Lake were among those raised early. Dewey Lake should reach normal summer level by April 15 with a normal spring rainfall. Paintsville Lake has the same level year-round.

The primary purpose of all Corps of Engineers lakes is to store excess runoff during and following heavy rains in order to reduce flood damage which can happen at any time, even though the chances are greater from fall through early spring.

Move over Esther Williams. Here's the European Water Spider. It eats, sleeps, mates and raises young underwater. According to Ranger Rick magazine, this acrobatic spider gets air by swimming to the surface, doing a somersault and snatching an air bubble. The water spider attaches this natural "air tank" to breathing holes in the middle of its body. Then, the spider heads back to the water's surface for other air bubbles to use in its underwater home.

Speaks For Vet Legal Aid

This letter should be a concern for all veterans of this nation. I believe that most veterans are not aware that a law exists, which I believe is a sly way of denying veterans their freedom of choice between a lawyer or a service officer from the Disabled American Veterans or (DAV). A ten dollar fee is the limit a veteran can pay an attorney under the present law.

Congressman Carl Chris Perkins has co-sponsored the H.R. 639 which would allow veterans the opportunity to obtain legal counsel with a provision of a reasonable attorney fees. This legislation is opposed by the administration in an attempt to get this legislation out of the Veteran Affairs Committee, and so far has failed. Therefore, we need the input of every veteran and show a united voice of concern, and get this bill H.R. 639 passed for our rights to be restored.

We, the veterans, are the only minority in this nation that is denied legal counsel. Even a criminal has the freedom to choose who is to represent him! So come on veterans, write to your Congressman and show your support. You may not be in need of a lawyer at this time, but you never know what the future will bring.

The law which the veterans are now governed by was enacted just after the Civil War, yet very few veterans are aware of this law. Under the present law a veteran has to get permission by filling out forms from the Veterans' Administration and they have to approve of the lawyer you choose. You are then limited to paying a fee of only ten dollars. What lawyer would take a case for this amount? It costs twenty dollars or more to even talk with most lawyers today.

So let's show our support for this legislation and in doing so help each other. As I stated before, you may not be in need of a lawyer now but that doesn't rule out a need for one in the future. Veterans, now is the time to stand united and speak up for your rights. Remember, write to your congressman to show your support for H.R. 639. Don't you think we've had the short end of the stick long enough?

Urges Board Meet Attendance

According to conversations a Floyd County Citizens Education Council member had with two board members, there is a possibility that our school system will have a new superintendent and three assistants when the present superintendent's contract ends. (One of those assistants could very well be Pete Grigsby.)

The decision could be made at the April 8 board meeting.

If you are concerned about how your local tax money is being spent and who will be making educational decisions for your children, you need to attend this board meeting.

National Mines Layoffs Blamed On Coal Slump

By Tim Sizemore

"I don't see anything in the immediate future," were the words used by Norm Willard, spokesman for National Mines, in describing the layoff of 145 union and salaried personnel.

Willard said that the layoffs were largely due to the slump in the coal market. "The coal business is depressed," Willard stated, explaining that the layoffs were "due basically to economics."

Wayne Conley, president of United Mine Workers Local 1645, said he hoped some of the men will be able to go back to work in the near future and that some of the laid-off workers "may be placed in mines subleased by the company."

Conley said the layoffs will have a definite effect on Floyd and surrounding counties and concurred with Willard's estimate of the coal market. He said the corporation had acted "pretty fair," with layoffs affecting not only union members but also salaried personnel, as well.

Most sports fans know the length of a football field (120 yards including end zones) but few know its width...which is 53 and one third yards.

Protests Animal Testing

Imagine 100 animals being force fed a lethal substance until 50% of them die.

I am sure many Kentuckians are not aware of the cruel, unnecessary tests imposed upon live animals in research laboratories across our nation. For example:

-The so-called LD-50 test is used by the household products industry to determine toxicity (poison level) of floor wax and detergents by force feeding and injecting these substances into the stomachs or under the skin of beagles, rabbits and calves. These substances produce vomiting, diarrhea, respiratory distress, convulsions, and paralysis. The test ends only when half of the animals have died. No anesthesia or pain killers are given.

-The cosmetics industry routinely subjects rows of rabbits, immobilized in wooden stocks, to the excruciating Draize test. The rabbits' eyes are smeared with drugs, nail polish remover, hair spray, shampoo, etc. Since rabbits have no tear ducts, they cannot produce tears to wash their eyes clean. These substances are left in the rabbits' eyes for extended periods. Eye irritation is observed at intervals. The results are corneal ulcers, hemorrhaging, and blindness.

A list of cruelty-free products is available from PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals), P.O. Box 42516, Washington, D.C., 20015.

Tax-funded research aids to the ill fate of these unfortunate animals. In 1983 a Defense Department "wound lab" built with $100,000 in tax monies was exposed by PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals). Military personnel had planned to fire high-velocity bullets into dozens of lost dogs and other animals, and to keep them alive for days or weeks to study their tissue damage.

Public outcry forced Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger to halt this ghastly experiment just in time. The "wound lab" has remained closed.

-In August, 1985, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler herself suspended funding indefinitely for the University of Pennsylvania Head Injury Laboratory, where healthy primates had been subjected to barbaric head injuries. These injuries simulated those sustained in highway crashes, football and boxing.

There are countless other tests of which the public is not aware--tests involving radiation, inhalation of lethal substances, maternal deprivation, electric shock (including "inescapable" electric shock) and many others of such horrendous nature one wonders if man really is superior to the other animals.

There are alternative test methods which are less costly, more humane and more accurate as a predictor of human toxicity levels. These tests remain unused in spite of legislation re-introduced from the last Congress to promote safe, humane alternatives to the LD-50 test. This bill, the Consumer Products Safe Testing Act (HR 1635) was submitted to the Sub-Committee on Health and the Environment 3-25-87. It remains with that sub-committee today, although 105 elected government officials co-sponsored it.

I urge all Kentuckians who are stirred by the senseless deaths of nearly 100 million laboratory animals annually to contact their congressmen and demand that HC 1635, the Consumer Products Safe Testing Act, be presented for voting. Our elected government officials must support and co-sponsor alternative methods of testing if commercial and government reform is to be attained.

These unfortunate animals have no means of protesting the atrocities they endure. We, as responsible human beings, must speak for them. Each day's delay brings untold horror to these silent victims behind closed laboratory doors where no restrictions are applied to what they must endure.

To North Americans, the very idea of eating guinea pigs may seem repulsive, yet to some of the world's poor, meat-starved countries, they've become an essential source of protein, reports International Wildlife magazine. In Peru, where an estimated 70 million are raised, guinea pigs fed table scraps and fresh alfalfa can produce meat more efficiently than cattle, sheep, pigs or goats.

Tired of Exploitation

Have you ever tried to stop a coal company from destroying your land or your only supply of water, just to find that you have no right? That's communism.

When the people of Kentucky have no right to protect the things that are necessary for life itself, then that's communism in force greater than in Russia.

Did you ever think the coal operators and local politicians might be buttering each others bread, and good decent people must face the consequences? Do you people in Eastern Kentucky want to be sick everytime you walk out your door, because some money-hungry person has destroyed what you and your parents have worked for all your lives--your land, the most precious thing you have next to your family.

You need to open up your eyes and see what's going on around you. Years ago Kentucky, was a pretty state, and what's left of the hills (which isn't much) is still pretty. So why do people want to destroy their own homeland? There are parts of Eastern Kentucky that look worse than war torn countries because of mining. This kind of destruction doesn't happen in other states. Are the people in other states smarter than Kentucky people? At least they realize how precious land is. If politicians get away with the Broad Form Deed injustice, their next law passed might be the total control over your personal lives.

The people of what used to be a great state must join together and fight for rights as free people, or we will always be pushed around by power and greed. Together we have the strength to fight them. Maybe when our forefathers wrote our state motto, they knew that their descendants would need to stand by those words, and be strong. For united we stand; divided we fall.

One way we can all stand together is at election time (if your vote isn't tampered with) remember the politicians that have taken away your rights (you know who they are). They are the ones we must fight first.

Horn Completes Legislative Internship

Through a process of elimination in the political science department of the University of Kentucky, Michael Keith Horn was selected to be one of ten to participate in the legislative session just ended.

The applicants needed to send in a request which consisted of their qualifications and then they were interviewed in order to select those who were felt to be the most efficient. They received six hours credit for the semester's work with individual legislators, giving over three days a week to the process. Keith was assigned to help and to work with Representatives Roger Noe, Harlan, Joe Barrows, Versailles, Tom Jones, Spencer County, and Harry Moberly, Richmond.

At the end of this session, these four Representatives presented Keith with a legislative citation for his outstanding, brilliant and faithful execution of the many duties attendant to the positions he had maintained with each of them. He had also appreciated the opportunity of learning about the legislative process, which will be of invaluable assistance when he enters the University of Kentucky Law School this fall.

Keith is the husband of Vicky Chandler Horn, the daughter of Rose Wiley Chandler and the late Claude V. Chandler, and the granddaughter of Vivian Wiley and the late Bruce Wiley, of Paintsville. Keith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Horn, of Banner, and the grandson of Mahalia Engle and Bascom Horn of Floyd county.

COLOSTRUM

COPYRIGHT 1988 KVMA Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association

Most visitors to Kentucky seem to assume that it is populated only by horsemen and that almost anybody can answer any question about almost any horse, that ever lived.

While there are those persons who, from a sense of humor or otherwise, might undertake to answer those questions with whatever comes to mind, there are also those Kentuckians who frankly admit they don't know much about horses but might like to know a little more.

This is for those persons, some of whom might have heard at one time or another about the importance of colostrum to a newborn foal but have no idea what it is.

Colostrum is the mare's first milk after the birth of a foal, and it is extremely important to the health of the newborn foal. Unlike newborn humans, a foal is without protective antibodies, acquired from its mother, in its blood.

