Board of Education Names Hager to Top Schools Post

By Tim Sizemore

In a four-to-one vote last Wednesday night, the Floyd County Board of Education failed to renew Superintendent Ray Brackett's contract, instead elevating Assistant Superintendent Ronald Hager to the coveted position for a four-year term.

While many were surprised by the board's action, for some the vote was anti-climactic.

"I think they handled it the way they traditionally do," said Charles Collins, vice chairman of the Floyd County Education Forum, who added that the public needed to be informed and participate in the selection process.

While few question Hager's ability to perform the duties of superintendent, many took issue with the board's method of choosing the school system's chief administrator. "The process they use to hire a superintendent is unprofessional. The public should be involved in the selection process," commented Deloris Smith, forum member and co-chairperson of the Floyd Community Partnership Committee.

Outgoing Superintendent Ray Brackett had no comment about his removal, but did praise the public for their support during his administration. "I really appreciate community and citizen support during my tenure as superintendent. It was a key goal of mine to work with them in a cooperative manner," Brackett stated, and went on to say that he, "also appreciated the cooperation of the teaching staff and non-certified personnel.

Brackett indicated he felt that during his two-and-one-half year tenure a lot of progress had been made. "I feel I've done a good job in this school system as attested by the state, and we have taken giant steps," Brackett declared.

At last month's school board meeting, Tom Vinson, of the Kentucky State Department Management team, used terms such as 'remarkable' and 'outstanding' to describe the board and superintendent's efforts in improving the school system.

Brackett assumed the vacated post of former Superintendent E.P. "Pete" Grigsby in September, 1985, amid State School Board threats to take over administration of the school district.

Due to progress made in the system under Brackett, the state takeover did not materialize, although state school officials continued to monitor the system. Robert Spillman, associate superintendent for local services with the state board, said September 18, 1985, "We are not in any way trying to say who the superintendent will be, but we are saying that we want the process to be open with input from citizens, teachers, and staff." Floyd County School Board Chairman Dr. James D. Adams, concurred with Spillman in the meeting, saying the public would be invited to share in choosing a permanent superintendent.

Brackett said he has no plans for the immediate future, beyond working on his farm in Lawrence county, but commented he has received several offers from school systems and the private sector.

CLEAN-UP CONTINUES...Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo was on hand, Tuesday morning, as dump trucks arrived at the county's solid waste landfill at Garth to deposit debris picked up as part of the county-wide clean-up currently under way. Sponsored by the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with the Floyd County Fiscal Court and the City of Prestonsburg, the clean-up effort will continue through Friday. Customers of both Floyd County Solid Waste and Prestonsburg's collection service are encouraged to set out large items on regular trash days. Aimed at removal of larger items, such as discarded appliances and similar debris, garbage bags have also been donated by three Prestonsburg restaurants to encourage collection of smaller trash. Any civic organization or persons interested in assisting with the clean-up may contact Judge Stumbo, 886-9193; Prestonsburg Mayor Ann Latta, 886-2335, or Chamber of Commerce President Thomas Hereford, III, 886-1341.

Harvey Charged With Slaying, Sun. at Honaker

By Tim Sizemore

A shooting incident, over the weekend has left a Honaker woman dead and her boyfriend charged with murder.

Jimmy Dwayne Harvey, 25, of Honaker, is charged with first degree murder in the shooting death of Lisa Lynn Tackett, 19, also of Honaker.

A spokesman for the Kentucky State Police said the shooting took place at about 1:50 a.m. Sunday at Harvey's home. The victim, who was shot once in the left shoulder with a .44 magnum pistol, was pronounced dead at the scene by Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson.

Harvey was taken into custody shortly after the shooting at a neighbor's home by Floyd County Sheriff's Deputies John Blackburn, Randy Johnson, Arnold Adams and Anthony Castle.

No motive has been established for the shooting and it is still under investigation by State Police Detective Claude Tackett. Harvey is presently lodged in the Floyd county jail awaiting arraignment.

Bomb Threats Here Traced by Police

By Joe Porter

On May 27 two juvenile girls were caught calling in bomb threats at their school—Prestonsburg Elementary. What the girls didn't know was that police had a tracer on the phone after the school had received a bomb threat the week before.

The girls made two calls from the residence of one of the girls who had stayed home from school that day. The first one came at 12:08 p.m.; the second call came at 12:19. "You better get out in a hurry. It's going to go up," the girl said over the phone. The school was evacuated and the building was searched, but no bomb was found. Yet by 12:23, within five minutes of the second call, police knew the origin of the phone call.

Arson Investigator Larry Adams and Prestonsburg Police Capt. Chuck Akers drove to the residence, and the girls admitted under questioning to have made the calls. "They said it was a joke, but the parents didn't think it was a joke," said Police Chief William R. Campbell. Campbell said the teenage girls were not arrested. "The best probation is what their parents gave to them," he said.

On May 19, the week before, the school had received a bomb threat, but that call had been made by an adult male, according to Brenda Vanderpool, the school employee who took the call. No arrest has yet been made in that case, but following the call, Campbell requested that South Central Bell put a tracer on the line.

Principal Thomas Tackett suspended the two eighth grade girls for one day. "If it happened earlier in the year, I would have suspended them for much longer," he said. Then he decided after some serious thought to let them graduate with their class, June 2.

"When I first heard they caught them, I said arrest them. Throw them in jail. But I never would have guessed it would

Horse Show Assoc. Lease Renewal Is Council Topic

By Joe Porter

The Archer Park Board met May 31 and voted 3-to-0 with one abstention to re-negotiate a lease for the Eastern Kentucky Horse Show Association. The vote, however, caused a split in the board and Park Board Chairman Bill Ray Collins considered resigning over the issue.

The Horse Show Association has a contract to use the park until 1990. Now, however, they are considering making structural improvements, possibly lights and concrete bleachers, on the grounds; and to assure themselves that they will have the lease after the improvements are made, they requested an extension on their lease to 1995.

To park board member Randy Polk the request was reasonable, so he drafted the motion to re-negotiate the lease and it passed. "Those folks have always run a class act. They've never posed a problem to the park," Polk said. "We wanted to give them a vote of confidence to show them we appreciate what they're doing and want them to keep doing it."

Yet Collins, who doesn't have a vote, asked before the vote was taken, to table the measure until it could be studied more. He denied that he was against extending the lease. "I don't want them out," Collins said. "We've always supported the Horse Show Association, but we want them to realize they're not the only people using the park."

Board member Dick Clark supported Collins' request, and said he abstained from voting for the motion because, "I just didn't feel it was the proper thing to do now. I'm not saying I'm against extending the lease. I just didn't think it was studied enough."

"We're fortunate to have a good facility," said Denzil Allen, chairman of the Eastern Kentucky Horse Show Association, "and we're pleased that the park board has graciously agreed to extend our lease five more years."

Park Board Member Kaye Willis said she thought the lease would be extended, but emphasized that the motion was only to re-negotiate the contract. She expects a new contract will be written that stipulates what obligations the horse show people have in regard to concessions and cleaning up the area following each show.

Collin's disappointment came from a feeling that the Horse Show Association might have put pressure on park board members, but Willis said the motion passed because the Horse Show Association came forward with a legitimate request. "If they're going to make improvements, they've got to have some assurance that their contract will be re-negotiated, and we wanted to give them a sense that we're willing to work with them," Willis said. B. Nunnery is the third board member who voted for the motion.

A source of contention is the new baseball diamond that has been built in the last month adjacent to the horse show corral. The field is fenced in, and

$253,213 in H.U.D. Funding Announced for Floyd Housing

Grants totalling $253,213 from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will benefit both the Floyd County Housing Authority and the Housing Authority of Prestonsburg it was announced recently.

The Floyd County Housing Authority has already received $118,620 from HUD as part of the federal agency's yearly voucher program. The money will be used to assist up to 25 lower income families in obtaining safe and sanitary housing at reasonable rates.

Residents selected for the rental-assistance program will come from the Housing Authority's waiting list of eligible families, according to Pat Ryan, the program's coordinator. There are presently 267 families on the list who need two-bedroom housing, and 196 families who need three-bedroom accommodations.

Once selected, a family would be able to choose a house, mobile home or apartment which suits its needs. After the dwelling has been inspected to assure it meets housing standards, residents can move in. Families will pay between 10 and 20 percent of the rent with the government providing the balance. Ryan said the family's subsidy is determined by a complicated HUD formula that takes into consideration such things as family size, income and expenses.

Ryan commented that while the funding only scratches the surface of the amount needed, she feels fortunate to be able to accommodate 25 families this year. "I'm hopeful, based on our track record, that they'll increase it to 50 next year."

Arson Suspected in House Fire

By Joe Porter

A fire at a West Prestonsburg house brought firemen out at 1:15 a.m. Monday. Arson is suspected in the one-story Allen Avenue blaze.

"It was well gutted," Fire Chief Thomas A. Blackburn said of the damaged structure. "What the heat didn't get, the smoke did." Twelve full time and five volunteer firemen responded to the call. Major Paul Burke was in charge of the fire attack, while Blackburn controlled the pumper on No. 5 Engine, Squad 6 and No. 4 Engine were also called out.

The occupants—the Tuttle family—were not home at the time of the fire. Arson investigator Larry Adams started his investigation as soon as the blaze was extinguished, Blackburn said the fire department had been called out to a fire at the same house three weeks before. "He's received some threats," Blackburn said of Mr. Tuttle.

Mike Moore, working the fire without a self-contained breathing apparatus, inhaled a large amount of carbon monoxide and was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center, where he was kept on oxygen for three hours and then released.

"They handled it pretty well," Blackburn said. "Knocked it down and started their mop-up at about 2 a.m."

Special Meeting Called by Council

By Joe Porter

The Prestonsburg City Council held a special meeting Friday afternoon. Blacktop bids were considered, and the restaurant tax ordinance was amended to include a two percent motel tax.

The council accepted the blacktop bid of R&R Paving and Sealing Company of Hager Hill to deliver and pave blacktop at $36.50 per ton. That was the lowest of the three bids received by the city. Before the vote, Councilman Adrian Blackburn asked City Administrator, Fred A. James about the quality of

Cash Flow Problems Cited As Mt. Laurel Shuts Down

By Paul N. Allen

One day after the U.S. Department of Labor announced its intention to file a temporary restraining order against her manufacturing firm at West Prestonsburg, Lynn Weddington-Tucker halted operations of Mountain Laurel and laid off 30 workers.

Beset by a series of Labor Department complaints and legal actions and apparently unable to meet payroll requirements, Mrs. Weddington, a Prestonsburg native now living in New York, cited "cash flow" problems in a news release dated May 27. "It is with great reluctance that we are calling it a day," she said, pointing to continuing problems with the U. S. Department of Labor and what was referred to as "the resulting negative publicity" which she called "a contributing factor to her disillusionment with the project."

The Labor Department's announcement of intention to issue a restraining order came on May 26 and the following day U.S. District Judge Eugene Siler ordered that all shipments from the plant be halted because the firm had failed to meet its payroll for two pay periods. Earlier, the company was named in a lawsuit filed by the U. S. Department of Labor in U. S. District Court at Pikeville which charged the firm with violating several provisions of the federal Fair Labor Standards Act.

According to a Lexington-Herald article, this week, the Mountain Laurel plant was "cleaned out" before the May 27 order was issued with all goods and materials being shipped back to customers. The information was provided the Herald by John P. Garner, a Labor Department attorney in Nashville.

About 2,000 skirt fronts and backs were shipped to a Bristol, Va., plant, Gailord Classics, Inc., which had hired Mrs. Weddington-Tucker's company to produce its clothing. Garner said. The federal agency last week sued Gailord and obtained another restraining order directed at stopping shipment of Mountain Laurel's goods.

In her news release, Mrs. Weddington-Tucker pointed out that "It is ironic that although we never had more orders, we cannot go on." The company, which primarily produces children's apparel and began as a cottage industry about five years ago, has an orders-to-fill log of $400,000 by autumn with pending negotiations for a $1.8 million military shirt contract. "Our financial advisors have withdrawn their support and my family and I cannot continue to finance this project alone," she commented.

At first employing Floyd county women to do sewing work in their homes, Mountain Laurel was lauded nationally for the design and quality of its children's wear, quilts, toys and accessories and was featured editorially in publications such as The New York Times, Country Living and Redbook, among others. The firm moved into a warehouse owned by the Christian Appalachian Project last November.

Stockholders, which include a number of Kentucky investors, were, according to Mrs. Weddington-Tucker, 33, "never just interested in making money but in the potential of Mountain Laurel as a good community project."

"Mountain Laurel," she said, "was a noble experiment that failed."

New Shriners Hospital To Serve More Patients

Completion and occupancy of the new Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children, in Lexington, will result in increased served to young patients and their parents.

The new pediatric orthopaedic hospital containing 112,000 square feet of floor space and costing just over $20,000,000, will emphasize a family centered care approach to post operative rehabilitation.

Patients were moved into the new facility, May 24. Dedication of the 50-bed hospital is scheduled for June 12, at 1:30 p.m.

Planning specialists in the Shrine system of hospitals believe that on-site living quarters for parents maintains the family relationship in an environment that contributes to a speedier recovery for young patients. Accommodations for parents are provided for those who desire to remain with their child during a hospital stay.

Fifteen examining rooms will enable those attending outpatient clinic to receive early attention to their treatment needs while increasing the number of patients processed. Two fully staffed operating rooms will reduce a waiting period for those requiring surgery. Two radiological units have been installed to better serve patients.

A prosthetics orthotics laboratory located in the new hospital is a new feature of the Lexington unit. It is equipped to employ plastic, wood, metal or plaster materials in the design and custom fitting of braces.

Located throughout the United States, Canada, and New Mexico, 19 Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children and three Burns Institutes provide specialized care and services to children from infancy to age 18, wholly free of charge to the children, their families and third parties, regardless of race, color, or religion. The Lexington unit of Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children receives patients, principally from a five-state region that includes Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia.

Busy Hands At Craft Center

Julie Johnson, sales representative for David Crafts, Martha Wilkinson and Fran Redmon, with the Department of Arts and Crafts are shown at a recent Kentucky Buyer's Market sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Arts and Crafts.

The David Craft Center has had a busy spring season, beginning with the publication of their new color catalog. The catalog showcases the work of local craftspersons with a line of production items made available to both wholesale and retail customers.

Craft Center representatives were at the Kentucky Buyers' Market in Louisville, in March. The Market is sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Arts and Crafts for promotion of the artists and craftspeople of Kentucky.

Center representatives were also guests at the Derby Breakfast given by the Governor and Mrs. Wilkinson. The breakfast is an annual event held at the Capitol in Frankfort. After this came a trip to Ohio for the Appalachian Festival. The Spring Fair of Kentucky Artists and Craftsmen held in the Indian Fort Theatre, in Berea rounded out the month of May. Members of the Kentucky Guild only are eligible to participate in this bi-annual event.

The next place on the road into summer will be at the Water Tower in Louisville, July 15-17. This is an event sponsored by the Kentucky Guild of Artists and Craftsmen, The Kentucky Arts and Crafts Foundation and the Water Tower Arts Association. The week following will be a trip to Asheville, N.C., for the Southern Highland Guild Summer Fair. More trips and outings of the Craft Center are scheduled.

Money or Health?

I read in the Floyd County Times where some folks 'out of state' seem to want to buy GARBAGE SPACE in your county and was amazed everyone would even consider such a thing!

Better yet, they maybe ought to be selling space to put all the garbage on the old Auxier Road!!! That has been there for so many years, it's a sight. I'm sure that many would-be business folks have taken it into view as they tour this part of Kentucky! Wonder what they think of it?!!!

Now one might feel we don't live all that close, but when you see all the well contamination in this area (over 90 percent) you won't wonder why we wanted to get City water so much. And we are located DOWN RIVER from the Auxier dump! One might say that has nothing to do with it, but just where would all the rains that go into the ground go? Surely not UP RIVER!

And someone there in Floyd county wants to add to this? Why? Is money more important than health? Think about it!!!

Only Fair

The people of the coalfields in Kentucky now have before them a chance to once and for all end the massive destruction and endangerment caused by strip-mining that is done against our wills by using the broad form deed. No amount of words could ever express the desperation felt in the coalfields as we approach the November 8 election and a chance to protect the surface of our lands from unwanted strip-mining.

There may be in some cases those who want their land strip-mined. They will have a choice. All we ask is the right to say either "yes" or "no" to strip-mining so we can use the land we buy and pay taxes on in whatever way we see fit without fear of losing the right to our surface to a mining company.

Without the constitutional amendment giving us the right to determine the future of our surface, we can expect little economical development to take place in our area. We must ask all Kentuckians to vote YES for constitutional amendment #2. It is only fair.

MOUNT ATTENDANCE DRIVE

Sunday, June 5, was "Friend Day" at the First Baptist Church, here, and the pastor, Rev. Steve Hopkins, the Sunday School Superintendent, Mr. Jay Callis, and others there had set a goal of 250 to be in attendance in Sunday School on that day. The goal was not achieved—but a record 198 members and visitors were there. And so it was, that members of the congregation were deprived of hearing the minister and three of the "song birds" there, render a quartet, and of seeing the Sunday School superintendent "shaven and shorn" of his beard...promises made earlier if the goal of 250 had been reached.

When asked about Brackett's performance as superintendent, Joyce Evely, of the Floyd County Education Council, may have summed up the feelings of many when she said, "I think he's done an admirable job, especially considering the political makeup of our board."

Board Member Dr. Mary Hall would not comment on how the board reached its decision, but she did say that "We had a difficult choice; we had two good candidates and both were equally qualified, but the majority of the board chose Hager."

Board Chairman Adams said that several factors had been involved in the selection but would offer no insight as to how the board reached its decision. Other board members were unavailable for comment.

In other business, Jean Rosenberg appeared before Wednesday's meeting to ask the board to take the leadership role in directing the superintendent to give "real meaning" to the Floyd County Master Education Plan. "There is a tremendous need to invite parents into the process of education," Rosenberg said, and she also urged the board to stress the need for parent-teachers' associations or boosters' clubs in all county schools. Mrs. Rosenberg said principals should be accountable to the public for money made in fund-raising projects and vending machine sales. "Principals need to be ready and willing and accountable for individual school funds, so that an atmosphere of trust and full cooperation can exist," Rosenberg commented.

