Six Precincts Opt For Sales, Two Vote Dry

by Anne Chaney, Editor
Alcoholic beverages will no longer be available in two Prestonsburg area precincts, after voters went to the polls

Saturday and supported a referendum to end legal sales. Voters in both the Cliff No. 2 and Richmond precincts barely upheld the ban. In Richmond, three votes could have changed the outcome — 94 ballots were cast in favor of continued sales, while 98 were cast in favor of going dry. The vote was close in the Cliff No. 2 precinct as well, with 110 residents voting to stay wet, and 138 to go dry.

Businesses affected include the Wildcat Lounge, Fraternal Order of Eagles, Giovanni's and East Point Liquor. None of the three served liquor by the drink; each operated under licenses allowing sale of beer and wine, or retail package sales.

Voters in six precincts, including those encompassing the Holiday Inn and Sam an Tonio's, favored continued beverage sales.

By precinct, the results were: Courthouse, 119-85; Trimble Branch, 151-105; Depot, 280-108; Cliff, 218-194; Porter, 217-133; and Porter No. 2, 47-28.

Although Floyd County began legal sales in 1982, a vote by the Prestonsburg City Council late last year to allow the sale of liquor by the drink prompted some to call for a local option election.

The Rev. Steve Hopkins, pastor of the First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial), served as chair of Voices for Family Values, the group which circulated petitions to place the issue on the ballot.

Bill Francis, a Prestonsburg attorney, served as cochair of the pro-sales Citizens for Tourism and Growth.

Local option election issues offset the economic benefits of continued sales versus the right of neighborhoods to control sales, and reported increases in crime.

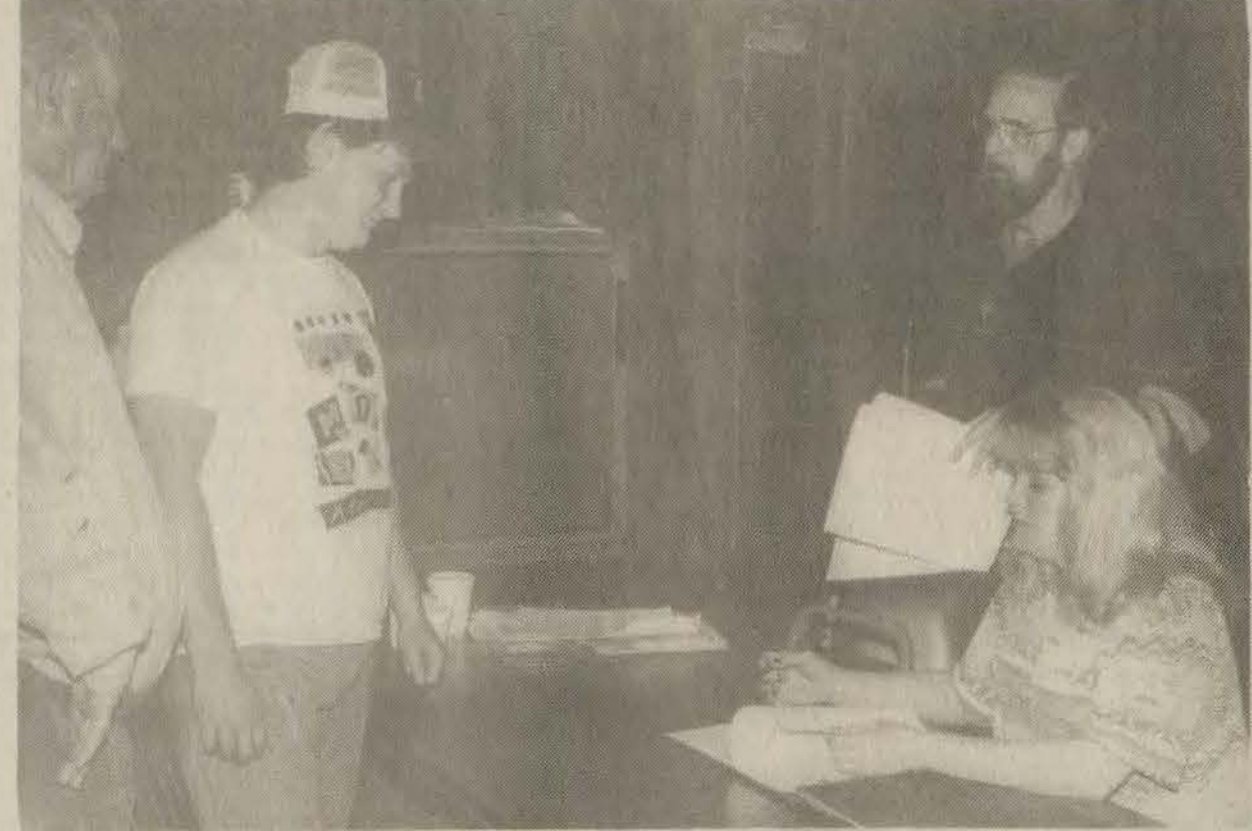

"I think that the people of Prestonsburg voted for legal control, wanted to keep it the way it had been for almost seven years, and did it in an overwhelming manner," Francis said after the election.

"I think one (precinct voting dry) was possibly a reaction to a place that abused the system, and as for the other, I'm not really sure. They were probably going dry because of local issues involved in those two precincts. It's hard to say what caused those people to vote dry," Francis added.

"Prestonsburg is a star city for tourism in Eastern Kentucky, and we hope to develop that more and more to allow the people of this area to see that tourism and outside monies will be beneficial — that was the whole election," said Francis.

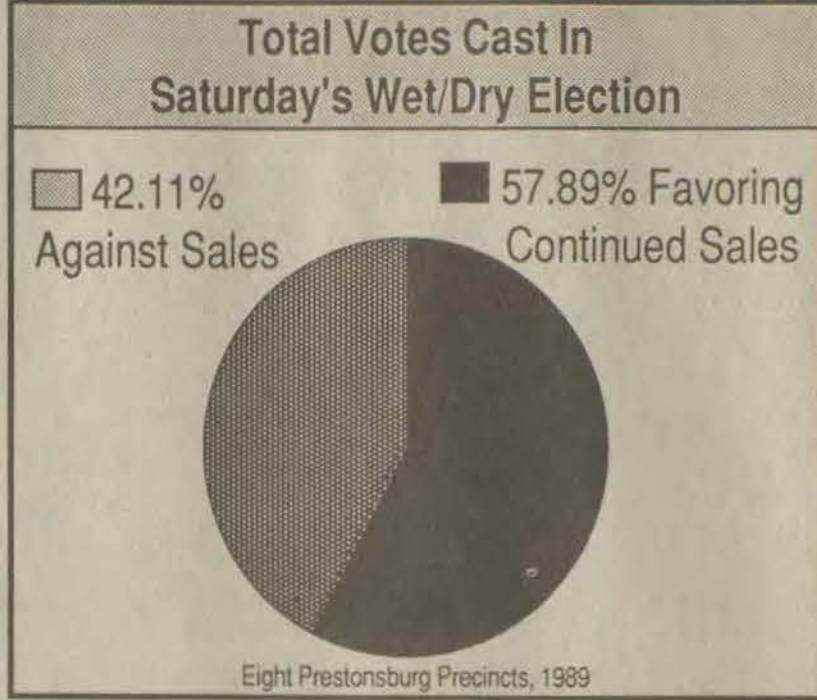

In 1982, six precincts opted not to allow alcoholic beverage sales by an 111-vote margin.

The total ballots cast in the eight-precinct election Saturday saw 1,236 vote in favor of continued sales, and 889 against.

Six Stay Wet, Two Go Dry

Six Prestonsburg precincts will continue to have alcoholic beverages sold, while voters in two opted to discontinue sales as a result of Saturday's local option election. Above, voters and precinct workers check signatures prior to allowing an area resident to cast his ballot.

Greene Named 'Digest' American Hero In Education

Daniel J. Greene, founder of the David School, has been named a 1989 Reader's Digest American Hero in Education.

Greene will receive $5,000 from the company for his efforts to reduce the high school dropout rate and improve literacy in the state's Appalachian region. In addition, the school will be given $10,000 to further programs initiated by Greene.

The Reader's Digest American Heroes in Education Awards, a three-year program launched last September, honors educators in 10 schools — individuals or teams of up to six teachers and principals — responsible for solving critical problems facing schools everywhere.

Greene — along with the other 1989 award recipients — was chosen from 600 nominations submitted by fellow educators in public, private and parochial schools nationwide, according to Bruce S. Trachtenberg, Reader's Digest spokesman.

For the past 20 years, Greene, a transplanted New Yorker, has been working in Eastern Kentucky. To help the region's economically disadvantaged youth — teenagers most likely to drop out of school and turn to alcohol and drugs — Greene founded the David School in 1972.

The school teaches both basic skills and self-reliance. Classroom learning is supplemented by on-the-job training in a student-run grocery store and service station.

Since 1972, the David School has made a difference in the lives of over 1,000 of the region's young people, giving many of them a second chance at an education. Of the students who enroll in the school, 95 percent remain to earn a high school degree.

Greene's personal commitment to the students who attend The David School is one of the key reasons for its success, Trachtenberg noted. Greene visits parents in their homes to get them involved in their children's education and to gain their support.

In recent years, the school has turned its attention to other concerns. In 1984, a preschool program was added to give children in the community a head start and prevent problems before they occur.

Recently, the school has begun to address the literacy problem. It was instrumental in forming the Floyd County Literacy Council, which coordinates the activities of existing agencies in the area.

"Greene is a true American hero," said George V. Grune, Reader's Digest chairman and chief executive officer. "He is the kind of person not satisfied just getting the job done. He asks, 'What more can I do?' — and then does it. We're fortunate that he has chosen education as his calling."

The winners were selected by a panel of leading educators chosen by the sponsoring organizations. Their selections were reviewed by a second panel responsible for verifying the information supplied in the nominations received from schools.

Program sponsors hope that by showcasing the achievements of the winning educators, other teachers and principals will be inspired to follow their examples.

"We want to create a ripple effect throughout our nation's schools, encouraging educators everywhere to strive for their personal best," Grune said.

The program will be held again for the 1989-90 school years. All schools will be invited to submit nominations beginning next August.

The program is jointly sponsored by the Reader's Digest Association, Inc., the National Association of Secondary School Principals, national Education association, National Association of Elementary School Principals and American Federation of Teachers.

Prestonsburg To Be Featured In Magazine

Prestonsburg is one of 18 Kentucky Main Street communities to be featured in a special advertising section in the May issue of American Heritage magazine.

It is believed to be the first time that a state's Main Street program has participated in a national advertising purchase. The announcement of the special section was made jointly by Tourism Secretary Mary Ray Oaken and Education and Humanities Secretary Jack Foster.

"When Wallace Wilkinson was elected governor, he promised Kentuckians that they would have firsts in tourism," Oaken said. "We are proud to say that this special section represents a first for Kentucky. This is the first time that communities involved in a state's Main Street program have banded together to take part in a national advertising promotion."

The eight-page section includes text on each of the participating communities. The advertising section was coordinated jointly by the Kentucky Heritage Council, which administers the Main Street program, and the Department of Travel Development.

"This is exactly the type of partnership that Gov. Wilkinson envisioned between state government and local communities," Oaken said.

Oaken said Wilkinson ran on a campaign platform that emphasized creativity in identifying economic development opportunities.

"Through our outstanding Main Street program, our communities are learning an important point — that tourism is economic development," Oaken said. "Main Street provides smaller Kentucky cities with a framework for linking tourism and economic development, for the betterment of all Kentucky."

The cooperative ad reflects Governor Wilkinson's emphasis on local, community involvement in tourism advertising, Oaken said.

The cities were assessed between $1000 and $2500 each, for being featured in the ad, depending on community size. The entire section cost $49,500.

American Heritage is a New York-based, national magazine with about one million readers and is owned by Forbes, Inc.

Teleblitz Thursday, April 27

by Anne Chaney, Editor

The Floyd County Chamber of Commerce's "Teleblitz" membership drive will begin Thursday morning, and by the end of the day, Chamber president-elect Tim Hites hopes the organization will be welcoming nearly 100 new businesses and individuals to membership.

"We now have a statement of purpose, and definable goals," said Hites. "We've made education one of our highest priorities, in that we have an education committee, headed by Gary Frazier, assistant superintendent of schools. The Floyd County Board of Education is now a Chamber member."

Hites said that preliminary publicity leading to Thursday's drive has already led to about seven new memberships, and he is enthusiastic about the Chamber's upcoming efforts.

Three teams of nine persons each will be led by Ann Latta, O. Sam Blankenship and Jim Deaton. Deaton will lead a team from Jenny Wiley State Park.

To add incentive for businesses and individuals who may wish to join, Hites said that 50 percent new member dues generated by the Jenny Wiley team will be donated to the theater.

Currently, the Chamber has 66 members throughout Floyd County, said Hites. Acknowledging that nearly doubling membership is an ambitious goal, he adds that the

Newborn Was Breathing Before Being Left In Bucket

State medical examiners have confirmed, through autopsy, that a baby born to a Lick Fork teenager on April 11 was alive before the young woman put the baby in a lard bucket in an outbuilding at the family residence near Hueysville.

Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson and Kentucky State Police detective Joel Newsome are to meet with law officials tomorrow to present the evidence of their investigation of the case, which also involved the improper burial of the infant by the teenager's father.

The autopsy report, released officially on Monday, indicated that the baby girl probably died within minutes of birth of postural asphyxiation, Nelson said. "The container was smaller than the baby and all the weight was on the neck and head," he said.

Nelson said that examiners Dr. John C. Hunsacker and Dr. George Nichols agreed that there was air in the baby's lungs and that the newborn "had swallowed some bodily fluids."

The baby, which examiners say was "anatomically healthy" at birth, weighed 8-1/2 pounds and measured 21 inches long, said Nelson, who added that the mother's pregnancy was full term. The coroner termed the infant "a beautiful baby."

The grave in which the father, Silas Slone Sr., buried the baby was 10 inches deep, Nelson said, with about four inches of dirt over the body.

Last week state police charged Slone with abuse of a corpse and concealment of a body. Nelson said he did not believe the baby's grandfather "intended a cover-up of the baby's birth. He just didn't know the law and was concerned about his daughter."

Shortly after giving birth to the baby, the mother apparently had several fainting spells and lost blood. She was taken to a local clinic, then to Highlands Regional Medical Center and from there to the University of Kentucky Medical Center. HRMC officials apparently notified law enforcement officials of the birth and the investigation was begun.

Commonwealth Attorney Jerry Patton said Tuesday that he expects to confer later this week with Floyd

Hunter Residents Fear They'll Soon Be All Wet

by Pam Shingler,
Assistant Editor

Periodically, some of the residents of Hunter take an inspection walk down to the bridge that crosses Left Beaver Creek and links them to KY 122, south of Martin.

They examine the dirty blacktop patch to see if the recurring hole has widened any more since the last time they looked. They check to see if any more railing has fallen off.

The bridge, its concrete base cracked and peeling to reveal old shiny pebbles, was reportedly built in 1927. Alma Sammons said she was a little girl when the men who built it "lived in tents" on the site of her present home on the creek side.

Her husband, Warnie, remembers a metal marker on the end of the bridge that gave the date of its erection. Jokingly, Warnie pronounces that "a lot of water has run under — and over — the bridge" since it was built.

Whenever Left Beaver rises, the bridge is covered, according to the Sammons' daughter-in-law, Brenda. "About a month ago when the water got up we were blocked for eight to 10 hours," she said, adding that garbage driven down the creek by high water compounds the problem.

Over the years, the 62-year-old bridge has also borne the weight of coal trucks during sporadic coal booms.

In March, an inspector with the state Department of Transportation gave the bridge a passing grade, with a 5-ton weight limit. That means that two 2,500-pound cars with a couple of passengers each could overtax the bridge's strength. The butane gas truck that has to cross the bridge on regular service trips probably exceeds the weight limit, Brenda Sammons said.

"The state inspector said this was the worst bridge he had examined," claims Warnie Sammons, although officials with DOT's Pikeville district office would say only that the bridge passed inspection.

Denton Biliter, chief engineer with the Pikeville DOT office, said that "appearance doesn't always indicate a bridge's structural integrity." He added that the bridge is deemed "safe for the load limit that's allowed."

Mark McDaniel, spokesman for the Transportation Cabinet in Frankfort, said that if a county "posts all bridges that need to be posted," the county becomes eligible for federal bridge funds. Under the federal off-bridge system, the federal government will put up 80 percent of the money for the replacement bridge, with the county responsible for 20 percent, he said.

Biliter, who estimated the cost of replacing the Hunter bridge as "anywhere between $100,000 and $500,000," said the bridge is not on the department's replacement list.

Meanwhile, Hunter residents say that if the bridge should collapse, to get onto the main highway, they will have to travel two miles along a narrow dirt road to Drift. Brenda Sammons estimates that "about 70 to 80 families" use the bridge.

Ed Patton, director of transportation for Floyd County Schools, says he is also concerned about the safety of the bridge. "When you have kids walk across a bridge and then bring the bus over, we have to be concerned," Patton said. "I would hope money can be found to replace it."

Kay Vanover of Printer, driver of the Hunter school bus route, said she carries more than 30 children into the community in an afternoon. "I see the holes (in the bridge) and sometimes it's scary," she said.

A spokesman for County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo said Tuesday that county workers responded to a recent request to replace the weight limit sign at the bridge, but that Fiscal Court has apparently received no requests from Hunter residents about replacement of the bridge.

'Hunter Bridge Is Falling Down'

Substitute Hunter for London in the old song and that's roughly how the bridge looks that connects the community of Hunter with the state road up Left Beaver Creek. Several feet of concrete railing are missing or barely attached, a hole recurs in the bridge's surface, and the state has set a load limit of five tons on the span.

The View From Under The Bridge

From the creek bank under the Hunter bridge, off KY 122, a crack running almost the width of the two-lane bridge exposes rusted steel. The

Nursing Board Marks 75th Anniversary; Stumbo Signs Proclamation For County

On Thursday, April 20, County Judge John M. Stumbo initiated the Floyd County celebration of the "Year of the Kentucky Nurse" by signing a proclamation.

As the state regulatory agency responsible for the licensing and registration of all licensed practical nurses, registered nurses and advanced registered nurse practitioners in the Commonwealth, the board has been fulfilling its role of public protection since March 1914, according to Bernadette Sutherland, spokeswoman for the board.

The board's celebration theme for the year is "75 Years of Protective Caring"—a theme which depicts the consumer protection role and history of the agency, Sutherland said.

Dr. Patricia Calico, RN, DNS, president of the Kentucky Board of Nursing, announced that in keeping with the theme, proclamations have been issued by various state, county and local government entities identifying 1989 as the "Year of the Kentucky Nurse." Various events will be held throughout the Commonwealth this year. The key activities will coincide with the Kentucky Board of Nursing's annual conference, April 20-21, at the Brown Hotel in Louisville.

Information about the conference registration and other activities may be obtained from Sutherland, Kentucky Board of Nursing, 4010 Dupont Circle, Suite 430, Louisville, KY 40207, (502) 897-5143.

DAVID ALLEN BARBER

Your County Attorney

Dear Marcella Bailey:

After reading your letter in last weeks paper, a question came to my mind. Does your "affection" for my opponent have anything to do with the fact that I assisted the state authorities in the investigation and prosecution of one of your nephews for robbing the bank at Martin, and have charges pending against another of your nephews for selling drugs?

You also commented about the clean way he is campaigning. Did you know that the day before your letter came out in the paper the windows were shot out of two of my strongest supporters businesses, and the tires were cut on another supporters vehicles?

Your endorsement of a person with my opponents reputation tarnishes your past civic achievements.

God bless you Marcella, but God save Floyd County from Jim Hammond.

Sincerely,
David Allen Barber
Floyd County Attorney

Jacobs Chosen For China Trip

Sr. Margaret Jacobs, nursing coordinator with Hospice of Big Sandy, is among 27 nurses nationwide to be selected to visit China as part of the Citizens Ambassador Program.

The tour is June 1-17 and will include visits to medical facilities in both rural and urban areas of China. The American nurses, Jacobs said, will be able to share ideas and concerns about the profession with Chinese nurses.

Jacobs was selected on the basis of a paper she submitted on the hospice movement in Kentucky.

To help raise the funds Jacobs will need for the trip, employees of Cooley

Medical Equipment and Cooley Apothecary will sponsor a sidewalk flea market in front of the equipment store on North Lake Drive on May 3-5.

Jacobs said she has until May 20 to raise the money. Other area nurses, she said, have been supportive in the fund raising.

The Citizens Ambassador Program is part of People to People International, an organization started by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower to give citizens of different countries the opportunity to interact, Jacobs said.

Chairperson,

Champions Against Drugs

Over the past several weeks, our community has witnessed a very aggressive and dedicated campaign from two recently-organized groups, Voices for Family Values and The Citizens for Tourism and Growth. Their struggle has concerned the local option election held April 22 in the eight precincts surrounding Prestonsburg. By the time this letter is printed, that decision will have been made by the community and, hopefully, the struggle will be over.

Because I have observed many indications that both groups are well organized, I am proposing a challenge which I hope will unite them and every facet of our community against one common enemy — drug abuse.

The Regional Action Group of Champions Against Drugs was formed more than two years ago, and has met regularly in Prestonsburg since forming. We have had a small, but dedicated, group of citizens who have worked to create awareness about the problem of drug abuse in our community and to do something in the areas of education, prevention and treatment. Just this week, the group has sponsored a three-day regional teen leadership conference at Camp Shawnee for representatives from every area high school. Other similar activities continue to be planned, but our group could do so much more if only the community would get involved and begin to work with us and support this effort.

As chairperson of the Champions regional action group, I challenge every citizen who has been so concerned about the local option election to become just as concerned about the serious drug abuse problem facing our community and our families. These problems are very real, and deserve every bit as much effort as has been given in the campaign. Whatever the outcome of the local option election, we can all be winners if we will come together and unite our efforts to defeat the common enemy of drug abuse.

You are invited to attend our next regional action group meeting Monday, May 15, at 6 p.m. at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park. It is my sincere hope that concerned people from both groups will accept this challenge and continue the efforts to improve our community. If we can win the battle against drug abuse, it will greatly enhance our chances of victory over numerous other problems such as poor education, economic growth and development, crime, adult and child abuse, etc.

You may accept this challenge by calling me at 886-8572 or 886-6051 and reserving your seat at our May 15 meeting.

Some time ago a couple of Wheelwright folks were offering me some leads on feature story subjects. They mentioned a retired teacher who lives in Melvin. Mayor Larry Mullins unhesitatingly proclaimed her "the best teacher ever."

Now, while I respect Larry's judgment, I'm a confirmed skeptic. But after spending a couple of hours with this delightful, refreshing lady, I'm convinced Larry may have something.

Unfortunately, the lady in question was adamant about not having a story written about her. But she did invite me to her home where she regaled me for a couple of hours with colorful stories, pieces of accumulated wisdom and philosophical insights.

Much of what she said related to education. And who better to speak knowledgeably than one who taught for 44 years, everything from kindergarten to adult evening classes? Her experiences and ideas present food for thought for those concerned about today's education problems.

For instance, this recent retiree remembers a time in a one-room school on Skull Creek when parents were intimately involved with their children's education. The school was, in fact, the center of their community.

The women, she recalls, brought their dirty clothes to the school every Friday afternoon and joined in a kind of community wash. The men stopped by after a long week's work, started water fights and played with their children in a fabulous family-community spirit.

"Those children on Skull Creek," she says, "were among the smartest I've ever seen." Is there a correlation?

The lady, her rambling home crammed with homemade treasures, also suspects teachers have lost some of the creativity that abets learning. Without film strips, duplicating machines, fancy materials and programmed activity books, this former teacher had to reach inside herself and look around her for instructional ideas.

She taught math reading while her students sewed costumes for school productions. She made up games to teach geography. She employed nature, free to all, to explain scientific principles.

With language often spicy, the former teacher strongly believes that the classroom is the teacher's domain and no place for a school administrator or a state inspector. She implies that teaching became less fun when the large feet of the county official and the state bureaucrat wedged their way in the classroom door.

She does not hold back in her criticism of politicized school boards, her words unashamedly salty on the subject. But she is just as critical of state interference.