Instead, the foal acquires its passive immunity by absorbing antibodies from the mare's first milk, by way of the digestive system. The effective transfer of the antibodies to the foal occurs during the first 24 to 48 hours after the birth of the foal, after which time the antibodies diminish significantly in the milk as does also the foal's ability to absorb them.

Veterinarians and horse breeders have learned how to take advantage of this mechanism to the maximum, by boosting the mare's antibodies with vaccines a few weeks before foaling to assure the highest level of antibodies.

This is one of many advances in breeding and care of horses made in recent years, all of which have contributed to the breeding of stronger and better performing animals.

An entire specialized field of veterinary practice has grown up around horses, especially in Kentucky, and within it several more specific specialties including pediatrics, the treatment of baby horses.

If you're a new horse owner, you may be in for a pleasant surprise when you discover how much is known about horses and how to maintain their health.

Cool Temperatures Bane To Kentucky Gardeners

For home gardeners, it seems that just when the weather is warm enough to start the buds of fruit trees swelling in preparation for the spring show of blooms, along comes a cold snap that halts the progression from bloom to fruit.

"Unfortunately, the diversity of weather in spring can make life tough for Kentucky's fruit growers," said Jerry Brown, University of Kentucky Extension horticulturist.

Some fruit commonly grown in Kentucky, however, can withstand temperatures below freezing and still produce a crop, Brown said.

Both the duration of the cold snap and the rate of temperature drop affect how a particular plant reacts to the weather. In addition, how far along in bud swell the plant is makes a difference in whether it will be able to continue to set fruit, Brown said.

Strawberries and blackberries in bloom may lose some blossoms at 30 degrees and will show significant kill at temperatures below 30 degrees, he said.

Grape shoots and blooms are killed in the 25 to 32 degree range. However, Brown said, secondary buds may continue to set fruit, even at these low temperatures.

Blueberry blossoms are very hardy to cold temperatures and can withstand a low temperature of 25 degrees, he said.

"Even though many blossoms will drop with cooler temperatures, only about 10 to 15 percent need to withstand the cold snap for a normal crop to develop," Brown said.

Brown provided these critical temperatures at which 90 percent of the fruit will be destroyed at the various stages of bud development:

Apples: 2 degrees when bud tips are silver; 10 degrees when buds are in green tip stage; and 15 degrees when the buds are in half-inch green stage. By the time fruit has set, a temperature of 25 degrees will kill 90 percent of the fruit.

Pears: 1 degree when buds are swelling; 7 degrees when buds are bursting open; and 15 degrees when they are in the green cluster stage. By the time fruit has set, a temperature of 24 degrees will kill 90 percent of the fruit.

Peaches: 2 degrees when the buds are swelling; 5 degrees when in the half-inch green stage; and 18 degrees when they are in the pink stage. By the time fruit has set, a temperature of 25 degrees will kill 90 percent of the fruit set.

Although there is little that home gardeners can do for fruit trees when the temperatures threaten to dip below critical temperatures, gardeners can mulch strawberries again to help keep the fruit from freezing, he said.

Interpreting Nutrition News: Part II

March was National Nutrition Month but nutrition is news throughout the year. The recent headline approach to nutrition information frequently presents research which is more theory than fact, and ideas which are interesting but not practical. Susan Spain, a registered dietitian with the Dairy & Nutrition Council notes that translating research into understandable language requires a firm knowledge base on nutrition. She adds, "Since most people try to interpret current information to meeting their own needs, a lack of understanding of both basic nutrition facts and personal needs can lead to unnecessary changes."

One example is information on cholesterol that is a current hot topic. Like most nutrition messages, this is not a new issue but is one which has been under investigation for many years. Experts still disagree on this topic. In a recent review of the research on the cholesterol controversy it was stated, "There is general agreement that high blood cholesterol level is one of the major risk factors for coronary heart disease. However, the question of whether the general healthy population should lower dietary cholesterol to reduce the risk of this disease is a subject of continuing controversy."

Among the issues that cloud definite answers are some unanswered questions. These include determining the potential negative effects there may be from long-term reduction of dietary cholesterol and exploring the many factors which seem to affect blood cholesterol levels. For some population groups, reduction of cholesterol may lead to other types of health problems. The potential dangers to the growth and development of children has led to a statement by The American Academy of Pediatrics discouraging the reduction of dietary cholesterol for the first two decades (until age twenty) of life.

If you are caught in this controversy check with your physician to determine if personal blood cholesterol levels are a health concern. Remember that many health related factors have been shown to have an effect on risk of heart disease and on blood cholesterol. Maintaining a healthy body weight, adopting regular exercise patterns, ceasing to smoke, moderating total fat content of the diet, and controlling stress are all important to total health.

As a nutrition consumer, remember to evaluate nutrition "hot topics" in the context of good sense. Then, check with the nutrition professional such as the registered dietitian for help in translating the message to personal needs.

For more information on nutrition issues, contact the nutrition education consultants at the Dairy & Nutrition Council in your area. In West Virginia, contact Dairy & Nutrition Council, 809 Peoples Building, Charleston, WV 25301.

When it comes to bird-brains, one bird has it all—the raven! According to International Wildlife magazine, ravens survive on wile and guile, using memory to recall where they hide stolen food and treasures. Ravens have 30 distinct calls and the ability to mimic animals and even human speech. Some scientists claim that ravens, unlike parrots, use some words knowing what the words mean.

"Kentucky's Psychiatric Institutions: Hospitals, Not Asylums or Prisons"

When the new Central State Hospital opened near Louisville last December, it marked the latest step in Kentucky's journey from so-called "lunatic asylums" of the 1800s to the psychiatric hospital care of the 21st century. "Today's Central State was conceived, designed and built with the specific needs of the short-term mental patient in mind," said Verna Fairchild, director of institutional care for Kentucky's Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services. "With an average patient stay of 27-30 days, this facility was developed to provide a stabilized treatment environment and keep a home-like atmosphere." The 158-bed hospital overcomes some of the shortcomings of the remodeled reform school that had been the main Central State structure since 1873. "While the other buildings did allow treatment to our patients, there was always a restrictive atmosphere, because that was the original purpose of the facility," said Fairchild. "The new hospital gives patients more freedom but still enables the staff to maintain the required control over patient activities and movement." Central State director Gerald Dutton said the single-level building is much more than just a "hospital." "The six wards demonstrate the concern for the short-term patient," said Dutton. "Each unit contains single and double occupancy bedrooms, an activity room with a kitchen, and a TV-radio-game room with a designated smoking area. "The wards have two conference rooms available to allow families privacy during visits and discussions with staff members, whose offices, by the way, are located within the unit where their patients reside." Patients who have earned the privilege also may enjoy the outdoors in the enclosed courtyards separating the wards.

and community parishes throughout the area," explained Barton. "All chaplains earn credit for clinical, pastoral and educational training received here. "Each student takes turns leading worship services at the hospital chapel and serves as part of a team assigned to treat each patient. Since the chaplains help the patients deal with grief, loss or other difficult feelings, their input is valuable to the team in making treatment decisions." Dutton summarized Central State Hospital's primary function as stabilizing the patient's medical health condition. "When someone is well enough to return to the community and use the outpatient services available through the comprehensive care centers, we've accomplished our mission," Dutton said.

Kentucky Students To Be Commissioned

Kentucky students from across the state will be commissioned as summer missionaries Saturday, April 9, 7:30 p.m. at Hurstborne Baptist Church, Louisville. Benton Williams, director, Missions/Church Services division, Kentucky Baptist Convention, will be the speaker. Each summer, more than 1,000 students from colleges and universities around the country serve as Baptist Student Union summer missionaries through State Southern Baptist Conventions. These students work in all 50 states and several foreign countries. Student summer missionaries work with career missionaries and ministers in various areas such as: evangelism, Christian Social Ministries, resort missions, church starting, language missions, construction and health care. Students usually serve for ten weeks during the summer, or as semester missionaries.

Creative skills such as macrame and ceramics may be developed in any of the workshops in our activities building, where vocational, recreational and occupational therapy classes are held. The building also is used for such activities as dances, plays, exercise classes and bingo games." Admissions to Central State combine the skills of the hospital staff, Seven Counties Services Inc., and Humana Hospital-University of Louisville, where prospective patients are evaluated on their need for inpatient or outpatient treatment of the mental health problem. As an added precaution, Dutton said, patients arriving for admission to Central State go first to a special unit of the hospital. "Here a staff team consisting of a physician, a social worker, a nurse, a psychologist and an activity therapist makes an assessment to determine if the patient needs to be admitted to a residential unit," he said. "This process prevents unnecessary hospitalization." Since 1945, Central State has been a training ground for clergymen, according to hospital chaplain Clarence Barton. "We have, on the average, 11 students each semester from various seminaries

No law says politics must remain corrupt

John Ed Pearce

By John Ed Pearce
(for the Shakertown Roundtable)

It is an old saying that politics are the damndest in Kentucky. That is probably no longer true; other states are just as bad. But there is no denying that an out-dated, often corrupt political system continues to be a drawback to progress.

And if Kentucky wants more industry, better schools and modern government services, it will have to clean up its political house. That was the message heard consistently at the recent conference of the Shakertown Roundtable studying the condition of Kentucky.

Kentucky's problems aren't unique. Other states have money and school problems as deep as ours.

Shakertown Roundtable

Others suffer worse corruption, some have voter turnouts just as low, constitutions almost as bad.

On the other hand, a lot of states have been showing remarkable progress in the quality of government lately, rewriting their constitutions, overhauling their legislatures, modernizing state agencies. Kentucky's future all depends on which course Kentucky wants to take.

Kentucky does have an unusually light voter turnout. Even in the Democratic primary, which usually decides the races for high state office, fewer than half of the voters usually vote, well below the national average. The political structure imposed by the constitution is largely to blame for this. Some kind of election is held every six months in Kentucky, a schedule that asks voters to stay interested in too many elections, many of them involving unknown people running for obscure offices. Absentee voters find the voting process discouraging.