Another action taken by the board, was the closing of the Bonanza school. Citing low attendance and high costs, the board agreed that the expenditure to maintain the physical plant and personnel outweighed the benefits.

Superintendent-elect Ronald Hager, has served in the Floyd county school system for 24 years and is a native of David. He is the son of the late Everett Hager and his mother, Hollie, still resides at David. Hager comes from a family of nine children and is married to Angela Lafferty Hager, formerly of Hueysville. He and his wife reside at Bull Creek.

Hager attended David Elementary school, Prestonsburg High School and received an A.B. degree from Eastern Kentucky University. He began teaching at Prestonsburg High School in 1964 and in 1968 attained a scholarship from Western Oregon State University where he received a master's degree in history. After acquiring his M.A., Hager served as a classroom teacher, vice-principal and principal of Prestonsburg High School from 1972 until 1976. He received an administrative degree from Eastern State University in 1976 and for the last 12 years has served as assistant superintendent.

Hager said that he is fully aware of the tremendous responsibilities ahead. "As assistant superintendent for the last 12 years, I am confident I can provide the leadership necessary for the schools," Hager said, and added that his main objective is "to have this school district the best in the state of Kentucky, after all the schools are for children."

Hager set three goals for his administration: to provide the best educational opportunities for each child, to emphasize curriculum and, to build on improved community relations.

"I call upon all citizens of Floyd county to help attain these goals," Hager stated.

Tackett said he knew some people would consider his decision lenient in light of how serious the problem is, but that he was standing by it. "I've talked with them and I believe they're sorry for what they did," he continued. "They've been severely punished by their parents, and I'm not going to tar brush them for one horrible mistake. What they did was horribly wrong, but I'm not going to keep them back in the eighth grade for one mistake."

Ten Years Ago

(Wednesday, June 7, 1978)

A total of $1,500 in fines was assessed last week on overweight trucks operating in the county by District Judge Harold J. Stumbo in a sharp departure from the widespread Eastern Kentucky custom of overlooking overweight violations. The annual fund drive of the Floyd Chapter of the American Red Cross was scheduled to end officially Wednesday after a month of money-raising effort, but it must be extended, according to Floyd Red Cross Executive Director Shelby Willis. The Prestonsburg City Council last Thursday instructed City Attorney William G. Francis to determine the steps necessary to close the Fraternal Order of Eagles Club here and to take them. The Big Sandy Area Development District's board of directors in its annual all-day meeting last Friday at the new National Guard Armory here elected Russell Williamson, Inez banker and former basketball coach, its chairman to fill the vacancy created by the recent death of Floyd County Judge Henry Stumbo. Preparations continue for the dedication ceremonies for the Prestonsburg Army National Guard Armory to be held Friday, June 23, at 10 a.m. There died: Woodrow W. Caldwell, 65, native of Betsy Layne, last Wednesday at Ft. Myers, Fla.; Neddie Ousley, 76, of Sidney Indiana, formerly of Risner, Monday in Whitley County Hospital, Columbia City, Indiana; Charles Narvel Akers, 62, of Dana, last Thursday, at home; Mrs. Oriole Gormley Jillson, 83, formerly of Prestonsburg, Monday; Willie W. The water and gas system owned by Floyd county and serving five of its communities has been leased to Ohio-Kentucky Utilities, Inc., a Prestonsburg firm. Although some of the coal remaining at David will be mined, whatever work is ahead appears to hold little promise for a solution to the unemployment problem faced by those idled by the recent closing of Princess Elkhorn operations there. Dewey Lake got its second annual fertilizing Tuesday. A recent Floyd fiscal court resolution calls on the U.S. Corps of Engineers to initiate another snagging and clearing project on Right Beaver Creek which would be an extension of an earlier work completed on the stream. Born: to Mr. and Mrs. Jim Morgan, of the Abbott road, a daughter, Leslie Jane, May 27 at the Prestonsburg General Hospital; to Mr. and Mrs. George Fannin, Jr., of Prestonsburg, a son, Robert Lee, May 23, to Mr. and Mrs. Delbert (Red) Ison, a son, Saturday at the McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital. There died: Cpl. Jeff Mulkey, 21, of Banner, killed in action Friday in Vietnam, approximately one month after his arrival there.

Final recapitulation of the Floyd tax assessment after work of the county Board of Supervisors will show a total approximating $25,000,000. Tax Commissioner Manis Conley said. Organization of the Prestonsburg Emergency and Rescue Squad, Inc. was effected Monday night with the election of officers. Deputy Sheriff George Hall, Jr. staged a moonshine raid without assistance last Saturday, and came up with a small still taken at Ivel. James Arthur Romans, 35, of Hi Hat, was killed in the county's only Memorial Day weekend auto fatality, early Saturday within a few yards of the school bus tragedy scene. There died: Robert Lee Hamilton, 60, formerly of East McDowell, last Wednesday at Ashtabula, Ohio; Mrs. Mary M. Little, 69, of Wheelwright, Thursday at the McDowell Memorial Hospital; Mertie Mae Tackett, 75, of Caney Creek, Monday at the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville; Curtis Ford, 86, Prestonsburg native, May 24 at Dayton, Ohio.

The first moonshine still to be captured since prohibition returned to this county was taken Saturday on Toler Creek by Deputy Sheriffs Pat and Ed Hall. A miniature "land rush" is a possibility as sportsmen and other residents of this section have begun filing applications for cabin sites along the shores of the Dewey reservoir. Announcement was made this week of the purchase of the Leete Jewelry Store here by the Wright brothers, of Louisa, who assumed management of the business Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Jarrell, of Cow Creek, lost a "photo finish" race with the stork Tuesday night when their son was born in their auto, just outside the Prestonsburg General Hospital after a desperate nine-mile drive. Mother and child are doing fine. Born (at the Beaver Valley Hospital, Martin): to Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Martin, of Drift, a son, Stephen Frank, May 26; to Mr. and Mrs. Snoden Keathley, of Teaberry, a daughter, Lora Jean, May 24; to Mr. and Mrs. Rexford Gearheart, of Dony, a daughter, Dolpha, May 23; to Mr. and Mrs. Russell Isaac Thompson, of Lancer, a son, John Russell, May 23. Commonwealth's Attorney O. C. Hall said Wednesday that he believes an organized gang of thieves is responsible for the series of thefts reported within the last week in this county. That Floyd county might have a district unemployment office, the fiscal court, meeting in special session here Friday, unanimously voted an annual appropriation of $900 as its share for full-time maintenance of the office. It was announced this week that in accordance with the Public Health Service Milk Ordinance and Code of grades, examination and grading of all dairies delivering milk in Floyd county, is contemplated by the Floyd health department in the near future. Uncle Jeff Sizemore, 96, Union army veteran of the Civil War, announced this week he is going to the Gettysburg Blue and Gray reunion, July 1 to 6. Floyd county's other Civil War veterans, John Harris, of Brandy Keg and John Printer Meade, of Printer, all of whom were Union soldiers, are also expected to attend. A slatefall in the Wheelwright mine of the Inland Steel Company Tuesday morning resulted in the death of Marvin Johnson, 29. Not a scratch was received by 14-year-old Claybourne Halbert, of Printer, Friday, when the mule he was riding was struck and instantly killed by a C. & O. "shifter," as it stepped into the path of the train at Salisbury. There died: Mrs. Mary McCloud, 22, of Fed, last Saturday at the Beaver Valley Hospital; Opal Patton, 10, Sunday at the Beaver Valley Hospital.

Spare That Snake, He May Be Keeping You Mouse-Free

There are about 30 species of snakes common to Kentucky, only three of which are dangerous. Avoiding those three, and tolerating the rest, is the best course of action for children and adults alike.

The deadly three are copperheads, rattlesnakes and cottonmouths. The first two are usually found in wooded areas; the cottonmouth prefers swamps. "Most snakes like weedy or forested areas with rock piles where they can find food and stay cool. If you don't want to meet a snake, stay away from those areas," said Fred Servello, a wildlife specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Children should be cautioned to stay away from brush and rock piles that could harbor a dangerous snake.

City residents have little to worry about. The poisonous snakes native to Kentucky generally avoid urban settings.

"The snakes you're likely to find in your yard or garden are almost certainly not poisonous. If they have a sleek head that joins smoothly with the rest of the body, and especially if they have round pupils in their eyes, they are not poisonous. The poisonous snakes tend to have triangular heads and the pupils of their eyes are elliptical," Servello said. Servello said homeowners would do well to leave the snakes alone. "They're probably helping keep mice out of your yard," he said.

Hunters and others who will be in the woods, and people fishing near swampy areas, should not rely on a snake repellent. Servello said about 80 products have been tested as snake repellents, and none has been found to work.

The Federal Government is the largest single employer of women in the United States.

Participating veterinarians this year include Dr. Mahendra R. Varia, and Dr. Carol D. Johnson.

formerly, it had been used for parking during horse shows. The field has a gate, and Collins is concerned that the field will be damaged if people are allowed to park on it during horse show events. "It's a tender field," Collins said, "with little grass. The soil has so much clay in it, that if it rains, their tires will spin, sink, and bury up."

Yet Allen said they would only use the field if there was an overflow of vehicles; and if the ground is damaged, they will take responsibility for repairing it immediately afterwards.

Friday, City Administrator Fred A. James said Collins would not be resigning, but Collins said he is determined to be fair to all people and groups who use the park. "If I can't serve the whole park from senior citizens to the small children, if I can't serve the entire park then I will not serve special interest groups."

Clark has turned in his resignation to Mayor Ann R. Latta, but he said it had nothing to do with the dispute over the motion. He reported he was leaving because a lot had been accomplished in the year and a half he had served as a member, but now he wanted to move on and devote himself to other pursuits. "It's a good board," Clark said, "and I think you're going to see it improve more and make Archer Park a better park."

Arts-Crafts Market Set at MSU, June 25

An Arts and Crafts Market with an estimated 100 booths will be the high point of the final day of Morehead State University's 12th annual Appalachian Celebration, June 19-25.

The market will be held Saturday, June 25, 9:30 a.m.-6 p.m., in the Laughlin Health Building.

A wide variety of folk art and crafts will be for sale including quilts, fabric crafts, woodcrafts, pottery, paintings and baskets.

Other activities will take place in Wetherby Gymnasium and outdoors on the Laughlin lawn. Wetherby features "The Big Swap," an exciting addition to Saturday's line-up, featuring antique tools, knives and guns for sale or trade. "Big Swap" participants include special invited guests, members of SWEAT, the Society of Workers in Early Arts and Trades.

The Outdoor Stage will again be located on the Laughlin lawn and will feature regional musicians and entertainers. Appalachian food booths and a Farmers' Market will also be a part of the festive atmosphere outdoors.

Demonstrations outdoors will include: "Sheep to Shawl" where the sheep is shorn and wool is woven by MSU's folk artist-in-residence, "Granny" Toothman; rail-splitting, blacksmithing and more.

This year marks the 12th annual Appalachian Celebration, a summer festival which features traditional music, dance, poetry, storytelling, arts and crafts that focus on the rich cultural heritage off the region.

June 1 is the deadline for applications for Arts and Crafts Market booth space. Exhibitors must have their crafts approved for quality and originality, according to Georgia Sammons, Market coordinator.

More information and applications are available by contacting Georgia Sammons, Arts and Crafts Market coordinator, ORDS, MSU, Morehead, Ky. 40351, (606) 783-2077.

Among the stockholders and directors of the holding company is Steve Pack, a Prestonsburg CPA, and partner in the firm of Jones, Pack & Associates. Others among the holding company group are from Perry, Breathitt and Wolfe counties.

In addition to this acquisition, the holding company (Marie R. Turner Bank Holding Company) also owns the Citizens Bank of Jackson in Breathitt county.

Kentucky Geological Survey Celebrates 150th Anniversary

The Kentucky Geological Survey will celebrate its sesquicentennial, June 16, marking 150 years of helping to identify and develop Kentucky's vast mineral, water and energy resources.

The celebration will include tours of the KGS's new facilities at the University of Kentucky, a conference featuring noted geologists and educators, and a banquet.

Philip LaMoreaux, former state geologist of Alabama and a former chief of the groundwater branch, U.S. Geological Survey, will be the keynote speaker at the 7:30 p.m. banquet at Lexington's Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"Kentucky is a state blessed with an abundance of natural resources, and the geological survey has played a paramount role in developing them," LaMoreaux said in a recent interview.

"Few people know about the value of state geological surveys to development. Environmental planning and protection are influenced greatly by knowledge of the geology and hydrology of the area," he said.

KGS geologists are involved in such diverse projects as researching mine subsidence, studying earthquake activity, and charting mineral deposits. The survey is responsible for maintaining up-to-date maps of the state, and is the official repository for records of oil and gas wells drilled in Kentucky.

This year, its offices were moved to UK's new Mining and Mineral Resources Building, which it shares with three other mineral-related departments at UK.

The sesquicentennial observance begins at 1 p.m. June 16 with an open house and tours of the new building.

At 3 p.m., a conference on "KGS—Future Directions" will be held at the Minings and Mineral Resources Building. Speakers will include Dallas Peck, U.S. Geological Survey; Norman Hester, Indiana Geological Survey; William Sturgill, Lexington businessman; Wimberly Royster, dean of the UK Graduate School, and Donald Haney, KGS.

The banquet, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, begins at 7:30 p.m. with remarks expected to begin at 8:30 p.m.

The celebration coincides with the annual meeting of the American Association of State Geologists being held in Lexington June 12-16. Geologists from the majority of the states are expected to attend to discuss key environmental and energy-related issues.

The Kentucky Geological Survey traces its roots to 1838, when the Kentucky General Assembly appointed William Mather to conduct the first geological survey of the Commonwealth. Mather's report identified Kentucky's two major coal fields and discussed the state's other important mineral and water resources. The report is being reprinted as part of the sesquicentennial observance.

Farmers Get Small Part Of Total Spent On Food

Americans spent $15 billion more on food products from U.S. farms in 1987 than in 1986, a recent USDA study reports. However, only $95 billion of the $375 billion spent on U.S. farm products went back to farmers. The remainder of the money went to the food industry for handling, processing and retailing costs. Although consumers spent about 4 percent more in 1987 than in '86, University of Kentucky Extension agricultural economist Forrest Stegelin said the increase was consistent with inflation figures. "Americans did not buy more products last year, they simply spent more on products," Stegelin said. And since the value in farm products only slightly increased, Stegelin said the price farmers are receiving for their products is not keeping pace with inflation. "Actually, a farmer is not receiving as much for a product in terms of constant dollars that he did five or six years ago," he said. What caused food prices to go up, Stegelin said, was the marketing costs for convenience foods—such as microwave-ready and canned products—which are more sensitive to inflation. Two-thirds of last year's rise in consumer expenditure for farm foods went to the marketing bill, which rose about $10 billion. About 83 percent of American households own at least one microwave, Stegelin said, and almost one in every three own two microwaves. "Americans want food that you can pop in the microwave for a few minutes and then it's ready to eat," he said. But just as Americans want fast food, they also want healthful food, too, Stegelin said. Of the total money spent on meat products, Americans spent a higher percentage on poultry, fish and seafood than on beef and pork. Fruits also were also more popular than vegetables during 1987 as more Americans chose fruit for a snack rather than traditional "junk food." "We want things that taste great and are less filling," Stegelin said. "We're looking for items that are not only light in calories, but light in texture and color, too."

Nat'l Management Week Named

Floyd County Judge-Executive, John M. Stumbo, joins Susie Davis, Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company's National Management Association president, and thousands of professional managers in proclaiming the week of June 6-11, 1988, as National Management Week in Floyd county.

Acreage Reports Asked By ASCS

The Knott/Floyd Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service reminds all farmers that they should file an acreage report, whether they participate in the 1988 commodity programs or not, and protect their crop acreage bases. By certifying crop acres, corn producers establish documentation for future crop acreage bases as well as eligibility for different benefits if they decide to participate in farm programs.

It is important for farmers who are participating in the 1988 programs to file an acreage report, because without it they are not participating. Reports are necessary so that ASCS may determine the level at which producers are eligible for price support loans, deficiency payments and other program benefits.

Farm program participants are required to report crops and acreages planted, the uses to be made of these crops, and cropland acres to be devoted to the acreage conservation reserve. When producers report to the county ASCS office, they can review aerial photographs of their farm and pinpoint the fields in which the crops are grown. This information is then documented for program compliance and crop acreage bases.

The final certification date for reporting corn and conserving uses in Knott and Floyd counties is July 1.

Farmers who are not participating in the 1988 programs are encouraged to report their crop acreages to insure future benefits and protect acreage bases.

BOOKS AND THINGS

By: TRISHA MORRIS, Librarian, Prestonsburg Community College

In the fiction of Appalachia the women are the central figures holding family and farm together—in the history books the men take the standing roles. The following books from the P.C.C. library help to clear up some of the discrepancies.

Women in Kentucky

By: Helen Irvin
Rebecca Boone and her daughter, Jemima, arrived in Boonesborough, Kentucky on September 8, 1775. They were the first white women to settle in the frontier state. After them came black women serving as slaves to migrating families, wives following their husbands with their children hanging on their skirts, and adventurous women who harbored the yearning for land in a free country as much as any man. Ms. Irvin chronicles the saga of the women in Kentucky because it needed telling. In the two hundred and plus years since Rebecca Boone settled in the state most frontier women have been either ignored by history or depicted as passive and fearful helpmates to the men. The women who followed their husbands with often one child in her arms and another hanging on behind helping to defend forts under siege, doctoring husband and children and planting and preserving what food they could raise were active participants in the rough, precarious life of the settlements. These ordinary women, both black and white, of lonely frontier farms whose lives were shaped by the elements, the Indians and the demands of their families are the primary subjects of this book. Irvin also tells of the exceptional Kentucky women—the ones whose names did make the history book—the abolitionist Delia Webster, the suffragists Laura Clay, Madeline McDowell Breckinridge, the philanthropists Mary Breckinridge and Linda Neill and the reformer Carry Nation. Enhanced by black and white photographs this book is an addendum to the many histories of Kentucky.