She delights in the story of the time a state evaluator visited her class and attempted to be subtle in assessing the students' knowledge. The evaluator made the mistake of asking one of the teacher's brightest students to explain a concept.

At the evaluator's insistence, the young man went over and over his explanation until finally, in exasperation, he exclaimed, "Don't you know anything? You must have never had a teacher like ours."

Hearing her stories, you just know this lady was a tough teacher with high standards that students met. But she did not hesitate to calm, to encourage and to reach out with a warm hug — like the time she calmed a first-day first grader who had never seen a train. Listening to her recall the scene, you can just see the concerned teacher cradle the little boy in his arms as he shivers in terror that the huge machine is going to crash into the schoolhouse.

And her mind is a safe for thousands of family secrets and closet skeletons told to her over the years by young charges.

Seemingly happy in retirement, this teacher of all ages still insists, "I never worked a day that I hated. I put in a day's work and then some."

By Jove, Larry, I think you may be right.

Newspaper's Ironies Noted By Sen. Bailey

Dear Editor,

I cannot help but notice the ironies in the Lexington Herald of April 7, 1989.

On the front page is an article that announces that Kentucky River Coal Corp. and Catesby W. Clay, president of the corporation, had announced a $1 million scholarship fund for students in the Kentucky River counties of Knott, Letcher, Perry and Leslie to "allow" students from this area to attend college in Lexington. An editorial in the same edition talks about there being "no modern civic centers in Hazard, no public gymnasiums in Harlan." The editorial goes on to say that "Exxon expects to pay the several million dollars in damage clean-up costs from the oil spill. There has been no similar effort by companies whose blasting and digging have ruined water supplies and scarred mountains, and no full-page apologies for the damage done to their state."

However, there is an effort by on company and its president, Kentucky River Coal, to fund scholarships for students who would leave the area and go to college and, according to the president of Transylvania, "We don't anticipate any problems finding qualified students in this area. Our admissions people travel through there all the time and report to us many fine students."

Wouldn't it be something of Catesby Clay and other executives of large coal companies who own and profit from the area "traveled through the area from time to time"? If they did, they would find not only "many fine students," but many fine institutions of higher education. Alice Lloyd College, located in Knott County — one of the counties the scholarships are intended to help — has a long-standing commitment to the area, charges no tuition to students from the very area Kentucky River Coal Company supposedly wants to help, and even has a strong history of providing leadership to the area through its graduates; Union College and Pikeville College have strong traditions of educating leaders in their service area, and Cumberland College educates more native Appalachian students than any private college in America.

Transylvania is a fine institution. It has a glorious past and a promising future. The institution deserves support. However, when coal companies and coal executives begin to discover civic duty, they need not look to the Bluegrass to find educational, civic or other programs that are serving the very people who mine the coal. We have plenty of deserving institutions right here in East Kentucky.

Like VISTA workers of yesteryear, coal companies and coal company executives like to "pop in, pop off and pop out" every so often, then return to their country clubs to congratulate each other on their fine community work. As the editorial says, there may be no "modern civic center in Hazard, no public gymnasiums in Harlan." There is also no coal in Lexington, but there is plenty of "coal money."

Many corporations throughout America have a company policy that they only make grants and gifts to charitable organizations in the area where they have employees or operations. Coal companies seem to reverse that when it comes to East Kentucky. They seem to have a policy that they will not support civic causes or charitable organizations in the area where they have operations.

I, and many others in East Kentucky, hope we will live to see the day when the people who own the wealth of our area will turn the expertise, energies, money and technological expertise of their corporations toward a cooperation with the people of our area to attack and solve the many problems of the area, many of which are created by their own industry. May then, we will have people making announcements in Lexington that their companies, based in Lexington, are committing millions of dollars to make it possible for young people in the Bluegrass to come to East Kentucky to obtain an education.

Sincerely,
Benny Ray Bailey
State Senator, District 29 (Floyd, Knott, Perry and Martin counties)

Liquor Retailers Not Mean, Greedy

Dear Editor,

I am writing this in response to the terrible things that were said in last week's paper about liquor store owners. I would like to set the record straight. I cannot speak for all liquor retailers, but I can speak for my mom and myself. Some would have you believe that we are mean, greedy people who make our living selling to poor people while their children do without, but those who accused us know nothing about us or our customers. They claim to be Christians. Not very Christ-like, if you ask me.

Most of our customers are very nice, respectable people who enjoy a drink or a glass of wine at the end of a long day. It is not my place, nor anyone else's, to judge whether this is wrong or right. I know that there are people who abuse alcohol, and that is wrong, but those people are responsible for themselves, or they should be. Those of us who enjoy a glass of wine after dinner should not have our rights violated just because some people are too weak to take control of their own lives.

I would also like to thank those anonymous souls who called the Liquor Locker and harassed us, then hung up on us when we asked their names. Again, not very Christ-like. You should have checked your sources more carefully. If you had checked with the Prestonsburg Police Department first, you would have known that we have not been selling to minors.

I'll close by saying this — don't judge me, or my mom, until you have walked a mile in our shoes. If people would stop making snap judgments about other people whom they know nothing about, the world would be a much nicer place.

Sincerely,
Terri Branham,
Prestonsburg

List Qualifications, Not Lies, Says Voter

Dear Editor,
Wouldn't it be nice if politicians and those aspiring to be politicians would just list their qualifications and/or experience for the office they are seeking? Wouldn't it be nice if they would refrain from lies, half-truths and insinuations in order to try and get votes? Wouldn't it be nice if this were so — not only in Floyd County, but in every city, county and state in our great land?

The people in our county are as intelligent as anywhere in the world, and without a doubt, know who to vote for. In fact, I imagine that those that resort to smear tactics actually lose votes rather than gain some.

Sincerely,
(Name withheld by request)

Dangerous Curve Sparks Petition Seeking Assistance

Thelma Clark has been keeping score. Monday there were two accidents in the curve near her house on KY 979 about a half mile from the Harold-US 23 intersection. Sunday, she said, there was one accident; two occurred the previous week and one the week before that. "I guarantee there to be from 10 to 12 accidents a month at that curve," said the businesswoman, whose hairstyling shop has been struck before by cars that skidded on the winding highway. "I have seen four accidents in 30 minutes in that one curve."

Clark, along with neighbor Lois Tackett, is circulating petitions throughout the area in an effort to have whatever is responsible for the wrecks corrected. "Nobody has refused to sign," Clark said of the petitions which state that an estimated 500 accidents have occurred at the site in the last three years.

Well over 1000 residents have signed the petitions in just a few days. The two women intend to give copies of the petitions to the Kentucky State Police, Floyd County sheriff's department, State Representative Greg Stumbo and US Congressman Chris Perkins in an effort to focus attention on the problem.

"I've called and called the Department of Transportation," Clark said, "and every time I call they can't find a record of where I've called before."

"We've asked for guard rails in the past but nothing's been done," she added.

Clark, whose home is attached to the beauty shop, said she has come to expect persons at her door "24 hours a day" to call for help after an accident.

She said she gave up a filling station across the road from her house after the pumps had been knocked down four times by out-of-control vehicles. "The house itself has been hit once, and at least 25 times, cars have come within two or three feet of the house," she said.

The accidents generally occur about "15 to 20 minutes after it starts raining," Clark said.

The road at the curve is banked so that the inside, next to the hill, is about one foot lower than the outer edge. Drivers who have trouble in the curve may go into the hillside or ditch on the south side of the road or onto a small level lot in the middle of the curve, over embankments on either side of the lot or toward Clark's house, if they veer to the north side.

The road is heavily traveled by coal trucks, school buses and vehicles belonging to residents of Toler and Mud creeks. Another local resident said he has counted 150 cars go past Clark's house in a 15-minute period. He also estimated that between 200 and 250 coal trucks travel the road each day.

Clark said the reason for the hazardous condition of the curve is open to speculation. "I've heard it's the type of blacktop and I've heard it's the incline of the road," she said, "but I just don't know."

Leaving the Scene of the Accidents?

Coal trucks, delivery vans and cars by the hundreds daily maneuver this curve on KY 979 near Harold. Too many are not successful, according to local residents, who are circulating petitions to register their complaints.

Due Process Hearings, Panel Recommendations To Be Addressed By Board

by Anne Chaney,
Editor

The Floyd County Board of Education will meet Wednesday, May 3, at 6 p.m. — an hour earlier than the board meetings have been held in the past.

The board voted at its last meeting to convene future meetings at 6 p.m.

Among items on the board's agenda will be a public discussion with members of the Blue Ribbon Panel concerning the group's report, submitted to local officials at the Wednesday, April 5 meeting.

Board members are also expected to discuss the results of due process hearings for three of five people recommended for demotion at the central office level.

Russell Frazier, assistant superintendent of finance, Sharon Newsome, co-director of food service, and Ned Bush, health coordinator, will all be represented by Prestonsburg attorney Ned Pillersdorf. The hearing will be held Thursday, April 27, in the board offices at 6 p.m.

The demotions were addressed by the board following state recommendations that central office staff be reduced by three positions.

The teleblitz will utilize teams of workers staffing four telephone lines at the Holiday Inn of Prestonsburg, calling potential members from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call responses will be entered directly into a computer, said Hites, so that by the end of the day, mailing labels can be generated and membership packets sent to those

Honesty and Integrity ARE THE REAL ISSUES

My opponent has been circulating a copy of a purchase order for blacktop on two county roads, claiming that it represents money spent by the county on my driveway. Below are photographs taken on Monday, April 24, 1989, showing my driveway. As you can see, there is no blacktop, only gravel bought by me. One of my opponent's supporters confessed that the information was given to him by my opponent. Is that honesty? These two roads, along with the other hundred miles of county roads were paid for by the STATE and laid by the county.

Mr. Hammond, when you are out spreading these lies why don't you tell the people how much money you received for selling property you had gotten when State Senator, knowing where the roads were going to be located, and selling to the state for road right of ways?

The Court records show $700,000.00 for one tract at Watergap, the Department of Transportation shows several hundred thousand dollars for land at Martin and Warco.

All this was paid by TAXPAYERS money.

In all the advertising that my opponent has bombarded the public with, he has never mentioned the most important, HONESTY AND INTEGRITY. Ladies and Gentlemen, I have worked hard to be a good County Attorney for all of Floyd County.

April Showers - Green Lawn - May Flowers

Landscaping with Laurel Farms

MOWING YOUR LAWN

A lawn mowed to the right height at the right time resists weeds, insects, and disease and appears lush and healthy. Infrequent mowing often results in the removal of too much grass at one time, and eventually produces a lawn that looks thin, spotty or burned.

Mowing Established Lawns - Most lawns in this area are either fescue or bluegrass or a combination of the two. The best mowing height is two to three inches tall. No more than one third of the height should be taken off in one mowing, even if it means mowing again sooner than you would like. Alternate the pattern of your mowing to allow grass to spring up instead of following the same path.

Mowing New Lawns - The first mowing should only be after the grass has reached a height a third higher than the regular mowing height. Again do not remove more than a third of the total height of the grass. Use a light weight mower for the first mowing. If the soil remains too soft or if the new grass is too loosely knit to mow without damage, wait. When you can mow lower the cut gradually until it is down to the proper height, by 1/2 or 3/4 inch each second mowing until you reach the recommended mowing height.

If your schedule is too busy to keep up with the mowing needed for the best results on your lawn, please ask our certified lawn maintenance staff to assist you.

Court Doesn't Raise Salaries; Will Buy New Rescue Vehicle

by Tess Whitmer, Staff Writer

At the Floyd County Fiscal Court's regular monthly session on Friday, April 21, members agreed to keep elected officials' salaries at the present rate, pay $20,000 for a new rescue vehicle and heard several citizens' complaints.

Edsel Moore, resident of Estill, petitioned to have the CSX Railroad Company's abandoned trestle in the Wayland area removed. County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo informed him he could contact the county attorney and file suit against CSX.

Patricia Stephens, resident of Jobe Turner Branch, representing 25 other residents, entered a petition to have city water installed in the hollow where she lives. She stated that the water was insufficient for drinking, bathing and washing clothes. Magistrate Jackie Owens motioned to accept the petition and work on the problem.

A committee from Dwale entered several petitions concerning the access to their community being blocked and the need of another exit, the odor omitted by Ky. W.Va. Gas Co. and Ky. Hydrocarbon, the lack of drainage in the community, their need for blacktopping and replacing the 10-ton weight limit signs along the road. Stumbo told the committee that the court is aware of, and working on, many of the problems, adding that he would be willing to help the citizens in any way he could.

In old business, the court agreed to pay $20,000 from grant funds for a new truck for the Floyd County Emergency Rescue Squad. Also, they reappointed Debbie G. Stumbo to the Floyd County Housing Board, and a bid for golf carts for the new park at Allen was accepted. Cunningham Golf Cars of Louisville gave a bid for a three-year lease/loan option at the price of $1,081 per year, per car, for 10 electric carts, and $1,230 for five gas 1989 Yamaha golf carts.

In new business, the court passed the following resolutions:

— To place a 20-ton weight limit on the Main Brush Creek Road and the Shepherd Fork Road off Route 850, on Right Beaver Creek;

— To close, and return to the landowners, the Old Brush Creek Road, located at the forks of Old Turner Branch;

County Attorney David Barber about the case. Patton said that if Barber agrees, they will ask District Court Judge Harold Stumbo to transfer the case to Circuit Court.

If Stumbo decides to allow the transfer, Patton said he will take the case to the grand jury which will decide if an indictment of the teenage mother is warranted.

"The possibilities (for indictment charges) range from murder on the upper end of the scale to reckless homicide on the lower end," Patton said.

The Commonwealth Attorney added that because of the complexity of the process, "we may not get to them (grand jury) in time" for this session which meets next Monday and Tuesday. He also said he does not expect the state medical examiner's written autopsy report until later this week.

The infant, later named Polly Renee Slone, was officially buried April 14 at the Porter Cemetery at Lackey, under the direction of Nelson-Frazier Funeral Home.

Coal Counties Get Bulk In Severance Tax Plan

Lexington, Ky., Thursday Morning, February 12, 1976

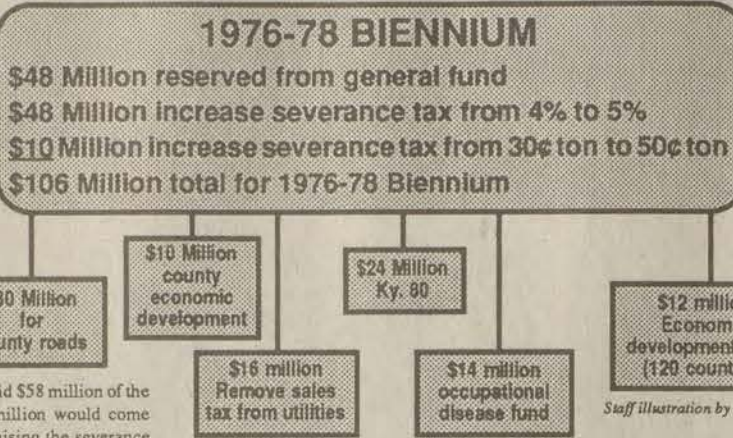

A-20 Lexington Herald, Lexington, Ky., Thursday, February 12, 1976

By RAY COHN
Herald Frankfort Bureau
Copyright (c) 1976, Lexington Herald
FRANKFORT, Ky. — Kentucky's coal-producing counties will receive the bulk of $106 million Gov. Julian M. Carroll will recommend in a biennial coal severance tax package, a Floyd County senator said yesterday.

Sen. Jim Hammond, D-Prestonsburg said while the plan has not been "finalized" and is "subject to adjustment" Carroll is committed to the basic parts of the far-reaching economic development package. Carroll is expected to announce the package early next week.

Hammond is one of several key officials and legislators from coal-producing counties who have been negotiating a severance tax revenue sharing formula with Carroll.

Severance Tax Hike

Additional stories and illustration on Page A-4

He said $58 million of the $106 million would come from raising the severance tax from four to five per cent of the selling price and its minimum from 30 to 50 cents a ton.

Hammond told the Herald the package contains $24 million in the biennium for construction of a new Ky. 80 from the Hazard to the Prestonsburg areas.

It also has $16 million to take the five per cent state sales tax off the first $30 of all residential electric bills in the state.

Hammond emphasized the formula will be a permanent one, thereby removing the necessity for the coal-producing counties to struggle every two years to get the law renewed.

The youthful Floyd County legislator said it will be based on a fixed percentage of the severance tax - probably 25 per cent of the levy's total revenues.

Except for the $16 million for the electric bill sales tax removal proposal and $12 million for economic development plan for all 120 counties, Hammond explained, the remaining $78 million will go to the coal counties or coal related programs.

Under a 1974 law the coal producing counties enacted only as a result of a House rebellion against former Gov. Wendell H. Ford, coal counties got half of the severance tax revenues above budget estimates in 1973-74 and 1974-75. This amounted to $33.5 million, some of which is still being allocated.

Hammond said the $78 billion in Carroll's package going for coal programs or to the coal counties includes $14 million in the biennium to help finance the occupational disease fund. This is designed to reduce the workmen's compensation burden for coal and other Kentucky industries.

Much of the occupational disease fund goes to pay for black lung claims. Both the coal and other industries have been concerned about the increasing burden such claims have placed on them.

But coal county officials and legislators generally think such taxes only feasible if coal operators were given a credit on severance taxes to offset the cost of the local tax.

While the $24 million for what Carroll calls "reconstruction of Ky. 80" stands out as a major program for Eastern Kentucky, informed sources indicated there will be "sweeteners" for Western Kentucky in Carroll's economic package as well.

Part of that is expected to come from the $12 million for economic development by all 120 counties.

Expected to be closely tied to this is the $43 million in the biennium Carroll previously said will go in the form of categorical grants to all counties for such items as convention centers, airports, airports, industrial development and health.

These grants would be

Most Severance Money To Coal Counties

matched by local governments on a formula which Carroll hasn't revealed yet.

The categorical grant program's main difference with the $12 million program in the package is that grants are one-time expenditures to be appropriated from the actual and anticipated surplus in 1975-76 biennium, ending June 30.

Hammond said the statewide economic development plan in Carroll's severance tax package will be essentially tied to the state's 15 Area Development Districts (ADDs), Kentucky's regional multi-county planning arms.

Informed sources explained the reason for the close ties of this part of the package to the ADDs is that these projects will be basically regional in nature.

The ADDs also provide local governments in obtaining assistance in obtaining state and federal grants and by providing technical assistance.

Hammond indicated the statewide economic development fund will take local and regional incentives into account in distributing the $12 million. He explained local governments and/or ADDs coming up with the best-developed programs will get first priority.

The additional road money the coal counties will get from the $30 million will be spent in the same fashion the rural secondary and county road programs are currently spent. In the county road programs this is done by mutual agreement between the fiscal court and the Bureau of Highways. On rural secondary projects the bureau has veto power.

Coal Haul Roads Hammond expects the additional money the coal counties will get from the severance tax package to be spent on coal haul roads, rural roads leading to the major city or cities in rural and/or mountainous counties.

The $10 million economic development plan for the coal counties Hammond said, will be administered a county council or committee in each of the approx. 45 coal-producing counties.

The councils will be composed of the county judge, the mayor of the largest city in the county, two local citizens Carroll would appoint and one representative elected by all school boards in the county.

Hammond said the money could be spent only for educational needs, solid waste disposal, sewage districts, water districts, and "capital improvements." The ADDs would help local governments develop programs and obtain federal matching funds.

"Input" Hammond said the program was worked out in meetings Carroll had with legislators and officials from coal counties. Representatives from the coal industry form the non-coal-producing counties on other aspects of his economic development package.

Some key legislators who participated in the negotiations beside Hammond include Sens. Kelsey Friend, D-Pikeville; Bert Ed Pollette, D-Harlan; Kenneth Gibson, D-Madisonville; Woodrow Stamper, D-West Liberty; William L. Sullivan, D-Henderson; and Lowell Hughes, D-Ashland and Reps. Sidney Adams, D-Litcart, and James Jitter Allen, D-Martin.

The Package appears to include several "sweeteners" to balance off regional and economic interests.

While the coal industry, for example, could not be expected normally to look favorable on a severance tax increase, it is interested in getting relief on its occupational disease burden. Some segments of the industry have already voiced opposition to a severance tax hike.

But it is not known if this was before Carroll committed himself to the far-reaching package for the coal regions.

One source hinted Carroll's economic development plans will include a major "sweetener" project for Jefferson County.

The County Attorney has a unique role to play in economic development for the people of this county. He is the only county official involved in the process.

Judicial: Sole prosecutor in the District Court
Legislative: Sole legal advisor to the Fiscal Court and Magistrate
Executive: Sole legal advisor to the County Judge Executive and the Kentucky County Attorneys Association. Along with all other county officials, he is responsible for the administration of the county government.

As a member of the Kentucky County Attorneys Association, the County Attorney can give the necessary political muscle and aid to the county government in the general welfare of the people of the county, and local governments; and effectively, since no coal severance tax revenue has been left to their own limited devices, services for their people.

Working Within System Paid Off

By RAY COHN
Herald Frankfort Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A 31-year-old freshman Floyd County senator has discovered working within the system pays off.

Sen. James Hammond, D-Prestonsburg, came to Frankfort determined to get an economic development plan for his poverty stricken district.

Hammond ran on a platform which pledged to work for continued coal severance tax money rebates to the coal-producing counties.

When the 1976 General Assembly convened many legislators were nervous about prospects for continued revenue sharing from the severance tax on coal.

Cooled Colleagues

But Hammond retained his faith in Carroll's commitment to the coal counties. Mindful of his freshman status, he cooled some of his more militant coal region legislators.

Even more important, he got together with veteran legislators who were genuinely interested in working with the governor on a severance tax program for their regions.

House members like Rep. Sidney Adams, D-Litcart, and James "Jitter" Allen, D-Martin, later joined many of these sessions.

While the mood of Dawahare, Freeman and some of the other hard-liners grew more militant, Hammond and the veteran legislators grew closer to agreement with Carroll.

End Result

The $106 million severance tax package which will give the bulk of the money to coal-producing counties is the end result Hammond said yesterday while it hasn't been "finalized" Carroll is committed to its basic parts.

Coal Judges Want Added Tax Hike

By RAY COHN
Herald Frankfort Bureau

FRANKFORT, KY. — A delegation of coal county judges met with Gov. Julian M. Carroll yesterday and pushed for one-half per cent severance tax increase beyond any tax the governor is contemplating.

Hammond was quoted as saying the plan was "not finalized" and was subject to adjustment.

Carroll told the group promoting the reconstruction of Ky. 80 the same day Hammond's report appeared the plan "does not represent a plan I am proposing."

Many of the judges seen in yesterday's delegation were active in the coal coalition. Among them were Breathitt County Judge Nim Henson, Bell County Judge Willie Hendrickson, and Perry County Judge Babe C. Noplis.

Senate Passes Ky. 80 Finance Bill

By RAY COHN
Herald Frankfort Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky. — An administration coal severance tax package bill to finance "resource recovery roads," such as Ky. 80, passed the Senate unanimously yesterday.

There was no debate on the measure and no amendments to deal with the objections Rep. Joe Clarke, D-Danville, raised when the House considered it last week and in interviews with the Herald.

The bill passed 35 to 0. Clarke, the chairman of the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee contends the bill, along with a companion measure raising the severance tax, would allow an unlimited amount of the tax's money to be pledged for construction of "resource recovery roads."

10 Per Cent Limit

Clark tried unsuccessfully to limit the amount of severance tax money that could be pledged for "resource recovery roads" to 10 per cent of the tax. No such effort was made in the Senate.

McClure has said the 10 per cent limit would not be enough to pay for Ky. 80, but Clark said later he was more interested in having a fixed ceiling than necessarily fixing it at 10 per cent.

Sen. Jim Hammond, D-Prestonsburg, the floor manager of the bill, went out of the way to attempt to show the definition of "resource recovery roads" would require that they be coal haul roads.

Hammond later said he did this to show the "legislature's intent" was that to be financed under this act a road must carry "significant" coal haul truck traffic.

Legislative intent in the consideration of courts use to determine cases concerning a challenged law.