Rise of rich amateur

Furthermore, the voters are seldom clear about what they are voting for. The Republican party is so weak that it is seldom a major factor in state races. Democrats in the past split into factions which usually proposed a few solid issues, but the factions have pretty well disappeared. Rich amateurs have dominated the scene lately, and it is often hard to tell by their platforms, such as they are, whether they are Democrats or Republicans. As a result there is very little ideology involved in elections. The candidates don't stand for much as far as policy is concerned.

The emergence of the rich amateur is a troubling aspect of state government. It is hard to mount an affective campaign against a wealthy candidate able and willing to spend millions, and who can get other millions from those wanting something from government. We have just had an election in which two millionaires spent millions to be elected governor and lieutenant governor.

It is hard for the average man to run against a campaign that can afford a flood of TV commercials, national campaign experts, pollsters and advisors. These experts base the campaign not on what the candidate believes but what polls indicate that the people want to hear. They give the voter a parade of 30-second commercials on which to base their selection, commercials that tell little about what the candidate has done, believes in or intends to do in office. This discourages not only voter interest but voter participation.

Campaign spending is increased by the fact that candidates can and do hold fund-raisers to pay off election debts after they have won elections. These fund raisers are little more than an invitation to powerful interests to buy influence with the new official. Political Action Committees that are legally able to contribute unlimited amounts to candidates have an obvious advantages over individuals or issue groups in gaining influence with candidates.

Too many county elections, and the absence of real issues, encourage corruption, vote buying, vote stealing, and abuses at polling places. Last year a school bus driver declared himself blind so that a precinct worker could go into the voting booth with him and show him how to vote. In another county a school superintendent defended his buying of votes.

Such practices perpetuate dishonest, inefficient machines, make people distrust government, and discourage honest people from seeking office or taking part in elections. There is no sense in making a costly campaign or working for an honest candidate when you know the voting is rigged and the election will be stolen.

What can be done?

Such things help to keep counties poor and backward. A big company can afford to finance the campaign of a candidate who will promise to keep down taxes on company property, robbing the county of money it needs to deliver needed services.

The trouble is that people finally assume that nothing can be done. But it can. Campaign spending can be limited to give not-rich candidates a chance. Contributions from PACs can be limited. Post-election fund raisers can be prohibited. Honest election laws can be enforced, if the Registry of Election Finance is given enough money and enforcement power. A few prison terms would do a lot to discourage vote buying and crooked counting. The constitution, which saddles Kentucky with too many counties, too many elections and too many offices, could be revised.

There is nothing that other states have been doing that Kentucky can't do. The state legislature has already shown that it can modernize its operation. If Kentuckians demand modern government, they can get it. Or they can continue with the corrupt, undemocratic, money-wasting system they have.

Census Bureau Will Collect Data Here

The Census Bureau will visit area residents the week of April 18-23 to collect data on employment and unemployment, according to William F. Hill, director of the bureau's Charlotte regional office. Interviewers also will collect data on child support payments and alimony receipt.

The local labor force data will contribute to April's national employment and unemployment picture to be released May 6 by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The data from February showed a national civilian unemployment rate of 5.7 percent, meaning that 6.9 million workers out of a labor force of 121.3 million did not have jobs.

Information supplied by individuals to the Census Bureau is kept confidential by law. Only statistical totals are published.

Prune Fruit Trees Annually For Consistent Good Results

Only through annual pruning can fruit tree growers expect a tree to develop and produce the maximum amount of quality fruit.

Pruning should be done during the dormant season after danger of winter injury is over and before the buds begin full bloom.

That means, said Gerald Brown, Extension horticulturist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, that right now might be a good time.

"Trees of five years of age or less are more susceptible to winter injury," Brown said, "so save these for last. Start pruning the older trees first."

Although some of the oldest trees can be pruned safely in February, it often is better to wait until late winter or early spring, he said.

"The rule of thumb is to prune as late as possible, since pruning makes the tree more subject to injury if a late freeze should occur," Brown said.

By waiting until early spring, the grower can determine the amount of winter injury more accurately and prune accordingly.

For example, if a large percentage of fruit buds has been killed, the tree may need only very light pruning. But if most buds have survived, the pruning should be heavier.

"A tree that shows severe winter injury to the wood portions of its trunk should be pruned very lightly or not at all in the spring," Brown said.

New trees should be pruned when planted, no matter what training system is used. The central trunk of the tree should be headed back to a height of about 30 inches on one-year-old trees.

"When fruit trees are dug and shipped, they lose a large percentage of the roots they had in the nursery," Brown said. "A tree not pruned to adjust the root-to-shoot ratio has a much poorer chance of survival. Even if it survives, it normally will have very weak growth the first season."

Dormant Sprays For Fruit Disease Control

Timely spraying is required to protect Kentucky fruit trees from injury by diseases.

There are several diseases of fruit crops where a single dormant spray will control the disease or where the dormant spray is an important first step to assist in disease control.

Peach leaf curl and plum pockets are two diseases which can be conquered with a single application of liquid lime-sulfur applied anytime before the peach or plum buds begin to swell in the spring. Now would be good time for this application, said Richard Stuckey, Extension plant pathologist with University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Peach leaf curl causes leaf blades to pucker and curl while turning yellow red or purple, Stuckey said. Plum pockets cause plum shoots to appear bulbous, swollen and often twisted and curled.

"Over a period of years, premature defoliation from these diseases can seriously weaken the trees," Stuckey said.

This week would be a good time to use liquid lime-sulfur on raspberry and blackberry plants as a first step to prevent anthracnose disease, he said. Anthracnose causes light grayish spots on young shoots in the spring, and when badly infected the fruit canes may be girdled or cracked.

"When stalks are infected, the fruit withers while still green," he said.

Additional sprays will be needed during the growing season. In addition, growers can improve their disease control by removing and burning old, infected canes.

A liquid lime-sulfur spray applied around the first of April to cherry and plum trees will assist in controlling black knot, but the spray should not be relied on for total control, Stuckey said. The most effective control is to prune away all the galls. Sprays during the growing season are not effective.

A dormant spray of copper sulfate should be applied to apple and pear trees by the first of April to improve control of fireblight disease. Fireblight can be a devastating disease that kills blossoms, fruiting spurs and entire branches, limbs and trees when severe.

Growers also can use bloom sprays such as streptomycin sulfate during the growing season and, as in black knot, they should remove the infected tissues.

State Awarded $534,664 For Mine Safety, Health

Kentucky has been awarded $534,664 from the Labor Department's Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) for its mine safety and health programs.

"State governments are well suited to administer programs that focus on the safety, health and training needs of local mining communities," said David C. O'Neal, deputy assistant secretary for mine safety and health.

"While the federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 allows states to use grant funds for various purposes, most have chosen to use them for education and training. With mines becoming more mechanized and complex, today's miners have to know a lot more than the previous generation in order to work safely. Good health and safety training is vital in preventing accidents."

The grants are determined by the number of mines in each state and the state's plan for conducting mine safety and health activities. The grants program, first authorized by the federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969, was started in 1971.

Funding for Kentucky, which has 1,546 mines, is for Fiscal Year 1988 (October 1987 through September 1988).

For further general information about MSHA's state grants program or information on the activities of specific state participants, interested persons should phone Robert Glatzer, State Grants Program, MSHA; telephone (703) 235-8264.

Brown Rice: Twice As Nice

From the American Institute for Cancer Research

Rice is a worldwide food source, a staple in the diet of most nations. A part of many cultures for more than 5,000 years, rice was introduced to the North American continent in the late 17th century. Millions of tons of rice are now grown in the U.S. each year, although much of it is exported.

Whole grain (brown) rice is a good source of fiber, vitamins and minerals. Yet brown rice represents only about one percent of the rice consumed in this country; the remaining 99 percent is milled and polished white or long grain rice.

White rice is simply brown rice which has been put through a milling process. This process strips the rice of its husk, bran and germ, taking most of the fiber and leaving it with very little nutritional value. Most processed rice is therefore "enriched" to add back some of the lost vitamins and minerals. However, the fiber cannot be restored, and thus processed rice is lacking in that important element when compared to brown rice.

People who have tried brown rice find that it is chewier, stickier and nuttier in flavor than white rice. It can be used in virtually any rice recipe, from pilaf to pudding, and is not difficult to prepare.

In a pan with a well-fitting lid, place 2 1/4 cups of water and 1 cup of brown rice. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat to a simmer, stir, cover tightly, and cook at a low simmer for about 45 minutes, or until all the liquid is absorbed. If desired, when done cooking, turn off the heat, fluff the rice with a fork, then let it stand, covered, for 10 minutes more. This will yield four cups of rice.

The following is an unusual dish whose white and orange colors can add visual interest to a meal. The sweet papayas and mangoes add an exciting tropical flavor, as well as beta-carotene, a form of vitamin A that has been shown to lower cancer risk.

CARIBBEAN ISLAND RICE

1 cup uncooked brown rice
1 cup orange juice
1 cup chicken broth or low-sodium bouillon

1/4 tsp. ground white pepper
1 1/2 tsp. margarine

2 cups peeled papayas or mangoes
Combine juice, rice, broth and seasonings in medium saucepan. Bring to a boil, stir once or twice. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 45 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. While rice cooks, dice papayas or mangoes. When rice is ready, stir in margarine and papayas or mangoes. Peaches may also be used.

This recipe yields about 6 one-cup servings, with 150 calories and one gram of fat per serving.

The material in "Good Food/Good Health" is reviewed by Karen Collins, M.S., R.D., of the American Institute for Cancer Research, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Blacksmith Workshop Offered At Marshall

West Virginia Blacksmith Jeff Fetty will be at Marshall University Tuesday and Wednesday, April 12 and 13, for a workshop and lecture, both are free to interested members of the community, according to Robert Hutton, professor of sculpture and design.

