Fear of explosion causes short closing of KY 80

by Frank Clark
Staff Writer

A collision between a passenger car and a truck that was thought to carry an explosive form of fertilizer occurred Wednesday evening at the intersection of KY 80 and KY 7 at Garrett, closing the highway for 45 minutes, while firefighters and police sought to determine the overturned truck's contents. The accident occurred around 6 p.m. Wednesday when a car driven by Burt Hoover of Langley pulled out into the eastbound lane of the four-laned KY 80 into the path of a Ryder rental truck carrying garden supplies to Hindman.

Garrett firefighter Terry Triplett said the truck skidded about 200 feet in an attempt to avoid the car before broadsiding the vehicle and turning on its side. The three men in the truck, who were not identified at the scene, were reportedly uninjured in the accident. Hoover, however, was trapped in his damaged car.

About 18 members of the Garrett Fire Department, two pumper trucks, Floyd County Rescue Squad, Kentucky State Police and Floyd County Sheriff's Department all responded to the accident.

When it was discovered that the overturned truck contained bags of fertilizer, possibly ammonia nitrate which can be explosive when mixed with fuel, police closed the road to traffic and contacted area coordinator for Disaster and Emergency Services David Chaffins.

Rescue workers used the Jaws of Life to pull Hoover from his vehicle, and he was transported to Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin with multiple injuries.

Officials discovered, after contacting the suppliers who loaded the truck, that the fertilizer was not ammonia nitrate. Firefighters hosed fuel off the road, and the overturned truck was removed. The roadway was returned to normal by 9 p.m.

No report on Hoover's condition was available at presstime.

Potentially explosive situation

Police, rescue workers and firefighters experienced some tense moments Wednesday evening when a truck thought to contain explosive materials collided with a car on KY 80, near Garrett. After closing the four-laned highway for about 45 minutes, however, they learned that the contents were not hazardous. (Photo by Frank Clark)

Rash saga continues

Test results released

Now in its eighth week, the mysterious rash that first cropped up at McDowell schools in mid-March remains a puzzle.

Floyd County School Superintendent Ronald Hager along with two state health officials will meet with parents and others tonight (Friday) at 6 p.m. in the school's gymnasium to officially report findings of recent tests run by Analytical Management Inc. of Lexington.

The results of the air sampling revealed "elevated levels of methane throughout the schools, which could indicate the schools are sitting on a coal seam," the team reported.

Additionally, elevated levels of carbon dioxide were noted. "This indicates an inadequate supply of fresh air is being introduced into the schools," the report states. The team recommended that the fresh air ducts on the roofs of the schools be opened to increase the amount of fresh air and reduce carbon dioxide levels.

Further testing showed action levels above the recommended amount of airborne bacteria and fungi in all three schools. "One species of fungi isolated in Room 9 of the primary school may be a potential human pathogen," said the report.

This finding was also found during the Swipe test, but was isolated to Room 3 of the junior high school and a classroom. The level was deemed "extremely high" and the recommendation was to clean all surfaces in all three schools with a 10-20 percent bleach and water solution.

Principal Frank Pack noted that such cleanings have already been performed three times.

The results of the asbestos testing were negative; however, the team recommended replacing the friable ceiling tiles as soon as possible.

Pack said this week the school was experiencing about 50-60 students absent per day. The school has an enrollment of 590.

Several parents have reported that they have taken their children to physicians and received permission to keep their children out of school due to the severity of the rash.

Pack said that the severity ranged widely between children, with some affected more drastically than others.

Treatment plant Martin concern

Cracker Bottom residents expressed displeasure over the proposed location of a waste water treatment system during a Martin City Council meeting Wednesday.

Several residents expressed concern with the city's decision to place the treatment plant in Cracker Bottom. Gary Frazier, a spokesman for the group, said that locating the facility outside of Martin city limits, in Cracker Bottom, would place an unnecessary hardship on the neighborhood's residents. Further debate on the treatment plant's location is expected.

In other action, a resolution was passed unanimously to name the road in the Grigsby Heights housing project Raymond Griffith Drive, in honor of the current mayor of Martin. The city council also agreed to take responsibility for the drains, sidewalks, and sanitary sewer connected with the roadway.

Present at Wednesday's meeting were Mayor Griffith and council members Denzil Halbert, Earrit Hayes, James Robinson and Joe Simpson.

Electricity, first bathtub remembered

Before moving to Shop Fork, Toby Zanzonico's family lived up Beaver Creek. There was, he said, a dirt road for the few automobiles and mule drawn wagons and for many years, he said, "We had no electricity, but we did have a radio that played by battery, a large battery, and we had a windup record player with the horn. Around 1937-38, they built a highway past Wayland up to Caney, about three miles above Beaver. Then, more automobiles appeared and we were going into the future.

"Electricity was put into the houses. Those houses on Beaver were about half-mile apart, and after burning old coal oil lamps for umpteen years, we finally got electricity.

"The people we rented the house from in Beaver Creek had some relatives and they needed the house, so we moved to Shop Fork, about a mile from Wayland. The houses there were all in a row that ran along the hollow. We lived on one side of the house, Joe and May Hicks lived on the other and all of us grew up together like brothers and sisters. Above Shop Fork was another coal camp, Stamper's Branch, and those houses were built like the ones in Shop Fork.

"Though each side had four rooms, they were much bigger rooms than what we had at Beaver Creek, with electric lights and, something else we never had at Beaver Creek, a refrigerator. Wayland was the Elk Horn Coal Company's biggest camp, having a population of 4000 plus.

"In Wayland, we had one main coal office, one company store with meat market attached alongside, one hotel, one doctor, one dentist and one movie house. The miners' families from Beaver Creek, Stamper's Branch, Estill, Glo and Martin's Branch did a lot of trading at the company store in Wayland.

16 Floyd Countians are off the hook

Charges against 35 people cited for cockfighting during a Jan. 14 raid on a sports arena in Doty Creek, near Minnie, were dropped Wednesday, following a March decision by Attorney General Fred Cowan that cockfighting is not illegal.

Floyd County District Court Judge Harold Stumbo granted the joint motion to dismiss the case made by Floyd County Attorney Jim Hammond and Prestonsburg attorney

Robert Rowe, who represents the 35 defendants.

State police arrested seven Floyd County residents and issued citations to nine others during the Saturday afternoon raid last January at the 17-year-old Doty Creek Sports Club, owned by Kelly and Ray Stone of McDowell.

The 100-foot by 100-foot blue steel arena had seating for 500 people and maintained a ledger listing 7000 members of the club from 10 states, dating back 20 years. One person arrested in the raid said that cockfighting had been going on at the Sizemore Mountain location since 1936.

house below the leak, which was empty at the time of the line break, was also cordoned off. Residents living in houses further up the hollow were requested to turn off their gas pilot-lights and remain where they were until the leak was halted.

Columbia Gas employees cut off the supply of gas to the 6.4-mile section of pipe affected by the leak, allowing gas trapped in the pipe to bleed off into the air, said Columbia Gas transmission representative Kelly Merritt.

DES officials, worried about concentrations of gas released, called in a state fire marshal from Knott County to perform an air test, but levels of gas were found to be negligible.

"Anything could happen in these types of situations," said Chaffins. "We don't want anyone injured." Chaffins noted that he had heard reports of a similar gas leak which had occurred in the area during the 1940s that had "...blown half the side of the mountain off," when the escaping gas was accidentally ignited.

The road was reopened at about 8:30 p.m., and residents were allowed to return to their homes. Columbia Gas representatives said that repairs on the broken line should be completed Friday. No loss of service to customers was anticipated.

"Sure was nice to have a bathtub and not have to take a bath in that little round, galvanized tub."

County can be a leader

Education Reform, Part 5
by Pam Shingler
Editor

A decision last week by teachers at two Floyd County schools may lead to the local district having a model program in which teachers, parents and principals share all decisions governing individual schools.

Allen Elementary and Betsy Layne High schools will be the local guinea pigs for site-based management, a form of school governance mandated by the recently passed Education Reform Act of 1990. Teachers at the two schools had the highest percentage of yes votes among county schools when the opportunity arose for participation in a pilot program using the participatory management concept.

The new management system allows for a type of representative democracy in individual schools. Decisions about curriculum, space, personnel and a number of other issues will no longer be made solely by the principal of the school, but by a council composed of two teachers, two parents and the principal.

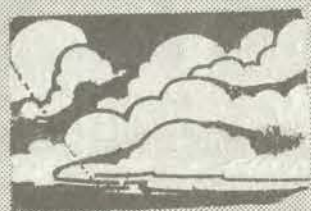

The local school system is getting a jump on other public schools across the state by implementing the pilot program next fall. The Education Reform Act requires all schools to be involved in site-based management by 1996.

Rain ends, coolness begins

The forecast is for showers and thunderstorms through Saturday, and then Sunday through Tuesday will get considerably cooler.