Press Club Votes Hammond Outstanding Freshman Senator

Floyd County not only was a big winner at the late General Assembly session in the application of a portion of coal severance tax to construction of a new KY 80—it also produced two of the top figures in the Senate and a House member who worked closely with the governor on the severance legislation.

Senator Jim Hammond, Prestonsburg Democrat, who was one of the authors of the coal severance tax package, was named the outstanding freshman senator by Capitol Press Club. Hammond was Senate floor manager for the bill, and was named outstanding Democrat by the state Democratic Executive Committee. The 31-year-old senator is an attorney here and formerly was a teacher.

Senate Votes Tax On N-Wastes Taken To Maxey Flats

The Courier-Journal Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky.—The Senate yesterday passed a bill to levy a 10 cent-a-pound tax on radioactive wastes delivered to the Maxey Flats disposal site in Fleming County.

The site is operated by Nuclear Engineering Co. of Louisville on land leased from the state. A company official told the Senate Rules Committee Wednesday that such a tax would "put us out of business" at Maxey Flats.

"I don't think that's true," Sen. Jim Hammond, D-Prestonsburg, told the Senate yesterday when asked about the official's statement.

Hammond said House Bill 838 is backed by Gov. Julian Carroll's administration.

The passage vote was 28 to 1. Earlier, however, the bill barely got out of the Rules Committee, gaining only the minimum six votes necessary to reach the Senate floor.

The tax would be paid by the processor of the waste but would be collected by the disposal-site operator, Nuclear Engineering.

4 More Years of Continued Service To The People of Floyd County.

Your Continued Support Will Be Deeply Appreciated!

(Pol. adv. paid for by the candidate, 11pd.)

One moment of clarity changed his life. Tom, 31, started in junior high, mixing vodka with his fruit punch. But as an adult, mainly drank beer. A case a day. Watched his dad die from cirrhosis. Frightened, switched to cocaine. After a $3,000 "White Christmas", returned to alcohol. Immediately went out of control. Soon needed a pint of bourbon to stop the morning shakes. Finally, on a binge, raised his fist to hit his wife. Suddenly flashed back to his childhood. Realized like father, like son. Broke down, asked for help.

"I went into the CareUnit dead inside, beaten. They gave me unconditional love. They gave me my life."

Tom's been sober 2 years, has kept his family together, and says his life has completely turned around.

Floyd County clerk subject of 174 forgery allegations

By Lee Mueller

Eastern Kentucky bureau

Prestonsburg—Seven months ago, the state attorney general's office presented evidence to a Floyd County grand jury that resulted in indictments against 16 people, including three magistrates, a former county clerk and a trial commissioner.

But Attorney General David Armstrong's office did not show the grand jury 174 allegations of forgery prepared by Kentucky State Police investigators against Floyd County Clerk Carla Robinson Boyd.

Case records obtained under the state Open Records Law and reviewed by the Herald-Leader last week said that between 1980 and 1982, Boyd, as a deputy clerk, allegedly conspired with her uncle, County Clerk C. Ollie Robinson, to defraud the state and county of funds by typing fictitious receipts for heavy-truck registration payments.

The files mentioned no total amount of money missing, but Robinson, who died in office in February 1983, left a deficit of about $500,000. During a hearing for creditors conducted last month by Floyd County Master Commissioner Marshall Davidson, the state Transportation Cabinet filed a claim for $319,000 for motor vehicle registration fees it failed to receive from Robinson's office.

The state police documents said Boyd admitted typing the false registration receipts for her uncle, sometimes at a rate of seven or eight a day, for a period of two years.

"She would not admit to any monetary gain by the effort," the investigation report said. "Her only excuse for this action was that it was her duty to do as she was instructed."

Boyd told a reporter: "I'd say the reason they didn't prosecute me was that I was just following the boss's orders."

"That's what you do, don't you?" she asked a reporter. "Because if you don't, you won't be there very long."

Boyd said she never asked if what she was doing was illegal. "I didn't ask any questions," she said.

Dave Lewis, manager of the special prosecutions branch of the attorney general's office, presented the results of an 18-month state police investigation into financial practices by Floyd County officials to the grand jury. But he bluntly said, "No comment" when asked recently why he withheld two file boxes full of evidence against Boyd.

Assistant Attorney General Barbara Whaley, who helped Lewis prosecute the case, also declined to comment.

Numerous attempts in recent weeks to obtain comment from Armstrong, both in Frankfort and by telephone, were not successful.

Phillip Damron, a Prestonsburg lawyer who represents several of the defendants indicted last December, said he was not surprised that the material was not submitted to the grand jury.

"I have maintained since the date of original indictments that the special prosecutors had targeted specific individuals for prosecution while willfully omitting others," he said, "and the primary purpose of the original indictments was to influence the May elections."

In an interview last week, Boyd said she spoke with Armstrong by telephone last week about another matter, but said she did not know him personally and had no political ties to his office.

In a typical case file, James and Gary Mitchell of Beaver registered their truck in Robinson's office on April 1, 1980, and paid a fee of $190.00. Nine months later, Boyd typed and signed a fictitious license receipt indicating that the Mitchells had registered their vehicle for $48.40, the report said.

In another case, National Mines Corp. of Wayland paid a $475 registration fee on March 20, 1980, and Boyd typed and signed a fictitious license receipt for the state on July 1, 1980, showing the company had registered the vehicle for $356.50, records showed. The difference between the amount of money reported in the actual and fictitious licenses appeared to range between $100 and $150 in many of the 174 cases.

Boyd, about 30, said she did not know why Robinson ordered her to prepare the false registration receipts, but she said, "I'd say lots of it had to do with truck drivers' not paying for their license plates."

She said Robinson sometimes allowed truckers to buy their plates on credit and wound up having to pay the fee himself when the truckers failed to pay.

But Alva Mitchell of Beaver, who keeps books for James and Gary Mitchell, said Robinson never let them buy licenses on credit. "We always took a company check and paid for it right there," she said.

Likewise, a National Mines bookkeeper chuckled at the prospect of registering trucks on credit. "I wouldn't think so," said the bookkeeper, who asked not to be identified. "We paid by check."

The first-degree forgery allegations against Boyd had been discussed with the attorney general's office as of Feb. 2 this year, according to a document filed by state police detective John Bauerie, "but no decision has been made as to when presentation will be made" to the grand jury.

The case was listed as closed, however, on March 18, "due to a lack of prosecution," according to a document filed by special investigator James Henderson.

Boyd pointed out that on March 15 this year she turned over $74,000 in excess fees to the county.

"If I was going to steal that money two years ago, I wouldn't have turned over $74,000 for doing my job this year, would I?" she asked.

In a synopsis of the investigation, Bauerie wrote that Boyd typed the fictitious truck registration receipts, knowing that they were illegal and that they would result in the state government's receiving much smaller fees.

Carla turned over $74,000.00 in excess fees in 1985. But in 1986 she only turned in $9,566.00. And in 1989, only $15,500.00. What happened to the rest of the taxpayer's money?

BELOW IS A STATEMENT MADE BY JOE BOLTON IN THE MARCH 29, 1989 ISSUE OF THE FLOYD COUNTY TIMES.

• 1985 FLOYD COUNTY—Microfilming total cost $9,223.52—Did Not Have To Be Bid Upon. All of which I only received 10% of the total as a commission.

In fact, County Clerk, Carla Bolton, gave a company represented by her husband, Joe Bolton, the microfilming contract which cost the taxpayer's nearly $15,000.00. And no bids were sought, which was not in accordance with state law.

Bidding on any service over $7,500.00 must be open to the public, according to state law. As everyone can see, your personal company submitted these two separate bills, totaling $8,520.00 for the same election. Is this a way for a County Clerk to get around the $7,500.00 bidding law? How much of the taxpayer's money has been paid to your company, Kentuckiana Election Service since 1986?

FRONT ROOM—Consists of Micro-Film Reader Printers owned by the county. License Plates to be picked up by Dept. of Transportation.

This is a picture of the front room in a trailer used for storage by the County Clerk's Office, and paid for by the taxpayer's of Floyd County, at a cost of $620.00 a month. Why are all of these micro-film Reader Printers, which cost the taxpayers of Floyd County thousands of dollars, sitting unused? Carla, did you buy these machines from your own company?

BELOW ARE EXCERPTS FROM A NEWS STORY THAT APPEARED IN THE AUGUST 20, 1986 ISSUE OF THE FLOYD COUNTY TIMES, CONCERNING COUNTY CLERK CARLA BOLTON.

The clerk spent nearly $15,000 on microfilming for which no bids were sought, repeating a violation for which she was also taken to task in her 1984 audit. But the transgression occurred in April, 1985—before the 1984 audit was complete—and she has since instituted a policy of bidding on any item above $7500, in accordance with state law, said the accountant, J. W. Bryan.

In another violation of state statute, Mrs. Bolton did not turn over to the fiscal court by March 15 her excess fees—the money left over after all her expenses are paid—Bryan noted. But partial payment was made on June 28 and the balance was paid on July 31, he said.

The tone of the audit report, which the fiscal court received without comment, was markedly different from that of a state Department of Local Government official, who blasted the clerk last May for reckless spending urged the fiscal court to exercise more control over her office, and suggested that the state attorney general might be asked to investigate her financial records.

Al Howell, a DLG supervisor, said expenditures for supplies had tripled in the clerk's office between 1984 and 1985 and that equipment purchases had doubled in the same period. Much of the equipment, including some purchased without bids, would turn out to have been bought from Joe Bolton, whom the clerk later married. Howell suggested, And her extravagance would mean that money turned over to the county would be only a fraction of what it had been in previous years, he said.

On the question of excess fees, the amount turned over to the county treasury proved to be even more meager than Howell anticipated. According to his reckoning, $13,113 would be left over—a sharp drop from the $78,039 turned in the year before, and an embarrassment to county budget-makers, who had counted on receiving at least $60,000 in excess fees for 1985.

In fact, the clerk's audit shows an unanticipated deduction of $3600, listed as "expense allowance," in addition to her $31,815 salary, the maximum allowed by law. The deduction reduces to $9,566 the excess fees turned over to the county.

In other areas, however, the auditor's figures suggest more restraint than do those cited by Howell. Where the state official listed $91,480 in expenditures for office equipment and supplies, Bryan lists a total of $65,593. Of that sum, only $10,472 is listed as having been paid to Southern Rebinding Co., a firm once represented by Joe Bolton.

The audit lists gross receipts for 1985 of $4.3 million—the bulk of it from auto taxes, which are passed on to the state treasury.

Carla and Joe Bolton,

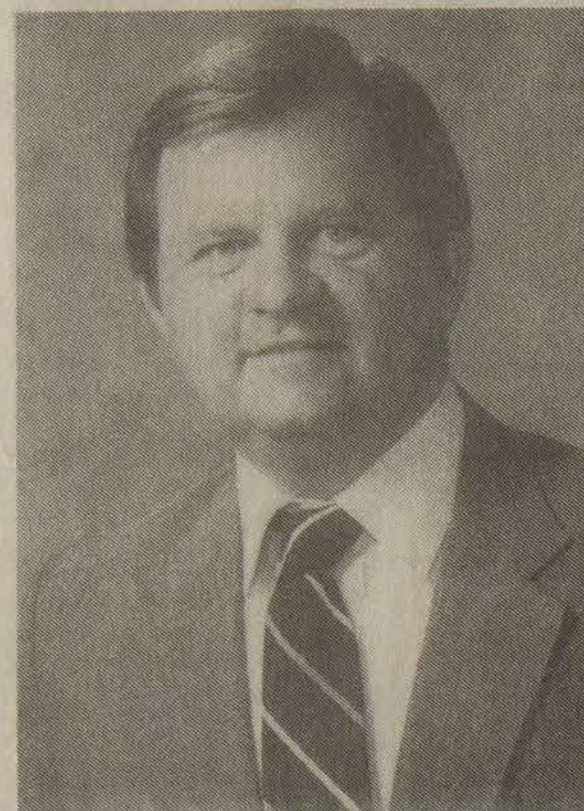

You said in your ad, (April 12, 1989) that if Sam Shepherd, or I, could find the approximate $70,000.00 contract, that you would pay either one of us a 10% commission. Is this the contract, $91,480.00 in expenditures for office equipment and supplies?

However, I do not want or need your commission. I would rather see the Clerk turn over the money to the Fiscal Court, to be used for better schools for our children, better roads to drive on, and more equipment for our Fire Departments and Law Enforcement Officials.

As your next Clerk, I will see that your tax dollars are managed properly.

Heck's Closes P'burg Location

The Prestonsburg Heck's store, which received its closing sentence in January, closed this past weekend, according to manager Steve Curtis.

Originally set to shut down in late March, the discount store is a casualty of a bankruptcy action filed by its parent company in St. Albans, W. Va. Twenty Heck's stores in Kentucky and surrounding states were affected.

Curtis said he has not heard from headquarters when the actual closing will be, but he expects it will be next week.

He could not estimate how much of the store's inventory was left since the close out sale began in January. "We have no big items left, and we're down to odds and ends clothing, lower price items," he said. "We will continue to try to sell all that we can."

Before the closing announcement, the Highlands Plaza store had a workforce of about 30. Curtis said the number of employees now is "between 15 and 20."

P'burg Medical Application Approved By CHEC

The Commission for Health Economics Control in Kentucky, at its April 19 meeting, approved seven certificate of need applications, representing approximately $7.8 million in capital expenditures.

Among applications approved was one by Highlands CAT Scanning of Prestonsburg, to establish a medical technology service to provide CT scanning, mammography, x-ray, fluoroscopy and ultrasound, at an estimated cost of $316,350.

The application was approved with the stipulation that the service provide quarterly usage reports to the commission.

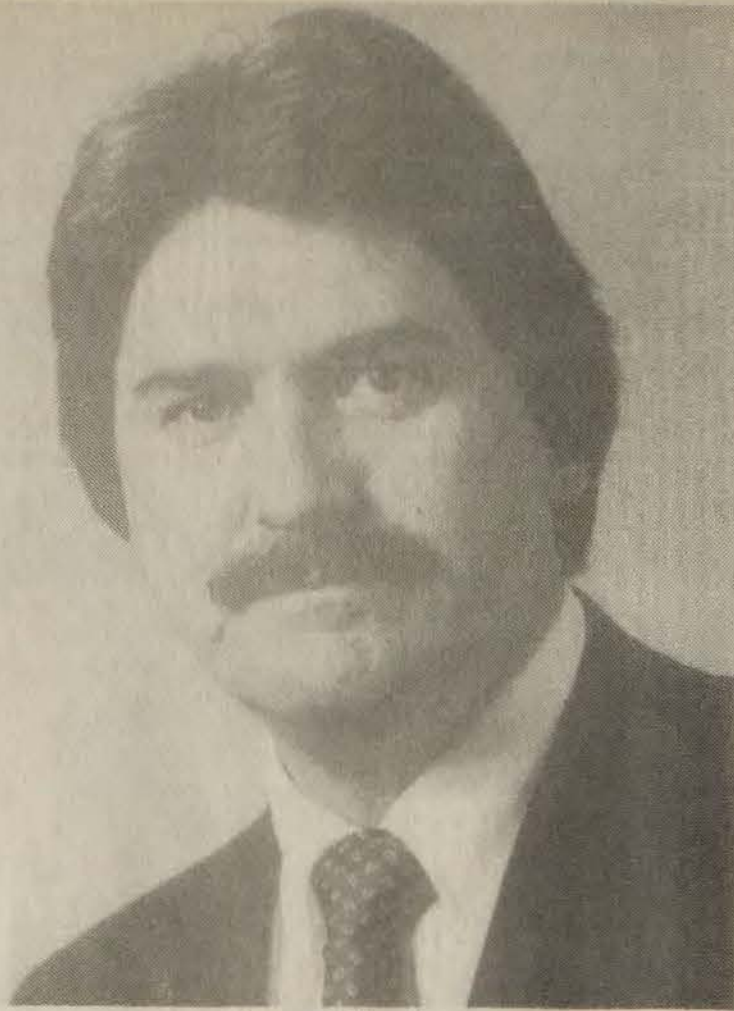

Since the service has been operating without a license since 1982, it is subject to a fine of up to $3,163, commissioners said.

New City Building On Tap for Martin

Martin city officials will open bids later this month for construction of a new municipal building.

The structure, to be about 36'x40', will house the clerk's office, water office and conference room, according to city clerk Johnnie Stephens.

The cost of the building will come from the city's general funds, Stephens said. Construction bids are to be opened on April 27.

Airport Engineer

C. Clay Collins of Lexington, formerly of Floyd County, has been named airport engineer at the Blue Grass airport on Versailles Road in Lexington. According to officials, Collins will head the engineering department, and will direct the design, construction and maintenance of all facilities, the physical plant, and improvements at the airport. He began his employment at the airport in October 1988, and lives in Lexington with his wife, Tami. Collins, a native of Lackey, is the son of A.C. Collins of Prestonsburg and the grandson of Beatrice Collins, also of Prestonsburg. He is a 1967 graduate of Garrett High School, and attended Prestonsburg Community College, majoring in civil engineering, prior to transferring to the University of Kentucky.

State's Only Brewery To Sell Product Locally

The Oldenberg Brewing Company, Kentucky's only brewery, announces the arrival of its flagship brew, Oldenberg Premium Verum, in Prestonsburg.

Under the so-called "microbrewery law" passed by the Kentucky General Assembly in 1984, the Ft. Mitchell-based brewery is limited to an annual production of only 12,500 barrels, as compared to the millions of barrels produced annually by most national brewers.

Since its introduction in October 1987, sales for Premium Verum (meaning "true reward") have been expanded in the state. The beer was voted as one of the five best beers in America at the 1988 Great American Beer Festival in Denver, Colo., where it beat out such well known beers as Budweiser, Coors and Pabst.

The Oldenberg Brewing Company is part of a much larger facility called the Oldenberg Brewery and Entertainment Complex. In addition to the brewery, the complex houses the Great Hall, a 600-seat festival hall open for dinner with Broadway-type entertainment; a restaurant and lounge styled after an English pub, serving lunch and dinner; and a large beer memorabilia collection on display throughout the complex.

RE-ELECT

JACKIE EDFORD OWENS

MAGISTRATE, DIST. 2

No. 2 on Ballot—
No. 1 for the People

As YOUR magistrate, I have fought and worked to better Dist. 2 and Floyd County for over 3 years. We're not just talking roads—although we have blacktopped approximately 15 miles of county roads in Dist. 2 in ONLY 3 YEARS. I don't believe that this has ever been accomplished in 2 terms (8 years) let alone in 1 term like I've done. The roads were in a pitiful shape when I took office—they had no ditches—the drains weren't open—and they had no base to put blacktop on. You can't put blacktop on mud—you've got to have a base. Now, I have nearly all of my dirt roads ditched, drained, and a base on them and when I'm RE-ELECTED Magistrate of Dist. 2, I'll have the roads in shape and ready to go and you will see many more dirt roads become blacktop.

People, one of our hardest fights in the next term will be for city water. There is around a 6 million dollar grant laying in Washington, D.C. for use on upgrading city water in Floyd County and EVENTUALLY WE WILL get this money. Since I live in a hollow that doesn't have city water—I know what it is like not to be able to drink this water or to wash white clothes in because I have quite a few "orange" T-shirts. IF you don't have a magistrate that will stand up and fight to bring this city water up these hollows in Dist. 2, it will go to someone else's district. When you walk into that Fiscal Court meeting, you've got 3 other magistrates that are pulling for their districts, the same as I AM PULLING FOR DIST. 2.

Some things we do in the Fiscal Court goes unnoticed by some. Our yearly budget that we set contains $2,000 a year for each of our 16 Fire Depts. in Floyd County plus $2,000 for the Floyd County Emergency Rescue Squad which comes to a total of $34,000 per year which in a 4-year term comes to a total of approximately $136,000.

We also budget approximately $22,000 a year for the senior citizens. I am pleased to announce in this year's proposed budget that we have allowed $4,000 for a Senior Citizen's Center in the Right Beaver Area. This amounts to approximately $88,000 in a 4-year term for senior citizens in Floyd County.

People, I could go on and on telling you about grants and bonds that I have voted on as YOUR MAGISTRATE.

People, I know that we haven't got everything done. I know we've got some road problems, some bridge problems, and plenty of city water problems in hollows as well as sewage problems in towns. It all takes time. It's impossible to do all this before election. I FEEL LIKE I'VE FOUGHT HARDER FOR DIST. 2 than anyone else has done in the past. IF YOU WANT TO KEEP GOING FORWARD, NOT BACKWARD—VOTE FOR ME—JACKIE EDFORD OWENS—MAGISTRATE—DIST. 2.

P.S.—When Dootney Horne and his partner came to Fiscal Court and offered Floyd County 3 million dollars a year to take Pennsylvania and New Jersey's incinerated trash into Floyd County at the rate of 200 railroad cars a day—(That's right, I said 200 railroad cars of trash a day, into Floyd County)—I STOOD UP AND HOLLOWED "NO"—because eventually we wouldn't be able to drink the water or breathe the air in this county. I'VE DONE RIGHT BEAVER RIGHT from ALLEN to WAYLAND. IF you can find a man that would make you a better magistrate, vote for him.

Council Accepts Donation of Park Tables, Approves 'Drug Free' Ordinance, Sets Fees

by Pam Shingler
Assistant Editor

After much discussion, the Prestonsburg City Council Monday night agreed to accept the offer of a donation that will require some work by the city.

Businessman Bill Ray Collins told council he will purchase three concrete picnic tables for the large sidewalk area between the Playhouse Restaurant, which he owns, and the city parking lot on Front Street. Collins said he will give the tables to the city for public use providing the city anchors the tables in the cement when the sidewalk is replaced.

Collins assured council that the tables can be used by anyone, not just his customers. He said he will also purchase umbrellas and will see that the area stays clean during the day, if the city will provide an "attractive" garbage can.

"I think they (the tables) will add to the downtown and will provide a good place for people to have lunch," he said. The council, on a motion by Danny Hamilton, seconded by Charles Hale, agreed to the proposal.

Members also heard the second reading of an ordinance providing for a drug free workplace and unanimously passed the measure, required by all organizations which accept federal monies. Mayor Ann Latta instructed City Administrator Fred James to have all city employees read and sign a statement of their drug free status.

Latta presented a bid from the University of Kentucky to perform a "cultural resource assessment" or archaeological excavation of the Salisbury lot on Front Street. The excavation is required before any development can be done on the lot.

Using volunteer workers, the dig will cost the city $1,294, according to the bid proposal. The use of UK workers would increase the cost by almost $500. Latta said she was sure the city could come up with enough volunteers to do the work.

"It bugs me that they pass a law saying we have to do this and then we have to pay for it," said Bill Callihan.

Mike Vance agreed, but added that "if we're going through with the project, we have to do this." On a motion by William O. Goebel III, with a second by Adrian Blackburn, council approved the expenditure.

Council members also agreed that the city should declare May as "clean up month" and provide free residential pick up of garbage, accumulated as a result of clean up of residential property, during the month.

A motion by Callihan, seconded by Hale, resulted in approval for advertising bids for a city audit. Blackburn and Paul Joseph voted against the measure.

Latta said the decision is "no reflection of the present auditors (Allen, England and Hensley) whatsoever. They have done a good job."

"It is a good practice to advertise every four years," Goebel concurred.

Council also voted to set a standard parade permit fee of $100 to cover costs of police and clean up crews for parades. The motion was made by Hale and seconded by Joseph. Goebel and Blackburn voted no on the motion and Hamilton abstained.

Latta announced that Pike County representatives of the Ku Klux Klan had requested a parade permit for early May, but have not returned the city's required application.

Council members passed a resolution supporting the proposed Levisa Fork/Haysi Lake Project, which involves construction of a dam upstream of Haysi, Va., to lower future flood levels on the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River. Though located in Virginia, the US Army Corps of Engineers project is expected to reduce flood heights in Prestonsburg by 2.2 feet and to affect flood levels in Johnson, Lawrence and Pike counties as well.

Copies of the signed resolution are to be sent to the Corps of Engineers, Gov. Wallace Wilkinson and State Rep. Greg Stumbo.

At the suggestion of Callihan, council authorized purchase of a small pick up truck, the cost not to exceed $3,500, for use in transporting lawn mowers, signs and other equipment used in city maintenance.