Fetty, one of only three professional blacksmiths in the state, will be in the Sorrel Sculpture Annex, 20th Street, during classes from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., and from 6 to 9 p.m., when he will teach the basic procedures of sculpting steel by means of the forging process, discussing tools, set-up and basic manipulations relating to contemporary sculpture. Included will be rod, bar and sheet steel shaping and attention to the role of design in objects we encounter every day and an appreciation for well-created, functional objects.

Working as a full-time blacksmith at his Leaning Oak Forge near Spencer in Roane County, Fetty differentiates between his work and that of a farrier, who specializes in shoeing horses.

On Wednesday he will lead an informal, practice session for those interested from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m.

The evening lecture will be at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, in the Birke Art Gallery, Smith Hall first floor.

For more information please call the Art Department at 304-696-6760.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: I had radiation treatment for acne 35 years ago. I'm now 51 and my doctor told me that I am at higher risk of thyroid problems and even, thyroid cancer because of this exposure. She told me not to worry because thyroid cancer grows slowly and is usually curable. She said I don't need any tests but she would like to examine my thyroid every year or two. Can you tell me what symptoms I should watch for? Are there any tests I should be having to catch this early? Can you tell me why I am at higher risk?

ANSWER: Persons who received x-ray treatments (not to be confused with x-rays for diagnosis) to the head and neck region as children have a greater risk of developing cancer of the thyroid from five to 50 years later. About 26 percent of persons who were treated by x-rays during childhood will have some kind of thyroid problem; only about 6 percent will develop cancer of the thyroid gland.

Between the late 1920s and the early 1950s, when doctors didn't know the danger of x-ray treatments for these conditions, many children and teenagers were treated with x-rays for benign diseases such as acne, enlarged tonsils and adenoids or enlarged thymus glands. Now years later, the risk is well known and x-ray treatments are reserved for serious diseases like cancer, where the benefits outweigh the risk.

Most tumors of the thyroid gland are found when the doctor palpates (feels) the thyroid or the neck area—long before a person would be likely to notice symptoms. Symptoms a person may notice as the tumor grows are: enlargement of the neck, a lump in the neck, difficulty in swallowing or breathing, or hoarseness. Further testing is not needed unless a person has symptoms or the doctor suspects a problem. Exams of the thyroid continue every one or two years.

For more information concerning thyroid cancer/x-rays, call the Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER or write McDowell Cancer Network, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536. The Cancer Information Service is a program of the Kentucky Cancer Information Service.

...About Your Social Security

By JIM KELLY
Social Security District Director
For the Big Sandy Area

Longer Reentitlement Period For Disabled

A recent change in the law has extended the period during which benefits may be automatically reinstated for Social Security disability beneficiaries who return to work but are unable to keep working because of their disability, according to Jim Kelly, Social Security District Director for the Big Sandy Area. The reentitlement period increased from 15 to 36 months, as of January 1, 1988.

"This should be a tremendous help to disabled beneficiaries who want to attempt work but are fearful of losing their benefits if their impairment forces them to stop working," Kelly said. "Under this rule, they will be able to receive a benefit check for any month during the reentitlement period that they are unable to perform substantial gainful work."

Social Security disability benefits are paid to people who have a physical or mental disability which is expected to keep them from engaging in any substantial gainful activity for at least a year or to result in death. Benefits start with the 6th full month after the onset of disability.

To help disabled Social Security beneficiaries who wish to return to work, the law provides a trial work period of up to 9 months (not necessarily consecutive) during which they continue to receive disability benefits regardless of the amount of their earnings. Social Security may find that a beneficiary is no longer disabled in the first month he or she engages in substantial gainful activity after the trial work period. If so, the beneficiary receives benefits for that month and the following 2 months.

It is very important that any person receiving disability benefits report any work immediately to the Social Security office.

"A person who must stop working during the automatic reentitlement period because of his or her disability may resume receiving benefits without filing a new application. All the person has to do is let us know and benefits can start right up again," Kelly said. "Also, as under the old law, Medicare may continue for at least 39 months after the trial work period."

The automatic reentitlement rule is just one of a number of Social Security provisions designed to make it easier for disabled beneficiaries to return to work. The change is included in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, enacted December 22, 1987.

Kelly said anyone wanting more information about Social Security, Supplemental Security Income, or Black Lung can contact the Big Sandy Area Social Security office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in the local telephone directory under U.S. Government. The people there will be glad to answer any questions.

Early Spring Landscape Care

After winter, landscape plants need attention to help keep diseases at bay during the growing season ahead, according to John Hartman, University of Kentucky Extension plant pathologist.

"Pruning and spraying landscape plants can start the growing season right," Hartman said.

Hartman provides this list of chores that need to be completed in late March or early April before bud swell.

Oak and maple trees: a single application of ferbam or fixed copper spray before bud swell will help prevent leaf blight.

Elm: remove and destroy all dead elm trees to help prevent spread of Dutch elm disease.

Hawthorn and crabapple: if possible, remove any nearby common juniper and red cedar trees that may harbor cedar-apple, cedar-hawthorn, and cedar-quince rust.

Flowering pear and crabapple: prune out all twigs that were infected with fire blight. Spray copper sulfate on twigs and branches before bud break.

Pine: prune out all dead branches and cones infected with diplopodia tip blight. (Infected cones have tiny, black pimple dots on their exterior.)

Spruce, redbud, rhododendron: cut out all dead twig tips and branches.

Cedar: prune out any galls to prevent problems for nearby hawthorn and crabapple trees.

Flowering plum, cherry, and peach: spray twigs and branches with ferbam or fixed copper before buds swell to help prevent leaf curl disease.

For more information about spring care of landscape plants, contact your county Extension agent for agriculture.

Youthful Tigers Have Everyone Hopeful Of Equal Chance

When basketball fans in the 15th region think about Paintsville High School they remember the three consecutive regional titles. When those same fans think of football, Paintsville's past dominance on the Single A level flashes up on the big memory board.

But baseball, well dominance and regional titles go hand in hand. Baseball in the 15th region has long belonged in the Tigers' dugout. And they haven't shared their own crown much. In the past 17 years Paintsville has won 75 percent of their baseball games. Their worst year was in 1983 when they went 12-12. Since then, though, Paintsville has compiled a 110-35 record and won two regional titles.

"They should be respectable," Allen Central coach Donnie Daniels said of Paintsville. "They have the tradition, and they are always fundamentally strong, but I think their youth will hurt them some."

"I think they will be a good ball club," says Mike Collins of Johnson Central. "They won't be anything like they have been, but they've got some good pictures back. They've got three of the best pitchers in the region."

Maybe and possibly aren't words Paintsville is used to hearing when it comes time to answer the question of their baseball abilities. But it is a fact of baseball life in the region, and everyone is more than willing to take advantage of it.

"It will be more so than it has been," Collins said of the possibilities of a balanced region. "I think Prestonsburg has a lot of talent back, and Betsy Layne should be a strong club. Allen Central could also be up there near the top. There are about six or seven teams that are about equal."

"I think there could be six or seven teams that have a chance of winning it," Daniels said. "It's a tossup really."

Daniels mentions his own team, along with Betsy Layne, Prestonsburg, Johns Creek, Pikeville, and Magoffin County as some of the contenders. Betsy Layne returns seven starters from last year's team that lost to Paintsville in the regional tournament finals. The Bobcats, after losing their top two pitchers, have added transfers Mark Tipton and Glen Hammond to their staff. Hopes are high that they can fill the hole on the mound.

Prestonsburg has the top pitching staff in the region and Allen Central lost only two players from a team that won 10 of its last 14 games a year ago.

And just how good can Johns Creek be. They lost to Prestonsburg in the opening round of the regional tournament, but return most of their players. They averaged close to eight runs per game last year while building a 22-16 record. This season Johns Creek is regarded as one of the best hitting teams in the region. "Johns Creek could be a dominating team with their hitting," Daniels said. "One thru nine, they hit the ball real well. If they're not the best then they are one of the best offensive clubs in the region."

Then there is Magoffin County. They earned respect early in basketball, becoming the region's early favorite, but fell from grace just as rapidly as they had arrived. Baseball has long been their best sport, consistently enjoying winning seasons, but they have lived in Paintsville's shadow, drawing the Tigers in the first round at the district tournament. Last year the Hornets lost to Sheldon Clark in the district, but with a senior oriented team returning, they should be poised to make a run for the regional tournament. Led by pitching star Greg Cole, Magoffin County could cause unexpected trouble for many teams. Cole, a hard throwing right hander, is considered to be the best right handed pitcher in the 15th region.

But there is still one thing to remember when deciding the top teams in the region—Paintsville is the champion and they haven't been uncrowned yet. The Tigers are young, but the Tigers are talented. They have Keith Adkins back, along with Ray Wells. Tucker Howard started last year and so did Jeremy Holbrook. Both of them return to lend some help. Adkins, one of the pitching powers Collins spoke of, was 3-3 last season, but is capable of much more. Wells hit eight homeruns last year, and is one of the more consistent longball threats in the region. Howard, a starting third baseman, hit only .317, but came on late and enjoyed a two for three day against Bud Newsome in the regional finals. He also hit three homeruns last season. Jeremy Holbrook hit over .400 and has enough speed to patrol centerfield with the best of defenders.

The Tigers may be down, and at the worst possible time, but they are still the Paintsville Tigers-regional champs.

Betsy Layne has probably their best talent ever. Allen Central certainly does, and Johns Creek could have too. Prestonsburg is deep in talent and experience, and Pikeville has a strong reputation as a solid baseball program. What happens from now until the time it counts depends on several things. Health, attitude, and timing play a big part.

"It could come down to who gets the breaks and who's playing good baseball at tournament time," Daniels said.

