Programs Approved

The US House of Representatives last week approved a comprehensive education and labor funding bill that includes increases for black lung claimants and the Job Corps training program, according to Congressman Chris Perkins.

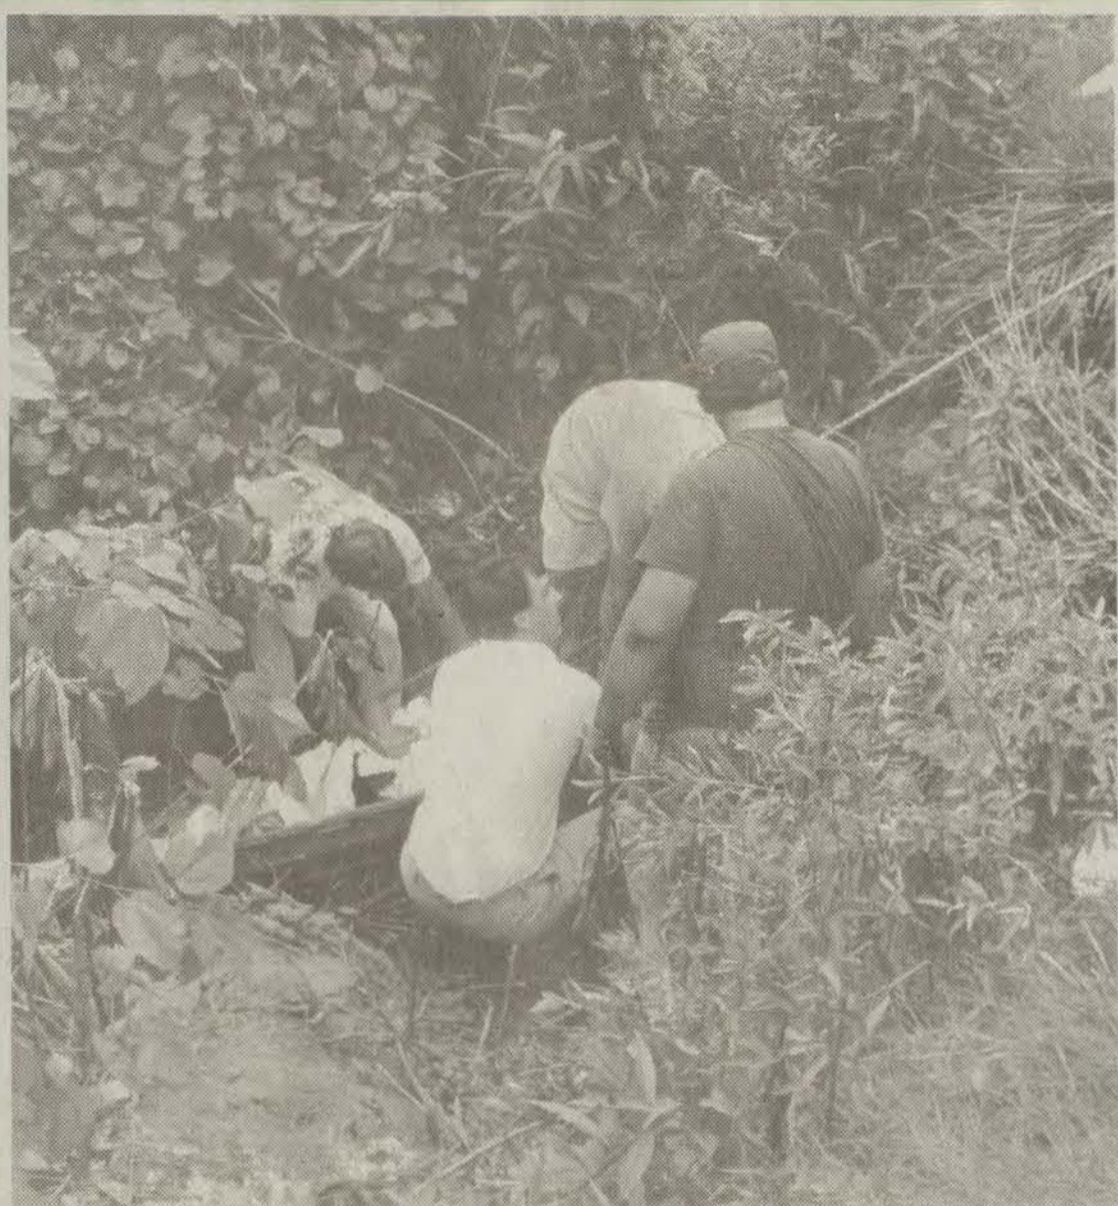

"The fund is the only means by which thousands of former coal miners can receive compensation for the problems afflicting them," Perkins said. "The fact that more money has been designated to black lung claimants reflects our continued commitment to former coal miners throughout this country."

On the Job Corps, Perkins said, "This is the type of federal program that works because we help train severely-disadvantaged individuals and consequently get them off government assistance."

The Black Lung Disability Fund is financed by a tax levied on each ton of coal produced and pays all medical expenses stemming from the disease when no mine operator can be held liable for such benefits, or when coal mine employment ceased prior to 1970.

The Job Corps program, now in its 26th year, has successfully trained, educated and employed more than 1.4 million at-risk youth since its inception.

The programs, part of Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1991, now go to the Senate for consideration.

Accident sends family over hill

Two persons were injured Sunday afternoon in a one-vehicle accident on KY 1428 near Lancer. Reports indicate that the vehicle, a 1987 Chevrolet Blazer, was driven by Kevin McDavid of Grayson, who was apparently attempting to turn around on the highway when the vehicle struck a gully hidden by underbrush and tumbled about 100 feet over an embankment. McDavid, his wife and three children were in the vehicle at the time of the accident. McDavid and his wife were both taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center for treatment. Members of the Prestonsburg Fire Department used a "stokes basket," or specialty stretcher, to raise the family from the gully. (Photo by Marty Backus)

The other drug problem

Legal drugs are a problem, too

by Tim B. Preston
Staff Writer

(Note: Names of persons in this article have been changed in order to preserve anonymity.)

"It would be awfully hard for me to completely quit them," said Bonnie, a 22-year-old Floyd County resident. "I don't always take them every day, but I like knowing that they are there if I want them. I'm not an addict or anything. I could quit, but I don't want to. I like to party."

For those who know Bonnie, however, her life is not a party. Bonnie's love for the prescription drug Soma, a prescription muscle relaxer/sedative, is an obsession that has come between her and her family and is possibly the cause for her recent divorce.

"I'm sure that she could give you a lot of other reasons for us splitting up," said Bonnie's ex-husband Tommy, "but I can tell you that I had to leave because of the drugs. She had no desire to do anything but drugs."

By her own account Bonnie will purchase Soma, and its generic equivalent Carisprodol, at a price of $1-$2 each in quantities of 50 or 60. "I usually try to get as many as I can. They aren't very expensive."

Bonnie, along with others who share her passion for the tablets, will often visit as many as five different doctors in one day to obtain the drugs. Many times she will carpool with others and trade away drugs that are not desirable for ones she likes more.

"The only bad thing about them is you can forget how many you took, because you don't want to lose your buzz and you will take five or six pills every 20 or 30 minutes when you think it's been an hour or two since you took the last ones," said Bonnie, who admits to consuming between 40 and 60 tablets on some days.

Bonnie is not necessarily the exception; by many standards, she is the typical abuser of prescription drugs.

"Depressants are commonly the drug of choice in this area," said Tom McIntyre, head pharmacist at Highlands Regional Medical Center. "We don't have as much demand for amphetamines or speed. Most people here will simply find a doctor who will give them things like Valium, Soma and Tylenol with Codeine."

"Very often something like Fastin (a prescription amphetamine) will be prescribed along with the depressant drugs in order for the user to function at work," said McIntyre. "I had never seen Soma prescribed in large quantities until I came to Kentucky."

Valium, a commonly prescribed tranquilizer, has also been recognized as having great potential for abuse and is commonly sold for $2 apiece for 10 milligram, with "Blue" Valium with five milligram tablets (yellow) being sold for a dollar.

Tina, a native of Johnson County, said that she began taking Valium and other tranquilizers to help her cope with the death of her baby girl.

"There was a time that I just could not face the day without a lot of Valium and Xanax. Those were the ones I liked best. I used to try very hard to get to the point where I could stare at the TV and not understand anything it was showing. When I caught myself paying attention to something, I knew it was time to pop

Dry, sunny weather

The Jackson Weather Service doesn't predict any chance of rain until Sunday. That's good news to some. And, it doesn't look like the temperatures will be too outrageous. So, if you have any lawn work to do, this might be a good week to get to it.

Wednesday, mostly sunny, high in mid-80s. Wednesday night, mostly clear, low 60-65. Thursday, mostly sunny, high in upper-80s. Thursday night, mostly clear, low in upper 60s.

DRY on Friday and Saturday with a chance of thunderstorms on Sunday. Highs all three days, upper 80s to lower 90s, lows in upper 60s and lower 70s. Enjoy.

Calling all teachers

The representative council of the Floyd County Education Association is slated to meet tomorrow (Thursday) at 10 a.m. at the KEA office. On the agenda are the installation of officers for 1990-91 and discussion of today's meeting between FCEA representatives and school system officials. President Bud Reynolds urges all to attend.

Clarification

In a caption describing a fire at Auxier in Friday's paper, Johnny McKinney was listed as a resident of the house that burned. Apparently he had not lived there for several months and the home was only occupied by Barbara McKinney and her daughter. At the time of the fire, Mrs. McKinney and daughter were at Lexington visiting her father in the hospital; he died the next day, she said.

The McKinneys lost everything in the fire, including a treasured family dog, she said. Anyone wishing to assist the family with a donation of clothing, furniture, baby clothing, household items or whatever, will be greatly appreciated.

Fiscal Court debates garbage issue

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

How Floyd County plans to handle the out-of-county, out-of-state dumping of hazardous or household garbage was one question addressed during the Friday meeting of the Floyd County Fiscal Court.

The answer on the surface appears simple: regulate it. But, according to County Attorney Jim Hammond, this is not such an easy task.

"It is a real challenge for a government to maneuver itself through the waters to come up with some legislation or ordinance to be specific enough to control waste and materials in this county," Hammond said.

Many states, he said, have tried a variety of tactics to establish such regulations and have failed. He distributed copies of articles from the Lexington Herald-Leader and the Louisville Courier-Journal that outline some of the problems faced in court between landfill operators and state governments.

"This is a problem nationwide, in this state and in other counties," Hammond said. "There is big money in solving the problem because it is so great."

The county has to be very careful in the wording of any ordinance on the subject because of the possibility of being sued, Hammond cautioned. "We don't want to come up with something haphazard and we need to do it right. But I feel any money spent in court tests will be well spent."

"We must also consider how we are going to take care of our own medical waste," Hammond said. "We can't be naive enough to think other states and counties are going to take it, cause they're not. So, we are going to have to solve those problems as we approach this."

Hammond said the starting point was to make sure any regulation meets with state and federal constitutions and any prohibition does not interfere with interstate commerce.

Any drafted regulation, he said, would restrict private waste facilities whether they use incineration, dumping or a landfill, hazardous or household, but would not affect the public landfill. Hammond pointed out that the public landfill would be regulated as it has been by the Solid Waste Commission.

"After drafting the regulation on what it would take to get a private facility operative in this county," Hammond explained, "the next thing we have to do in the same ordinance is figure out how we are going to finance the regulation of it (the private landfill)."

Some of the points Hammond said the county would need to take into consideration include: what it will cost the county to make sure the operators have the permit, the cost of on-site inspections, where the money would come from to close down an operation that doesn't comply with the ordinance, what fees would be charged and so forth.

Some of the regulations he suggested be imposed on any private waste disposal operation are: bonds for eventual closure and fines, fees of up to $1000/ounce for hazardous waste, requiring permits, requiring sites be open to inspections and a detailed manifest be kept on what type of garbage is coming in.

Mentioning the one such private waste disposal facility in the county, Medisin Inc., Hammond said "If they can not comply with this ordinance, I

Here's one solution

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

A problem that has plagued Floyd County for sometime has a new team of people working on a solution. Since the demise of the coal miner because of new technology, more and more people have found themselves out of work or having to leave the area.

Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo has come up with one hopeful solution, or at least a start — an economic development organization.

Apparently the original thought came by way of the Kentucky Revised Statute Chapter 152 and involved State Rep. Greg Stumbo. Representatives of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce and the Big Sandy Area Development District realized that something needed done in Floyd County to help create jobs and boost the economy, so they went to Judge Stumbo.

The original idea was to have one extremely qualified person do all the leg work and the position be funded partially through city funds and partially through county funds, according to former Chamber President Tim Hites.