Latta also announced that the city has received more than 2,000 responses to its recent advertisement in a travel guide published by USA Today and that the city was mentioned in a special advertising section on "Kentucky's Main Streets" in American Heritage magazine.

To complete the 1989-90 city budget, council set May 1 as a special meeting/work session. The meeting will be at 7 p.m. The first reading of the budget proposal is to take place at the regular council meeting on May 8 and the second reading on May 22. The time table is necessary, said James, to insure passage 30 days in advance of the July 1 due date.

All council members, except Jim Yates, were in attendance at Monday's meeting.

Toler Creek Man Impaled on Fence

A series of what can only be called freakish accidents led to the death of a Toler Creek man Sunday afternoon.

Carl Hinkle Jr., 34, had recently installed an above-ground pool on his property, and a fence apparently designed to cut the risk of liability from having the pool, according to Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson.

Hinkle had already helped his son to get across the fence, which was anchored with "drive-type steel stakes," said Nelson, when the ladder fell, causing Hinkle to fall onto one of the stakes, puncturing his thigh and severing the femoral artery.

The injured man was able to reach a cordless phone, but its batteries apparently were weak, Nelson said. Hemorrhaging Hinkle then managed to go into his house to use the phone, but the cordless phone had been left in the "talk" position and he was unable to make the call for help.

The son was able to summon help and the Appalachian Ambulance Service reached the home at about 1:30 p.m. Nelson said he pronounced Hinkle dead at the scene.

Funeral services are set for this morning at 11 at J.W. Call and Son Chapel in Pikeville, with burial following in Johnson Memorial Park at Pikeville.

State Humanities Council Workshop Scheduled April 27

Prestonsburg Community College and Jenny Wiley State Park are sponsoring a free Kentucky Humanities Council workshop on Thursday, April 27, from noon to 4:15 p.m. at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

The workshop is open to the public and is designed for representatives of community organizations. Guest speakers will be Ron Pen, University of Kentucky; Ramona Lumpkin, Kentucky Humanities Council executive director; and Betsy Adler, KHC assistant director for resources and publications.

Pen will present "Anatomy of a Fiddle Tune" during lunch. Participants must pay for their own lunch; seating will be available for persons wanting to attend the talk only, which begins about 12:45 p.m.

After lunch, Lumpkin and Adler will conduct a workshop on how an organization can obtain thousands of dollars for humanities exhibits, festivals, and many other types of community cultural events through the council's grant programs.

In addition to the overviews of KHC programs, two films will be shown starting at 7 p.m., "Coalmining Women" and "Quilting Women." Films are free and open to the public.

For more information, or to schedule a consultation appointment or register for the workshop, contact Johnny Martin at 886-2711, or Betsy Adler 257-5932.

In Memory of Our Beloved Son:
Willard Eugene (Caveman) Hughes
Who passed away April 28th, 1988 at Cable Huntington Hospital in W. Va.

Son, we love and miss you since you was called away. But we think God so very much for giving you time to pray. So we want you to know you will never be forgotten as long as we shall live, because your friendly smile and hello to everyone you would give. Your death was ruled homicide by a medical expert, so I hope they catch who did that to you because they don't know how bad we hurt. So son, we'll say good bye and thanking God each day for letting you live four days after I found you and showing how much we love you and giving you time to pray.
Sadly missed and loved by all Mother, Father, Sister & Brothers

BL Bobcats' Seven-Game Streak Snapped By Morgan

by Ed Taylor,
Sports Editor

Coach Junior Newsome and his Betsy Layne Bobcats came into Monday's game with Morgan County riding a seven-game winning streak, and playing the best baseball of any county school.

On the mound was sophomore Keith Hall, who in his last outing threw a no-hitter at Allen Central. The lefthander experienced some control problems against Morgan County, and the Bobcats suffered only their third defeat of the season, 7-6.

Morgan County used the long ball to overcome the Bobcats. Starting pitcher Brian Goforth helped his cause with a three-run home run in the top of the sixth inning. Brian Evans homered in the first inning for three RBIs.

"The games we have scheduled in the next two weeks will tell just how good a ball club we are," Coach Newsome said. The Bobcats have a return engagement with the number one team in the 15th Region, Paintsville, and will host the Tigers at the Allen Park next Wednesday afternoon.

Morgan County's shortstop, Brock Litteral, committed two of the squad's four in the game, which prompted Coach Alvin Hill to note how uncharacteristic it was.

"Brock will field about every ball that's hit to him," Hill stated. "It unusual to see him field the way he did in this game."

Hill was pleased to see his pitcher, Goforth, go the full seven innings.

"This is the longest he has pitched all year. I sure was glad to see him pitch the way he did today; usually he will last about three or four innings," Hill remarked. "Betsy Layne has a great team. They hit five home runs on us earlier in the season at our place. Of course, our field is not this big, but they are a great team."

Morgan County scored three earned runs in the first off Hall as the lefthander was just missing the strike zone. After Litteral walked and Shawn McKenzie doubled, Evans parked a Hall fast ball over the center field fence to give Morgan County a 3-0 lead.

Betsy Layne picked up a first inning run on a base hit by Duran Newsome and a RBI double by senior Keith Hall. The Bobcats scored their second run in the third on three straight singles by Newsome, Tommy Hall and Keith Hall who picked up his second RBI, to make the score 3-2.

Goforth's home run in the sixth followed a walk to Evans, and designated hitter Steve Peyton's base hit, to up the Morgan County lead to 6-2.

Betsy Layne struck for four runs in the bottom of the sixth on five base hits to tie the score at 6-6. Barry Hamilton picked up two RBIs in the inning for the Bobcats with a base hit. Adam Gearheart doubled in a run in the inning also.

Hall's wildness was his downfall in the top of the Morgan County seventh. After Litteral grounded to short, he issued bases on balls to Clint Blair and McKenzie. Evans lined a hit to center, that centerfielder Keith Hall made a dive for, but could not catch, to score Blair with what proved to be the winning run. Betsy Layne went down in order in the bottom of the inning.

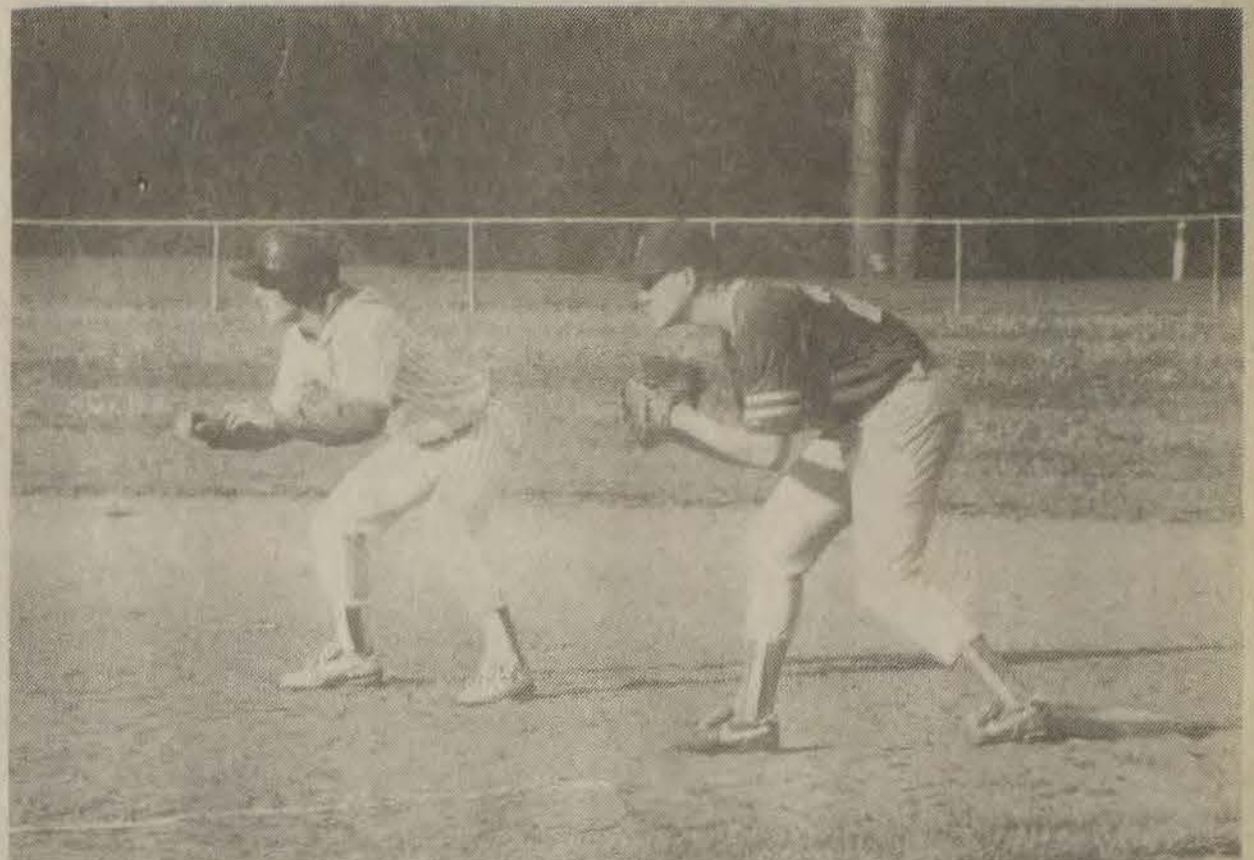

"Morgan County is a good ball club," Newsome told his squad. "They just beat us. We're a good team and good teams bounce back."

In a previous meeting between the two teams, Betsy Layne took a 9-4 win.

Goforth picked up the win and Hall suffered his second setback and goes 3-2 on the year.

Betsy Layne is now 13-3 and will travel to Johnson Central on Thursday afternoon.

Ready to Go

Craig Hunter of Betsy Layne gets a big lead against Morgan County at the Allen Park Monday afternoon. Clint Blair holds Hunter on. Morgan County scored a run in the top of the seventh inning to hand the Bobcats only their third loss of the season, 7-6.

In the Dirt

Morgan County's right fielder, Shawn McKenzie, swings at one in the dirt against Betsy Layne Monday afternoon at Allen Park. Morgan County snapped Betsy Layne's seven-game winning streak with a 7-6 victory.

PHS Gets By Cards

Prestonsburg Blackcat coach Russell Shepherd and his squad, coming off a win over Allen Central, took to the road for baseball at Sheldon Clark.

The Blackcats scored three unearned runs in the top of the fourth inning and one in the fifth to erase a 2-0 Cardinal lead and post their 11th victory of the season against seven setbacks.

Tim Trusty started on the mound for Shepherd's squad and he scattered three Cardinal hits in going the distance. Each team committed only one error.

The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead with a run in the first on two base on balls to Tom Mills and Jesse Maynard. Mills scored on a sacrifice fly by Jeff Dalton. Sheldon Clark picked up another run in the third inning after Mills was hit by a pitch, stole second and scored on Dalton's single to center field.

Prestonsburg took a 3-2 lead with three runs in the top of the fourth frame, on an error by Mills at second base on the grounder by Tim Watkins. Tim Trusty grounded to short and Stuart Robinson moved Watkins to third with a sacrifice bunt. Sparks walked, stole second, and both runners scored on a single by Jason Storey.

Sheldon Clark tied the game with a single run in the bottom of the fourth. Cain reached first on a Robinson error, and scored on a Perry base hit. In the Prestonsburg fifth, Ray Collins doubled and rode home on a base hit by John Clark to give the Blackcats the decisive run.

With Dalton on second and two out in the Cardinal half of the inning, Trusty struck out Cain to end the game.

Prestonsburg goes 11-7 and will play at Johnson Central this afternoon at Johnson Central.

Tim Trusty picked up the win and Quillen took the loss.

Keepers!

By Chris Altman

I recently received the following letter from Sam Giles, an old fishing buddy and neighbor of mine when we lived in Knoxville, Tenn.

I thought you might enjoy it as much as I did!

"Dear Chris,
"I just got back from a trip to Center Hill Lake with Cindy (and no kids!). My sister and her husband have a house there, and since they were in California for the week, Cindy and I felt obligated to watch the place for them. Of course, I took the boat to patrol the area. After we got there, I realized I had forgotten to take the rods out of the boat. In fact, not only had I left the rods in the boat, but somehow I inadvertently placed a bag full of new lures in the dry storage compartment!"

"I had assured Cindy that the purpose of this trip was to spend some 'quality' time alone together. Somehow, she wasn't buying it, and she even had the nerve to question these events as being more than coincidental! I knew the only way to convince her was to use the old 'I'll throw it all away if you don't believe me' routine. (She didn't buy that one, either.)

"I was able, however, to convince her that the boat should be a wonderful means of getting away from everyone. When she agreed, I knew I was on a roll! I began to explain that in order to really get away from everyone, we should try going back into coves which had fallen trees, rocky points, and brush which would be unattractive to most boaters. I never realized it was so difficult to describe such a cove without using the word 'structure.' (Cindy knows what that word pertains to.)

"Having spotted a cove which was full of structure... I mean, one which would be unattractive to other boaters, I turned off the motor and lowered the trolling motor. At this time, she questioned the need for the trolling motor. I believe her actual words were, 'I thought you only use that when you're fishing.' Having already thought this one through, I explained that because of the wind blowing us into that bank, I could keep the boat a safe distance away from the fallen trees, rocky points, and assorted brush piles by using the trolling motor.

"I must admit that it was at this point that I almost slipped, but fortunately, she didn't notice. When asked how far a 'safe' distance was, I told her it was about as far as I could throw a quarter-ounce spinnerbait.

"Quickly changing the subject, I told her that I didn't want to risk sunburning her beautiful fair skin. For this reason, I then said that I felt we should stay on the shady side of the cove. Not only was this side shady, but it had more fallen trees, rocky points and brush which other boaters would find unattractive, and we could be alone. Furthermore, I explained, I didn't want the glare from the sun to interfere with our time of deep interpersonal communication.

At least my head was turned in that general direction!

"The real problem was just beginning. A particular point of interest containing a lot of 'unattractive' stuff was quickly approaching. It was a rocky point with submerged brush piles on one side and fallen trees on the other. I called to Cindy's attention the fact that no one was fishing this spot. She theorized it was the unattractive stuff and continued on with her discourse on the ups and downs of marriage.

"As I guided the boat a bit closer to this hot spot, I realized I had gone too far. All of a sudden, my left arm began going into spasms. Cindy continued with her dialogue while trying to ignore the convulsive jerking of my body, but it was too obvious. I was in perfect casting distance, and I knew I had to do something quickly.

"I reached down and grabbed by baitcasting reel with its securely-tied spinnerbait and began casting like a man possessed! I told her that I agreed

Special Olympians: They're All Winners

by Ed Taylor,
Sports Editor

The smiles on their faces as they cross the finish line says it all for the participants in the Special Olympics, held at the Bob Amos Park in Pikeville on Saturday.

Win or lose, they were happy. Volunteer "huggers" welcomed them as they came across the finish line with a big hug and a "well done." There was no selfishness, no greed, no unsportsmanlike like conduct. They were just happy to be there. For the many of people who were there to watch and take in these special games for these special people, there was a sense of joy.

Teams from five surrounding counties, Pike, Floyd, Magoffin, Martin, and Johnson, took part in the special events. Over 307 special athletes registered for the events, making up 24 teams.

"We had over 90 volunteers," says director Connie Combs. "We had a large support group for these games also. People have really come out to help."

The Knights of Columbus acted as chairpersons for the track and field events, timing, measuring and encouraging each participant. The Pike County Rescue Squad provided any first aid that may have been required. The Pikeville City Police were ever present. The folks at Hardee's, Rax, East Kentucky Beverage, McDonald's and the Pikeville Women's Club furnished the food and refreshments for the special events.

The Special Olympics were for areas 11 and 16. The area 11 coordinator was Mike Orem, and coordinating Area 16 was Elizabeth Dowdy.

The games got underway with the parade of athletes at 9 a.m., the national anthem, and opening invocation. At 10: a.m. the Lighting of the Torch took place.

Areas of competition were weight lifting, long jump, softball, 50 meter dash, pentathlon (running long jump and high jump), wheelchair events and the 100 meter run.

The events were held with different age groups in the Olympics. Children ages 8-11, 12-15, 16-21, competed against each other. At 11:45 the groups were served lunch. Closing ceremonies were held at 5 p.m.

Teams from Prestonsburg and John M. Stumbo elementary schools took part. Melissa Powers, Brad Meek, Eric Jarvis, Lora Dingus, and Jerry Miller represented Prestonsburg. Pam Pratt and a host of volunteers were there in charge.

From John M. Stumbo school, Danny Adams, Joseph Adams, Joshua Bryant, Tonya Hall, Jennifer Jones, Joseph Newsome, James Howell, Earl Adkins, Ken Gayheart, Clayton Hall, Cindy Blankenship, Robert Hunter, Tiffany Osborne, Wendell Vance, David Burchett, and William Parsons participated. The teachers in charge were Sue Ousley, Sherry Whitt, and Martha Akers. Tammy Jarrell, Jamie Mitchell, Susan Clark, Chris and Audra Gayheart, Lonzo Akers, Rita Bentley, and Jessica Tackett were all volunteers from the school.

The ultimate goal of the Special Olympics program is to create opportunities for sports training and athletic competition for all exceptional children.

Recent scientific research has shown that physical activities, sports and competitive athletics are a major means of reaching our children. Here is an area where he or she can succeed and start building a positive self-image, gaining confidence and self-mastery as well as physical development. As a child improves his or her performance in the gymnasium or on the playing field, he or she also improves his or her performance in the classroom, at home and eventually on the job.

It is the hope that the Special Olympics program will serve as a motivational "framework" within which physical education, recreation and sports activities can take place.

The Special Olympics is designed to give each child a "feeling of belonging" by offering him or her membership in a national athletic club with membership certificates, periodic newsletters, etc.

Roberts Finishes Boston Marathon

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

Rick Roberts of Emma returned "banged up from Boston" after he took part in the 98th Boston Marathon.

Out of 7,000 runners Roberts finished 1,652 overall with a time of 3:10.47. "I wanted to finish under three hours, but before the marathon I stretched a solerus muscle and had to take four days off, use a lot of icy hot on it," Roberts explains. "It was OK the first 10 miles, then I was forced to pull off the course three times for treatment. I thought about dropping out, but I thought about the people at home and them rooting for me, so I kept running."

Out of the 46 Kentucky entrants, Roberts finished 12th. He finished first out of the five Eastern Kentucky entrants. The race began at noon with the temperature in the 60s; at the finish the temperature was in the 70s.

"I lost 10 minutes because of stops. I was dehydrating and had to stop," Roberts says. Paintsville's Marvin McFadden finished behind Roberts in 3:19.33, to finish 2,258 in the race. "McFadden was about 600 runners behind me," the Marathon runner said.

"The doctors told me not to run for four to seven days, and then I am to run slowly at first."

What about future races for Roberts?

"I will be running in the Elkhorn City Apple Blossom 5K run on May 5. In August I will take part in an International Run at Maggie Valley, N.C., and the Blue Grass State games at U.K. July 29-30."

Bobcats Get Past McDowell, 20-7, Sending 17 Batters To Plate

by Ed Taylor,
Sports Editor

The Betsy Layne Bobcats enjoyed a big fifth inning, scoring 13 runs and sending 17 batters to the plate, in defeating the McDowell Daredevils 20-7 in high school baseball at the Allen Park last week.

Chris Newsome got the win and Shannon Newsome took the loss.

The Bobcats scored four times in the top of the first. Barry Hamilton had a base hit, Duran Newsome walked, and Tommy Hall was hit by a pitch—his third in two games—to load the bases. Keith Hall was safe on a third baseman's error, scoring Hamilton and Newsome. Gearheart flew deep to right for a sacrifice fly, scoring Jarrell, who was running for Hall. Chad Hamilton was safe on another third base error, allowing Hall to score and putting Betsy Layne up 4-0.

McDowell failed to score in its first two times at the plate. In the top of the third, Hall flew out to center, while Adam Gearheart drew a walk. Hamilton singled and Chris Newsome singled to drive in Gear-heart. Keith Hall then doubled to score Hamilton, and Newsome scored on a sacrifice fly to center field by Chris Bias. The Bobcats held a 7-0 lead.

McDowell scored twice in the bottom of the third. John Martin opened with a double to right center field. McQuate struck out, and Crisp flew to center. Bret Rose lined a base hit to left center to score Martin. Rose stole second, and scored on a base hit by Nalle.

Betsy Layne went down quietly in the fourth. McDowell tied the game in the fifth on a walk to Stumbo and a base hit by Little. Lawson's fly ball to center was misjudged, scoring Stumbo. Kidd singled, and Martin struck out. McQuate came to the plate with the bases loaded, one out, and grounded to first for the out, scoring Little. Crisp then hit a double to center to score Lawson and Kidd, and Rose's double tied the game at 7-7.

Things fell apart for the Daredevils in the top of the fifth as the Bobcats put the game away with 13 runs on nine hits. Betsy Layne sent 17 batters to the plate. Bias and J. Hall each had a double, and Hall picked up two RBIs. Keith Hall also had two fifth inning RBIs.

The win enabled Betsy Layne to go to 12-2 for the season.

Hall Hurls No-Hitter To Defeat Allen Central

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

Keith Hall missed, by one batter, hurling a perfect no hit, no run game against Allen Central at the Allen Park last week in leading the Betsy Layne Bobcats to a 10-0 victory over the Rebels.

Hall retired 15 of the 16 batters he faced. He walked Mickey Parson in the fourth inning to break his streak of nine straight batters he had retired.

The Bobcats took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning after Chris Bias was hit by a pitch. Bias stole second, and scored on a fielder's choice.

Betsy Layne struck for five runs without the benefit of a hit, as errors plagued the Rebels in the top of the second. Keith Hall lead off with a walk; Chad Hamilton reached on a left fielder's error. Chris Newsome reached on an error by the pitcher and Keith Hall (pitcher) walked, forcing a run in. Bias grounded to second and was safe on an error, allowing another run to score. With the bases loaded, Barry Hamilton lifted a fly ball to left that was caught, and Newsome tagged and came home on the sacrifice fly.

Duran Newsome was safe on an error on the right fielder and Hall scored. Bias came home on two wild pitches. Betsy Layne led, 6-0.

In the top of the third, Hall reached on an error on the third baseman. Gearheart walked, and Hamilton flew out to left field. Chris Newsome drew a one-out walk to load the bases.

Pitcher Keith Hall hit a sacrifice fly to left to score Hall, and Betsy Layne led, 7-0.

The Bobcats made it 10-0 in the top of the fifth. On a base hit by Gearheart, Hall reached on a shortstop error and Bias was hit by the pitch for the second time, to load the bases. Barry Hamilton singled to drive in two runs, and Bias scored on a base hit by Newsome.

The 10-run "mercy rule" applied, and the game was called at the end of five innings.

Wallen Wins Discus In Pikeville T&F Meet

Wallen's winning toss was 128' 10". Robert Hughes, teacher at Maytown and Wallen's personal tutor, has high hopes for the young sophomore.

"His throw of 128' 10" is tremendous," Hughes says. "He had a throw of 150', but I called it a foul. Brian is getting stronger and smarter. He is extremely strong. There is not a better thrower in the state."

Hughes sees Wallen going a long way. "In weight lifting he bench pressed 250 pounds. He has already competed against the best in the region, and won. I would like to win the state with him, but he may be just a year away."

Hughes is an avid runner himself. He has retired from active coaching but enjoys working and helping kids with talent. He offers them advice and encouragement.

"A lot of colleges are watching Brian, and are interested in him as a football player. He needs to step up to a better discus. He has never been beaten by anyone in his age group."

Wallen will be competing in the Jenkins Invitational and on May 2 he will take part in the Russell Relays.

"There will be Triple-A schools from Ohio competing in this meet," Hughes stated. "We'll know then just how good Brian really is. They will give him a lot of competition."

Just Waiting

Doug Derossett of Martin Liquors waited for some action at third base in the Minnie Softball league Saturday afternoon. Martin Liquors won, 6-3.

with her comments and that although it appeared as though I was fishing, I was actually using fishing as a means to communicate some deep truths about life and marriage.