Justice Leads Nine-Hit Show As Blackcats Dump McDowell

Johnny Ray Turner traded in his suit and tie for a pair of yellow coaching shorts and a blue shirt. Now he does his pacing in the third base coaching box instead of a basketball gymnasium.

The move has brought about some questions. Mostly, McDowell fans are wondering if he can once again work his winning magic with a team of lesser known players.

Turner transformed a 7-18 basketball team into a regional contender in his first season, directing the Daredevils to the second best record in the 15th region. But with only three starters returning from last year's squad, baseball brought about additional problems, along with question marks, and a few doubts.

The questions, or at least some of them, were answered in rapid fashion early Tuesday afternoon. A two-run homerun and a perfectly turned double play had McDowell in front of Prestonsburg early. With one out and Henry Webb on second base Mike McQuate launched a one-one fastball over the right field scoreboard to put the Daredevils up 2-0 in the first inning.

In the bottom of the first, after starter Henry Webb walked the first two Blackcat hitters, McDowell came through with some impressive defense. John Stumbo hauled in a pop-up off the bat of Tim Trusty then the Daredevils ended the threat with a 6-4-3 double play.

McDowell had the lead and the momentum, but they held on to neither.

The Blackcats broke out the big bats in the bottom of the second, scored four runs on four hits, and went on to a 14-4 victory. The game was the first of the season for both teams.

Todd Justice, Prestonsburg's junior leftfielder, led the inning off with a bang, taking Webb deep over the right field fence. Designated hitter Freddie McCoy followed with a single and scored when Danny Hamilton's base hit eluded Mike McQuate in center. He scored on a Thomas Nairn triple, and Nairn later scored on a passed ball, putting the Blackcats up 4-2. At about the same time the bats woke up Joey Griffith found his form on the mound. Griffith, a senior southpaw, limited McDowell to only one hit the rest of the way.

The Daredevils managed only two hits in the game, which ended in the bottom of the fifth, but control problems costed Griffith runs in the fourth and fifth innings. The leftlander issued a free pass to McQuate in the fourth, and gave up a run scoring double to Dickie Joe Shannon.

McDowell scored their other run in the fifth when Scott Tackett walked, stole second, and scored on the same play as Darrell Sparks' throw went into centerfield, and on by Johnny Ray Harris. Griffith, though, had enough to earn the win. In five innings of work he gave up two hits while striking out five and walking four. Three of the four runs were earned.

Henry Webb suffered the McDowell loss. The junior righthander worked four innings, gave up nine runs on nine hits, and walked four batters. Webb gave way to Scott Tackett in the fifth. Tackett also found throwing strikes a difficult task and surrendered five runs without giving up a hit. Four errors and five wild pitches didn't help his effort any.

The Blackcats, with their five fifth-inning runs, built their lead to 10, enforcing the mercy rule. Eight of the 10 Prestonsburg hitters who went to the plate got hits, with Todd Justice leading the way, clubbing a solo homerun and a double to deep left centerfield.

Johnny Ray Harris, Craig Tucker, and Thomas Nairn all scored two runs each for the Blackcats. Mike McQuate crossed the plate twice for McDowell.

The two teams played another game yesterday evening but no score was available at press time.

The Sporting Times Martin, May Score Five As Rebels Hold Off Pikeville

Are you missing college basketball yet? Good, you're a baseball fan through and through. That's nice, but baseball, it seems, just can't provide what basketball did. Monster media fights!

Great isn't it, to read where grown men eat each other up with the printed word. Nice to know that in America we can hate the opposition and try to destroy their character and ability just to get one up on them while following college students across the nation. And what's worse, we love to destroy the ones we follow the most.

Sort this one out if you can. A major newspaper follows the University of Kentucky's every basketball move, put all of it in print, then make money by selling it to always starving fans. This is fine and dandy. It's called sports coverage.

But all of a sudden a story appears out of the darkest areas of the lockerroom, bringing with it a message of devastation, but a message everyone already knows, that is concrete in nothing but self punishment. And to make matters worse, the paper does a followup asking why the NCAA didn't suspend the University of Kentucky. Oh yea, and then a followup to the followup criticizing the NCAA for not handing out some sort of punishment. Kind of reminds me of my little pony. Evertime I fed him he would bite me. I still loved that pony even though he tried to inflict pain upon me, but soon I learned not to feed him. Yea boy, cut his meal ticket off. He didn't get a free ride anytime he wanted it. Sure, someone supplied him, but not in the caring manner I once had. But it is those incapable of reason who chomp on the hand that feeds it.

Anyway, nothing came of the story, no suspension or anything like that, and the Big Blue went on as scheduled. There may be something to the story of green hand shakes and the lot, but the schools are getting rich. Might the people making them financially stronger deserve a free steak now and again. This kept us entertained for a while, but it all took a ride in the backseat when sports writers began giving each other some attitude adjustments of a written form.

Jerry Tipton, a writer who follows the Cats, and quite nicely it should be added, jumped all over a fellow Kentucky follower, and member of the media, Bob Watkins. As the story goes, and it's a nice one even though it's old, Watkins asked Eddie Sutton if he thought LSU would have an added incentive because of the death of a former player. Tipton evidently thought the question was embarrassing to the profession and took revenge, telling his reading audience just how stupid it was. But Watkins didn't throw in the ink pen, resign his position, and give up the column he writes each week. No way. He just passed the dumb question rap on to Ralph Hacker.

As this story goes, Hacker asked Rex Chapman, after Kentucky had just been eliminated by Villanova, if he was planning to move on to the NBA. Chapman's unclear answer sent a terror throughout the state, caused a panic among UK fans, and provoked Watkins to the point that he criticized Hacker publicly. It was a stupid question, Watkins wrote, calling down Kentucky's beloved, but sometimes controversial radio announcer.

Chapman later cleared up the matter, saying that he was looking forward to a good junior year at UK. This brought relief to all Big Blue backers, even more so than the non-probation decision from that terrific bunch that make up the ruling body of the NCAA.

Thanks guys, for nothing, especially the suspension nothing.

It's easy to criticize. And it's even more appealing when the chance comes to jump on the competition's case. But take this tip to heart. Don't criticize. It only hurts, and twice as much when it comes back home. Don't say anything unless you have something positive to say. You notice I haven't mentioned Dick Vitale lately. The best thing about this whole mess is that it's over. Discarded to the back of the press room, waiting until next fall when the pressures of UK basketball begins all over again.

Baseball is upon us, and if you want controversy now you'll have to pick up a copy of Esquire or Gentlemen's Quarterly. That's where the fun is. That's where Daryl Strawberry and Ozie Smith are dumping on managers and teammates. It was nice while it lasted. Now it's time to relax, enjoy a good pitcher's duel, and follow the flight of the Major Leagues.

Well yea, there is still the question of recruiting. But we're only interested in Ritchie Farmer, and where he will go.

Come on Eddie, nobody is pressuring you. We just want the Cats to have the best point guard in the nation. Forget that he is from Eastern Kentucky. Remember his incredible talent.

Jerry, Bob, and Ralph, you guys take it easy. But compile your notes. We'll all be reading again come November. But relax, to be good you only have to satisfy your readers, not the opposition.

Covering Kentucky basketball is itself enough for an interesting story. And stupid questions, we've all been asking them since we taught ourselves the personally incriminating thing called talking.

Oh yea, the baseball is juiced up this year. Remember, you heard it here first.

BACK TO THE BAG: Allen Central's Rady Martin heads back to first base during Monday's game. Martin, a junior third baseman, scored three runs as the Rebels beat Pikeville.

Martin, May Score Five As Rebels Hold Off Pikeville

It started out the way Donnie Daniels wanted, but by the seventh inning the Allen Central coach was shaking his head in frustration, sometimes even disbelief.

Allen Central scored three runs in the third inning, and added another three spot in the fourth to open up a six-run lead, but struggled in the late innings before disposing of Pikeville 8-6, Monday on the road. But the Rebels suffered a breakdown on defense, committing three errors that led to three unearned runs in the last two innings, allowing Pikeville to get back into contention.

"We're not used to playing on grass this early in the season, playing at Allen Park," Daniels said, making mention of the grass infield of Pikeville's as compared to the dirt field at Allen Park has.

"I think that had a lot to do with our defense. But it didn't hurt us on that run-down. We just messed that up."

The rundown that ran afoul came in the sixth inning when Allen Central trapped Robbie Wright off third base, but allowed him to get back safely. The Rebels then caught Shane Hall in between first and second. A dropped throw followed by a bad throw allowed Wright to score, Hall to go to second, and Chris Lawson, who was on second, to go to third.

Wright's run was the third of the sixth inning, and trimmed Allen Central's advantage to 8-4. But with two out and runners on second and third, Nathan Shelton, the Rebels' starting pitcher, snuffed out the rally by getting cleanup hitter Robbie Simpson to hit back to the box. Shelton, with a complete game performance, recorded the win while starter Doug Willett was tagged with the Pikeville loss. A senior left hander, he worked seven innings, giving up six runs on seven hits while striking out seven and walking seven. He also hit one batter.

"He pitched behind a lot, but I don't think he really had control problems," Daniels said of his ace hurler. "I thought he pitched a good game, four unearned runs out of the six."

Shelton surrendered only one hit in the first four innings, but had to work out of trouble in the third and fourth innings, leaving five Panther runners on base during that stretch. Pikeville reached Shelton in the latter innings though. Wright, who went two for three with two runs scored, singled and scored in the fifth and again in the sixth to spark the comeback. But by the time the Panthers got to within striking distance, Shelton slammed the scoring door, retiring Donald Bentley on a ground ball to second and striking out Matt Blair to retire the side in the seventh inning.

Willitt, a lanky sophomore, pitched two and one-thirds innings and was tagged with the loss. The Pikeville starter gave up only one hit, a first inning double by Darren Conn, but walked six hitters. Willitt walked the bases loaded in the second inning, but kept the Rebels from scoring by getting Todd Duff to ground into a force play. Again in the third inning he lost sight of the strike zone. This time it proved fatal.