"I was really impressed with the way Judge Stumbo handled it. We went up and met with him and he had a lot of good ideas and said all the right things," Hites said. "If anyone deserves the credit it's him, because he took the ball and ran with it and got the thing done."

Hence, The Floyd County Economic Development Authority was created. The Authority is to consist of six board members, working on a volunteer basis, rather than one salaried person since the funding was unavailable. (The county did come up with its part).

On July 18, Judge Stumbo sent out six letters to non-political, community leaders requesting their cooperation in serving on the board. Those asked were Delores Smith of R&S Trucking, Burl Wells Spurlock of the First Commonwealth Bank, Julius

Pets reap man's irresponsibility

by Pam Shingler

More than 70,000 of these babies are born every day in the United States. Only about 14,000, roughly 20 percent, end up in loving, lasting homes. The rest die, most often from starvation or accidents, or are doomed to lives of cruelty and maltreatment.

How can this be? you ask. Someone should put a stop to it, you say. If you're an owner of a cat or dog, that someone can be you, says Teresa Ousley.

As one of the operators of the county's animal shelter in West Prestonsburg, Ousley is in a position to know. Ousley, who volunteers for the often heartbreaking job, and Sandy Wright, the shelter's paid staff member, witness daily the results of irresponsible pet ownership.

On a recent day, the facility in the old landfill hollow sheltered some three dozen kittens, three sets of puppies and a couple dozen adult dogs and cats of varying ages and pedigree.

When a visitor approaches, most of the animals clamor to the front of their cages as if to say, "Take me, take me."

Some slink away, evidencing a history of cruelty from these creatures called humans. These, Ousley confides, will most likely never be adopted because they don't demonstrate the personality and energy prospective owners look for. Among those who endear themselves to the potential owners who come by:

"All the roly-poly kittens and puppies that tumble and stumble over each other for a touch of human affection, a desire that seems innate.

"You wouldn't need an animal shelter if people would control their pets."

dog who prances around his cage like a show dog.

"A big, interesting-looking female dog with a hint of wolfhound in her lineage who flashes a sunny smile."

"A shy hound-collie mix whose tail wags so hard you think she'll leave the ground."

"A regal gray cat whose soft fur begs to be stroked."

Most are the victims of former owners who can or will no longer take care of them for whatever reason or who don't want to have another litter of pups or kittens and refuse to have the animals neutered. (About 85 percent of discarded animals are females, Ousley says.)

Some are dropped off in darkness at the shelter door. Others are brought in by concerned motorists who find the animals deserted along highways, a fate that nearly always leads to death by car or truck wheels or by starvation.

Some end up at the shelter because they're no longer wanted by their owners. The once cuddly puppy has grown into a big, overly friendly dog. The playful kitten matures into a fighting tomcat. Or an old, tired pet is replaced by a younger, more energetic one.

Some are given up reluctantly because the owner is ill or dies or has to move.

Ousley and other members of the society use every means possible to find good homes for the animals. Recently, they even set up a table in front of Wal-Mart and matched a bunch of kittens with excited owners.

All animals that come to the shelter, except those that are seriously ill, are treated for fleas and given basic vaccinations for state registration. Cats are checked for signs of the generally fatal leukemia-like disease, although, according to Ousley, tests on kittens are not always accurate. Cats are also neutered before adoption.

For these services, all cheaper than most veterinarians would charge, persons who adopt dogs pay $22. Some people balk at that fee, but Ousley says the cost became necessary after it was discovered that some were purchasing dogs at $5 from the shelter and then selling them at flea markets for $20. (The flea market animals often end up in animal research centers.)

The adoption fee for cats is $35, which is a significant bargain when you consider that most veterinarians charge more than that for spaying or neutering alone. "Some people say they don't want a female cat spayed, but if she's not, then you can count on them being back in two months with both the cat and a litter of kittens," said Ousley, who points out that a cat can have six litters a year.

Despite the services of the animal shelter, the reality is that there are more cast off animals than there are people to adopt them. After a cat or dog has been at the shelter a period of time — too long, some say — it is humanely "put to sleep," as the euphemism goes.

"I probably do put it off too long," said Ousley, whose husband is a veterinarian. "But I always keep hoping that tomorrow someone will walk in and want this one or that one."

Ousley admits that it's easy to get attached to the animals that come to the shelter, making supervising their deaths even more difficult. "It's hard, it's really hard."

But the demand for a "shelter" for stray and unwanted animals means that room must be made. More municipalities have begun to clamp down on strays, and officials clamor to have space freed for the animals they want to bring in.

"People can get very rude," said Ousley. "You get attacked. They say you have to make room."

Shelter personnel do keep a waiting list for people who want to bring animals in. "When a space comes available, we call the next person on the list," she explained. "Sometimes they don't come in for two weeks and then get mad if we don't have space then."

The shelter operates almost literally on a shoestring, under the auspices of the Dewey Dam Dog and Cat Protection Society. The county pays $833 a month to the shelter, and the city of Prestonsburg donates $200 a month.

That amount hardly pays for food, insurance, bathing and flea treatments and standard health care for the animals, let alone payment of staff.

The society raises some additional money through a yearly roadblock and a Christmas gift wrapping project at the Prestonsburg Sundry Store. Some individuals contribute, although not as much as they once did, according to Ousley.

Also, some businesses and organizations help out. Wal-Mart, for instance, recently donated paint for the shelter. The Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club has helped buy cages, and the Junior Woman's Club donates proceeds from its annual horse show. Branham and Baker Coal Co. provides coal for heating, and Mountain Comprehensive Care Center recently helped with landscaping.

As strongly as Ousley has fought for the shelter, however, she is just as adamant in her belief that there should not have to be an animal shelter.

"You wouldn't need an animal shelter if people would control their pets," she said, eyes ablaze.

Ousley is a strong believer in keeping pets up or having them neutered so that they won't reproduce more unwanted animals.

"Some people will say they just a few more pills," said Tina.

Doctors prescribed the drugs for Tina for the first few months after her baby's death, but soon the pills could only be obtained illegally.

After nearly two years, Tina is trying to get straight. "I think that I'm going to try to get clean for at least a full year," said Tina, "and then I'm going to try and have another baby."

There are many other prescription drugs that can be obtained illegally, notably Percodan, Percocette and Dilaudid. All three are narcotic pain killers, usually prescribed only in small quantity with strict control of dosage.

While Percocette and Percodan, both versions of the synthetic narcotic oxycodone, sell for the high price of $5 to $8 each, Dilaudid tablets are commonly bought and sold for $40 to $60 per tablet.

Dilaudid tablets are usually crushed and melted before being placed in a hypodermic needle and taken intravenously by the user. They are highly addictive, and only heroin surpasses their narcotic qualities.

"The narcotic buzz is the ultimate high," said Jeff, a former Floyd Countian, now living in Pike County. "When you close your eyes it's like you go into a dream-like state with little flashes of light and a feeling that you are literally floating. That is usually accompanied by vivid dream sequences and deep thoughts."

Jeff considers himself a true connoisseur of narcotics and says that he doesn't get to take them often enough to get addicted because the drugs are not easily obtained in this area. He emphasizes that he does not drink alcohol and does not take Valium or other sedatives.

He claims to have no problem with any drug, however, in 1987 he traded a new Harley Davidson motorcycle for 150 Dilaudid tablets and an ounce of cocaine. "I really meant to turn a profit on the cocaine and some of the pills," said Jeff. "But once I got a taste of it I had to have it all."

"The dope was gone in just over two weeks, but the bike was just paid off about a year ago. Me and a few of my friends were really wild while it lasted though," Jeff added.

Police say that the illegal distribution of prescription drugs is a problem to combat. "All someone has to do is have three or four of their friends go to doctors that they know will prescribe certain drugs," said Prestonsburg Police Chief Greg Hall.

"They can sell the pills for enough money to pay for the doctor's visit and the prescription while making a very healthy profit for themselves," the police chief said. "The best we can hope to do is catch the people selling the drugs, which we usually do."

The commonly abused drugs are considered to be very effective for their prescribed purpose, according to Tom McIntyre, but when they are abused the effects are often reversed. "Valium, specifically, can cause anxiety and nervousness, which are the symptoms it was originally prescribed to help," McIntyre said.

The desire for prescription drugs is indeed a problem. The desire to escape from reality is very strong for many people. It is likely that professional counseling and drug withdrawal programs will be seen as the only solution to this long standing problem.

If you or someone you know has a problem with the abuse of prescription drugs, urge them to seek help.

That help can be obtained locally through Mountain Comprehensive Care Center's Helpline, 1-800-422-1060, or by calling MCCC at 886-8572 and asking for Theresa O'Brien.

MCCC offers treatment and rehabilitation programs locally through the Layne House residential recovery program and also offers an outpatient recovery program that allows the user to remain at home.

In his letter Judge Stumbo admonished, "I am not making this request of you lightly, for the task before the leadership in Floyd County, both elected and non-elected, is to virtually transform our traditional economy and way of life to a more pluralistic society with a broadly diversified economy. While those words are easily said and written, the task is difficult and requires long term effort if we're to be successful. Begin we must!"

According to the creating ordinance, the authority's purpose is threefold: To aid in the acquisition, retention and development of land for industrial and commercial purposes in Floyd County; to aid in the development and promotion of industrial sites, parks and subdivisions for accommodating industrial and commercial needs; to promote and stimulate the acquisition, retention and development of land for industrial and commercial purposes in and near Floyd County by other local development organizations, both public and private.

Judge Stumbo describes the authority as "a serious attempt initiated by Floyd County to meet the challenge contained in the wrinkled brow of so many of our young men and women, wondering, 'will there be a job for me, here at home?' In a word, the work of the authority is 'jobs', since new job opportunity, both energy related jobs and service/manufacturing jobs will let us work our way to a strong local economy and keep our kids and grandchildren at home."

Judge Stumbo was adamant that no political office holder be a member of the authority, who are appointed to four-year terms. He maintains that if any do seek and consequently hold such an office, they must resign from the board. Members would also be dismissed upon demonstration of misconduct or upon conviction of a felony.

If the six persons asked to participate agree to take the challenge, they will attend an inaugural meeting sometime after Aug. 1 when the judge will administer the oath of office and ask them to begin work immediately.

TRUCKS, RAILROADS AND CONGRATULATIONS
Will coal trucks continue operating through Prestonsburg? That's a question that may have already been answered following last night's meeting of the Prestonsburg City Council.

The question has to do with weight restrictions on the Bert T. Combs bridge, the large number of heavy trucks (mostly hauling coal) and the condition of the bridge.

Last week, Kentucky Transportation Secretary Milo Bryant made a surprise helicopter visit to Prestonsburg, for what can be assumed an inspection of the bridge. The media never caught up with the secretary because of last minute shuffling of schedules. By the time we got the correct information on where Bryant was, the copter and secretary were gone. City officials fared about the same.

If the weight limit for traffic is enforced, coal trucks will either have to lighten their load or use the route to Ashland by way of Salyersville.

Some critics in the past complained trucks were hauling above the weight limit. They point out that Virginia's strictly enforced weight limit law is enforced. I can't remember exactly what it is, but it has to do with how high above the top of the truck bed the coal can be stacked.

On the other hand, some folks say Kentucky's law must be that as long as coal is no more than three to four feet above the top of the truck, or less than a ton gets scattered across the roads en route to the docks or that trailers can remain upright while turning curves, then everything is okay.

I've even heard some of those who enforce the law from the coal fields to the Ohio River, and that covers a number of counties, have put a fee on traveling through their county. No proof of this, but I find this hard to swallow, knowing the political climate of Eastern Kentucky.

Last Wednesday morning I received a tip that the big boss of the CSX Railroad was coming through the Martin yard on an inspection trip of the system. Fortunately, no reporters were in, since Wednesday mornings are when they sometimes sleep in after working late hours to get the paper out. I said fortunately, because I am one railroad nut, and to be able to cover anything involving railroads is right up my alley.

Well, anyway, after finding out what time the boss' train was coming through, I dropped all other things I had to do and headed for the Martin yard.

I reported to the yard master's office and asked if it was all right to wait for the special seven-coach train to come in. While waiting for the answer, which involved a few calls, a man sitting in the back and wearing the normal railroader's bib overalls, said, "I'm from where you're from." To which I replied, "Prestonsburg?"

He then asked, "Where did you grow up?"

My response was "Mullens, West Virginia."

That's where the stranger had lived since 1947, it turns out. But my biggest surprise came when he said, "Your dad's name was Martin, wasn't it?" When I said yes, he then went on to tell me he had worked with my dad on the old Virginian Railroad, my grandfather who was clerk at the depot and my uncles who also worked out of Mullens.

We spent maybe 30 minutes talking about my dad and granddad and those very fond memories of growing up in a railroad town which hosted at one time the richest coal hauling railroad in the nation, per square mile.