We Didn't Have Much, But We Sure Had Plenty

By: Sherry Thomas
Starting as a personal quest to know about the women who had come before her—what they had done, thought, felt—the author traveled across America interviewing farm women in towns often so obscure she needed a census map and a magnifying glass to find them. From New Mexico to Georgia, she found an astonishing willingness of older women to speak deeply and honestly to a much younger stranger from California. She learned of a different life—where things weren't bought but were produced—where a family could live on forty-five dollars a month and count themselves fortunate. From the myriad of stories a strong theme emerged—they were happy and they had a rich history—not the history learned from books but one lived, remembered and savored in family stories. And so, Ms. Thomas chose the stories of 12 women out of 56 to shape her narrative. Each woman, through the author's transcription methods, brings her own blend of background, region, personal temperament and experience to this very readable story. In the author's words, it is intended to be a "...patchwork of quilt of a period of time and a way of life..." lived by rural women in America.

Hillbilly Women

By: Kathy Kahn
This book tells what it means to be a woman when you are poor, proud and live in the hills. In it nineteen women tell their personal stories of the day to day struggle for survival in the Southern Appalachian Mountains and in the migrant ghettos of the North. They come from the coal camps of Eastern Ky., Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia to the cotton mill towns of North Carolina and Georgia. They are the daughters of coal miners, factory hands and farmers, and they were all raised in poverty in a rich and prosperous land.

The author spent two years traveling the towns and hollows of Appalachia talking to ordinary women. This is their story in their own words—sometimes angry, sometimes tender but always sincere—describing their living and working conditions, their religion, their music and their family. Published in 1973, the pictures show old hair styles but nothing can date the vivid and moving picture of lives this book presents.

Old-Fashioned Mountain Mothers

By: Alice Kinder
This book is a collection of columns by the author which has appeared in the "Appalachian News-Express" under the title of "Mountain Roots." Fifteen "Mountain Mother's" stories are told here including the author's mother and mother-in-law. These are stories of hardworking women who knew these Kentucky hills when life was built around a calendar of never ending labor and when sickness and childbirth often meant death. It is the story of love and family and thrift and honest living. There are many names mentioned in these stories and an index has been thoughtfully added to help find them.

Dark Hills to Westward

By: Harry Caudill
A column about women in Kentucky would not be complete without mentioning Jenny Wiley—the pioneer woman who could be any one of the women who followed their husbands, raised and buried their children, cleared land and fought the Indians to homestead in this new state. A fictionalization of the story, "Dark Hills..." is a quick and easy read with the author's skillful rhetoric leading you deeper and deeper into the plot of Jenny's flight from her Indian captors.

MANDATORY NOTICE BY ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY FOR ALL WATER SYSTEMS PERTAINING TO LEAD IN DRINKING WATER

"The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

"Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

"EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women. "Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- if your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and
- if the home is less than five years old, or
- if you have soft or acidic water, or
- if water sits in the pipes for several hours."

The Martin Water Works does not have lead service lines or other lead-containing materials in our distribution system. The water in Martin Water Works water supply is not in violation of the current standards. The water in your own house piping may be. It is the responsibility of the customer to pay for testing for lead in their own house piping.

You can reduce the possibility of consuming water with high lead concentrations by the following:

1. Flush cold water pipes before drinking—10-30 seconds.
2. Use only water from cold water pipes for drinking, cooking or preparing baby formula.
3. Lead pipes and service connections can be replaced.
4. Insist that only lead free materials be used in repairs or new plumbing.

The only way to be sure of the amount of lead in your water is to have the water tested by a state certified testing laboratory. For additional information contact the Drinking Water Branch of the Kentucky Division of Water at (502) 564-3410 or Martin Water Works at (606) 285-3402.

Lead content in Prestonsburg City Utilities, which supplies the Martin Water Works, is less than 0.001.

A Summer Best Bet...

Curried Chicken Salad

From the American Institute for Cancer Research

The simple fact is that we've learned to love chicken. This versatile, economical food has become a mainstay of the American diet. Surveys show that chicken is served at least once a week in some 70 percent of American households. That's a lot of chicken; in fact, nearly twice as much as we were eating 20 years ago.

The American Institute for Cancer Research views chicken as a nutritional wise choice. It's an excellent source of protein, with considerably less fat and fewer calories than many other meats. And with its versatile, simple flavor, chicken goes well with many different combinations of ingredients and seasonings, making it a perfect basis for a wide variety of meals.

One of the best ways to take advantage of chicken during the heat of summer is in cool, delicious salads. There are a wide variety of tasty salads in which chicken can be used, and a chicken salad can be an excellent way to use up those leftovers.

Chicken salads can be simple or elegant. The following ideas will spur your creativity for concocting delightful summer salads:

*When using greens, include some of the darker greens, such as spinach, beet greens and watercress, which contain more vitamin A and C.

*Avoid high-fat dressings made with sour cream, mayonnaise or cheese. Simple oil and vinegar or lowfat yogurt based dressings are delicious and go especially well with chicken.

*When making a salad with pasta or rice, use whole grain pasta or brown rice for more fiber and nutrients.

The following chicken salad offers a pleasant light taste of curry. It's perfect for lunch, a weekend brunch, or a light supper. Although this particular recipe uses lite mayonnaise in its dressing, you can also try it with a yogurt based dressing. Serve it with some whole-grain rolls.

CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD

- 2 cups cooked chicken, coarsely chopped
3/4 cup celery, chopped
1/2 cup green grapes, sliced
1/8 cup minced onion
Dressing:
1/4 cup lite mayonnaise
1 tsp. curry powder
1/4 tsp. pepper (or to taste)
Mix the dressing ingredients and let the mixture sit for a few minutes to allow the flavors to blend. Combine the

Death Ends "Miss June's" Service to Eastern Kentucky

By Paul N. Allen

Dr. June Buchanan, who came to Caney Creek as a young teacher from New York and achieved near legendary status in her 69 years there, died last Tuesday morning at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin. She was 100 years old.

"Miss June," as she was often referred to by friends and acquaintances, was well-known in Eastern Kentucky and elsewhere as a dedicated educator and a moving force, along with the late Alice Lloyd, in the founding and development of the Knott county college at Pippa Passes which now bears Miss Lloyd's name.

Having heard of the Caney Creek school from friends while attending Wellesley, Miss Buchanan taught first grade upon arriving on the isolated creek in 1919. Like others there, a good deal of her energy was dedicated to fund-raising and, through work accomplished while serving as Alice Lloyd's "right hand," the school was enlarged to include the addition of the two-year Caney Creek College in 1923.

As the school's founder, Miss Lloyd, was severely hampered by poor health over many years, June Buchanan served in actively monitoring the campus. She was known for coordinating the Caney Crusades and advocating "The Purpose Road" philosophy, a line of thought originated by George Herbert Palmer, of Harvard University, which emphasizes service to mankind and promotes morality, civic-mindedness and intellectual leadership in the mountains.

Remembered by Caney alumni as a gifted and dynamic teacher, Miss Buchanan continued her service to the school following Miss Lloyd's death in 1962. Until only about two years ago, she still spent time with alumni and met with contributors to the college.

Over the years, Miss Buchanan's long service to the school and to education in the coalfields of Appalachian Kentucky was recognized. June Buchanan Day was declared by college alumni on October 12, 1969, and in 1976 the June Buchanan Alumni Center, which houses the college cafeteria, was dedicated, and a special program at the college in 1982, featuring Ralph Edwards, of television's "This Is Your Life" fame, recounted Miss June's life of dedication as well as giving her the opportunity to deftly exchange humorous one-liners with Edwards.

A native of Moravia, New York, where she was born June 21, 1887, Miss Buchanan is survived by a sister, Cherry Buchanan Thompson, of Syracuse, New York. She was preceded in death by her husband of 14 years, David H. Hall, of Hindman.

Funeral rites were conducted last Wednesday at 2 p.m. at Cushing Hall on the Alice Lloyd College campus. She was buried near the campus under the direction of the Knott Funeral Home. In lieu of flowers, donations were requested to the June Buchanan Living Endowment Fund at Alice Lloyd.

(Information for the preceding article was derived from an account of Miss Buchanan's death by Ron Daley in the June 1 edition of Knott county's Troublesome Creek Times.)

Concern Over Possible Drought Boosts Soybean, Wheat Prices

With drought-like conditions stretching from the Corn Belt to the Delta, fears of a below-normal production season have sent soybean and wheat prices skyrocketing over the past four or five weeks.

Tuesday, the futures market closed with soybean prices 30 cents and wheat prices 15 cents higher than when it opened.

According to University of Kentucky Extension agricultural economist Steve Riggins concerns over a low production season have been magnified because of low inventory levels and the decision by farmers to take more land out of production.

"The stage is set for weather conditions to have a great impact on the market because we began the year with a inventory levels smaller than they have been in the last several years and farmers continue to take land out of production because of government programs," Riggins said. "This is a very normal kind of thing to happen when you consider all of the conditions."

"Right now the market is so volatile that one good rainfall could reverse the increase in prices, because it would alleviate some of the fear. If you could accurately predict the weather, you could predict the prices."

And if the current weather forecast holds true, prices might continue to increase. Tuesday, the National Weather Service released its 30-day and 90-day outlook, predicting above-normal temperatures and below-normal precipitation for much of the South and Midwest.

Riggins said some farmers are caught in a "double dilemma" over whether to price their crops now or to hold out in hopes of higher market prices.

"The farmer hasn't seen prices this strong in a long time," he said. "But he is also concerned if this is as high as the market will go."

When farmers are considering pricing their crop, Riggins said they need to consider their financial position and ability to take risks.

If you see brown or dying vegetation near a gas line, it could mean a gas leak, even if you can't smell the characteristic odor of natural gas. If you suspect a gas leak, warn others to stay away, and then call your local gas company.

The 10th annual Jesse Stuart Symposium will be held on Tuesday, June 21, as part of the week-long Appalachian Celebration on the campus of Morehead State University.

The Symposium focuses on the life and works of Stuart, one of Kentucky's most beloved authors, and is sponsored by MSU's Department of English, Foreign Languages and Philosophy.

The Appalachian experience as reflected in Stuart's writing will be presented in lectures, discussions and displays.

The event kicks off with a 12:15 p.m. luncheon and an address entitled "Hacking It With Jesse Stuart" by Appalachian poet Albert Stewart. The cost of the luncheon is $5.50 per person and reservations are necessary. The luncheon will be held in the Red Room of Adron Doran University Center.

The Symposium's featured speaker is Loyal Jones, director, Berea College Appalachian Center. Jones will discuss "The Folk Culture of Jesse Stuart's Kentucky" at 2:15 p.m. in the Gold Room of ADUC.

George Brosi, bookseller and Jesse Stuart bibliographer, will speak regarding "The Triumphant Literary Triumvirate: Jesse Stuart, James Still, and Don West of the Lincoln Memorial University Class of 1929."

Other speakers include James Stuart, brother of the late writer, presenting "A Reminiscence of Jesse," and a discussion by Stuart Sprague, Appalachian historian and MSU Professor of History.

The Appalachian Celebration, of which the Jesse Stuart Symposium is a component activity, is an annual summer festival featuring traditional music and dance, storytelling, poetry, and writing, and arts and crafts that focus on the rich cultural heritage of the region.

The Celebration will also present bus tours to Jesse Stuart's birthplace in W-Hollow on Monday, June 20, and Wednesday, June 22. Buses depart in front of the Adron Doran University Center at 8:30 a.m. and return to campus at 5 p.m. The bus tour cost is $7.50 per day. James Stuart will be the tour guide for the W-Hollow trips.

More information regarding the Jesse Stuart Symposium is available by contacting Ron Dobler, MSU, UPO 871, Morehead, Ky. 40351, (606) 783-2185.

Additional information regarding the bus tours may be obtained from Pete McNeill, ORDS, MSU, Morehead, Ky. 40351, (606) 783-2077.

Blood Center Offers Cholesterol Testing

Donating blood is safe, simple, and saves lives. Central Kentucky Blood Satellite Center in Prestonsburg are urging all healthy Floyd countians to donate blood.

Central Kentucky Blood Center will perform a cholesterol test on each unit of blood donated at this drive and the test results will be sent to the donor.

The mini-physical performed prior to donation already includes a check of blood pressure, pulse, temperature, and hematocrit (iron level). However, scientific evidence clearly shows that reduction of blood cholesterol levels will reduce the risk of heart attack in the future.

Come in to the Prestonsburg Donor Center and donate. It will not only make a difference to the health of patients in area hospitals—it could make a difference in your health as well!

There are 132 rooms in the White House.

Advice To Avoid SSI Overpayments

People who receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) checks should tell Social Security whenever there's a change in their resources, income, or living arrangements. That way, we can be sure they receive the right amount in their check every month, and they can avoid the hardship caused by paying back overpayments.

Too often, SSI recipients fail to inform us about a change that should be reported and end up being overpaid. Since the law requires the Social Security Administration to recover the overpayment, the money is usually withheld from future checks, resulting in a tremendous hardship for many recipients.

People can avoid overpayments and their recovery by promptly reporting any change to Social Security. Everyone who applies for SSI is told about the changes that must be reported. And when a person receives the notice that his or her SSI claim has been approved, he or she also receives a booklet, called "What You Have to Know About SSI." That booklet details all the things that should be reported. When the booklet is received, it's a good idea to read it carefully.

Then, put it away in a safe place and refer to it occasionally as a reminder about what should be reported. If you get SSI checks and can't find your copy of the booklet, you can call any Social Security office and ask for a free copy.

Examples of changes that commonly result in overpayments when not reported are listed below. If you get SSI checks, you may be able to avoid being overpaid by promptly reporting these changes.

- an increase in resources—the things you own, such as cash, checking or savings accounts, stock, bonds, and certificates of deposit;
- an increase in income—both earned and unearned;
- you get help with your living expenses;
- you enter an institution;
- you plan to leave the United States;
- you move or someone moves into or out of your home;
- someone who lives with you dies;
- you or someone who lives with you has a baby or gets married, widowed, divorced, or separated;
- an improvement in your health, if you're getting checks because you are disabled or blind.

It's easy to report a change—just call any Social Security office. You should report the change within 10 days after the month it happens. But remember, the sooner you report the change, the sooner Social Security can adjust your check. Avoid overpayments—report changes right away.

More information about Social Security, Supplemental Security Income, or Black Lung can be obtained at the Big Sandy Area Social Security office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

Deadline For School Board Candidates

The filing deadline for candidates to run in school board elections this fall is September 1, it was announced by the Kentucky School Boards Association. Nominating petitions must be filed with the office of the county court clerk by 4 p.m. on that date.

Nominating petitions include information and qualifications on the candidate, along with signatures of at least 20 petitioners who desire and are legally qualified to vote for the candidate. Petitions may be obtained from the county court clerk, local board of education or the Kentucky School Boards Association in Frankfort.

State laws stipulate the following requirements of school board members:

- *minimum age of 24;
- *state citizenship for at least three years before election;
- *voter registration in the district represented;
- *high school education.

Besides the statutory requirements, effective school board membership requires a considerable commitment of time and energy and a desire to work for the benefit of all schoolchildren in the community. Board members have a responsibility to the entire community not to be overly influenced by or obligated to any special interest group.

Other important qualities school board members should have are decision-making skills, having the ability to judge people well, public speaking skills, creative thinking skills, organizational and planning abilities and positive thinking.

In this fall's election, there will be nearly 500 school board positions open in 177 of Kentucky's 178 school districts (all districts except Jefferson County). For information about school board elections in Floyd county, contact the Floyd county school superintendent's office.

Who "Cooked the Books" On the Minimum Wage?

By John Sloan, President
National Federation of Independent Business

The crusade to raise the minimum wage began as a noble quest. Its goal: to help the working poor, those struggling to support a family on a wage that hadn't increased in eight years. Recent facts have shown this apparently benevolent effort to be—a political ploy to buy union votes in an election year.

As a result of game playing, the Democratic leadership in Congress entangled itself in a net of its own making. Determined to prove that business estimates of job losses from an increase were exaggerated, the leadership asked its highly respected budget office to study the cost of a wage hike.

The Congressional Budget Office report turned out to be a mine field. CBO's experts found that a wage hike to $4.65 per hour would cost the country 250,000 to 500,000 jobs.

Further, the jobs would be lost in the South and Southwest, areas already struggling with high unemployment. Realizing that these Southern votes already were "soft," the Democratic leadership ordered CBO to release a "revised" version. Since then, CBO has been playing the three Japanese monkeys: It neither hears, sees nor speaks evil of its congressional bosses.

The legislators who commissioned the study could have saved taxpayer dollars and CBO time by gleaming the same facts from reports written by numerous top economists and by the National Federation of Independent Business, which represents more than a half-million of the country's small firms.

It's to be hoped that members of Congress now understand what business owners have known all along: If you force employers to raise wages, some will have to lay off people, delay creating new job slots or substitute machines for people. And the employers most likely to make those decisions are in states already facing high unemployment.

Job losses from a wage hike are a fact that unions still debate. But their arguments are so much smoke. The National Restaurant Association surveyed its members after the last minimum-wage hike to determine its effect on employment and prices.

Because nearly a third of all minimum-wage earners work in food services, the results are telling: 70 percent of the association's members had reduced the hours of employees, 48 percent had laid off workers and 28 percent had added labor-saving equipment. Further, nine out of 10 restaurants had raised prices.

Even in prosperous areas of the country, a federal increase serves little purpose. Eleven states have raised their minimum wage above $3.35. Significantly, six of the 11 are in prosperous New England. Equally significant, none of the increases are in the South or Southwest.

Who would the crusaders be saving by raising the minimum wage? Will this legislation help millions of working poor support their families. No, because the average minimum-wage earner is not the sole breadwinner of a family, working eight hours a day to support a family.

Out of a civilian work force of 114 million people, less than 5 percent work for minimum wage. Of those, 66 percent are under age 25. Sixty percent are

Who Pays For Aids KET Examines Battle

By 1991, health care for AIDS patients in the United States will have cost an estimated $16-$22 billion. Even today, caring for AIDS victims is overwhelming some communities.

Frontline examines the impact on patients caught in the middle of a battle between local governments and Washington in its presentation "Who Pays for AIDS?" The program airs Friday, June 10 at 8:00/7:00 p.m. CT on KET.

The program looks at cases such as that of Patrick, a 30-year-old Kansas City, Mo. man dying of AIDS. Last year, his medical bill was $125,000. Patrick can no longer work. He has no private health insurance, so Medicaid pays for his care.

Patrick's case is just one in the AIDS epidemic which is sweeping our country and causing a crisis in health care. This epidemic has resulted in a struggle between local governments, city and state, and Washington over who will pay the soaring costs of caring for AIDS patients.

