Rain for weekend

This seems to be getting redundant. Rainy weekends and nice workdays are more than a good natured person can stand.

Friday looks partly sunny, high in mid 70s. Friday night will be mild with 30 percent chance of thunderstorms, low in lower 60s.

Saturday, mostly cloudy, and just in time for the lawn chair a 50 percent chance of scattered thunderstorms, high around 80. Saturday night, another chance of thunderstorms low 55-60.

Sunday, still another chance of thunderstorms, highs in 70s, lows in upper 50s to lower 60s. Monday and Tuesday, partly sunny, no chance of rain, highs of 70s, lows 55-65.

New radio show coming to town

This Sunday will mark the beginning of a new type of radio show. Modelled after old-type radio programming, WQHY of Prestonsburg will broadcast "Comedyline" at 10 p.m.

Comedyline broadcasts from GreatScott Studios in Hollywood, Calif., with a live audience of comedy and broadcasting fans. Host Tawn and house musician Johnny Redgate provide the vibe and the beat alongside each week's guest comedian. Interview style conversation, interspersed with Stand-Up fill this FM radio hour.

Comedyline has an 800 number in studio (1-800/3-COMEDY), which avails the guest host to listener commentary and questions. Each week one of the Comedyline's callers will be given a trip package for two, on TWA to a comedy event somewhere in the world. This week features comedians Jeff Cesario and Jeff MacGregor, two Midwestern comedians, now based in Los Angeles.

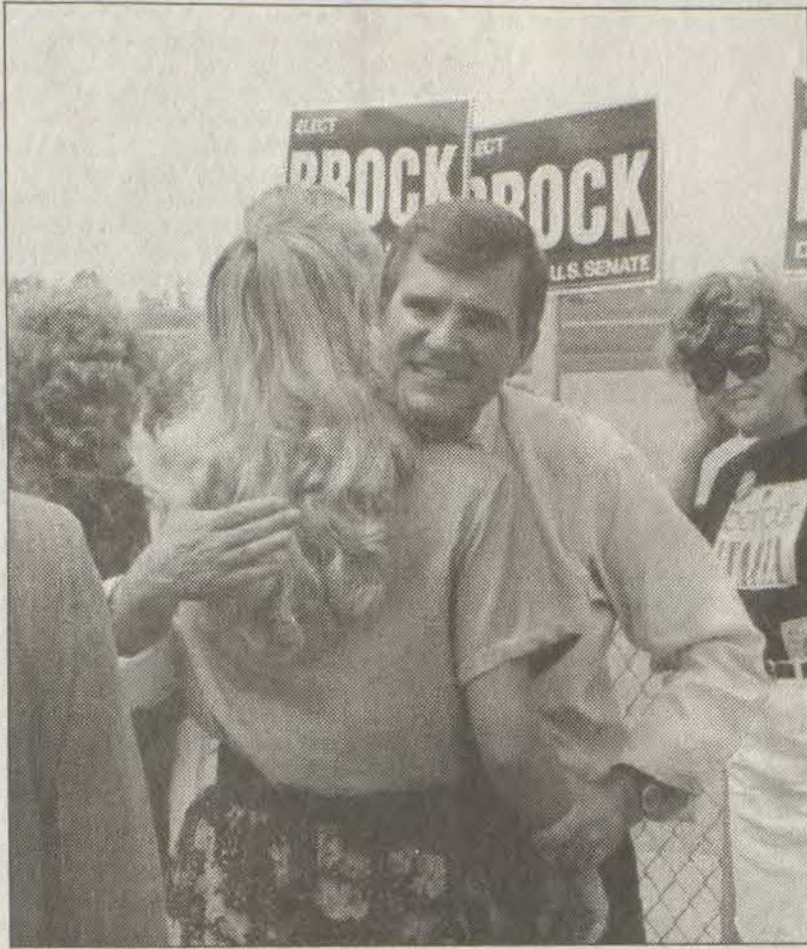

Clarification

In the police report in Wednesday's paper, Elmer Crum was listed as the driver of a vehicle involved in a hit a run; actually it was Crum's 16-year-old son.

Happy Memorial Day

Brock blows in

John Brock, candidate on the Democratic ticket for US Senate, flew into the Pikeville airport yesterday to speak to his supporters in an attempt to rally support for Tuesday's primary election. Brock spoke to a crowd of about 50 people about his candidacy for the Senate seat held by Mitch McConnell. He said that everything was "fine" on the campaign trail despite Gov. Wallace Wilkinson's recent decision not to stump for Brock.

Coal Camp Kids: Memorial Day

Dying in a Kentucky coal camp

Excerpted from Barbara Ford Ritch's new book, COAL CAMP KIDS—Coming Up Hard and Making It. Ritch, a Wayland native, now resides in Rabun Gap, Ga.
(Editor's note: Though not in sequence, this chapter of Ritch's book takes a look at funerals in the East Kentucky coal camps and seems fitting just before the Memorial Day holiday. The second part of this chapter will run in The Times on Wednesday.)

Most of us coal camp kids, born in the southeastern Kentucky coal camps between 1912 and 1950, entered the world in a company-owned house, in a company-built town, seldom with the aid of a company-contracted doctor, to a father who was paid with company-coined scrip, and, as the song says, our parents "owed their souls to the company store."

Our families' most basic needs came from the company store, and that included velour flocked caskets. Some companies had a burial fund, paid into by the miners, and doled out when needed, and the bereaved had a choice of a company stocked casket or the money for materials to fashion a homemade coffin.

Rarely, Patty Hicks Wilker, a coal camp kid residing in Ada, Okla., said, were a mother and child lost in delivery and 99 percent were home deliveries. Most of the deaths Patty recalled were not of natural causes (other than old age), but were traumatic deaths—murder, car wrecks, and especially mining accidents.

Delores Woody, a Wheelwright resident, was walking with her mother and they passed a home where a funeral was being held. "They had this homemade coffin, sort of standing or propped up, and in that coffin was the mother with her baby in her arms. Evidently mother and infant died in childbirth.

Jury rejects settlement in collision case

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing Writer
A Floyd Circuit Court jury Wednesday turned down a request in a lawsuit seeking a $5 million settlement on behalf of a Betsy Layne man who was critically injured in a 1987 collision between a Ford Pinto and a gravel-laden tractor-trailer truck on US 23.

The lawsuit was filed by Bertha Cole of Ashland, on behalf of her brother Oliver Ircks who has remained in a coma as a result of injuries sustained in the accident.

Cole, represented by Ashland attorney Roger Hall and Prestonsburg attorney Ned Pillersdorf, sought the payment of her brother's ongoing medical bills and damages for pain and suffering.

Pikeville attorney James Todd represented the truck driver Keenan Robinson and his employer B&P Trucking.

According to trial testimony, on the morning of Dec. 9, 1987, Ircks left his home to pick up a relative who needed a ride to the dentist's office.

On the same morning, court testimony revealed, Robinson, now 30 years old, had already delivered one

Casting the ballot Tuesday

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor
Although there are no city or county races in Tuesday's election, it remains an important decision for the people of Floyd County.

Next week they will be asked to determine who the Democratic and Republican candidates will be in the US Senate, US House of Representatives and State House of Representatives—three of the many offices which largely affect conditions in Floyd County and Eastern Kentucky.

Those vying for the position of US Senator from Kentucky will be Tommy Klein and incumbent Mitch McConnell on the Republican ticket, and John Brock and Harvey Sloane from the Democratic side.

Candidates for US Representative, 7th Congressional District, are Republicans Larry Leslie and Will Scott and Democrats Jerry Cecil and incumbent Chris Perkins.

Floyd County, lying within two State Representative Districts, sees no Republicans competing for these slots. The Democratic candidates for the 95th District of the state are Edward Patton Jr. and incumbent Gregory D. Stumbo. Those for the 92nd District are incumbent Russell Bentley and Bobby Ray Hicks.

Fires:

Who is protected, who isn't?

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

More and more often people hear or read about a family whose home was destroyed by fire as members of the local fire department stood by and took no action.

Quite often, the fact surfaces that more than one fire department was called to the scene, with the second unit informing the homeowner that it cannot be of assistance. The question that inevitably follows these stories is "How could such a thing happen?"

With 15 volunteer fire departments and the Prestonsburg Fire Department in the area, some confusion has arisen as to just whose district many Floyd County homes lie in. And, more importantly, if a home is on fire, will a department respond?

Specific incidents in the recent past are two fires near West Prestonsburg and a fire in New Allen at Eveready Contracting Co. Each resident said he or she had called one or more departments before receiving a response or being told they did not have a subscription and therefore were not serviced.

Glenn Vaughan of the Middle Creek Volunteer Fire Department said his unit was unable to respond to the May 18 fire in West Prestonsburg because it was out of the department's district.

"If we had the second truck we could have responded to Donnie Shepherd's fire in West Prestonsburg since we do have the personnel to fight (out-of-district) fires and still protect our own," Vaughan said.

"If the county would provide us with a second truck we could provide service to those areas not covered by Prestonsburg and we don't charge a subscription fee because we are volunteers," Vaughan said.

He noted that "as humanitarians" the Middle Creek Fire Department has extended its boundaries in the past to cover residents out of the district, but since the department got its ISO rating, the volunteers have "curtailed that practice."

A subscription refers to the fee charged by city governments on structures lying outside the city limits in order to obtain fire service. Many fire insurance companies will not insure a house without a subscription, unless it lies within a five-mile radius of a volunteer fire department.

In Prestonsburg's case, the subscription fee is $1 per $1000 of assessed property value, with a minimum of $50 per year. The subscription radius is 10 miles out of the city limits, according to Brenda Hayes, city treasurer. However, Mayor Ann Latta says that any church lying within the subscription area is serviced free of charge. Basically that is due to the fact that churches are tax exempt.

Also, Fire Chief Tom Blackburn said that Prestonsburg would sell a subscription to anyone in the surrounding area not covered by another department.

Hayes added that a subscription is also dependent on good access to the residence. For example, if there is a narrow bridge or roadway leading to the home, that residence may not be eligible.

As one Little Paint resident pointed out, even though Prestonsburg would cover that area, with the distance needed to travel to get to Little Paint and Bonanza, the fire department would undoubtedly arrive too late to save much of the structure.