So thanks to T.R. Marshall of Mullens, W.Va. Meeting you and talking to you is something I'll remember for a long time.

One note of interest concerning the inspection tour of Jerry Davis, official of CSX. His inspection train whizzed right through the Martin yard without even stopping.

A rumor from the rails: the crew that brought the big honcho through was engineered by Bill Tom Goble of Prestonsburg. Also from Prestonsburg was brakeman John Judd, while the conductor was reportedly W.K. Rose who I think lives in Pike County.

Now let me move back to something I wrote about previously. How many people can say this? I graduated from Mullens High School (W.Va.) while two of my daughters graduated from Mullins High School (Pike County, Ky.) Note the "ens" and the "ins" at the end of each name. They're two completely different high schools in two different states.

And finally, congratulations to Malcom and David Layne, two Floyd County men who have invested in their home county.

Malcom and David have just taken over the well-known Campbell Ford on US 23 South.

David is still teaching, while Malcom left the school system to pursue the automobile business. Incidentally, I have been informed that Malcom not only taught, but did some coaching along the way.

They are the sons of Chester Layne, who started a successful business career by becoming the first Tom's Potato Chip distributor in Floyd County.

Name of the new dealership is Layne Brothers Ford.

NOT FROM, BUT OF
Not being "from around here" I am often asked of my former home. When I tell folks I'm from Northeast Ohio, I sometimes get these pitying looks, as if I have missed out on something. But, more and more often I hear "Oh, I have a relative who lives in Ohio." Of course I often don't remember quite where that small town is since I wasn't really into geography in my formative years. Also, back home all you needed to know was a highway number and which exit to take and you could get anywhere. I guess I never really paid attention to where it was located in respect to where I was. But, it is nice to know I'm not alone in having relatives in Ohio.

I may not have had some of the exact same childhood memories that folks who grew up around here have, but I do have them. No, my mother never swept the lawn, but we did mow it, and boy was there a lot to mow. And no, I never remember my father and his friends spitting tobacco, but I do remember a lot of tobacco being smoked around a gin-ummy game in the kitchen until wee hours of the night.

Those were the times when my dad would pay my little brother a whole quarter if he would just sit in the corner and be quiet. It worked too. I often wished I had a quarter to spare.

My mother really hates it when all of us kids get together because we start these "remember when" conversations that turn us into hysterical, laughing hyenas. My brother always comes up with "remember when mom used to smoke?" Mom really hates that one, because she never smoked and we sometimes wonder what family my brother really came from.

I realize that most of the stories get quite embellished over the years, but that just makes it all the more exciting for the younger children to hear again and again and again.

One of the most popular is the one my mother often contributes to, as much as she hates to, but someone has to keep us accurate. The story I refer to is when my brother, Clifford, fell into the septic tank in the front yard. Boy, did Dad catch it for that one.

As the story goes, my mother was downstairs doing the laundry when she heard the front door open and someone start pacing back and forth in the foyer. Mom, wondering what was up, came upstairs to investigate and found my older sister thoughtfully wearing down the carpet.

Asking what was wrong, my mother received the answer "Cliff fell into that hole out in the front yard." (Note: Cliff was about 1-1/2 years old, and my sister five.)

Mom went running outside, looked down into the septic tank and saw Cliff's cowboy hat floating on top. Without thinking, she reached in, felt around, and came up with a small foot. She hoisted my screaming brother into the fresh air unharmed. She says the reason he didn't drown was the fact that he was still on the same scream. That boy really had a set of lungs — still does.

My mother found my dad upstairs sleeping. He and the guys had knocked off early after working on the septic tank and he needed a nap. Maybe he didn't realize he had three very curious children playing in the backyard who were just waiting for an opportunity to explore the pile of dirt the big men were working around. Mom said she was just glad nobody inadvertently flushed the toilet.

Of course, after hearing this story several years later my youngest sister shortened Clifford's name to a less complimentary one, which I shan't mention here under penalty of death, — and that's the rest of the story.

I had two, no three, very different memories of growing up, since I moved so often in my youth. The farm house where I was born was a lot of fun. There were woods to play in, a swimming pool to cool off in, peacocks to chase around (that's another story all in its own, maybe next week), about three acres of grass to mow and play in, trees to climb, a very old cemetery to scare the beejebers out of us, and a junkyard full of old cars to practice our aim with the beebee gun on. But, alas our nearest friend was quite a hike through the woods, so we three older children learned to become quite good playmates.

When I was in the third grade my family moved to an apartment complex for a few months while house hunting. There were a lot of kids there, and we stayed out until all hours of the night terrorizing the neighborhood. There was a lake for fishing, big rocks to climb on and lots of hills to go sledding on. That was fun — for three months anyway.

When we moved into a college town by the name of Kent — home of Kent State University. The schools were really good there, as they mostly are in college towns, and I really enjoyed attending. The college being just up the street afforded us many more opportunities for entertainment than we ever imagined. Even Sunday School classes were fun, mostly because they were taught by our heroes, college students.

Sometimes people ask me if I was ever scared having grown up in a place like that. Heck no! That would be like being afraid to walk in your own backyard. I must have worn out four sets of tires on my beloved three-speed bicycle traversing around the neighborhoods before it went into storage for my first car, a vintage 1965 Mustang.

I guess it wasn't really vintage, since it only cost $500. But that was $500 I earned as a car-hop at a drive-up rootbeer stand, so I was pretty proud of it — even if half the time I drove around with only one fender since my boyfriend decided to try to restore this junk heap.

I grew up the rest of my years in Kent, went to college there and moved out on my own for the first time to an apartment in Kent. After graduation, having gone through ROTC, I had a six-month commitment with the Army which I completed in Tucson, Ariz. I loved it there, too. What a wonderful place to visit. Shortly after completing my Army course I got an apartment in Canton, Ohio, where my grandmother lived. That was fun, only 1/2 mile from the mall. Wow!

About the same time I graduated, my mother found a job down here at Prestonsburg Community College and relocated, to the amazement of all the children. The kids are the ones who are supposed to move away, not the parent, we argued. Too bad, my mom said. She had gotten her master's degree relatively late in life and had some time to make up for.

On one visit with my mother I put out some resumes in the area, and lo and behold I was called down for an interview. The first time I didn't take the job, because it was offered to me only days after I moved into my Canton apartment and I didn't feel like moving again. The second time, three months later and still no takers on this college graduate, my mother said if I didn't come down for the interview she'd disown me. I came. I got hired. I was packed and moved down within three days by my mother and my grandmother. I didn't have to do a thing.

And here I am, doing a job I love (but never dreamed of having), dating a man I love (and also never dreamed of having), and working and living around people I have grown to love. (Something I thought impossible, being from a much different background.)

But, when I think back, I realize I have loved everywhere I've lived. And I hope that remains true. Nothing is ever quite home (which I consider Kent), but each place has its unique qualities that make it special.

No, I'm not from here, but I may have a relative from here, who knows? And, having only been down here two years and noticing the amount of assimilating I've already done in the area, I can only imagine how I'll feel in another two years, or four years, or 20 years. Thanks Floyd County for giving me the opportunity to meet you! It's been worth it!

In favor of teacher pay raise

Dear Editor,
I am writing in support of our Floyd County teachers in their struggle for a respectable increase of their salaries. Of all the professions, teaching is the poorest paid.

No one can accuse a person who enters the profession of aspiring to be rich. The majority choose it, but he or she would like to afford some of the nicer, material things — and to be appreciated. They spent long hours and most of their money to be educated enough to teach.

Parents send their children to school to get an education so that they can become doctors, lawyers, nurses, etc. Strange — but very rarely do they vote for an increase in taxes for education. Why does the Floyd County Board (one of whom I taught) fail to give these trainers of our future leaders a raise to just a little comparable to other professions? The teaching profession has been a stepchild of professions for years.

For 43 years I taught in the Floyd County system (over half my life, though I retired in 1974). I knew I was not receiving a decent salary. I stayed in the profession because it was my chosen one. For several years I stayed on a schedule of teach a school term, go to school in summer, spend what I made until I received my degree from the University of Kentucky. Not too many had a degree when I began my career. I consider my reward to be the fact that I have had the privilege of having taught doctors, lawyers, at least one circuit judge, nurses, journalists, college professors, efficiency experts, coaches, teachers, principals, school superintendents, one president of an insurance company, several high ranking army persons, and many who did not go into professions, but became plant foremen, etc. — good citizens, raising and supporting their own families.

This group is from Wayland. Think of all the other communities where teachers played a part in all careers. It is now time for them to receive some monetary rewards.

Story retracted

Dear Editor,
Please publish the following retraction in a prominent place in The Floyd County Times:

Per the demands of Janet Martin Beverly Triplett, the author of COAL CAMP KIDS — Growing Up Hard And Making It, Barbara Ford

Ritch, wishes all readers of The Floyd County Times to know the following material as published in The Floyd County Times, Wednesday, May 30, 1990, page A3, last two paragraphs of the second column and to end of second paragraph third column, is hereby retracted:

Janet Martin Beverly Triplett of Route 5, Box 1360, Louisa, Kentucky 41230, vehemently and adamantly denies the event, as described by Mr. Tony Whitaker of Monticello, Indiana, ever took place; while the story indicated Mr. Archie Beverly, deceased, was protecting "a little Martin girl" at the time of the said event, Janet Martin Beverly Triplett denies the incident ever took place. Mrs. Triplett, while not stating categorically she was "the little Martin girl" mentioned in the story, demands the story be retracted, stating "Archie Beverly never carried or owned a gun in his life."

The author apologizes to The Floyd County Times readers for any misconceptions this quaint story may have implanted about the chivalry and gallant actions of the late Mr. Archie Beverly. His widow, Janet Martin Beverly Triplett, demanding a retraction, denies said event. The author, having no desire to inflict further anguish upon Janet Martin Beverly Triplett, wishes it known said story, and a snapshot of the two boyhood friends, Archie Beverly and Allen Whitaker, are being deleted from the book, COAL CAMP KIDS — Growing Up Hard And Making It.

Supports McAninch

Dear Editor,
My husband and I would like to inform Magistrate Owens of the fact that Floyd County isn't the only place that's being buried in garbage; the whole planet is. Therefore, we need a viable solution to our waste disposal problems. Asking Robert McAninch to resign either of the positions he now holds is not a workable solution. On the contrary, it would be a disaster. No one knows more about solid waste disposal than he.

It seems to my husband and I that all Magistrate Owens and others want to do is complain and trade childish insults. This needs to stop and everyone should try to work together to save not only our beloved Floyd County, but our beloved planet as well.

Appreciates Academics

Dear Editor,
I really enjoyed your editorial on Friday, June 13. You called it Lecture #3. I don't know if I failed to see the titles or missed #1 and #2. If these two hit the target as well as #3, they should be read by all citizens who crave a better Floyd County. Much like your mother and aunt, I also read the obituary page. I think this shows how close we are as a community. Most of the time each of us will find information about a friend, relative or acquaintance.

But my favorite is the ACADEMIC section. The Friday paper does have a great deal of space devoted to school activities. What a wonderful use of space. Most of the news is the kind that makes the reader feel good. It includes such things as honors that students have won, scholarships they have received, or dean's lists that they have made. I don't know about other readers, but I prefer this to "50 marijuana plants found on county property."

I probably will enrage the person who suggested the Friday paper had too much stuff about school because I suggest we have even more. I think we teachers need to get students in the habit of expressing their views via the letters to the editor. I also think we need to print more examples of students' works. I sent one of the winning essays in Mountain Magic, the county literary magazine, to The Times, and they printed it. I would like to see some of the Young Authors compositions in the paper. We have a ton of talent in our schools. Let's display some of it.

I hope that every student, teacher, parent and administrator in the county read your thoughts on whose responsibility it is to get our children educated. You put it rather bluntly, and this is what we need. We all need to be held responsible. If for nothing else, it shows that someone cares what we are doing.

It may be time to take a rest, but do not get yourself out of the stew. I think things have begun to change. The garbage problem which you and your paper worked diligently to improve is still bad, but not nearly as bad as it was. So rest assured that some readers out here are reading and saying, "Way to go, Pam." I eagerly await your next lecture.

Brothers' dream comes true

As of today, Malcom Layne's dream has come true, he and his brother David are the new owners of Layne Brothers' Ford, formerly Campbell Motors of Ivel.

The son of Chester and Virginia Layne of Ivel, Malcom started in the car business in 1981 as general manager at Campbell Motors. He sold the first Ford truck and the first Honda from that lot where he worked until 1984. He then moved to Pikeville and worked at Johnson Motors Sales, Chevrolet, Buick and Olds until 1989.

Both, Malcom and David have taught for the Floyd County School System, David for 17 years and Malcom 5-1/2. Some may remember Malcom as head baseball coach and assistant boys basketball coach for McDowell in 1976-78 and assistant boys basketball coach for Betsy Layne when they went to the state competition in 1980. He also taught driver's education at Wheelwright and McDowell high schools.