Frontline travels to San Francisco General Hospital where its director says his facility is at a saturation point in the care of AIDS patients. "We cannot tolerate any increased (AIDS) admissions without compromising our ability to care for other patients we serve."

In Dallas, Dr. Ron Anderson, director of Parkland Hospital says, "What's really happening is a situation where here comes AIDS on top of a reimbursement system that's already sick."

"Why should we presume that we would take better care of patients with AIDS than we are of pregnant women and children? This is kind of the straw that broke the camel's back, only it's not a straw—it's a brick."

"Who pays for AIDS?" was produced and reported by Martin Smith. Frontline is produced by a consortium of public television stations including WGBH/Boston; KCTS/Seattle; WNET/New York; WPBT/Miami; and WTWS/Detroit.

The Saddles Are No Longer Empty, Old Pal, at JW Stables

By Tim Sizemore

It could have been empty saddles in the old corral at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, if not for the efforts of two Northern Kentucky men.

The riding stables at the park had been abandoned for more than two years and state plans called for a new picnic area to replace the weed-infested stable, but the dream of Bill Fischer, of Covington and Jim Brulport, of Newport rescued the horses' haven from demolition.

The dream started when a friend told Fischer about the beauty of Jenny Wiley and its lack of a riding facility. "When we came here we found that it was one of the prettiest parks in Eastern Kentucky," Fischer commented. The two men began to check around and found that the stables had not been in use for two years. "It seemed to us that most people would enjoy horseback riding and most of the state parks didn't have it," Brulport said. "If we hadn't had a farm it would probably be impossible to start this business," Fischer added.

The two men have varied interests and thought that the riding stable would be a pleasant way to escape the rat race. Brulport is the owner of an electronics company in Newport and Fischer, besides owning a fencing business, is the owner of a video gallery at Fort Thomas.

The two men say they have to work from sun-up to sun-down but they enjoy the challenge. Besides owning nine horses they also own a pony to give the small fry a chance to be a buckaroo. The men accompany people on the trail and won't tolerate "horsing" around. "We have a lot of concern for safety and try to see that people enjoy themselves," Fischer said, so we instruct the riders in proper horsemanship."

The men say the cost of insurance is prohibitive and, being a major expense, has run many people out of the stable business.

Both Brulport and Fischer plan to work this summer to improve the stable and Brulport says that his son, Kevin, will join them for the summer to help out.

The men plan to introduce a carriage at the May Lodge for those who want a more relaxed ride and hope to begin operation soon.

"There's some beautiful country here, and there's no better way to see it than with a healthy steed," Brulport said.

Handwashing Program Conducted

Garrett Elementary student, first grader Dalenda Howard, is one of the approximately 900 first graders in 15 public and private schools in the county who received instruction in proper handwashing techniques during May from health professionals of Our Lady of the Way Hospital. She is shown examining some of the items given to her and others during the program at Garrett.

Infection Control Coordinator Judy Hamm, R.N., B.S., taught the program at Mountain Christian Academy, Allen Elementary, Stumbo Elementary, Garrett Elementary, Wayland Elementary and Maytown Elementary. She was assisted by hospital volunteer, Louise West, at the latter three.

Education Director Naewana Nickles, R.N., B.S.N., instructed first graders at Martin Elementary and Clark Elementary. Operating Room Supervisor Sheila Akers, R.N., took the program to McDowell Elementary. Nursing Director Charlotte Lawson, R.N., taught first graders at Melvin and Osborne.

Materials Management Director Sharon May did the program for first graders at Harold, Betsy Layne and Prafer. Quality Assurance/Risk Management Coordinator Cindy Kidd, R.N., C.N.A., taught handwashing to Prestonsburg Elementary's first graders.

The participation of several employees enabled the program to reach so many children in a very short time.

"We're really pleased," remarked the hospital's public relations consultant, Gwen Hall. "Since it was so late in the school year, we would have been happy to just 'pilot' the program in a few schools as preparation for next year. As it turned out, a majority of Floyd county's first graders received handwashing instruction. Hopefully next year we'll be able to reach all Floyd county first graders and perhaps some in neighboring counties as well."

The handwashing program for schools was developed by Our Lady of the Way's Infection Control Committee, Education Department and Public Relations Department in consultation with Floyd county school nurse Jennifer Martin. The program is an outgrowth of the hospital's Scrubby Bear program which has stressed handwashing as the primary way to prevent the spread of infection and disease through various activities in the hospital, at Wellfest celebrations and at Camp Shawnee.

To teach handwashing techniques, each instructor used a hospital-produced flip chart and video featuring Scrubby Bear. The students were encouraged to learn the "Scrubby Bear Handwashing Song" and all received copies of the song and other mementos of the hospital's program. On behalf of Floyd county school nurse Jennifer Martin, public school teachers were given soap and a pack of activity sheets donated by Proctor and Gamble.

Educational activities which promote health are implementations of Our Lady of the Way Hospital's mission and philosophy. Teachers interested in scheduling a handwashing program or a presentation on a different health topic for the coming school year should contact Education Director Naewana Nickles at 285-3909.

Foodbank Program Opens

Foodbanking prevents usable food from going to waste and channels this food to hungry people. On Thursday, May 19, the West Prestonsburg Crisis Food Center held its grand opening with Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo and City Administrator Fred A. James on hand.

God's Pantry-Crisis Food Center collects food and non-food products from local, regional and national donors including manufacturers, processors, wholesalers and retailers. These products may be overproduced, nearing expiration date, partially damaged or mislabeled—but are still usable. We act as a clearinghouse to distribute them to non-profit organizations with on-site feeding programs and emergency food box programs that serve the needy, infants and children, the infirm, elderly and handicapped. Day care centers, nursing homes, halfway houses, soup kitchens, and children's homes are the principle users of these products.

The Food Center is an affiliate of the Second Harvest National Foodbank Network. The coordinating body of the national surplus food network, Second Harvest receives food from nearly every major food corporation and distributes it to member foodbanks throughout the nation. Of the Second Harvest food coming to Kentucky 38% is distributed through God's Pantry Crisis Food Center. It is estimated that almost 20 percent of the food produced each year, is subject to waste.

Their warehouse located at 401 Happy Hollow in West Prestonsburg allows them to better serve the non-profit agencies of Eastern Kentucky who will use foodbank products in their service to the needy. 501-C-3 agencies from Breathitt, Floyd, Harlan, Johnson, Knott, Leslie, Letcher, Perry, Pike and Magoffin counties are eligible to obtain foodbank products.

An application to become a foodbank member agency can be obtained by contacting either our Lexington or West Prestonsburg location.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TWICE: The idea that lightning never strikes twice is a myth. National Wildlife magazine says that not only does lightning strike some places more than once, but some areas like Castle Rock, Colorado and Cape Canaveral, Florida are struck frequently. Upward moving air causes the frequent strikes near the Continental Divide, while converging sea breezes attract the lightning on the Florida coastline.

Jobless Rate Rises in Floyd, Other ADD District Counties

Unemployment rates in 98 Kentucky counties fell between March and April as a strong seasonal expansion boosted employment in agriculture, trade, construction and services.

Twenty counties had higher rates, while two (Anderson and Breathitt) had the same jobless rate in April as in March, according to a report on labor force trends released recently by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

In the Big Sandy Area Development District which includes Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin, and Pike counties, the jobless rate rose from a revised 15.5 in March to a preliminary 16.3 in April. All of the district's counties reported double-digit unemployment percentage rates, ranging from a low of 14.3 percent in Johnson county to 20.2 percent in Magoffin county. Floyd county was second lowest with 14.6, followed by Martin county with 15.8. Pike county's jobless percentage was 17.3. A monthly sampling of claimants of unemployment insurance benefits showed 57.3 percent had worked in mining.

The local figures mirrored the drop in the statewide jobless rate—from a revised 9.4 percent in March to a preliminary 8.5 percent in April. This marks the 13th consecutive month Kentucky has recorded a single-digit unemployment rate. In April 1987 the state recorded 9.1 percent unemployment.

Kentucky's chief labor market analyst, Ed Blackwell, said, "Since Kentucky's jobless rate went above 10 percent in January 1982, we haven't had single-digit unemployment for more than nine months in a row until this year. More Kentuckians are in the labor force and more are working as job opportunities have increased. Gradually, we're returning to pre-recession jobless rates and higher employment figures."

Nationally, unemployment dropped from 5.9 percent in March to 5.3 percent in April. The comparable state and national rates are not seasonally adjusted.

Compared to April 1987, 70 counties had lower jobless rates, 48 counties reported higher rates, and two (Lincoln and Shelby) had the same rates.

A total of 56 counties had unemployment rates of 10.0 percent or above, compared to 76 in March and 66 in April 1987.

Trimble county recorded the lowest rate, 2.7 percent, followed by Carroll with 4.4 percent, Woodford with 4.8 percent and Shelby with 4.9 percent.

Edmonson county's 25.1 percent rate was the highest, followed by Elliott's 23.4

percent, Montgomery's 21.7 percent and Menifee's 21.5 percent.

The largest number of job increases was recorded in agriculture (+9,100), which Blackwell attributed to "good spring planting weather."

Another 9,500 jobs were added to payrolls in trade (+3,900), construction (+2,900), and services (+2,700). "The beginning of the tourism season helped boost employment in trade and services," Blackwell said, "as more people were working in restaurants, hotels and motels and recreation."

Increases also were recorded in the category that includes domestic workers and unpaid family members working in a family business (+5,700); transportation, communications and utilities (+400); and state and local government (+200). Losses were recorded in manufacturing (-600); coal mining (-400); and federal agencies (-200).

The federal estimate of Kentuckians working in April, as measured by the U.S. Department of Labor's household survey, was 1,559,600, a record for April. This was 15,400 more than the previous high for that month, recorded in 1986. It was up from 1,540,200 in March and 1,526,200 in April 1987.

The federal estimate of unemployed Kentuckians was 146,000 in April, down 14,400 from March's figure of 160,400 and 6,100 below the April 1987 report of 152,100.

Kentucky's civilian labor force estimate for April was 1,705,600, up 5,000 from 1,700,600 in March and 27,300 more than the April 1987 figure of 1,678,300. This includes people who have non-military jobs and unemployed Kentuckians who actively are seeking work. It does not include the unemployed who have not looked for a job in four weeks.

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and are compiled to measure employment trends rather than to actually count people working.

MULTI-GRAIN BREADS

They may look superhealthy and nutritious, but they can contain as many as 100 calories per slice, reports Good Housekeeping in its June issue. Breads labeled "very thin slices" or the new full-slices reduced-calorie are only 35 to 40 calories per slice. Mini-pita breads have about 80 calories, but the regular size pita breads can be about 140 calories. Tip: Look for breads with nutrition labeling; you'll know exactly what you're getting.

Evil And Terrorism To Be KET Subject

Two programs discussing the subjects of terrorism and evil air on KET Thursday, June 16. Beginning at 8 p.m., Moyers: Facing Evil invites viewers to hear testimonies of dramatic confrontations with the force of evil. Immediately following at 9:30 p.m., the special Portrait of a Terrorist looks at the causes and cures of terrorism.

Moyers: Facing Evil, recorded during the "Understanding Evil" symposium at the Institute for Humanities in Salado, Texas, features testimonies from poet Maya Angelou; Holocaust scholar Raul Hilberg; dancer, choreographer, author Chung-Liang Al Huang; former U.S. Congresswoman Barbara Jordan; philosopher Philip Paul Hallie; and educator and minister, Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, pastor of New York City's Abyssinian Baptist Church. The result is a series of personal testimonies on the persistent question of the relationship between good and evil.

Portrait of a Terrorist looks at tourism through the eyes of Fernando Gabeira, a political activist who in 1969 participated in the abduction of an American ambassador. This program offers the viewer an opportunity to meet a terrorist face to face, and to hear the reasons that led him to the actions he took, and that form his position today on terrorism.

Currently, Gabeira is a respected print and broadcast journalist in Brazil. He also is a best-selling author and is running for governor of the state of Rio de Janeiro. Gabeira's position on terrorism has undergone a change, but he does not regret the 1969 kidnapping.

Also featured in Portrait of a Terrorist is U.S. Ambassador to Brazil Diego Asencio, a victim of terrorism when guerrillas in Colombia held him under the threat of death.

Moyers: Facing Evil is a co-presentation of WNET/New York; WTTW/Chicago; and KERA/Dallas-Ft. Worth. Portrait of a Terrorist is a production of International Cinema Inc.

Telling Tales
Revives Tradition

Telling Tales presents folklore from Africa to the Appalachian mountains on KET, Premiering Monday, June 6 at 1:00 p.m./12:00 noon CT as part of KET's summer lineup for children. Telling Tales presents four storytellers, who have told their stories to young and old alike, sharing their native folklore.

Gloria Bivens as "Mama Yaa" weaves "webs of wisdom" into the African stories she shares at family reunions, weddings, picnics, museums, churches, and regional schools and universities. She developed an enthusiasm for telling tales through listening to the stories passed on by her grandparents, parents, relatives, and neighborhood librarian.

"In keeping with tradition, the stories we passed on to me through oral tradition, an ancient art of my ancestors," Bivens says. "It is through the telling of the stories that I came to know and understand the world of cultures that surrounds me. The African oral tradition is...shared in many parts of the world. Storytelling is a shared experience that connects the storyteller and the story listener as one link in a chain."

The lively antics of Anndrena Belcher delight audiences of all ages as she weaves entertaining tales from the Old World, the Appalachian Mountains, and contemporary times. Presenting stories with music, dance, costume, and audience participation, Anndrena gives life to mountain history by connecting the joys and sorrows of the past to modern-day situations.

Often accompanied by mountain musicians who play fiddle, banjo, or guitar, she enacts the tales of the legendary Jack; Ashpet, a mountain Cinderella; Clever Samantha; and other historical and fanciful characters.

Tom Bledsoe and Rich Kirby share their mountain folklore through music and stories. In the past ten years, Bledsoe and Kirby have built a reputation as being among the country's leading performers of music from the Southern Mountains, a rich tradition which still forms the core of their work. Raised in the musical ways of the mountains, for years the two have played old-time music with knowledge, respect, and love.

The duet plays everywhere from kindergartens to political rallies and fiddlers' conventions. From such different situations, they have developed impressive skills on banjo, mandolin, guitar, fiddle, harmonica. They also call and teach mountain dances.

Telling Tales is a KET production.

The first bowling tournament for women was held in St. Louis, Missouri in 1917.

Cocaine.
The party's over.

It probably started with occasional use at parties, a line or two at concerts and other special events, perhaps a gram or so on weekends when some of your friends came over.

Now, you're using all the time. And like thousands of others, you're suspecting that cocaine isn't the safe, non-addictive, recreational drug that everyone was saying it was a few years ago.

You're right. One in ten people who snort cocaine become addicted within four years. And half of all cocaine smokers end up totally unable to regulate their use, often in a much shorter time.

How can you tell when you've stopped being a social user? Well, if you find it difficult to refuse cocaine when it's available, or you use it even in inappropriate circumstances, then you've already started down the road of addiction.

What happens next is you completely lose control of your use. When you have coke, you do it until either you or the drug is exhausted.

If you continue, you get so you don't care what happens, as long as you have cocaine. You steal, lie, cheat, deal and risk prison to get it. You'll likely put everything you once valued at risk. Your job, home, possessions, family, friends, and of course your health.

Even if you're mentally stable, continued use will probably make you paranoid and may give you terrifyingly real hallucinations.

But most frightening of all, despite all this, you may still feel you're totally in control.

Don't believe that feeling. It's the drug talking. And cocaine lies.

At CareUnit, we help more people overcome their problems with drugs and alcohol than any other private treatment program. Over 55,000 came to us last year alone.

Our program includes careful medical supervision, education, group sessions and free lifetime aftercare. And because cocaine addiction is a special problem, CareUnit doctors and therapists are experts in this field.

CareUnit's initial consultation is completely confidential, it costs nothing, and our treatment is covered by most insurance plans.

Call for yourself, or for someone you care about, but call.

Because when the party's over, you can be sure the nightmare is only just beginning.

Additional Federal Funds Boost AIDS Prevention Program in State

Nearly $438,000 in federal funds will enable Kentucky public health officials to significantly expand the state's AIDS education and prevention efforts.

Human Resources Secretary Harry Cowherd, M.D., said the eight-month grant is almost twice the amount of federal money received last year and will bolster counseling and testing in health departments, support an AIDS information line and more public education and strengthen the state's data-gathering abilities.

At the same time, the 1988 General Assembly allocated $500,000 in state funding for AIDS prevention for the 1988-89 fiscal year to be used for salaries, laboratory equipment and increased AIDS infection tracking.

"Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome has stricken more Kentuckians in the first five months of 1988 than during any entire year prior to 1987," Cowherd said. "Educating the public with the goal of preventing HIV infection and ultimate death is one of Kentucky's top public health priorities."

"This combination of federal and state money means we can further build on the AIDS education and prevention efforts that began in earnest in 1986."

Kentucky has recorded 28 AIDS cases to date in 1988. That brings the historical number to 149, of which 92 have died. The numbers reflect both a change in disease incidence and a broader case definition.

State Health Commissioner Carlos Hernandez, M.D., said nearly $231,000 has been set aside for AIDS education. "We will provide educational materials, assist several AIDS support organizations, prepare and distribute information to Kentucky news media, develop education aimed at minorities, and operate a continuing telephone survey to gauge knowledge about AIDS," Hernandez said.

The state AIDS information line, which has provided a recorded message to more than 10,000 callers since August 1986, will continue. This month the line is being staffed by specialists trained to answer questions Kentuckians might have as a result of the national AIDS pamphlet mailing. The number is 1-800-654-AIDS. Public health experts are also available to speak to groups on AIDS.

Nearly $167,000 will be used for counseling and testing programs in which Kentuckians can get pre- and post-test counseling and the HIV antibody test at 28 health departments sites across the state. In the past three years, more than 3,600 AIDS antibody tests have been performed at these sites.

Senior Citizens Program Accepting Applications

"This grant will fund additional sites across the state as we move toward a goal of 40 sites that will serve every region of Kentucky," said Hernandez.

Counseling and testing funds also will allow staff at test sites to devote more time to notifying partners of people testing positive to the AIDS virus. In any situation, Hernandez said, notification will be done only with the client's permission.