Friday will be cloudy and breezy with periods of showers and a few thunderstorms, with the high at 70-75 and 10-20 mph winds. The chance of rain is 90 percent.

Friday night showers are likely with a low in the upper 50s. Chance of rain, 70 percent.

Saturday, is forecast to be cloudy with a 50 percent chance of morning showers, high upper 60s. Saturday night will be partly cloudy, low in upper 40s. Sunday through Tuesday, partly cloudy and cool, low each day in 40s, highs in 60s.

PCC graduation is tonight

The 25th annual commencement exercises of Prestonsburg Community College will be tonight at 7 at the Jenny Wiley State Resort Park Amphitheater or in the First Baptist Church of Prestonsburg in case of rain. Dr. Robert Hemenway, Chancellor of the UK Lexington Campus, will deliver the address. Seventy students from Floyd County will receive their diplomas.

DAR to meet

The John Graham Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will meet Tuesday, May 8 at the Floyd County Library at 3:30 p.m.

Appreciate teachers

Don't forget next week is National Teacher Appreciation Week. Jot down a few sentences about a teacher you especially appreciate and send it to The Times, or drop it off at the office on Central Avenue, Prestonsburg. Deadline is Wednesday, May 9, for a special appreciation section in Friday's edition.

Regional Roundup

Magoffin man murdered

SALYERSVILLE — A Salyersville man was shot and killed Tuesday night during an alleged dispute over the victim's ex-wife. According to state police reports, Kermie Gipson, 33, of Lakeville Road in Salyersville, was shot once with a 12-gauge shotgun by Willie J. Ross, 30, of Middlefork at Ross's residence, at about 8:20 p.m. Tuesday. The blast struck Gipson in the wrist and chest, and he was pronounced dead at the scene by the Magoffin County Coroner.

Gipson had pleaded guilty on April 23 to felony sexual-abuse charges and was given five years probation. Ross was arrested at his home at 10:50 p.m. and was charged with murder. He was lodged in the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center. The case is under investigation by the Kentucky State Police.

Coal truck collision kills one

PIKE COUNTY — A Kemper man was killed Wednesday when two coal trucks collided on KY 194.

The collision occurred about 4:25 p.m. near Kemper, when Randall Justice, 38, of Raccoon Creek apparently lost control of the coal truck he was driving as he rounded a curve, broadsiding a coal truck driven by Wesley Williams, 29, of Kemper. Justice was taken to Pikeville Methodist Hospital for observation. Williams was also taken to Pikeville Methodist, and was then transferred to Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington, where he died at 12:40 a.m. No seat belts were worn in the accident which is still under investigation by the Kentucky State Police.

KSP investigates bomb at coal mine

LETCHER COUNTY — Several sticks of dynamite were removed and a blasting cap detonated at a Thornton underground mine on Monday by a Kentucky State Police bomb disposal unit. Police believe someone had apparently intended to blow up part of the mine. The building in which the bomb paraphernalia was found covers an air shaft that is being reactivated for use by Aberry Coal Co. (The Mountain Eagle)

Teacher pay raises proposed

PIKEVILLE — Pike County School Superintendent Larry Burke has recommended to the Pike Board of Education that teachers in the system receive an 18 percent increase in pay. The funds, Burke said, will come from money to be made available to school systems through the Education Reform Act. (Appalachian News-Express)

School theft charges dropped

PAINTSVILLE — Criminal indictments charging two former W.R. Castle Elementary School employees with 150 counts of theft have been dismissed. Circuit Judge James A. Knight dismissed the charges, on a recommendation from Commonwealth's Attorney Leo Marcum, against former principal Garland Arnett and former school secretary Vivian Honeycutt. No reason for the dismissal request was given. (The Paintsville Herald)

School's effort praised

PAINTSVILLE — The leader of a state team overseeing the management of the Johnson County School District for the past two years told local school board members last week that he was "amazed" at the progress the district has made. Tom Vinson said he would submit a favorable report on the district's progress to the state Board of Education. (The Paintsville Herald)

Pharmacy owner charged

LEXINGTON — Magoffin County pharmacist Garry Jenkins has been indicted by federal authorities on nearly 200 counts of illegally dispensing drugs and filing false claims for payment as part of a state program to dispense medicine to the poor. Jenkins is owner of Garry's Pharmacy in Salyersville. (The Louisville Courier-Journal)

Support group to begin for mentally ill and families

by Frank Clark
Staff Writer

Do mentally ill residents of Floyd County receive adequate, up-to-date treatment? Do the families of mentally ill persons receive the support they need to deal with mental illness on a day to day basis? Why does there continue to be a social stigma placed on mental illness?

The Kentucky Alliance for the Mentally Ill (KAMI) is hoping to bring some answers and support to the estimated 2000 people in the Big Sandy region who are suffering from mental illness and to their families who live with the burden of that illness, says Jean Marlatt of Louisville, a board member of KAMI.

"Up until about 20 years ago, the severely mentally ill were sent to hospitals, and families were basically told to pretend the afflicted person was already dead," said Marlatt, who toured the five-county Big Sandy region this week.

"Treatment has changed in the last 20 years, and a movement away from institutionalization has taken place, with families now being the main caretakers," Marlatt said. "KAMI was formed about 10 years ago to provide support for those who are ill and for their families who care for them."

Terry Back, an administrative assistant with Mountain Comprehensive Care, has guided Marlatt in her tour of the area and will support the creation of a local chapter of KAMI.

"There's nothing in the Big Sandy area like this," said Back. "Region-wide, we have at least 2000 persons with mental illness. Mountain Comprehensive Care, working with a local chapter of KAMI, will bring families together to meet with each other and provide support groups."

Besides support, KAMI and its umbrella organization, the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill (NAMI), works to provide education in communities, raising awareness about mental illness and providing updated information on the availability of current treatments.

The agencies also act as advocates for the mentally ill, encouraging increased research efforts and influencing local and state leaders to meet the needs of their mentally ill constituents. In Kentucky alone, it is estimated that between 28,000 and 35,000 citizens suffer from serious mental illness, including schizophrenia, bipolar disorders and severe depression.

Marlatt, who now spends much of her time working to establish local alliances, knows first hand about the need for services which KAMI can provide.

"I have a daughter who, at the age of 16, developed schizophrenia," said Marlatt. "For five years I felt so isolated, ashamed, blaming myself for it. Mental illness puts families under great stress, because they must learn to know the person suffering from it as if they were a new person.

"Thankfully, I became involved with the Alliance for the Mentally Ill and it helped tremendously. My daughter's now 28, and she's able to live and function by herself."

Marlatt and Back hope to see a local alliance for the mentally ill established in the Big Sandy region within four to six weeks. For information about the program, call the Mountain Comprehensive Care office.

"The law has been clear since 1980," said Rowe. "All that had to be decided by the Attorney General was if a chicken was a bird."

Rowe noted that the decision was one he believes will be supported by most residents of Eastern Kentucky, including local police officials.

"I believe law enforcement officials will support this decision," said Rowe. "They'd rather be dealing with drug traffickers and DULs, instead of chasing a bunch of fellas who go three miles back up on top of a mountain and put a couple of chickens in a ring."

Despite the potential severity of the animal cruelty charges brought against his clients, who could have been penalized by one year in jail and a $500 fine, Rowe said the notoriety surrounding the case made it an interesting one to work on.

"I could practice law for another 100 years and not have as much fun with a case as this one," Rowe said with a laugh.

Audio magazine now available

The first issue of "Pondering Kentucky: The Magazine" recently went on sale. It's a magazine on audio cassette and is based on the radio program "Pondering Kentucky," which has been broadcast by nearly 80 Kentucky radio stations for the past nine years.

Apparently the concept is totally new, according to Glen Bastin, producer and host of the broadcast. While there are some tapes available that offer summaries of magazine articles, Bastin said he has been unable to locate anything that equates to a real magazine as does "Pondering Kentucky: The Magazine."

"The stories of Kentucky are endless, as we have proven with the program on radio the last nine years," said Bastin. "With the program, I've tried to spotlight the accomplishments of the average Kentuckian and to further underscore our uniqueness."

Bastin said reaction to the magazine has been very good.

The audio magazine is being offered to the public in the same fashion as a print magazine, Bastin said. There will be 12 issues per year, and individual issues will be available through book stores, gift shops and other outlets. It is also available on a subscription basis.

For subscription information, contact "Pondering Kentucky: The Magazine," PO Box 43432, Louisville 40253, or call 502/245-3628.

Renovating the company house

'Coal camp kid' Nora Jean Smith Cuntz claims her father, John Smith, almost killed himself with "pride of ownership" of their former Wayland home.

Environmental Watch created

Kentucky's well-known and highly acclaimed Water Watch program is undergoing a major transformation.

Kentucky Environmental Protection Commissioner Art Williams told a Frankfort news conference on April 26 that Water Watch, one of this country's most successful environmental education and outreach programs, will broaden its horizons under its new title, Environmental Watch.