Malcom and David credit their father for getting them interested in the sales business. Chester Layne, a well known businessman throughout Eastern Kentucky, started Tom's Potato Chips distributorship and vending machines as well as Big Sandy Live Stock Market in Ivel.

Now a "locally owned car lot", Layne Brothers Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, Ford Trucks and Honda will employ about 30 people. Malcom hopes this will help to boost the economy in the area. Their new telephone numbers are 886-1234 and 478-1234.

Keeping only the Hondas from the former owner, 150 brand new vehicles are in transit to the Layne brothers' lot. However, they will still service the vehicles purchased while Campbell owned the lot.

Malcom said his dream has been to own Campbell Motors. Now he is president and chairman of the board. His brother David is vice president and secretary.

Fiscal Court

hope they pick up and leave this county rather than sue us, if that be the case. Be that as it may, I expect every contestant will get contributions (from other such operators to fight a court case)."

Pledging to continue working on the ordinance along with the other Fiscal Court members, Hammond said if it was completed soon Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo would call a special meeting for its passage. Otherwise it would be brought before the court at the next meeting.

Several members of the Floyd Countians In Action group were at Friday's court meeting, sporting protest signs against Medisin Inc. The one action they asked the court to take was to "Prohibit any member of the Fiscal Court from sitting on any board of directors of a medical or private hazardous waste company and that these provisions apply to any board or commission established by the court."

Hammond said, "There is a state law already which prohibits Fiscal Court members being on boards or company boards of any type that would be in conflict with the business of the county." Hammond warned that the public would not want to restrict them from sitting on any public commissions that would benefit the county. "This might tie our hands and prohibit us from doing our jobs," he said.

OTHER BUSINESS

A resident from the old Holbrook Subdivision in Rough and Tough Creek appeared before the court asking two things, to have a ditch line cleaned out and a slip filled with rock and that pipe be provided so that city water could be run up another 2/10 of a mile to service six more houses.

The residents are willing to pay the $300 deposit required by the water company, but were told by Bill Harvey Howard that no pipe was available and they would need to go before the Fiscal Court to get some.

Judge Stumbo said he couldn't answer for the Prestonsburg City Utilities but only work with them. "I understand that you just want water and I'll talk with Bill Harvey and see what we can do," he said.

Charles Tackett of the Middle Creek Volunteer Fire Department presented the court with a petition for a fire tax district. He was advised that he needed to advertise it the required number of times, specifying boundaries, and if there was no protest, the court would address the issue at the next meeting.

Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson spoke about the new Disaster and Emergency Services regulations, noting he was concerned about the county's effectiveness at any accidents and spills because of the new regulations.

"Anything over a five-gallon diesel fuel spill, the DES has to come to it," Thompson said. "That's something we could take a garden hose to. Now we can't do anything. They've tied our hands."

He added that if a tanker should overturn, no one could even go to the driver's rescue for fear of suffering a personal fine. All the officials could do is block traffic until the DES people arrived. He mentioned that gas lines are broken every day when digging or cleaning out ditch lines, something the DES also needs to be called on.

Hammond pointed out that daily

there are 4000 non-originating tractor-trailers that pass through Floyd County going north and south. "With that kind of traffic hauling that kind of waste, we are sitting on a dynamite keg," he said. "Floyd County being the center of five counties, and being 'wet'...this new regulation would be a big expense to the county."

Apparently, if emergency workers are not DES qualified, they will not be reimbursed for any services they perform at a spill. Such things as digging temporary drainage ditches, pouring absorbent materials on a spill, any clearing of debris and the likes will have to be paid for by the county.

In other court business, residents of a roadway across from Hall Funeral Home in Martin requested to be taken into the county road system. Their request was approved.

An affidavit was submitted by the County Attorney's Office swearing that all employees there are drug free. Bids were accepted for county supplies and materials for the FY 90-91 from Kentucky Upgrade Trucking Company of Grayson, C&P of Allen, and Construction Material of Tennessee for pipe, Garland Hoskins for coal mix asphalt and Statewide Press for office supplies.

The next meeting of the Floyd County Fiscal Court will be Friday, Aug. 17.

W'wright officials accept street bid

Members of the Wheelwright City Council accepted a bid for repair and maintenance work on city streets at Thursday night's meeting.

Only two bids were received for the work, with one being rejected because of the lack of itemization of the bid. Floyd Carr Builders submitted the rejected proposal for road work. However, the bid did not state what specific work would be done and was therefore rejected.

Howell Construction submitted an itemized bid, but council members acknowledged that the total was beyond the allotted funding for the required work.

Mayor Kenneth Johnson said that he had been in touch with Calvin Howell, owner of Howell Construction, and that Howell was willing to let the council members delete specific items and charges from the bid, thus allowing the work to fall within budgetary guidelines.

Council members agreed to accept the bid with the option of amending and deleting certain aspects of the contracted service.

Council members then voted to hire Darrell Madden to conduct an audit of the city's finances.

Mayor Johnson told council members that he had received complaints about people parking on the streets on 79 Hill. "We have nowhere to park up there except on the street," said Johnson. Council members voted unanimously to leave the parking situation alone provided that the situation did not apply to Main Street, which is a state highway, specifically KY 306.

Before adjourning Mayor Johnson signed a letter authorizing the Kentucky League of Cities to represent the city of Wheelwright.

All council members were present except Larry Joe Mullins, who is on vacation. The Wheelwright City Council's next regular meeting will be Aug. 16 at 7 p.m.

Ed. programs get House approval

Congressman Chris Perkins announced last Friday that the full US House of Representatives overwhelmingly approved a comprehensive education and labor funding bill for fiscal year 1991 that includes a funds increase for Chapter 1 and Concentration grants education programs.

In education-related programs, Perkins said that funds for Chapter 1 programs had been increased by $1 billion and Concentration grants program by $150 million. Included in this education package is increased funding for the Dropout Prevention plan, the Perkins loan program, which provide low interest loans to students from low income families, and drug-free schools.

The Concentration grants program, using a formula created by Perkins that would apportion more money to those counties that have a higher proportion of financially-disadvantaged students, is now in its third year of existence. The original formula had previously targeted money to go exclusively to large urban areas, but Perkins successfully changed it to ensure that money would also be distributed to rural Southern school districts, including Eastern Kentucky schools.

The funding proposal now goes to the Senate for consideration.

The Cabbage Patch
by Marie Harmon

To some a garden is strictly for vegetables, to others it means flowers. A few of us combine them with outstanding success.

Marigolds are a very beautiful, eye-catching flower. They are also a good insect repellent when planted in with your vegetables. Their roots secrete a substance that prevents larva from staying in the soil. They will come up right after they hatch and are killed by cold and freezing weather.

Flowers are most effective when grouped, several of a single variety in a small space. One single plant standing alone will rarely be noticed or given a passing glance.

We all know to plant the lower growing plants in front of tall ones. If possible, always have a green background for your flower beds. Evergreen shrubs or any dense growing green plant will make an ideal background.

If flowers are to be used for cuttings, never plant near the house where the cut stems will detract from the appearance of the house or other plantings.

Clashing colors, overpowering varieties and plants with unsightly growing habits can ruin an otherwise beautiful garden. In most cases we tend to use more colors than we should with poorer results. Also the foliage and stems can either enhance or detract from an otherwise nice planting.

Select flowers known to grow well in your soil, especially in borders and foundation plantings. Don't expect to be able to buy or grow every flower that appeals to you. Experiment with different varieties and select from these the additions or substitutions for your regular old standbys.

Always when trying new varieties make sure you have enough to divide with your neighbors. Flowers given to me mean so much more than bought ones.

Biennials are ignored by so many people. Yet this group contains some of our most beautiful flowers. These are not permanent, therefore, they are less appealing. It is unwise to ignore such beauties as hollyhock, foxglove, canterbury bell and forget-me-nots, to name a few.

Since it takes biennials two years to reach flowering maturity, do not expect flowers the first year. The first year is given over to foliage and the second to flowering, setting seed and dying.

One way to keep a continual supply of flowers is to plant or sow seed of biennials every year in with the older plants.

Perennials are known as "something for everyone" flowers. Nowhere in nature is there such a variety as there is in perennials. All trees, shrubs, bulbs, sizes, shapes, forms and fragrances from delightful to deadly are in this group. They are like crab grass (which is one); they come back year after year. Most all perennials die out in winter, but come back in spring. Most of them have multiplied or at least doubled.

Perennials come in three categories, some for poor soil and shady areas, some for dry areas and some for general gardens. All should be fertilized with a good all-around fertilizer in the fall after the first killing frost.

Some things to keep in mind when selecting flowers are height, color, time of bloom, growing requirements such as light to heavy watering, shade to full sun, poor to rich soil, growing habits, hardiness and where and how they are going to be used.

Sounds like a lot more work than it really is. The ideal time to do all the planning is in the dead of winter when the seed catalogs begin to arrive.

Vietnam memorial planned for region

The Johnson City, Tenn., Veterans Center is planning to erect a Vietnam Memorial to honor the dead and missing from central Appalachia in that war.

According to Russ Russell, team leader for the center, names will be mounted on lighted, frosted glass panels in the windows of the center. The panels are to be portable so they can be used in ceremonies honoring those who served in Vietnam.

Dedication ceremonies for the memorial are tentatively set for POW/MIA week in September at the National Cemetery in Mountain Home, Tenn.

The project is expected to cost about $15,000 with money raised from local contributions. Any surplus funds will be used for other Vet Center projects to assist Vietnam veterans, Russell said.

In order for the memorial to be as inclusive as possible, Russell has submitted a listing of those killed or missing in action from Floyd and surrounding counties. He requests that additions or corrections to the list be sent to the Vet Center, 703 S. Roan St., Johnson City, Tenn. 37601, or by calling 615/928-8387.

Following is a list of names Russell has of area veterans for the memorial.

Campbell, Langley; Lawrence Edward Clark, Amba; Phillip Rodney Coleman, Wayland; Donald Hall, Printer; Donald Ray Haywood, Blue River; Andy Johnson Jr., McDowell; Lowell Johnson, Melvin; Jeff Mulkey, Banner; Billy Jay Pitts, Pyramid, and Ancel James Terry, Watergap.

When Embry's needed a new health insurance company, they returned to a familiar label.

A few years back, Embry's of Lexington left Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky for another health insurance company. They said our rates were too high.

In 1989, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky welcomed a new client — Embry's of Lexington. Now, why would a company who left us want to come back? Embry's learned the hard way that some health insurers lure new business with low rates the first year — often to follow up with steep rate hikes in succeeding years.

So Embry's signed up with us again. For a fair price. For value. For service. For the most recognized health care card in Kentucky. And Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky has taken steps to insure that Embry's — as well as companies across the commonwealth — joins the growing number of businesses that stay with us year after year.

We're concerned about rising health care costs. So we're working with our customers to control claims, cut administrative costs and keep our company on sound financial ground. We want to deliver the best value in health insurance possible — a value that will build strong, long-term relationships with every customer we have.

We have not reached all our goals. Not yet. But we're on our way. Choose us again, or for the first time. And choose the health plan companies across Kentucky are coming back to.

Good isn't good enough anymore.

Longball haunts P'burg

Paintsville downs P'burg as LL All-Star Champions

The Prestonsburg Little League All-Star team represented Floyd County well in the Little League All-Star tournament at Inez, that ended last Friday evening.

The Prestonsburg team fell to the Paintsville All-Stars, who repeated as champions, 6-0. Although Prestonsburg did not score in the game, the team still gave the Paintsville team a battle in the finals.

Paintsville, hammered out two home runs in the contest, as Craig Ratliff picked up the win. Alex Ward had a first inning home run with a runner on, and Josh McKenzie crashed a two-run shot in the third. Chris Hicks suffered the loss.

and Ward unloaded his home run off Hicks. Craig Ratliff walked and scored on a single by Casey Vanhoose. Jason Osborne came on in the first with one out and got Nolan Elam on strikes and Chris Stapleton on a bouncer to the mound.

"I may have made a mistake starting Hicks," said Osborne. "But I just thought we had pitched the other two enough."

Paintsville made it 6-0 with two more runs on McKenzie's homer over the center field fence. The ball shot over the fence on a line drive off the bat of the lefthanded batter. Osborne did not allow Paintsville anything else after the third.

hit. Osborne got serious and struck out Trimble, McKenzie and Ratliff.

Some good defense by Prestonsburg in the fifth inning quenched another Paintsville rally. VanHoose and Elam led the inning off with base hits. Osborne got pinch hitter Gary Roe to pop to second on a good catch by Jason Osborne as he went into short right field to make the play.