Martin also has a subscription area, but according to Fire Chief Herschel Lester, not many buy the subscription. Lester related a story of a woman who called about a fire, but her subscription was not paid so the department refused to run on it, "but she brought her money down and we went on it," he said.

In that instance, the home was saved but a neighboring shop burned. About seven volunteer fire departments also have a tax on residents

Tempers flare over proposed dry cleaning

by Tim B. Preston
Staff Writer

Dry cleaning of city employees' uniforms became the major topic of discussion at Wednesday night's special meeting of the Prestonsburg City Council.

The meeting, which was scheduled to review the city's budget before its second reading, turned into a heated argument between council members and the chiefs of both the Prestonsburg fire and police departments.

Councilman Billy Ray Collins questioned the need for dry cleaning of police uniforms as proposed in the budget of Police Chief Greg Hall. Hall explained that the officers' uniforms were the type which can only be dry cleaned and said that city officers must currently pay that expense from personal funds.

In response, Collins said, "If you give them a job and a uniform, I think it's silly to pay for their dry cleaning." Collins then asked if there would be a future proposal to cover shoe shine expenses.

Fire Chief Tom Blackburn then informed the council that he felt he had been deceived by the police chief.

Blackburn said that he was told that uniform cleaning expenses would not be proposed in the departmental budgets. After about half an hour's debate on the subject, Blackburn expressed his dissatisfaction with the council and left the meeting.

Council members agreed that enough energy had been spent on the subject of cleaning uniforms and amended the budget to allow members of both the fire and police departments an allowance of $20 per employee per month, to be applied to uniform cleaning expenses.

Before calling the meeting to an end, the council did approve a budget for the city of Prestonsburg and Archer Park and accepted a bid of almost $12,000 for a new multi-line phone system for city offices. CompuTel Technologies of Prestonsburg won the contract.

Settling a dispute raised at the last meeting on May 14, council voted to have only one meeting per month during June, July and August.

All members were in attendance. The next meeting is set for Monday, June 11, at 7 p.m. at the Municipal Building.

There Are 8 Million Reasons To Re-Elect Russell Bentley Your State Representative

The 92nd District will receive over 8 million dollars in new educational funds for its school districts as the result of Rep. Russell Bentley and the recent General Assembly. Rep. Bentley worked hard as your state legislator on the educational reform package that will help insure the children of East Kentucky will get the same quality of education as those students in the rest of the state.

4.5 Million Other Reasons

Rep. Russell Bentley used his political skills and his ability to work with other legislators to help secure a lodge for Carr Fork Lake with an appropriation of 4.5 million dollars. This will create many jobs for the area as well as improve the quality of life here.

Many Other Reasons

Other projects and accomplishments could be given as reasons to re-elect Rep. Russell Bentley. The best reason to send Russell Bentley back to Frankfort, however, is that he is a good legislator.

Here's some of our reasons for praising Rep. Bentley as a legislator.

* Rep. Bentley has worked hard as your legislator. He worked hard to find out what the people of this district wanted. He did so by questionnaires and visiting citizens — either at meetings or alongside the roadways. Rep. Bentley took this same energy and work effort to Frankfort as he represented our interests.

* Rep. Bentley made a good impression on fellow legislators and in the media. The degree of respect earned by Rep. Bentley is illustrated by the endorsement of House Speaker Don Blanaford, House Majority Whip Kenny Rapier, and House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo. Other endorsements include Kentucky Education Association (KEA), Knott, Letcher and Floyd County Teacher Associations, AFL-CIO, Kentucky Medical Association, and Kentucky Realtors Association.

* Rep. Bentley has obtained valuable experience and made important contacts that he can use this next term to even better represent the 92nd District. The 92nd District has a lot invested in Russell Bentley and it is in our best interest to re-elect him so he can continue his work. The key to power and influence in the state legislature is having a legislator who understands the process, has seniority, and has the respect of his fellow legislators. The 92nd District's influence in the legislature will increase by re-electing Russell Bentley.

"Leadership... the choice is clear"

A Personal Message from Gregory D. Stumbo

Friends,

In the past we have seen candidates for public office who have resorted to "mudslinging" and "lies" in the closing days of elections. These candidates are usually desperate and their campaigns lack vision and support.

This election is no different. I have traveled throughout the 95th District since my return from Frankfort and I cannot begin to tell you how much I appreciate the support you have shown. In 1979, I asked you to elect me to represent you in Frankfort. I made no wild promises - only that I would do the best job I could with the talent God had granted me, and that I would never lie to you, nor abuse your trust.

My first battle in Frankfort was to end the abuses of the "Broadform" deed, a plague upon our region for nearly 100 years. The victory in that fight was that the people of Kentucky overwhelmingly adopted a Constitutional Amendment that puts this issue to rest.

In 1985, my colleagues honored me by electing me Majority Floor Leader in the Kentucky House of Representatives, the youngest so elected in the nation and the highest ranking Eastern Kentuckian since Governor Bert Combs. We immediately set in motion a comprehensive plan to:

- 1) Improve our Roads
- 2) Bring Equity to our Educational System
- 3) Create New Jobs

I am proud to report that the plan is working. The dreams of new roads to open all areas of our county are now a reality. U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville will begin this summer and the first leg of the Garrett to Harold road is funded in this year.

In 1986, I sponsored a bill that has doubled the amount of maintenance money for our State and County Roads. For over 50 years our roads have been neglected, but now we have a renovation and rehabilitation plan in place. Route 979 (Mud Creek) and KY 122 (Left Beaver) are not only being resurfaced, but passing lanes are to be added and dangerous curves removed. I initiated that plan and I intend to see it expanded to cover all our roads, particularly Prater Creek, Little Mud, and Spurlock.

"We have paid enough in severance tax to pave our roads in gold," I told Speaker Blandford. In this year the people of our county will travel over the best road system we've ever had, but it isn't nearly good enough. I want to continue to fight for you in Frankfort to get the money that we deserve to repair, maintain and upgrade our roads.

The 1990 Education Reform Act (which I sponsored) will give to all our children an equal educational opportunity. In 1985, I sponsored legislation that authorized the building of our new schools. If you look around you will see new facilities being constructed in Left Beaver, Allen and Prestonsburg. We will receive more than 30 million dollars for construction including a new grade school for Betsy Layne. New middle schools are authorized for each of our school districts and renovation work for Osborne, Stumbo, and Prestonsburg.

I believe everyone is entitled to a job. That's plain and simple. In 1988 I supported the bill that has led to the creation of over 300 new jobs in our area. In 1990, I sponsored the EAST KENTUCKY JOBS CREATION AUTHORITY ACT which has been called "the salvation of the mountains."

As this campaign comes to an end, I will continue to discuss the issues - roads, education, jobs - and my plans for improvement. I believe that you know me and my family and what we have stood for in public office. We have never betrayed your trust and confidence. We have been your neighbors and friends for many years, helping when you called, responding when you needed us, and doing all that we could to accommodate you.

I am proud of the fact that all our campaigns have been positive and clean. We have never tried to mislead or misrepresent issues in an attempt to get your vote. We respect you more than that!

I don't pretend that all our problems have been solved. If they were, I would not ask you to send me back to Frankfort. You have seen me stand up for you in these past ten years, and now we are winning more battles. I offer you a clear choice: experience, leadership and a proven record of accomplishment.

I sought this office because of a dream that people here in the mountains could have a better quality of life. My opponent criticizes this dream and indicates he is against the plan I have outlined for roads, education and jobs. President Lyndon Johnson once said, "Any fool mule can kick a barn door down, but you'll never see one who can hold a hammer."

When you go to vote on May 29th, I'm asking for your support as evidence of an endorsement that the plan is working. If you believe that my dreams, vision and leadership have made our county a better place to live, then please cast your vote to re-elect me.

If you have trouble recognizing the candidates in this race, remember: I'M THE ONE WITH THE HAMMER!
Your vote and support on May 29th will be greatly appreciated.

Thanks,

Gregory D. Stumbo

So, for now, just go ahead and read Tom's letter and then get back to me.

That done, here's my response. Surprise, Tom, I agree with just about everything you write — although your tone is the same one that causes me to offend people sometimes, even when I don't intend to.

I do believe that we essentially get the government we deserve. We vote it in — even when we don't vote. We tolerate the incompetency or the inefficiency. On the other hand, we don't always applaud those who we believe are doing a good job.

I do believe this newspaper and other media have a responsibility "to cut through the hoopla."

And, yes, the fact that a political ad is "stupid or mindless" is not grounds for refusing to run it or to take the advertiser's money. We do draw the line on libelous and totally distasteful ads, but not those that are "stupid or mindless." As noble as any medium may profess to be, the advertising dollar pays the bills. (In a good situation — which I believe The Times is in — advertising does not dictate editorial policy.) I trust, however, that we do not spend too much editorial space on statements that are stupid or mindless, although that's subject to interpretation.

Where we differ is in your use of a tiny word: "the." You state that "newspapers and . . . public media are the way in which voters become educated as to public issues and candidates." I accept that the media have an awesome responsibility in this realm. But I will not accept that we bear the burden of responsibility for how you and other voters think and act. We are "a" way voters can become educated; we are not "the" way.

I will not lift the burden from the individual voter in that respect. Each of us has a responsibility to become as informed as possible about a candidate. Coverage of a candidate, research into his or her background and, to some extent, editorial opinions should be offered by the media — they are one way the voter gets information. But any voter who assesses a candidate solely on what is reported about the candidate in the media is not an informed voter.

Each voter shares a responsibility to write or call the candidate personally and to attend rallies, meet-the-candidate gatherings and so-called press conferences. Otherwise, the voter is allowing me or another writer totally to shape his or her opinion. And, frankly, my biases can come through in a story often without the reader knowing it.

For instance, in a 30-minute, meaty, gutsy speech by a candidate, a reporter may choose four or five sentences that give very little insight into the candidate. If you or any other voter had been there, you may have received quite a different impression.

That's not to say that the reporter set out intentionally to give a biased account, but the reporter may do it simply because he or she is a human being and is susceptible to the same foibles as any other mortals.

A case in point is a recent set of articles in a major state paper. In two stories, a kind of comparison was made of two candidates for a significant regional office. One candidate was painted as having lived a kind of Horatio Alger life, succeeding personally against a background of deprivation. The article focused on his contributions in terms of career and family and on his fresh and enlightened approach to governmental problems.