"She gave me that look, the one that silently says, 'This better be a good one.'"

"I continued my sermon: 'Marriage is like fishing a spinnerbait... Whether we choose to reel slowly through life, bouncing off of the sharp rocks below, or whether we choose to reel hurriedly through life, exposing ourselves to obstacles floating on the surface, we need not worry — because when we tied the knot, we tied it to last forever.'"

"There followed a short pause that seemed to last forever... similar to the feeling when a trophy bass throws the hook five milliseconds before the net is under him. After the pause, there was a burst of laughter. Being the gift from God that she is, Cindy graciously tolerated my continuous casting and babbling.

"I fished the remainder of the evening, but didn't catch a single fish. We did, however, have some very meaningful conversation.

"I never realized there were so many relationships between life and marriage and the philosophies of fishing. For example, I work with several single guys who seem to have incorporated a 'catch-and-release' philosophy into their dating lives. I also think people with insecure childhoods tend to fish predominantly with weedless lures, just as people with shallow personalities prefer topwater plugs. This concept troubles me when I wonder why I enjoy snagging carp so much!

"Best wishes, Sam."

Bobcats Win, 8-3, Over Millard High

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

Betsy Layne scored three runs in the third and seventh innings and went on to defeat the Millard Mustangs, 8-3, in recent baseball action.

Duran Newsome picked up his third win of the season against no defeats. Todd Akers relieved Newsome in the bottom of the sixth, picking up his second save.

"We're looking good as a team," Bobcat mentor Junior Newsome said. "Obviously we have a good hitting team to be 13-2 for the season." The Bobcats have been hitting the ball much better than Newsome and the other coaches has anticipated this season. But there has been another area of surprise for the Bobcat coach.

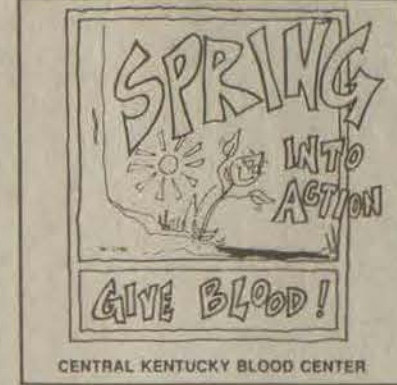

"Our pitching has been the biggest surprise for this year," Newsome explained. "We knew we had a group of young people, and they have come through for us. Todd Akers is just a freshman, and he's really helped us this year. Our pitching has done the job for us."

Barry Hamilton and Adam Gearheart had big two-out hits to drive in two runs each for the Bobcats. Timely hitting has been a big asset for the Bobcats all season. Hamilton and Gearheart each had two RBIs in the game, played at Millard. Duran Newsome and Tommy Hall each had two hits in leading the Bobcat attack.

"We have an eighth grader on our team that is going to be a good one," Newsome stated. "Shawn Newsome from J.M. Stumbo plays on our junior varsity team. Chuck Lafferty has made us a good player. He is a utility player. He pitches, plays third and first for us. Every team needs a good utility player." *****

Proper Lures A Must For Productive Fishing

What's one of the biggest mistakes bass fishermen make before they ever start fishing?

According to Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member Randy Fite, it's deciding which lures to use without first checking the conditions.

"Having game plans and a general idea of what the fish should be doing is important," says Fite, "but it's important to let the fish and the water tell you how to fish."

"Far too many anglers try to catch bass the way they want to, and never let the fish tell them how they can be caught," Fite relates.

The first thing to do, says the Texas-based angler, is to use a lure that works best at the depth you think the bass are using. You don't want to use a shallow running crankbait or a topwater plug if the fish are 18-20 feet deep, nor do you want to use a deep running crankbait if the bass are in two feet of water over moss beds.

"Water temperature is also important," says the Johnson pro, "because it often determines the depth and activity level of the bass. This, in turn, determines the speed of your lure retrieve."

"Remember, the deeper you fish, the less choice of lures you have to work the water at maximum efficiency: Conversely, of course, the more shallow you fish, the wider your lure selection is."

Shallow water in spring can be clear or muddy, explains Fite. The muddier the water, the more important lure vibration becomes, which is why spinnerbaits often work well. In clear water, Fite prefers crankbaits or jigs because they appear more natural.

"The lure's action is always important," adds Fite. "But don't try to add action with your reel. The reel is simply to control lure movement. You impart action to a lure with your rod tip. Raise your rod, lower it, even shake it from side to side if you want that lure to do something special."

"Just remember, let the bass tell you how they want a lure presented, because they always do. Be as open minded and as versatile as you can, and your catch rate will certainly increase."

Quite often, says Fite, the very first bass of the day can be the most important because it may tell you the pieces you need to fit the bass catching puzzle together.

"Pay attention to the depth, the speed of your retrieve, even the force with which the bass hit," says Fite, "because they all combine to tell you how the fish are acting and how you should be fishing."

Former Reds Prospect Makes 'Pitch' For Kids

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

Jimmy Goines: former Martin High School standout, former Big Sandy League all-star, and former member of the Cincinnati Reds farm team, the Douglas Redlegs, and now once again a resident of Martin.

Goines, along with his wife, Frieda, stepdaughter Monica Gates, a junior at McDowell High School, and stepson Christopher Gates, a student at Prestonsburg Community College, moved back to "the hills I love," Goines says, in June 1988 after he retired from General Motors. Many things have happened to Goines since his earlier days at Martin.

"We had just won the district tournament, and I pitched in the first game of the regional at Ashland and won that game. The Reds were scouting me at that time. In 1955 I went to a tryout camp at Crosley Field (home of the Reds until 1970) and threw five pitches — two curves and three fast balls — and signed a contract," the righthander recalls. "I pitched for the Douglas team for two months and got homesick and left the team. I was used in relief and had a 1-0 record.

Goines then realized that he had made a mistake.

"I had no dad to push me, to explain to me I could go from a team like Douglas to the Major Leagues. I didn't listen to the advice of others."

Goines, 55, has a deep desire to work with youngsters today. He believes that with his experience, he can help offer advice those young players who want to excel in baseball.

Goines believes that throwing a curveball at an early age is harmful to the arm. "I never threw a curve until I was 18 years old," he recalls. There were no Little League or Babe Ruth programs to afford Goines the opportunity to play any organized baseball.

"We would get us a broom stick and a tennis ball and go out in a field somewhere and play ball. We sometimes took old rags and taped them into a ball and used that," he says. Goines' best pitch was his fastball, which has been estimated at 100 mile per hour. He also used the "drop pitch" to keep batters off stride.

"Sometimes I would pitch double headers," he says. "I just keep my arm warm. I could go 12 innings easy back then."

Now that Goines has retired and returned to the place he loves, he wants to teach the game that he loves to kids that he loves. What would bring someone who has been gone for 33 years back to his roots?

"I left here after dropping out of school after my junior year," Goines says. "I felt I let 'Hoss' Halbert down by leaving like I did. But I wouldn't listen."

Goines likes being around kids so much that he took a job driving a school bus. "Some people think I am crazy," he said, "but I enjoy being there with them. I don't have any problems, and when I do we just talk them over. I never dreamed I would spend 33 years in Ohio and move back here and drive a school bus."

Goines believes that he has a lot to offer kids today in the way of advice. "I believe I can teach them a lot of the things I learned in pro ball," he states. "I think we need to teach them the fundamentals of the game."

Goines has eight children by his first marriage to the late Delores Goines. He is a father who is proud of his kids, but he never believed he should push his sons into playing baseball. He had a son that excelled in football in high school and a daughter that played softball.

"You can quote me on this — I never liked Ohio from day one when I quit school in my junior year. It has always been my heart's desire to come back, and now I am back," the big righthander said. "I would like to coach a team or just to help someone coach one."

Goines remembers some of the old high school games in which he played, one in particular:

"We played on an old slate dump at Wheelwright against either Wheelwright or Weeksbury. In that game Pete Grigsby Jr. broke his leg sliding into second base," Goines recalls. He also recalls the game against Ashland when he struck out 17 batters, and in the Big Sandy League against a Tommy Boyd-coached team, when he struck out 22. Unknown to Goines at the time he signed with the Redlegs, the Pittsburgh Pirates were also interested in him.

Goines also sees some good talent in Floyd County. "Mike McQuate at McDowell is a tremendous player and really has good potential, and he has the right kind of attitude to make it," Goines says.

Goines was not known only for his pitching ability; he was also a good hitter. "When I wasn't pitching I would play third base. I was a good hitter in high school and in the Big Sandy League," he said.

"When I was in school I was a hothead, wouldn't listen. You can't be that way, you've got to listen if you're going to make it," Goines stresses. "Hoss (Halbert) tried to encourage me." "It's a shame that Jimmy doesn't have his own team to work with or be able to help someone," Mrs. Goines says. "He has so much to offer young kids today."

Goines has some advice for young players with the aspirations of making it some day in baseball.

"Stay in school. Keep on playing. You never know when you will be scouted. Keep your legs in shape. When your legs are gone you can forget it. Do a lot of running. Sweat good. Be dedicated, and above all listen to your coaches. Heed good advice. Take care of yourself," he says. "Don't be a hothead, a know-it-all."

Goines today is recuperating from a fall on the ice Dec. 13 when he was helping push some cars that were stuck on Highway 80. "I was pushing a car and slipped on some ice and broke my hip. But I am getting back in good shape," he says.

Walk-A-Thon: It's More Than Usual Fund Raiser

When Creed Gilliam of David and Bill Tom Crothers started out on their walk-a-thon, it was for more than just raising money — it was also an "awareness" walk, to make women aware of the problems of breast cancer in the USA and Kentucky.

"According to the latest stats, 41,000 women will die of breast cancer this year in the USA," Gilliam says. "More than 600 will die in Kentucky. Our walk to Paintsville and back was more than just to raise money; it was to make people aware of the risk, get them to go to a physician and be examined."

Gilliam and Crothers began their walk-a-thon at 6 a.m. Saturday morning from Ed Walters' car sales. They walked to Paintsville and returned, for a total of 25 miles.

"We broke our record of last year when we walked to Pikeville," Gilliam explains. "It took us eight hours and seven minutes to walk to Pikeville, but we walked to Paintsville and back in seven and a half hours. This walk was easier than the walk to Pikeville." The two walkers also raised more money this year — $2,220 as a preliminary total, compared to $1,200 last year.

"The business people have really helped us this year," Gilliam says. "None of them turned us down. They were super, enough cannot be said about them. Just a whole bunch of people opened their hearts to us. Doctors, workers at the hospital, all the business people, it was just great."

"Along the road during the walk, people would go by and honk and wave. Some would stop and encourage us and say 'you are doing a great job, keep going.' The doctors would drive by. Maybe next year we will raise more and make more people aware of the threat of breast cancer."

While there were only two walkers, Gilliam was quick to point out the supporting cast that made it all possible.

"I want to thank the 470 employees of the Highlands Regional Medical Center," Gilliam stated. "All the business places. The Floyd County Times, Q95 radio, and many, many others. A personal thank you to Dr. Arthur Revey and Tanya Shelton, who walked me around the hospital to help me prepare for the walk-a-thon. Ken Addington, John Meade, Kenny Holbrook, Denise Owens and Kathy Rubado, our public relations person. To Mr. and Mrs. Bill Tom Crothers Sr. for their staying with us all the way."

Several people gathered at the hospital to welcome them back.

YOUR MAGISTRATE AND YOUR COUNTY GOVERNMENT

Your Magistrate is your Representative on the Floyd County Fiscal Court. As your Representative on the Court, it is important that your Magistrate keep in touch with you, ask your opinions and your ideas, and attend every single meeting of the Court to see to it that your views are addressed by the court.

There are many problems in our county and in our district. There are none that cannot be solved. Among the candidates for Magistrate, Bub Reynolds is the only one with a solid planned program to improve the quality of life for our people. Bub has outlined part of his program for District 3.

CEMETERIES—Our East Kentucky people probably more people than anywhere, have a healthy respect for the deceased. Keeping up our cemeteries is a big job but it can be done. Bub Reynolds will lead the fight to establish a program using non-violent inmates of the Floyd County Jail who will earn released time credit to clean up every cemetery in District 3, a minimum of once each year, before Memorial Day, so that our friends and relatives who come to visit the gravesites of loved ones will have a nice, clean cemetery.

WATER—Imagine what life would be without water! Well, in certain parts of our district, this is a fact of life. We cannot accept this! Every Floyd countian has the right to safe, adequate water supplies. Bub Reynolds will make this a top priority and will not rest until all our people have safe, adequate water supplies.

Solid programs, sound answers, an aggressive approach to our problems. Bub knows the priorities and problems of District 3 and he will take your concerns to the Fiscal Court and he will get results. Pro Gives Tips To Fish Early Spring Vegetation

One of the most productive and easiest bass patterns for early spring can be fishing submerged vegetation. If anglers can find it, they can nearly always find fish.

That's the opinion of David Wharton, a former professional guide on Sam Rayburn Reservoir in Texas and a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff. Wharton has used the pattern to win national bass tournaments this time of year.

"What I look for," says Wharton, "is the inside line of vegetation. This is the shallow water side of where the moss, hydrilla, milfoil or other vegetation begins, and it will correspond to the lowest water level that a lake was drawn down to during the winter.

"As the lake's level rises in spring, the vegetation will be covered by several feet of water. What you want to concentrate on," Wharton continues, "is fishing the very edge of this vegetation, and the water above it."

The inside line of the vegetation is particularly productive in the spring because it serves as a stopping point or holding area for bass moving shallow to spawn and again when they leave the spawning areas heading back to deeper water.

"For a time you're actually getting the fish coming and going," says the Johnson pro. "So you not only have a lot of fish using this area, you also have some big fish, too."

Finding such a line of vegetation is not particularly difficult, explains Wharton. He starts looking along the edges of wide flats, near the mouths of large creeks, or close to large bays and coves, concentrating in water five to eight feet deep. The vegetation shows up easily on a depthfinder, since it may actually be growing two to three feet above the bottom.

"The most productive vegetation lines will be those closest to spawning areas," Wharton notes. "Try to find a spawning area, then work out from it to locate the vegetation."

"To fish a line of submerged greenery, Wharton recommends starting with a crankbait. It's important to try to match the lure's running depth to the depth of the water over the grass, because the lure should be retrieved just over the top of vegetation. You don't want to grind the lure down into the grass.

"I like to keep my boat on the edge of the vegetation and make parallel casts so the lure stays right along that edge the entire retrieve," he says. "Fish are usually prowling close to the edge and will easily see the lure."

Wharton also uses topwater lures as well as plastic worms to catch fish along underwater grass lines. He pops the surface lure slowly and deliberately along the edge, but he lets the worm fall into the grass.

"It is possible to find concentrations of bass in certain places along the edges of underwater vegetation," says Wharton. "Some of the best places to look for them are where channels come close to the grass, or where the vegetation forms a point or a cut. "I believe bass will remain along these grasslines until early summer when they finally move to deeper depths. Even when a late spring cold front hits, I don't think the bass really move far. They just burrow into the vegetation until the weather settles," Wharton says.

Boating Checklist Of Essential Items Can Save Time, Frustration

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

So you own a small boat? You fasten the boat trailer to the back of the car, drive for a number of miles, and launch the boat, only to discover that you forgot some essential items you need.

If only you had had a checklist to go by in loading your boat before heading out to your favorite fishing spot!

Carolyn Lykins, owner of Main Street Fishing Supply in Martin, and an avid angler, says everyone should have a checklist before loading boats or vehicles for the trip to the lake.

"I don't get to go fishing like I use to," Lykins says. "Not since I opened my fishing supply business. This time of the year fishing supply business is really booming."

When she does go, she does most of her fishing from a boat.

"Before leaving on your fishing trip, be sure to check your trailer tie downs," Lykins advises. "With your trailer setting out so much the ropes can rot and may break on you in transit. I use a small chain as a precautionary measure. If the ropes break, the chains act as a safety."

"Have a motor tote for your motor while in transit," she adds. "I always take some extra two cycle oil, a 50:1 mix, with me. Before leaving get a motor flusher that hooks to a garden hose and make sure your motor is running all right; check to see if you need to change plugs. Have plenty of rope to be used for towing purposes in case you need to be towed, or for use with your anchor if you get stalled."

Lykins says it is very important to keep the axle grease checked on a tow trailer.

"Before I leave on a fishing trip I grease the axle," she explains. "When I stop to get gas, I check with my hand; if the hub is hot, then I add grease to it. When I pull my boat out of the water, I will grease it again, and this will push out any water that gets in while the trailer is in the water during boat loading."

Other tips? Be sure that everyone knows where the kill switch is on an outboard motor. Check the drain plug and be sure it fits properly, to prevent taking on water when the boat is launched.

"A charged battery before leaving is necessary. If you are going to be gone over the weekend, be sure to take your charger with you," she adds.

A fire extinguisher is a must on any check, notes the business woman. Once on the trip, always stay within legal size and creel limits, cautions Lykins.

"I use a Golden Rule measuring device," she says. "I always keep it on board my boat, to show what I can keep to stay within the limits of the law. This device meets tournament regulations."

Seems on every fishing trip, boats invariably take on some water, Lykins recommends having a bilge hand pump or some bailing device to bail the water out.

Before getting on the water, be sure the trailer is locked to the towing vehicle with a trailer hitch lock.

"Once a friend of mine went fishing and came back, only to find her thousand-dollar trailer gone. Someone took it — so make sure you have a locking device," she cautions.

A trailer spare tire, trailer jacks, throw cushions and life jackets are also important items to have as part of a check list.

"Always take some kind of horn with you," she explains, "in case someone is close to you, coming at you, or passing you. Navigational lights or running lights are necessary if you are fishing at night; you wouldn't want anyone to run into you. Have a spotlight to locate the bank at night."

Be sure to take a boat paddle in case the boat motor decides not to run. Spare fuses, Phillips and flathead screw drivers, and a ratchet wrench are good to have aboard. WD-40 in case of rusty bolts and nuts can also come in handy.

"I always make sure that my reels have fresh line in them," Lykins said. "I take an extra rod with me for a back up. I take a minnow bucket with me because I don't always use artificial bait." A handy dip net, plus a distress signaling device is needed.

Make your own checklist. Follow it, because it could be very inconvenient to have to go back after something that's been forgotten.

Here is a sample of the items one might need. Anglers may wish to add others to develop their own list:

Trailer tie downs (check to see if they are rotting), safety chains, two cycle oil, tool kit on board, bilge pump or some other bailing device, anchor with line, trailer spare tire, boat cover, trailer jack, oars, seat cushions, life jackets, fire extinguisher, horn, signaling device, spare spark plug.

Floyd Students Selected To Governor's School For Arts

Walter Owens

Two Floyd County students are among 150 students statewide who successfully auditioned and have been invited to attend the Governor's School for the Arts, to be held at Belarmine College and the Kentucky Center for the Arts, July 2-22.

The students are Walter Owens, in vocal music, and Stacy Webb, in dance. Both are juniors at Prestonsburg High School.

Sixty-seven alternates have also been selected; they will be invited to attend if space becomes available. The 150 students who have been invited to attend the Governor's School represent 58 counties and 85 high schools from all geographic regions of the Commonwealth.

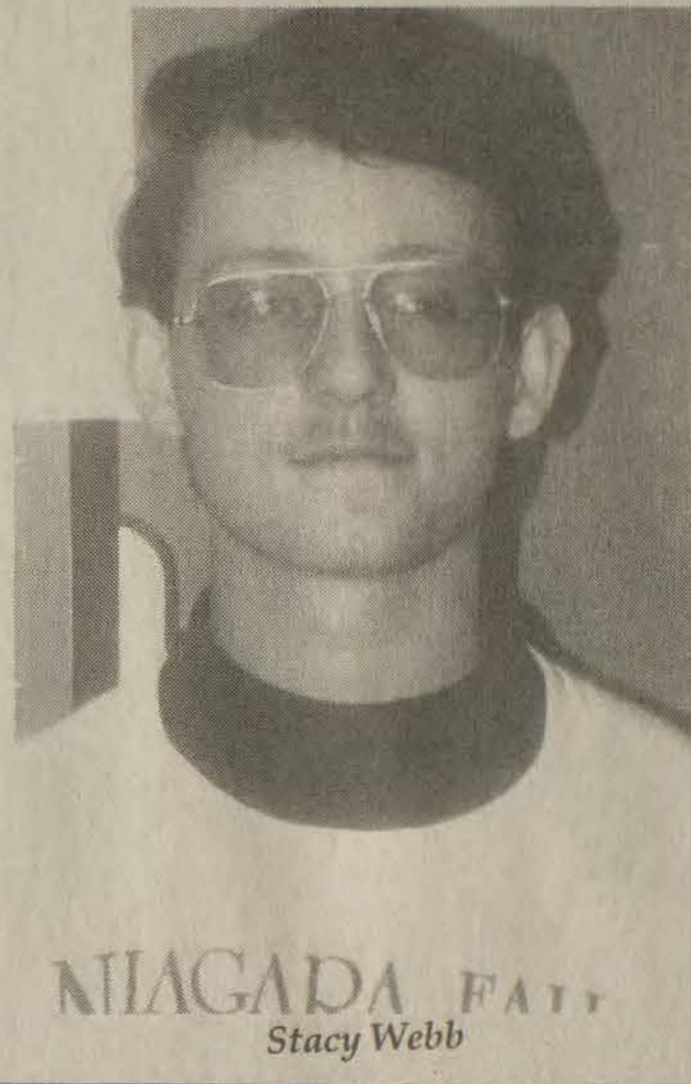

The Governor's School for the Arts is a joint program of the Kentucky Center for the Arts and the Kentucky Department for the Arts. It is an intensive three-week summer program for the most artistically talented high school sophomores and juniors in Kentucky. Artistic disciplines included in the school are creative writing, drama, dance, vocal music, instrumental, music and visual art.

The 150 students of the school were selected from 390 finalists, representing 74 counties and 134 high schools, who auditioned on March 18 at the Kentucky Center for the Arts. Finalists were selected from seven regional audition sites throughout Kentucky. In all, approximately 1,000 high school sophomores and juniors from 207 schools applied for the program.

The students will have an opportunity to receive instruction from a faculty of distinguished artists, take field trips, attend special performances, hear from guest lecturers and artists, experience leadership training, and have the opportunity for college and personal counseling, according to Rosalind Heinz, representative of the school.

The school ends with a festival and final performance, open to the public, at the Kentucky Center for the Arts, on Saturday, July 22.

Project Care: Staff Works To Keep Students In School

by Tess A. Whitmer
Staff Writer

The statistics are not new, but they remain startling:

— The 5th and the 7th Congressional District (which includes Floyd County) has the highest dropout rate in Kentucky, and Kentucky has the highest in the nation.

— Of Kentuckians who receive welfare in Aid for Dependent Children program, 97 percent of the mothers and 89 percent of the fathers are dropouts.

— Two out of every three Kentuckians in prison are dropouts ($15,000 a year to maintain a prisoner in Kentucky.)

— 12,000 Kentucky students drop out each year, which translates into $2.4 billion lost in earning potential.

With eye-opening facts provided by the Kentucky Department of Education Unit of Dropout Prevention, it is obvious that something needs to be done to keep Floyd County children and others in Kentucky in school.

Gov. Wallace G. Wilkinson has proclaimed May 1-7 Dropout Prevention Week. During this week, the Kentucky Department of Education and the Kentucky Shopping Center Industry is sponsoring "Project Care," a dropout prevention public service program.

Project Care is a career awareness program designed to demonstrate to the students that academic skills are essential on the job. Local Project Care Coordinators are asking local businesses to "adopt" a targeted student for one day and teach them good work habits, help them to understand employer expectations and, in general, give students another reason why school is relevant to their present and future lives.

"Our dropout rate is 4.18, which is considered satisfactory by state standards," said Pete Grigsby Jr., assistant superintendent in charge of dropout prevention programs in Floyd County schools, "but we still need to improve because this is not a satisfactory number to us."

There are dropout prevention personnel in two schools in the county. The school board is presently applying for federal funding to have them in all schools, according to Grigsby.

One of these positions is filled by Judy Burchell, coordinator of the Touchdown Program at Prestonsburg High School. The Touchdown Program (Tutoring Opportunities, Plus Understanding and Counseling, Help Dreams Occur with Nurturing) is Floyd County's name for the statewide program.