VanHoose tried to tag up and score, but Osborne's perfect peg to Castle at the play nailed VanHoose. Conley and McKenzie walked to load the bases, and Trimble hit a scorcher that Bennett Allen made a tremendous play on to retire the side.

"We are a better team when Bennett is at shortstop for us," said Coach Osborne of the play of his shortstop.

Prestonsburg made one last effort to score in the top of the sixth inning. Jeremy Osborne and Marsillett walked to lead off the inning. Allen was out pitcher to first, and Lemaster popped to short. With runners on second and third, Osborne tried to come home on a wild pitch but was tagged out at the plate, ending the game and making Paintsville champions for the second consecutive year.

Paintsville went through the tournament without a defeat, scoring runs in the double digits against all other opponents, except Prestonsburg. The local All-Star team finished the tournament with a 5-2 record.

Little League All-Star Champions

The Paintsville Little League All-Stars captured the regional title of the recent Little League tournament played at Inez, with a 6-0 victory over the Prestonsburg All-Stars. Members of the squad are (not necessarily in order) Brandon McKenzie, Tommy Trimble, Alex Ward, Josh McKenzie, Craig Ratliff, Casey Vanhoose, Nolan Elam, Chris Stapleton, Todd Tackett, Travis Jones, Corey McKenzie, Matt Conley, Gary Roe, Mike Copley. P'burg plays 5 games in 5 nights

"We just pitched our pitchers to death in this tournament," said Prestonsburg coach Rodney Osborne. "I would have like to play Paintsville with our kids getting four days rest. We were very tired. Some of my pitchers (Jason and Jeremy Osborne) had already pitched 12 innings each this week. Jeremy's arm is very sore. You can just touch it and it hurts him."

"One thing I have learned, if you are going to win this tournament you need three good pitchers."

Paintsville took a 4-0 lead in the first inning on a base hit by Brandon McKenzie. Tommy Trimble walked, Prestonsburg's problem was at the plate where the players were impatient in swinging at pitches over their heads and on the ground. Prestonsburg put together a mild threat in the top of the third. After Mike Castle was tagged out by the pitcher, Shawn Davis singled bringing up the top of the Prestonsburg order.

However, Ratliff fanned Jeremy Osborne and William Marsillett to stop any further threat.

Paintsville put two runners on in the bottom of the fourth on an error at second base and an Alex Ward base

Errors open door for Lexington to defeat Floyd County, 11-3

Call it being nervous, intimidated or whatever, the Floyd County 15-year-old All-Stars took two innings before they could right themselves and fell to the Lexington Southeast All-Stars, 11-3, in first round action of the East Regional Babe Ruth baseball tournament at Russell Springs Saturday afternoon.

Lexington scored three runs in the first inning and pushed across seven in the second. In each of the two innings, Floyd County was guilty of making three miscues.

However, after the first two innings, the local team played the type of ball it is capable of, but too late.

With one out in the first inning, Chris Clark singled up the middle. The ball was kicked around in the outfield, and Clark advanced to second where he scored on a single by Daniel Case. Scott Jones grounded to third where the ball was misplayed and Case, who stole second, scored on the error. Jones eventually came around on a base hit by Mark Reed.

Floyd County hit the ball well — but at someone — in the first inning. Barry Hall's deep drive in the first was hauled in by the centerfielder.

Seven runs crossed home plate in the second inning for Lexington as starting pitcher Robbie Sexton found himself in trouble again because of sloppy fielding.

Bobby Jones walked and Jason Reynolds followed with a double, scoring Jones. Reed bounced to second, where Scott elected to come home to nail Reynolds, but a wayward throw eluded the catcher at home, allowing the run to score.

Singles by Martin, Jones, Morris and two walks to Rose and Reynolds scored four other runs for a 10-0 lead. Brad Scott came on in relief of Sexton and got the side out.

Williams had a no-hitter going into the bottom of the fifth inning when Joey Brown got a two out single for Floyd County. Williams had retired the first 11 batters he faced until the hit by Brown.

In the fifth, Floyd County got on the scoreboard when, with one out, Earl Cook reached on an error at short. After Frank Martin grounded out to third Chris Merrill was hit by a pitch, putting runners on first and second. Brown then lined a solid base hit to centerfield to score Cook from second base.

Floyd came back in the bottom of the sixth inning and scored two other runs. Bud Kidd singled and stole second. After Willie Prater grounded out to second, Shannon Newsome lined a rope to center field, scoring Kidd.

Brad Scott had a single and Earl Cook followed with a single to load the bases for Floyd. Neil Martin worked Williams for a walk, forcing in Newsome with the second run of the inning. Merrill then lined a shot between third and short that the shortstop made a tremendous back-handed stab of and turned it into a double play, doubling up Scott off third, ending the threat.

In Lexington's seventh inning, Floyd County pulled off the old "hidden ball" trick. Charles Humphrey got a one out single and on a pick off throw to first base, Barry Hall kept the ball that went undetected by either the runner or first base coach. When Humphrey took a lead off the bag, Hall put the tag on him and Humphrey stood in disbelief.

Scott hurled a strong five innings for Floyd County after coming on in the second inning. Lexington could only score one other run, and that was in the top of the fifth inning on two base hits, a walk and a balk.

Rain played havoc on the rest of the schedule for the Floyd County team as the tournament director had to keep moving the games up.

Sexton was the losing pitcher and Williams was the winner. Floyd County stranded five runners, and Lexington left three on base. Lexington committed only one error while Floyd had 10.

Top Kentuckian Roberts makes strong showing

Citing the inability to keep water and fluids down during the Goodwill Games in Seattle, local runner Rick Roberts finished 507th out of 3,500 plus runners in the marathon run of the games with a time of 3:20:12.

Roberts was in 159th place at the 13-mile mark (halfway point) with a 1:26:52 and looking at a possible 2:52:00 finish. However, he said he experienced problems in keeping the fluids down at the 19th mile and on in.

"I ended up being stuck four times before they could find a vein to feed me glucose and I was running a 102-degree temperature," said the Goodwill Games runner. "My veins collapsed some from dehydration."

Roberts finished 108th out of 588 runners in the 30-39 age group making him the top Kentuckian in the run.

Roberts says that he is ready for the Bluegrass Games that will get underway next weekend in Lexington, Georgetown and Frankfort.

McDowell cheerleaders picked as best of junior high squads

Clutching their trophy in hand, the McDowell Junior High School cheerleaders came away with the rating of the "Best Junior High School" cheerleading squad for the second straight year, at the recent National Cheerleaders Association (NCA) camp at Prestonsburg Community College.

The Best Junior High Squad award is an award the camp staff gives to the best squad overall attending the camp.

The Left Beaver School cheerleaders also came in second to the Adams Middle School in the "Awards of Excellence" award.

The Best Junior High squad was selected on the basis of a squad's cheerleading technique, unity, friendliness, cooperation, leadership and sportsmanship.

The NCA sponsors the prestigious "Award of Excellence" at each of more than 315 NCA camps across the US.

The NCA nominates the most outstanding squads to compete for this award. This year's camp had three squads nominated to compete. Each squad was judged on two cheers to determine the winner and runner-up. Both winners automatically qualify to compete in the NCA 1990-91 high school cheerleaders National Championship in Dallas, Texas, in December. McDowell was named runner-up and received a plaque for the squad's accomplishments.

A spirit stick was a daily award given at the camp that the McDowell squad won both days it was presented. The squad also won several superior and excellent ribbons for the daily cheer competition.

The McDowell squad is coached by Jerri Turner, a veteran McDowell cheerleader. Turner has been sponsoring the junior high squad for the past three years. She teaches third grade at McDowell Elementary school.

The McDowell squad is composed of a 12-member squad from the sixth, seventh and eighth grade. The cheerleading squad cheer at all the McDowell Junior High boys varsity basketball games. The cheerleading squad may be taking part in regional competition in Lexington later on.

Crawford and Stayton will have an added feature on "How To" baseball tips that is sure to improve anyone's game.

Each all-star team in the tournament will have 15 kids between the ages of 11 and 12, who were chosen by a panel of Little League coaches.

Tennis tourney slated Aug 1-12

The largest tennis tournament in Eastern Kentucky will be Aug. 1-12 at the Archer Park's new tennis courts, according to Kaye and Don Willis, tournament directors.

The eighth annual Branham and Baker Tennis Tournament has always been a big drawing card for tennis players throughout the state. The tournament has attracted over 150 participants in previous years, making it the largest in the area.

The tournament will be played in men's and women's A, B and C singles; A and B doubles; mixed doubles and 35 and over.

This will be the first year the tournament will be played on the new tennis courts at Archer Park. This should be an exciting tournament as some of the area's best, along with some from out of state, gather for the two-week affair.

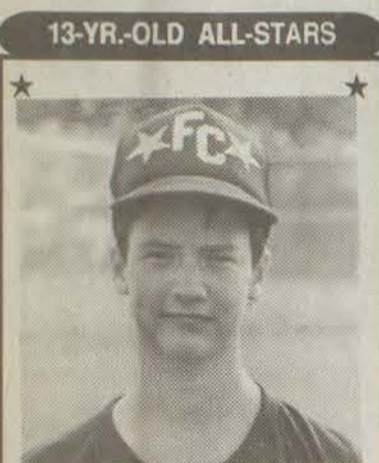

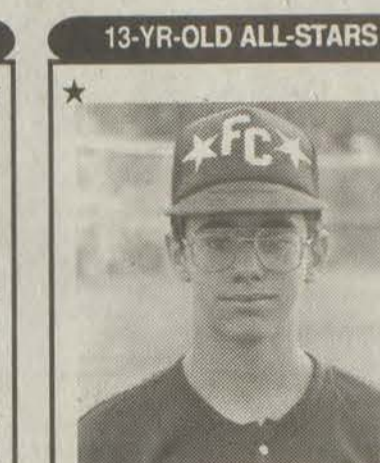

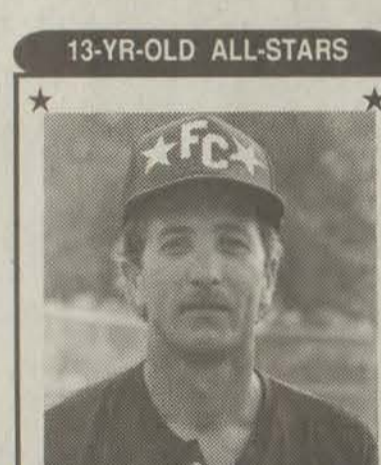

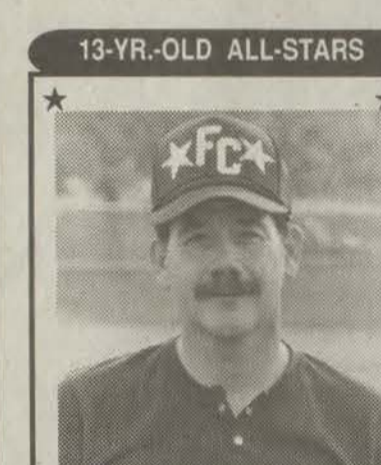

For more information on the tournament, call Don or Kaye Willis at 886-2552.

Bassin' with the pros

RIGGING YOUR OWN BOAT HELPS WHEN TROUBLE OCCURS

The next time you purchase a bass boat, consider doing the rigging yourself, or at least being present when the dealer does it.

That's the advice from Linda England, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff and considered one of the best lady fishermen in America. Fredda Lee, also a Johnson pro and top female competitor, agrees.

"When you rig your own boat, or at least watch it being rigged," England explains, "you learn where everything is located and connected. This can be an advantage if problems, especially electrical problems, occur when you're on the water."

"You can usually go straight to the trouble spot and correct it."

Another major advantage of self-rigging, says Lee, is that you can place dashboard gauges and other equipment on the boat exactly where you want it.

"Linda and I were present when our boats were rigged," she explains.

"We each like to have a surface temperature gauge and a pH monitor mounted where we can see them from both the console and the front deck."

"Many fishermen don't watch these instruments when they're running," continues the Johnson pro, "so they mount them differently. Because we were present, we were able to locate them where we wanted them."

"Each fisherman is different," says England, "and has his own preferences of where he wants certain things located on his boat. Their placement is important to him because of his style of fishing, but there is no way a dealer can know that."

One tip both England and Lee offer is to attach your boat's battery boxes with screws so they remain stationary in rough water. Place the tie down straps under the box first, then screw the boxes in place, being careful not to drill a hole completely through the hull.

"If you're in really rough water," explains Lee, "a bouncing ride can shift a battery, which in turn could break a wire or cause a bad connection that would result in a loss of engine power. In big waves, losing engine power could be disastrous."