In the article about the other candidate, the reader was treated to a reshaping of all the spiciest parts of the candidate's personal life. Very little was said about his ideas or professional accomplishments.

Both articles were informative to readers and dealt basically with provable facts. But they were decidedly slanted and, whether intentional or not, they clearly showed a bias on the part of the reporters and the newspaper. A reader who considered himself informed after reading the two articles would be sadly deluded.

I hope I can follow this to a logical conclusion — something that is not as easy to do in a stolen half hour or so as it is when one's life is less pressured.

If I were to write an open letter to Eastern Europeans, I'd say something like this:

Be deserving of and greedy about the democracy you have won. Take on the responsibility of your new found rights. Be responsible for keeping yourself informed about political issues, political candidates and political leaders. Don't expect your neighbor or your boss or your in-laws or your minister or your media to provide all your information for making your decisions or to spoon-feed you your opinions. Yes, do take all those views into consideration, but use them only as a starting point to research the data yourself and to sift through all the hoopla.

Go to meetings where public issues are being discussed. Don't follow the American example where citizens opt to read media coverage of school board meetings, council meetings and fiscal court meetings rather than to be there when those meetings are going on.

Think hard about what you value in candidates or leaders, assess their performance and quiz them yourself about the issues. Don't leave the questions up to someone else. Go to the places where candidates will be politicking, call them at work or at home, and speak up. If they hide from you or if they refer you to a prepared release or a newspaper item, doesn't that tell you something about them already?

Don't be taken in by the superficial staging. Be suspicious of anyone who purports to be Mr. Patriotism amid a thousand waving flags. Be suspicious of anyone who measures every word for how it will appear on a 15-second TV or radio broadcast or in the first paragraph of a newspaper story. Be suspicious of those who seek to divide rather than to unite. Be suspicious of anyone who has easy answers to major problems; they may be what you want to hear, but in today's complex world there are no simple solutions. Be suspicious of those who try to ferret out what you want to hear and then say it.

Beyond that, find out who's backing a candidate and what they have to gain if that candidate wins. Check out who's putting up their money for a candidate's campaign and what the giver has to gain. Also, look at the caliber of the assistants (or flunkies, if you prefer) who are working with a candidate. They have a great deal to do with what the candidate believes and how the candidate responds to issues and constituents. In some cases, they constitute the candidate.

Above all, vote. Don't adopt that damaging Eastern Kentucky syndrome of "it don't matter." By not going to the polls and casting your ballot, you're still voting. You're still making a choice that can determine whether you have good government or bad.

This conclusion, long in its wending path, isn't easy. It puts the onus on the individual citizen voter. It doesn't take the onus off the media, but it does put it on the individual where it belongs. This conclusion requires you to participate in your government. It requires you to rely on your own brain and your own resources, rather than base your opinion on the 11 o'clock news or today's paper. It also requires that you share the blame when the wrong choices are made.

So, Tom, this may not fulfill your requirements for logic and daring. But it uses up just about all the energy and thought that, given my limitations, I can spare right now.

Letters

Disturbed by column

Dear Editor,
I found your "Postscript," published in the May 18, 1990, issue of The Times, disturbing because you failed to follow your thought to its logical conclusion. One of your stated heroes — former President Jimmy Carter — noted that the American people should have a government as good as they are. We do. Democracy allows people to choose, for better or for worse, their political leaders.

Newspapers and other forms of public media are the way in which voters become educated as to public issues and candidates. No candidate can force a newspaper to cover a staged media event. I have never read of a newspaper refusing to print a political ad because it was stupid or mindless.

Politicians are as good as we force them to be. The public has a responsibility to demand accountability from their elected representatives. The press has a responsibility to cut through the hoopla and to discover where various candidates stand on the important issues of the day. Unfortunately, being a responsible citizen is hard work and covering hoopla is easier than cornering political creatures and forcing them to take a stand.
Ms. Shingler, I recommend that you write an open letter to the peoples of Eastern Europe and warn them about the perils of democracy before it is too late. Maybe Stalin wasn't so bad after all. He helped to make the Soviet people into great athletes and no one was forced to have an opinion about public issues.

Praises young people

Dear Editor,
There are times when we hear so many negative stories about young people. However, I would like to share some positive feelings about high school students and teachers from across the Tri-State area who were recently in Washington to participate in the Close Up Foundation government studies program.

For a full week the approximately 237 participants from the Tri-State Area had the opportunity to visit Washington to develop a better understanding of our democratic process. While here, they saw and questioned Congressional proceedings, journalists and government experts and shared their views with students from other areas of the country.

They returned home with a deeper awareness of their responsibilities as citizens and the realization that a single individual can make a difference. Their enthusiasm for involvement in the democratic process is to be admired.

The experience in Washington was possible only through the strong support of their parents, teachers and schools. Also various companies and organizations helped make Close Up fellowships available to students in economic need. These sponsors include Bell Atlantic Charitable Foundation, Burger King Corp., Martha Holden Jennings Foundation, MAPCO Inc., and RJR Nabisco.

All those who helped make the opportunity a reality deserve special recognition.

Author responds

Dear Editor,
In response of Julianne Rider's letter (FCT May 16), the author of Coal Camp Kids wishes it understood at the outset: Paul R. Jordan edited the book, not parts 1 through 8 of Chapter One as it has been appearing in the Floyd County Times. I feel Ms. Rider owes Mr. Jordan an apology, but I do not feel the Times editor had need of making apologies for the author, who quoted Mr. Harry Goodin and other coal camp kids, nor Mr. Jordan, so unjustly accused by Ms. Rider.

It is abundantly clear Ms. Rider does not possess a dictionary — of any kind — whereby she could have differentiated between obscenity, profanity and slang. Once used as a profane oath, invoking God's curse, the word, "gawddamn," since WWII has been accepted into every day usage as a general exclamation and falls into the category of slang, and being written in lower case letters indicates it is slang with no irreverence intended. This word, "gawddamn," was overheard by the author and her research assistant in Jerry's Restaurant, the Jenny Wiley Lodge Dining Room, on the grounds of Prestonsburg Community College, and at the local gas stations.

For the purpose of increasing Ms. Rider's clearly skimpy erudition, please publish the definitions of:

Profanity: Abusive, vulgar or irreverent language specifically showing contempt or irreverence toward God or sacred things, the most general describing abusive disrespect of a sacred name by word or deed, and such profanities are capitalized to indicate deliberate disrespect;

Obscenity: The character of being obscene, inciting lustful feelings, indecent, lewd; example, the four-letter Anglo-Saxon word much favored by black and white comedians and Hollywood directors, and the one word that assures movies the coveted "R" Rating. Obscenity refers to those things which incite feelings of lust, passion and intense, unnatural desires.

It is distressing to think Ms. Rider's life is so empty and idle that she spends her time in self-proclaimed censorship by scanning printed data for "filth," as stated in her letter, "There is an overabundance of filth in print already..." It is further distressing to think her wits have failed, if she read parts 1 through 8, and she has been unable to savor the unique history in the coal camps as we lived it, but the most appalling of all is that Ms. Rider (lacking a dictionary and history books), is seemingly ignorant of our Constitution which gives us free speech, choice of expression and freedom of the press.

For the majority of Floyd County, and the readers of the FCT, the author and Mr. Jordan wish to thank them for their enthusiastic support, good wishes and continued reservations for the first edition of "Coal Camp Kids — Coming Up Hard and Making It" — a work slated to sit upon library shelves nationwide; a work scheduled for foreign language printings; a work reviewed and described by a Harvard University professor as "a piece of American history that is unique, too long overlooked, and very worthwhile..."

Our act — Coal Camp Kids — Coming Up Hard And Making It — was never fouled and had no need of "cleaning up," and we apologize to the Times for being subjected to the "obscenity" of Ms. Rider's letter.

Sincerely,
Barbara Ford Ritch, author

How many of you guys out there saw Wednesday night's movie, "How to Kill a Millionaire?"

It was pretty cute, I thought. What I found so hilarious was the paranoia Joan Rivers was experiencing and the fact that she believed everything she heard on this talk show she watched mornings and evenings. You know, like Oprah.

All the syndromes discussed in this talk show either she experienced or knew someone who did.

Boy, could I relate. When I was home watching the tube, I idealized Oprah. My husband would yell from the bedroom downstairs, "Spouse! What did Oprah tell you to do with my socks!"

I felt as though I was beginning to be some kind of real analyst with all the knowledge I was learning from this woman and her guests.

Why, if anybody, and I do mean anybody, had a turmoil in their life, I had either seen or heard about it on Oprah.

What I'd give to some day write a book. Not just any book mind you, but a best seller, and have you guys tune in on any given day and there I'd be — Special Guest on the Oprah Winfrey Show.

Oh well, I can dream, can't I? My friends who are at home now, say of Sally Jesse Rafael is good too. Like, if Oprah doesn't discuss it, she will. I can't really say; being here at work from 7:40 a.m. to who knows when, I miss them both.

Oh my, I've got to get me some video tapes and record Oprah. I miss her! And, by the way, if anybody out there knows what's happening on Days, Another World, and Santa Barbara, fill me in. I hear that hunk Bo has returned to Salem. Till next week, enjoy the Memorial Day weekend and vote Tuesday.

Coal Camp Kids

"doctor" diagnosed as "summer complaint," diarrhea so severe it dehydrated her small body, leading to her untimely, and senseless, death.

Several mentioned Cooley's Drugstore in Wayland, but I have no memory of it. As far as I know, we had no drugstore there in the mid-30's to run to for life saving fluids, and, like the company doctor, paregoric was not readily available and, like the company "doctor," not quickly located.

The first funeral I remember was Rosemarie's. Her casket was very small, of course, and it was snow white. It was lined with tufted silk or rayon and her head rested upon a small pillow Mommie had made. I do not recall a lot of pallbearers for her funeral, only that when she was buried we all crossed a swinging bridge single file, her tiny casket in the forefront. The swinging bridge at that time was the only way to the Martin Cemetery.

Friends gathered close about Mommie and Daddy for surely the death of an infant or young child has to be the most sorrowful of all. Until her death, Mommie could never speak of Rosemarie without bitter tears. She was the prettiest baby Mommie and Daddy had. I often heard it said in my childhood, "God takes only the very young, because they are innocent, and He takes the very old, because they are tired and ready to go Home."

Maybe so. The first wake I remember was in a three-room shotgun house, up on stilts, in that area near the ball park known as "the bottoms." Mommie and Daddy took us children from Shop Fork, down through Wayland where we climbed steps in order to cross a swinging bridge to reach the house of the departed. I do not recall who it was that died, only that she was very, very old.

She was laid out upon a single bed in the front room. Her hair was snow white, as snowy white as the collar and cuffs adorning her clean, crisply starched cotton dress. Her hands were folded and resting atop her midriff. Had it not been for the silver dollars on her closed eyes, I would have thought she was asleep. This was the only time I ever saw a dead person not in a casket. I do not recall the lady's funeral nor seeing a coffin, but many people made caskets for their dead and that may have been so in her case.

So many deaths were, as Patty said, traumatic. Edmund Castle was in the Army but came home for the funeral service of Billie Reece Meadows, his six-year-old niece. And his sister, Florence Castle Ison, recalled the tragedy.

Billie Reece and Louise Kirk Hammond were dear little friends. Louise was just five, not old enough to go to school, but she would slip off from home to come anyway, just to be with Billie Reece. It was the Friday before Christmas 1945 and each class had had their Christmas parties at the school and the children were on their way home with their Christmas treats. Billie Reece and Louise Kirk were walking along, Florence said, singing Jesus Loves Me. It had snowed nearly all day and the main road up through Wayland was slick.

A soldier boy, home for the holidays, was driving down the road and the car went into a skid, out of control. It struck the two little girls, killing them both. They were buried on Christmas Day. It was often said (many coal camp kids remember this tragedy), Wayland would never have another Christmas as sad nor as heart-breaking as that one. Louise Kirk's father was Superintendent at Elk Horn Coal Company and, at that time, Billie Reece's father was manager of the company store.

Mommie used to say, "God never closes a door, but what He opens a window for you."

Edmund Castle and Betty Ann Brooks were sweethearts all during high school. Having graduated during the Depression years, Edmund was unable to go to college, so he joined the Army. He did not see Betty until seven years later, when he came home for Billie Reece's funeral. After the funeral, Edmund decided to see if he could find Betty Ann. He did. She was working in a children's hospital in North Carolina. He went there and they were married immediately and they lived happily ever after — until the day Edmund died of a heart attack.

Diagnostic errors, when viewed through the long tunnel of time, were also more frequent than any of us children realized at the time. The only funeral Shirley Matthews ever went to was that of her Aunt Gladys Hampton, Superintendent John Hampton's wife.

"Aunt Gladys was treated many years for high blood pressure. I think now they were giving her the wrong medication, giving her medicine for low blood pressure, because she had another stroke and died, very quickly."

"At her death, Aunt Gladys was only 39 years old. I remember when my Mom came home and told me and I remember going up to her house to see her. She was laid out in the front room and Mom got me as far as the kitchen, but I never got in as far as to see Aunt Gladys. I guess I thought if I didn't go in to see her, then it wouldn't be so. I just sat in the kitchen and cried and I didn't go to where they buried her. People came in all day and they brought food."

Ann Webb Francis recalled, "People in the camps really cared for each other. When anyone had a death in the family, friends and neighbors would sit up all night and there was so much food brought in (even in hard times) — It was like everyone in town was related."

Deaths, in that time and place, Jack Rollins said, seemed unusually hard. "They still appear hard for me, even though I later went into the funeral business and worked at it on and off for 15 years. I have a sister and two brothers buried in the Martin Branch Cemetery; my paternal grandfather and his grandmother are buried in the Martin Cemetery at Wayland. Many of us have family buried there," Jack continued, "and I'm glad they are remembered on Decoration Day, but it saddens me to see the lack of care given so many of these cemeteries because those who cared have either moved away or died, and there is no one left to care."

I remember the death and funeral of Burnis Martin. He was, Hamp Rollins said, a young man when he was killed. Burnis fell between two moving coal gondolas and was run over. He died almost immediately, leaving a family behind. His casket, too, was carried across the swinging bridge to the graveyard and every miner attended Burnis' funeral.

Elk Horn Coal Company had a burial fund. The miners paid into it and the company held the money, but the cooperation contributed nothing toward the burials.

Except for Garrett, all Elk Horn coal camps had a casket shed. "Garrett didn't have one," Ruben Lafferty said, "cause there was an undertaker down at Martin. A lot of families, though, took care of their own dead and families made their own coffins. It was made according to the size of the departed, and they lined it with cotton, then tacked in white sheeting."

They had a casket shed at Glo, Helen Samons Wallace recalled, and those caskets were sprayed on velvet, the lids were flat. The shed, Helen said, was located across from the tippie and, "Passing it, we kids would be scared to death."

Helen's aunt, Mae Gray, also lived at Glo and, Mae related, "When a person died, you went to the company store and you paid the paymaster for the coffin, then you went to the casket shed and picked out the one you wanted."

Though there was a burial fund, it is unclear if the money was withdrawn from the miner's account and then given the paymaster or if Mae's husband had not paid into it.

Mr. Lafferty said, "Yeah, they had a burial fund. It only paid $10 for a kid and $25 for a grown-up. My little boy died and I had to have a casket made for him and that $10 was all I got from the burial fund. My uncle made the coffin. The baby died of whooping cough and pneumonia. The $10 covered the cost, you know, it bought the lumber and all. My mother," he continued, "was buried in a homemade coffin; $10 bought the lumber and cotton for a kid's coffin and $25 bought all that was needed to make a coffin for a grown-up. The company, old Elk Horn, had us from the cradle to the grave."

Over in Wheelwright, during the early '20s, burying cost more. Mr. Hilton Garrett said in a Mantrip interview:

"When I first come here, the company sold the caskets. It was a awful cheap way of burying people. They wouldn't embalm them or nothing. They would just go down there and the company would sell them a casket. I think the company used to sell them for $50 back then. We'd take them down here at the cemetery, up at what they call the Graveyard Hollow. They been burying them down there ever since I've been up here. There was some already buried up in here when I came. That's where they buried the folks that died here in Wheelwright. I don't know, I guess you'd call it company land."

I have no memory of vaults and when I mentioned this to Mr. Lafferty he explained there were vaults, but not as we know them today:

The homemade coffin had a lid which was nailed on, and at the graveyard, he explained, the coffin was lowered into a pine box, like today's vaults, and it, too, was homemade. That vault had a lid, but it was not nailed to the top of the homemade vault, instead the lid was placed upon the ground and that determined the size of the grave to be dug. At that point, Jack Rollins explained, the grave was dug straight down, a rectangular hole, for about four or five feet, then the sides were dug toward the middle of the grave.

"Oftentimes," Jack said, "the grave would be deeper than six feet, but where the sides sloped to the middle, I've driven many a timber into the sides so that when the lid was lowered, it rested on those timbers making a platform for the homemade vault. This left an air space below the coffin of two to three feet. That was done to keep water from getting into the vault and the coffin."

Jack and Mr. Lafferty agree that after the grave was dug, the vault lid lowered into place, and then the vault lowered onto the lid, there were always several loose boards of the appropriate size laying on top of the hill of dirt that would cover the grave. After all the services were done, prayers were said, the coffin was lowered into the vault, the nearby loose boards placed on top of the coffin and then the dirt was shoveled into the grave. So, there was a vault and the departed was protected, however humbly, from the frequent torrential rains.

"I remember many funerals at Estill," Frank Music wrote, "and people coming from all over. I didn't know then who they were, but I know now they were Masons. They'd form a line from this fellow's home all the way up through the cow pasture, up to the top of the mountain, they would carry that coffin. The night before they'd run into rock and they'd used dynamite to blast a hole to bury these poor individuals. Those graves are still there, on top of that hill up above Chimney Rock, up above Estill, directly above and south to where High Pockets Mullins used to live."

Nonnie Hoffee's father had stored in his barn pieces of walnuts. His casket, Nonnie wrote, was made of that walnut and Great-uncle Garfield made I.B. Caudill's casket. People expected to see a rustic coffin, and they were surprised, Nonnie said, to see it was beautiful. "I wonder," Nonnie added, "how many caskets Daddy made in his lifetime."

"Pete Garzoni went to the funeral for our last little baby, Chalmer, and I have often wondered what his thoughts were when he heard the Old Regular Baptists preach Chalmer's funeral. Quite a contrast to the Catholic Church and, to the Methodist-Episcopal I was, at that time, attending myself."

Funerals by the Old Regular Baptist Church were quite an affair. Usually, there would be six or seven preachers who would preach at the funeral. It would be, Nonnie said, long and dragged out and this was really hard on the families. The Old Regular Baptists also had what was called memorials — about a year after a person died.

"They often insisted," Nonnie said, "we have a memorial for Daddy and Mother. Mother had gone to Ninth Street Baptist Church for years in Cincinnati and I couldn't see having a memorial. The Ninth Street Baptist Church wasn't at all like what we called the hard shell Baptists."

Eddie Hicks remembered a Mr. Slone who was killed in a slate fall. Mr. Slone lived in Back Street, against the hill close to the railroad tracks. "I was just a young boy," Eddie said, "and went to his house. In those days the body was kept at home with the casket open. To this day, I remember how badly his head was damaged but could see where the undertaker had done as much as possible, really a marvelous job, to ease the pain and sorrow of the family, but we could still see faint black marks around his face where the slate had crushed his skull."

"I realize this sounds morbid, but can you imagine how I felt? A 10-year old boy? Standing there, looking at Mr. Slone and knowing the same thing could happen to my father? Without us kids even realizing it, we led stressful lives for, after attending these funerals, we would think about such accidents happening to our fathers, uncles or even our grandfathers. All my uncles worked in the mines and Uncle Daniel was badly burned years ago."

"In these days, growing up in the coal mining camp, many of the funerals, bad at the best, depending upon the type of church you belonged to, were very emotional. I attended my father's funeral in 1954. I had just been discharged from the Navy and we, Dad's three sons, were grown. That was 35 years ago but the memory is fresh today. What a trying time it was!

"It was trying for all of us. My mother and father belonged to the Regular Baptist Church and, this is in no way to demean the functions of that church, but I was not emotionally equipped to view my father's body for two and a half days in the home and every night having a preacher preach. It wasn't just to say a few kind words about our father, it was preaching and, in a lot of cases, they preached, if you want to see your father again, you boys better get right with the Lord."

"There's nothing wrong with that," Eddie continued, "but we were filled with enough pain and sorrow to begin with, to lose our father at such an early age, so that has always stayed with me. I would say it was a typical coal mining funeral — highly emotional, highly charged, but," Eddie concluded, "that was the way we did things in those days."

Committee passes grad. rate bill

The US House Committee on Education and Labor has unanimously passed a bill introduced by Cong. Chris Perkins that would require all post-secondary institutions eligible to receive federal assistance to disclose to prospective students the graduation/completion rates for their institution.

The amendment was adopted by the committee as part of HR 1454, "The Student Athlete Right to Know Act."

The amendment, which was passed last week by the Subcommittee on Post Secondary Education, has two specific parts. The first requires the disclosure of completion/graduation rates for degree-seeking, full-time students by July 1, 1992. Perkins said that to eliminate confusion, part-time students were removed from the measure. Only full-time students' progress will be monitored.

An interim status report will be due from the schools on July 1, 1991.

The second part of the legislation will require development of definitions and methodologies for the disclosure of the following:

—Graduation/completion rates, broken down by program or field of study;

—Graduation/completion rates, broken down by individual school or academic division within the institution;

—The rate at which graduates of the institution pass the state required tests to be employed in various professions, and —Placement rates.

Who is protected within their districts, including Betsy Layne, Cow Creek, Allen, Left Beaver, Maytown, Garrett, Wayland and David. This tax rate is the same as Prestonsburg's subscription rate.

Volunteer fire departments that only have one vehicle are required to maintain that truck within five miles of the fire house. However, those with multiple trucks, such as Left Beaver, Mud Creek, Wayland and Auxier, are not as limited.

"We're not supposed to go out of our area, but we don't turn anyone down, within reason, because we are volunteers and rely on donations," said Morris Tackett of the Left Beaver department. "We do go out of the area, since we have the men and the trucks left behind to cover our area."

Howard Ferguson of the Auxier department concurred with Tackett's assessment. "We can and have gone outside of the limit if it doesn't leave our area too bare, and we also pull mutual aid with Johnson County," he said.

Most of the fire departments will come out of their district, regardless of the number of vehicles, to do mutual aid runs with neighboring departments.

Wayland firefighter Sam Bentley said, "We go wherever we see fit. When Garrett went in it was a big relief for us because we don't have to go so far, but we've gone as far as Wheelwright and Hindman in the past."

Some district boundaries are unclear, but a good rule of thumb is: If you are within the city limits of a municipality, you are covered. If you lie within a five mile radius of a city limit, you are covered if you purchase a subscription. If you live within five miles of a volunteer fire department, you are covered.

Anyone falling under any other location description should check with the nearest department and find out what it takes to be serviced by them. (See sidebar for list of phone numbers and departments.)

It is best to determine insurance rates and coverage before buying a home, as well. Some insurance companies require proof of protection, such as a subscription, before they will insure a home or business. Others also require an inspection of the locality, to determine any existing fire hazards.

"Most fire insurances provide a $200 fee to the fire department that responds," Vaughan said. This fee serves as a reimbursement and incentive for volunteer firefighters and helps them to get the needed equipment to upgrade their department.

Bentley said, "We are always promised the fire insurance fee, but in the 18 years I've been on the department we haven't seen a nickel of that money."

Although the volunteer fire departments are within the county budget and receive $2000 a year from the county government, they are also eligible for grant money.

Just recently, the Floyd County Firefighters Association, consisting of 10 departments, received a grant for $8000 enabling the purchase of an air tank refilling compressor. The association is reapplying for more funds to buy a vehicle to make the unit mobile.

According to Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, the county has also provided Betsy Layne with $8000 for jaws of life and another $8000 for the Cow Creek department's new truck. In another instance, $10,000 was obtained for a building for the Toler's Creek department two years ago, and for a building at Southeast just recently.

"I think one of the most important things I've done since taking office was installing 500 fire hydrants throughout the county," said Stumbo. "A financial assessment done by the college figured that this, in conjunction with a volunteer fire department, has saved homeowners over $2 million a year."

Tourism tops $16 million

By Michael Rosenberg
 Student Writer

Direct and indirect tourism generated more than $16.3 million in revenue for Floyd County last year and accounted for 529 jobs.

These figures, from a recently released study by the Kentucky Tourism Cabinet, rank Floyd County third in tourism's economic impact in the 15-county Eastern Highlands-North Region. Floyd County followed Boyd, with more than $30 million generated, and Pike, with more than $24 million generated.

The figures are determined by a survey of private hotels, motels, and marinas in the region, as well as actual statistics from state parks, according to the state's Tourism Cabinet.

The negative side of the picture, however, indicates that Floyd County tourism dollars dropped more than $1 million from 1988's figures. According to researchers in the Tourism

In response to the fire tax, Stumbo said "We only do what people want, we don't push it (the tax) either way." Stumbo cited an example of about half of the Middle Creek residents coming out in strong protest against a tax, which was therefore not established.

More and more frequently, the departments are adding equipment and personnel and striving to make Floyd County a safer place to live, but until a more complete system is developed some areas will remain unprotected.

Some of those areas, assessed by this reporter in interviews with firefighters and Judge Stumbo, include the head of Branham's Creek, the head of Big Mud Creek, Bull Creek, Buffalo Creek, beyond the German Bridge, and Blue River. Undoubtedly there are others as well. Stumbo noted that the David Fire Department is looking to purchase a second building to service the Blue River area.

The 911 emergency system may solve some of the questions. According to Stumbo, the 911 system will at least give the county citizens one number to call and then it is up to the dispatcher to alert the proper fire department. This dispatcher will be aided by a computer and have about eight weeks of formal training.

But that system will not be implemented until all the preliminary mapping and organizing are done, which could be up to two years. However, persons now not covered by a department may still not be covered, even if they have 911.

Cable hearings find few gripes

Public hearings held Wednesday to review Prestonsburg's television cable service were largely ignored by the public. The hearings, which were conducted both in the morning and evening, were attended by a total of three subscribers.

During the morning session only one person voiced an opinion. Betty Compton, a Prestonsburg resident, asked that a public access channel be installed for subscribers of Cablevision of Prestonsburg. Compton was informed that such a channel is currently in operation on the cable system.

Only two Prestonsburg citizens were present for the evening session. Mr. and Mrs. C.M. Isaacs voiced concerns over the system's method of granting senior citizen discounts. Isaacs said he was given an application for the discount which asked very specific questions about the financial status of the applicant along with a request to attach copies of tax returns of the previous year.

"There are only two agencies which have any right to ask those questions," said Isaacs, "one being the internal revenue service and the other is the treasurer of the state of Kentucky."

Holding the application for those present to see, Isaacs stated, "This is obnoxious to me."

Isaac's comments were also expressed by at least one member of the Prestonsburg City Council at Tuesday night's meeting.

The public hearings for the cable service are conducted in order to have public input toward local television programming and service. Cablevision of Prestonsburg currently operates on a non-exclusive franchise agreement with the city of Prestonsburg.

In Loving Memory
 Of James Oakley Hall
 June 29, 1989
 As I walk among the flowers that bloom in May,
 My thoughts go back a few years to that very special day.
 On that wonderful day that came none too soon,
 I realized darling our love was in full bloom.
 Like a flower, it grew more beautiful each day,
 There was but one difference, our love will never wither or fade.
 The seasons continue to come and go,
 But thoughts are still of how I love you so.
 I heard somewhere "Blessed are they that walk in love,
 For they also will walk with God above.
 I have a prayer each day, each night,
 That the Lord will turn the dark to light.
 That some wonderful day our unending love,
 Will bloom again in Gods garden above.
 Your Wife,
 Ollie

Cutting the ribbon

Prestonsburg Rotary is #1

Prestonsburg Rotary Club earned the Presidential Citation for being the top club in its Rotary International district, which includes all of Kentucky roughly east of I-75. In addition, Dan Greene, president of the local service club, was designated as a Paul Harris Fellow, the highest honor given to Rotarians and named after the founder of Rotary. Attending the district convention last weekend in Covington were, l-r, Ron LeMaster, President-elect Carla Bolton, Greene, and past-president Greg Crum. Also attending but not pictured was James Carter II. The club earned the top club award on a point system, based on a number of factors including members' service hours to the community. The local club amassed more than 2000 points, five times the number of its closest competitor for the award. (Photo by Pam Shingler) load of gravel to an Adams Construction Co. site. His testimony indicated that he had returned the 1986 Mack truck, belonging to B&P Trucking, to Adams Stone quarry for another load. He was carrying his second load of gravel when he pulled onto US 23 behind Oliver Ircks' car.

Collision

The truck reportedly followed the car, traveling at about the same speed for less than a mile. During testimony, Robinson said he believed he was following the car at a distance equal to only one or two car lengths. Robinson testified that he saw the brake lights of Ircks' Pinto flash on. Assuming that Ircks was going to slow down, he began to steer the truck into the left lane. Unexplainably, Ircks suddenly lost control of his car and skidded into a collision with Robinson's truck.

The Pinto, spun around by the force of the collision with the truck, skidded to a stop several feet down the road. The collision forced the truck over the median. As it skidded to a stop, the trailer overturned spilling about 40 tons of gravel. The cab of the truck remained upright, sparing injury to Robinson. Both vehicles came to rest nearly 345 feet from the point of impact.

Testimony in the trial provided an extensive amount of information for the jurors to consider. Hall and Pillersdorf focused their arguments on Ircks' condition as a result of his injuries. Todd focused his defense on the actual collision.

In opening statements, defense counsel Todd said, "We make no concession of responsibility in the accident." The defense argued that "the plaintiff lost control of his car. When this happened the defendant simply tried to avoid hitting the car."

Also in his opening remarks, Todd told the jury that Ircks was a man "asleep, without pain, who does not know anyone."

Cole's attorneys disagreed with Todd's defense. "What is important?" Hall asked the jury. "What is important is not why the accident happened, but rather the consequences of that accident." In his arguments Hall described Ircks as "a man trapped inside his own body."

Hall and Pillersdorf presented extensive testimony that Ircks was "very much in pain."

Counsel for the plaintiff called Bertha Cole as the first witness. Cole, who kept vigil over her brother while he was in the hospital, said Ircks required brain surgery to treat his injuries. She said he was moved to the Mountain Manor Nursing Home in Pike County after a 33-day hospital stay.

In a calm, steady voice, Cole described her visits to her brother. "I shave him, bathe him, and check him for bed sores," she explained.

Cole corroborated her attorney's description of Ircks' condition. "Sometimes, when I clip his toe nails and finger nails, I nick him with the clippers."

"Does he respond?" asked Hall. "Oh, yes, he pulls away if I nick him," Cole replied.

In further testimony, Cole described her brother as "very much aware of my presence when I visit him." She explained that "if he is asleep when I enter his room, I'll speak to him, tell him I'm there, and he opens his eyes and listens."

Cole continued, "Sometimes I hold his hand while I talk to him, and he will squeeze it so hard I have to ask him to let go."

Keenan Robinson testified that he had worked for B&P Trucking for three years. Like most truck drivers in Eastern Kentucky, he is paid a percentage of the weight delivered, he said. He described road conditions on the morning of the accident as dry. "It was hazy," he said, "but it was not obstructing vision."

In addition to the testimony of state troopers Tina Wormuth and Terry Province, Hall and Pillersdorf called Dr. John Wiechel, a mechanical engineer, as an expert in accident reconstruction.

Wiechel testified that he had examined the car and had concluded that "nothing malfunctioned mechanically to contribute to [Ircks] loss of control."

Based on measurements taken of the skid marks at the scene of the accident, he estimated the speed of both vehicles before the accident to be about 56 or 57 miles per hour. "For that speed, [Robinson] was too close to stop safely," he added.

When asked if he could determine a "reasonable following distance for these conditions," Attorney Todd objected on the grounds of irrelevancy.

Hall contended, "Judge, it doesn't get any more relevant ... that's what this case is about."

Judge Conley overruled the objection and allowed the witness to testify his calculation that about 350 feet, "or the length of 4 to 5 trucks behind the vehicle would have been safe."

Hall and Pillersdorf argued that the collision would never have occurred had the truck been following at a safer distance. The argument was corroborated by Wiechel, who testified that Robinson was traveling too close to the Ircks' vehicle to stop safely.

When Hall asked the expert to give his opinion of what caused the wreck, Wiechel replied that one factor would be that the "truck followed too closely behind the car." He added that without Ircks' testimony, there is no way to determine exactly what happened.

Hall inquired what might have avoided the collision. Wiechel stated, "The collision would not have occurred if he had been following at a reasonable distance."

Hall asked Wiechel, "If 118,000 pounds of truck was following one to two car lengths behind, what are the driver's options if the car in front of him experiences difficulty?" Wiechel replied, "I guess he would have three options, he could steer, brake or pray. Steering or braking are not going to be effective in that short distance."

Hall and Pillersdorf also argued that the consequences of the accident were complicated by the weight of the truck. According to Robinson's testimony, the truck was registered to haul a gross weight of 80,000 pounds. Robinson also testified that he estimated the truck was loaded to an estimated gross weight of about 120,000 pounds. He offered no explanation for the excessive weight. No weight ticket was available to verify the size of the load because the scales were not working that day at Adams Stone.

Barbara Adams, who with her sister-in-law Peggy Webb, owns B&P Trucking Co., was called as a witness. She testified as to the procedures involved in the activities of their business.

Hall and Pillersdorf had planned to present a video deposition of Oliver Ircks, but instead used still photographs as evidence of his injuries and condition.

Todd called no witnesses for the defense, relying heavily on the testimony offered by witnesses called by the attorneys for the plaintiff.

After deliberating for nearly four hours, the jury returned a verdict establishing that Keenan Robinson was not at fault in the accident. The verdict, signed by only nine of the 12 jurors, indicated that Oliver Ircks should bear full responsibility of the accident.

According to defense attorney Todd, once the jury came to a decision relieving Robinson of responsibility for the accident, deliberation of damages was unnecessary.

"The jury did an excellent job," Todd said. "It was a difficult case for the jurors to consider because of the extent of the plaintiff's injuries. They did what they were supposed to do. They heard the evidence and analyzed the facts. I think they made the correct decision."

Trucking company owner Peggy Webb was "very glad [the verdict] went that way. We felt our driver was not at fault."

"I was speechless," added Roger Hall. "There was not much to say. Of course I heartily disagree with the verdict; but the jury was very attentive and I feel they did the best they could."

Ircks' monthly medical expenses, estimated between $3,500 and $4,000, are now paid through the Cabinet for Human Resources. Ircks is not expected to recover and is expected to remain in the nursing home for the rest of his life.

Hall added, "I'm sorry for Oliver and for his family. I'm also sorry as a taxpayer. A settlement in this case would not only have repaid the state for the $107,000 in medical expenses to date, but would have alleviated the state of the responsibility of payment."

New location for Renaissance Fest.

The Kentucky Renaissance Festival will present its 1990 festival on a new site on Lake Shelby in Shelbyville.

The festival will also extend its hours. It will be open from 11 a.m. to dusk (about 9 p.m.) on Saturdays and Sundays, May 26 through June 24, including Memorial Day, May 28.

This year the festival will bring back favorite entertainers from last year, including Courtley Pleasures Pub Show and authentic jousting by fully armored and mounted knights. The festival will also be adding new entertainers, such as a Shakespearean spoof entitled "The Death of Hamlet, His Entire Family and Most of His Friends," and Chaucer's "The Miller's Tale."

Patrons can also experience two rides that have been added this year, "The Hypoggrif" and "The Man Powered Carousel." The Hypoggrif is a giant man powered dragon ride and the carousel, as the name implies, is a 60-foot diameter human powered attraction.

"We feel that the beautiful new location, along with the extended hours and added entertainment and rides will result in a greatly enhanced experience for our patrons," said Grant Elliott, festival co-producer. "The new location is very easy to find. Just take I-64 to Shelbyville, exit #32, and follow the signs."

As was the case in 1989, the Kentucky Renaissance Festival takes the form of an Olde English village celebrating a visit by King Henry VIII. It features a wide array of entertainment, hand crafted items and delicious food and drink. It is designed to be a fun and educational experience for the entire family.

Admission prices are $7.50 for adults, $4 for children 5-16, and under 5 admitted free. Discount group tickets are available by calling (502) 765-2342 or write: Kentucky Renaissance Festival, PO Box 952, Elizabethtown 42702.

Rebels score 7 times in second

SPURLOCK'S TWO HOME RUNS 'STING' HORNETS, 9-5

To face Paintsville in semifinals

The Allen Central Rebels keep rolling in high school baseball as the team of coach Anthony Moore defeated the Phelps Hornets, 9-5, to advance to semifinal play against the tough Paintsville Tigers in the 15th Region.

Kevin Spurlock, one of the best high school baseball players to come out of Floyd County in some time, belted two home runs to lead the Rebels to their regional victory. Mickey Parsons was the winning pitcher for Allen Central with some relief help from Brett Meadows who came on in the top of the sixth inning.

Meadows had three strikeouts in the two innings that he worked, and Parsons fanned eight Hornet batters. Fred Keen was the losing pitcher for Phelps. Rich Smith came on in relief in the bottom of the second when the Rebels scored seven times.

The Hornets took a 3-0 lead into the bottom of the second when they scored a single unearned run in the first and pushed across two in the second.

B.J. Aldrich led off the Rebel second with a walk. Chuck Laferty then doubled down the right field line putting runners on second and third. After John Martin struck out, Stewart Hall, who has been playing great baseball of late, singled in both Aldrich and Laferty. Hall went to second on a throw to the plate. Terry Spurlock walked and Mickey Parsons tied the game with a base hit to center field scoring Hall.

Cotton Parsons followed suit and got an infield hit with Spurlock scoring on an errant throw from shortstop. With runners on second and third, Kevin Spurlock then hit a 405-foot home run for a three-run shot, giving the Rebels a 7-3 lead.

Phelps came back with two in its half of the third on a walk to Mike Charles and double off the bat of Dwayne Stevens. Stevens' drive hit off the fence in centerfield just missing a home run. Stevens moved to third on a sacrifice fly by Keen and scored when Danny Francis reached

Senior catcher Kevin Spurlock led off the Rebel fifth with a 380-foot shot for his second home run of the game. Spurlock had three hits in the game and four RBIs. Brett Meadows then singled, was balked to second and wild pitched to third. Meadows scored on an RBI base hit by Aldrich. The two runs gave the Rebels the 9-5 win.

Phelps put its first two batters on in the fifth inning on a walk and a base hit, but Parsons put the fire out with no damage done. It was the second victory for Allen Central over the Hornets this season. The Rebels defeated Phelps in the semifinals of the EKMC tournament.

Allen Central will take on 15th Region favorite, Paintsville, in semifinal action tonight at Pikeville. Paintsville is 30-8 going into tonight's game, and the Rebels are 17-6. Game time 5:30 p.m.

Rain washes out Stars' hopes in heartbreaking loss to Braves

Before the rains came!

Thomas Jenkins was on the mound for the Martin Braves against the McDowell Stars Monday evening in Beaver Creek Little League action. Jenkins started the game for the Braves and was relieved by Chris Cornett. Rains washed out the Stars fifth inning where they scored five runs to take a 14-10 lead. The game reverted back to the last complete inning giving the Braves a 10-9 win. (Photo by Ed Taylor)

The Martin Braves won their seventh game of the season without a defeat as they dampened the McDowell Stars, 10-9, in a weather shortened game.

It took more than the mighty bats of the Braves to win over the Stars.

With the Stars batting in the top of the fifth inning and trailing 10-9, McDowell scored five runs to take a 14-9 lead.

The Martin Braves then batted in the bottom of the inning with a man on base and one out, when umpire Harold Case stopped play until the rains subsided. The rains never did let up and the game was called, reverting back to the last full inning, which was the fourth.

The ruling then "washed" away the five McDowell runs giving the Braves a 10-9 four inning win.

"I protested the game," McDowell coach Terry Mullins said. "It may will not do any good, but at least I did it for my players. The game should have been called earlier back in the fourth inning."

The game was played in a steady drizzle for the first three innings, and in the bottom of the fourth the rains intensified, causing the pitcher's mound to become slick and almost impossible to pitch off.