Darren Conn led the inning off with a walk, stole second, went to third when Kevin Webb grounded out to second. Conn scored on an error that allowed Mickey Parsons to reach base. Willitt then loaded the bases with back to back free passes to Rady Martin and Jamie May. Donald Bentley replaced Willitt on the mound, proceeded to strike out Robbie Click, but Randy Handsford reached the Panther right hander for a single, bringing home both Parsons and Martin.

Roberts Runs Strong In Two Weekend Races

Rick Roberts, of Allen, who finished 6th overall in Huntington, W. Va. out of 186 entrants in the Heart and Sole 5K on March 26, came home to Eastern Kentucky to race this weekend.

Roberts outdueled Kevin Martin in a two second victory in the Tiger Easter Run 1 mile in 4:47. An hour later Roberts came from fourth place to finish second overall in the 5K run. Roberts caught Marshall University's Tim Caudill and Kevin Martin to finish in 16:03 over the 3.1 mile course.

Catlettsburg's Joe Barker won the race in 15:22 his fourth victory in the Tri-State area in as many weeks. The third and fourth place spots belonged to Caudill and Martin, respectively in 16:14 and 16:23.

Rocco Pascarella of Betsy Layne finished 12th overall in 19:42 to win second in his 21-30 age group. Debbie Coleman of Elkhorn City won the women's division in 23:40.

Roberts signed a contract with Nikel Athletic Attic to race on their team. Barker, Caudill, and Roberts swept the team competition with a one, two, three finish overall. The Huntington based team will be in action again this weekend in Pikeville in the Citizen's Bank 10K Run, Eastern Kentucky's premier road race.

Allen Central, up 3-0, scored three more times in the fifth inning, two of them coming on an error by shortstop Chris Lawson. Martin, who scored three of Allen Central's runs, walked to lead the inning off, and went to second on a Jamie May single, one of his two hits in the game.

Both runners moved up a base on a pitch that got by catcher Sean Neeley, and they scored when Robbie Click hit a grounder that Lawson failed to handle. Click later scored to give the Rebels a 6-0 advantage.

Allen Central scored their other two runs in the sixth inning as May, two for three and two runs scored, tripled home Martin, who had earlier singled, and later stole home on a missed squeezed play. The Rebels finished the game with only six hits, but took advantage of Panther control problems by drawing 10 walks. May was the only Rebel hitter with more than one hit, and Handsford, known more for his glove than his bat, drove in two runs.

The game was the first of the season for both teams, but Daniels hopes it will make people believe that his team is to be taken as a serious contender in the 15th region.

"I still think everybody is underestimating us," the second year coach said after the game. "We still have to prove ourselves, which is alright with me. Maybe if we prove ourselves enough then people will quit underestimating us."

SHORT SPORTS

Hersey Hawkins led the nation in scoring. He also averaged almost eight rebounds per game. In his career he brought national attention to a school that had rarely been mentioned outside Peoria, Illinois. But not until this past weekend did the 6'3" guard, who played center in high school, receive his just due.

Hawkins, Saturday afternoon, was honored as the Associated Press's Player of the Year, as voted by sports-writers across the nation. Hawkins, who averaged over 36 points per game, easily outdistanced Kansas forward Danny Manning to win the Adolph Rupp Award. Hawkins received 223 votes to Manning's 89. Danny Ferry of Duke and Mark Macon of Temple each got 28 votes to finish in a tie for third.

J.R. Reid, North Carolina's sensational sophomore, received only one vote for the award. Rex Chapman of Kentucky was runner-up.

Reds Watch '88

Soto's Debut Saved As Big Bats Bring Cincinnati Back

Pete Rose said it was the story of spring training, the comeback of Mario Soto, but the Cincinnati righthander will have to wait a while for the final successful chapter.

Soto, after battling arm problems for two years, enjoyed a solid spring, so solid that his manager chose him to be the Reds' opening day pitcher. But Soto's day was spoiled by Breckinridge Training High School graduate Joe Magrane. Magrane, a former resident of Morehead, drilled a three-run homerun off Soto in the top of the fourth, putting St. Louis up at that point 4-1.

Soto lasted five innings, giving up four runs, three of which were earned. The veteran righthander walked four and struck out only one before giving way to Jose Rijo with the Reds trailing 4-1. But St. Louis committed two errors, and Cincinnati reached Magrane, the Cardinals' starting pitcher, for two runs in the sixth, and tied the game in the seventh. In the meantime the Reds' bullpen picked up where it left off last season, held the Cardinals scoreless the rest of the way, allowing Cincinnati to pull out a 5-4 win in the bottom of the 12th inning.

Rijo, acquired from Oakland in the Dave Parker deal, worked two scoreless innings, as did Rob Murphy and John Franco. Pat Perry, the fifth Reds' pitcher, pitched a shutout inning in the 12th to get the win.

Cincinnati won the game in the bottom of the 12th inning when Kal Daniels singled up the middle to score Jeff Treadway with two out. Treadway had earlier singled and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt. Bob Forsh suffered the loss for St. Louis.

The Reds, after falling behind in the fourth, started their road back in the sixth inning. Kal Daniels hit a one out, opposite field homerun, pulling Cincinnati to within two.

Tracy Jones, Reds rightfielder later scored on a throwing error to make the score 4-3. The Reds, who had four hits in the first three innings but none the next two and two-thirds, tied the score in the seventh, sending Magrane to the dugout and saving Soto from a loss.

Chris Sabo, a rookie third baseman, singled, stole second, and eventually scored on a Bob Horner throwing error.

With Sabo on second Jeff Treadway, another rookie, laid a bunt down the first baseline. Horner fielded the grounder, but threw wildly to first, allowing Sabo to cross the plate with the tying run.

The win was Cincinnati's sixth opening day victory of the 1980s and it came after the Reds blew early scoring chances. In each of the first three innings they had their leadoff hitter reach base, but scored only once.

Barry Larkin and Dave Concepcion led the first inning off with back to back singles, but watched as Magrane, 9-7 last season, enticed Daniels to hit into a double play, and Eric Davis to fly out. In the second inning Tracy Jones led off with a single, went to second on a balk, but died there as Bo Diaz struck out. Sabo filed out, and Soto grounded back to the mound. As Soto back tracked in the baseline, Magrane threw home to catch Jones trying to score.

Larkin, in the third, again led an inning off with a single. But this time the Reds managed to score. The righthanded hitting shortstop went to second on a balk, and stole third. He eventually scored when Daniels hit into his second double play of the day. But Daniels eventually got his revenge. So did the Reds, but Soto will have to wait until his next start, which will come this weekend against division foe Houston.

Cincinnati will wrap up their three-game series against the Cardinals tonight and Thursday afternoon. Danny Jackson, 8-15 with Kansas City last year, pitches for the Reds tonight. St. Louis will send Jose DeLeon to the mound. Jackson, a hard-throwing southpaw, was acquired from the Royals in exchange for shortstop Kurt Stillwell and pitcher Ted Power.

Thursday afternoon, in a Business Day game at 12:30, lefthander Tom Browning duels Danny Cox.

The Reds remain home this weekend for a three-game series with Houston before leaving Riverfront for a series against San Francisco. The Giants won the Western Division last year, and have been picked by many to repeat.

Notes: Reserve outfielder Eddie Milner admitted to a slip in his battle with cocaine. The speedy center fielder sat out several months, but was considered clean when he played for San Francisco last season. Cincinnati acquired Milner during the off season, but will be without his services the first part of the year. Milner admitted to using cocaine again, last week...third baseman Buddy Bell will be out for the next couple of weeks due to knee problems. Bell is expected to return to the starting lineup later this month. Rookie Chris Sabo is filling in at the hot corner...Monday's crowd of 55,438 was the biggest opening day crowd in Cincinnati's history. They were treated to a 12 inning affair that lasted almost four hours.

SHORT SPORTS

In a different selection process from a different organization, CBS sports announcers voted Danny Manning the Chevrolet Player of the Year.

Manning, a 6'10" forward, averaged 24 points and 10 rebound this season while leading Kansas to the NCAA Championship game.

He first said he would go to Western Kentucky University to play basketball. Last week a change of mind created increased interest in the University of Louisville. A lot has changed and in a short time in the life of Bardstown guard James 'Boo' Brewer. But most of it has been for the best.

Brewer, a 6'3" all-stater, wasn't even supposed to play in Friday night's Kentucky Derby Festival Classic. But an injury created a position for him, and Brewer took the opportunity to up his college stock. He scored a team high 25 points, and a 10 of 13 shooting performance as the South dumped the North, 134-125. Brewer played only 19 minutes, but in that time he also hauled down two rebounds and handed out two assists. He was three for four from three-point distance.

Ritchie Farmer, Clay County's highly regarded guard, scored 14 points for the North squad. He had three rebounds in his 21 minutes of play.

Louisiana Tech trailed by as many as 14 points in the second half, but by the time the final horn sounded the Techsters had earned another women's national title.

Auburn led Louisiana Tech by 12 at halftime, built that lead to 14 early in the second half, but failed to hold it long. With 9:56 left in the game Erica Westbrook stole an Auburn pass, turned it into a layup at the other end, and trimmed the lead to 42-37. Louisiana Tech had another opportunity on the next trip down court to turn a Lady Tiger mistake into points but missed a layup that would have cut the deficit to three.

By the eight-minute mark Auburn had spurred back out to a nine point advantage. But led by Westbrook, Louisiana Tech battled back, took the lead, and pulled out the win in the final minute.

The Techsters took their first lead of the game when Westbrook, who scored 16 of her game high 25 points in the second half, scored again following a steal. Less than a minute remained at that point. Tech held on for a 56-54 win.

The class of '88 will be coming to Prestonsburg High School Friday night when the Kentucky Wildcat seniors take on a team of former UK players.