The state surveillance program makes up the third large category of federal grant funds with nearly $40,000.

"We now have in place a very complete surveillance system for AIDS cases," said Hernandez. "By combining reports from the medical community with our own active surveillance, we are able to maintain up-to-date statistical information about AIDS in Kentucky."

"This year, we'll begin to upgrade our data on the number of Kentuckians testing positive for the HIV virus, which will help us immensely in planning for Kentucky's future education and health care needs."

Officials will gather statistical information on AIDS virus positives from blood banks, laboratories and testing of military recruits.

Between 1957 and 1987, married women entered the labor market in record numbers and their participation rate more than doubled—to 68 percent, while the rate for single women remained around 80 percent, and that for widowed, divorced, or separated women rose to 79 percent, according to the March issue of the Monthly Labor Review, a U.S. Labor Department publication.

Hazardous Waste Sites Concerns Ky. Governor

Governor Wallace G. Wilkinson has directed the Department for Environmental Protection to make immediate improvements in its program to clean up old hazardous waste sites. He also instructed the department to develop a comprehensive plan for waste management in Kentucky. Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Secretary Carl H. Bradley outlined Governor Wilkinson's instructions to the Cabinet last week at a University of Louisville sponsored seminar on how to reduce hazardous waste.

"It is unacceptable to me for Kentuckians to be unsuccessfully exposed to hazardous waste," said Wilkinson.

Governor Wilkinson said concern over the contaminated drinking water from two springs in Bullitt county prompted his action. "I have been assured by the department that the families have been provided an alternative source of water," said Wilkinson.

Governor Wilkinson said he appointed a new team in the Department for Environmental Protection and that they had already begun to make changes, particularly in the Division of Waste Management. "But I have asked them to fast-track the changes in the Uncontrolled Hazardous Waste Sites Program," Wilkinson said.

Actions the Department for Environmental Protection is taking to make the program more effective in protecting public health and the environment include the following:

(1) Reviewing all sites previously investigated to determine if hazards posed by those sites were adequately addressed.

(2) Examining all analytical data and ensuring that potentially affected persons are notified when hazardous substances are found in their water sources.

(3) Implementing aggressive measures to identify other existing abandoned sites and determine their potential for environmental contamination and human exposure. The Department will seek help from Kentucky industries and the public to locate any such sites.

(4) Identifying additional funding sources for increased staff and enforcement activities. The Department is looking at new sources as well as increasing permit fees and the Hazardous Waste Management Fund.

(5) Using field staff to participate in site screening and sampling to reduce time lags between site discovery and public notification of potential hazards. The site screening and sampling is currently performed by staff from Frankfort.

(6) Strengthening the state's enforcement policies to force those responsible for abandoned hazardous waste to clean it up, and to ensure that waste currently produced is properly handled.

(7) Working with other state officials to form a human and environmental exposure assessment group to improve the state's decision-making capabilities. One of the functions of such a group will be to answer questions raised by citizens concerned about the health effects of exposure.

(8) Increasing efforts to work with waste producers to reduce the amount of hazardous waste to be disposed.

Governor Wilkinson also called for a waste management plan for Kentucky. "I have instructed the Department for Environmental Protection to develop a comprehensive statewide Waste Management Plan. In developing the plan, I want maximum involvement of citizens, the regulated waste producers and the Waste Management Task Force recently established by the legislature.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

A DOSE OF YOUR OWN MEDICINE

Before the 1920's, very few of the available drugs had much affect. However, this fact allowed them to be safe. Today, drugs are both effective and potentially dangerous. This means that prescribing dosages has become a very exact science. There is no longer an "average dose". Today's pharmaceutical publications suggest a "usual dosage range". The doctor takes a patient's weight, age, and general condition into account when prescribing a dosage within this range. In addition, drug manufacturers suggest optimal dosages based on extensive testing. They also determine the median effective dose and median toxic dose. All this points out the folly of a patient meddling with his doctor's prescribed dosage. The effect could be disastrous.

COOLEY APOTHECARY can provide you and your family with your total prescription needs as well as any over the counter remedies you require. Our entire staff keeps up to date on the latest developments in our industry. We are located at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Master Card and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-3.

HINT:
The difference in dosage between a beneficial effect and poisonous one of digitalis is minimal.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: My 38-year-old Uncle just died of melanoma. He had a mole on his back for many years before he brought it to the doctor's attention. When they removed it he was told it already had spread to his lungs and he died a year later. I have several moles. How can I be sure they're not cancer?

ANSWER: Malignant melanoma is a serious skin cancer that arises in moles or in the tanning cells of the skin. In its early stages, when it can be easily treated, the disease is not life threatening. But in later stages, malignant melanoma spreads to other organs and treatment is not always successful.

Regular self-examination is the best way to become familiar with the many moles and spots on your skin. You should regularly examine your skin, including hard-to-see areas (back, scalp, buttocks, feet).

You should pay special attention to size, shape, edges and color.

Size—Early melanomas tend to be larger than 1/4 inch in diameter.

Shape—Common moles are round and symmetrical. Melanomas are asymmetrical, meaning a line drawn through the middle will not create matching halves.

Edges—The borders of melanoma are uneven and often contain notches. Common moles have smooth, even edges.

Color—Different shades of brown or black or when the mole changes from one color to another is often the first sign of melanoma.

With melanoma, early detection and treatment can make the difference. If you have something that you're concerned about, see your family doctor or a dermatologist.

Del Monte Offers Tomato Cookbook

With the continuing popularity of such ethnic foods as Cajun, Italian and Mexican, the tomato has become a prized commodity.

Indeed, with only 35 calories per half cup serving, and high amounts of Vitamins A and C, it's no wonder tomatoes have been a staple with good cooks throughout the world.

Now Del Monte USA, one of the nation's leading manufacturers of canned tomatoes, is offering a free cookbook to consumers with recipes and facts about tomatoes. Did you know, for example, that tomatoes are native to the Americas? Or that many Europeans used to think tomatoes were poisonous? Or that cooks in Naples, Italy invented spaghetti with tomato sauce in the 16th century?

The cookbook, "The Del Monte Tomato Times," offers an array of traditional favorites plus ethnic recipes. Consumers can order a copy by sending their name, address and zip code to Del Monte Tomato Times/Recipe Officer, P.O. Box 7964, Clinton, Iowa 52736 (allow 8-10 weeks for processing).

The recipe booklet offers descriptions of ethnic foods along with recipes. Cajun and Creole cooking is described as Louisiana cooking, a spicy cuisine that incorporates lots of peppers, onion, tomatoes, garlic and cayenne pepper. Some of the Louisiana recipes included are Cajun Clam Chowder, Gumbo and Louisiana Chicken.

The use of tomatoes in Mexican cooking is traced to 700 A.D., according to the booklet, which also offers such Mexican favorites as Fiesta Dip and Ranch-style Bean Soup.

Some of the Italian recipes are Basic Chunky Pasta Sauce, Easy Chicken Cacciatore and Napolitano Skillet Pasta, a dish you can serve in the same pan.

Salesmanship Appreciated

Dollie Billiter, left, educational and cookbook chairperson for the Big Sandy Council of Telephone Pioneers, presents a certificate of appreciation to Sonya Ratliff at her beauty shop in Allen.

Mrs. Ratliff has assisted the telephone pioneers by selling cookbooks and according to Mrs. Billiter, "Sonya sold a tremendous number."

The sale of cookbooks is one of several projects the council undertakes throughout the year. Profits made from all projects are then distributed to worthy causes in the Big Sandy area.

New Cornbread Adds Zest To Sandwiches

By Ben Hardin, USDA

Cornbread's down-home flavor can't be matched, so it's too bad it can't stand up to thin slicing and hands-on sandwich eating.

But cornbread may soon be liberated from its role as second fiddle to other breads when it's time for ham and beans.

Kathleen A. Warner, a food technologist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has whipped up an experimental sandwich-style cornbread that could star at the deli counter and bake shop. Made with corn flour instead of corn meal, the new bread stays together when cut, like regular white and wheat sandwich breads do.

Warner says the new bread has a delicate corn flavor and rich golden color that set it apart from conventional breads. Its texture resembles that of some popular coarse-textured breads, and it slices well.

"It really enhances the taste of a sandwich with turkey, swiss cheese and alfalfa sprouts. It also makes good toast," says Warner, from her laboratory "kitchen" at the Northern Regional Research Center operated by USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Peoria, Ill.

"Corn-flour bread is more likely to appear in specialty bake shops, delis and restaurants," says Warner. But if the new bread catches on there, a pre-mixed dough may someday be on supermarket shelves.

For taste, she rates corn-flour bread a nine on a scale of one to ten. "An eight would match most commercial breads. I liked it more because of the subtle corn flavor."

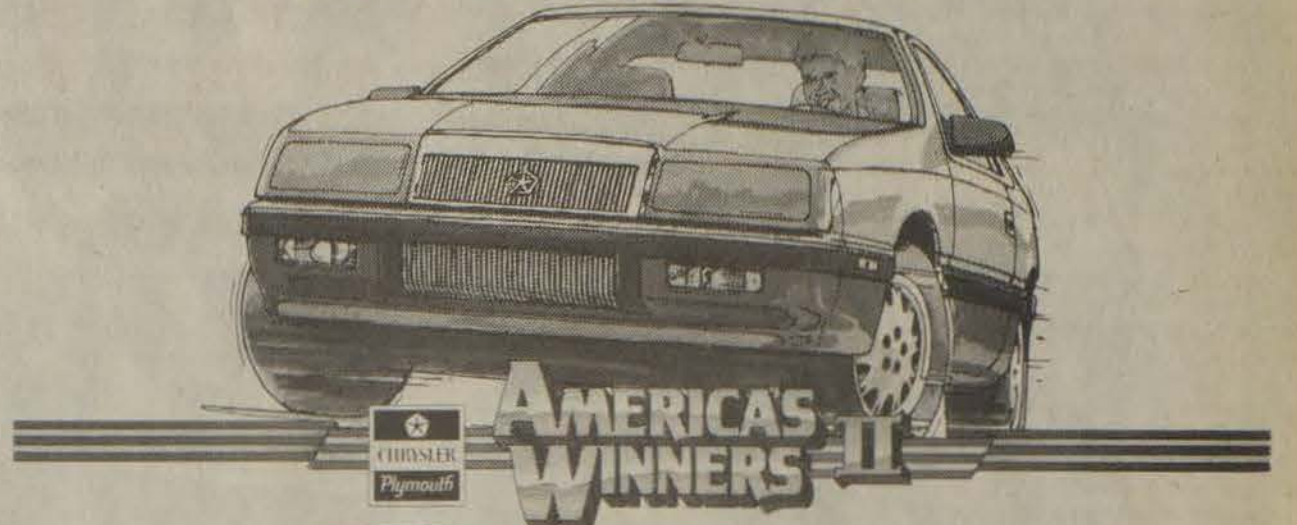

Her recipe—actually a "research formulation"—isn't for home baking. It was designed for professional bakers as one result of studies into the physical properties of dough.

The secret, says Warner, is a dough mix that is about equal parts corn flour and bread wheat flour, plus gluten. That's a natural protein plentiful in wheat flour—but not in corn flour—that allows dough to rise. And the dough is leavened with yeast, not with the baking powder used in regular cornbread.

Warner used bread flour made with hard red spring wheat, but she says any good wheat bread flour can be substituted. All-purpose flour, which many home bakers use, will not work: the bread will not rise properly and will be heavy.

The new bread could open up a new market for surplus American corn if it's a hit with consumers, says Edward B. Bagley, who heads research on food physical chemistry at the Peoria center.

Crafts Jurying Deadline July 15

Craftspeople not already registered in the Kentucky Department of the Arts Resource Directory are being urged to sign up now in order to be able to apply for various 1988-89 crafts activities. This includes eligibility for the business development and loan program as well as other segments of the state's plan to strengthen and expand the crafts industry.

Application deadline for jurying is July 15, and both traditional and contemporary craftspeople are urged to apply. Applicants will be required to submit quality slides of their work; no samples will be accepted for this jury session. Another jurying session will be held in November.

Craftspeople must have their work juried and accepted for the Crafts Marketing Program of the Department of the Arts. This is necessary in order for them to participate in the Business Development and Loan Program, and to take part in events such as the department's annual wholesale market, department-coordinated booths at national gift shows, the Derby Breakfast craft fair, and displays in the state park system and at state welcome centers.

A jury of three nationally prominent crafts professionals will review the products for quality of design, technique and originality. Jurors are Sandra Blain, director of Arrowmont School; professor of ceramics, the University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Phillip Lancaster, retail buyer, Storehouse, Atlanta; and Lynn Allinger, owner of Craft Company No. 6, Rochester, N.Y., and American Details in Coconut Grove, Fla.

Craftspeople whose products do not pass the jury review may still be part of the department's Resource Directory, attend workshops and receive other technical assistance from the department.

To register, contact Crafts Marketing Program, Kentucky Department of the Arts, Berry Hill, Louisville Road, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call (502) 564-8076.

Big Offense Brings Win As Locals Down Pikeville 9-6

It was bound to happen. Everyone had expected it to break loose even before it did.

After getting only 11 hits in their first two games, Floyd County's American Legion baseball team erupted for 16 hits Saturday evening enroute to a 9-6 win over Pikeville.

Floyd County had collected only six hits in a 13-7 loss Friday night to Morehead, and had five against Clark County, losing that contest, 9-7, after jumping out to a 6-1 early lead.

But in the 5:30 final, Saturday, Floyd County, playing in the 17th annual Morehead Invitational Tournament, left nothing to chance against Pikeville and Robbie Wright. They scored five in the first and added three more in the second, and held on for their first win of the tourney.

Wright, a righthanded thrower from Pikeville High School, went the distance for Pikeville, giving up five runs and 16 hits. He neither struck out nor walked a batter. Three of the runs were unearned.

Nathan Shelton, pitching for the first time since the high school district tournament, struggled with his control, but still managed to stick around for the complete game win.

Shelton, a southpaw from Allen Central, gave up only six hits, but walked five Pikeville hitters. He also struck out five in the route going performance. Three of the six runs were earned.

Floyd County, 3-2 counting two forfeit wins, had three players to collect three hits each. Centerfielder Mike McQuate and second baseman Mason Slone had three hits each and both scored twice. Designated hitter Brad Hall banged out three singles, drove in two runs, and scored once to add to the 16-hit Floyd County attack.

McQuate, a speedster from McDowell, got the local offense rolling in the first when he beat out an infield chopper. He ended up at third when Wright threw late and high over first base.

McQuate scored on a Mason Slone single. Slone, an infielder from Knott Central, eventually crossed the plate on a two-out single off the bat of Brad Hall. That was the beginning of a string of two-out hits.

First baseman Jeff Lovely and rightfielder Waylon Estep followed with singles, and leftfielder Brad Hall, occasionally referred to as 'Little' in an effort to separate him from the other, scored both when he drove a double to right center.

Leading 5-2—Pikeville scored twice in the top of the first—Floyd County padded their lead with three runs in the second inning. After sending nine men to the plate in the first, the local squad kept the parade rolling on as seven hitters took a turn at the plate in the second.

McQuate again led off with a single, and moved to third on Slone's second hit of the game. Tim Trusty then executed a perfect hit and run play, bouncing a single through the spot vacated by second baseman Mike McCoy.

McQuate scored on the play, with Slone moving on to third. Catcher Kevin Webb brought Slone home with a sacrifice fly, and Trusty later scored as 'Big' Brad Hall singled.

Shelton, meanwhile, was busy keeping Pikeville at bay. The slender lefty, after giving up two hits in the first, gave Pikeville only one run over the next three innings.

But guarding a five-run lead in the fifth, Shelton's control eluded him, and two walks and two errors led to three Pikeville runs. Of the six players who crossed the plate for Pikeville, three reached base on walks.

Following the fifth inning, though, Shelton walked back to the dugout saying, "I'll get 'em the next two times," and he made good on his promise.

He did not allow a hit over the last two and two-thirds innings, and set Pikeville down in order in the final frame. Shelton, in the seventh, retired Robbie Taylor on a grounder to shortstop Ray Collins, struck Jamie May out, and secured the win when he induced Duran Newsome to fly out.

Pikeville, 1-6 on the season, did not have a player to collect more than one hit, and had only one batter to reach base over the last two and two-thirds innings.

Every player in the Floyd County lineup had at least one hit or one run batted in. Trusty and 'Little' Brad Hall had two hits each. Lovely, Estep, and Ray Collins added a hit apiece to the local effort.

Floyd County, although they committed three errors, played their best game defensively of the tournament. But the three errors they did commit led to three Pikeville runs.

They finished the tournament with a 1-2 record while Pikeville, who was mercied 11-0 by Morehead, Saturday, went 0-3 in the tourney held at City Park in Morehead.

Clark County and host Morehead advanced from the FC bracket. Morehead defeated Clark County, Saturday night, to earn a berth in the championship game while CC played for third place.

Shelbyville and Paris represented the other bracket in the championship and consolation round which were held Sunday. Morehead won the tourney, defeating Shelbyville. Paris beat Clark County, 5-4, for third place.

Tipton Effective But Holes In Defense Lead To FC Loss

Mark Tipton enjoyed one of his better performances of his career, but his team failed to support the hard throwing righthander, and as a result, Floyd County lost 13-7 to Morehead, Friday night.

Tipton, a graduate of Betsy Layne High School, surrendered seven runs on five hits, but only two runs were earned. Tipton struck out five in his four plus innings of work.

He pitched out of a two on and no out situation in the first, and picked a runner off first in the third to keep Floyd County in the game.

In the first inning, Tipton, after leadoff hitter Mike Parsons struck out, but reached first on a passed ball, and shortstop Kip Crager beat out an infield roller. Tipton struck out designated hitter Tucker Howard, got Jackie Little on a popup to short, and struck out Donnie Hackworth.

Tipton set Morehead down in order in the second inning, but they finally reached the FC pitcher for two hits and two runs, one unearned in the third inning. They added three in the fourth, two unearned, as Floyd County committed two errors.

But they made up for that in the top of the fourth, scoring twice to tie the game at 2-2, and came back with four in the fifth to take a 6-5 advantage.

Floyd County, playing in their first game of the season, scored two runs in the fourth, thanks to some Greg Cole control problems and a costly Morehead error.