All-American Cheerleader Nominees

Teddi Pack, daughter of Johnny and Peggy Pack of Drift and Valerie Vance, daughter of Chad and Janet Vance of Hi Hat, were chosen as All-American cheerleaders nominees at the recent National Cheerleaders Association (NCA) Camp at Prestonsburg Community College. Five girls were chosen by the NCA staff, out of more than 100 girls attending the camp, to compete for the honor of All-American. McDowell was well represented with two nominees. Vance was also an All-American on last year's squad. Each girl performed a cheer and tumbling pass for the competition. Erin Howell, the winner of the award, and the other four nominees are now eligible to participate in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade and the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Ireland. What rock climbers are up to now . . .

by Mark Taylor
In a world of extremes it seems redundant to make rock climbing harder than it already appears.

But for those in search of the latest in vertical challenges, the stark, arid landscape of the Colorado Plateau country of Canyonlands National Park and southwestern Colorado is the latest call.

For there, in the lost land of hoodoos and stone bridges made famous by author Edward Abbey, a few young climbers are redrawing the limits of the sport.

They do their work among the soaring sandstone cliffs, walls, buttresses and buttes of Canyonlands. Rocks there are defined and transected by fissures and cracks. From hairline tracings to fissures big enough to swallow a Winnebago, the canyon country of Utah and southern Colorado is a world of cracks.

For the climber, the soaring sandstone splits of the Colorado Plateau offer a new vision and version of the sport.

"Many are just straight up — straight as an arrow," says climbing photographer David Benyak. "This type of crack climbing is totally different."

Benyak recently spent 12 days photographing world-class climber John Duran of Albuquerque as he climbed a number of the Canyonlands more challenging crack routes. Duran works at the Wilderness Centre.

This brand of climbing is in stark contrast to the more typical "sport" — or "face" — climbing normally associated with rock climbing.

"With face, or sport climbing, you can see the (hand and foot) holds," explains Duran. "It's a more natural kind of climbing for the human body; it's almost like climbing a ladder."

But for the crack climber, the range of hand and foothold options usually dwindles to the single vertical line of a fingertip width split in the sandstone wall.

And while face climbers can plot a course from rest stop to rest stop, a crack climber's rest is usually limited to a fist-wide opening from which he can hang his weight supported solely by the friction of a bunched fist jammed hard against the rock.

"You can really know," says Duran. "I mean, a crack does whatever it wants."

"It can be real scary."

Like the cracking of a windshield, the minute — though persistent — upward thrust of the Colorado Plateau has created a never-ending variety of climbs in the walls of Canyonlands.

"It is probably one of the meccas for crack climbing in the world," says Duran. "There are cracks so long and unrelenting that a lot of them haven't been done, or maybe they've been done once."

As if the challenge of rock and crack were not enough, climbers must contend with the desiccating heat of the Utah desert. Like a thermal sponge, the sandstone soaks up and bathes the climber in the overwhelming heat of the sun.

"It was just sweltering," recalls Duran. "It was about 100 degrees against the rock."

"But it was fun."

While the majority of Canyonland cracks run from 40-80 feet, some snake as far as 140 feet above the desert floor.

With the exception of a few climbs in southwest Colorado, Benyak and Duran focused primarily on the canyons in the Indian Creek area of Canyonlands.

And even for a highly regarded climber, like Duran, the cracks of Canyonlands hide many climbing secrets to be learned.

And while the traditional tools and techniques of the rock climber can coax out those secrets, when the world shrinks down to a fingertip grip of sandstone 60 feet above the cactus and horned toads, something else is needed.

"It's a whole mind game," observes Duran. "You just have to be mentally tough to keep going."

LEXINGTON—More than 15,000 people from throughout Kentucky will participate in the sixth annual Bluegrass State Games, July 27-29.

Out of those 15,000 plus, Floyd County will have seven teams taking part, and seven individuals will go it solo. The seven teams will be made of six softball teams and one basketball. There will be individual competition in tennis, archery, shooting, track and field.

In men's class A softball, State-wide Recovery will take on Mason Shell in a tough division of softball. The game is scheduled for Sunday, July 29 at 10 a.m. at Gainesway Park in Lexington.

In men's class B softball, defending champion Ken's Sport's Shop will face the winner of the Troy - Brew Crew game. The champions will throw the first pitch at 1 p.m. Saturday, July 28. The game will be played at Castlewood Park in Lexington.

In class C softball play, Dale McKinney's WMDJ squad will face Wally's Pub in a noon start at Capitol View Park in Frankfort. Johnson Motors will face the CBC - Kentucky State Police winner at 1 p.m.

The women will also be in action at Southland Park on Hill 'N Dale Drive. The Brew Crew will face the winner of the Ebony Express - Angels game at 2 p.m. on Saturday. The Lady Blues will square off against the winner of the Bud Light and Sycamore game at 4 p.m. on Saturday.

All softball games will be played according to American Softball Association (ASA) rules. Each game will have a limit of one hour and 15 minutes.

In other events, Brian Wallen, Allen Central and son of Arnold and Mary Wallen of Eastern, will take part in the discus throwing in the Track and Field events. Wallen was champion in the 1988 games. He did not enter last year's games because of an injury.

Wallen has made his mark in high school as an outstanding discus thrower, and he entered the games when he was in the eighth grade for his first competition outside of school athletics. Wallen will be throwing at 11 a.m. at Shively Field on the campus of the University of Kentucky.

Also from Allen Central will be Tim Stone of Hippo. Stone, entering the games for the first time, says he is excited about being part of the Track and Field events. Stone will be in the group that Wallen is in and they will be competing against each other in the discus throw.

Carolyn and Clarissa Short, Allen, will be taking part in the tennis competition. Site and time is unknown at this time.

Previous medal winners in the Bluegrass Games in the field of Archery are Kenneth "Buzz" Allen and Randy Polk. The duo will be in the Hunter's Round behind the airport in Lexington on Sunday at 8 a.m. Allen is a winner of three gold medals and one silver medal in the past three years. Polk has won a bronze and a silver in previous meets.

Also representing Floyd County will be the five Senior Citizens Centers, Wheelwright, Betsy Layne, Martin, Prestonsburg and Wayland. Regulars at those centers are among 3,000 senior citizens who are taking part in the one mile walk through the streets of Frankfort's most beautiful historic districts.

more than 1,000 participants, this year's Bluegrass State Games will provide plenty to see and do during the weekend. The activities start on Friday, July 27, at 11:30 a.m. in Frankfort with the symbolic lighting of the torch.

Fifteen runners will carry the torch from the steps of the Old Capitol to Lexington for the opening ceremonies. Among the runners will be members of the Kentucky National Guard's running team. Kentucky's team has risen from 49th in the country to 10th in just one year of competition.

The festivities move to Lexington at mid-afternoon in the University of Kentucky's Commonwealth Stadium. At 2 p.m. Bluegrass State Games participants will check in and receive their final instructions. Throughout the day at Commonwealth Stadium, a festival-like atmosphere will keep participants and their families busy. Athletes will begin lining up at 7:30 p.m. for the traditional parade of athletes which starts the opening ceremonies.

Atlanta Hawks star Dominique Wilkins will give inspirational remarks to lead into the lighting of the Bluegrass State Games Flame.

REDS TO BE TESTED ON ROAD TRIP

The time of truth will be coming up for the Cincinnati Reds this week as they will begin an all important road trip to the west coast in the "land of the giants." The San Francisco Giants that is, the ball club challenging the Reds for the top spot in the

Attends camp

Greg Hunter, Betsy Layne, recently attended Don Lane's Transylvania Basketball Camp, July 9-13 in Lexington. More than 200 campers attended the camp that stressed the fundamentals of the game such as dribbling, shooting, passing, rebounding and free throw shooting. Hunter and players from Henry Clay and Lafayette won the three-on-three title at the camp. All three players received trophies. Hunter is the son of Phillip and Frances Hunter of Honaker.

Western Division of the National League.

The Reds will be first at San Diego, no easy matter there, and then on to windy Candlestick Park, the park most players love to hate, for a four-game set with manager Roger Craig's Giants.

The Giants have been the hottest team in baseball of late, winning 11 of their last 13 games and trailing the front-running Reds by 7-1/2 games as of this writing.

After the Giants series, the Reds will venture to Dodger Stadium for an encounter with Tom Lasorda's Los Angeles Dodgers, again no easy matter. If that is not enough the Reds will then return home for a home stand with the same three ball clubs and again with a four-game set with the Giants. (Where are the St. Louis Cardinals?)

So in less than a month's time the Reds will be going head to head with the Giants in an eight-game series. A split of the eight games would be welcomed, I'm sure, by the Reds leaders, however, any ground lost to the Giants in the next three weeks will be costly to the Reds' chances of winning a Division title at the beginning of the '90s. Of course all Reds fans would love to see a eight-game sweep.

After this series of exchanges with the Western Division the Reds will finish out their scheduled games with Eastern Division teams, beginning with St. Louis, who will probably be playing their best baseball about that time. Oh well, on Big Red Machine!

LITTLE LEAGUE ALL-STAR TOURNAMENT GREAT

It has been a great 10 days of Little League All-Star baseball at Inez. The folks in Martin County have done a great job of hosting the All-Star tournament.

One thing I have found wrong, and so have other fans, has been the delay of game between innings. The reason seems to be that the umpires have to talk or smoke. To smoke requires leaving the field. After the pitchers have all warmed up, they have to wait for the umpires to get ready.

Now this is the only thing that I have seen that I would like to also see changed. It delays the game and many of the parents have complained about it. Otherwise, the umpires have done a great job of calling the games.

ALL-STAR TOURNAMENTS

What a showing by all the Floyd County All-Star teams over the past two weeks. What we have witnessed on the lower level, such as Senior, Babe Ruth and Little League, is a good sign for our high school teams in the future.

Let's take a closer look these teams.

P'BURG SENIOR LEAGUE 14-15-YEAR-OLD ALL-STAR
 Came from the losers' bracket in the Senior League All-Star tournament at Paintsville to win the playoffs and advance to regional play. Defeated Paintsville twice in the finals. Coached by Phillip Tucker, Robert Tucker and assisted by Todd Tucker.

P'BURG SENIOR LEAGUE 13-YEAR-OLD ALL-STAR
 Placed second to Paintsville in 13-year-old division. Won over Paintsville in one final game and lost in the second game. Coached by Ashland Gearheart, Bobby Risner and assisted by Bobby Spencer.

P'BURG LITTLE LEAGUE ALL-STAR
 Won five of seven games and finished second in the All-Star tournament at Inez. Played five games in five days in falling to Paintsville in the finals. Showed a lot of determination coming out of the lower bracket. Coached by Rodney Osborne.

FLOYD COUNTY 15-YEAR-OLD BABE RUTH ALL-STAR
 Defeated Carr Fork to win the District 9 championship and advanced to the East Regional at Russell Springs. Coached by Bud Kidd.

FLOYD COUNTY 14-YEAR-OLD BABE RUTH OLD ALL-STAR
 Won over host team, Johnson County, to win the District 9 championship and to move on to Lexington for regional play. Coached by Glenn Floyd.

FLOYD COUNTY 13-YEAR-OLD BABE RUTH ALL-STAR
 A big winner over Johnson County in the finals of District 9 play at Johnson Central. Went on to Greensburg for regional play. Coached by Don Hansford.

So, it has been a successful season for Floyd County All-Star teams. We offer our congratulations to each team for a fine season and to each coach who took time and effort to coach all the teams. It has been a great season.

DID ROSE RECEIVE A HARSH SENTENCE?

I am sure there are mixed emotions over the sentence that all time singles hitter Pete Rose received for his tax evasion charges. Rose was sentenced to five months in prison, three months at a halfway house, $50,000 and 1,000 hours of community service.

Some say the sentence was just a slap on the hand. Others thought that perhaps a fine and community service were all that was needed. I believe that the judge wanted to make a personal example of Rose and show that celebrities are not above the law.

Coaching can be fun, exciting or nerve racking. Central Baptist hosts night run

On Aug. 18, more than 8,000 runners and walkers will fill the streets of downtown Lexington to participate in one of the largest fitness events in the state... "A Midsummer Night's Run!"

The race is in its sixth year under the sponsorship of Central Baptist Hospital.

A Midsummer Night's Run began in 1985 with a little more than 2,000 participants. Over the past four years it has grown into a gala running event. In addition to the 8,000 runners projected for this year, more than 20,000 spectators are expected to line the streets to view the race.

The city of Lexington closes all major downtown streets so runners can travel safely through the business district of the city. Most downtown merchants, hotels and businesses participate on race evening. Race day event this year include something for every member of the family. Jugglers, mimes and magicians will entertain the crowd beginning at 6 p.m. Activities have also been planned to encourage participation at all levels by having a One Mile Family Fun Walk/Run, a "Retro Run" (1/8 of a mile backward!) and the traditional 5K race. All proceeds from the event benefit the Neonatal Intensive Care unit in Central Baptist Hospital. For more information on the race, contact Lynn Wiseman, Scott Kuhn or Walter Zausch at 606-275-6665.