"Environmental Watch will focus on the entire ecosystem of our Commonwealth, including our valuable water resources," said Williams. "It will have as its principle objectives the monitoring and assessment of Kentucky's environment by the citizens of the state, educational and outreach activities, and action and solution support programs."

Water Watch has been a key community-involvement program in the Division of Water since 1985, welcoming citizen participation in the wise management of community water resources, including streams, lakes, wetlands and groundwater. Since its inception, more than 22,000 Kentuckians have had basic training in water quality monitoring, community education, leadership development and community organization. Under Water Watch, more than 100 test sites have been identified and more than 300 of Kentucky's streams have been adopted by Kentucky citizens.

"Between the remarkable success of Water Watch over the past five years and the powerful message of greater environmental protection activity sent by Earth Day 20," Williams said, "the time has come to broaden the scope of Water Watch."

"We are today announcing the creation and launching of Environmental Watch."

In May, volunteers from across the Commonwealth will be called to Frankfort for a conference on the specific implementation of the new Environmental Watch program. Training and support materials will be available by July, along with the start of a local community training program. The program will be in full swing by October across the Commonwealth.

Some of the work to be undertaken will be monitoring and assessment of litter and trash dumps, open burning and lake examinations. School-based litter education programs, community air quality workshops and community water resources forums will be features of the new programs.

Also, recycling program support, tree planting campaigns, stream cleanups and habitat restoration and restocking initiatives will be undertaken.

"We believe that Environmental Watch will offer meaningful opportunities to thousands of Kentuckians to have an impact in the protection and enhancement of Kentucky's environment," concluded Williams.

"Wayland also had something that many people had never seen, a turntable for the engine of the train. It was a big circle with train tracks crossing it. The engine would run onto the tracks and the men (with a lot of us boys helping) would turn the table by hand. They would be down inside that hollow bowl, and everyone putting their backs into it until the front of the locomotive faced the opposite direction. The train would then go down the tracks about 100 feet and the switch would be thrown and, the engine would back up to the cars. "The passenger train arrived at 12:30 p.m. and left at 3 p.m. every day."

Getting to school was not an easy task, Toby remembered. "Going to school from Shop Fork, we had to pass the tippie and when the wind blew, the coal dust would get all over us — in our eyes, clothes, even our shoes had coal dust inside them."

Nora Jean Smith Cuntz furnished wonderful details about the interior of her house:

"Our furniture was like most other houses then. In the living room, we had a small couch, a dresser, a bed (Mom and Dad slept in it), a cigarette stand, and a floor model radio. We used to listen to Renfro Valley. In the kitchen, there was a table and two chairs and two benches (Dad made the benches), a gas cook stove, a small table for the drinking water (a bucket and dipper), a work table, and a wood cabinet.

"Upstairs, we had two bedrooms; one was furnished with an old trunk and an iron bed that Polly and I slept in, and my brothers shared two iron beds in the other bedroom. Some of my friends had one bed for all of their children, did not have sheets and they wet the bed.

"At our house, if you needed to go to the outhouse at night, you could use a slop-jar. We did not wet the beds! When the weather was bad, Mom would hang the clothes in our bedrooms to dry.

"My mother used to wallpaper our house every two years. I always cut the trim for her. She made the paste from flour and water, the same way she made the starch for our clothes, except much thicker. My dad painted our house white and trimmed it in green or brown. Houses were painted different colors and as we were a mile away from the mines, they were clean — not dirty like some coal camps I have seen in my life — also we had lots of trees.

"Everyone," Nora Jean agreed, "had to carry water from pumps at various areas in Stamper's Branch. I carried wash water for Mom. (One tub after school and one tub in the morning before the school bus came!) Then my dad dug a ditch and put water in our house; he built a bath house with a gas heater and Mom put her Maytag wringer washer out there! It sure did make life easier.

"After the flood, Dad found an old claw-foot bath tub. I scrubbed it all day with Bon Ami! It was worth it. Sure was nice to have a bath tub and not have to take a bath in that little round, galvanized tub."

"This will give our group a jump on where we're headed in education reform," said Allen Elementary Principal Danny Branson. "This is an exciting time, educationally speaking, in Kentucky."

Floyd County Assistant Superintendent for Instruction Gary Frazier sees this as an opportunity for the county to lead the state. "We're getting calls from all over the state," said Frazier, referring to the administrative decision to start school-based management before the state requires it.

"People are talking about Floyd County schools on something good for a change," he added.

Janet Akers, a science teacher at Betsy Layne, fairly bubbles when she talks about what's in store for the school. "We're really excited," said Akers. "We should all be willing to take on something new to improve education. It has to be for the better."

Optimistic that site-based management is good for local education, Akers believes the program "can't go wrong — if there's no jealousy, if it doesn't come down to that."

"I'm enthused and looking forward to getting into it," said Betsy Layne Principal Adrian Bentley, who looks at his school's decision to go with the pilot program as a definite plus.

"Why not get into it initially? If we're there in the beginning, we can get all the help we need. If we do stumble, somebody will be there to help us," Bentley said.

The help the administrator refers to will come primarily from the Center for Leadership in School Reform. Representatives of the Louisville-based center have already visited Floyd County to discuss the components of the program with teachers.

On May 14-15, a group from the two local schools will travel to Louisville to talk with Center staff and to visit some schools on the other end of the state that are already engaged in site-based management.

From each school will be the principal, teachers and parents. Branson said the tentative list from Allen includes Gloria Hall, Colleen Compton, Susan Barnette, David Caldwell, Glenda Blackburn, Susie Gayheart and Linda Wallen, all teachers. Also planning to go are parent representatives Joe and Mary Hinchman.

The Betsy Layne contingent, according to Akers, includes teachers Shirley Harmon, Jackie Dillion, Glenda Fraley, Sharon Clevenger, Ruth Patterson, Eugene Blackburn, William Barker and Akers, as well as counselor Vicki Ratliff and the principal.

Parent representatives are to be chosen at Monday night's PTO meeting at the school.

"We'll be working and sharing when we get back," said Allen's Branson.

Frazier, a strong proponent of the new system, said the management council at each school will be responsible for devising its own plan of site-based management. In fact, they will even have the opportunity to decide how fully they want to jump into the program and how soon they want to start.

"People are talking about Floyd County on something good for a change."

—Gary Frazier

"Teachers cannot lead their students if they are not included in the decision-making process," said Bob Cole of the Center for Leadership in School Reform. "Principals cannot lead if their duties involve simply following the orders of those higher up the chain of command."

"The participatory leadership that works best for a school district, or a school, is that one which allows everyone concerned to feel committed to and responsible for the decisions they must carry out each day," Cole said.

The students, Cole insists, can only profit when everyone involved in the school takes a responsibility in its success.

Thoughts from the Road

By Frank Clark

Saying goodbye is just about my least favorite thing in the world to do. I always end up getting red-faced and saying silly things that don't really express how I feel. Usually, I try to slip out quietly, without fanfare, and since I've been forced to move from one place to another at least a dozen times in the past eight or 10 years, I've gotten pretty good at making a fast, painless exit. Leaving Floyd County this time, however, will be a different story. Since I first came to the county four years ago, and despite two years of attending college outside the state, I've grown to consider the place home. I've spent some very happy years living in Garrett and Hueysville, working with the Christian Appalachian Project in Martin, teaching math at the David School, and most recently, prowling the county and talking to the people for The Floyd County Times.

I've learned a great deal here. I now know the importance of enjoying a cup of coffee on my porch as the morning sun begins to peek over the mountains. I understand the mental and emotional lift that comes from hiking the wooded trails and high country, soaking in the green of trees and songs of birds. I appreciate the well-being drawn from spending an evening with friends, discussing philosophies, politics, and histories that have shaped this area that I now call home. My time here has formed me into a far better person than the one who first entered Eastern Kentucky four years ago.

It would be impossible to say thanks to all the people I've worked with and learned from, so I won't even try. I will say that I promise to not be a stranger. Hazard's not that far away, and a piece of my heart will always stay here.

I have to come back, anyhow. I'm marrying a woman in Floyd County this coming August, whom I met in Martin four years ago. That kind of bond to a place lasts a lifetime.

Singer-songwriter Carol King said it best in a '70s era song. Echoing the times, King asked the musical question, "Doesn't anybody stay in one place any more?"

Having moved around quite a bit, I've had to face more than my share of goodbyes. I seem to have come up in an era when people come and go with frequency. Wishing well and saying goodbye is not one of those things that gets easier with practice. I'm used to it and have learned to take it in stride, but I tend to get just as sappy as when I first left friends and family behind after high school.

Today, we say goodbye and Godspeed to staff writer Frank Clark. Frank was actually my replacement last fall when I left The Times' staff for a spell. When we said goodbye to Anne Chaney who left for bigger and better things and I came back as editor, I inherited Frank — and it was a fine inheritance.