McDowell held a 9-7 lead going into the bottom of the fourth inning. J.P. Skeens reached on an error for the Braves and stole second. After Thomas Jenkins struck out, McDowell pitcher Terrance Mullins walked Brandon Kinzer. Adam Coleman then hit a Mullins fastball over the right centerfield fence for a home run giving Martin a 10-9 lead.

In McDowell's half of the fifth, McGuire just missed a home run as the ball hit off the fence, with McGuire pulling up at second base. Elswick walked and Page struck out. Lead off batter Mike Stephens then drew a walk to load the bases. David Turner, who had a base hit in each of his last 13 at bats, singled to left, giving him 14 straight hits over a five-game period.

Turner's hit scored McGuire and Elswick. Mullins then singled to bring in Stephens and Turner to give the Stars a 14-9 lead. All runs and hits were "washed" from the record books because of the rain.

Turner still has 13 hits in his last 13 times at bat, a record in Beaver Creek Little League play.

The Stars took a 3-0 first inning lead on five hits. Stephens doubled to lead off the game and scored on Turner's first hit of the game. Mullins followed Turner's suit with a single, and both runners came home on an RBI single by Pete Dawson.

Mullins experienced some early wildness in the bottom of the first inning as the Braves took a 4-3 lead by scoring four runs on just two hits and five walks.

J.P. Skeens singled for the Braves and stole second. Jenkins picked up the early RBI with a single. Kinzer then walked, putting runners on first and second. Mullins struck out Cole-

Eagles' Salisbury to be force in All-Star Classic Wednesday

When the Kentucky Junior All-Stars take to the floor next Wednesday night against the 15th Region All-Stars at Johnson Central, showcased will be a young man who drew a lot of publicity from the media because he announced as a junior that he would attend the University of Kentucky after his senior season at Tollesboro High School.

He then went on to lead the state in scoring with a 32 points per game average. His name is Chris Harrison. But also on the floor will be a much improved and determined local player who stands in at 6' 10", averaged 16 points per game, and averaged pulling down 10 rebounds a game. His name is Jody Salisbury of Johnson Central.

"Jody's attitude has changed a lot," says Bud Salisbury, father of the Eagles' standout player. "He is now out there wanting to get to be a better player. His whole outlook has changed."

Salisbury has been working out since basketball season has ended and will now begin to take part in the Kentucky Junior All-Star itinerary which will include a trip to Europe this summer and be part of the first American team to play in East Berlin since 1937. Salisbury will also be playing games in Las Vegas and other parts of the country.

Many colleges have been knocking on the door of the young center for coach Alvin Ratliff.

"I bought him a membership at a gym where he has been working out with weights and building up his body strength," the elder Salisbury stated. "He will be a lot stronger this season than the past one."

Salisbury is high on the list of the Blue Demons of Wake Forest. The Atlantic Coast Conference school has been recruiting the younger Salisbury heavily. Salisbury says that Jody prefers to go to a Southeastern Conference School and that Mississippi State has been recruiting him.

did he deny it. "We believe he is definite major college material," Salisbury remarked. "Jody has been working on a hook shot (a shot that has been forgotten by most big men in high school), being able to hook left or right."

Salisbury believes that by the time Jody is finished at Johnson Central he will have grown another inch.

"Right now he is at 6' 10-1/4," he explained. "I think he will grow another inch and be at 6' 11" at the end of the season."

In the upcoming game with the 15th Region All-Stars, Salisbury will go against a former teammate in Rick Conley.

Jody will not be the only Salisbury with strong basketball credentials. Nathan Salisbury, a 6-foot seventh grader has made a mark in Johnson County basketball. The elementary standout will no doubt be a likely candidate to join his brother on the varsity next season, although he will just be an eighth grader come next basketball season.

So, when the two teams take to the floor in Johnson Central on Wednesday night, the local favorite will be Jody Salisbury. Salisbury's new attitude and new enthusiasm could inspire this year's Golden Eagles team to a trip to Rupp Arena come next spring.

(The Salisbury's are originally from Floyd County.)

"They are always sending things to the house and calling trying to encourage him to come Wake Forest," explains Salisbury, who says that he will have a hand in deciding where Jody will attend school. "There will be no early signing. We want to hear from all of the schools and there are many that are interested in Jody."

Salisbury has been sort of shadowed by Feds Creek's Jody Thompson who has announced that he will walk on at UK next season. It has been rumored that the Wildcats have shown some interest in the 6' 10" Salisbury, although the elder Salisbury would not confirm it. Neither

McDowell takes team honors, P'burg sweeps individual awards

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing Writer

One of the best kept secrets of the Festival of FACES was an academic tournament among area students, representing sixth, seventh and eighth grades from Floyd County schools. The competition, sponsored by the Jenny Wiley Academic Conference, was last Friday at Prestonsburg Community College.

These students "brain train" during the school year with a program that rivals most sports programs. The academic meets begin in September and, with the addition of the FACES contest, last throughout the school year.

One Saturday a month, teams gather to compete in both written examinations and Quick Recall sessions. Every other Thursday students may compete in Quick Recall "quickies."

District and regional tournaments are held in February, with teams advancing to the Kentucky Governor's Cup Competition in March.

The matches are not intended to be a measurement of how much a student knows, but more an exhibition of reasoning abilities — that's horse-sense, in layman's terms. Students are selected according to various criteria such as test scores, teacher recommendation and student interest.

On the morning of the FACES contest, students were tested individually in mathematics, language arts and English composition, science and social studies.

Beth Slone of Wayland Elementary took top honors in mathematics. Gina Fields of Allen Elementary placed second, followed by Brad Moore of McDowell Elementary, third, and Chris Potter of Harold Elementary, fourth.

First place in social studies was earned by Roy John Martin of Garrett Elementary.

Prestonsburg Elementary's Stewart Robertson was awarded second place. Brandon Scott of Martin Elementary placed third, and Tonia Hale of Prestonsburg, fourth.

Prestonsburg dominated the language arts awards. Emily Damron earned first place honors, while Tonya Miller placed third. Steven Sturgill of Harold was second, and Beth Slone of Wayland and Amanda Slone of Stumbo Elementary tied for fourth.

Kimberly Gooch won first place honors for Harold in science. Emily Bradley of Clark won second; Stephanie Johnson of Auxier, third, and Aaron Bond of Prestonsburg, fourth.

In the afternoon, students assembled in teams and represented their schools in the Quick Recall competition, a rapid-fire version of the old "College Bowl" show.

During one round students were asked questions such as: "Find the volume of a block that measures 10 centimeters long, 8 centimeters wide and six centimeters high" (480 centimeters); "Name the branch of physics concerned with the properties of sound" (acoustics); "The symbol for lead is Pb from the Latin word plumbum. A person who worked with lead pipes in Roman times was called what?" (a plumber)

During the final round of Quick Recall, McDowell squared off against Prestonsburg. The tension and concentration evident on the young faces of the team members, split-second decisions had to be made. Small mistakes could cost a match. Each team strove to answer quickly and correctly.

At the end of heated competition, McDowell prevailed over Prestonsburg, 20-19.

Although they placed second in the Quick Recall competition, Prestonsburg won first place for the best Overall Representation after taking first place honors in language arts, second place in social studies, third in language arts, and fourth in social studies and English composition.

Excel College hosts secretaries at luncheon

In a salute to National Secretaries Week, Excel College of Paintsville recently honored secretaries from area businesses with a luncheon at the school.

Secretaries representing the legal, medical and private sectors of business attended the function in celebration of their contributions and dedication to the secretarial profession.

Guest speaker Melinda Wheeler, assistant director of pre-trial services for the administrative office of the Courts in Kentucky, spoke on "Body Language in the Office Environment."

Wheeler said that in many instances, secretaries are the first people introduced to clients and patrons in the workplace. Today's secretary also has administrative functions that include planning, organizing and directing, she said.

By learning to read and discern patrons' motives and intentions, secretaries can also lend additional benefits to their employers, she told the assembled secretaries.

Among businesses donating gifts for the event were Peggy Lou Shop, Castle's Jewelry, Country Cottage, Reflections and Watson's Department Store.

UK sets new admission deadline

The University of Kentucky has moved up its application deadline for students interested in attending UK as undergraduates this fall.

The University Senate has set Aug. 1 as the new deadline for submission of all documents required for admission as an undergraduate. In past years, undergraduates could apply through the first week of classes in the fall.

"The proposed dates are, in general, only about three weeks before the beginning of term, so they will not forbid any serious students from applying, especially since these dates are much later than the cut-off dates of most bench-mark institutions," said Don C. Leigh, chairman of the University Senate Council. The council is the administrative arm of the senate, which includes faculty members, students and administrators.

Leigh and Joe Fink, UK director of admissions, said allowing students to apply after classes have begun is most hurtful to the students, themselves.

"Last-moment admission robs students of the time necessary for good advising and dooms them to taking only those courses left open at that date," Leigh said.

Exceptions will be made for non-degree seeking students who wish to register through UK's evening-week-end program, Aug. 15-18. These students will be limited to eight credit hours per semester.

Classes begin this fall on Aug. 22. The application deadline for students interested in attending UK in the spring as undergraduates is Dec. 1.

MSU prof to write school history

A Morehead State University professor of history has launched the first phase of a project that will culminate in a history of the institution from its earliest days as a private school to a regional state university of the 1990s.

Dr. Donald F. Flatt has begun what he considers a "labor of love" to compile first an oral history of MSU and then adapt that information into a book chronicling the growth of the school and its impact on the region.

According to Flatt, the work will be "a balanced history," although there are some eras for which there are more records than other periods.

"The final manuscript will encompass all aspects from administration to academics and athletics," Flatt said. His deadline for completing the oral history part is the end of 1992.

Flatt said that he expects to interview a number of people who have played prominent and "maybe not so prominent" roles in MSU's development. Among the people whose recollections will be recorded are former governors, former presidents of the university and family members of the presidents no longer living, alumni who have distinguished themselves, people who have served on the Board of Regents and residents of the region who have watched MSU prosper.

"I'm looking for additional resource people, as well, and would appreciate hearing from anyone who could help me with stories from the past of even memorabilia," Flatt said. "They may write me in care of the university or call me at the office or home."

(Flatt's office number is 783-2658)

and home telephone number is 784-4307.)