"Our goals are to encourage the students to improve attendance, grades and attitudes, as well as to raise self-esteem and establish long-term goals," said Burchell.

She is asking the community to:

— Help provide incentives and rewards for the students who achieve specific goals;

— Volunteer as guest speakers; and — Provide opportunities for the student to serve the community.

"By working together, the school, the community and the home can make a difference for these students."

Teachers can tell, many times, if a student is a potential dropout by the third grade, according to Burchell. "Sometimes all a child needs is a little special attention to want to remain in school. The greatest problem of these students is self-esteem," she said. "Although the Touchdown program is targeted towards grades 7 through 12, we gear our program to help students feel a part of the school, and to make it more enjoyable for them. Some need just one thing, such as a sport or club, to get them interested in going to school, and everything else (grades, attendance) turns around once their attitude improves."

James Brooks, dropout program tutor and advisor at Betsy Layne High School, agrees that most of the students dropout due to attitude problems. He says that he spends more time dealing with student's personal problems than academics.

"Some of these kids have terrible home lives. I try to stress to them that if they stay in school, they can get an education and make a citizen of themselves. They can improve their own lives," says Brooks.

Brooks has an open-door policy, explaining, "Students know they can come in and talk to me about any problem they may be having—some even call me at home. I often make home visits to see if I can help with any lines of communication which may be down between them and their parents."

The students in the program are referred by teachers, guidance counselors and parents, according to Brooks, and are usually are having problems adjusting to the curriculum or social aspects of a secondary school.

Both Burchell and Brooks stress that, as a community wide project, everyone is responsible for the education of youth—not just the schools. Several groups have contributed to the effort by providing incentives for improvements, such as Druthers restaurant providing coupons for free food for good grades, or the Women's Club entering students with a perfect attendance record for the month in a drawing for a $25 prize.

Burchell said that the "community has been very helpful. No one I've approached, about incentive programs or the career awareness day, has said no."

During the Festival of FACES, May 13-14, Project Care will be sponsoring a booth, with information about the program and to help with public awareness, and a poster contest. Also, the students will be painting murals in the windows of the Hobb's building downtown Prestonsburg.

Burchell said that the "best thing the parents can do is know what the child is doing, in school as well as out. Go to parent-teacher conferences, find out what the child's study habits are, and get involved in their life; show concern and interest."

Dropout Prevention Week May 1-7

On Thursday, April 20, Floyd County Judge John M. Stumbo signed a proclamation declaring May 1-7 dropout prevention week in Floyd County. Also participating in the project are, from left, James Brooks, program tutor/advisor at Betsy Layne High School; Pete Grigsby Jr., assistant superintendent of the Floyd County school system; Prestonsburg Mayor Ann Latta; and Judy Burchell, program coordinator at Prestonsburg High School.

April: Math Education Month

April is Math Education Month, and the Eastern Kentucky Council of Teachers of Mathematics is celebrating by seeking affiliation with the national Council of Teachers of Mathematics, according to Joyce Watson, vice president of the local council.

The professional group formed in September 1988, and members hope to improve the quality of mathematics education in Eastern Kentucky by establishing communication among educators at the various levels of math instruction. The group wishes to create a medium for professional growth through meetings and contact with the state and national organizations, said Watson.

A more specific goal was met March 30, as the EKCTM, in conjunction with Prestonsburg Community College, presented an overview program of the new standards of curriculum for mathematics, which was released nationwide in March. The new standards will be guiding math instruction and evaluation. Watson said the standards were deemed so important that the first copy published was presented to President George Bush.

EKCTM, co-founded by Hassan

Saffari, John Samons and Joyce Watson, was responsible for obtaining a local and regional National Council of Teachers of Mathematics Math Bowl competition, which was held Jan. 14 at PCC. The program offers junior high students in the area another place in which to showcase their mathematics skills, Watson explained. The competition is in addition to MathCounts, which is also held at PCC.

Membership in the organization is open to teachers of mathematics from grades kindergarten through college, and is non-restrictive. The executive council includes Samons, president; Watson, vice president; Freda Spencer, secretary; Patty Burchett, treasurer; Nancy Taylor, NCTM representative; Janice Allen, member at large; and Zella Wells, member at large.

More information about the group or the standards may be obtained from members of the organization.

Scott Inducted Into Fleur de Lis

Fifty-five students, including one from Floyd County, have been inducted into Fleur de Lis Honor Society at Berea College.

Inducted was Sheree Scott, daughter of Clyde and Beverly Scott of Wheelwright.

Organized in 1965, Fleur de Lis promotes superior scholastic achievement and recognizes men and women who obtain high scholastic rewards during their freshman year, said school officials.

Learning Resources

Maytown Elementary School academic team members went to Alice Lloyd College's library Wednesday, April 12. They learned how to use different library resources, and put their new skills to work, gathering information for a skit they will perform for their parents at the academic banquet. Attending were Evelyn Howard, Missy Goble, Traci Hicks, Patty Baldrige, Claude Webb, Brian Reed, Kevin Martin, Blanch Smith, Cita Miller, Sheila Scarberry and Lisa Stumbo. Chaperones were Reka Wood, Ruby Miller, Elmer Miller, Barbara Scarberry and Karen Goble.

Second Graders Begin Project, 'My Pet Rock'

Sonja Castle's second grade class at Maytown Elementary School is beginning a spring art project, "My Pet Rock."

Students find an animal in the sculpture of the rock and then paint the rock to resemble the animal. After painting, students write a story about an adventure by the "animal."

Funding School Reform Is Topic Of KET Program

Most Americans agree that public schools need improvement. Agreeing on what to improve and how to pay for these changes is another matter. School reform requires personal, financial and political sacrifices that few people rarely are willing to make, yet this may be one of those rare times, because serious school reform efforts are underway on local, state and national levels.

"Paying the Freight," the final edition of "Learning In America," airs on Kentucky Educational television at 10 p.m. Thursday, April 27, and 8 p.m. Monday, May 1. This segment examines several education reform efforts. Following the May 1 airing, the KET production "This is Kentucky" continues the discussion of funding education reform from a Kentucky perspective. Joining host Ken Kurtz will be Jane Boyer, immediate past president of the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers; Rep. Joe Clarke, chair of The House Appropriations and Revenue Committee; and Dr. Jack Foster, secretary of the Education Cabinet and a representative of the Governor's office.

This edition of "This is Kentucky" will feature an additional interactive component to receive more input from people around the Commonwealth, according to Marianne White, KET spokeswoman. KET's newest advancement in teaching with television, which uses satellite technology for distance learning, will allow participants at selected high school sites to use keypads to respond, via satellite, to questions posed by Kurtz.

Segments featured in "Learning in America" include President George Bush discussing his first three months as the nation's "education president."

Layne Honored

Officials of Outstanding College Students of America recently announced Rodena S. Layne has been selected as a new member of the organization because of her outstanding merit and accomplishments as an American college student.

She is the grandchild of Mary Thornsby of Emma.

David Kerns, chief executive officer of The Xerox Corp., addresses the role of business in school reform. Kerns' advocacy of a larger role for business in the schools—in particular, his advocacy of parental choice in school selection—has met with strong opposition from some educators who feel that business does not know how to restructure schools.

The efforts of Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton to overhaul the education system of one of the country's poorest states are also featured. For generations, Arkansas has hovered near last place in education—last in spending per child, last in teachers' salaries, last in state and local taxes per person.

In 1983, Clinton convinced the legislature to add a penny to the state's 3 percent sales tax to restructure the school system. Since then, Arkansas schools have added hundreds of courses and tripled enrollment in math, sciences, foreign languages and computer science. Additionally, test scores have increased, racial and regional differences are down, college enrollment is up, and despite ranking 46th in the nation in per capita income, Arkansas now ranks 15th in high school graduation rates—first among southern states. But Clinton's latest plea for more money for education reform has met with resistance from legislators and voters.

Another segment includes a poor, inner-city school that began reform by suggesting that schools do for children what parents, churches and neighborhoods used to do—nurture them, support them, and be proud of them.

Rice Takes On Algebra At Age 70 In PCC Program

Edna Rice says algebra is a subject she never thought she would learn. But now the 70-year-old woman vows, "I'm going to work on it 'til I master it."

The Melvin resident is among 10 senior citizens enrolled in a program at Prestonsburg Community College to upgrade their skills and help them move from federally subsidized jobs to private sector employment. Rice had worked for the last three years at Wheelwright Senior Citizens Center. "I guess they thought I was too smart for that," she says, a smile playing across her face, "or maybe they thought I was too dumb."

She's preparing now to explore other employment opportunities, including the Prestonsburg McDonald's, where she says she has applied.

In the initial phase of the semester program, Rice and her fellow students concentrated on basic skills, improving their reading, grammar and math.

Presently, they're tackling algebra and computers, which Rice says she loves. "If my mind doesn't change, I'm going to take a regular computer course at the college in the fall," she says, explaining that she plans to ride to the campus with her daughter, Geneva Collins, who will enter pre-nursing.

Collins has served as her mother's driver during the program, but that may change soon. Next week Rice and the other seniors who don't drive will begin driver's education classes as part of the college-based program. Rice, who already has her learner's permit, says she looks forward to getting her license, especially after years of depending on someone else to take her places.

The mother of four and grandmother of 11 says her family thinks her school venture "is grand. In fact, everyone here (in Melvin) thinks it's grand."

Rice has high praise for the program teacher, Barbara Burke of East Point. "She's a wonderful teacher," says the widow. "She is so patient with us."

Burke has recently taken her senior pupils to fast food and retail sales stores in the area to acquaint them with those kinds of workplaces. The class members have had guided tours through Wendy's and Cablevision in Prestonsburg and McDonald's in Paintsville.

On their own, the students have visited area department stores to assess the different jobs available.

Burke said the students will complete assertiveness training and a course in proofreading numbers before she tries to place them in actual jobs.

The program is part of a cooperative program with the college, Big Sandy Community Action Program, Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program and the National Council on Aging. All of the participants have previously worked in subsidized jobs through Big Sandy CAP.

Other senior citizens in the program are Harlan Ray Stumbo of Minnie; Margaret Meeks, Veva Pack and Elizabeth Riley of Martin County; Maxine Salyer and Beatrice McCarty of Magoffin County, and Vernon Philby, Lois Spradlin and ELLIAN VanHoose of Johnson County.

Melvin Grandmother Goes Back to School

Fascinated by computers, Edna Rice, 70, of Melvin, right, listens to Mary Woods of Cablevision explain how a computer sends the television signal into area homes. Rice and nine other senior citizens are visiting local businesses as part of a special program at Prestonsburg Community College.

'Clean Air' Hot Air Balloon Visits Wayland Elementary

On April 17, students at Wayland Elementary School had good reason to be excited — half the day was spent at the local baseball field with a full-sized hot air balloon.

The balloon trips, taken by students and teachers, were the finishing touch to an air pollution project students began earlier this year.

Last semester, second grade students under the guidance of teacher Betty Baldrige and student teacher Sherrie W. Slone, began a study unit on clean air in Kentucky.

The teachers used study papers provided by Jack Hurt, regional air quality control supervisor for the Environmental Protection Agency.

The class also released helium-filled balloons to see how far they would travel. Traveling farthest was one found in New Hampshire.

The hot air balloon, named Clean Air for Kentucky, was brought to the school to finish the unit on air pollution for the second grade. Most of the students rode the balloon and received gift packs.

The students and teachers at Wayland Elementary School expressed thanks to Baldrige, Slone, Hurt and others who helped with the activity.

MARK BLACKBURN

KIMBERLY ROBINSON

Officials of the United States Achievement Academy (USAA) announced this week that Floyd County students Mark Blackburn, Kimberly Ann Robinson and Malissa Mae Hall have earned national awards.

Blackburn received two mathematics awards, as well as awards in history and government and home economics. A student at Prestonsburg High School, he was nominated by two of his teachers.

He is the son of Janie and Kenneth Blackburn. His grandparents are Ollie and Jean Blackburn of Endicott and Bill and Myrtle Canterbury of Cow Creek.

Robinson, a student at Allen Central High School, earned an award in mathematics. Nominated by instructor Joyce Watson, Robinson is the daughter of Oakley and Mossie Robinson. Her grandparents are Joe and Vicie Robinson and Malcom and Ollie Robinson, all of Martin.

Hall, a student at Wheelwright High School, received a science award. She was nominated by her chemistry teacher, Ray Jones. She is the daughter of Gary and Marlene Hall. Her grandparents are Hattie Hall of Bypro and the late Dennis and Ivadell Hall of Dema.

Biographies of all three students will appear in the USAA official yearbook, published nationally.

The awards are presented to less than 10 percent of all high school students.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history," said Dr. George Stevens, executive director of the academy. "Certainly, USAA award winners should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement."

USAA winners are selected upon the recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other school sponsors and a student's academic performance, interest, aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation and improve, citizenship, and attitude.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

A FOOT NOTE

When your feet hurt, you hurt all over. The average person takes between 5,000 and 8,000 steps each day, and the bones in your feet absorb about a thousand TONS of force a day, much of it on hard pavement. You can have happier feet by following a few simple rules. Keep feet clean and dry. Wash feet daily in warm soapy water, and be especially careful to dry between the toes. If skin is dry, use a moisturizing cream or lotion. Apply powder to the feet before putting on socks. Be sure that shoes are properly fitted, and wear the right shoes for the activity; i.e., running shoes for running or brisk walking, tennis shoes for racquet sports, and waterproof boots for snow or slush. Warm soaks, either in epsom salts or Domeboro solution, are soothing after a hard day on your feet.

COOLEY APOTHECARY carries what you would expect to find in a well inventoried drug store, including a full line of foot care products. We are very proud to be able to provide families in this area with all their pharmaceutical needs. Our records are fully maintained so that they can be readily available to both you and your physician. You'll find us located at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106 and open Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-3. Master Charge and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments.

HINT: Toenail clippers can become dull and should be replaced when they do.

Parents' Rights

(Editor's Note: This week, the Floyd County Times introduces "Parents Rights," a twice-monthly column by Joyce Everly, a long-time education activist in Floyd County. Although Everly will address issues primarily of concern to parents of school-age children, many taxpayers' rights are also applicable to other governmental bodies. Parents with specific questions about procedures or access to education records may contact the Floyd County Board of Education, 886-2354, or Everly, 886-8243.)

by Joyce Everly

About 10 years ago, I sat in the school board office waiting for a board meeting to begin. Two board members and the superintendent asked me and the two other women I with me what we were doing there. I told them we were waiting for the board meeting to begin because we had heard that they were supposed to talk about $40,000 in repairs to our high school's roof.

"Oh," one said. "Well, honey, you know we'll be discussing finance in there, and, well, you can't be in there when we do that."

So we said "Thank you," and, in total ignorance of the law — which allows people to attend public meetings — we left.

Can you imagine my leaving a school board meeting now? Especially when the discussion is going to be about money — our money? Taxpayers' money? No way!

That's one of the reasons I'll be writing this column — to let all taxpayers, especially parents, know what the laws are, what their rights as parents are, and how the legal system works for the good of our students and the community.

Let's start with the Kentucky Open Meeting Law, also known as the "Sunshine Law" (KRS 61-805 to 61-850).

Open meetings. What do they mean to parents and taxpayers in Floyd County?

It means they have a right to be present at all school board meetings, whether they are regularly scheduled or called for a special purpose. All the business discussed is "public" business — the taxpayers' business. Taxpayers have a right to know what the board members are talking about, and what the decision is after the vote is taken.

There are only a few legal reasons why a school board, or other public agency, may be allowed to go into "executive session" — discussion behind closed doors. These are discussion of individual personnel, pending litigation, and the purchase or sale of land.

When the board decides to go into executive session, the reason for having part of the meeting behind closed doors must be given while in open session. The executive session can only happen if a motion is made and voted on by a majority of the school board (three out of five members) beforehand as part of the public meeting. They cannot take a vote on the action while they are in executive session — that vote must be taken in the public part of the meeting.

Regularly scheduled meetings are to be held at a certain time and place convenient to the public. Those times and places are to be made available to the public.

When special meetings are held, a written notice is to be given to the board members by personal delivery, or by mail. Notice is also to be given to the local media (Floyd County Times), local radio and television stations that have requested that notification. These notices should be delivered 24 hours prior to the meeting. The exceptions are in case of emergency because of personal injury, property damage or financial loss.

The minutes (record of what happened) are recorded at every meeting, and are to be available for public inspection at a reasonable time, but no later than the next board meeting. These minutes can be copied, usually for a fee. We'll get into the Kentucky Open Records Law in the next column.

IN RESPONSE TO LAST WEEK'S STATEMENT IN THE FLOYD COUNTY TIMES BY DISTRICT NO. 2 MAGISTRATE:

The personal attack made on me by Mr. Owens in last week's Floyd County Times was totally unprovoked. At no time has the name of Mr. Owens been mentioned either in our letters or in the petition. Our only concern was getting our road repaired. In 1987, Mr. Owens was contacted several times by myself and other voters in the community. Our plea for help was never answered. We had no alternative to our course of action. We contacted Judge John M. Stumbo and a few days later the Judge sent two men to check what the road needed. The men reported to the Judge and within three days our road had been repaired. We wanted to thank the Judge and did so with a letter in the Floyd County Times. We appreciated the help in getting our road repaired.

In reference to the "bushhog", we have seen this machine only once during the term of Mr. Owens. If the machine was here more than once it must have been at night because there hasn't been anyone to see the machine. The only time the machine has traveled this road was about two months ago.

I have known Mr. Owens most of his life. He comes from a good family. I have no ill feelings toward Mr. Owens. We, the voters, only want to be treated fairly. We have a right to voice our opinion and we will continue to voice our opinion.

In Mr. Owens' campaign ad he stated, "If you want a "yes" man, then vote for another candidate." Sometimes we need our magistrate to say "yes".

The following information is on record in the Fiscal Court minutes at the courthouse in Prestonsburg, Ky. Over the objections of Mr. Owens, the voters won.

(Taken from a previous ad in The Floyd County Times)

Mr. Owens is always stating what he voted against. Here is a list he has Failed to brag about:

- Making the $2,000.00 contributions last year to each fire department in Floyd County, four are in his district, Wayland, Garrett, Maytown and Allen—OWENS VOTES NO!
- Floyd County checks for $4,000.00 to each Senior Citizens Center—OWENS VOTED NO!
- Paying the bills for Blacktop on these roads in District No. 2, Cracker Bottom—OWENS VOTES NO!
Henry's Branch—OWENS VOTES NO!
West Garrett Road—OWENS VOTES NO!
Estill Road—OWENS VOTES NO!
Martin Branch Road—OWENS VOTES NO!
City of Wayland—OWENS VOTES NO!
Steels Creek—OWENS VOTES NO!
- Most of the limestone placed on Dirt Roads in District No. 2—OWENS VOTES NO!
- Paying for fire hydrants now being placed in Floyd County—OWENS VOTES NO!
- Paying the successful bidder for the fire hydrants and the contractors to install the fire hydrants throughout Floyd County—OWENS VOTES NO!

We voted to help all our County people as a whole not in one Magisterial District only. We stand for better roads, fresh tap water, better fire protection for safety as well as lower homeowners insurance, help for our Senior Citizens as well as recreation for our young.

IF WE THREE MAGISTRATES HAD NOT VOTED YES ON THE ABOVE SERVICES, WHAT CONDITION WOULD DISTRICT NO. 2 BE IN TODAY?

Stumbo To Serve On NCTE Committee

Carol Stumbo, educator at Wheelwright High School, has been appointed to serve as a member of the National Council of Teachers of English Committee on English Language Arts in Rural Schools. The committee is charged with identifying the characteristics of schools considered rural and of students in those schools, and to study the implications of their findings for English instruction. Its assignment includes making recommendations to other NCTE groups for action to support English programs in rural schools, and preparing and distributing information for teachers and administrators in rural districts, according to Diane Allen, spokeswoman for NCTE.

CAROL STUMBO

NCTE is a professional organization for teachers and supervisors of English at all levels of education. Its aim is to improve the teaching of English and language arts. The organization holds national meetings and smaller conferences, publishes journals and professional books on problems and issues related to teaching English, and provides other teaching aids, Allen added.

Number Of Graduates Rises, Dropouts Fewer Than In 1988

Kentucky's high school graduation rate reached a record high in 1988, and the number of high school dropouts fell to a record low, according to state Superintendent of Public Instruction John Brock.

"All of our statistics point to a steady decline in the number of youngsters leaving school before graduation," Brock said. "The additional money spent for dropout prevention in recent years has been effective, but it hasn't been enough to solve the problem."

Brock has proposed a dropout prevention strategy that includes:

- Extending Kentucky's compulsory attendance age to 18;
- Revocation of driver's licenses for 16- and 17-year-olds without diplomas and not in school;

- Alternative programs for students having difficulty with the standard curriculum; and

- Expansion of early childhood efforts.

Kentucky's prevention programs are being highlighted in Louisville this week at the annual dropout prevention conference, which features speeches by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," and Eliot Wigginton, creator of the Foxfire project.

Kentucky shopping centers will also support local dropout prevention efforts through Project Care during Dropout Prevention Week, May 1-7.

"However you interpret the numbers, we have 20 percent to a third of our teenagers leaving school unprepared for work or additional training," Brock said. "That's a huge burden for their families and for our social service system."

In 1988, the percentage of ninth graders graduating four years later reached 67.6 percent, a jump of 2.2 percentage points over 1987. The previous record of 67.3 percent was set in 1985.

The number of recorded dropouts fell to 9,300 from 9,600 the previous year, and from 16,700 in 1981.

The average dropout rate for grades seven through 12 dropped slightly to 3.33 percent, down from 5.4 percent in 1981.

While Kentucky's dropout measures accurately reflect long-term trends, none is precise, Brock noted.

For example, the graduation rate does not reflect the impact of students moving into or out of the state. The count of dropouts does not include students who complete a school year in the spring and then do not enroll in the fall. State officials estimate there are about 3,000 of these "summer dropouts" annually.

Television, Travel Are Options In Woman's Pursuit Of Degree

by Pam Shingler
Assistant Editor

If for no other reason, Debbie Stumbo should get graduate school credit for her creativity in piecing together a degree program.

So far, she's driven to Morehead, gone down the street to Prestonsburg Community College, and taken a television course. This summer she'll do a couple of independent research projects at home. And next fall, she'll take a Morehead State University class in Jackson and a weekend class at the Morehead campus.

Stumbo is quick to point out that she's not the only person in Floyd and other Eastern Kentucky counties who have to juggle schedules and look for alternatives to driving to Morehead several times a week. "Many teachers in the area are faced with the same problem when they begin work on a master's degree or a fifth-year certificate," she says.

The nearest source of graduate education is MSU, and even under optimum conditions the drive to the university takes well over an hour. Few "older" graduate students can afford to take off from work or take time away from their families to complete a degree on the campus.

Fortunately, MSU has been responsive to the needs of students in Eastern Kentucky's far-flung hills and valleys and takes selected courses to several area locations, including PCC.

But the godsend for Stumbo this semester has been Kentucky Education Television, which has run a graduate class on middle school education, KET, seen locally on Cablevision's Channel 5, regularly offers courses that are accepted for credit at all state universities.

"It's really convenient for those of us who don't live close enough to a college with a graduate program," says Stumbo, who tapes the weekly classes.

"The only problem I had was learning how to use the tape player," she laughs.

At home, the student can use a textbook and workbook that go with the class and complete 10 projects on her own schedule. The course does include five Saturday classes at the Morehead campus, but that beats weekly trips during a 15-week semester.

One drawback to the television course, Stumbo says, is that she can't ask questions should they arise. "But this class has been very clear," she adds, "so that hasn't been a problem."

KET generally offers one graduate and several undergraduate courses each semester, she says.

The convenience of the at-home course is particularly appreciated by the busy wife, mother and community activist. In addition to feeding, chauffeuering and tending to the needs of two active grade schoolers, she is wife and helpmate to State Rep. Greg Stumbo, whom she assists with the many demands of his elective office.

She also helps coordinate the Reading Is Fundamental (RIF) program at Prestonsburg and Clark elementary schools. The program, which encourages reading among children, requires a good bit of time spent in local fund raising to match limited federal funds.