We knew all along that Frank was a short-timer. He said that up front. With a master's degree in economic development, he was waiting for a position to open up in his field. His experience in reporting gave him the opportunity for honest work while he waited.

It had to happen. Someone at Hazard Community College was smart enough to recognize that Frank would be the perfect person to head the college's new leadership program, funded by the University of Kentucky's Kellogg Foundation grant. They made him the proverbial offer he couldn't refuse.

And folks in the Hazard area have got a gem. He's young, energetic, intelligent, thoughtful and sensitive.

But, oh, what a loss for the paper. Frank is a superb young writer and reporter. He has all the attributes an editor looks and hopes for in a writer. He has a good command of the language. He's inquisitive, skeptical and enthusiastic. He has a strong sense of ethics and fairness and adventure. And there's nothing in him that smacks of the smart-aleck or the snob.

The Times will continue, much as it has for most of this century, but Frank will be missed, because he has made a large mark on these pages.

Frank, we wish you the very best as you take your special qualities to Hazard. Please know that you've still got a lot of friends in Floyd County.

Veterans to 'run for wall'

Dear Editor,
On May 16, several veterans and supporters will leave San Diego, Calif., most riding motorcycles, on a pilgrimage known as the "Run for the Wall." The convoy will be led by James Gregory, an ex-Marine Vietnam vet. The convoy will travel across the heartland of America to create a groundswell of support for America's Prisoners of War and Missing in Action (POW/MIA).

Anyone can join anywhere along the planned route on any mode of transportation. We need to show the world that Americans will not forget our POW/MIAs. We had 17,000+ participants in the Rolling Thunder (Freedom Rally) in Washington, DC, last year. We expect 100,000+ Americans who care this year.

The "Run for the Wall" will stay the night of May 22 in Owensboro. On Wednesday, May 23, at 7, they will leave for a reception in Louisville. Contact Charley Datillo in Louisville for information (502/896-1544). From there, they will travel to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Frankfort for a ceremony led by Jim Halvatsis of the Kentucky Department of Military Affairs. We then travel to Mt. Sterling for a reception and welcome by Sen. "Eck" Rose and Rep. Adrian Arnold and other dignitaries. We will spend the night in MTS and leave the next morning at 8 for Rainell, W. Va., and spend the night and then on to the Wall on Friday. We want to insure that no one ever again fights a war that our government will not let us win and then forget our POW/MIAs. Our younger generation deserves better and it is up to us to guarantee it. Are you an American? Do you care about your children? Go with us. We are the groundswell of support that will end the mystery of why our POW/MIAs never came home.

There are 78,777 POW/MIAs from World War II; 8,177 from Korea and 2,343 from Vietnam. You and I let them be forgotten. You and I can also help bring them home.

Bentley is "obvious choice"

Dear Editor,
To the voters: In the May primary, you have before you a slate of candidates for the House of Representatives. I would urge you to carefully consider the qualifications of those running for the office. And, when you do, I am sure there will be no doubt that Russell Bentley is the obvious choice for your vote.

Russell Bentley and I worked closely during the 1990 General Assembly. And I know that his number one priority is the 92nd legislative district. He is loyal and dedicated and he works hard to get things done for his constituents.

I also learned from working with Russell that his word is as good as gold so he is a legislator you can depend on and can believe in. The voters in the 92nd district would do well for themselves to send Russell Bentley back to Frankfort to represent them.

Kim's Korner

By Kim Frasure

If you've never had children, you probably won't relate to this column. While speaking with my friend (who only has six more weeks to go before giving birth to her second child), I found myself laughing hysterically.

"If I hear one more person ask 'haven't you had that baby yet?' I promise I will scream," she said.

"It takes nine months, people. Nine whole months. And, it may just be an ol' wives tale about the cravings of pregnant women, but I've craved everything from lettuce to fruit to macaroni salad. Or better yet, weird combinations like Texas barbecue on a bologna sandwich with peach cobbler."

"Honestly," she kept telling me, "this baby is doing somersaults. I lie on my right side and he or she kicks so hard I turn to my left. That's no good either."

"There's absolutely no way I can lie on my stomach, and forget trying to sleep on my back."

She proceeded to tell me about she and her daughter going for a walk. As they passed ducks along the way, she said "Look Taylor, see that big fat duck waddle — just like Mommy."

You know, it's so funny when you first find you're going to have a baby. You can't wait to shop for maternity clothes or see that belly pooch. By the middle to the end of the eighth month you begin (along with everyone else) to wonder how much longer it will be before you can get a hold of this darling little baby, lose those extra pounds and burn those hideous tents.

Those first seven months seem to pass like lightning. It's the last two months, along with the anticipation, that's so hard. And once the due date arrives and that bouncing baby appears, all the misery of swelled feet, back aches and morning sickness seem to fade like darkness into light.

Keep the faith, K.J. There's not much longer to go.

Harold man heads state prisoner of war organization

by Pam Shingler
Editor

A Floyd County man follows news of the release of the hostages being held by Mideastern terrorists with more than passing interest.

Ted Stumbo is leader of a group that most members, given a choice, would rather not qualify for. The Harold man is commander of the recently formed Daniel Boone chapter of American Ex-Prisoners of War.

The group has about 40 members, most of whom served in World War II and the Korean War. Nationally, the organization has about 33,000 members in 350 chapters, representing American prisoners in four wars.

Stumbo, a World War II veteran and former POW, said the organization grew out of regular "rap sessions" at the Veterans Hospital in Lexington.

"Ex-POWs as a group have problems that the general population and other former servicemen don't have," the chapter commander said.

He cites lingering emotional and physical traumas stemming from wartime imprisonment. Many, particularly those who served in the Pacific, have long-time diet diseases, he said.

The purpose of the organization is to get together to talk and to lobby for better Veterans Administration treatment of ex-POWs. "It's also a sort of therapy," Stumbo said.

For years after his own release from German imprisonment, Stumbo said he kept as busy as possible to keep his mind off his experiences.

"I intended to get a law degree, but I didn't think I could concentrate that long," he said. "I taught school for awhile, and then I bought a service station where I could work long hours. I'd be so tired that I could go right to sleep."

He also served two terms in the state legislature where he chaired the Veterans Affairs Committee, and he started a successful construction business.

That busy-ness hasn't stopped with his formal retirement. In addition to his involvement with the POW group, Stumbo is on the boards of Sandy Valley Water Commission, Betsy Layne Senior Citizens Center and Big Sandy Area Development District Council on Aging. He's also senior vice commander of the local Disabled American Veterans chapter and spends a great deal of time in gardening.

Stumbo's wife Marlene is the person who encouraged him to go to the VA Hospital in Lexington. From twice monthly meetings there with other former POWs, the organization began last December with the local man as commander.

Now 68, Stumbo was a young pilot recruit when his plane was shot down over Germany late in World War II. The Germans were by then fighting a losing war, so Stumbo and other POWs were put in railroad cars or forced to march from place to place along battlelines.

Last year he relived some of his experiences for students at Betsy Layne High School who published his remembrances in their magazine, Along the Big Sandy.

"We slept on the floor with the lice, mice and rats ... we were continuously being bombed and strafed by our own planes. I've had fellows killed within 10 to 15 feet behind me where our planes would come down strafing," Stumbo told the students.

"There were very few that escaped. . . When they had us to march, the temperature was below freezing and there was snow on the ground. We slept in the woods, with one blanket. You could imagine how rough it was not to have enough to eat and be half-starved and sleep out, too. It wasn't a picnic."

A tall, strapping man, Stumbo said he weighed only 109 pounds when he and the other prisoners were liberated.

"When we were in prison camp, all we had to eat was a soup called grass soup. It was dried vegetables cooked, and a soup made out of it. I've seen fellows dig fish worms and eat them," Stumbo is quoted in Along the Big Sandy.

"Mostly all you thought about was something to eat. If somebody brought you 11 peas in there and you were supposed to split it with your brother, that extra pea had better be split in the middle. That was how serious it was. When you talk about it, you really don't know what hunger is."

What really sticks in Stumbo's craw is the fact that for nearly 40 years, former POWs were denied many veterans medical benefits.

"POWs had no records (from their time in captivity)," he said. Their physical and mental problems could not be documented by the military, and, hence, they were not eligible for medical treatments afforded those soldiers who had not been imprisoned.

It was not until 1983, he said, that Congress passed legislation acknowledging that POWs frequently suffered from "service connected" problems.

Stumbo credits veterans of the Vietnam War with putting pressure on the VA to extend its services. "The Vietnam veterans have raised awareness and helped a lot."

The Harold retiree estimates that between 15 and 20 Floyd Countians are former POWs. He hopes to start a chapter of American Ex-Prisoners of War in the Big Sandy region.

Meantime, he urges all ex-POWs to link up with the Lexington-based chapter which he heads. The group meets the third Wednesday of every month at 11 a.m. at the Senior Citizens Center on the corner of Alumni Drive and Nicholasville Road in Lexington. The next meeting is May 16.