The graduating seniors include center Rob Lock, Ed Davender, the highest scoring guard ever for Kentucky, starting forward Winston Bennett, and a pair of reserves, Richard Madison and Cedric Jenkins.

The squad of former players include guards Roger Harden and Jim Master. The game, sponsored by the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club, will be held in the Prestonsburg High School Fieldhouse.

Villanova did it in '85. Two years before, North Carolina State had achieved it. Now Kansas has added their name to the Cinderella list of National Champions.

Kansas, Monday night in Kansas City, upset highly favored Oklahoma 83-79 to win the national title. The Jayhawks finished with the most losses ever for a NCAA champ.

Danny Manning, named by many as the country's player of the year, hit four free throws in the final 14 seconds to seal the victory. He finished the game with 31 points, 18 rebounds, and five steals.

Both Kansas and Oklahoma are from the Big Eight, making it only the third time ever that teams from the same conference have met in the finals. Villanova and Georgetown met in '85, and Indiana and Michigan, from the Big Ten, tangled earlier.

The game was tied at 50 when the halftime horn sounded, making the first 20 minutes the highest scoring half of any in a championship game. Kansas hit 22 of 31 shots in the first half while the Sooners scored 15 points off offensive rebounds.

Beautiful Baseball— Its Diamonds Are Forever

By INK MENDELSON
Smithsonian News Service

I love baseball, you know it doesn't have to mean anything, it's just very beautiful to watch.—Woody Allen, from the movie "Zelig"

At times, suitors can't get to first base. Periodically, politicians play hardball. Often, business managers give ballpark figures. And always, at winter's end, like an airborne outfielder straining to snatch the ball before it soars over the fence and becomes forever a home run, all true baseball fans are climbing the walls until life starts anew and the season begins.

The English language—American division—for more than 100 years has been laced with the imagery of the National Pastime. An early baseball fan, Walt Whitman used to describe a great success as a "home stroke" and spoke of catching things "on the fly." In his later years, Whitman, long before the rest of us, learned the meaning of throwing somebody a curve. When he heard the rumor of a new kind of pitch, Whitman asked a friend if it were true that "the fellow who pitches the ball aims to pitch it in such a way the batter cannot hit it?" Upon learning the awful truth about the curve ball, the poet, thinking such deception unfair and undemocratic in the sport he loved, called it "everything that is damnable."

Baseball has been called "the poet's game" and "the writer's game." A New York State Museum exhibition, "Diamonds are Forever: Artists and Writers on Baseball," reveals that it is the artist's game as well. Organized in association with the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service, the show illuminates the hold of baseball on the American imagination.

"What is it about baseball that fascinates and touches us so deeply? Curator Peter Gordon decided that was the question to be asked by an exhibition about this American institution. But how best to answer it? Inspiration came when he read Fathers Playing Catch With Sons: Essays on Sport (Mostly Baseball) by Donald Hall. Therein he encountered an excerpt from "Hub Fans Bid Kid Adieu," John Updike's essay recalling Boston Red Sox great Ted Williams' last time at bat at Fenway Park:

He ran as he always ran out home runs—hurriedly, unsmiling, head down, as if our praise were a storm of rain to get out of. He didn't tip his cap. Though we thumped, wept, and chanted "We want Ted" for minutes after he hid in the dugout, he did not come back. Our noise for some seconds passed beyond excitement into a kind of immense open anguish, a wailing, a cry to be saved. But immortality is nontransferable.

"I heard that famous home run," Gordon says, "and later saw it on television, but I didn't remember it like that. Updike elevated my experience." Gordon decided that this well-loved and familiar game could be seen with "new eyes" through the insights of artists and writers. "We stepped back and said, 'Let them do their stuff.'"

"By baseball we join hands with the long line of forefathers and with the dead," New Hampshire Poet Laureate Donald Hall writes in the introduction to the book accompanying the exhibition, Diamonds Are Forever: Artists and Writers on Baseball (Chronicle Books, 1987).

"My grandfather was a New Hampshire farmer—a Democrat, and my father was a Connecticut businessman—a Republican. What they had in common was baseball," Hall says. "I'm a New Hampshire poet, and my son is a New York mathematician. But we can talk about the Yankees and the Red Sox. As poetry does, baseball makes connections, provides a sense of continuity and looks to the future while retaining the past. Baseball, recognizably the game it was 100 years ago, is a touchstone."

When the game we know as baseball was in its infancy in 1855, Walt Whitman counted his pleasures in "Song of Myself": "Upon the race-course, or enjoying picnics or jigs or a good game of base-ball." In 1945, Robert Frost, who celebrated the sport in poetry and prose, was also ready for a good game of baseball.

"I met Frost that summer of '45, in Middlebury, Vt., at Bread Loaf, the writer's conference," Hall remembers. "I was 16 and had been published in three small poetry magazines. He was kind to me. But in the annual softball game, he had to win. He hit a double, this man in his 60's, and ran vigorously to second, competitive as a boy."

"Coach," pleads an eleven-year-old whose back is barely big enough to contain the uniform words, Ken Dixon Chevrolet-Buick-Honda, "somebody's got to help me. Scott just filled my batting helmet with dirt."

This is partly baseball, but mostly growing up, mostly one of those few remaining places where everybody gathers to pass on the tribe's collective sense of itself.—Thomas Boswell, from How Life Imitates the World Series

Be it the home of the Waldorf Little League or Yankee Stadium, the ballpark—the place of baseball—is a matter of passionate preference and a favorite subject in art and literature. "A huge pinball machine designed by a mad sculptor" is Hall's vision of Fenway Park, oldest stadium in the majors. "I love the weird shape of Fenway."

For writers and artists, ballpark, glove, bat and ball are more than a field, a lump of leather, a stick of wood and a cork-rubber-wool-cotton-cowhide sphere. Artist Claes Oldenburg's lithograph "Mitt," its luminous ball nestled intimately in the pocket of a glove, well describes the beauty of one object's natural affinity for another.

...any baseball is beautiful. No other small package comes as close to the ideal in design and utility. It is a perfect object for a man's hand.—Roger Angell, from Five Seasons

Newspaperman Bob Greene was forbidden by his paper to take gifts from an outside source but when he got his own Louisville Slugger in the mail, all bets were off. Writes Greene: "For it is true: a Louisville Slugger, for the American male, is a talisman—a piece of property that carries such symbolic weight and meaning that words of description will not do it justice."

The place and the objects of the National Pastime are invested with magic. And upon a few players, a belief in their superhuman powers and an all-too-fleeting hero worship are bestowed. Some are able to resist time gracefully and remain heroes.

But I must have confidence and I must be worthy of the great DiMaggio who does all things perfectly even with the pain of the bone spur in his heel.—Ernest Hemingway, from The Old Man and the Sea

"The heroes of my youth were ballplayers like Cookie Lavagetto, Pee Wee Reese and Joe DiMaggio," artist Harvey Dinnerstein says. "About 15 years ago, I was commissioned to paint DiMaggio. I had photographs but was influenced by my memories of him when I was a kid. In this painting, I was striving for more than naturalism. In the Winslow Homer tradition, I wanted to portray everyday life on some elevated level."

Dinnerstein was amazed at the reaction to the DiMaggio painting, "The Wide Swing." "It has been the strongest response I've ever gotten to a painting. I couldn't grasp it at the beginning. But baseball evokes that kind of mythic response in the public."

Where have you gone, Joe DiMaggio? A nation turns its lonely eyes to you.—Simon and Garfunkel, from the song "Mrs Robinson"

Even baseball has a literary dark side. But nobody really believes in it. In 1919, the "Black Sox Scandal" threw America a curve when eight members of the Chicago White Sox, including Shoeless Joe Jackson, one of the greatest hitters of all time, were accused of throwing the World Series. "It is likely that he did accept money from gamblers. But throw the Series? Never!" W.P. Kinsella writes in Shoeless Joe.

Gatsby hesitated, then added coolly: "He's the man who fixed the World's Series back in 1919."

"Fixed the World's Series?" I repeated. The idea staggered me. I remembered, of course, that the World's Series had been fixed in 1919, but if I had thought of it at all I would have thought of it as a thing that merely happened, the end of some inevitable chain.—F. Scott Fitzgerald, from The Great Gatsby

Nothing about the action of the game is inevitable. When the ball is hurtled toward glove or bat, for a moment in time the outcome is uncertain. Captured on canvas in one of the exhibition's paintings, Willie Mays leaps backward out of Ron Cohen's vision of his legendary over-the-left-shoulder catch—a victory in a race to the wall with a cowhide comet. And Andy Warhol's portrait of Pete Rose, eyes steady and bat poised, is the picture of a man who could—and did—get more hits than any player in the game's 119-year-old history.

"Did you know that the first professional baseball game was played right here in Cincinnati in 1869?" Pete Rose asked this reporter proudly. "Yes, Pete, by the Red Stockings. But, how about this one? This exhibition is about how artists and writers see baseball. If you were an artist, what image would you use to portray baseball?" The flower of the great game answered, "Uncle Sam." "Okay then, if you were a writer, how would you describe it?" "America Outdoors. A Way of Life."