Cole, a righthander from Magoffin County, walked Tim Trusty and Kevin Webb with one out, and both moved up on an error. Trusty later scored on a wild pitch, and Webb crossed the plate on a passed ball, tying the score at 2-2.

But in the bottom of the fourth Morehead, 6-0 on the season, scored three times, thanks to three hits and a couple Floyd County errors to take a 5-2 lead.

As rapidly as they fell behind, Floyd County rallied with four big runs in the top of the fifth, chasing Cole from the game.

FC, after going hitless in the first four innings, collected four hits in the fifth, all singles, and plated five runs to take the one run advantage.

'Little' Brad Hall led the inning off with a hit, Floyd County's first of the game, and after Thomas Hall popped up to the pitcher, Mike McQuate, Kevin Webb, and 'Big' Brad Hall all hit safely in the inning.

In between the hitting, catcher Tony Kidd walked. Kidd was the last hitter Cole faced as Morehead coach Don Harden replaced him on the mound with Tucker Howard.

Howard, from Paintsville, came into the game with two on and one out, but proceeded to strike Trusty out for the second out. Floyd County, though, reached Howard for two hits and a run to take the lead, although it was a short-lived one.

Tipton, apparently tired due to a lack of work, lost sight of the strike zone. It had been over a month since he had last pitched, and Tipton's rustiness showed itself when he walked the first two in the fifth.

Although he had done an excellent job of mixing his pitches, keeping Morehead hitters off balance with a new-found circle change, Tipton was lifted in the fifth after walking Hackworth and Shawn Nickells to begin the inning.

Waylon Estep, a hard thrower from Knott Central, came on to pitch for Floyd County, but two walks, two errors, and a Morehead hit later, the host team held a 12-6 advantage.

Howard, using a good fast ball, and quick breaking curve, held Floyd County off as Morehead, one of the top offensive teams in the state, posted a 13-7 victory.

Howard pitched two and two-thirds innings, and was given credit for the win when Morehead scored seven times in the fifth. Floyd County scored three times on five hits against Howard.

Tipton, although he showed flashes of brilliance against an explosive team, was tagged with the loss. He is expected to see his next pitching duty today when Floyd County takes on Boyd County. Tipton is scheduled to pitch the first game.

Floyd County had a total of six hits off three Morehead pitchers. Kevin Webb and 'Big' Brad Hall had two hits each. Mike McQuate and 'Little' Brad Hall had a single apiece to round out the offense.

Webb, playing third base for Floyd County, drilled a seventh inning double for the team's only extra base hit.

Morehead had eight hits, two of the infield variety, and one that hit on the foul line in right, and another that hit the third base bag.

But six Floyd County errors and six walks didn't help the local effort any.

Free Fishing Days Set This Weekend

Kentucky will have a free fishing weekend June 11 and 12. Commissioner Don R. McCormick of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and Secretary Mary Ray Oaken of the Tourism Cabinet has announced recently at a news conference held at the Game Farm.

This means anyone, any age, whether resident or nonresident, may fish Kentucky waters without possessing a sport fishing license on this particular Saturday and Sunday in June. However, anglers must observe current size and creel limits and all other regulations governing fishing. Anglers should also obtain permission before entering private lands.

Kentucky's free fishing days will be held in conjunction with National Fishing Week, June 6-12. Kentucky's Fishing Week, designated by proclamation of Governor Wallace G. Wilkinson, will coincide with National Fishing Week. Over 25 other states are observing the June fishing week in a similar fashion.

Free fishing days are designed to promote recreational fishing by introducing persons of all ages to this healthy, wholesome and relaxing outdoor sport.

Cincinnati Camp Set For Saturday

A tryout camp for baseball players will be conducted by the Cincinnati Reds on Saturday, June 11th in Paintsville, Kentucky at the Johnson Central High School Baseball Field. The camp is open to all boys from 16 to 22 years of age. High school sophomores and juniors are especially urged to attend.

Reds scouting supervisor, Gene Bennett, will be in charge of the workouts which is scheduled to start promptly at 10:00 a.m. Registration will begin at 9:00 a.m. and all players participating in the workouts must be registered prior to the 10:00 a.m. starting time. Bennett will be assisted by Reds Scouts Don Moyer, Fred Hayes, Jack Bick, Steve Kring, Dave Bennett and Bob Kouns.

All eligible players are requested to bring their own uniform, glove and shoes. The Reds will furnish all other equipment. In addition, each player will be responsible for his traveling and living expense, if any, unless signed to a contract with the Cincinnati Reds organization.

Players must be 16 years of age to be eligible to participate and all American Legion players must bring written permission from their Post Commander or their Legion Coach in order to try out. Several of the players now playing baseball in the Major Leagues today were first seen at tryout camps such as this one and any boy seriously interested in playing professional baseball should make every effort to attend this camp.

Big Lead Wasted As FC Falls To Clark County

What started out with a nice local twist soon turned sour, and as a result Floyd County, after leading by as many as five runs, lost 9-7 to Clark County, Saturday morning in the Morehead American Legion Baseball Tournament.

Floyd County, playing its second game of the season, enjoyed a strong start and got some help from Clark County's lack of defense to build a big early lead.

But the local squad, which got all its five hits in the first four innings, quieted down at the plate, and made ugly noise in the field, allowing Clark County to eliminate them from consideration for play Sunday.

The championship game and consolation contests were played Sunday afternoon, but due to the Clark County loss, FC was denied any title action.

But it was certainly a game Floyd County could have won. They led 6-1 going into the third inning, but were unable to protect the lead with Tim Trusty, one of their top hitters, on the mound.

Defense hurt them in the third as Clark County scored three runs in the third, and CC reached Trusty for four hits and five runs in the fourth to take a 9-6 lead.

Clark County sent 11 men to the plate with the big blow being a three-run homerun off the bat of shortstop Scott Porter.

With the bases loaded and one out, Brad Hall replaced Trusty on the mound. The big right hander from Betsy Layne struck out the first batter he faced, and got the second on a fly ball to retire the side.

Hall limited Clark County to only one run the rest of the way, but the damage had already been done. And lefty Lee Wiggington kept Floyd County quiet over the last three innings to hand the locals their second loss of the season.

Floyd County came to within two runs of a tie game when Mason Slone walked and scored on an error in the bottom of the fifth, but they left the bases loaded that inning, and never managed another base runner the remainder of the game.

Wiggington, a left hander, retired the last 10 men in order and Floyd County stranded seven base runners in the second, third, and fourth innings, two main reasons for the two-run loss.

Seven of the last nine of Wiggington's outs were recorded via the air as Floyd County struggled against the slower of the three Clark County pitchers.

"A lot of times hitters have a harder time hitting slower stuff," Clark County coach Bob Lane said. "He did a real good job of mixing his pitches and changing speeds."

Floyd County, against harder throwing Doug Rose and reliever John Clough, scored six times in only one inning, but Wiggington worked six innings and surrendered only one run. He also pitched out of a bases loaded and one out situation in the second.

FC scored three times in the first, thanks to two Clark County errors, and a Waylon Estep R.B.I. single. They added three in the second as Ray Collins and Brad Hall led off with walks and scored when Clough threw Thomas Hall's comebacker away at first.

Tony Kidd, running for Hall, came on around on back to back singles by Mike McQuate and Mason Slone, making the score 6-1.

But Floyd County's luck soon ran thin, and so did their hopes for a high tournament finish when Clark County enjoyed a big fourth inning.

Trusty, 0-1, suffered the loss. He pitched three and one-third innings, giving up all nine runs, six earned, on six hits. He struck out two and walked six.

Trusty is expected to see his next mound duty Thursday when Floyd County opens their home schedule at Allen Park against Ashland.

Tournament Notes: Floyd County had only 10 hitters to strike out in the three games. Seven of those came in the first game against Morehead...Mike McQuate and 'Big' Brad Hall led the team with five hits. Hall drove in four runs and reached base eight times...McQuate and Mason Slone scored four runs each...McQuate, Floyd County's leadoff hitter, reached base seven of his 12 times up...Slone, the second hitter, reached base seven times in 11 plate appearances...Floyd County was outscored 26-23, but out hit their opponents 27-21.

SHORT SPORTS

Floyd County's American Legion baseball squad will continue its season today when they travel to Catlettsburg for a doubleheader with Boyd County.

The local squad opened their season over the weekend when they took part in the 17th Annual Morehead Invitational Tournament, finishing one win in three tries. They were scheduled to play last Wednesday at home, but Lawrence County cancelled its season.

Today's first game is scheduled to begin at 5:30. Mark Tipton, 0-1, will throw the first game with Nathan Shelton going in the second contest.

Floyd County opens its home schedule Thursday when they invite Ashland to Allen Park for a 4:30 double header. Tim Trusty is FC's probable starter for game one, and either Waylon Estep or Brad Hall will throw in the nightcap.

Sunday Flatwoods comes to Allen Park for a double header set for 1 p.m. Floyd County, 3-2 on the season, was scheduled to play a doubleheader at Lawrence County on Saturday, but that date has been erased due to the fact that Lawrence County failed to organize a team.

Floyd County will now play a 38-game schedule this year, three of which have already been completed.

The Sporting Times

Philosophy is a many varied thing, never exactly right, but never totally wrong. Some philosophies seem strange, but to those they belong to, they are clear as a trout stream on a sunny day.

Basic philosophy is as common as sniffles on a cold morning, but the deeper they go the stronger they become, and the more involved people become with their ideas.

Attorneys have philosophies on law. Parents have philosophies on rearing children, but it seems as if no one can think like athletes, react like athletes, and explain the phenoms of life like an athlete.

From Wade Boggs theory of eating chicken on game days to Mohammad Ali's mental torture of his opponents, each athlete has his own philosophy of how to prepare for the job ahead.

But what's better, these guys try and justify their unusual actions by explaining the idea behind the end result. Some are comical, amusing, and entertaining, but all will get attention.

Steve Carlton, a veteran of many pressurized moments of baseball history, refused to talk with members of the mass media, especially the print guys.

Some thought Carlton just didn't like and trust sports writers. Others figured he wasn't interested in the hype and hoopla surrounding the world of journalism.

But Ole Lefty, being the philosophical guy he is, had a much deeper reason for keeping his mouth shut. He wanted sportswriters to earn their money, get their creative juices flowing, and work hard toward entertaining their readers.

Carlton said that writers depend on quotes too much, and don't rely on their skills. The veteran pitcher says he can copy down quotes, and mentioned that writers didn't go to journalism school to learn how to copy down quotes.

Well, sir, your point is well taken, and your philosophy is an interesting one. But Lefty, they do teach you in journalism school about 'copying' down quotes, and especially how to get them.

Maybe you threw a backup slider there, or just tossed a curve in an attempt to smooth over some rough edges created during years of silence.

It sounds good, what you said about quotes. That way writers wouldn't be banging heads trying to get a line or two from a player or coach.

Fans want to know what's going on in the heads of coaches and players, what they were thinking, what they are thinking, and how they might react in the future. The fans want the total, truthful story, not speculation.

If you hadn't finally agreed to speak, we would have thought you just didn't like the press or were too dumb to talk at all.

But Lefty, by taking your time you have drawn attention from all across the country. Hey, we do agree with your notions on quotes...sometimes. Just take for instance after a coach loses a game he should have won, well let's just say that we stay with journalism skills instead of copying down quotes.

And take a look at Richie Phillips, what talking to the press got him. Maybe though, people should think before putting the ole foot in the mouth.

Phillips, executive director of the umpires, was upset that Billy Martin received only a three-day suspension, and a $1,000 fine. And rightly so.

Remember now, this is Martin's second ugly attack on umpires this season, and number one and about 18 zeros for his career. Phillips couldn't understand the lack of severity.

But his philosophy on how to deal with the situation may not have been as timely and well-planned as it could have been.

Phillips, obviously hurt over the whole situation, attacked AL president Bobby Brown just before he got his shots in at Martin, the Yankee manager who certainly has done more harm than good in baseball.

Phillips said Brown had abrogated his responsibilities, and had done little to keep Martin under control. He, along with seven crew chief umpires, also made it clear that Martin would have to sit in the dugout quietly if he wished to stay in the game.

Martin reportedly kicked and threw dirt on an umpire during a debate last week. When the American League all but ignored the situation, Phillips went to bat for his umpires.

But he may have hit a foul ball in mentioning that Martin should be controlled. It has caused quite a stir throughout major league baseball.

See there Lefty, how much a quote can do for a situation. What's that? Yea, I can see how much trouble it can stir up. We get your point.

Reds Watch '88

Larkin Hurts Cincinnati But Browning Heals Wounds Monday

If the Cincinnati Reds do not win the Western Division title this season they may point back to June 5 as a major reason why. And most people may turn their fingers toward Barry Larkin.

The Reds had an opportunity to trim Los Angeles' lead in the West to five-and-one-half games. They had broken a six-game losing streak the day before against LA, and seemed ready to make a serious run.

At least they were healthy, and despite winning only four of their last 14 games, Cincinnati was not in the impossible situation they could have been in.

But the Reds failed to take advantage of their opportunities, making a total of five errors in losing a game they should have won. Cincinnati lost Sunday, 5-4, in Los Angeles, allowing the Dodgers to move seven and a-half games up.

Larkin, the subject of much criticism, committed three of those errors, all of the throwing variety. LA scored two times, both due to Larkin's two errors, and added two more in the fifth to take a 5-1 lead.

Larkin, later taking himself out of the game due to a blood blister on the middle finger of his throwing hand, threw wildly in the fifth to allow Kurt Gibson to cross the plate.

Cincinnati, leading the Major Leagues with 59 errors, made Larkin's miscues even more costly by scoring two runs in the eighth inning.

With two out and the Dodgers leading by three, Paul O'Neill and Nick Esasky put together back-to-back ground rule doubles, and Bo Diaz singled home Esasky to make the score 5-4.

Cincinnati failed to mount another threat, going out in order in the ninth. Instead of leaving Los Angeles trailing by only five and a-half, the Reds rolled into San Diego following the Dodgers by seven and one-half games.

And the pain of the one that got away must have lingered around the clubhouse. At least manager Pete Rose remembered it.

Rose, in a radio interview before Monday night's game, expressed his concern with Cincinnati's whopping number of errors, and Larkin's belated exit from Sunday's contest.

Rose said it was unbelievable that his team had committed 59 errors, and added that it was just a matter of not executing when the time came, not because players had shed their work responsibilities.

On Larkin, Rose said he told the short-stop that Cincinnati had two other healthy players to man the position, and asked Larkin, in light of this fact, why he had waited so long to mention his inability to throw accurately.

But Rose was confused by the lack of defense rather than upset. A couple of guys who may have been upset were two-thirds of the Reds' starting outfield. But Kal Daniels and Eric Davis unleashed their frustrations on the baseball, and Mark Grant.

Both Daniels and Davis, although they had superb seasons last year, have been rumored as trade bait as Cincinnati continues to talk trade.

Davis, though, made a classic bid to remain in Cincinnati, and right quick. The Reds' center fielder blasted a two-run homerun in the first, and drilled a solo shot over the fence in the third.

His homerun in the third gave Cincinnati a 5-0 lead against San Diego. It was Davis' eighth longball of the season.

Daniels let his bat explain why he deserves to be a Cincinnati Red, getting a single to extend the inning for Davis in the first, and hitting his seventh homerun, a solo blast in the third.

Cincinnati scored their other run in the second inning when Bo Diaz led off with a double and rode home on Chris Sabo's two-out single. All five runs came off San Diego starter Mark Grant.

The Reds pounded San Diego pitching all night long, banging out 17 hits and 12 runs in their highest scoring output of the season. But the big offensive show took a back seat to a remarkable pitching performance.

Cincinnati starter Tom Browning lost a chance for a perfect game early when he walked two Padre batters, but he was certainly stingy with giving out hits.

Browning came to within two outs of throwing a no-hitter, but Tony Gwynn slapped a single to left field, denying the Reds' southpaw an opportunity to join the ranks of the no-hit elite.

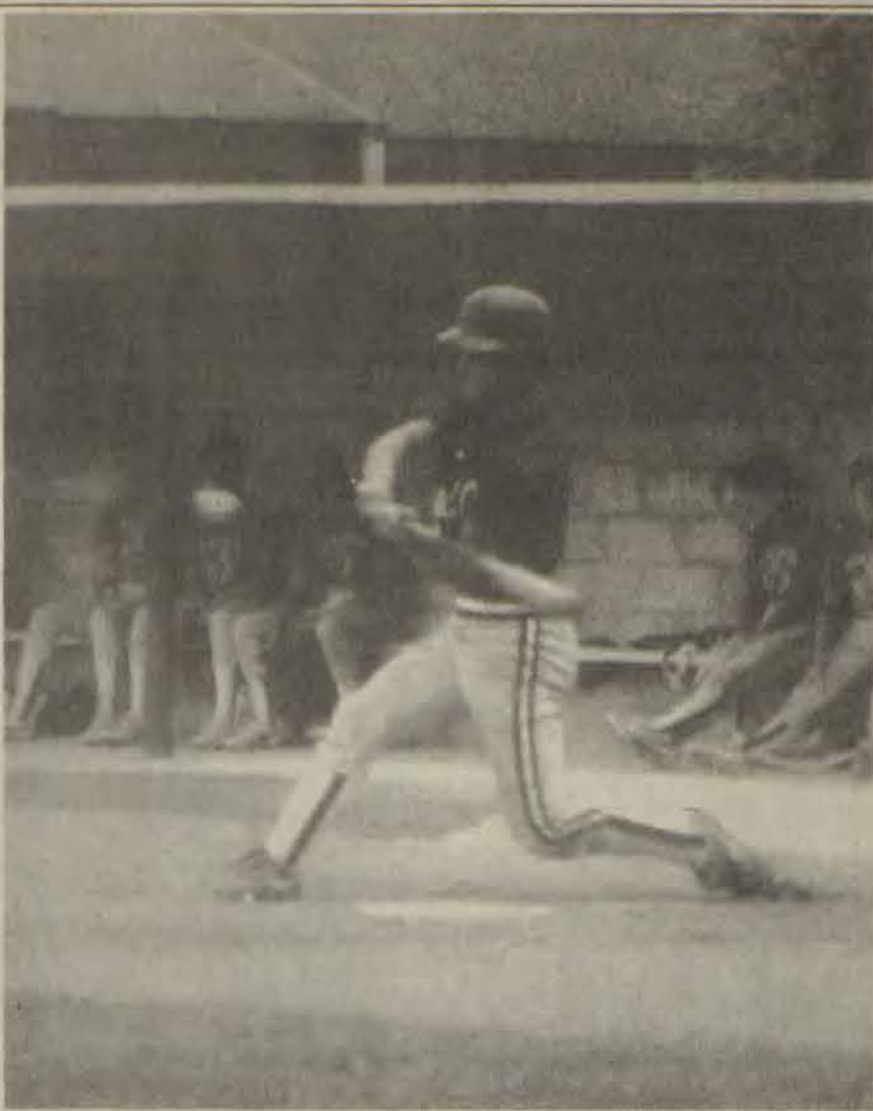

But Cincinnati played solid defense, set a season high for runs scored, and moved a game closer to Los Angeles as Houston dealt the Dodgers a 10-4 loss Monday. The Reds beat the Padres 12-0. Browning, 3-3, got the win.