A specialist in 20th Century American history, Flatt said that he had wanted to produce an MSU history ever since he had read one on Western Kentucky University written by a colleague there, Dr. Lowell Harrison.

In his research, Flatt said he plans to read newspaper accounts from past years which should help him follow specific issues on an ongoing basis.

"There are just so many points to explore," he said. "Treatment of the university by the media, development of the brick and mortar facilities, the effects of the community of Morehead's political, social and economic climate on the school and the development of the Faculty Senate and its role today are only a few of the topics to be studied," Flatt noted.

The historian also said that he would be available to speak to civic, social or service organizations about the university's history at any time while working on the project.

A two-time graduate of MSU, he earned his doctorate from the University of Kentucky. A former Bath County High School teacher, he joined the MSU faculty in 1962 and is a former department chair.

Author to be honored at MSU

Appalachian author Loyal Jones will receive Morehead State University's third annual Appalachian Treasure Award at the opening reception of the 14th annual Appalachian Celebration.

The opening reception will be held in the gallery of the Claypool-Young Art Building on the MSU campus from 6:30-8:30 p.m., June 24.

The Appalachian Treasure Award is designed to recognize an individual with unusual talents and a dedication to promoting and preserving Appalachian culture. MSU President C. Nelson Grote will present Jones with a handcrafted rocking chair which is the visible symbol of the award in a ceremony scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Jones, director of the Appalachian Center at Berea College, has had extensive publication of his work, which covers a variety of topics involving regional culture. His current research interests include Appalachian music, religion and Welsh influence.

He has served on governors' task forces on education and welfare reform, as director of the Festival of Appalachian Humor and as member of advisory committees of an Appalachian Experience.

The award ceremony is a highlight of MSU's Appalachian Celebration, a week-long summer festival featuring traditional music, dance, storytelling, and arts and crafts.

For more information about the festival, contact Donna Reynolds Spangler, Office of Regional Development Services, MSU, Morehead 40351-1689; telephone 783-2077.

HOROSCOPE

May 27 through June 2

By A. Murphy

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

Soothe your tensions in a healthy manner. Inspiration can come from your surroundings and from within yourself. Recognize positive motivation when it occurs.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

Career advancement rarely comes without hard work. Examine your motives for holding a grudge. Are you being fair and honest with yourself and others?

LEO (July 23 - August 22)

With good friends in familiar surroundings, your relationships should not be hard work; they should come easy. If you cannot feel at ease, ask the advice of a professional.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22)

Last-minute plans sometimes turn out to be the most fun. Be spontaneous more often. Don't lose your temper with someone who wants you to try something new.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22)

Are you taking your children or pets out for walks enough? Make sure that you listen to what your children say and what they ask you. Always answer honestly.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21)

When everything seems to be spinning and your mind is weary, ask for help instead of telling yourself that it is nothing and that it will go away. You owe yourself good care.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 21)

Let friends know that they are appreciated. Host a surprise party, give a plant, make cookies, cook a meal, or send a card that shows your appreciation.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19)

Remember that it is the activity that goes on in your head which leads to what goes on with your body and your physical life. Clarify to yourself exactly what you want.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)

Speak out for what you believe in, and stand as a symbol of it. The best method of influence is to live an honest and good life and earn the admiration of others.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)

Transformation rarely happens in one day. Work steadily and seriously toward your goal and soon you will be rewarded.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

Don't allow suspicions to grow large, complicated and ugly. Discuss any questions or worries openly with someone that you can trust. Clearing the air brings a fresh breeze.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

Feelings of jealousy are usually a sign that you are not fully confident about a relationship. Examine your feelings and your needs and discuss them with your partner.

Magnum's coma not a dream, just a minor set back

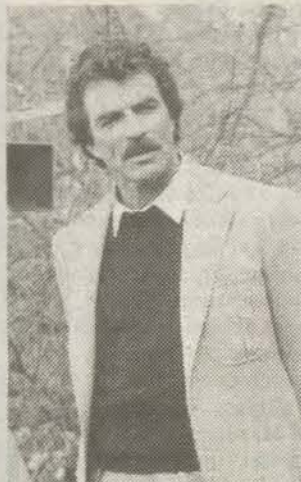

By Polly Vonetes

Q: What caused Magnum to come out of the coma he was in at the end of Magnum P.I.'s seventh season? I did not see these episodes. Since there was almost no mention after the eighth season opener aired, I was wondering if the solution was as disappointing as the infamous Dallas shower scene. I have asked this question so many times, please give me an answer. —Deborah Bruno, Claremont, N.H.

A: I have looked everywhere and finally resorted to an interview I had with Tom Selleck just before that eighth season opener aired for an answer to your question. And I quote, "The episode we did last year was designed to be a final episode, but we had always—and we promised both CBS and Universal and ourselves that if we designed an episode like that that we would have a way out of it. And we always had kind of a continuing story outline, at least in our heads, about what we would do if there was an eighth season. You never want to really close those doors, so judging from experience in other shows we wanted to make sure we had a good story outline idea for this season even though we thought that was going to be the last." The result was you never saw Magnum really dead—he was at death's door, but he survived, hale and hearty for the eighth season.

Q: Are Lili Palmer, who starred in The Counterfeit Traitor and Viveca Lindfors related? Ms. Lindfors recently was on TV and I was struck with their resemblance. —Billie Driscoll, Kihei, Maui

A: There is nothing to indicate a relationship between Lili Palmer and Viveca Lindfors. Palmer was born Lillie Marie Peiser, on

Tom Selleck

May 24, 1914, in Posen, Germany. Lindfors was born Elsa Viveca Torstensdotter Lindfors, on Dec. 29, 1920, in Uppsala, Sweden.

Q: I would like to know if Tim Considine, Mike of My Three Sons, is still around and if so, is he still acting and in what? I have not seen him on anything in a long time. —Judy Warner, Union City, Tenn.

A: Tim Considine, now 48, decided to become a TV writer and director after a career as a juvenile actor. His credits also included several Disney productions.

Q: Could you please tell me the name of the actor who portrayed Wolf in the CBS Sunday Movie Gunsmoke II: The Last Apache? —Michele Lambert, Romney, W.Va.

A: The part of Wolf was played by 27-year-old Joe Lara, who made his acting debut in the CBS movie Tarzan In Manhattan. He has been a successful photographic model in Paris and New York, and is a well-known photographer in his own right.

CABLE OVERVIEW

Week's cable offerings especially diverse

By Shelia Odak

Sex, a sequel, special effects and slug fests top this week's list of the best on cable.

Cinemax starts it off Friday, June 1, with Scenes From The Class Struggle In Beverly Hills. Jacqueline Bisset and Ray Sharkey star in this satirical sexcapade which features people of various classes doing a lot of bed hopping. Needless to say, this comedy is not for the kiddies. Ed Begley Jr., Paul Mazursky and Rebecca Schaeffer (the young actress tragically killed by an obsessed fan last year) also star.

A film that can be shared with the whole family airs on HBO, also on June 1. When ghosts are everywhere, a river of evil slime runs under New York City and the Titanic has just landed, who ya gonna call? Why those fighters of phenomenon, of course. Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd, Harold Ramis and Ernie Hudson return in Ghostbusters II.

The guys have retired from the ghostbusting game until their old friend Dana (Sigourney Weaver) starts having problems of the supernatural sort with her baby. Annie Potts and Rick Moranis also star.

The art of animation leapt to new heights with the charming film Who Framed Roger Rabbit, which airs June 1 on Disney and The Movie Channel.

It took eight years to bring this film to the screen, and was the first one to be directed by Robert Zemeckis since his 1985 smash Back To The Future.

What is so special about this film is the way the cartoon characters seem to really be interacting with the human characters. This look was achieved through countless hours of painstaking work by animators. Each frame was laboriously drawn by hand. The human actors, which include Bob Hoskins, Christopher Lloyd, Joanna Cassidy and Stubby Kaye, all had to play their scenes to thin air, and the animated characters were later drawn in.

In this film, plot is not important. What is important is the enormous breakthrough this work created, and how effortless it was made to look.

If hard-hitting boxing action is your bag, tune in to Showtime on June 1 for Showtime Championship Boxing.

Evander Holyfield takes on Seamus McDonagh in this bout which airs live from the Trump Plaza in Atlantic City.

He's a philosopher, he's a bouncer, he's Patrick Swayze in Roadhouse, airing June 2 on HBO.

Swayze plays Dalton, the world's greatest barroom bouncer, who is called upon to clean up a small-town nightclub. Along the way, he managed to lock horns with the town boss (Ben Gazzara), fall in love with the town doctor (Kelly Lynch) and spout such deep insights as, "In a fight, nobody wins."

17 MOVIE: Tycoon A young American railroad builder finds action and romance in Latin America. John Wayne, Laraine Day. 1947.

FINAL NOTIFICATION OF FmHA'S FINDINGS OF NO PRACTICABLE ALTERNATIVE TO A FLOODPLAIN IMPACT AND NO SIGNIFICANT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT CITY OF MARTIN

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) has received an application for financial assistance from the City of Martin, SAI# KY890424-0429. The specific elements of this proposed action include the construction of a new 0.12MGD wastewater treatment plant and pump stations, rehabilitation of the existing collection system and pump stations, and the extension of new interceptor sewer lines. FmHA has assessed the potential environmental impacts of this proposed action and determined that the location of the collection system improvements would impact the 100-year floodplain. It has been determined that there is no practicable alternative to avoid this impact. The basis of this determination is as follows:

—The floodplain will be impacted by the construction of improvements to the Martin wastewater collection system.

—A portion of the proposed improvements must be located in the floodplain because some of the existing sewer lines which will be modified by these improvements are within the 100-year floodplain of Beaver Creek.

—All practicable mitigation measures have been agreed to by the applicant.

—The proposed action will conform to all applicable state and local floodplain protection standards.

—The Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Housing and Urban Development are also participating in this project.

FmHA has also determined that the proposed action will not significantly affect the quality of the human environment and will not prepare an environmental impact statement.

Any written comments regarding these determinations should be provided within 15 days of this publication to Ms. Mary Ann Baron, State Director, Farmers Home Administration, 333 Waller Avenue, Lexington, Kentucky 40504. FmHA will make no further decisions regarding this proposed action during this fifteen-day period.