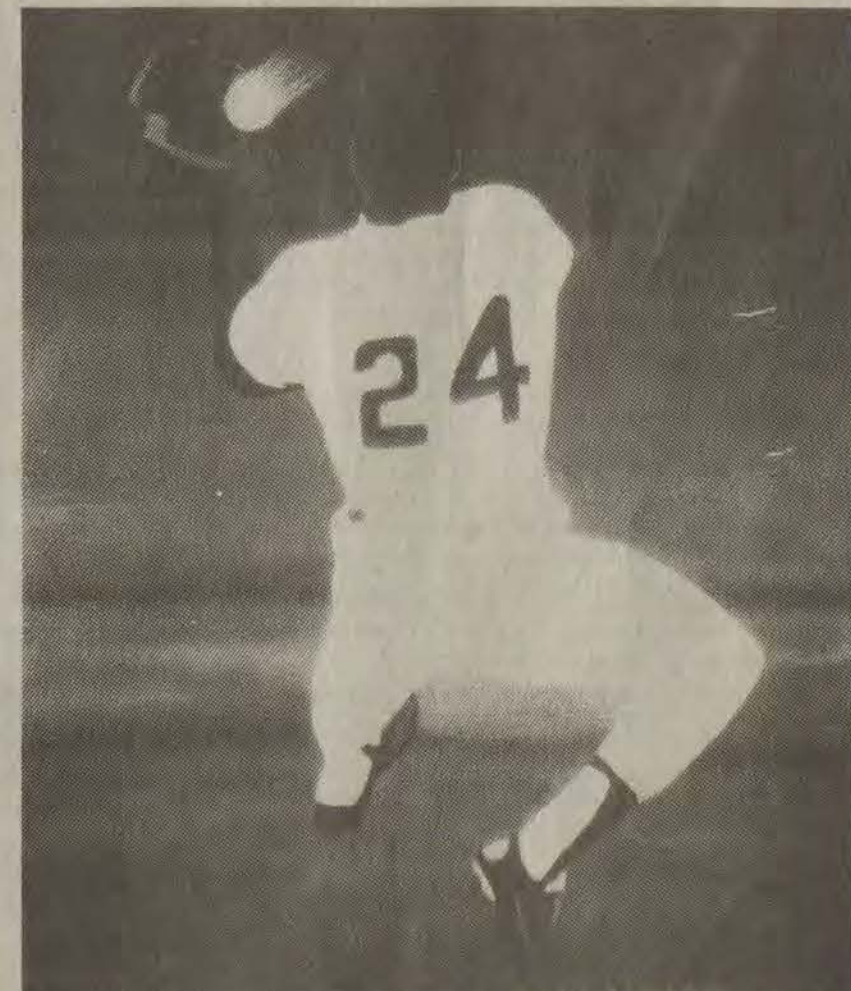

Harvey Dinnerstein's "The Wide Swing" depicts mighty Joe DiMaggio taking his turn at bat. The 1974 work is featured in "Diamonds Are Forever: Artists and Writers on Baseball," an exhibition touring the country.

"Pastime," an All-American artwork painted by Gerald Garston in 1984, is part of a traveling exhibition, "Diamonds Are Forever: Artists and Writers on Baseball."

Andy Warhol's 1985 screenprint, "Pete Rose," captured the ballplayer who is today the leading hitter of all time in total number of hits. The work is featured in "Diamonds Are Forever: Artists and Writers on Baseball."

"Yet May's catch—if, indeed, he was to make it—would dwarf all the others..." Arnold Hano wrote in A Day in the Bleachers. Hano's words and Ron Cohen's painting, "Willie Mays," 1978, illuminate a new exhibition.

SPECIAL SERVICES FEATURE HOLY WEEK
Overflow crowds, good food, and fellowship were some of the outstanding features of the annual Easter Holy Week services, sponsored by the Prestonsburg Ministerial Association and the Local Church Women and held this past week at the Frist Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial). A summary of the week's programs including the pastor and their churches, and persons rendering special music during each of these programs, follows:

On each day following the services, the women of the church, whose pastor brought the message, on that day furnished food for a noon snack, which was served by members of the social committee of the host church in the new dining room there. Members of this committee include: Eva Collins, Jewel Bays, Rhoda Tussey, Lori Click, Anna May Goble, Ruby Garrett, Docia Woods, Myrtle Allen, Peggy Carter, Joy Shepherd, Sarah Laven, Delia Nolan, Carolyn Polk, Betty Hyden, Pam Caudill, Charlene Nunn, Sue Wells, Lois Howard, Ramona Horne, Jennie Bottoms, Judy Burchell, and Isabel Stephens. FAME

'Red River' has made Johnson a Western buff

By Wendy Wallace

For Laura Johnson, the new remake of "Red River," an Old West epic about a cattle drive on the Chisholm Trail, was an interesting venture.

Laura Johnson

"Kate Millay is my first role in a Western," Johnson says. "And she was a woman with substance. I wasn't much of a Western buff before, but I've grown to love them now." In the remake, which airs Sunday, April 10 on CBS, Johnson plays the role created by Joanne Dru in Howard Hawks' 1948 classic, which starred John Wayne and Montgomery Clift.

Set in the 1880s, the film tells of an embittered cowboy, Tom Dunson (James Arness), who is determined to get his vast herd of cattle to market, whatever the cost. With his strong-willed stepson Matthew Garth (Bruce Boxleitner) and several hired hands, including gunfighter Cherry Valance (Gregory Harrison) and former slave Jack Bird (Stan Shaw), Dunson embarks on the grueling 1,000-mile drive from Texas to a railhead in Missouri. The trip soon turns dangerous due to stampedes, bandits and a drought.

Along the route, the cowhands meet Millay, who is on her way West to handle land grants, and help her to fight off an Indian attack. Her presence creates a rift between Garth and Valance.

"As a widow of the Civil War, Kate had to be strong," Johnson says. "I learned to admire her and the people of that period because they were concerned with survival."

A native of Burbank, Calif., Johnson was a student at the American Film Institute when she met actor John Cassavetes, who urged her to consider an acting career. Her first role, in the film "Opening Night" (1978), was followed by appearances on "Dallas" and "Eight Is Enough" and in the TV movies "Fly Away Home" and "Chiller." She played Terry Hartford on "Falcon Crest" (1983-86), and recently guest-starred on "L.A. Law" with her husband, Harry Hamlin.

Johnson also can be seen as surgeon Eve Autry in ABC's "Heart-Beat," a limited-run series about a medical center founded by women.

"I wasn't ready to come back to television," she says of the series. "But I very much wanted to do this. It's something I'm truly proud of."

Conversation turns to real estate on 'Loving'

By Marie Michaels

There's talk of mortgages, adjustable-rate loans and escrow on the set of "Loving," now that two cast members have become homeowners.

Robert Newman

Britt Helfer, who plays "wacko" Lily Slater, and her husband, Robert Newman (Josh Lewis on "Guiding Light"), have bought their dream house in the suburbs. It's hard to believe that this couple, who play such unlikely candidates for suburban life, could be so different from their characters. But they are - and they're thoroughly enjoying the lifestyle.

Ron Nummi, who plays Rick Stewart, is "Loving"'s other new homeowner.

Mark LaMura, who plays Mark Dalton on "All My Children," has also invested his money in real estate - a restaurant, Wilson's Eastside, of which he is now the principal owner. The eatery, located on East 75th Street in New York City, features "new American" cuisine. "The food looks good and you get a lot of it," LaMura says.

Cynthia Gibb, best known by daytime audiences for her portrayal of Suzi Martin on "Search for Tomorrow" (1981-83), has been cast as Karen Carpenter in "The Karen Carpenter Story," a CBS movie now in production. After her departure from daytime, Gibb moved to the syndicated series "Fame."

Congratulations to first-time father Daniel McVicar, who plays (Clarke Garrison) on "The Bold and the Beautiful." McVicar's wife, Darling, recently gave birth to a son, Thomas Henry.

Among the former daytime stars now on nighttime series: Ashley Crowe (who played Beatrice McKechnie on "As the World Turns") is Parker Stevenson's costar on ABC's "Probe," while Tasia Valenza (who played Dottie Thornton on "All My Children") appears in "Supercarrier." And Sam Behrens (who played Jake Meyer on "General Hospital") and Nicholas Coster (who played Lionel Lockridge on "Santa Barbara") are featured in the pilot for a "Facts of Life" spinoff.

William J. Bell, co-creator and head writer of "The Young and the Restless" and "The Bold and the Beautiful," is also branching out into nighttime TV. He is the executive producer of "Mad Ave.," an upcoming CBS series.

'Innocence on Trial' shows the abused, the accused

By Denise Gorga

You know an issue is urgent if TV producers deem it worthy of a made-for-TV movie. Usually, though, it's only after the issue - bulimia, battered wives, AIDS - has been presented as entertainment that we see documentaries explaining the why behind the reality.

In 1984, Ted Danson starred in "Something About Amelia," an ABC movie about child abuse. Last year, public awareness of child abuse was heightened with the death of 6-year-old Lisa Steinberg at the hands of her adoptive father. And on Saturday, April 16, Lifetime addresses this frightening aberration with "Child Abuse: Innocence on Trial."
Child abuse is perhaps the most pressing social concern facing Americans today - more so even than AIDS. While the medical mechanics of the latter elude us, its effects and, to a large extent, tactics for its prevention, are readily apparent. Child abuse, however, remains more ambiguous and explosive because the victim often cannot speak out until the damage is done.

CHEERS
On NBC's "Cheers," airing THURSDAY, APRIL 14, Mrs. Clavin (guest star Frances Sternhagen) reminisces over an album of family pictures while considering selling the family home.

"Innocence on Trial" is narrated by Valerie Harper, who once played the mother on "Valerie," and is a mother herself. She doesn't interact with any of the interviewees; nor does she have a personal account to contribute. Her main function is to link the stories of divorced parents and abused children.
And those are the stories you should want to hear. Listen to a former abused child, now 18, who tells how she can never trust - anyone. Her mother, who fought to protect her, tells of taking the then 4-year-old girl to a doctor, who diagnosed gonorrhea.
"Innocence on Trial" makes a diligent effort to represent all sides of the child-abuse issue. Some accused parents refused comment - but you'll meet an Arkansas father who was wrongly accused by his ex of molesting their daughter, and a plastic surgeon who is being jailed and fined $5,000 a day for not revealing the whereabouts of her allegedly abused 5-year-old.
And chances aren't that slim that you'll see a scenario you'll recognize. In Lifetime's Women's Pulse Poll, one in five of the respondents said they knew a family in which they suspected abuse.