Former POW leads group

Former prisoner of war Ted Stumbo was sworn in as commander of the Daniel Boone chapter of American Ex-Prisoners of War by district director Virginia Bowles. The new organization serves as a lobbying group and "sort of therapy" for POWs from four wars.

Thousands of children abused every year

In 1989, state investigators substantiated 19,458 victims of child abuse and neglect in Kentucky.

Thousands of abused and neglected children. The statistics tell the story. Or do they?

The statistics "19,458 victims" means thousands of abuse and neglect cases. Yet, many Kentuckians fail to realize that, because these cases were reported to the state Department for Social Services, this statistic also represents thousands of children who received protection and family intervention services.

Social Services Commissioner Larry Michalczyk said, "If you sum up a social worker's goal in a child abuse case, it is protection, prevention and, if at all possible, preservation."

"We act to protect the child from abuse, to prevent further abuse and, whenever possible, to preserve that family by providing services to stop or correct the situation that led to the abuse."

Among the "family-based services" that social workers use are:

— protective day care for family who have become overwhelmed with the stress of child care responsibilities;

— parent education for mothers and fathers who lack the knowledge and skills to provide proper discipline, nutrition, school or personal guidance;

— limited preventive financial assistance for families with emergency food, shelter, medical, transportation or utility needs;

— individual counseling with the social worker or other professional therapists helping family members overcome causes of abuse;

— referral to self-help groups, such as Parents Anonymous, where similar stresses, reactions and ways to avoid abusive situations are discussed.

The department also allocates more than $130,000 annually to support the work of the Kentucky Council on Child Abuse Inc., its local chapters and the operation of a 24-hour crisis line (800-432-9251) providing parents on the verge of abusing their children with a place to turn for an immediate response from another trained parent or counselor.

Unfortunately, in some substantiated cases of child abuse, protection of the child, and therefore prevention of further abuse, cannot be immediately assured if the child remains in the home.

"That's why we have our foster homes, our intensive care homes and the capability to purchase temporary or long-term shelter from Kentucky's private child caring programs," Michalczyk said.

"Sometimes removing a child from the home is the only way for the family to heal itself and make full use of the help that is available," he said, "so that they can eventually be reunited."

And, in some child abuse cases, the ultimate solution that is in a child's best interest is termination of parental rights and placement of the child with a new, permanent adoptive family.

"Protection, prevention and preservation are goals for every child," Michalczyk said. "However, there will always be cases in which 'preservation' of the child's future is more realistic than 'preservation' of the family."

Kentucky's Social Services commissioner said the public plays an enormously important role in which "preservation" outcome happens.

"People who truly suspect child abuse and who report their suspicions aren't hurting these families," Michalczyk said. "They are helping families who are already hurting themselves and who may not know how to stop or how to get help.

"There are intently dedicated social workers in every Kentucky county with the skills and the desires to help these children and these families," he said.

"When a troubled family, a concerned community and a social worker link up, a child can be helped and can have a better chance for a life free from abuse."

So go ahead and send in your entries!

The Travel with The Times contest will continue through this year, with the deadline of Dec. 31, 1990. Photos become the property of The Times, and the judges' decision is final.

Summer jobs for youths available

The Big Sandy Area Community Action Program Inc. will operate a summer youth employment and training program in Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike counties beginning June 25 and running through July 31. Workers will earn $3.80 per hour for 35 hours per week.

The program will serve economically disadvantaged youths, ages 16 through 21, who plan to continue their education in the fall semester.

Documentation of proof of age, family size and family income will be required. Applicants must also have a valid social security card, and male applicants 18 and over must provide proof of military registration.

Applications may be obtained at the Big Sandy Area CAP Inc., office located on KY 1428 at Allen, or the local Department of Employment Services office on North Lake Drive in Prestonsburg. Deadline for submitting an application will be Friday, June 8.

This program is funded by the Cabinet for Human Resources, DES and the Eastern Kentucky CEP with funds from the US Department of Labor.

Hindman sets Folk Week

Are you looking for a very unique family vacation? Do you enjoy traditional music, folk dancing, crafts, instrument building and having your children involved in such activities? If so then you may be interested in the Hindman Settlement School's 13th annual Appalachian Family Folk Week June 10-16.

This year's staff includes: nationally known ballad singer Jean Ritchie; storytellers Andrena Belcher and Don Boklage; basketmaker Colleen Messer; quiltmaker Verna Mae Stone; traditional musicians Rich Kirby, Lee Sexton, Marion Sumner, Randy Wilson and Eleanor Greenleaf; dulcimer maker Morris Amburgey; dance caller and clogger Phil Jamison; and corn shuck doll maker Edna Ritchie Baker.

Daily workshops include quilting, corn shuck doll making, pottery, storytelling, basketmaking, instrument making and instrument playing sessions on the dulcimer (lap and hammered), banjo guitar and fiddle. Group singing and dancing take place each morning.

If you are unable to take part in the daily activities, then you may want to take advantage of the evening programs that are open free to the public. On Monday, June 11, there will be folk dancing with music provided by the staff. Rich Kirby, Randy Wilson and Phil Jamison will perform on Tuesday, June 12.

There will be a storytelling evening with Andrena Belcher, Don Boklage and special guest Loyal Jones on Wednesday, June 13. Jones is well known for his books on Appalachian humor. On Thursday, June 14, Jean Ritchie and Edna Ritchie Baker will be in concert.

The evening program for Friday, June 15, will include music by Lee Sexton and Marion Sumner, plus others. All the evening activities take place at 7:30 p.m. in the May Stone Building.

For further information about the Hindman Settlement School's 13th annual Appalachian Family Folk Week, write to Box 844, Hindman Settlement School, Hindman 41822 or call 785-5475.

Auxier students give a hoot about the environment

Auxier Elementary teacher Ramona Aiken's fifth grade class watched as she dissected an apple into different parts of the world and was left with the peel of one small section to represent the portion of the Earth that the human race inhabits.

Students at Auxier Elementary School took part in the recent Earth Day activities in many different ways. Mattie Sublet's 6th and 7th grade class planted coffee trees, which is Kentucky state tree. They also participated in making posters, watching a film on Earth Day and learning "101 green things to do for the environment" and concluded with a Happy Birthday Earth Day activity.

The TMH unit of Auxier Elementary painted green and blue hand prints on recycled paper and then mailed them to New York to become part of the giant Earth Day Birthday Card with other students across the country.

Linda Hall's third grade class watched a movie about the importance of clean water and air. The students also helped to clean up Auxier by picking up trash. Afterwards the students talked about ways to reduce pollution and things they could do to help. Then they drew a picture depicting these ideas.

Donna Stumbaugh's eighth grade class made banners, flags, bird feeder and posters. They also took a cleanup walk around the community of Auxier using biodegradable trash bags. The class has agreed to make

Earth Day, every day.

Ruth Webb's first grade class, in conjunction with Charlene Darrell's second graders, helped Robert Hensley of Hensley's Nursery plant shrubbery surrounded by mulching in front of the school. They were given instruction on how to plant the greenery and how then to take care of it. All the materials were donated by Hensley's Nursery of Prestonsburg.

David Bickford's fourth grade class also saw a film on Earth Day material and drew pictures of what the Earth meant to them. Since the students had learned the importance of trees to the survival of the environment, they planted a tree of their own.

Rosemary Aiken's fifth graders celebrated by doing a review of how important it is to keep the Earth clean. The class used an apple as a representation of the Earth and discussed the relationship the core, the meat and the peel of the apple had to different parts of the Earth. They also dissected the apple, removing chunks for each part of the Earth that is uninhabitable such as ice caps, water, mountains, deserts, etc.

Slowly the apple dwindled down to one portion and then the peel was removed to represent the portion of the earth that is left for people to exist on daily. The realization of the importance in keeping our world clean was evident with such a small space for everyone around the world. The demonstration was followed by a large cleanup campaign of the neighborhood surrounding the school.

Taking care of wildlife

Members of Donna Stumbaugh's eighth grade class at Auxier Elementary made and hung bird feeders in celebration of Earth Day 1990. They also constructed banners, flags and posters and took part in a neighborhood cleanup.

Why we are proud to be part of The David School

by Melissa Corder, Scotty Gibson, Shane Hicks, Joey Ousley and Norman Webb

The David School is a good place. There are a lot of things that are different from public schools.

At David School, we don't judge people. Everyone is treated fairly; no one gets treated differently. We don't make fun of anyone.

We don't always use textbooks. We find other ways of learning and we also have fun at it. For example, we write newspaper articles (like this one) to send to the Floyd County Times, for our reading and spelling class. We choose our spelling words from the articles we write and practice our reading while writing. We have about six or seven students in a class, never more than 10. Smaller classes are best. You can hear what a teacher is saying. Classes last about 40 minutes each. We get to pick what we want to do when studying certain topics. The teachers are "Indian guides"; they just supervise. We make it happen.

We have our grades mailed to us, and we don't get grades like other schools. They give A, B, C, D, and F. We get Excellent, Very Good, Good, Fair, and Poor.

We have some really neat classes at David School. We have a station class. Students get to go down to the station and change tires, check oil, pump gas, and work on cars. They learn how to wait on customers and make change. This trains them to work in a filling station.

We have a community service class. They do work for people who need it done. They do painting and other things. We have community service class to help people in the community.

We also have a woodshop so we can learn woodworking. We make gun racks, foot stools, rocking chairs, and other things, too. We have a gun safety class which a lot of other schools don't have. We also have a driver's education class. There is another good thing about David School. We get to use computers even if we aren't in computer class. We work with them and play math games on them. At most schools, you never get to use them.

We have very nice dances to raise money for the school. We also save pop cans. We take a lot of trips here, and a lot of them are fun and interesting. Every month, if you come to school and don't miss a day, you get to do something special. It could be going to a movie, skating, or bowling. This encourages students to come to school.

When it is a teacher's or student's birthday, we sing to them. If it is a special occasion like Christmas or Halloween, we might throw a little party. We make a special occasion fun.

Other schools don't have a smoking porch. At lunch time, those of us who smoke are allowed to smoke on the smoking porch. Or we can play horseshoes, volleyball, football, or basketball.

We serve our lunch family style. Since there aren't too many of us here at David, we have plenty for seconds. We have a good cook named Doris Stone.

At the David School you will probably get thirsty from working hard! If you do, you can get change and you won't have to go to the office. You will go to a nice lady and ask her politely if you can get change for a dollar. If you are not polite, you won't get change. That nice lady just doesn't give change to the people she teaches. She tries to teach you manners, too!

We have MOP, which stands for Makeup Opportunity Program. When you miss a day of school you are supposed to call in before noon that day. If you don't, you make up your time after school or during lunch time.

We also have a dress code. We are not allowed to wear jeans with holes above our knees, or shirts with a lot of slits in them, or any vulgar pictures on our clothes. We also don't wear clothes that advertise drugs or alcohol. We have our dress code to make sure no one gets offended or feels uncomfortable. We respect everyone's rights.

At David School we have a lot of other good things. We have a counselor who counsels the students. He takes care of fights and problems at the school. He is the one everyone talks to when they have a problem or get into some kind of trouble. He discusses your punishment with you. He tries to help you. We don't get paddled, but our punishment hurts worse!! We have to make up or repair what we did. We also have a counselor who comes in to talk to kids who have a lot of other serious problems. He helps them to handle their problems better.

The Mountaintop Preschool is a place for young kids to go to school. They have preschool and kindergarten. Some of the high school students go up to the preschool to help the kids learn. The preschool students get a good start on their education. The preschool students don't ride a big school like us; instead, they ride a van. The van takes them to and from their homes. A high school student rides with to help them on and off.

At the David School, we don't call the teachers by their last names. We call them by their first names. Why should we call our teachers by their last names if they are our friends, when we don't call our friends by their last names? We are a family at

MSU center sets open house May 8

In conjunction with the National Small Business Week observance slated May 6-12, Morehead State University's Small Business Development Center will hold an open house from noon to 3 p.m. on Tuesday, May 8.

MSU's Small Business Development Center, located on the first floor of Butler Hall, is a service of the School of Business and Economics, providing counseling and other management planning guides to owners of existing and new small businesses.

Besides offering one-on-one counseling with a potential or current business owner, the SBDC also has training seminars/workshops throughout the year dealing with various phases of running a business.

"We invite interested area residents, MSU faculty/staff and high school seniors and college students who may be interested in starting a business or currently in business needing some advice to stop by and get acquainted with the service we provide," said Ernest Begley, Morehead area SBDC director and management consultant

Camp Shawnee taking applications

Christian Appalachian Project will sponsor six weeks of overnight camp at Camp Shawnee near Jenny Wiley State Resort Park this summer. Weekly sessions begin June 25 and continue through Aug. 3.

Children are eligible if they are at least six years old and have completed the first grade, up to age 14. For more information and applications, call 285-5111.

Pikeville College sets alumni/senior weekend

Alumni and friends of Pikeville College are getting ready to gather on campus May 12 and 13 for the annual Alumni/Senior Weekend, culminating in the graduation of the Class of 1990 on Sunday at 2 p.m.

The weekend begins with a special chapel service at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Meditation Chapel of the Record Memorial Building. Then, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., the Alumni Association will host a brunch for alumni and friends of the College around the flagpole between the Derriana and the Administration Building.

The public is invited to a special pinning ceremony for graduating students of the Elizabeth Akers Elliott Nursing Program on Saturday afternoon. This moving ceremony marks the students' passage into the field of nursing and will take place at 3:30 p.m. in Chrisman Auditorium. A short reception will follow.

On Saturday evening, alumni and graduating students will gather for the Alumni/Senior Banquet, sponsored by the Alumni Association. The banquet will begin at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the college gymnasium. Tickets are $7.50 each in advance or $10 at the door. For tickets, contact the Pikeville College Alumni Office at (606) 432-9326.

After graduation ceremonies on Sunday afternoon, a reception will be held on the lawn beside the tennis courts near the gymnasium.

For more information about any of the events of Alumni/Senior Weekend, call the Pikeville College Alumni Office at 432-9326.

Locals to get G'town degrees

Lee Ann Bottoms and Grethen Renee Nunn, both of Prestonsburg, will be among those receiving Bachelor of Arts degrees at Georgetown College's 1990 Commencement exercises, Saturday, May 12, at 10 a.m.

US Sen. Wendell H. Ford will present the 1990 Commencement address. Ford is serving his third term in the Senate and is chairman of the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration.

Latin: The lost language

by Stefanie Henson
McDowell High School

Bonus, novelty, portable, numerical, nautical, probation, memorable, victorious and bilingual are just a few of the thousands and thousands of words derived from Latin. An unknown author said, "To learn another language is to gain another soul," to know these words is almost like knowing another language, Latin.

Who would think that a language over 2000 years old would have an influence on our language and other languages of the world today? Not many people would. But Latin is the basis of five different languages, and over 60 percent of the English words come from Latin.

Amazed? There is more. The people of the United States owe their motto to a commonly used Latin phrase of its day. Plus many sayings, such as vice versa, e pluribus unum (our nation's motto) and Magna Charta, came directly from Latin.

Latin was not used much until the third century BC when it was spoken throughout Italy. In the first century AD, Latin became a spoken and superb literary language throughout Europe. Such writers as Cicero, Caesar and Virgil used Latin in their works because it was a marvelous instrument for prose and poetry. These writers and others set standards of excellence for future writers such as Shakespeare and Moliere.

Latin, soon afterwards, was required to be taught in the schools. But over the years, the rules on teaching Latin have been relaxed. In the 1700s, American college students were required to read Latin fluently and write original essays and poems in Latin. During the 1900s, however, Latin was eliminated or reduced in many US colleges and universities.

Should the study of Latin have been relaxed? Many educators believe that studying Latin trains a student to think more precisely and to understand grammatical relationships better. I, presently enrolled in a Latin class, know that Latin is teaching me a great deal about the English language I didn't know. Now, with a basic knowledge of Latin, I can look at a word that I don't know and get the meaning of it by tearing it apart, piece by piece, with Latin words. Take the word "sempiternal", for example. "Semper" in Latin means "always." By knowing this, I am able to figure that sempiternal means everlasting.

Summer offers college preview

Lynchburg College in Virginia is accepting applications for the 1990 session of its annual Hopwood Summer Program, in which outstanding high school students get a taste of college life.

Participants will live in residence halls for the week of July 22-28, taking a college level course and attending typical college social activities. Students see what it is like to attend lectures, participate in discussions, write and research assignments and interact with professors on the college level.

This year's session features courses in 16 major fields of study, with topics including documentary video, creative writing, marketing and economics, the history of racism, sports medicine, social ethics, how drugs affect the brain, how the Holocaust occurred and others.

"It's an opportunity for some of the nation's brightest high school students to have a college experience prior to college," said Lynchburg College President George N. Rainsford. "It gives them a true taste of what college is and strengthens their determination to go on to college."

More than 40 students now at the college attended the Hopwood program, in which participants earn one semester hour of academic credit applicable to Lynchburg College undergraduate requirements.

To be eligible for the program, now in its 13th year, students must be high school juniors in the current (1989-90) term and in the top 20 percent of their class. The only charge is a $175 fee for registration, room and board. Tuition costs are paid by the college's T. Brady Saunders Endowment.

In addition, a select group of Hopwood participants will be awarded renewable scholarships with an annual value of $3000. Awards will be made on a competitive basis depending on students' high school records, standardized test scores and recommendations and work in the Hopwood program.

The deadline is June 1. For more information, students should call the Lynchburg College Admissions office toll-free at 1-800-426-8101.

AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Theatrical Experience, top entertainment

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing Writer

"The Deceitful Marriage: A Comedy in One Act" was deftly performed by The Theatrical Experience, Prestonsburg Community College's fledgling drama troupe. The enthusiastic audience was treated to an evening of music and delightful comedy.

Piano music was provided by Dr. Robert Perry, giving the evening an intimate quality. The show opened with a performance of "When You are Old and Gray", a 1950s song with satirical lyrics about the sometimes insane state of love and marriage.

"The Deceitful Marriage" told the story of a lying sailor and a conniving maidservant. Goaded into believing that a few flashy, but worthless jewels have landed him a wife with a fine dowry, the hapless sailor soon learns that his wife is anything but honest. Impressed by worthless jewels, a cook in a rich country house passes herself off as the owner during her mistress's absence, hoping to snag a husband of money and means.

The fun starts when the cook's mistress (the real owner of the house) returns home. Through a comedy of circumstances the truth is revealed, leaving the sailor "harpooned on the sea of matrimony!"

The entire troupe turned in a sterling performance. Scott Montgomery and Susan Wells were delightful as the lovers. Alice Adams, playing the mistress of the house, and Cheri Wright and Stephanie Collins provided enough insults and downright slapstick comedy to keep things rolling along.

The set design, construction and technical assistance were wonderful. The set gave the hint of elegance as only simplicity can. The entire production showed polish.

Under the direction of Dean

Whitaker and the sheer determination of Mazola Salmons, The Theatrical Experience proves with this performance that good theatre is not very hard to find. The crowd attending the performance also proved that good theatre is welcome in the community.

Higher ed. conference at MSU

Morehead State University's Office of Information Technology will host the spring Kentucky Higher Education Computing and Communications (KHECC) conference on May 21-22.

"Information Technology — Making It All Fit" is the theme, and sessions will focus on the following technological areas: Library, computing services, media/printing publishing and telecommunications networking.

More than 300 participants are expected for the two-day meeting which begins with registration at 10 a.m. on Monday, May 21 in the Adron Doran University Center.

Dr. Charles Lee, an MSU graduate and former member of the department of music faculty, will give the keynote address at the general session on Monday. "Preparing Work Force 2000: One View from the Computer Industry" will be his topic. Dr. Lee is education marketing director for the Unisys Corporation.

The conference has been designed to provide those attending with information to use in academic institutions and with an opportunity to gain an awareness of how others have fit technology into their situations.

Presentations will cover such topics as "Technologies for Distance Learning," "Info Window," "Information Services to Business and Industry," "Care and Feeding of Micro Labs," "Paperless Campus — Is It Legal?" and "Micro Networking."

Additional information on the conference and registration forms are available by calling 783-2619 or 783-2068.

KHECC was formed in August 1985 to provide computing and telecommunications personnel at Kentucky colleges and universities with an opportunity to share experiences among themselves and others in the profession. Since the initial meeting, the conference's scope has increased to include technological advances in information dissemination areas such as printing and libraries.

Earth Day at David School

by Melissa Corder, Scotty Gibson,
Shane Hicks, Joey Ousley
and Norman Webb

We celebrated Earth Day at the David School on Friday, April 20. We began at noon with a picnic lunch. Our dessert was an Earth day cake, prepared by the Home Economics class. They decorated the cake to look like the planet Earth. We followed lunch with a tree planting ceremony. We planted a tree so that we could help the earth. People cut over 500 billion trees each year to make paper, pencils, and home building products. Acid rain, which is formed when pollution enters the atmosphere, also kills many trees. We read poems about trees and how important and special they are. Our science classes set up displays of projects they have been working on. All the projects have to do with our earth. The pond class had a video showing the work they have done to clean up our pond. The garden class sponsored face painting and made an Earth day card for all the students and staff to sign. There was a display of kites set up by the class studying gravity and wind patterns. Two types of kites displayed were the diamond kite and the box kite. The class studying the history of the earth had a video showing different kinds of rocks and rock formations. They also had information on how different kinds of rocks had developed and/or changed through the years. After we took time to look at all the displays, we enjoyed ourselves with outdoor games celebrating the Earth. We played volleyball, tug of war, horse shoes, and recycle relay. The tug of war game we played was a little funny looking. Two people stood on small wooden platforms, and whoever fell off first (while tugging on the rope) was the loser. Recycle relay had contestants trying to flatten as many aluminum cans as they could in 30 seconds. The day was hot, but we had a lot of fun. That night, we had a spring dance to complete our celebration of Earth Day. The theme was "I Remember You", and it lasted from 7:30 to 11 p.m. We secretly collected baby pictures of our students and displayed them. Then we asked the students to guess who was who. We had beautiful spring decorations. Everyone loved the special fruit punch made with real fruit. All who attended had a blast! This was the first Earth Day celebration ever held at the David School. Everyone enjoyed it, and we hope to have another one next year.

Attitudes changing toward drugs

Two new studies indicate that teenagers have more access than ever to drugs, but are rejecting them more often while developing increasingly conservative attitudes toward them. In addition, a surprising number of the teenagers questioned in one study said they would favor regular drug testing of high school students. The first study, conducted by the National Institute for Drug Abuse (NIDA), indicates that drug use among high school seniors is on the decline. Approximately one in three of the 17,000 high school seniors questioned admitted to using drugs within the last year, the lowest figure since the survey began in 1975. At the same time, an all-time high of nearly 60 percent of the students questioned said they could obtain cocaine "very easily" or "fairly easily".

Three out of four students said they were in doubt about the effectiveness of such programs or felt they had no impact at all. However, 63 percent of the students felt the most likely person to dissuade youngsters from using drugs would be someone recovering with an alcohol or drug problem. When asked to identify the most important factor in preventing a young person from using drugs or alcohol, the top response in the CNN/Scholastic survey was a "good self image". For more information regarding alcohol or drug abuse, call the CareUnit, Our Lady of Bellefonte Hospital, 836-3148.

While the NIDA survey reveals a declining interest in drugs among teenagers still attending school, it doesn't take into account the millions of adolescents who drop out before their senior year — often because of drugs. The survey also fails to assess teenagers' attitudes toward alcohol. The second survey was released by the Cable News Network and Scholastic Inc., the nation's largest publisher of classroom magazines. The survey found that 44 percent of the 180,000 fifth through 12th graders questioned favored regular drug screenings for high school students. One in three of the high schoolers said they would volunteer for regular drug testing. That's a fairly high number which indicates that teenagers recognize the seriousness of drug problems in their midst. Also teenagers are aware of school-based drug education programs, but believe they're largely ineffective.

Berea to sponsor sessions for math, history teachers

Berea College will host two Woodrow Wilson Institutes this summer, one for high school mathematics teachers and the second for high school history instructors.

This is the first year for the Wilson Foundation's history program and Berea is one of a select number of colleges chosen to participate.

Both programs, scheduled July 16-20, are open to teachers who are assured of a teaching position for the 1990-91 school year. Enrollment is limited to the first 32 applicants who register before June 4.

Participants in the mathematics institute will use computers and graphing calculators to explore new and traditional topics. There will be an emphasis on visualizing functions, developing mathematical models and solving real-world problems.

The history institute will focus on the issues of social history compared to various historical eras in American history. Special topics will include Blacks, women and working people. It will be conducted by DeWitt Wallace -Reader's Digest Fellows who participate in a four-week Summer Institute on Secondary History held at Princeton University.

The fee of $125 covers all institute materials, continental breakfasts and lunches Monday through Friday and dinner on Thursday. Participants can enroll as commuters or request information on the cost of accommodations in college residence halls and local motels.

To register, contact Mary Ann Murray, director of special programs, CPO 2268, Berea College, Berea 40404, telephone 986-9341, ext 6830.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation was initiated to produce a strong corps of teacher-leaders who, given support and professional status, can improve the teaching of science and mathematics through formal and informal teaching of their peers.

Click is the 17-year-old daughter of Jo Ann and Randy Crum of Prestonsburg and Melvin Click Jr. of Water Gap. Her FBLA sponsor is Judy Combs.

CSX official is Pike speaker

John W. Snow, the president of CSX Corporation, will be the commencement speaker at the Pikeville College graduation ceremony on May 13, according to college President William H. Owens.

Snow holds a doctorate in economics from the University of Virginia and a law degree from George Washington University and has taught both economics and law at the college level.

He also served, from 1974 through 1977, in the US Department of Transportation as deputy undersecretary and ultimately as administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Snow joined CSX, then the Chessie System railroad company, in 1977 as vice president for government affairs. He was made senior vice president for corporate services in 1980, executive vice president of CSX Corporation in 1984, president of Chessie System Railroads in 1985, president of CSX Rail Transport in 1986, president of CSX Transportation in 1987, president and chief operating officer of CSX Corp. in 1988 and his current position, president and chief executive officer of CSX Corp., in 1989.

He is a director of several other corporations as well, including Sovran Financial Corp., Best Products Co., Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Corp., Yukon Pacific Corp. and the Association on American Railroads. He is a trustee of Randolph-Macon College and a member of the board of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

Award winner

Matthew Johnson, a student at McDowell High School, has been named a United States National Award winner in science by the US Achievement Academy. Nominated by science teacher Joan Caldwell, he is the son of James and Donna Cook Johnson. He is the grandson of Eldoris and Willa Dean Frazier of Mt. Vernon, Ill., formerly of Wheelwright, and the late Curtis Cook, and of Harve Johnson and the late Betty See Johnson of Price.

Students present research papers

Three Pikeville College psychology students were selected to present original research papers at the recent Undergraduate Psychology Research Conference in Franklin, Ind.

Peggy Sue Martin of Elkhorn City, Charlene Hawkins of Phelps and Elvis Hatfield of Pinson Fork were among 75 students from 15 colleges and universities to present papers at the conference.

Martin presented a case study of an 11-year-old girl from a single-parent family whose father was an alcoholic.

Hawkins presented an analysis and evaluation of the Stanford Diagnostic Reading Test. Her study involved 23 subjects and focused on item analysis.

Hatfield presented a study that used 15 subjects to study the reliability over time of results of the Otis Test of Mental Ability, an IQ test. He also compared 20- and 30-minute versions of the test.

The three students were accompanied at the conference by psychology professor Mark Sohn and fellow students Leanna Little, Linda Prater, Amy Hamilton and Helen Grizzle, who also worked on the papers presented at the conference.

The conference was held April 7 at Franklin College.

HOROSCOPE

May 6 through May 12

By A. Murphy

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

Don't make important decisions when your emotions are stormy. Think hard about your qualifications and ask for a raise to ease those minor financial worries at home.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

Exercise your wisdom and patience when all seems to be in disarray. Make sure that you delegate responsibilities. Don't let everything rest on your shoulders alone.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

Do not be intimidated by your superiors. Practice your individuality and your independence. Enjoy your freedom: walk, read, travel, take pictures.

LEO (July 23 - August 22)

Let others take care of their own obligations. Don't always be a care-taker who absorbs the problems of others. Let them stand alone and learn how to deal with life.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22)

Be demanding when it comes to your own well-being. You can give of yourself all that you want, but when you stop wanting to, maybe it's time to think of yourself.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22)

Don't be completely dejected by a refusal once in a while. Think of your importance in your surroundings. Mistakes and hard times only make the good times better.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21)

Don't be afraid of a confrontation. It is much healthier to air one's fears, ideas and opinions than to keep them unvoiced. The resulting honesty is icing on the cake.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 21)

Look at hurdles in your day and life as challenges and think of how you can grow by taking them on with a positive attitude. Do not put off that confrontation any longer.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19)

Spending the day with a close friend is very healing for your stressful lifestyle. Smell flowers and feel the wind. It is springtime; are you missing it?

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)

Don't let your emotions take control of you when there is important work to be done. Give your time to a cause you believe in. It's a great way to meet others.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)

Put an unusual twist on something ordinary. Have dinner late and by candlelight. Keep the TV off and listen to the wind in the trees. Listen to a door-to-door salesperson.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

Remember that you can rely on close friends to listen. Taking chances is exciting but dangerous—you can get pleasure from a simple get-together with friends.

TV PIPELINE

'Beauty and Beast' proceeds to basic cable, syndication

By Polly Vonetes
Q: I was very fond of Beauty and the Beast. To me it was a beautiful and thoughtful program. Very unusual to have classical music and poetry so well combined with a storyline. There were supposed to be 12 episodes this season—we only saw five. Why? Will the series go into re-runs? Are there plans for another portion of Vincent's story? Where can we write the cast to thank them for many hours of joy and anticipation?
—Pauline Kowalke, Hope, Alaska

Ron Perlman
Beauty and the Beast

A: The "CBS Eye" took a dim view of the Beauty and the Beast ratings. Wary of what direction the series would take with Katherine gone, the show was canceled. However, Republic Pictures Television has sold its 56-episode off-network Beauty and the Beast package to the Family Channel for one year before releasing it in syndication for the 1991-92 season.

tions have plagued me for the past 35 years. Please forward the enclosed photos and letter to Ms. Reynolds. —Charles Pendleton, Chino Valley, Ariz.

A: Sgt. Pendleton you will be happy to know the mission has been accomplished. Your letter and photos have been forwarded to Debbie Reynolds. Such devotion as yours must be recognized.

Q: I have been wondering if there are past Academy Awards ceremonies on video. If so, where would I be able to rent them?
—Julian Howland, Atascadero, Calif.

The answers to your questions cannot be verified by the dates you have furnished. Eddie and Debbie were married in 1955, it is a good chance they were in Korea together.

A: There are two places you could write to inquire about the videos you requested; MPI Home Video, 15824 Rob Roy Drive, Oak Forest, Ill. 60452, or Home Vision, 945 Concord Place, Framingham, Mass. 01701.

Q: I would like to know if Jimmy Wakely is still living. If so where does he live and what is he doing? I remember he used to sing with Margaret Whiting.
—Joseph Bay, Painted Post, N.Y.

A: Country and western singer Jimmy Wakely died in 1982 at the age of 68. He and his wife, Inez, married in 1936, were living in their home in the San Fernando Valley at the time of his death.
Please send your questions about television past and present to: Polly Vonetes, TV Pipeline, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, Texas 76102-0748.

CABLE OVERVIEW

Cable specials confront homeless problem head-on

By Shelia Odak

According to a recent poll, homelessness is the No. 1 social issue in the country. This week that issue will be addressed by the entertainment industry during two specials designed to raise money and awareness for that cause.

On Sunday, May 6, Showtime presents The Roy Orbison Tribute Concert. This program is, of course, a star-studded tribute to the legendary singer/songwriter, but it is also a benefit concert for the homeless. Viewers can dial a toll-free number and make contributions to the Roy Orbison Homeless Fund. The proceeds will be distributed to homeless coalitions throughout the country.

Dean Stockwell (Blue Velvet and NBC's Quantum Leap) hosts the event, which features performances and appearances by some of the top names in entertainment. Among those featured are k.d. lang, Patrick Swayze, B.B. King, Pete Townshend, Ricky Skaggs, Johnny Cash, and Dwight Yoakum.

Also on Saturday, HBO will go live for four hours to present Comic Relief '90. This is the fourth such program to air and all proceeds go to the non-profit Comic Relief organization.

Billy Crystal, Whoopi Goldberg and Robin Williams host this night of laughs, which features performances from the comedic minds of Louie Anderson, Bob Goldthwait, Richard Lewis, Paula Poundstone, Rita Rudner, Bob Saget, Steven Wright and Robert Wuhl. Between the stand-up routines and skits will be footage from needy cases who could be helped by the donations received.

All of the comedians involved donate their time to this project, and HBO itself is assuming all of the production costs, thus ensuring that the money raised will indeed go to those who need it.

To date, the profit from the first three Comic Relief shows and the money gathered by the organization's year-round efforts, has totaled nearly $9 million and has been funneled to the homeless in 23 cities.

"When I first approached people with the idea several years ago," recalls Bob Zmuda, who co-created the show and the fund, "some doubted we could get comedians to work together, even for a half-hour benefit. Now we're looking at a four-hour event, and comedians come to us. Doing Comic Relief has become sort of a high water mark, a very prestigious event for the performers."

Zmuda also states that as important as is the raising of funds, it is just as important to raise awareness. "Homeless people are people, just like us. They're not statistics," he affirms.

Those wishing to contribute to the Comic Relief organization either on May 12 or anytime during the year may call toll free 1-800-528-1000.

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MINE Pursuant to Application Number 836-0117 Am. #3

1988 EDITION GENERAL HIGHWAY MAP FLOYD COUNTY KENTUCKY

0 1 2 MILE

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that Coal Mac, Inc., P.O. Box 3428, Pikeville, Kentucky 41501, has filed an application for an amendment to an existing surface coal mining and reclamation operation. The amendment proposes to add an additional 38.2 surface acres and will underlie an additional 17.1 acres for a total proposed permit acreage of 611.9 acres, located 2.5 miles north of Galveston in Floyd County.

The proposed amendment is approximately 3.5 miles south from KY 979's junction with Branham Creek Road and located 0.1 miles east of Branham Creek. The latitude is 37° 27' 15". The longitude is 82° 37' 33". The surface area to be disturbed and the surface area overlying the underground mining and augering is shown on the included map.

The proposed amendment is located on the McDowell and Pikeville U.S.G.S. 7-1/2 minute quadrangle map. The operation will use the contour strip, area mining, auger and deep mining method of mining. The operation affects an area within 100 feet of Keathley Branch Road. The operation will not involve relocation of the public road.

This amendment proposes to add 38.2 acres of mining and associated structures and 17.1 acres of augering on the Firclay, Elkhorn No. 1, 2 and 3 coal seams.

The amendment application has been filed for public inspection at the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Prestonsburg Regional Office, 503 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653.