The Astros now trail LA by only one and one-half games in the West.

Cincinnati, trying to stay close against division competition, plays San Diego tonight before wrapping up a four-game series Thursday in a 4:05 start.

Dennis Rasmussen, 2-6, will battle Eric Show, 4-5, tonight in the 10:05 start. Thursday Ron Robinson takes the mound for Cincinnati, battling San Diego's Jimmy Jones, 5-4.

The Reds play three games in San Francisco this weekend, before returning home Tuesday to open a series against the Houston Astros.

TAKING A CUT: Mike McQuate takes a swing during last weekend's action at Morehead. McQuate went five for 10 in the three-game tournament.

Rocco's Ristorante Ceredo-Kenova 5k 10k Races Held

Dateine: May 28, Ceredo-Kenova-The 3.1 mile race got under way at 8:30 a.m. with high humidity as 178 entrants toed the starting line. Nike/Athletic Attic runners dominated the race, as Joe Barker won in 15:48. Teammates Don Thornsby, of Ashland, and Rick Roberts finished third and fourth respectively in 16:12 and 16:34. Both Roberts and Thornsby won their age groups.

Forty-five minutes later the 6.2 mile race began over a very hilly course. Andy Hissam won the race in 33:35. Jane Sanders, of Huntington, won the women's in 45:21. Nets Big Muskie

Licking River can certainly produce good muskie fishing for the serious angler. This was demonstrated by Johnny Endicott, of Endicott, with his May 18 catch. The 35-inch, 11-pound Kentucky silver muskie was taken on a Rapala crankbait.

Boat Safety Matter Of Being Prepared

The failure to wear a lifejacket, being on the water in foul weather, overloading a small boat, or any combination of these could result in a boater's death.

The lifejacket, or Personal Flotation Device (PFD), if worn properly and in the conditions for which it was designed, can be relied upon to keep its user's head well above water, according to the National Safe Boating Council. There are five types of PFDs.

Type I PFD is generally worn by boaters who expect to be in heavy seas. With flotation placed high on the chest, this lifejacket is considered bulky and hot, and generally is not worn by recreational boaters. This lifejacket was developed to turn an unconscious person to an upright, slightly backward position and provide flotation for long periods of time.

Type II PFD and Type III PFD is used for boating in inland water where there is a chance of fast rescue. The Type III is more comfortable to wear for any length of time.

Type IV PFDs are throwable devices that should be kept on board, but are not recommended to take the place of wearable vests.

Type V PFDs are inflatable, lightweight jackets that have some built-in buoyancy and are used during special activities or while the boat is in motion.

Statistics from the National Safe Boating Council show that of the 1,066 people who died in boating accidents in 1986, 82.5 percent did not wear a lifejacket.

In addition to wearing lifejackets, boaters should not overload their boats, particularly small ones, the Council warns.

Most recreational boats are less than 16 feet long and a large number are small runabouts, on boats, and utility boats.

If boats are not loaded properly on their center lines, the ability of the boat to provide stability is reduced. The secret to maintaining stability is to load the boat evenly fore and aft and side to side. In a small boat, the weight of the motor, gas tank and other gear that is normally in the stern should be considered. If the operator must sit there to steer and control the motor, other items should be loaded as far forward as possible.

A higher center of gravity, such as a person standing up in a boat, also reduces the boat's ability to right itself.

Since 1972, the Coast Guard has required that all motor and outboard boats of 20 feet or less have built-in level flotation. A boat that floats, even when capsize, swamped, and full of water, provides an immediate rescue platform for victims of a swamped or overturned boat.

Boaters should not only avoid overloading their boats, but also dangerous weather conditions. Among the most dangerous of these are heavy winds and thunderstorms.

Winds blowing across the water create waves. The stronger the wind and the longer the distance it blows on the water, the greater the waves.

Thunderstorms usually travel from west to east; however, summer haze may block an approaching storm from the view of boaters. They should listen to weather reports on a VHF radio if one is available. If not, they should listen to an AM radio because AM will crackle with static when a storm approaches.

Boaters caught in foul weather should wear PFDs, reduce the boat's speed, and head for the nearest safe shore or harbor. The bow of the boat should be pointed into the waves at a slight angle, so the boat will not be caught broadside in the waves. Passengers should be seated low and near the center of the boat. If the engine fails, the boat should be anchored by the bow. In deep water, a sea anchor—a bucket on a line, a tackle box, or any bulky item—should be used to create a drag in the water.

June 5-11 has been designated National Safe Boating Week.

Fawns Being Taken From The Wild

Don't take fawns from the wild, says John Phillips, deer specialist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

In most instances, people who pick up young deer believe they're rescuing an orphaned or abandoned animal, one that's in imminent danger of starvation or being killed by predators.

Unfortunately, good intentions along with an ignorance of deer habits can place fawns in great jeopardy. Any animal (not just fawns) encountered in the wild should be left where it's found.

what you perceive as abandonment probably is not. It is normal for does to leave their young for long periods while grazing or resting. In fact, fawns see their mothers at nursing time and that's about it.

Their white-spotted, reddish coat provides excellent camouflage, and fawns naturally lie very still in the undergrowth. And lack of scent helps protect them when left alone.

Only the mother can detect her offspring's scent which the doe placed there herself by licking the fawn all over soon after birth. Video documentation has shown that predators will pass within a few inches of a motionless fawn without detecting it.

Your touch will mark the fawn with human scent and may cause the doe to reject her offspring. Then the fawn will truly be abandoned and die of starvation and neglect.

Most whitetails are born during June in Kentucky, so as the month progresses more and more fawns will appear in brushy undergrowth and wooded areas.

Deer, like most other wildlife, need specialized care and, if they survive in captivity, do not make good pets. An adult buck is particularly dangerous, since his instinct to fight during mating season will often cause him to turn on humans.

Once released, pet deer not only become a public nuisance but often endanger themselves when subdivisions are adopted as familiar territory. Finally remember that it is illegal to capture wildlife by any method during a closed season, and that a permit is required to hold wildlife in captivity. Heed the advice of John Phillips and leave wildlife in the wild.

Many fisherman consider the wahoo to be a good sporting fish.

Lexington Lafayette won it's first ever state baseball title Friday afternoon when they defeated Boyd County, 12-1. Lafayette banged out a total of 11 hits in the winning effort while holding Boyd County to only four.

Jed Dorrough, considered by many to be the top pitcher in the state, threw four innings to get the win. He also got the decision in the General's 5-3 win over St. Xavier in Thursday's semi-final game.

Dorough, 12-0, threw four shutout innings, and had a 9-0 lead when he left after the fourth. David Hicks suffered the loss and ended the season at 8-1.

Lafayette finished the year at 27-2, and won their last 15 games. Boyd County, making their first appearance in the state finals, ended the year at 33-6.

The Generals, among their 11 hits, smashed three homeruns, including a grand slam in the fourth inning.

The often used excuse as to why the Denver Broncos might struggle may not be used this year. It seems that each season the Broncos aren't considered a Super Bowl contender because of a lack of a running game.

They may have silenced that talk this past week when they acquired Tony Dorsett from the Dallas Cowboys for draft considerations.

Dorsett, a former all-pro selection, is fourth on the NFL's all-time rushing list, but ran for 456 yards last year in playing backup behind Herschel Walker.

Dorsett, 34, will be entering his 12th year of pro football in which he has averaged more than 5,000 yards per season rushing the football.

Denver will give Dallas a fifth round draft choice, but that may go higher if Dorsett returns to his old successful self.

Pete Rose returned last Wednesday to the Cincinnati Reds' dugout after serving a 30-day suspension for bumping umpire Dave Pallone during an argument.

Billy Martin, last Monday, threw dirt on umpire Dale Scott, as well as kicking the second year ump. Martin, a long-time embarrassment to the game, was suspended for three days and fined $1,000. Rose paid 10 times that much.

Richie Phillips, executive director of the Major League Umpires' Association, said the suspension and fine were too light. The crew chiefs all agreed with Phillips' decision, and added that Martin would have to sit in the dugout with his arms crossed if he wished to remain in the game.

They also said that AL president Bobby Brown had, "abrogated his responsibilities in that he had done nothing to deter Martin from his relentless attacks on umpires as well as overall conduct which brings disgrace to all of baseball."

Martin had earlier been fined $300 for kicking dirt on an umpire. He also got beaten up in a brawl that he said others started. Observers, and Martin's wife, told a different story.

SPORTS SHORTS

A game with a point, darts, that old English standby, is becoming increasingly popular in the U.S. One reason for this may be that playing now pays more when you win.

The days when the sport only existed in a dark pub with a mug of beer in one hand, and a dart in the other are long gone. Darts has recently taken on a new edge of competition which was revealed in the 1987 Lucky Lights International Challenge of Champions hosted in New York City in December. The "Challenge" served as the culmination of 26 tournaments across the country. The series is the first national darting circuit, offering a total of $450,000 in prizes.

Clinching the title and a cash prize of $10,000, the winner of this year's "challenge" went to Englishman, Eric Bristow of Staffordshire, England. To date, Bristow has earned approximately $300,000 in prize money and endorsement fees.

According to the American Darts Organization, darts is one of the country's fastest growing sports. It's popularity has doubled annually and over a million Americans play regularly.

Zoos Are Going Back To Nature

This drawing shows a preliminary plan for Amazonia, an exhibit being designed for the Smithsonian's National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C. In keeping with new ideas about zoo exhibits, Amazonia will display the major animal habitats of a tropical forest, such as the forest canopy, the forest floor and a tropical river.

This polar bear exhibit at the Smithsonian's National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C., had a Southern exposure, making it much too warm for the former tenants. A new exhibit planned for this site—Amazonia—will give visitors a realistic experience of the tropics.

Be prepared for hair-raising thrills during your next visit to the zoo. The animals are being released from their cages.

Animal cages—the conventional sort at least—are being replaced at zoos everywhere with true-to-life simulations of wild habitats. The public will be safe, zoo officials say, but these new exhibits are meant to test a few nerves.

Lions stalking about in a savannah, gorillas roaming in tall brush and exotic birds nesting in a tropical forest canopy are just a few of the sights zoo goers will encounter. The changes represent a major departure from past thinking about zoo exhibits—the time has come for people to experience the animals' world.

"We need to present a better picture at the zoo for the real world in which animals live," Dr. Michael Robinson, director of the Smithsonian's National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C., says. Zoos need to show visitors animal predation, as well as an animal's sense of scale in its environment and its co-existence with other plants and animals. "Many animals smell the world rather than see it," Robinson notes. "And many that do see it, see it in black and white, or myopically or microscopically."

"Amazonia," one new exhibit of this type, now in planning stages at the National Zoo, will attempt to show a slice of the tropical rainforest, plants and animals. Ironically, Amazonia will replace a defunct polar exhibit. The old exhibit, it seems, had a southern exposure, making it much too warm for the polar bears despite refrigeration equipment.

In Amazonia, "it's going to rain, to be hot and humid and there will be animals all over the place," Edward Bronikowski, an aquatic biologist and collections manager for the exhibit, says. Visitors will experience three levels of this "ecosystem—the forest canopy, the forest floor and the bottom of the 'river.'" In the canopy, visitors will walk among the treetops where tropical birds nest in the exotic vegetation. As happens in the real tropics, Amazonia will show such phenomena as "epiphytic" plants that grow on limbs of trees.

On the forest floor, visitors will see animals such as jaguarundis (a small cat that whistles rather than roars), caimans (reptiles related to crocodiles) and a mix of other animals and insects that occupy this part of the forest. Of course, Bronikowski says, barriers will separate animals and people, but they won't be visible, keeping the whole experience as natural as possible.

Amazonia will also show such real-life events as fruits and seeds dropping into the river where they are snapped up by piranha-like fishes and other large fish. This demonstrates in a dramatic way, Bronikowski says, how the forest feeds the river. Conversely, snakebirds will dive into the river in search of fish, and giant river otters, as is their habit, will burrow into clay banks. "We want people who might never set foot in an actual rainforest to truly experience this ecosystem," he says.

Amazonia encompasses many elements of the "BioParks," the kind of place that Robinson ultimately would like to see replace zoos. For too long, he says, zoos, aquariums and botanical gardens have existed separately. He advocates merging their exhibits to show the complexity and interdependence of species in various ecosystems.

"We need to produce an entity that combines the best exhibit elements of existing zoos, aquariums, botanical gardens, and natural history and ethnological-anthropological museums," he wrote in a recent Smithsonian magazine article.

The biological park concept, Robinson says, grew out of his training and work as a biologist, particularly at the Smithsonian's Tropical Research Institute in Panama. At the National Zoo, he sees an opportunity to "cross-reference the Smithsonian." He proposes such ideas as juxtaposing, in the same exhibit, airplanes and birds, the inspiration for manned flight. Models of giant dragonflies from the Paleozoic era more than 300 million years ago—typically seen in natural history museums—could be displayed alongside their living descendants, providing a strikingly visual example of the evolution of species. Predation and the different ways in which animals experience their environments could be portrayed with innovative graphics and other methods.

Many zoos around the country have embraced these new trends in zoo exhibitry and design. The Bronx Zoo in New York, for example, recently opened Jungle World, an indoor tropical forest that features an encounter with a live python. In Seattle's Woodland Park Zoo, visitors watch gorillas living in a naturalistic environment created with the assistance of the late Dian Fossey, who studied mountain gorillas in Africa.

These exhibits and others have one common element. Architects, designers and zoo staff want to create realistic environments that break down a visitor's sense of security. Typically, moats used to safely separate animals and people are kept hidden from view. Habitats are often elevated as well, so zoo visitors must look up to see the animals. Such devices—some are the techniques of Hollywood, Robinson says—impart a sense of an animal's "wildness." They can demonstrate that lions are indeed fierce, or that gorillas have a high degree of social organization in their ranks.

In the past, Robinson says, a "collector's mentality" existed at zoos. Having just one of many different kinds of animals seemed sufficient. Now, he says, zoologists and others know that "most animals don't live in 'splendid isolation.'"

Zoos were also limited in the ways animals could be displayed. Often, the creatures were placed in white-tiled cages reminiscent of surgical suites. Animal health dictated that such enclosures—despite the aesthetics—be used in order to protect animals from infections. While these and worse conditions now seem unthinkable, Robinson says, people should keep in mind that human environments have improved dramatically since the Victorian era when many North American zoos were created. The National Zoo itself will celebrate its centennial in 1989. Zoo designers could scarcely conceive of conditions for animals more comfortable than their own.

Today, veterinary care for exotic animals has greatly improved. Zoo animals are constantly monitored for injuries. Infections can be minimized without white tiles and constant washing of enclosures. Their environments can be kept clean by changing soil or other parts of naturalistic exhibits. Veterinary staffs, clinics—even nutritionists—are on hand at most major zoos to provide high-quality care.

The "bottom line" has also provided motivation for zoos to design more exciting exhibits, says designer J. Anthony Schibley of The Larson Co., a Tucson, Ariz., firm that specializes in exhibitry for museums and zoos. Zoo officials know, he says, that they compete daily for visitors' time and money with wildly popular recreation and theme parks. People want something more, for example, than a lion sleeping on a perfectly mown lawn that has all the ambience of a golf course.

Designers and architects for zoos, Schibley continues, now have more tools at their disposal to provide the necessary thrills and chills. In addition to moats, fine netting and safe electrical barriers can be hidden to create the illusion that nothing separates wild animals from zoo goers. Environments, such as tropical forests, can realistically be created thanks to synthetics and other materials used to fabricate such items as trees and other exotic plant life.

At the National Zoo—which has free admission year round—all age groups are being considered in new exhibit plans. The "Rabbitat," for example, will be a "junior biopark" for kids 5 years old and younger—a place that combines fantasy with a natural environment, Judy White, one of the exhibit's planners, says. Children visiting Rabbitat will "experience" rabbits and other small mammals in a meadow. Activity centers and other features, such as an area where visitors can have close encounters with small woodland animals, will demonstrate how these creatures share their habitat.

Other new exhibits planned at the National Zoo include the "Australia Pavilion," a display and research facility for Australian wildlife. The exhibit will feature the platypus, a duck-billed, egg-laying mammal that has not been exhibited outside Australia for more than 30 years. In keeping with the biopark theme, Robinson also hopes to include displays on the Barrier Reef, the ecology of sheep farming and the rich culture of Australian aborigines, people who have lived Down Under for the past 30,000 years.

While visitors to the new zoo exhibits will undoubtedly learn more about animals, their habitats and interactions with other species, another important aspect of the zoo experience has been enhanced. As designer Schibley says, "The fun's back in!"

IN LOVING MEMORY

Many men who have gone before him have earned the time it takes to make special mention of their contributions in life. In the eyes of those who have known and loved them there could be no greater. Each lost loved one may be idealized by the family and friends they leave behind; but the family of High Higgins believe in the most unbiased way that this precious man deserves the most honorable recognition and mention of the tremendous impact he has made upon our lives. His teachings, guidance, and unconditional love will remain with us as long as we live.
 He always went far and beyond the call of duty as a husband, father, grandfather, and friend. He strived so brutally in the coal mines to earn a living and to be a good provider. He always went out of his way to help his children and others with no gain for himself except for the satisfaction he got out of doing what he did best—caring. His first years on this earth were very tough on him, losing his mother as an infant. He learned early in life to be a hard worker but he loved it. He believed in making it on his own through hard labor and never asked for any help. In his life God saw fit to bless him with a loving, long-suffering wife and through her years of diligent prayers one day helped to bring him to salvation. This ensured his everlasting life and gave eternal hope. But long before he turned to the Lord, a very tender heart was already in him, and in God's own time he made himself manifest in Poppie.
 He was always a good, moral, and decent man and believed in doing what was right. He would have never wronged anyone. I believe I speak for all who came in contact with him throughout his 84 years of life. To know him was to love him. No one on earth knew High Higgins better than his family and now he is in the hands of our Almighty Savior, but the joy he brought is embedded in our hearts, minds, and memories and there it will abide forever.

Lawrence Tackett

Lawrence Tackett, 73, of McDowell, died last Wednesday, at his home, following an apparent heart attack.

 He is survived by his wife, Dona Newsome Tackett; three daughters, Shirleen Elliott and Vivani Akers, both of McDowell, Thelma Dye, Price; one brother, Lee Tackett, McDowell; two sisters, Nora Holt, Ashtabula, Ohio, and Birdie Tackett, McDermott, Ohio; eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.
 Funeral services were conducted Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Little Rosa Regular Baptist Church at McDowell with Regular Baptist ministers officiating. Burial was made in the family cemetery, there, under direction of the Hall Funeral Home.

Urice Burke

Urice Burke, 56, of Columbus, O., native of Halo, died Sunday, May 29, in Doctors Hospital West in Columbus, following an extended illness.
 A son of Wiley Burke, of Halo, and the late Flotile Childers Burke, he was born September 18, 1931. He owned and operated a paper company in Columbus where he was also a deacon of the Little Angel Old Regular Baptist Church.

National Guard Nets Easter Seal $50,000

Reports from all the Kentucky Army National Guard Units which conducted their annual "Bucket Brigade" for Easter Seals have been received at the Kentucky Easter Seal Society headquarters in Louisville. According to Guion Miller, executive director of the Kentucky Society, this year's Guard collection exceeded the $50,000 mark. Over 450 volunteers from the Kentucky Army National Guard participated in this year's campaign.
 "With this year's collection, the men and women of the Kentucky Army National Guard have raised 1.6 million dollars during the last 17 years for the benefit of the disabled children and adults we serve at the Easter Seal Society," Mr. Miller stated.
 "We are most appreciative of Adjutant General Davidson, the Battalion Commanders and the individuals in the troops who participated in this year's traffic point collections. We also appreciate the support which the public has shown the Guard's volunteers."
 The Kentucky Army National Guard Easter Seal Campaign project began in 1972 in conjunction with the Society's Easter Seal Telethon.

Guaranteed procedural safeguards for handicapped children and their parents in decisions regarding educational programs and confidentiality of files of those children identified as being handicapped will continue to be instituted. This application will be on file in the Office of the Superintendent of Floyd County Schools for a period of two (2) weeks beginning June 20, 1988 and ending July 1, 1988. Any interested persons may review copies of the application and make comments concerning the application to Ogie M. Stone of the Floyd County School District. Consideration will be given to all comments prior to the submission of the final copy of the application to the Department of Education.

MOONSTRUCK: The next full moon might cause some strange goings on. But if you're daring enough to brave the werewolves, you might try planting a garden. National Wildlife magazine reports that many vegetables, particularly tomatoes, corn, and sweet peas, grow better when planted under a full moon.

A proud tradition

Our funeral home has been responding to the needs of the community for many years. To continue this proud tradition of helping families in their time of need, we now offer the Sunset SecuritySM Plan.
 Sunset SecuritySM, offered by us as a member of the Kentucky Funeral Directors Bureau Association, is a plan that lets you reduce the stress your loved ones will experience at the time of a funeral.
 Through Sunset SecuritySM, you can pre-arrange a funeral now. The plan offers an inflation-proof feature that lets you save money by freezing the cost of a funeral at today's prices. And it provides special tax-saving advantages.
 We'd like to give you a "Personal Record Guide" and tell you about the Sunset SecuritySM Plan. Just complete the coupon below and send it to us.

Dr. Dorsey Is Named Outstanding Alumnus

Dr. Harold W. Dorsey, former pastor of the First Methodist and the Community Methodist churches here, was named recipient of the Outstanding Alumnus Award given annually by the Kentucky Wesleyan Alumni Association executive director of the Kentucky United Methodist Foundation, which supports Methodist churches, hospitals and homes for children and the elderly, also served as pastor at the Pikeville Methodist Church.

Before his retirement in 1985, Dr. Dorsey had served in the ministry of the United Methodist Church for 50 years. He has also held positions on numerous boards, including the Kentucky Wesleyan Board of Trustees. He was chairperson of the Rehabilitation Committee of the Floyd County Red Cross Chapter during the 1957 flood, and he also directed the Floyd County Disaster activities for which he received commendation. He has been a scoutmaster for many years and was the first chaplain at Camp Offutt where he initiated a religious service that continues today.

Dr. Dorsey and his wife, Irene, also an alumnus of the college, have established a memorial scholarship for their son, Cochran, who died while a student at Wesleyan, to be given each year to a student studying for the ordained ministry of the United Methodist Church.

The Outstanding Alumnus Award is given annually to an individual who, through service to others, has brought credit and distinction to Kentucky Wesleyan College. Nominees are solicited from the alumni membership and voted upon by the entire alumni body. The criteria for this award includes continuing support of the college, the church and the community.

Dr. Ernest W. Abernathy, class of '55 and R. Allen Wilson, class of '66 were also nominated. Dr. Harold W. Dorsey is a member of the class of '38.

HIGH-TECH DOESN'T GET MUCH HIGHER THAN THIS.
Today's Army is high-tech all the way, from the ground up. If you're fascinated by satellite systems, you can actually learn to operate or repair the equipment that "speaks" to these satellites.
High-tech communications is just one of many advanced fields available for Army training. There are also skills in areas like air defense, armor, or avionics. Using equipment that utilizes lasers, computers, radar, or sophisticated electronics.
The future belongs to people with high-tech knowledge. And the Army's a great place to get it. To see what you qualify for, contact your local Army Recruiter.

Joel, Texas specials are promising this week

By Wendy Wallace

With the writers' strike forcing the network to air early summer reruns, your best bets this week are specials. Here's a sampling:

Dennis Weaver

On Wednesday, June 15, singer Billy Joel entertains audiences behind the Iron Curtain in A Matter of Trust: Billy Joel in the USSR, a 90-minute ABC special filmed during Joel's Soviet tour last year. With his wife, model Christie Brinkley, their daughter, Alexa Ray, and his music in tow, Joel hits the streets, parks and the concert halls of Moscow, Leningrad and Tbilisi.

Highlights include an informal jam session with Russian musicians, a moving visit to the grave of a contemporary Russian poet, a night at the circus and an angry outburst during a concert when Joel became exasperated with the tour support crew.

If marine life is to your liking, CBS airs Sea World's All-Star Lone Star Celebration, on Saturday, June 18. Patrick Duffy ("Dallas") and Marie Osmond host this entertainment extravaganza, which celebrates the cultural heritage of Texas and the opening of Sea World of Texas.

The two-hour variety special features a broad spectrum of musical styles, with performances by Natalie Cole, Fabian, Waylon Jennings, Trini Lopez and Gloria Loring. Native Texan celebrities including Morgan Fairchild, Farrah Fawcett, Barbara Mandrell and Jaclyn Smith relate anecdotes and homespun stories about Texas pride. And Dennis Weaver ("Buck James") comments on the relationship between human and marine life.

Into nostalgia? Lesley Ann Warren stars in Evergreen, a six-hour 1985 miniseries airing on NBC on three nights, Sunday, June 12, Monday, June 13 and Tuesday, June 14. The miniseries, based on a best seller by Belva Plain, casts Warren as Anna Friedman, a Jewish immigrant woman who is torn by her love for two men—the aristocratic Paul Lerner (Ian McShane), with whom she shares a deep, passionate secret, and her devoted husband, Joseph (Armand Assante), with whom she shares a loving life of triumphs and tragedies amidst the turbulent events of mid-20th-century America.

And for sports fans longing to see an exciting end to the nine-month NBA season, Games 3, 4 and 5 of the NBA Championship will air Sunday, June 12, Tuesday, June 14 and Thursday, June 16 (if necessary) on CBS.

ASK TONI

Game shows, star searches have kept McMahon sharp

By Toni Reinhold
 How long has Ed McMahon been with "The Tonight Show"? Where can I write him? — R.J., Reno, Nev.

Ed McMahon, 65, began his stint as Johnny Carson's straight man on "The Tonight Show" in 1962. His relationship with Carson began in 1958, when he was hired as the comic's sidekick on the daytime game show "Who Do You Trust?" A fighter pilot during the Korean War, McMahon began his TV career in 1950, playing a clown on a variety show called "Big Top." While serving as second banana on "Tonight," he has kept sharp by hosting the variety show "Kraft Music Hall" (1968), the anthology series "NBC Adventure Theatre" (1972), the quiz show "Whodunnit" (1979), "TV Bloopers & Practical Jokes" (1984-85) and the current syndicated series "Star Search." He also has appeared in the TV movies "The Kid from Left Field" (1979), "The Great American Traffic Jam" (1980) and "The Star Maker" (1981). NBC will air new episodes of "TV's Bloopers" this summer.

What was the title of Lee Meriwether's first series? Was it "Barnaby Jones"? Also, is it true that she was once Miss America? — C.W., Elko, Nev.
 Meriwether, who turned 53 on May 27, was Miss America in 1955. She made her TV debut on "Philco Television Playhouse" in 1954, then served as a fashion correspondent on "Today" in 1955 and 1956. She later was a regular on the soap operas "Clear Horizon" and "The Young Marrieds." Her first regular series role was as Dr. Ann MacGregor on "The Time Tunnel" (1966-67). She co-starred in "The New Andy Griffith Show" (1971) and then played Buddy Ebsen's daughter-in-law on "Barnaby Jones" (1973-80). In 1974 and 1975 she was a panelist on the quiz show "Masquerade Party."

I read that Angela Lansbury was not born in the U.S. Where is she from? — P.G., Hastings, Newfoundland
 The "Murder, She Wrote" star was born in London in 1925, and came to the U.S. in 1940. She broke into movies in "Gaslight" (1944).

And from "The Young and the Restless": Thom Bierdz (Phillip Chancellor-Foster) and Michael Damien (Danny Romalotti). The team will play teams of local media personalities in Cincinnati (July 16) and Los Angeles (Oct. 23), as well as Boston, Syracuse, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Dallas and Charlotte. • Pat and Concetta Ryan (played by Malcolm Groome and Lois Robbins) have exited "Ryan's Hope." In the story line, Pat and Concetta married, went to California on their honeymoon, then phoned the Ryan clan to say they'd taken jobs in San Diego. • Cast additions to "The Young and the Restless" include Lynne Harbaugh, who plays Lisa Mansfield, an ex of Brad Carlton (Don Diamond); and Peter Virgile, who plays Gary, an old school friend of Cricket Blair (Lauralee Bell) and the former lover of Nina Webster (Tricia Cast). • Over on "Another World," Zack Edwards (James Pickens Jr.), who has been unattached for more than a year, will enter into a romance with Bay City newcomer Veronica "Ronnie" Lawrence (B.J. Jefferson).

'He's the Greatest' stars Gleason's best character

By Denise Gorga

"Let's try word association," says the doctor to playboy Reggie Van Gleason III.

"Grand Central," the doctor says.

"Cocktail," Reggie responds.

"Fifth Avenue."

"Cocktail."

"The public library."

"Cocktail."

"The Empire State Building."

"Highball."

Jackie Gleason

If you don't know who Reggie Van Gleason III is, that's probably because the program you associate comic Jackie Gleason with is "The Honeymooners." But from 1952 to 1970, "The Jackie Gleason Show" showcased a variety of characters that have been overlooked in favor of Ralph, Alice, Ed and Trixie.

But Reggie and other Gleason characters return on Friday, June 17, when Showtime offers the first three hours of its "Gleason: He's the Greatest Marathon," a collection of "Gleason Show"

HEARTSOUNDS

"Heartsounds," an ABC movie airing THURSDAY, JUNE 16, stars Mary Tyler Moore and James Garner as a wife and husband whose love for each other gives them the strength to endure his repeated heart attacks. (Rebroadcast)

Illegal Burning May Pose Public Health Threat

The Kentucky Department for Environmental Protection is seeking help from the public to stop illegal burning of materials to recover metals for resale. According to Commissioner James Corum, the practice creates contamination that poses a health risk to the public. "The ashes from this burning often contain high concentrations of lead. It's left right out in the open where children can play in it. They could suffer brain damage as a result," said Corum. The burning, which has grown steadily over the past year as copper and other metal prices have increased, involves burning insulated wire, transformer parts and other materials. The "burned and clean" metal, as it is commonly called, is then sold to a scrap dealer. Burning electrical transformers often exposes the public to polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs. PCBs have been banned from all uses involving human contact because of the increased risk of cancer from exposure. In addition to the health risk, the practice is costly, both for the burner, if caught, and for the landowner whose property is used for the burning. Burning material to recover metal is illegal on three counts: (1) the act of open burning violates state air quality standards; (2) leaving ash and other residues from the burning is disposal of solid waste without a permit, which is prohibited; and (3) depending on the concentrations of lead, PCBs and other contaminants, a burn site may be an unpermitted hazardous or toxic waste site, both of which are prohibited. "People who engage in this practice can face both civil and criminal charges, and if convicted, receive prison sentences and stiff fines," warned Dr. Corum. If a hazardous waste is created by the burning, it must be cleaned up, and this is expensive. A cleanup of one such burn site—an area of approximately 6,000 square feet—could cost $90,000. According to Dr. Corum, some landowners may have to pay these costs, although they might not have known their land was being used for burning. "Some landowners may not even know their land is being used for illegal burning," said Dr. Corum. "Unfortunately, they are still responsible for the cleanup, along with the burners. The law requires the landowner to investigate activities on his property, and to prevent environmental violations. Sometimes it's hard to find the actual burners, but the landowner is right there with the evidence on his property. We want to make everyone aware so they can keep burners off their land." The Department for Environmental Protection has already located numerous sites where materials are being burned to recover metals. To stop the practice, protect health and avoid costly cleanups, the department asks anyone who has knowledge of suspicious burning to call and report it. "This clearly is a case where an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. We can stop this burning with the help of the public," said Dr. Corum.

NOTICE TO PERSONS SERVED BY THE MUD CREEK WATER DISTRICT "SAFE DRINKING WATER ACT LEAD NOTIFICATION"

"The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of .050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly. "Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standards. "EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women. "Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest: If your water system has lead pipes, If your home has copper pipes with lead solder If the home is less than five years old If you have soft or acidic water, or If water sits in the pipes for several hours." The only way to be sure of the amounts of lead in your water is to have the water tested by a state certified laboratory. Contact The Mud Creek Water District or the Drinking Water Branch of the Kentucky Division of Water for information about testing. The Mud Creek Water District does not have lead service lines or other lead-containing materials in its distribution system. The test results of water samples collected March 02, 1988 from the Mud Creek Water District indicates that a lead concentration was less than 0.001 parts per million (ppm), which is well below the safe drinking water standards. If you have questions concerning this notice or would like more information concerning lead in drinking water, please contact Mr. Willie Brown at 587-2455 or the Drinking Water Branch of the Kentucky Division of Water at (502) 584-3410. A copy of this notice has been forwarded to the Drinking Water Branch of the Kentucky Division of Water. U.S. Marijuana Growers Focus Of KET Program

Independent producer George Holmes documents the U.S. Forest Service's battle to keep marijuana growers out of our national forests in Guardians Of The Forest, which airs on KET Thursday, June 30 at 9 p.m. Marijuana growers pose a hazard to campers, hikers, sightseers, or anyone else who unsuspectingly stumbles onto an illegal "pot garden." Often, innocent people are injured and sometimes killed by explosive booby traps set off by the growers. The cameras of George Holmes follow forest rangers on their missions to uproot and burn marijuana gardens, while the voice of James Earl Jones explains the impact of these gardens on public safety and the environment. This program is not only informative, but also warns those who are the potential victims of marijuana growers. Guardians of the Forest is produced by George Holmes in connection with GN Communications/Chicago, distributors. 6-8-88.

MANDATORY NOTICE BY ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY FOR ALL WATER SYSTEMS PERTAINING TO LEAD IN DRINKING WATER

"The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly. "Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard. "EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women. "Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest: —if your home or water system has lead pipes, or —if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and —if the home is less than five years old, or —if you have soft or acidic water, or —if water sits in the pipes for several hours." Lead can occur at potentially harmful levels in tap water if the plumbing fixtures through which the water travels, including the solders and fluxes used to connect them, contain lead. The EPA has recently mandated that all newly installed plumbing materials be essentially lead-free. To find out which type of plumbing you have, look at it and perform the following simple tests: —Lead pipe is most often found in very old homes and buildings. Lead pipe is gray, relatively soft, and can be easily scratched to shine with a screwdriver, coin, or key. Some iron pipe may look like lead pipe; however, iron pipe is very hard and usually black. —Copper pipe usually has a characteristic copper color. Until very recently, most copper pipe was installed using lead-based solder. Lead solder is also gray, soft, and can be scratched shiny. Copper pipe that has been soldered with lead usually contributes less lead to the water as time passes because the solder gets coated with minerals from the water. After being installed about five years, lead solder usually contributes very small amounts of lead to the water. —Iron, steel, and "plastic" pipe have not been associated with any health effects from lead since they contain very small amounts of lead or none, and are assembled without lead solder. The David Water District does not have lead service lines or other lead-containing materials in our distribution system. The water in David Water District water supply in not in violation of the current standards. The water in your own house piping may be. It is the responsibility of the customer to pay for testing for lead in their own house piping. You can reduce the possibility of consuming water with high lead concentrations by the following: 1. Flush cold water pipes before drinking—10-30 seconds. 2. Use only water from cold water pipes for drinking, cooking or preparing baby formula. 3. Lead pipes and service connections can be replaced. 4. Insist that only lead free materials be used in repairs or new plumbing. The only way to be sure of the amount of lead in your water is to have the water tested by a state certified testing laboratory. For additional information contact the Drinking Water Branch of the Kentucky Division of Water at (502) 564-3410 or David Water District at (606) 886-8508. Lead content in Beaver Elkhorn Water, which supplies the David Water System, is less than 0.001. 6-8-76.