One evening a week, the energetic blonde teaches a nutrition course at PCC.

A home economics graduate of the University of Louisville, Stumbo began work on a Master of Education degree at MSU last fall. With an extra dose of hard work and a little more creative scheduling, she hopes to complete the MSU degree program next spring.

A former seventh and eighth grade teacher, she hopes to return to the classroom either at the middle school or college level when her children are older.

Lawson Was Finalist For Governor's School

Timothy Lawson, 16, of Wayland, was among several hundred students auditioning as finalists for participation in the Governor's School for the Arts.

Lawson auditioned in instrumental music.

He has received several medals for superior ranking on solos and duets at the Kentucky Music Educators Association Music Festival at Pikeville College. For three years, he has also been first clarinet, first chair, for the Floyd County Fine Arts Festival's All-County Band — twice in the senior division and once in the junior division.

A junior at McDowell High School, Lawson has been active in the music department for seven years, and was elected "Mr. Music" in 1987 by popular vote of the band members.

He is a member of the Drift Pentecostal Church, the McDowell Academic Team and Beta Club, and was listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

He is the son of Dottie Lawson of Wayland and Michael Lawson of Drift. His paternal grandparents are Maxie Lawson of Drift and the late Jack Lawson; his maternal grandparents are the late Joe E. Shannon and Virgie Shannon Stumbo, formerly of Drift.

DALE HALL

Democratic Candidate For Magistrate, District 3

WIN WITH #10

With only a few weeks to go until Election Day, I would like to express some more of my ideas for improving the quality of life in District #3.

I think of the solid waste system was one of the best programs started in this District, but there are still improvements that can be made. The waste area should be open on Saturdays for the working people who do their clean ups on the weekend. Also there should be no charge for large objects brought to the dump by regular service customers. There should also be an appointed paying customer on the board of directors of Solid Waste.

I would also like to see the Fiscal Court meet one time a year in each District. This would give the people in each district a chance to voice their opinions and views to the Fiscal Court.

If elected as your Magistrate, I would like to hold monthly meetings with the voters in each community. These meetings would aid me in reporting the needs of the people to the Fiscal Court.

These are a few of my ideas on how to involve more of our citizens in local government.

With your help, I can prove that a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, does work!

I will be your leader. Elect Me, and see what a Magistrate can do.

DALE HALL

'The Only Way To Go'

Dallas Sammons advises a customer to go first class during his last week behind the counter at the Prestonsburg post office. Sammons retires Friday after almost 25 years of swapping yarns, giving advice and brightening the days of many local postal patrons.

Era Of Dog Stories, Strippers, Ends As Sammons Retires Friday

by Pam Shingler
Assistant Editor

He's chased a dog into its master's house. He's held babies while their mothers filled out forms. He's held a woman's belongings as she weighed on the postal scales.

Nothing much ruffles Dallas Sammons who retires at the end of this week after nearly a quarter century with the Prestonsburg post office.

"What I'll miss most," says the lanky postman who's known to just about everyone in the city, "is meeting the people. I try to get a smile out of them and make them feel a little better than when they walked in."

Sammons, who started as a mail carrier in the mid-1960s, knows literally every step in town and a little about just about every person in town who gets mail. At one time or another he carried mail on all three of the city's routes.

On his first day on the job, Sammons recounts that he was handed a stack of mail and told to deliver it. "I asked where and was told, 'You know where the Davises live on Front Street? Start there.' And that's what I did."

The postal clerk, who will be 63 in May, has seen a great many changes in the local postal system since that first day. "When I started, you could carry the mail for one city route in your hands," he says. "Now it takes a jeep, and even the jeep will be replaced by a one-ton truck in the near future."

The source of the increase in volume is third and fourth class mail, primarily advertising supplements, which he refuses to call by its street name. "There's no such thing as junk mail in the post office," he states adamantly.

In his early days as a carrier, the city routes included from the Farm States building on what is now KY 1428 to Prestonsburg High School. Now coverage is extended from Jerry's Restaurant to Goble-Roberts Addition.

There were only two star routes surrounding the city, and now there are five. Plus, the number of local postal employees has more than doubled.

Sammons explains that not only has the volume of mail increased, but so has employee productivity. "When I started here, handlers could sort about 12 letters a second," he says. "Now we sort around 30 pieces a second, with under one percent errors."

The changes have resulted in an increase in pressure and tension for employees, Sammons says. "You're under continuous stress, more so than when I first started. That's why sometimes when you come to the window I'm real friendly and some days I'm not so hot."

The early part of the month is the time of highest tension, because "that's when the checks come in," he says, referring to the volume of retirement and social services checks.

The stereotype of dogs as the bane of postal carriers is true, Sammons affirms. He recalls a time when he was nipped on the leg by a feisty dog. "I got so mad I chased it back into its house and into the kitchen."

Another time he decided to douse a fierce dog with dog spray, but the wind blew the spray back into his own face. "I had to go behind a neighbor's house and use the water hose to wash out my eyes."

Behind the counter at the post office, Sammons has garnered a treasure trove of stories. "I ought to write a book," he laughs.

He recalls the woman who chatted with him about her operations and then pulled up her blouse to show him the surgical scars on her stomach.

He hesitates to estimate how many Prestonsburg babies he's cuddled over the years. "The mothers will just hand them across the counter and say, 'Here, hold the baby while I fill out this money order.'"

By far his favorite story is the one about the woman who had lost a lot of weight and came in to weigh herself on the postal scales. "She took off her shoes and handed them to me with her purse," he remembers with a chuckle. "Then she stripped off her jacket and gave it to me. Then she started to unbutton her blouse, and I said, 'Whoa, that's as far as you can go.'"

Sammons has also provided the impetus for many local youngsters to stop sucking their thumbs. Waving his own stub of a thumb, he has warned many a young thumbsucker, "You better stop that. Look what happened to mine."

The real reason for the lost thumb has been cause for speculation over the years. Sammons has not discouraged the rumor that he wore it off strumming a five-string banjo. He admits, however, that he lost it in an accident when he owned a garage in his pre-post office days.

Even though Sammons declares he hasn't been without work since he was 15, he believes he can adjust to retirement. "I've been offered jobs after Friday (his last day with the post office), but I don't want one. I just want to retire and enjoy living."

He expects to go full force into his "truck patch" farming. He says he already has corn and beans "in the ground."

He also plans to see more of his two daughters, Dallas Faye in Morehead and Rose Lester in Louisa, as well as a granddaughter. And he anticipates spending even more time as an unofficial recruiter for Morehead State University.

"I've always tried to encourage high school students who've come to the post office window to go on to college," he says. "I've helped quite a few get into Morehead and get financial aid, and I've even helped some financially myself."

While the World War II veteran did not finish college, he did attend Marshall University and Pikeville College, and he's very proud that his daughters went to Morehead.

He also expects his wife to have a retirement agenda for him. "She'll probably have some 'honey-do's' for me—'honey, do this' and 'honey, do that.'" Sammons lets go a belly-based, raucous laugh, sure to be missed by coworkers and postal customers.

Jack Friar, 4-H Agent, To Retire From Floyd Extension Service

Jack Friar, Cooperative Extension Service 4-H agent, is retiring from the Floyd County Extension Service after 34 years.

On Saturday, May 13, a reception will be held at the Courthouse Annex in Prestonsburg from 1 to 3 p.m. to honor Friar. Former 4-H members, leaders and friends are invited to attend.

Friar, a native of Rose Hill, Va., came to Floyd County in 1956 as an assistant agricultural agent, after graduating from Berea College. Under his leadership, the 4-H program has undergone many changes and made great strides in programming.

Most notably, the 4-H Camping Program has grown from 20 in attendance to 180 youngsters and teen leaders, and has increased to a two-week period. The number of clubs has increased from a half-dozen to more than 100, and are located in almost every school in the county.

4-H project work has also increased, with each school holding club rallies each April to display projects and have them judged. Eighteen completed records were entered into area competition this year.

The area vegetable training and judging program was begun with 4-H members from this county and others starting an area Eastern Kentucky event. Additionally, 4-H poultry judging has been one of Friar's favorite projects. Teams he has trained have entered state competition for many years, and have won several area and state championships, and have gone on to compete in national judging contests. Friar has assisted with the state judging competition for many years at the Kentucky State Fair.

During Friar's years of service, there have been many successful fund raising activities, the larger including funds to send an IFYE to another country, to operate the J.M. Feltner 4-H Camp, to purchase and operate the Diederich 4-H Center at Rush, and contributions to the state leadership center.

After retirement, Friar plans to spend his time reading collecting baseball cards, following UK athletic teams and "maybesleep late," he said. "You know it's time to go when you start seeing grandchildren from your first 4-H members."

Friar To Retire

A reception will be held May 13 at the Floyd County Courthouse Annex from 1 to 3 p.m. honoring Jack Friar, who is retiring after 34 years of service with the Floyd County Cooperative Extension Service. Friar, a native of Rose Hill, Va., has worked extensively with 4-H clubs throughout the county. He is pictured above, center, following a recent district board meeting with board members, their spouses and agents. Also shown are Don Hicks, left, and Billy Merritt, right.

Whether you see them in the field, walk past them in the market or find them on a buffet line, those red and plump strawberries look luscious! Just the sight of these berries triggers the mind to thoughts of strawberries and cream. But try substituting sour cream for whipped cream and come up with this refreshing finale to an elegant meal or the ending to a less simple cook out.

2/3 cup sugar
2/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 tsp. salt
2 cups milk

3/4 cup dairy sour cream
1 cup sliced fresh strawberries
1/4 tsp. cream of tartar
1/2 cup sugar

HRMC Open House Draws Over 700 Visitors

When Highlands Regional Medical Center held its open house on "Heart Care Day," Sunday, April 16, to celebrate the opening of its new cardiac catheterization lab, only 200 people were expected to attend.

The turnout — over 700 — was so spectacular that, as one security guard at the hospital described it, "the parking lot was a sea of cars."

The opening of the new lab marks an expansion in the field of cardiology services offered by HRMC. The cardiac cath procedure is now available for the first time in the Big Sandy area, said hospital officials.

Lois Burchett, RN and administrator of the cath lab, said, "The interest shown by the open hours visitors clearly indicates the overall concern by people in our area for heart disease awareness in both diagnosis and treatment. Many of our visitors were people who had already undergone various types of heart procedures in hospitals out of our area, and they all expressed their appreciation to Highlands for bringing this much-needed service close to home."

Clarence C. Traum, hospital administrator, added that the turnout also indicated a growing recognition of Highlands' importance as a regional healthcare provider, noting,

"The fact that people came from as far away as Hazard shows widespread interest in our growth and capabilities."

In addition to the tour of the cardiac cath lab and other cardiac service facilities during the open house, Highlands offered all visitors an array of free heart-related health services. These included a computer analysis of their heart disease risk level, a stress card indicating various stress levels, blood cholesterol screening and blood pressure checks.

Officials said Highlands will announce additional new and expanded programs in the near future.

More Than 700 Attend Open House

Highlands Regional Medical Center held its open house on "Heart Care Day," Sunday, April 16, to celebrate the opening of its new cardiac catheterization lab. More than 700 visitors attended the opening of the new lab, which marks an expansion in the field of cardiology services offered by HRMC.

Forum Explores Role Of Media, Education In Stereotyping Region

The role of the media in perpetuating stereotypes of Appalachia and the importance of education in dispelling them were central themes in Pikeville College's recent Centennial Forum, "Images of Appalachia."

Leading journalists from across the state gathered on the Pikeville Campus Wednesday, April 19, to discuss the part the media has played in creating and countering the Hillbilly myth that has long plagued the mountains of Eastern Kentucky.

Pikeville College alumnus Walter May, who owns a radio station in Pikeville and has served as president of the National Association of Broadcasters, noted that even "good" stories about the region tend to be depicted in negative ways in the national and regional media.

"A positive story about the record sales by our local Pepsi-Cola bottling plant becomes a story about these lazy people who have nothing to do but sit around drinking Pepsi, and putting Pepsi in baby bottles," May said. "A television story about a completely unrelated event is shot in front of a tarpaper shack."

"Frankly, I've never understood why the stereotyping of this region has been tolerated for so long," commented Louisville Courier-Journal editor David Hawpe, a native of Pikeville who grew up in Louisville. Hawpe cited the example of the one-dimensional ignorant hicks depicted in the television program, the "Beverly Hillbillies," noting that such a program about any other American minority would not still be circulating in reruns.

Hawpe said he instructs his reporters in Eastern Kentucky to avoid stereotypes in their writing and in their selection of stories.

The journalists presented different theories of how the stereotypes about the region originated. Ralph Gabbard, executive vice president of Bluegrass Broadcasting, which operates Eastern Kentucky's first network television station, WYMT in Hazard, cautioned the audience not to blame others for Appalachia's stereotypes.

"Don't scorn the media," he said. "It shows us our problems and their other side — our opportunities."

Lexington Herald-Leader reporter Judy Jones Lewis, on the other hand, noted that people who wanted to exploit the region's timber and coal resources at the turn of the century had a vested interest in depicting mountain people as ignorant and lazy. Companies and their stockholders found it was easier to justify the exploiting of "hillbillies" than of human beings, she said.

But Lewis also pointed out that the increase of media coverage in the region today presents an opportunity for Eastern Kentuckians to present good news about the mountains as well, helping to dispel the stereotypes.

The panel discussion was moderated by Al Smith, host of Kentucky Educational Television's "Comment on Kentucky," and also featured University of Kentucky School of Journalism Chairman David Dick and Appalachian News-Express Editor Barbara Justice of Pikeville.

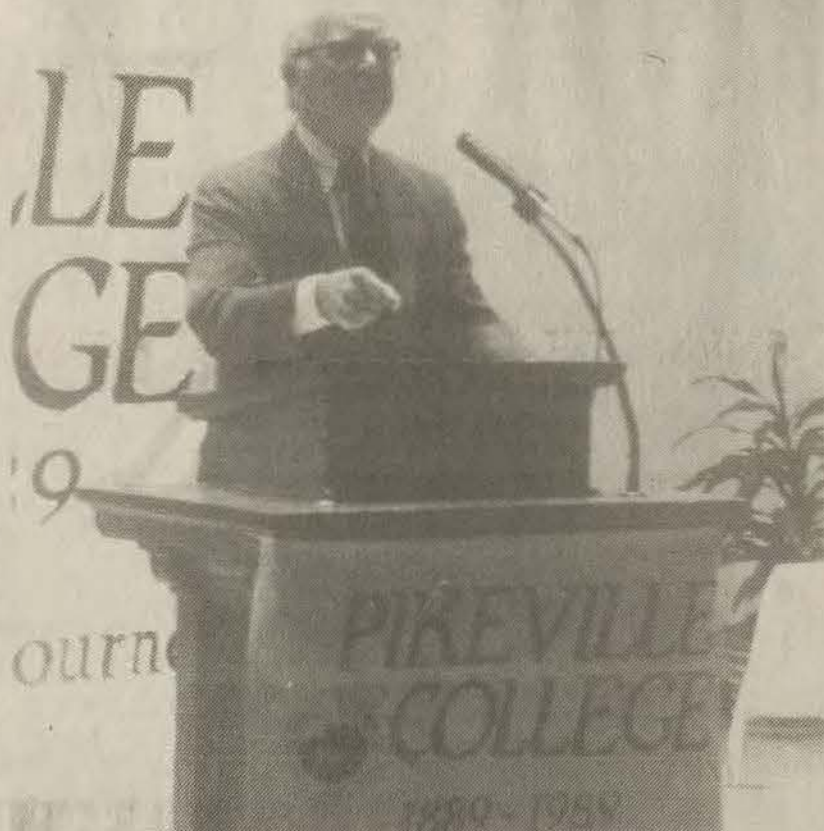

In the opening lecture of the Centennial Forum on Tuesday, April 18, Louisville Courier-Journal columnist John Ed Pearce admonished the Eastern Kentucky college's students to work for improved educational opportunities in the mountains as a way of countering the stereotypes.

"Let's face it," the Norton, Va., native said. "There are ignorant people in the mountains and, too often, basketball is more important than book learning." To dispel the negative image of the mountains, he insisted, Appalachian people must work to solve the problems that have contributed to their perpetuation.

"Of all the things we need in the mountains, education is first, second and third. We must overcome the isolation of the mind as we have overcome our physical isolation."

The "Images of Appalachia" Centennial Forum was one of a series of events celebrating Pikeville College's 100th anniversary in 1989.

Pearce Calls for Better Education

Outspoken Louisville Courier-Journal columnist John Ed Pearce told the audience at Pikeville College's Centennial Forum recently that they must strive to improve educational quality in the mountains, in order to improve the region's image and prepare its people for the future. The forum, "Images of Appalachia," is one of several marking Pikeville College's 100th anniversary this year.

On Sunday, April 16, Myrtle B. Allen had a double celebration — she was recognized by her pastor, the Rev. Steve Hopkins, for being a member of First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial) for 69 years, and for having reached her 86th birthday.

In addition, Estill Lee Carter of Prestonsburg, dedicated a song he sang during the service to her.

Afterwards, she had lunch with friends Alkie Burchett, Ada Meade and Dixie Neeley.

Later in the afternoon, she received dozens of calls and gifts at home from friends and relatives. She also had dinner with her daughter and son-in-law, Ashley and Len Grant, and her grandson, Allen Bolling. After dinner, birthday cake and ice cream were served, and she was presented with more presents.

Brackett, delegate, reported on the KSDAR conference held at the Marriott Resort, in Lexington, March 14-16. The John Graham Chapter received a gold certificate for the state regents project at Kentucky headquarters, Duncan Tavern, Paris, and the year-book blue ribbon.

The death of Edith Fitzpatrick James, on March 12, was announced. James joined the DAR June 12, 1985, under Revolutionary Soldier Jonathan Thomas, of Virginia. She had served as a chapter regent from 1964-68, held numerous chairmanships, and in 1941 she founded the Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival, held annually in September, at Jenny Wiley State Park.

Named to the nominating committee were Eleanor Horn, Olga Preston, Opal May, Virginia Goble, Pamela Wohlford and Frances Brackett.

Stepp introduced the guest speaker, Eddie Akers, of Harold, district and post commander of Veterans for Foreign Wars. This year, the 90th anniversary of the VFW, Post 5839, named for Walter Karr Bowling (killed in WWII at Pearl Harbor) is honoring all living WWI veterans of Floyd County with lifememberships. Honored are Lennie Moore and Bradford Boyd, of Prestonsburg; Felix Crisp of Allen; H.B. Flack of Betsy Layne; and Willis Johnson of Weeksburg.

Post 5839 raises money for various activities by selling "buddy poppies," made by hospital veterans, which, in turn, buys toilet articles, bibs, books, writing materials and stamps for veterans in the Lexington Veterans hospital.

At the end of the business session, Wohlford and Brackett served refreshments to Opal May, Mae Kendrick, Norma Stepp, Olga Preston, Fannie Runnels, Alice Harris and Dorothy Osborne, members; and Eddie Akers, guest.

Virginia Goble, 98th Continental Congress delegate to the Washington, D.C. national conference, will be the guest speaker on Tuesday, May 9, at 3:30 p.m., at the Floyd County Library, with all DAR members serving as hostesses.

Brackett, Goble, and the late Ruth Sowards are the only persons from the local chapter to have served as state officers.

RETIRED TEACHERS ASSOCIATION MEETS

The Big Sandy Retired Teachers Association's quarterly luncheon and meeting was held Tuesday, April 18, at 9:30 a.m., at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, H.C. Dutton, president, gave the devotional reading from Proverbs, and a poem entitled "One Wish, Oh Lord."

Dutton presented the guest speaker, Jim Kelly, director of Social Security for this area, who gave a report on catastrophic insurance and related subjects.

Kelly said that one of the biggest problems facing the country has been that of furnishing adequate health treatment, and added that this catastrophic insurance bill was the first step in helping to solve the problem.

He fielded questions from the group and gave members literature on health care.

Dutton conducted the business session, Delphia Hicks gave the secretary's and treasurer's reports.

Dutton of Johnson County; executive council member, Virginia Goble of Floyd County; liaison person, Norma Stepp of Floyd County; and May Roberts of Pikeville and Prestonsburg, named as honorary liaison person. These were elected by acclamation.

Each incoming president selects a publicity chairman; Salyer, who will be president for 1989-90, asked Docia Woods, who has been serving as chairman of publicity, to continue in this capacity.

Russell Boyd, a member of the KRTA Legislative Board, spoke briefly on a variety of topics.

Dutton read the proposed legislative program, and both he and Boyd stressed the importance of membership.

Delphia Hicks registered the members and guests by counties. These included H.C. Pikeville's Lost in the Shuffle Bridge Club met at Meyers Towers conference room in Pikeville, with Evelyn Waggoner earning first place over seven others with a total score of 4,540.

Vicki Pinson placed second, with 3,420 points, while Grif Griffith ranked third, with 3,160 points.

The Lost in the Shuffle Bridge Club, College Square and Midnight Madness clubs were represented in the recent Hillbilly Days parade. Serving as two princesses were Chancy Looney and Tabatha Renee Beach. Marie Looney and Betty Gruden were also princesses, chauffeured in the parade in a black 1975 Cadillac Convertible loaned to them by Kaminski Robinson of D&T Car Sales. The club also thanks Patty's Green Florist for the pink carnation corsages.

The Stayman, or 2-Club Convention: After the opening bidder has bid either one or two no-trump, the response in clubs is artificial, asking your partner to bid a major if he has one. With both majors opening, bidder bids spaces first. (If he bids hearts first, he denies a spade suit.) With neither major, he bids in the cheaper diamond suit. If opener bids two hearts over your two club response, and you have eight or nine points and a fit, you may bid three hearts, asking partner to bid game if he is at the top of his original bid of one no-trump (18 points). If responder bids two spades, he implies a five-card suit, since opener would have shown spades if he had them. Opener is now at liberty to ass or invite game by bidding two no-trump or three spades, depending on whether he can fit the five card suit.

Opener must pass when raised to two no-trump and he has only 16 points; when responder bids two hearts, diamonds or spades and opener has only 16 or 17 points; and when responder bids a shutout of three no-trump; four spades, or four hearts.

TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY

I want the people of Floyd County to know that the coroners race is not to be taken lightly. It is a very important position to the people of Floyd County. A lot of people don't even vote in this race. I would like to take this opportunity to let you know what a coroner is. A coroner should be a qualified and honest person to investigate any death which appears not to be from natural causes, and to determine the cause and manner of that death, which any of the people of Floyd County may require at any time and they deserve the truthful and honest cause of a death which I, if re-elected coroner, will be able to supply and have supplied in the past 7 years.

Results of Mock Election held at Woods Grocery

Roger Nelson—308 (Major Victory)

Derwin Merion—88

These results show somewhat of a cross section vote of the people of Floyd County and the people are speaking through their God-given rights—Their vote. I want to thank everyone for their support and ask them for their vote on May 23.

#2 on the Ballot

ROGER NELSON

FLOYD COUNTY CORONER

No. 2 On Ballot

The F.B.I. Task Force survey has acknowledged Kentucky as one of the best in the nation for investigating crime scenes, and working with other investigation bodies of state and federal agencies.

As being a member of the Board of Directors of the Kentucky Coroners Association, I feel proud of the fact as being a Board Member. I was instrumental in making the many changes in the Coroners Offices throughout Kentucky, and to have these achievements acknowledged for Kentucky on a National scale.

If re-elected Coroner, I will continue to serve the area with the same efficient service as I have in the past 7 years, and strive to improve the services for the Coroner's Office.

Books and Things:

Kentucky's Culinary Capabilities Found In PCC Books

By Trisha Morris
PCC Librarian

Whether one takes delight in fine dining, or just plain cooking, the following books from the library shelves at Prestonsburg Community College lead the reader on a delightful tour through the culinary highways of Kentucky's legacy of cuisine, and the historic restaurants which serve the feast.

Dining in Historic Kentucky, by Marty Godby. Although some states knock down their old buildings, to make room for shiny new ones, Kentucky restores many of its historic landmarks into old-fashioned family restaurants where the tradition of good food, carefully prepared and graciously served, is still the rule.