Golf Classic set for Sept. 3-9

Lexington Vice Mayor Pam Miller recently announced details of the Vantage Presents Bank One Senior Golf Classic, Sept. 3-9 in Lexington. "For the eighth year, the Senior Golf Classic will be the premier golfing event in Kentucky. This year we are especially excited about the tournament because it will be held at the Urban County Government's new golf course, Kearney Hill Links, which has been nominated by Golf Digest for 'best new public course of the year,'" Miller said.

Last year 35,000 golf enthusiasts came out to watch golfing greats from the Senior PGA tour.

The purse of this year's Vantage Presents Bank One Senior Golf Classic will be $300,000, with the winner receiving $45,000. To date, 55 out of 78 available pro playing spots have been filled. In addition to the tournament purse, there will be two other professional prizes this year: the Senior Shootout and the Vantage Classics competition.

Miller also announced two new events that will be part of this year's tournament, the Vantage Cup Million Dollar Hole-In-One contest and Challenge the Champion.

The Million Dollar Hole-In-One Contest will be held over 10 days, Aug. 23 through Sept. 2 at Lakeside Golf Course, with the finals being held at Kearney Hill Links, Tuesday, Sept. 4.

All persons interested in participating are encouraged to take advantage of the opportunity to win the grand prize of $1 million or other prizes, Miller said.

Challenge the Champion is a program enabling golfers in the area to challenge Rives McBee's Bank One Classic final round score of 69. Upon either matching or besting this score, using their handicap, the golfers will qualify for a final event.

The winners at each local contest and their club professional will participate in a final event Tuesday, Aug. 28 at Kearney Hill Links. The amateurs will be competing for merchandise, and the club professional will compete for a share of a cash purse.

A substantial portion of the proceeds from these two special events, as well as the Vantage Presents Bank One Senior Golf Classic, go to support the Senior Citizens Enhancement Foundation and the Sweet 16 Academic Showcase. In the past seven years over $200,000 has been donated to help build a large addition to the Lexington Senior Citizens Center and to help fund scholarships for high schools students.

On Monday, Sept. 3, the qualifying round will be held as well as pro practice. The Shootout will be taking place on Tuesday, along with the Hole-In-One Contest. The youth clinic, which in the past was held on Wednesday, will be moved to Tuesday afternoon. Rives McBee will conduct this year's clinic, which last year attracted 500 young golfers.

The pro-am tournament will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 5-6. Also on Wednesday, the Vantage Classics Outing will be held at Spring Lake Golf Course. The Senior Golf Classic will be Friday, Sept. 7 through Sunday, Sept. 9. The award ceremony will immediately follow completion of play on Sunday.

Tickets for the Vantage Presents Bank One Senior Golf Classic can be purchased at a 50 percent discount if ordered through the mail and the orders are made by Aug. 10. After Aug. 10, all tickets are regular price and can also be purchased at any Bank One location. Call 259-1825 to receive a mail order form and tournament brochure.

NEW LAWS

AFFECT SPORTSMEN
Here's a rundown of several new laws that affect Kentucky sportsmen beginning July 13, 1990.

SHORTER TIME REQUIRED TO BE LEGAL RESIDENT
After 30 days, new Kentucky residents may purchase resident sport hunting/fishing licenses. The old law required six months to establish legal residency.

LICENSES NOT REQUIRED
Kentucky residents declared totally and permanently disabled by the federal Social Security Administration or a state Workers' Compensation Board don't need to purchase sport hunting and fishing licenses. Applications for disability exemption cards are available from the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Division of Fiscal Control, #1 Game Farm Rd., Frankfort 40601, or call 502-564-4224.

In addition, resident servicemen on furlough of more than three days may hunt and fish statewide without purchasing sport licenses. Servicemen must carry proof of furlough status while afield. Previously, furloughed servicemen were restricted to the county of legal residence before entering the service.

JUNIOR HUNTERS
Junior hunting licenses remain valid for the license year in which they are issued. This means 15-year-olds who turn 16 before the current license year ends do not have to buy an adult hunting license. (Kentucky's license year runs March 1 through the last day of February the following year.)

HUNTING PRIVATE LAND
Regardless of the type of hunting equipment used, all deer and turkey hunters must obtain written permission from landowners or tenants before hunting deer or turkeys on privately owned land.

A law prohibiting damage to buildings, fences, crops, livestock or domestic animals while hunting or fishing on private land was passed to protect landowners' interests.

SPOTLIGHTING
Kentucky's spotlighting law makes it illegal to "deliberately cast the rays of a spotlight or other artificial light, with the intent to poach, into any field, pasture, woodlands or forest, whether public or private, where wildlife or domestic livestock may reasonably be expected to be located." Violators may be fined $300 to $1,000, plus court costs. (The law doesn't apply to vehicle headlights "in a normal course of travel" or other legitimate activities requiring the use of lights.)

SHOOTING FROM ROADWAYS
In addition to it being illegal to shoot from a vehicle, it is against the law to shoot on, over or across any public roadway.

OHIO RIVER FISHING LICENSES
Ohio River sport and commercial fishing licenses are no longer available. Nonresidents licenses to fish only the Ohio River were deemed unnecessary because the states of Ohio and Indiana share jurisdiction with Kentucky on the Ohio River, and Illinois is attempting to gain similar status. Ohio River licenses issued prior to July 13, 1990, will be honored through the last day of February, 1991.

I WOULD BUY IF I HAD THE MONEY
The General Assembly established the Kentucky Heritage Conservation Fund Board which will spend the next couple of years identifying wetlands and natural areas it can't purchase because the "Fund" has no funds. The legislature did not approve a proposed increase in the existing land transfer fee which could have provided around $5 million annually toward purchasing lands to be protected.

BOATING

Water activities involving fewer than 100 boats (fishing tournaments, boating contests) no longer need a permit from the Kentucky Division of Water Patrol.

DOGS ON DEER PUBLICITY GAINS ATTENTION
Recent reports on free ranging dogs killing deer in Kentucky prompted an anti-hunting editorial proposing an old idea — an open season on dogs.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, supported completely by sportsmen's dollars, does not endorse this approach to solving the state's free ranging dog problem. Educating dog owners, it seems, is the better way.

Dog owners need to realize that well-fed but unconfined pets can meet with other roaming dogs and literally run deer to death. Dogs don't have to be particularly large to cause this kind of damage.

John Phillips, deer biologist for the fish and wildlife department, recalls an incident in which one deer was chased for seven miles by a pack of dogs. The deer escaped into a fenced area only to die of a lung hemorrhage.

Nearly 2,000 whitetails succumb to dog-related deaths each year in Kentucky. According to Phillips, an average of 15 incidents are reported annually from each Kentucky county.

Dogs on deer is of special concern in Eastern Kentucky where deer populations are making a comeback with the aid of the fish and wildlife department's deer release program and the support of knowledgeable wildlife enthusiasts.

AVOID TICKS: PREVENT LYME DISEASE
Pinhead size, orange and brown "deer ticks" are most common carrier of Lyme disease that, if untreated in the early stages, can lead to serious long-lasting problems such as chronic fatigue, depression and repeated attacks of arthritis.

The best way to prevent Lyme disease, or any tick-related infection, is to keep all ticks away from your skin. Wearing protective clothing and checking yourself (also children and pets) for the presence of ticks after being outdoors are a couple of common-sense things you can do.

It's a good idea to choose light-colored clothing that is not only cooler, but makes spotting ticks easier. If you plan to be outside for a long time especially in wooded or grassy areas, wear a cap or hat, long-sleeved shirt and long pants. Be sure to tuck pant legs inside boots or socks — and you may want to add a strip of tape where the two meet.

Informational Materials On Lyme Disease Available: "Hitchhikers in the Woods," a 15-minute video produced by Whitetails Unlimited Inc., and the Gundersen Medical Foundation, is available for $24.95, plus $2.50 for shipping. For more information on how to order call 1-800-274-5471.

A free brochure on deer ticks and Lyme Disease also is available from Whitetails Unlimited. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope along with your request and mail to Whitetails Unlimited Inc., PO Box 422, Sturgeon Bay, Wis. 54235

"Ticks, Wildlife and Lyme Disease in the Southeast," a color brochure which costs 15 cents per copy, is available from the Southeastern Cooperative Wildlife Disease Study, College of Veterinary Medicine, University of Georgia, Athens, Ga. 30602.

68 entrants Kiwanis golf tournament a success at Jenny Wiley

According to Teddy Hall, director of the Kiwanis Golf Tournament, the recent event was a tremendous success.

"We gave away plaques, dinners, golf visors, golf balls and lottery tickets," said the director. "We had to buy more food and drinks than we anticipated. Everyone just had a great time and our tournament was a very successful one."

The foursome of Steve Osborne, Todd Duff, Chris Reed and Barry Campbell took first place in the annual tournament. Diver McKenzie, Darren Conn, Brent Rose and Mike Newsome came in second.

Other finishers were: third place, Danny Hamilton, Freddy James, Bill Letton and Gordon Parido; fourth place, Ted Hall, Jeff Riley, Tony Branham and John Campbell.

Jeff Riley received a gold putter for the longest putt of 21 feet. Dr. Rob Herrick was closest to the hole, coming to within 2-1/2 feet. Herrick was awarded a plaque and dinner for two. Elmer Slone was second and Steve Osborne was third with 3 feet and 2-1/2 feet, respectively. Osborne's hole was the "money hole" where he won half of the money in the pot.

Diver McKenzie had the longest drive of 320 yards to win a driver. Teddy Hall came in second with a drive of 305 which netted him a dozen of roses and a gift certificate of $50 at Hielig-Meyers.

Closest to the circle went to Mike Gibson who won tickets to the Jenny Wiley Theatre and a free car wash. Larry Castle finished second and won dinner for two at the Jenny Wiley Lodge. Leo Music came closest to the line and was awarded two golf visors and dinner for two.

Hall received his plaque for a hole-in-one that he scored on May 3 at the Jenny Wiley course. Hall shot the hole-in-one on the number 8 hole, a distance of 152 yards.

The tournament drew 68 entrants, and Hall says that was "a real good turn out."

Russell's Sparks handcuffs Paintsville on two hits

The Paintsville Little League All-Stars matched up with the Russell All-Stars pretty evenly but just could not muster enough hits, losing for the first time in Little League All-Star play last weekend.

Paintsville fell to Russell 3-0 as Russell's starting pitcher Casey Sparks yielded just two hits to the hard-hitting Paintsville team.

Sparks picked up the win, and Alex Ward was the losing pitcher for Paintsville. The loss was Paintsville's first and drops the Johnson County team into the lower bracket of play. Paintsville went through the district tournament at Inez without a loss.

The game was close as neither team could really put together a big inning. Russell took a 1-0 lead in the first inning. With one out, A.J. Riley singled. Jamie Kersey, putting runners on first and second. Both runners moved up on a passed ball. Sparks reached on an error that also allowed Riley to score the firstinning run. Ward settled down and struck out Steve Hall and Chris Bouton to end the inning.

Ward then fanned the three batters he faced in the bottom of the second inning. Ward had nine strikeouts in the game.

Paintsville had an opportunity to score in the first when Brandon McKenzie lead off with a walk. After Tommy Trimble struck out, Ward drew a base on balls. Sparks then fanned power hitter Josh McKenzie and got Casey VanHoose to bounce to the pitcher.

Ward breezed through the third and fourth innings, but Russell pushed across two runs in the bottom of the fifth to take the 3-0 lead. After Steve Neese fanned, Houston Fraley reached on an error at third base. Riley then greeted Ward with a run-producing double.

Riley then scored on a base hit by Kersey. Kersey was nailed at the plate when he attempted to score on a fly ball to centerfielder Craig Ratliff. Ratliff put the throw on target, and Kersey was tagged out at the plate to complete a double play.

Paintsville had trouble making contact with the bats, something that is uncharacteristic of this team, and Sparks struck out the side in the fourth innings. Sparks recorded 10 strikeouts and issued four walks. Ward, who pitched good enough to win, walked only two batters and gave only four hits.

Paintsville's only two hits came off the bats of Stapleton, who doubled in the second and Trimble who singled in the fifth. Paintsville was guilty of four errors and Russell played errorless baseball.

Paintsville left six runners on base, and Russell stranded four.

SEASON TICKETS ON SALE FOR PIKE COL. BASKETBALL

Season tickets are now on sale for the 1990-91 Pikeville College Bears and Lady Bears basketball season, according to head coach Marc Comstock.

"Season tickets are a great way to show your support for the Bears and Lady Bears and to make attending their games more convenient for you," Comstock said. "People who attend Bears games regularly can really save a lot of money." The season tickets entitle holders to sit in the reserved seating section in the top three rows of the Pikeville College gym in seats with chair backs, Comstock said. "Our goal this year is to sell out all 332 reserved seats for the season," he added.