For example, in Covington, a fire station built in 1898 now houses German-Irish cuisine; in Lexington, Dudley's Restaurant comfortably resides in the Dudley School, constructed in 1881, and serves mouth-watering standards such as corn fritters and sausage souffles; The Old Talbott Tavern in Bardstown, constructed in 1779, is believed to be the oldest continuously operating tavern in the country. This is only a sample — reading this book makes one educated and very hungry.

Kentucky Hospitality, by Dorothea Cooper. This book, a bicentennial project of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, brings the reader through essays, illustrations and many tempting recipes to the very essence of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. It has succeeded in reflecting the uniqueness of the foods of the state, which derived its varied taste from Indian hunters, frontiersmen and Scotch-Irish immigrants, often meshing with each other to create their own culinary heritage.

From the individually-authored essays, all woven around the history of food in Kentucky, to the recipes, ranging from Green Tomato Pie to Slow-Baked Beans, this book is a delight to read as well as drool over.

More Than Moonshine: Appalachian Recipes and Recollections, by Sidney Farr. In country days the big, warm kitchen knitted families together. This book, taken from those days, is more than a cookbook. The recipes come from Grandma's cookstove and the talk from warm remembrances around the kitchen table.

The author, raised on Stoney Fork in southeastern Kentucky, tells about mountain ways, mountain food and mountain liquid refreshments. The hot toddie and moonshine whiskey are carefully wedged between the biscuits, cornpone and cracklin' bread.

The Foxfire Book of Appalachian Cookery. A treasure trove, this book contains over 400 generation-old recipes, along with a heaping amount of lively old-time kitchen lore.

An antithesis to the impersonal fast-food or defrosted dinner experience, this book is about the era when cooking was cooking and eating was a wonderful experience. Here is food that is unpretentious, solid and filling: sweet potato cobbler, Brunswick stew, mayonnaise corn bread, seven-day slaw, butterscotch pie, potato

There are also directions for using a wood stove or fireplace for cooking, making homemade yeast, curing pork, grilling corn, parching coffee, and open-kettle canning.

With a generous sampling of human conversation to accompany the recipes, this book can be put to good use in the kitchen or simply enjoyed for its high spirits and homespun wisdom.

What's Cooking In Kentucky, by Irene Hayes, of Hueysville. In addition to the Kentucky Derby, the state is famous for its good cooks. The recipes in this spiral bound cookbook, come from across the state. The culinary author's name and city follow every recipe so one can sample cuisine from Prestonsburg to Murray.

From Josephine Conley's "Everyday Meat Loaf" to Grace Burke's "Beef Stroganoff," sampling the contributions from Prestonsburg alone could keep one busy in the kitchen for a very long time.

The Foxfire Book of Wine Making. For many people of the Appalachian mountains, wine making is as much a part of the culture as the mountains themselves. This book gives the reader a glimpse of how — and from what — it was made, and its uses.

With recipes for blackberry, elderberry and pokeberry wines, wines from peaches and wild cherries, rhubarb and scuppernon wines, and even for a famous 24-hour cocktail, this book is a very detailed instruction book for the wine maker, or a collection of reminiscences for the

My Mountain Mother's Gravy, by Ruth Trimble. There was something about the remembered taste of her mother's gravy that eluded Trimble until the day she was forced to substitute canned milk for fresh. This small article, tucked away between some poems and an essay on crazy quilts in the Summer 1987 issue of Appalachian Heritage, is a treasury of rediscovered recipes. Along with the secret for Mama's gravy are recipes for Aunt Dinah's biscuits, three berry cobbler, wilted watercress and persimmon drop cookies.

Filled with remembrances of Grandma's feather beds, gourd dippers and Mama's gravy, this article shares the secrets of a family's favorite recipes.

Pre-Derby Bash To Benefit MDA

The Prestonsburg Jaycees, in cooperation with Center Stage, will sponsor a pre-Derby party to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association, according to Jaycee chapter president Brian Ousley.

"The $5 admission charge will be donated to MDA to help in the fight against neuromuscular disease. Entertainment will be provided by the Full House and there will be door prizes given away," Ousley explained.

MDA is a voluntary health agency that neither seeks nor receives tax-supported dollars. Instead, according to Don Cohen, program coordinator, it depends on organizations like the Jaycees to help win the battle against 40 different neuromuscular diseases.

For more information, contact Donna Roope, Jaycee member, at the Bank Josephine, 886-9101.

Maytown Homemakers Meet

The Maytown Homemakers met April 20 at 7 p.m. at the home of Betty May. Due to the absence of Helen Boyd, president, Marge Yates, vice president, called the meeting to order. Alda Gibson gave the April devotional, "If." Frances Pitts, Floyd County Cooperative Extension service home economist, read an article, "Kinds of Christians." Marge Sammons gave the treasurer's report, and Peggy Gibson read the minutes of the last meeting. Pitts reminded club members that the deadline for camp registration is near, and also discussed the area health seminar May 5 at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park. Pitts said that during the first week in May, WYMT, Channel 57 in Hazard, will be covering the Extension programs as part of the programs' 75th anniversary celebration.

The most recent homemakers lesson was on "Decorating and Selecting Lamps," and was given Tuesday, April 25, at 10:30 a.m. at the Kentucky Power Co. Marge Sammons gave the lesson.

Betty May gave the lesson on seafood, and then served seafood dishes that she prepared to Pitts, Alice Hayes, Alda Gibson, Sammons, Margie Yates and Peggy Gibson.

Researchers Planning Mission To Reveal Secrets Of Solar Wind

Spewing out of the sun at a million miles an hour, the great gushing geyser of broiling gas and supercharged particles known as the solar wind blasts through space, enveloping all the planets, moons and small bodies of the solar system in a hot, seething soup that affects everything in this corner of the universe, including human life itself.

As this cosmic jet stream rams into the Earth's magnetic field, most of it is, thankfully, deflected into interstellar space. But billions of wind driven particles still manage to break through the planet's warped and twisted protective shield. They spiral down into the atmosphere over the poles to produce aurorae, geomagnetic storms, disruptions in radio communications and power surges along transmission lines.

The existence of this powerful solar wind has been known since the early days of space exploration, but its origin inside the sun—like much else about our nearest star—remains a mystery.

Sometime in the next decade, however, a satellite experiment called the Ultraviolet Coronagraph-Spectrometer, working in concert with several other space instruments, may at last reveal the secrets of the solar wind. The project is part of a massive international campaign to study the complex relationship among the sun, Earth and human activities.

"An ultraviolet coronagraph-spectrometer is our name for an artificial eclipse machine," says Dr. John Kohl of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., and principal investigator for the project now being developed with researchers in Italy and Switzerland as well as at several U.S. universities.

The Smithsonian's solar wind experiment is one of several aboard a satellite called the Solar and Heliospheric Observatory to be built by the European Space Agency in cooperation with the national Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"The solar wind seems to originate in the sun's corona, or outer atmosphere," Kohl explains. "This pearly white ring of hot gas and charged particles in the wind—detectable as high-energy ultraviolet light—are invisible to ground-based optical telescopes. But observations of this light to determine the solar wind's velocity, temperature and composition can be made from space.

"Our coronagraph-spectrometer is a device that creates a permanent eclipse," says Kohl. "Thus, we can observe the corona—and the outpouring of the wind—continuously.

Continuous observation is absolutely necessary because the flow of the solar wind is not constant. It changes dramatically and frequently, often over periods of a few hours. Since the sun makes one full rotation every 27 days, streams of hot, high-speed gas spiral out like the spray of water from a spinning lawn sprinkler. The wind also displays other long-term variations linked, perhaps, with the same 11-year cycle that brings sunspots and flares to the sun's surface.

The solar wind was first detected by equipment aboard the Mariner 2 spacecraft in 1961. Since then, numerous spacecraft in orbit, around both the Earth and the sun, have measured the wind at distances as close as 30 million miles from the solar surface.

In the mid-1970s, for example, x-ray observations from the manned Skylab space station revealed that the sun's outer atmosphere was laced by great dark regions and that some powerful solar wind was pouring out of these "coronal holes."

"Except for the coronal holes," says Dr. George Withbroe, and associate director at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, also in Cambridge, "we have so far been unable to determine where the wind originates—or what mechanism drives it away from the sun. Some of the energy required to accelerate the wind and allow it to escape the sun's great gravitational pull must be associated with the same unknown mechanism that heats the coronal gas to 1 million degrees Celsius."

The coronal holes, some large enough to cover 20 percent of the sun's visible surface, change shape, size and location with time. At periods of maximum solar flare and sunspot activity, they may disappear completely and, with them, the high-speed solar wind streams.

The variability of the solar wind, combined with the dynamic and complicated system of magnetic fields and electrical currents in the vast domain of "geospace" surrounding Earth, add up to a complex array of physical effects.

The largest region of geospace, for example, is the "magnetosphere," where all phenomena are dominated by the Earth's own magnetism. The gusty solar wind compresses the magnetosphere into a giant, bow-like shock wave on the day side of Earth and pulls it out like a string of taffy on the opposite, or night, side.

The second region is the "ionosphere"—the broad band of atmosphere some 40 to 300 miles above the earth. Here, solar interactions, including the charged particles driven inward by the wind, give rise to the great magnetic storms that produce spectacular Northern and Southern lights displays as well as disrupt communications.

In the Earth's lower atmosphere, chemical reactions and wind patterns, triggered by solar wind interactions hundreds of miles above, may affect local weather conditions and, perhaps, even global climatic patterns. The mechanism linking these various phenomena, however, is still poorly understood.

More alarming, increasing evidence suggests that many human activities—fossil fuel burning and unrestrained release of chlorofluorocarbons in aerosols among them—may be affecting not only the lower atmosphere, but the entire geospace. The outstanding example of this is the "ozone hole" detected in recent years over Antarctica.

Understanding the solar wind is essential to unraveling this intertwining of many related phenomena, and a diverse battery of experiments planned in the next decade under the broad umbrella of the International Solar Terrestrial Physics Program will study the solar wind both at its source and as it enters the Earth's environs. Now planned for launch in 1995—aboard either the space shuttle or an expendable rocket—the SOHO satellite will observe the sun continuously without interference from the Earth's atmosphere or its day-night cycle.

Among the SOHO experiments are several concerned with "helioseismology," that is, measuring oscillations in the sun's surface as a means of probing its interior, just as geologists have probed the Earth's core by studying earthquakes. Such studies of solar dynamics may hold the key to understanding similar physical processes in other stars.

Poem for Randy

Ever since the day we met
There is one thought I can't forget,
I think about it now and then
And try and try and try again,
To figure out my love for you,
How deep it is and how so true,
So you can know how much I care
About this love that we share.
It means so much I can't express,
You'll never know what happiness you give to me each time we touch, your love and life I need so much.
sometimes I think I can explain,
When I got you what all I gained,
But when I think the answer's here,
That is when you'll come near.
You hold me close and then I know
That my love will again grow
There's no use for me to say,
"I love you lots and lots today."
For today will be gone,
And tomorrow's at the door,
And I know I'll love you more.

The Flood

Water, water everywhere,
And not a drop to drink.
Makes all of us
Who take things for granted
Pause for a time and think.
While watching all the water
In the road and even running off the hills,
Suddenly all the lights go out
And all is so quiet and still;
Although there's water all around,
Even covers most of the town,
Still, there's much beauty to be seen.
Everything above the water
So bright and green.
The tops of the trees
Reach upward toward the sky,
Makes us stop and think
And wonder why.
So many things are destroyed by wind and rain
That will take many years
To build them up again.
Sometimes people need to be brought down,
To stop and take a look around,
And be thankful for the beauty we see,
That God has made for you and me.
So let's all be thankful, give thanks and pray
That tomorrow will be a better day;
The birds will sing and the sun will shine
And we will once again have a peaceful mind.

The Unforgotten Resting Place Of Grandma Porter

As I walked through the cemetery that day,
I was reminded of something great-grandma did say,
"Please don't let the vines run over my grave," she did plead,
So after her death, the wish they did heed.

Many hot summer days were spent on the hill,
I can hear the lawnmower's echoings still,
As I played around tombstones of other forgotten graves, Pretending I was a princess or an Indian brave.

I'd creep over to the building that was used for storing hay,
My mother would then catch me and would shoo me away,
Years ago the building was a church, but now was falling down,
My curiosity quickened, and again I'd slip around.

Peering through broken window panes at pews crudely in their rows,
Making me imagine sermons preached so very long ago,
And of funeral home paper fans bringing blessed relief,
To many now beneath the ground who are lying fast asleep.

But time passed quickly and I moved away,
To leave my hometown and the life family gave,
Years later I returned to seek my forgotten past,
And I drove slowly to Fairview Cemetery last.

I tiptoed past markers looking to find,
The grave of great-grandma, the woman so kind,
Would her grave be vined over? I was hesitant to ask,
Then stopped suddenly when I came face-to-face with my past.

There were no vines, although the faithful mowers had died,
After giving their best to grandma, how hard they had tried,
But now there were marble chips to cover the ground,
To make sure the weeds would no longer abound.

And although I was glad to see great-grandma's wish had come true,
I was glad during my childhood there was mowing to do,
For it kept great-grandma close to me in heart and in mind,
And being on Fairview Cemetery were some of childhood's finest times.
—Debbie Hatfield,

Thinking

Sitting alone
Wishing you were here,
But I know you're gone.

I love you so
I really do
This you should know.

I see you each day
I love you more
In every way.

You look so good to me
I really like you
If only you could see.

You're always on my mind,
There is no one else like you,
You are one of a kind.

My Bible

The Lord is my shepherd,
You may ask me how I know.
I read it in my Bible
And that's what makes it so.

Way back when I was just a child,
Too young to understand,
I knew it was a special book
And one not made by man.

The years have gone so swiftly by,
Many heartaches I will see.
But He tells me in this Bible,
That He will comfort me.

When I get tired and weary,
And can't go another mile
He just smiles at me and tells me,
"I will carry you, my child."

— Margaret Harris

(Editor's Note: The following poem was submitted by Georgia Lewis Blackburn, daughter of the late Joe Wheeler Lewis Sr. Lewis, says his daughter, was twice elected county sheriff. The poem was found among his personal effects after his death in May 19, 1986, but is thought to have been written around 1981.)

A True Friend

Not much to offer,
Not much to say —
Except only your BEST friends stay.
Man's best friend in this world
May turn against him and be his worst enemy.
His son or daughter that he has worked to raise,
Whom he has loved and cherished may prove to be ungrateful.

Those who are nearest and dearest to you,
And those to whom you trust your secrets and happiness
May become traitors to your faith and betray you.
All the wealth and money that you have earned — you may lose it —
It seems to get away when you need it most.
Your life-long reputation
May be sacrificed in a moment by inconsiderate, untrue actions.

There may be those who fall to their knees to honor you.
But when SUCCESS is not with you,
They will be the first to cast a stone at you.
There is absolutely only one unselfish friend to a man in this wide, wide world —
An old DOG. He will stand by you in trouble, in peace, in poverty in prosperity; he will stay with you.

Even though he has to sleep on the cold, cold ground,
No matter how hard it snows, or how hard the wind blows, by his master's side the faithful hound can be found.

If the master has no food to offer
The dog remains by his master, though a pauper.
When all your "friends" have deserted you,
the loving dog remains constant and true.
If misfortune or disaster makes you into an outcast in a friendless, homeless world, where you are sad and alone,
There still remains the faithful old dog.
He asks no higher privilege than to guard his pauper master, against enemies, danger, and disaster.

Now when his master has come to death
And his body is laid in the cold, cold ground,
And the "friends" hurry to get away
The old dog can still be found
Beside the grave, his head between his paws,
His eyes sad but still open, alert, watching, faithful and true even to death.

When man travels the last mile of the way,
The dog, his best friend, always will stay.
When life on earth is almost through
And man says, "O Lord, I am lost, no friends; this is the last mile of the way.
Now, Lord, I am done, and I know
I have not been true,
But if I may
I would like to stay
The rest of my time with you,
both me and my dog,
That has been my friend so true."

— Joe Wheeler Lewis Sr.,

What Will The Poor Miners Do?

As I sit here looking at the hillside
The trees are as bare as can be,
the hillside so rocky,
The soil is so poor,
No one can make a living here any more.

At the foot of the hill
A railroad goes by,
But the train doesn't run anymore.
There once was a coal mine,
Just up the road,
They used the train to haul coal.
But it's been many years
Since the train has gone by,
And it looks as if the town has died.

Over six hundred men worked at the mine;
They loaded many tons of coal.
Now the mine is gone
and there's no work to do
If it wasn't for the Food Stamps
Or Black Lunch checks,
What would the poor miners do?

Mother

Her shoulders are stooped with age
And her hair is silvery grey,
Because she felt so all alone
She shed many a tear today.
Dear friend, if you have a Mother
And for her you do care,
Please take her into your home
And make her feel welcome there.
If you can give her a room
That she can call her own,
Where she can put her little things
And really feel at home.
Her room need not be so fancy
Furnished with fine furniture so rare,
But two things she will really want
Are her Bible and her rocking chair.
Mom has several little keepsakes
And pictures of her children when small,
Her pin cushion, her clock,
And a calendar on the wall.
Oh yes, she likes to knit,
To crochet and to sew
And while doing these things
Her mind waters to long ago.
She is thinking of the time
When you were children small
She can still see those bouncy curls
And the fingerprints on the wall.
The many nights she stayed awake
And while sitting by your bed,
She would place her gentle hand
Upon your feverish head.
She can see the old home place
Where she lived so long ago,
And raised her little family
The ones she loved so.
Soon she will be leaving you
Going to that heavenly home on high,
Where there's no sickness, no sorrow
And no tears will dim the eye.
She has been a good Mother
So kind and so true,
She has borne your imperfections
No matter what you would do.
After God has called her away
Beyond the starry plains
There in Heaven she will be happy
And she'll be well again.

HOROSCOPE

April 30
through May 6

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

A new friend gives you a new lease on life. Responsibilities increase at home, but for the good of all. Money worries subside in the next week.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

Exercise is an absolute must this week. Take advantage of the great weather and get outside. Fresh air and exercise will lift low spirits.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

Take advantage of a cash windfall and spend a little on yourself. A new haircut, or some added pieces to your wardrobe are a must.

LEO (July 23 - August 22)

A new attitude will send you on a spiritual high. Don't let negative people dictate your life. If they can't say anything nice, ignore them.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22)

An associate at work could be a trustworthy friend. A special dinner this week will bring back old memories; perhaps of a long lost love.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22)

Send in that sweepstakes entry, you never know. Friends will ask you on a special weekend, go and have a great time. You need to be careful in the car this week.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21)

Be sure to lock windows and doors at home. No need for paranoia, but it would be best to take precautions. A relative's health improves.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 21)

Saving money will prove fruitful later on. Be wary of authority figures that offer you lots of money. It could be a hoax.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19)

Things are not as bad as they might look. You will find happiness where you least expect. A friend needs assurance that his secrets are safe with you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)

An unexpected guest will have you dancing in the aisles. Take time out for a great movie and some popcorn this week.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)

Money, money, money—if you would save it, you would have it. Set up some long-term goals and things will be better soon.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

Be kind to strangers this week. One could give you an unexpected windfall later on. An elderly person needs your attention immediately.

TIME OUT

Kentucky Derby, gymnastics among week's unusual sports

By Jeff Thompson

The Kentucky Derby and international gymnastics are among some of the more unusual sports events airing on the networks this week. ABC presents the first event of thoroughbred horse racing's Triple Crown with live coverage of the 115th Kentucky Derby from historic Churchill Downs in Louisville, Ky. on Saturday, May 6. In 1989, ABC Sports will present live coverage of all three legs of the Triple Crown for the fourth consecutive year. The other two events—the Preakness Stakes from Pimlico Race Course in Baltimore, Md., and the Belmont Stakes from Belmont Park in New York—air May 20 and June 10, respectively. Additionally, racing fans will want to tune to ESPN, where specials prior to each race will feature not only the news pertaining to the events, but all of the attendant pageantry associated with them as well. Also on ABC will be a one-hour live gymnastics showdown between teams from the USA and the USSR. The event is being held in Columbus, Ohio. Basketball playoffs are beginning on CBS when that network presents live coverage of the two first-round NBA playoff games in a double header slated for Sunday, April 30.

TV Q&A

Hands held the secret for Roy Thinnes' character

By Polly Vonetes

Q: We have a small wager riding on this one. Roy Thinnes starred in a series called The Invaders. The question we have is: How could he tell an invader from an earthling? I say that the little finger was missing from one of the hands of each invader. —Elizabeth Rockwell, Anchorage, Alaska.

A: Identifying the invaders was tricky. Their hands were used in identifying them but not because of missing fingers. Sometimes they would have slightly mutated hands, such as a little finger jutting out awkwardly, and sometimes they would begin to glow when they were in need of regeneration to retain their human form. A sure clue to their identity would be their lack of a pulse or heartbeat because they had no hearts.

Q: I'm a big fan of Tracy Nelson, who plays Sister Steve on Father Dowling Mysteries. Can you please give me her address? Does she have a husband and children? —C. Bessette, Palmer, Alaska.

A: Tracy Nelson was born on Oct. 25, 1963, in Santa Monica, Calif. She is the daughter of the late Rick Nelson and actress Kris Harmon. She was married in July '88 to actor William Moses. They have no children. Write to her c/o Father Dowling Mysteries, NBC-TV Audience Services, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

Q: The short Mexican that played the gang leader in Hill Street Blues and then in Colors—sorry I don't know his name—is it true he died in a car accident last year? —Mrs. S.R. Lemmons, Cabot, Ark.

A: Trinidad Silva, who portrayed gang leader Jesus Martinez in Hill Street Blues and "Frog" in Colors, was hit by a drunken driver Aug. 2, 1988. Silva, 38, was killed instantly. His wife and 2-year-old son suffered minor injuries.

Q: I grew up at Rockford, Colo., and during the 9th grade in high school I met and had a crush on a girl from a neighboring town. Her name is Twila Thorp. I have seen her name on movie credits and a couple of weeks ago her name was mentioned on Johnny Carson's show. I have exhausted all means of locating her. Can you help? How many girls have the name Twila Thorp? —Duane Renfrow, Montrose, Colo.

A: Oh, Duane. There is nothing I would like to do more than to help you find the girl of your dreams. I don't know how many girls are named Twila Thorp—I couldn't find any. I did find a Twyla Tharp who has a dance company and is a popular choreographer. I suggest you write to her c/o American Ballet Theater, 890 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10003, unless you are sure of the spelling of her name.

Interest Rates May Decline

Interest rates likely will decline during the second half of the year, in response to a slowdown in the nation's economic growth, according to the latest monthly "Outlook for the Economy and Real Estate" from the National Association of Realtors.

The April report, issued by NAR's forecasting and policy analysis division, anticipates that by mid-summer, economic growth will have slowed enough to calm the Federal Reserve Board's inflation worries. The February drop reported for many non-farm economic indicators, including home sales and housing starts, shows that the Fed's tight monetary policy appears to be taking hold, the report notes.

The Fed, which has "focused on containing the inflation beast in a cage of tight money and high short-term interest rates," now appears to be evaluating its efforts, according to the outlook. Given the signs of slower growth, the board likely will not continue hiking short-term rates much longer, it notes. Short-term interest rates have risen at a much faster pace than long-term rates over the past few months.

The outlook says the rate increases will likely prove sufficient to forestall risks of high inflation. "We believe a few more adjustments in the short-term rates may be necessary to slow the economy, but that interest rates will trend down beginning in the second half of this year," it says.

A leveling-off period, followed by a decline, is forecast for both adjustable-rate and fixed-rate mortgages, which are expected to reach their peak for 1989 during the second quarter. One-year, adjustable-rate mortgages are predicted to average 9.1 percent for the second quarter; fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages are expected to average 11.2 percent for the same period.

In related realty news, the NAR predicts that:

low sales for 1988.

- Sales of new single-family homes are expected to total 663,000, falling 2 percent below sales last year.
- The national median existing-home price is expected to reach $94,100, rising 5.4 percent from last year. The national median new-home price likely will reach $118,000, rising 4.9 percent from 1988.
- Consumer price inflation is expected to reach a rate of 4.9 percent, compared to 4.1 percent last year.
- The civilian unemployment rate is expected to be 5.2 percent, compared to 5.5 percent last year.