Season tickets cost $25 each and will admit the holder to all home games of both the Bears and Lady Bears. With each purchase of a reserved season ticket, the holder will receive a free general admission season ticket to share with family or friends.

Season ticket holders also will receive season schedule cards and a preseason newsletter with their ticket purchase.

For more information, or to request a ticket purchase form, contact Comstock at 432-9231, 432-9319 or 432-1284.

The Log Cabin, Part 9

The healing art, mountain style

by Barbara P. Martin
Contributing Writer

"Doc Bogue" Ratliff, who once owned the log cabin in question, got his nickname because he was called on to help the people on the creek in time of sickness. Doctors were so scarce then, and capable people were sought to help cure the ills of the people in their neighborhood.

"Bogue" is short for bogus or imitation doctor. Many became quite artful in helping out in times of sickness in isolated places like Wilson's Creek. Some had started medical training, but many had never had any formal training.

My father-in-law, Thomas Jefferson Martin, took two years of pre-medical training and was considered to be the bogus doctor on Goose Creek. My grandmother, Elizabeth Allen Martin, was considered to be as good as Dr. J.H. Allen or Dr. Higgins, so it has been said.

Dr. Allen has been quoted as saying that if Lizzie could not do more, there was no use getting him.

One of my premedical professors told me that with my two years of training, that I probably know more than my grandfather did back in the late 1800s and early 1900s, due to the rapid advancement in medical technology since that time.

From what I have been able to find out, my grandfather was a real physician. We have a tin-type picture of him with his medicine bag hung over his shoulder and his hand on the Bible. He doctored and my grandmother, being the widow of a preacher, prayed for the sick. She studied his medical books and learned to assist him as a nurse.

It was the practice in those days to sit up with the sick and the doctor was called to the house. Helpers who gathered were quite numerous. They helped do up the work and all were fed.

Sometimes their mischief caused doubt as to their usefulness. My Uncle Josephus Howard told of how they, as teenagers, used to ride with his mother and stepfather on calls.

Seated on the back of the horse drawn buggy, they swept under trees with chickens sleeping on the branches overhead. A rapid takssoon bagged a fowl, which was taken into the house for the cooks to prepare for the crowd of attendants, waiting to hear the news from the sick room.

Kim's Korner

By Kim Frasure

Working at a newspaper (contrary to what some believe) doesn't mean all of us employed here know the news and/or upcoming events in Floyd County before they hit the print.

Speaking for myself, being in advertising, I could possibly give a person some knowledge of a sale coming up or maybe a killer deal some car lot is about to offer. But, I'm not on the editorial staff and don't have the access to upcoming stories or "hot" news items that are about to appear in The Floyd County Times.

Sure we are all members of the Times Family, and yes, we do exchange verbal communication during lunch and passing one another on the way to the coffee and pop machines. But we all have our own jobs to do.

This does not mean in any way, that if there's a story, or important event occurring you cannot call me or any other Times staff member, we are all eager and glad to help in any way. The main reason I wanted to express this topic is that some people believe because I write this column I'm a member of our editorial staff, and they are constantly wanting me to cover and uncover hot subjects of our county.

When I try to explain that I'm not a writer, I'm in advertising, it seems to upset them, as though I'm trying to evade a certain subject they're wanting me to hit and hit hard. I'm the type of person who other's feelings matter to, and therefore I felt I should let everybody know what it is exactly that I do here at the Times.

If I've offended any of you by not writing on a particular subject I apologize. Kim's Korner is published only in the hopes of bringing a smile to someone's face or a tear to an eye occasionally. Sometimes to gripe, but it's not published as news or even supposed to be.

I've received several phone calls and comments and I truly thank all of you for them. I want to make a difference in the Times, and maybe to some it's not noteworthy. By this, I mean bringing a smile, and writing a lighter side of life. Yes, I'm a supporter of cleaning up Floyd County, wanting better roads, a better system for our schools, politicians to come through with promises, and I even have an opinion of medicine and the well-known incinerator at Highlands.

But, I'll leave these topics to Pam, Tess, Tim and Marty if you don't mind.

I was told recently, by being a student of Carol Stumbo's I should stand up and speak out, as Ms. Stumbo so courageously does for all Floyd County students. There're times I do just that. Granted it's times where my own children are concerned.

Maybe I'm wrong for choosing to write Kim's Korner in a satirical manner. Maybe I should stand upon a soapbox and lash out through my pen words to hopefully change our county's ways.

Maybe I'm just gonna' keep it the way it is, and pray I can guide my children with the help of my husband and treat others with kindness, respect and love. Teach them to speak the truth and pray together we can all make a difference in our own individual ways. Till next week...

County Kettle

County Kettle

Is a feature offered by the Floyd County Times. Send all recipes, kitchen tips and suggestions to "County Kettle," The Floyd County Times, P.O. Box 391, Prestonsburg, KY 41653

by Tess Whitmer

Well, with such raving reviews of the recipes printed in last Wednesday's County Kettle, I thought I'd throw in a few more of Charlotte McFall's favorite recipes.

Ever since I told her I'd like to use some of her more cherished recipes in this column she has told me three or four times to try some of the Mexican dishes. She assures me there are wonderful, and easy. Now I don't know if any of these dishes will compete with Floyd County's own, quickly expanding, Tex-Mex restaurant Sam an Tonio's, but I'd be willing to give them a try.

The recipes she speaks of come from a collection called "Snake, Rattle & Rotel" by Crazy Sam Higgins. It is billed as "A New Cookbook Featuring the Zesty Taste of a Southwestern Legend." I'd love to print some of these, put due to the copyright law, I am forbidden. But, if Charlotte says they are good, I believe her, and I recommend this cookbook to those who want to spice up their Mexican style cooking.

So, instead of the Mexican recipes, this week I'll print some chicken main dishes. One funny thing happened last week. Having handed over her most used recipes, Charlotte had to call me on the phone and have me look up an ingredient for her. I guess there are some risks involved in not making photocopies.

AARP MEMBERS LEARN OF EARLY COUNTY HISTORY

The Jenny Wiley Chapter American Association of Retired Persons held its monthly dinner meeting, Friday, July 20 at 5:30 p.m. in the dining area of Highlands Regional Medical Center with president Dorothy Osborne presiding and leading the Pledge of Allegiance. Orville Cooley led the group in prayer.

After going to the Floyd Room, program director Otela Smiley presented Pauline Burchett, who spoke on "Historical Facts about Early Floyd County." She said that this county was organized in 1799, but that hunters and explorers had come here before that time and had reported good news about the territory they had found.

The speaker said that Sen. Doug Hayes had the river here named the Big Sandy and that Beaver Creek was so named because of the beavers in the creek.

She added that John Spurlock and his family came here in 1791 and built a home in what is now Prestonsburg, the first town to be settled in Eastern Kentucky, and that the Leslies, Harmons, Auxiers and Strattons had already settled in this vicinity.

Sarah Laven gave the secretary's report and the finance report was given by Delmas Saunders.

The president passed out questionnaires given her by the Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of determining what is needed for the improvement of Floyd County. The recently passed legislative bill, entitled "The Living Will," was discussed.

Sina Blanton said that the Health Fair would probably be in October. Delmas Saunders said that the 55 Alive Mature Driving Course would be offered if 15 persons would enroll.

It was announced that the next dinner meeting will be Friday, Aug. 17 at 5:30 p.m. at the same location.

Present at Friday's meeting were Osborne, Smiley, Saunders, Blanton, Laven, Cooley, Gladys Allen, Lucy Regan, Fannie Runnels, Alice Harris, Otis Ousley, Ocie Ousley, Edna Saunders, Jack Freed, Orville Turner, Dixie Turner, Eula Stumbo, Tilden Collins, Goldie Collins, "Toots" Parsley, Matilda Johnson, Flem Blanton, Hager White, Gladys Cooley, Betty Davis, Pauline Burchett, Maman Leslie, Nola Stumbo, Pearl Robertson, Beverly Goble, James Ryan Conley, Carma Sturgill, Norma Sturgill, James Fitzpatrick, Russell Laven, Ruby Akers and Myrtle Allen.

HERBS FOR MEDICINE

Melissa Martin and Susie Hicks talked about the medicine in the old days. Mullen tea was made for colds, catnip tea and ground ivy tea were for infants who suffered from severe colic. Artichokes were said to cure sugar diabetes. Bitter dock was boiled down for constipation.

Someone might be sent at a rapid pace to find and pick the needed herbs. To find them, one needed to know what they looked like and where they grew.

The ground ivy is famous for its liking damp places. It can be found around wells and is a short vine with a small round leaf. Catnip is whitish green and grows into a short plant with a little red flower on top. It has quite a pungent odor. Purges, enemas and scarification were quite popular in the old days of medicine. It has been said that a sick person would be lucky if he survived the cures.

Epsom salts and castor oil were quite often prescribed in my day. Then Dr. Drake's Glisco and the new liquid Black Draught saved us from those terrible tastes of the older stuff. My favorite way to take castor oil was to follow it immediately with a heaping spoon of jelly.

Sulphur and grease were applied to any suspicious rash. Camphorated oil replaced a coal oil, camphor and grease mixture for chest rubs to treat colds. They all have been eliminated now. Assiftidy bags were popular in my mother's day to wear, when going into crowds, to prevent catching diseases. It probably smelled so bad that no one came near you, so no germs were picked up.

HERBS FOR REFRESHMENT

My mother took us to the hills to find spicewood trees to make tea. They were in the exact place she had found them when she was a girl. We broke off limbs enough to boil in a kettle with water to make the tea. With a little sugar added, it was quite refreshing.

Sassafras tea had to be made from the tree roots. This was much harder to gather, but it was closer to the house since it was on the creek bank. Sassafras roots boiling gave off an aroma that penetrated the house. Mountain tea required quite a climb up the hillside to find, but it could be chewed as soon as it was found. Having a little red berry, it tasted like teaberry chewing gum.

Birch bark was collected in the spring when the sap was up, by peeling huge pieces of the bark of the trunk from the tree. A spoon was used to scrape the pulpy, white inner layer from the bark. Melissa Martin said it was spongy when chewed and tasted like mountain tea.

LYE SOAP

Lye soap was used to clean instruments and the hands of the healers. A goodly supply was always available for use. Melissa described how she made it.

Place an iron kettle or a galvanized washing tub on rock supports outside. Build a wood fire under it, and bring the water to boil. Add lye and stir to dissolve. If you do not have lye, use wood ashes from the fire.

Then stir in meat scraps, old lard or other type of fat until it boils up thick. A small amount can be extracted and placed in a saucer to see if it will cool into a solid piece of soap, much like testing fudge. If it turns solid, remove from heat, allow to cool and cut into squares before it gets cold. If the test sample does not set, add more fat.

Another test was to stick a chicken feather into the boiling mixture. If it came out without feathers on the spine, it was ready. If there were still feathers on the spine, add more lye.

This soap was popular for all cleaning purposes, clothes or household chores. Many a lovely lady used it to wash her hair.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

PUT A LID ON IT

According to researchers at the American Association of Poison Control Centers, in 1988 more than 350,000 children under the age of six accidentally poisoned themselves by swallowing someone else's medicine. The statistics compiled by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission show that more than half of these cases of poisoning involved medicines stored in the kitchen or dining room. One-third of the cases happened in the bedroom. Ten percent of the medicines were uncovered in purses. Only two percent involved medicines stored in medicine cabinets. Clearly, child-resistant containers are of no use if they are not requested at the time that medicine is purchased. Simply because patients do not have children in their immediate households does not mean they are immune to the child-poisoning risk.

A wide array of quality over-the-counter medications and health care items line the shelves of COOLEY APOTHECARY. When it comes to your health care needs, we have them fully covered. If you are having difficulty selecting the correct item, please ask us for assistance. You can rely upon our knowledge and expertise to help you make the best purchase possible. Learn for yourself why your friends and neighbors already rely on us at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-3. Read this column in the weeks to come as we discuss many other topics related to your family's well being.

HINT: In one-third of all accidental poisoning cases involving medicine, the offending medicine belonged to someone outside the immediate household.

KENTUCKY'S WAITING CHILD

Ten year old Coddie, eight year old Lukie and six year old Maggie are sisters whose favorite pastime is playing together. They are outgoing and loveable. They all do well in school.

Kentucky has over 275 children waiting for an adoptive family. Like Coddie, Lukie and Maggie, these children wait in foster homes, if they are lucky. Kentucky has a shortage of foster and adoptive homes for minority and white children.

The Department for Social Services is looking for people who can make a commitment to children. You can be single, an apartment dweller, or have a moderate income. There is no fee charged for services.

If you want to make a difference in the life of a child, consider fostering or adoption. For information call:
