Teachers talk strike

Floyd schools to open next week — or will they?

by Pam Shingler
Editor

Despite threats that teachers might not be there when schools open next week, the Floyd County Board of Education, at its Wednesday night meeting, stood by its original decision to give teachers and administrators an across the board 15 percent pay raise. Talking strike, teachers have requested that their salaries be increased by 20 percent and that administrators take a lower pay hike because of perceived past inequities.

Teachers, an estimated 300 strong at the board meeting, are now expected to ballot on a strike before the opening day next Wednesday. A fier, passed out at a 4 p.m. rally on Wednesday and at the board meeting, instructs teachers to report to their schools a half-hour early on Wednesday to cast their ballots.

Votes are to be counted later that day at a meeting of the directors of the Floyd County Education Association. Teachers were advised to listen to area radio stations for results of the vote and for instructions in case of a strike.

Emotions ran high at both the rally and the board meeting. FCEA president Bud Reynolds told teachers at the rally at Prestonsburg Community College that the issue was more than money. "Watch as the board gives administrators the same increase as teachers," he said. "Think of how they treat you as a teacher and as an individual. Think of how the board abuses and misuses power."

He referred to some administrators as "overpaid flunkies," sent to the schools "to keep teachers in line." "Don't let anybody tell you that the Floyd County community does not support you," said Delores Smith, businesswoman, civic leader and education activist, during the rally. "It's not just money. The greater portion is how you're treated. You have the right to be treated with respect, to be looked upon for what you do, not who you are or your position in the community."

"If you believe you don't have the right to speak, that's what you teach the children," she told the teachers. "I don't want my children to be taught that way. Five people don't control this school system. We own it. It doesn't matter how affluent we are, we all own it the same."

Smith followed up, during the regular board meeting, by reading a letter to Superintendent Ron Hager from the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce of which she is president. In the letter, she offered the chamber's assistance in resolving some of the conflict between the board and the superintendent and the teachers association.

During board discussion on proposed tax increases (see related story), board member Arville Duff stated that he "feels 15 percent is not adequate," but that money from increased taxes would not be available until next year.

In support of upping the revenue base, Duff said, "We owe it to the teachers to take this opportunity to close the gap between teachers and administrators. There should not be a division between them."

Board member Tommy Boyd, with prompting from FCEA president Reynolds, introduced a motion to give teachers a 20 percent increase in pay. The motion was received with loud cheering and a standing ovation from teachers, but Boyd's motion was out of order since the tax increase motion was already on the floor.

Boyd attempted to make the motion again while a motion to adopt the proposed salary schedule for teachers and administrators was on the floor. His motion, again, was out of order.

"You voted previously on the salaries," board chairman Dr. James Adams said, referring to the July meeting.

Boyd then asked for the salary schedule motion to be tabled "until we figure out how much people will be paid."

On Hager's recommendation that a vote be taken on the salary schedule motion, which was made by Duff and seconded by Dr. Mary Hall, Boyd's was the only "no" vote.

Tension, which had been rather subdued until that point, rose when FCEA president Reynolds then asked for the floor, in a nontraditional move. (Generally, members of the public speak only during a special period at the beginning of a board meeting.) Reynolds was reminded by Supt.

The Penny Express, California or bust

In their 18th week on the road, the Penny Express arrived in Prestonsburg yesterday. Neal and Colleen Pinkerton are traveling from Maine to California to raise money and awareness for the homeless. Habitat for Humanity is the group that will reap the rewards from the Pinkerton's cross-country trek. The couple has experienced some difficulty along the way, however. Originally on horseback, they made a five-week stopover to build a covered wagon with the Mennonites. Unfortunately, they had to stop because their 12-year-old pack horse caught pneumonia. The horse, evidently not fully recovered, wasn't faring so well, being led behind the wagon pulled by 14-year-old Joshua and 9-year-old Cindy Lou (the couple's other two horses). It collapsed on KY 3, and a veterinarian was called in. Colleen said that they are about 60 days behind schedule and she predicted they would make their destination some time in February. She noted that they planned to travel over the Rocky Mountains in New Mexico since the elevation was about 7000 feet lower at that point. (Photo by Tess Whitmer)

30 percent chance of rain

The rain made an early arrival this week, instead of waiting until Sunday as expected earlier. And, it's more than likely going to stay with us until Tuesday, according to the Jackson Weather Service.

Friday, partly sunny, 30 percent chance of thundershowers, high in mid 80s. Friday night, partly cloudy with some late night fog, low in lower to middle 60s.

Saturday, partly sunny, 30 percent chance of thundershowers, high in mid 80s. Sunday through Tuesday, chance of thunderstorms each day, highs in 80s lows in 60s.

Come 'ona my house

Dedication ceremonies for the new Adams Middle School are set for Sunday at 2:30 p.m. An open house for the community to view the latest facility in the Floyd County school system will follow.

Correction

The school registration announcement run in Wednesday's paper was only for Betsy Layne Elementary School. Those dates again are Monday, Aug. 13 and Tuesday, Aug. 14 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Parents or guardians must register their child in person. The Times apologizes for any inconvenience this may have caused.

Cleanup meeting

The Floyd County Litter Task Force will hold its monthly meeting this Monday, Aug. 13 at 6 p.m. at the John M. Stumbo Elementary School. Residents of the Mud Creek area are especially invited to attend this meeting since the discussion will pertain primarily to their area. Other members are also encouraged to attend.

Floyd crime figures tallied by state

A major crime was committed every 14 hours last year in Floyd County, according to a recently released statistical report from the Kentucky Justice Cabinet.

In 1989, a total of 647 "serious" crimes were committed in the county, with larceny, or non-violent unlawful taking, and burglary accounting for 75 percent of those. Vehicle theft was accomplished 80 times, followed closely by 76 incidents of aggravated assault. Rounding out the list were four incidents of rape, three robberies and two murders.

The figures are in "Crime in Kentucky: 1989 Report" which records a total of 116,514 serious crimes in the state last year.

Police officers in Floyd County — state, county and municipal — made 3,153 arrests last year, or one arrest every 2.7 hours. Almost 34 percent of those arrests were for drunkenness, the most frequent cause for arrest.

Driving under the influence was the reason cited for 725 arrests in the county, or close to one-fourth of the total.

More than 300 people were arrested for disorderly conduct, and 212 were taken in for narcotic drug law violations. Some 68 persons were arrested for assault and 46 for wrongful weapons possessions.

Other arrests in the report were: two, manslaughter by negligence; 14, arson; 16 for forgery and counterfeiting; 17, embezzlement; 14, buying, receiving or possession of stolen property; 24, vandalism; 11 sex offenses; 24 family offenses; 29 liquor law violations, and 403 "other" offenses.

Among the DUI arrests, 712 were of adults and 13 of juveniles; 667 were male, 57 female and one sex unspecified; three were black and 715 were white, with seven of unspecified race.

State police made 505 of the total arrests for DUI, followed by Prestonsburg Police who arrested 146 persons for DUI. The Sheriff's Department took in 45 persons for DUI; Martin and Wheelwright police reported nine DUI arrests each; Wayland, eight, and Allen, three.

Officers also made 212 arrests on drug-related charges in Floyd County. The majority, 134, involved marijuana; cocaine, 44; synthetic drugs, two, and other, 32.

Of neighboring counties, Floyd had the second highest number of arrests for serious crimes, but it also has the second largest population.

Pike County led the area with 1,152 serious offenses, considerably more than Floyd's 647. Other counties include: Johnson, 242; Knott, 171; Martin, 142, and Magoffin, 111.

For all arrests, Floyd wasn't that far behind its largest neighbor, Pike. Total arrests in Pike amounted to 4,297, compared to 3,153 in Floyd. Total arrests in the other counties were: Knott, 783; Magoffin, 707; Martin, 656, and Johnson, 397.

The figures do not account for how many arrests led to prosecution or to the diligence of police officers.

County expected to grow

In contrast to more than one-fifth of the counties in Kentucky, the population of Floyd County is projected to grow significantly during the next decade, according to a new forecast from the University of Louisville's Urban Research Institute.

Floyd County's population is projected to increase from 49,820 to 54,090 during the next 10 years — an increase of 8.6 percent, significantly greater than Kentucky as a whole. The state's population is expected to grow slowly at a 3.5 percent rate to reach 3,887,199 by the year 2000, according to URI studies.

About 19 counties are expected to increase in population by more than 10 percent during the decade, with the greatest growth in Oldham, Warren, Anderson, Laurel and McCreary. The greatest absolute gain (14,054 people) is projected for Warren County.

Population declines are expected in 25 of the 120 counties, with the largest percentage declines in Hickman, Todd and Fulton counties. Drops are also projected in Jefferson, Boyd and McCracken counties.

In addition, the state's elderly population will increase through the decade, reaching 12.5 percent of the total population. The decade will also show a 5.5 percent decline in the population 18 and younger. The figures for Floyd County follow this trend with a 12 percent increase in the elderly population and a 5.4 percent decline in youth population.

From 1980-1988 in Floyd County, the population remained relatively constant, with an increase of only 70 people from 48,764 to 48,834, representing only a 0.1 percent increase.

The study also projected the individual counties' growth through the year 2030. Floyd County's population is expected to continue its growth trend over the next 40 years. In the year 2010, the population is projected at 57,160; at 58,980 in 2020 and 59,510 in 2030. This growth represents a 19.5 percent increase in population over the time period.

Arrest made for cocaine possession

Prestonsburg Police officers arrested a Frankfort woman early Thursday morning for alcohol intoxication, disorderly conduct and possession of cocaine.

Frances Johnson was arrested outside of the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn after an investigation by Detective Sergeant Jeff Stumbo and other officers.

Johnson, who was employed by the hotel as a restaurant manager, was fired from her position at the hotel following the incident, according to an Inn spokesperson.

Johnson was arrested by Prestonsburg Police Chief Greg Hall, Sergeant Mike Omerod and officers Ricky Conn and Anthony Castle when she was found to be in possession of an undetermined amount of cocaine. Police also arrested a second subject, whose name was not released, on charges of alcohol intoxication.

Both subjects were arrested and lodged in the Floyd County Jail following the incident.

Det. Jeff Stumbo said that anyone who has information regarding illegal drug activity can contact the Prestonsburg Police Department and that all information or tips will be kept confidential.

Guess your weight?

Officials from the Virginia State Department of Forestry visited Dewey Lake Wednesday to demonstrate methods for trapping, tranquilizing and tagging wild black bears. Black bear sightings in Kentucky have been on the rise in the past 10 years. As bear populations thrive in Virginia and West Virginia, the animals have been migrating into the hills of Kentucky. At least 10 of the animals have been spotted in Kentucky state parks since the beginning of 1990. (Photo by Tim Preston)

Regional Roundup

Team to study Ashland revenue plan

ASHLAND — Mayor Dick Martin named a five-man audit team to study a proposed revenue distribution plan that includes a controversial occupational tax placed on wages in the city. The team will be responsible for determining the accuracy of proposed income estimates from the plan, the city's need for additional revenue and other sources from which it might be obtained. (Ashland Daily Independent)

Greenup teachers say strike possible

LLOYD — Teachers in Greenup County said they too might strike this fall unless they get a larger pay increase. According to Mary Sue Click, president of the Greenup County Education Association, 70 percent of teachers said in June that they supported a walkout unless they got a 19 percent raise. The county school board approved a 12 percent raise at its June 25 meeting. (Lexington Herald-Leader)

Disqualification sought for attorney

HAZARD — Charging that prosecutors failed to present evidence of alleged vote buying by a county magistrate and a courthouse worker to the local grand jury, a defense attorney has asked that the Perry commonwealth's attorney's office be disqualified from further involvement in an election-fraud case. James Hampton, attorney for defeated magisterial candidate Johnny Walker, filed a motion alleging that Commonwealth's Attorney Alve Hollon Jr. refused to show the grand jury affidavits that raised questions about primary day activities of Magistrate Freddie Combs and Jerry "Hogman" Collins, a former courthouse supervisor. (Louisville Courier-Journal)

State claims Perry official owes for violations

HAZARD — Perry County Judge-Executive Sherman Neace owes $690,150 in fines and penalties for alleged violations at two former strip mines, state environmental officials are contending in lawsuits. The lawsuits claim that Neace owes $434,600 for failure to reclaim two abandoned mine sites and $255,550 for other mining violations. (Louisville Courier-Journal)

Deputy may get five years

PIKEVILLE — A former Pike County Sheriff's deputy pleaded guilty to illegally pocketing a $2,200 check that was stored in a police evidence locker, Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Rick Bartley said. John Darbyshire pleaded guilty on Monday to a count of theft by failure to make required disposition of property. The sentencing is set for Sept. 21. Darbyshire could face up to five years. (Appalachian News-Express)

Letcher gets mandatory trash law

WHITESBURG — Mandatory garbage collection will begin Sept. 1 in Letcher County. The fiscal court unanimously approved the second reading of a mandatory garbage ordinance last week, only changing the effective date from Aug. 1 to Sept. 1. The only question from some of the magistrates was whether or not the ordinance would stop individuals from taking garbage to the landfill. (The Mountain Eagle)

Lawrence fiscal court denies landfill request

LOUISA — The Lawrence County fiscal court voted last Friday to continue its lawsuit against Roe Creek Development, who had asked the court to stop its legal action. The fiscal court filed suit against the company charging that trucks traveling to the landfill have consistently disregarded the 10-ton weight limit imposed by the court. The suit also charges that the overweight trucks have damaged the Roe Creek Road. (The Big Sandy News)

Knott County drug trial delayed

HINDMAN — Knott Commonwealth's Attorney Randy Campbell reported that Monday, for the third time, trials for drug defendants had to be postponed because not enough jurors reported for jury selection. Monday's trial of Ralph Slone of Pippa Passes, charged with trafficking in marijuana and schedule three drugs, has been rescheduled to Aug. 17. (Troublesome Creek Times)

Federal District Court convictions announced

LEXINGTON — Louis DeFalaise, US Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky, has announced the sentencing of Henry Anthony Hall, 27, of Jackhorn and Larry Pinion, 33, of Pikeville on Aug. 7. Hall was sentenced to 10 months in prison for possession of a stolen all-terrain vehicle and possession of nine other stolen all-terrain vehicles. Pinion was sentenced to four months for theft of mail matter. Both men will be under two years of supervised release after finishing their sentences.

Floyd Schools

Hager that he should request time on the board agenda two weeks prior to a meeting.

Reynolds, in what was apparently a surprise move, then introduced Wheelwright High School teacher Carol Stumbo, FCEA vice president. Stumbo began to talk about the school system's writing program which she has headed, but will no longer. She was interrupted by Hager who pointed out that the writing program has not been "lost." Stumbo reread her text in which she said the program had been "lost" to her.

Her remarks implied that she had been relieved of her duties with the program because of her criticism of board practices. She reiterated the positive national attention the program has garnered.

"I am going back to the classroom, but I will not stop asking questions. If the loss of this program was meant to punish me, it has not done so. I am not the loser. This district and the teachers and children in it are the real losers..."

In the quiet room, she continued, "You have the right to expect a great deal from me for the salary that you pay me. You have the right to expect the best teaching I am capable of, you have the right to expect that I will keep up in my field and know the most current philosophies and practices."

"What you do not have the right to is my ability to think, my conscience, my sense of right and wrong, my commitment to education... I am not going away. I will not stop believing in the value of teachers in this system. I know what they can do. I also know that one day, you are going to have to listen to us."

When she concluded, the assembled teachers clapped and yelled wildly, and Hager had difficulty regaining their attention. He explained that the Writing Across the Curriculum program, with which Stumbo has worked, was part of a two-year grant that has expired.

"I have asked that (the program) be continued at greater funding. The program has not ended," Hager emphasized, adding that the district will fund the program with a full-time coordinator. "We want the position to be full-time, not teaching part-time and (coordinating) it. The program was so successful we wished to continue it."

Reynolds then took the floor again and began to read from a prepared text in which he criticized the lack of a district budget. Hager interjected that there can be no budget until tax rates are settled.

Noticeably shaking in anger, Reynolds continued that FCEA plans to monitor "as closely as possible the new monies." He also referred to the association's disapproval of the move to grant administrators the same pay increase as teachers. "Nothing has changed in this county but the teachers," he said. "We will be back again and again."

Hager responded that the highest paid teacher in the county will receive more than $42,000 next year. He was met with "boos" from the teachers and a chorus of "Who is it?"

He later clarified that such a salary was possible if the teacher works 12 months and extended days. "Most of you don't make (that much). Some of you don't make enough to make a living," he said. "We have to work together. If funds are available next year, I would not hesitate to recommend a 10 or 15 percent raise."

Hager added that he did not believe that the court decision leading to the Education Reform Act was intended just for teachers' salaries. "It was also for student programs," he said, indicating that he plans to use some of the new funds from the state to pay for instructional supplies for students. "I want to insure that no child has to pay a fee to go to school."

In another unusual move, Delores Smith raised her hand and was recognized. She reminded that she was chairman of the Blue Ribbon Panel, which last year recommended that 60 percent of new monies to the system be spent on salaries — more than is proposed.

In other business, Hager told the board that the district intends to increase emphasis on employee safety next year because the system has one of two highest compensation claims in the state. He also announced that plans are being made to extend the services of the school to include after school programs for children whose parents work and in cases of bad weather and that the Floyd County Sheriff's Department will initiate a DARE program in the schools to teach children to be drug-free.

In his financial report, Assistant Superintendent Russell Frazier reported that the district's ending balance for school year 1989-90 was $92,368.88.

Accident reported

A wet roadway was the possible cause of a minor accident reported by the Prestonsburg Police on Sunday, Aug. 5.

According to Chief Greg Hall, Jonathan Leslie of Prestonsburg was driving his 1984 Chevy truck on US 23 when he lost control on the wet pavement and struck a 1985 Dodge driven by Tina Butcher of Meally.

Leslie's truck came to a stop by hitting a power pole. No injuries were reported by Hall, and the accident is under investigation by Capt. Darrell Conley.

Approval

Teachers clapped frequently and gave standing ovations to speakers at Wednesday night's Floyd County Board of Education meeting. A standing room only audience of teachers attended the meeting to see if the board would vote in favor of a 20 percent pay increase for teachers. Board members did not. (Photo by Pam Shingler)

Vocational education gets approval

A $100 million provision to the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act has been approved by a select panel of House and Senate conferees, Congressman Chris Perkins announced Monday.

The provision, which constitutes a major part of the overall reauthorization of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act, will channel federal dollars toward badly needed new equipment and facilities for vocational schools.

Perkins proposed a provision whereby the money would be targeted to vocational schools in Eastern Kentucky and to other schools that need improvements the most.

The National Assessment of Voational Education, a study commissioned by Congress last summer, determined that students living in economically depressed areas should receive top priority for new equipment and upgraded facilities.

Perkins said that the study's conclusion mandated that vocational schools in Eastern Kentucky receive a significant portion of the new funds.

This deep

Mildred Wheeler of North Lake Drive in Prestonsburg indicates the depth of the hole she is standing next to. Wheeler recently expressed concern that the hole, which is as deep as the length of the board from the ground to the bottom of her lower hand, will become a sight of tragedy for a pedestrian or a vehicle that might cave in the pavement. Although there is a concrete curb visible, the hole extends at least two feet below the surface of the highway. The hole is the largest of a series of holes that extend for two blocks from North Lake Drive/US 23 toward the Big Sandy River. (Photo by Tim Preston)

Clarification

In an accident reported in the last edition of this newspaper, some misinformation was received. Ricky Newsome was the suspected operator of the wrecked car, not Linda Miller who was the owner. Newsome was arrested for DUI Probable Cause (BA . 27) and no operator's license and he was lodged in the Floyd County Jail. Miller was not taken to the hospital but also arrested. She was charged for AI and no proof of insurance. Another passenger, Dolph Junior Newsome did go to the hospital and was treated and released to the Floyd County Jail on a charge of AI.

Gun & knife show at Renfro Valley

People will come from all around to buy, sell and trade their guns, knives, and relics at the Big Gun and Knife Show on Aug. 18-19 at Renfro Valley, at Exit 62 off I-75.

The Big Gun and Knife Show will be in full swing from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday. Traders and sellers will display their guns, knives, and relics in Renfro Valley's Red Barn. Table set ups will begin Friday at 4 p.m. until 9 p.m.

Tables are available by calling Ferguson-Holman Gun Shows at 606-987-1529 or 763-6760.

Renfro Valley has a knifemaking shop in one of the nine shops that recently opened in the new Renfro Village. Resident bladesmith Jesse Hemphill starts from scratch and works up 10 hours bending, twisting, folding, cutting, and stretching the steel to create a single knife.

Insurance, gas prices raise driving costs

The cost of owning and operating a new car has increased nearly one-half cent per mile since the end of March, according to AAA. Motorists now pay an average 33.5 cents per mile, up .4 cent per mile.

According to AAA's Kathy Cross, the increase results from a 10 cent per day increase in fixed costs — most notably higher insurance premiums — and a .2 cent per mile increase in operating expenses. Gas prices have increased an average 4.4 cents per gallon between Easter and July 4th, according to AAA's fuel gauge report.

The average cost-per-mile is determined by combining operating and fixed costs. During the second quarter of the year, motorists paid an average 8.6 cents per mile in operating costs (gasoline, oil, maintenance). Fixed costs, the major component of new car driving expenses, averaged $10.24 a day.

AAA's cost estimates are based on a composite national average for three domestically built new cars driven 15,000 miles per year (Ford Escort, Ford Taurus and Chevrolet Caprice).

Regional variances were apparent in the operating costs with New England the highest, averaging 35.1 cents per mile while the Midwest was least expensive at 32.4 cents.

AAA's study of driving costs is updated quarterly based on computations made by Runzheimer International, a consulting firm specializing in transportation, travel and living costs.

Tourism is topic

Kentucky Department of Travel Development's second annual Tourism Marketing Seminar will be held at the Radisson Hotel East in Louisville on Aug. 15.

The seminar is designed for persons involved in tourism promotion. Promoters of attractions, regions and communities will learn techniques to make advertising and promotional efforts more effective. Workshop topics will include how to market small tourist attractions, how to target group travel and how to tie into Kentucky's bicentennial celebration.

Keynote speaker Peter Herschend, cofounder and coowner of the Silver Dollar City in Branson, Mo., will discuss effective tourism marketing techniques. Herschend is also on the US Senate Commerce Committee's Travel and Tourism Industry Council and the board of directors of the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions.

Betsy Gabel, marketing coordinator of the Washington State Tourism Development Commission, will also speak about the development and benefits of regional marketing plans.

Registration is $25. For more information, call (502) 564-4930.

Get out of the bed
Someone used a phrase the other day that has always made my hair hurt. I've cringed when it's used, ever since my grandmother would say it when as a sassy brat I pulled a boner. "You made your bed, now lie in it," she'd say when I'd make a bad decision and want to get out of it.

I didn't buy that philosophy then, and I don't buy it now. Ironically, mamaw's example, which spoke much louder than words, is as much responsible for my attitude as anything. No matter what kind of sow's ear she ended up with, she managed to make a silk purse, or something similar.

The "you made your bed..." credo has probably ruined billions of lives of people who truly believe it or are shamed into accepting it.

How many women's lives have been rendered pointless because they were told they had to stay in an abusive marriage? You made your bed...

How many men (now women) have lost their souls in a career they hated because they felt they had no options? You made your bed...

How many doctors have poorly served their patients while dreaming of being a farmer or a teacher or a researcher? You made your bed...

How many high school dropouts have spent their lives in unrewarding jobs because they accepted that they had missed all opportunity for a formal education? You made your bed...

How many people suffer degradation and lack of respect in their relationships or their jobs because they believe they have no options and thus deserve no better? You made your bed...

I disagree (I'm tempted to use capital letters.) I believe that if you or someone else musses your bed, you can remake it. If one side gets lumpy, you can turn the mattress over. If it sags on one side, you can sleep on the other. Or you can put some boards under it. Or you can buy a new mattress and throw the old one out. Or you can sleep somewhere else. If you're lucky, maybe you'll have some good friends who'll help you make a new bed or let you sleep over or float a loan to buy a new one.

I'm not advocating the shunning of responsibility. Whenever we make a bad decision or get stuck in a negative situation through no fault of our own, we need to accept the responsibility. That's being an adult. That's a given.

But accepting the responsibility doesn't mean we should punish ourselves and stay stuck in the situation. There's no need to allow ourselves to sink into the mire and not attempt to dig our way out, to remain in the screwed up bed we think we have to lie in. Rather, the responsible action is to try to get out.

Sometimes we have a hard time pulling ourselves out of the bed.

Sometimes, we've lain so long that our feet go to sleep and when we try to stand, we may turn an ankle or fall on our face. We may hurt for a while, but at least we're out of the bed.

Sometimes, someone may push us out of the bed, and we roll with a thud onto the floor. But at least we're out of the bed, shaken awake and ready to take a step in another direction.

Or sometimes, we may just get sick of the limitations of life in our made bed, and we push ourselves up and step over, on or around those barriers.

The object is choice and having some control over our choices. All choices, however, carry some risks. All choices come with strings attached. Some are loose with miles of slack. Some are so tight they seem to be tethers, limiting our movement. Some are painfully tight: the proverbial rock and a hard place.

But we do have choices. We can lie in the bed we made or that was made for us. We can languish there in fear and frustration as the world of freedom, productivity and reward pass by us.

Or we can determine not to lie there, to stand up—however halting our feet, however mysterious the path. We might fall back down the first time up, or the fifth time or the 10th. But we can get up if we keep at it, especially if we get a shove or a pull and a little support.

For many Floyd Countians, the bed has been made for us and we've been told to lie there. In fact, the status quo promoted by the power structure prefers that we lie there. But perhaps it's time we get up. Perhaps it's time we turn our backs on that crippling bed and vow not to get into it again.

Of course, we can't discount the up side to staying in the bed. We don't have to make any choices from that vantage point. They're made for us by someone else. And we don't have to do much or be much, just lie there all day, day after day.

On the other hand, as long as we lie there, we give up all hope of being free persons. We cede our thoughts, our brains, our integrity and our liberty to the bed makers. We give them our proxy to make decisions that affect us every hour, waking or sleeping.

This attitude is tied in closely with the fatalism that characterizes us Eastern Kentuckians, the belief that we have no control over our own lives and that whatever we do, things turn out the same—might as well stay in bed. It's something we have to fight every day if we want our lives ever to improve.

The time just may be ripe for masses of people to rise up from the bed they've been told to lie in. A few courageous people have managed to slip off the covers and take a halting step or two. Perhaps it's time the rest of us, lying here powerless for so long, start thinking about the possibilities and start using our brains and voices in joining them.

Whether we made the bed or have been relegated to it, no, we do not have to lie in it. We do have choices.

As many have heard by now, I am leaving The Times and the area at the end of the month. There'll be a couple more PostScripts after this one.

Some folks, I'm sure, will applaud; others, judging by comments you've already made, will be just a little sad. My sentiments are the same.

In a place where change is not always welcomed, some are concerned that both the editor and the publisher of The Times are leaving around the same time. It was not planned; rather, it's one of those acts of pure coincidence. Both Marty Backus and I have been given new challenges and new opportunities.

If my opinion has any value, I want to commend to you the new publisher, Scott Perry. I've known Scott for three years and have known of his work for many more than that. A native Paintsvillian and long time newspaper man, he's an excellent writer and has won a whole bunch of awards from the Kentucky Press Association. Even more important, he's a person of integrity and he hasn't been known to shy away from a fight, no matter how big the foe.

Floyd County is fortunate to have him at the helm of its flagship newspaper. I have no doubt that he will continue a tradition of quality, high ethical standards and activism. (And he doesn't even know I'm saying this.) The readers and the paper are in good hands.

I still have some things to say in the next two weeks; I ain't gone yet.

Letters to the Editor

In defense of truckers

Dear Editor,
After reading the Soap Box article, I was convinced that the lady had never been around a truck. When an owner says that he's not making $400 a day with a truck, he doesn't mean clear money. Out of the price of a load of coal, which averages around $200, the driver usually gets 20 percent, fuels costs 20 to 25 percent (and is increasing daily). This leaves the balance to pay for license plates ($1260 per year), extended weight decal ($360), property taxes, insurance-liability, collision and workers' compensation, fuel tax and weight distance tax, and truck payments. If the truck blows a tire, that's around $400. If there's a major breakdown, well, just forget it.

As for the bridge issue, I, for one, will get off that. According to the state, no repairs are to be done at this time. I would just like to say that as for the constant blacktopping at the red light, this weight was not even on the bridge. The bridge is concrete and if the road to the light had been concreted, this constant blacktopping probably could have been prevented. And in the long run would probably have been as cheap. Also, ask any engineer, concrete is designed to have some movement. I do agree though, in the long run, the safety of everyone is the most important issue.

One other remark upset me. The one about the truckers probably did not spend their money in Prestonsburg anyway. My family has purchased three vehicles in the city of Prestonsburg. I have a child who attended Prestonsburg Grade and High School. I bought groceries, supplies and clothes in the Prestonsburg area. We ate there and went to the movies there. We considered Prestonsburg to be our "hometown."

'Let us reason'

Dear Editor,
I have hesitated for some time to write a letter concerning a raise for our Floyd County teachers because my son and both of my daughters-in-law are employed by the Floyd County School Board. However, it occurred to me that I am also a parent, a grandparent, and most importantly a taxpayer; and therefore, I do have a right to speak up concerning this matter.

From what I can discern from the newspapers and various items in other media, it is my understanding that Floyd County administrators will possibly be making $59,000 a year, while the bulk of our classroom teachers will be drawing something like only $27,000 or less. Now you can see without too much math being involved, an administrator will be making more than twice the amount of a teacher.

I know most of the administrators and some are my friends. They are fine people and I am sure want all the pay increases they can get. However, in spite of this, I do not feel there is a single administrator in Floyd County, or anywhere else for that matter, who is worth more than twice the worth of a good teacher. It is also my understanding that Floyd County is the only county in the state with three highly paid assistant superintendents.

I wonder if the average citizen realizes the hours our teachers work on their own time, making out lesson plans, preparing tests, grading papers, averaging and posting grades, making out report cards, working ball games, serving bus duty, preparing special projects, etc., they also many times pay out of their own pockets for needed school supplies.

Our Lord, Himself, said, "Come, let us reason together." Board members, can't you sit down and reason together that something needs to be done to defuse this volatile situation? Can't you see that another raise for the administrators with only a mandated 10 percent raise for the teachers is like setting a match to powder? Floyd County teachers have worked long and faithfully and they are deserving of a better deal than this."

—Libby Martin Wayland

Thank to contributors

Dear Editor,
Records are made to be broken and the Kentucky Sheriffs Boys & Girls Ranch has accomplished its own goal of providing a free week of camp to 1,103, nine through 13 year-old disadvantaged boys and girls during this 10 week summer camping season. The camp opened June 4 and will close Aug. 10.

This camp, which celebrated its 15th anniversary on July 4, has taken care of over 11,000 disadvantaged children since 1975.

We are grateful to the generous contributors who join the Kentucky Sheriffs Boys and Girls Ranch each year and the sheriffs and deputies who select and transport the children to and from the sheriffs camp.

The 12 counselors were professionally trained and did a fantastic job this year. They were supervised by Annette Henthron, camp coordinator. Executive Secretary Helen Barter, Maintenance Supervisor Buck Buchanan and his assistant Sherrill Miller and meal Supervisor Elaine Miller all worked tirelessly and did a fantastic job to make sure everything ran smoothly. The Millers have been working at the Ranch for the past 10 years.

It is very difficult each year to keep a summer camp solvent because we receive no federal or state funding. We depend upon our generous contributors and the many sheriffs who hold fund raisers to keep us operational.

We are proud to say we do things the old fashioned way, "we earn it," and 1,103 children are the recipients of our efforts. GOD BLESS THE CHILDREN.

—Ray Stoess Executive Director

Should receive pay for job

Dear Editor,
I am a high school student concerned with teachers' salaries in Floyd County. As much as a teacher does for our country, the pay they receive is hardly enough. Our country puts a tremendous emphasis on how our students aren't interested in education and how teachers are in short supply, but they don't pay teachers enough to make a living. All my life I have wanted to be a teacher, but I can't support a family on a teacher's salary.

I also do not understand how a person can make huge amounts of money just playing sports and someone as important as a teacher earns very little.

I really think teachers should be paid more for what they do. Our state should not put as much emphasis on students getting an education. If a student can find an easier way to make money, such as sports, they will take that over education any day.

—Steve Johnson Weeksbury

Fiscal Court setting trend

Dear Editor,
Everyone in Kentucky will be interested in the action to be taken by the Floyd Fiscal Court at its upcoming meeting on Friday, Aug. 17 concerning a tax on incinerators.

Members of Kentuckians For The Commonwealth are encouraged by the courageous action that the Floyd Fiscal Court plans to take to levy a tax on medical, hazardous and special waste that would come into the county.

We are very concerned about the amount of out-of-state garbage that is coming into Kentucky. We believe that local ordinances, like the one the Floyd Fiscal Court plans to adopt, are the best methods to stop the influx of out-of-state trash. Even though Gov. Wallace Wilkinson could issue executive orders to deal with this situation, he refuses to do so. So it is up to the local authorities to do the best they possibly can to deal with this crisis.

We hope that the magistrates and the county judge-executive will hold firm to their pledge to develop local ordinances, and we hope other counties will follow their lead.

Sincerely,
Patty Wallace
Chairperson, KFTC

How 'bout that raise?

Dear Editor,
(Clues to the author of this letter are within the text. See if you can figure it out.)

It is about 1 a.m. and my mind is "abuzz" with emotion. You see, just a few hours earlier tonight I witnessed one of the most disturbing moments of my 41 years of life.

I attended a Floyd County Board of Education meeting. It wasn't just any meeting. The teachers and community were there to get a message to the board, "Give teachers a fair raise. You can afford it this year with the state increase and the $4+ million SEEK money." "It doesn't relate to increased taxes locally." But the message was taken personally by Dr. Adams and his fellow cohorts as something of a challenge.

The thing that confuses me most, is that if I were a board member it would be easy to recommend that this SEEK money and the state increased minimum Foundation Allotment of 25 percent by used to increase teachers' salaries 20 percent, 30 percent, even 40 percent. This would make the teachers satisfied, eager and very loyal employees.

(What else is this money going to be used for?) My mind conjures up visions of board members, construction companies and political friends putting this money into their pockets. It may not be true, but I'm usually not wrong either. So what could that money be used for?

I saw some of our most dedicated and respected faculty and community leaders ridiculed by Mr. Hager and Dr. Adams as they tried to speak to the board. My jaw nearly fell out of socket when the board members were so rude to Mr. Boyd as he proposed a 20 percent increase in teachers' salaries.

I still wonder, just why doesn't the rest of the board (ie. Dr. Adams, Dr. Hall, Mr. Duff and Mr. Hager) want to give a substantial raise to the teachers. Last year they reluctantly promised a Blue Ribbon Panel that they would use 60 percent of the SEEK money to raise teachers' salaries. I wonder why Mr. Hager doesn't try to keep the board's promises, especially now that he can.

It is nearly 1:30 a.m. now, but my mind is still "abuzz" with emotion. You know that raise is important to me and my family.

That raise could substantially change my standard of living and could give me hope that our school system may not be unfair and corrupt. It could give me freedom to teach with dignity, pride and a sense of loyalty to the system and community.

However, powerful pride and disrespect pervaded. Dr. Adams and his puppets decided that teachers aren't important to education and don't deserve a fair chance to have pride, dignity and recognition for achievement. (The raise does mean that, you know.)

The statement is very clear, the board seems to feel "all powerful" without any respect for students, parents, community and especially teachers. (Some of whom may have helped guide them through the education that prepared them, the board members, for their positions they now hold.) I know Dr. Adams and Mr. Hager must have had at least one teacher at some time in their lifetime.

Each member of the board was elected to represent the people of their community, including teachers and their families. But I felt a sense of opposition something like "I'm against you teachers" or "this is my community and you will do as I say," from the board and Mr. Hager. If this is true, then the community needs to let them know that they represent the community, and if they are not in touch with its needs then change that person by electing some one that does understand the true needs of the community.

It's about 2 a.m. now. I'm still "abuzz" with emotion, but a thought comes clear — I can vote — I CAN VOTE, teachers can vote, truckers can vote, mine workers can vote, businessmen and women can vote, THE COMMUNITY CAN VOTE!!!!

Well I think I'll close now and go to sleep. I can't be bought and I can vote. Maybe change will come soon.

'Wonderful memories'

Dear Editor,
I hate to see the Beaver Valley Hospital torn down, as I have some wonderful memories of it.

I lived in the little town of Dinwood during World War II and was dating Joe Lafferty from Cracker. Our family had always gone to the Beaver Valley Hospital when we needed medical attention. We were very fond of the doctors there.

Joe was in the Navy and was coming home on leave and we were to be married on May 8, 1943. He only had a few days before returning to the Navy. We had everything ready, but the preacher we wanted to use was in the Beaver Valley Hospital. So we took our witnesses and went to the hospital for our wedding. The preacher was Rev. Bob Marshall from Mantion.

Our first child was born Aug. 3, 1946, in the same hospital, a girl Gladys Ann, delivered by Dr. Claude Allen. Then our second child, a son Leonard Joseph, was born Feb. 22, 1948, delivered by Dr. Robert Sirkle in the same hospital. Our third and last child, a boy James Phillip, was delivered May 9, 1950, in the same hospital by Dr. Deel.

We moved to Pikeville when James was six months old and then to Beckley, W.Va., in 1966. We go home to Martin two times each year and always look for the hospital that has so many wonderful memories for us.

It will be sad when we go back again Labor Day weekend and our hospital will be gone.

My mother, Anna Compton Isaac, is now 93 years old. She worked for Dr. Walk Stumbo when she was a young girl, so we were really very fond of Dr. Walk and his wife Anna.

We always look forward to getting The Floyd County Times and reading about so many wonderful people we grew up with.

System needs 'new blood'

Dear Editor,

Regarding our schools and what maybe can be done to correct the situation, why do the eligible voters insist on sending the same board members back year after year, regardless of whether they have helped or hindered?

The public harps and bellyaches about our schools, still they will continue to elect the same board members time after time. There are two who are seeking reelection. One has been a member for 17 years, the other longer. And what have they accomplished? Let's inject some new blood into the system and pray for results.

We all remember what has happened to our school system in the last few years. The superintendent should not have to assume all the blame. Why not the elected board members also?

Thanks community

Dear Editor,

I want to sincerely thank the community of Floyd County for their enthusiasm and support of myself as the ballet teacher for dance classes sponsored by Prestonsburg Community College's department of continuing education/community services for the past four years.

I have recently accepted a professorship in the dance department of William Smith and Hobart Colleges in Geneva, N.Y.

It is with great regret that I am leaving the Prestonsburg area. I want to extend a special thank you to my students and their parents. Recognition should go to Jim Ratcliff and the staff of continuing education/community services at PCC for their generosity and vision in providing dance classes for the young people in this area.

I strongly encourage the community to continue to support and participate in the dance program in the years to come.

Outraged at Ms. Outraged

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the letter to you from "Ms. Outraged", that was printed in the paper Aug. 8.

It would seem that this person is a teacher basher. Well, that's okay, if it makes her feel better. I (we) can take it; but let me remind you (the writer) that it was a "teacher" or "teachers" who taught you to write, so that you could one day put a letter to the editor in the paper telling them that you are outraged that they would have the nerve to ask for a raise in salary.

If you are "outraged", I suppose that you will just keep on being outraged because this teacher, and all the other teachers in Floyd County, will never be satisfied with the "salary" that we get. Never again will we sit back and let others dictate to us. We will always "speak out" and "up" for what we believe — that is, a better quality education for our children and a higher salary for all teachers.

Let me compare your working routine to the typical teacher's:

1. Never a week-end off because of lesson plans, grading papers, cleaning house, doing the laundry, cooking, shopping and, last but not least, taking care of our family. Does this shock you, Ms. Outraged, that teachers are parents?

2. Major holidays — Yes, we get them, just like many employees. If I were your boss, I would give these days to you. I'm saying this because from the gist of your letter, I take it that you work.

3. Compensated calamity days? — NO!

4. Three month summer vacation? — NO! School does not close until the second week in June and opening day is by the second week in August. I'm sorry, but my math does not add up to three months. Maybe, Ms. Outraged, you can come to my school and teach me math.

5. 165 days teaching? — NO! We teach approximately 175 days per year. This year, with the 30 minutes added to each teaching day (which will add 15 days) we will be teaching 190 days.

6. Six hour day? — I wish. Ms. Outraged, if you could get this for us, you would have the blessings of all the teachers in Floyd County. Also, if you could get teachers a "free" lunch period and a planning period, they would be very appreciative. This way they could take a bathroom break, get a drink of water or maybe a breath of fresh air before they sit down to plan for tomorrow or grade papers (and the list goes on).

Did you ever stop to think that teachers work in the summer? Many must work in the summer at some of the very jobs that were discussed in your letter, such as pumping gas, waiting tables or babysitting. Many teachers go back to school in the summer to further their education so that they can bring the best back to the classroom for their students. Is this a vacation you would want to take? I don't think so.

Ms. Outraged, I could go on and tell you many other things or reasons why teachers deserve every dollar they get and MORE, much more!

In closing, may I ask you, "Ms. Outraged", a question? If you knew that beyond a doubt that your employer was getting 4.2 million dollars and that half was earmarked for salaries, wouldn't you ask for a raise? Of course you would, if you thought the work you did was worth it. Well, I feel that the work teachers perform is worth what we are asking for and much, much more!

'I don't know if it's art...'

This modified '74 Volkswagen Superbeetle has attracted its share of stares from motorists driving past L & H Used Cars in Prestonsburg. Sporting a Rolls Royce-like grill, it also has a spoiler on the back, dual exhausts and heartbeat striping on tinted windows — quite a few modifications for a car originally known for its simplicity. Maybe the National Endowment for the Arts will have some interest in this fine piece of automotive engineering. (Photo by Mike Rosenberg)

The Chicago River used to flow into Lake Michigan. Through engineering ingenuity, the river is now formed by water flowing in from Lake Michigan.

Dear Floyd County Times readers, I would like to introduce you to a new segment of the paper, the Dewey Lake News. This weekly column, authored by the Corps of Engineers at Dewey Lake, will be a "mixed bag," providing you with a variety of informative articles relating to Dewey Lake and the surrounding area.

You can anticipate stories of a historical, environmental, current and safety-related nature. They'll be reports on local happenings and articles on the facilities and recreational opportunities available to you. We'd like to show you what's right here outside your back door!

We'll tell you how Dewey Dam got its name, what safety equipment you should carry on your boat, and the different agencies involved at the lake and what they do. We'll even unlock the mysteries of what the Corps really does at Dewey Lake. (I think we'll have to do that one in installments!)

If you have any questions you'd like us to address, write Resource Manager, Dewey Lake, HC 70 Box 540, Van Lear 41265, or call 886-6709 or 789-4521.

Hope you enjoy the column. Sincerely, Patricia D. Williams Resource Manager Dewey Lake ****

As Corps Rangers we routinely contact swimmers at the popular shoreline areas of Dewey Lake. The other day, as we approached Goble Branch, we were greeted with a rather strange and unusual sight. There were about 10 people swimming in the water. Of course, there are always people swimming in the lake. What made these swimmers different was that they were all wearing life jackets, or PFDs (personal flotation devices). In the group were two adults, several teenagers and many children. And every single one of them had on an orange life jacket.

As Corps Rangers, we are always preaching the gospel of water safety. But this was just too good to be true. These people were really playing it safe. They were not in any danger of drowning. So we just had to talk to them and get a few pictures.

The group of several families were from Salyersville. They came to Dewey Lake to swim and have fun, but they had heard about the three drownings this year, and they just were not going to take any chances. One woman on shore said that she was not about to let her kids get in the water without life jackets. She said that providing jackets for all the kids was really more than she could afford, but then again, she couldn't afford not to buy them.

So, we left Goble Branch feeling really good. We didn't have to worry about these people. This was how it should be. Families enjoying swimming in the waters of Dewey Lake, playing it safe, knowing that they would all be making the trip back home.

What is impact of drugs on traffic fatalities

The intoxicated motorist has been recognized as a major cause of traffic fatalities and injuries. But experts assert that similar attention also should be paid to the threat posed by those who drive under the influence of drugs.

According to a recent report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, 46,000 people are killed and 300,000 are injured each year on the nation's highways.

While extensive research has concluded that alcohol is involved in about 60 percent of those accidents, few studies have examined the toll attributable to marijuana, cocaine, amphetamines and other illicit drugs.

Data released by the National Study Center for Trauma and Emergency Medical Services found that among injured drivers admitted to a Maryland trauma center during a recent 18-month period, 7.1 percent tested positive for cocaine while 4 percent had used PCP.

Of the motorcyclists treated on the same service, one in 10 tested positive for cocaine. An equal number had taken PCP.

Another recent study of 643 New York City traffic fatalities found that one in five of those killed had traces of cocaine in their system.

In an investigation of 182 truck accidents resulting in 210 fatalities, the National Transportation Safety Board concluded that at least 13 percent of the truck drivers involved had been under the influence of marijuana at the time of their accident.

Nine percent of the truck drivers tested positive for cocaine, 8 percent had used over-the-counter stimulants and 7 percent had amphetamines in their system.

Drugs also have been involved in a growing number of train accidents. An investigation into the July 1990 derailment of a 37-car chemical train in Michigan found that the brakeman had used cocaine within 48 hours of the accident.

These studies indicate that the seriousness of the problem of drugged driving is just beginning to be identified.

Further documentation is needed regarding the effects of drugs on a motorist's ability to drive and the extent to which illicit substances are involved in roadway mishaps.

For more information regarding substance abuse, call the CAREUNIT at Our Lady of Bellefonte Hospital (601) 836-3148.

KY Highlands Museum hosts one man show

Watercolorist Clem Joerling is featured in a One-Man Show and Sale now through Sept. 1 at the Kentucky Highlands Museum, 1516 Bath Ave. in Ashland.

Joerling is a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he attended the College of Applied Arts at The University of Cincinnati. After serving in the military for three years during World War II, he returned to the university, and then to the Cincinnati Art Academy.

He worked for several years free lancing in commercial art and then established his own advertising art business which he operated for 25 years. After retiring, he and his wife, Lois, built a home in the mountains of Kentucky, where he paints for pleasure and they enjoy the beauty of the area.

Joerling's paintings are in private, public, and corporate collections. He is a member of the Kentucky Watercolor Society and is represented by several galleries.

Museum hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and 1-4 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free for members, $2 for non-member adults, $1 for non-member children and senior citizens.

Briefing for feds set for P'burg

Congressional staff members will meet in Prestonsburg, rather than Washington, DC, as is normally done, for the 10th quarterly report on the progress of work under the National Wildlife Settlement Agreement.

Kentucky's improved record of management in strip mining reclamation and enforcement will be featured during the Aug. 14-15 briefing, according to an announcement from the governor's office.

Since 1987, the Kentucky Department of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement has been conducting a stepped-up enforcement program using $13 million in Congressional funding, the announcement said.

The department has been recognized for its success in tracking violators of state and federal strip mining and reclamation laws and in assuring that they repair the damage or pay for the work.

Quarterly meetings have been conducted since the start of the program to gauge the state's compliance with the agreement. In addition to Congressional staff members, others in attendance will be state and national surface mining regulation officials and representatives of local, state and national coal associations.

Mended Hearts to meet

The Mended Hearts Inc., Chapter 220, will hear Taunya Shelton-Skeens at this month's meeting. Shelton-Skeens will talk about her experiences as liaison between patients and staff at University of Kentucky Medical Center and the patients' local physicians who referred them to UKMC.

The public is invited to join Mended Hearts members to hear the speaker and to learn about coping with heart disease. The meeting is set for Highlands Regional Medical Center cafeteria, 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 14.

Rehab hearing set for P'burg

The Kentucky Department of Vocational Rehabilitation will have a public hearing in Prestonsburg Aug. 13 concerning the proposed Vocational Rehabilitation State Plan and the State Plan for Independent Living Rehabilitation Services.

The hearing is set for 10 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Floyd County Public Library, 18 N. Arnold Ave.

Comments will become a permanent attachment to the State Plan with copies provided to federal officials, as well, according to Carroll Burchett, acting commissioner of the department. "Any recommendations will be available for lawmakers to consider when deciding on appropriations for the vocational rehabilitation program in the years to come," Burchett said.

Anyone who is unable to attend may submit written comments to George Parsons, Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, 9th Floor, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort 40601; telephone 502/564-3521.

The department is a part of the newly created Cabinet for Workforce Development and provides services that enable Kentuckians with disabilities to be employed.

Bluegrass Fest this weekend

The granddaddy of bluegrass music will be the headline attraction at a Bluegrass Festival Aug. 10-12 at the Greenup County Fairgrounds, sponsored by The Franciscan Sisters of the Poor Foundation and Our Lady of Bellefonte Hospital in Russell.

Also on the list of entertainers are Jim and Jesse and the Virginia Boys, Grandpa Jones, The Whites, The Eddie Adcock Band, The Masters of Bluegrass, Uncle Josh Graves and Kenny Baker Band, Bluegrass Revival, Elmer Bird, Steadfast and Wildwood Girls.

Local bluegrass bands are invited to participate in a contest beginning at 1 p.m. on Saturday. Entry fee is $20, with a first place prize of $150; second, $75, and third, $50.

Hedley Racing Pigs from Kansas will race on Friday and Saturday, and also on tap will be an arts and crafts booth, railroad display, tethered hot air balloon rides, pony rides, clowns, dancers, petting zoo and other attractions.

Shuttle service will be provided from nearby parking areas.

For information, contact Pam Harkins at 833-3383.

Correction

In last week's reporting of Court-house News, under suits filed, the parties in one suit were listed incorrectly. Instead of Carla Allen vs James Allen, it should have read Cabinet for Human Resources vs James Allen for child support.

To Swim or not to Swim

Myrtle Beach, the vacation playground of Eastern Kentucky. It's back in my chair and envision sandy beaches, smooth seas, clear blue skies and beautiful women. The scene plays over and over in my mind. There's nothing I want more than to wade into the cool, calm water and swim out, soaking up sun and sea.

But then, I remember that news report last month about a pair of human feet in tennis shoes being removed from the stomach of a large shark caught in the Atlantic. I remember back to a time three years ago, while working on the island of Saipan in the Western Pacific, when two women diving off the island of Tinian were eaten by sharks. I remember the report from Australia of a large shark that circled a capsized boat for three days waiting for its victims to tire and fall off.

The scene in my mind of sun, sand, sea and women changes ever so slightly but significantly. Now, as I float in the cool Atlantic water, a triangular fin breaks the surface of the sea. The calmness of the scene disappears.

Panic sets in. It's a race. The stakes are high—life for me or a meal for the shark. Fortunately, it doesn't matter if I win the race or not. It's only a day dream, but it does start me thinking about sharks.

Shark! Just the sound of the word is menacing, the printed word looks no better and the actual animal is downright terrifying. The movie Jaws did little to improve the shark's image. Educational TV likes to air segments on sharks, usually showing the Great White Shark (Carcharodon carcharias) attacking some large hunk of horse meat, but the segments tell us little about the animal and only serve to reinforce our fears.

Maybe fear is all we need. At least a good dose of it would keep us out of the water and safe, yet the day is hot and the water so inviting and cool to the touch. Maybe the fear is unfounded. Maybe sharks aren't as bad as portrayed. After all, Lloyd Bridges and Jacques Cousteau are still alive and every year there seem to be more SCUBA divers, not fewer, and I'm told that more people are struck by lightning every year than attacked by sharks.

So what are there ocean dwelling creatures that strike terror into the hearts of most people? Are they really dangerous or just big fish that look mean but do no real harm?

Sharks have been accurately described as the perfect killing machine. The lateral line system, a series of sensory pits located on the sides of the body, is designed to detect the vibrations of unseen, struggling prey at long distances. However, any kind of unusual underwater vibration will attract them.

At closer distances, sharks use their acute sense of smell that can detect one part of blood in one million parts of water. Their vision, once thought to be poor, is now known to be quite good in the low light levels found during their normal feeding times of early evening and early morning and helps them to zero in on their prey.

However, just before biting, the shark closes its eyes with a special eyelid called a nictitating membrane which keeps the eyes safe during any ensuing struggle. At this point, we might expect that the shark's blindness would give the victim a fighting chance of escape, but such is not the case.

On the shark's head is another set of pits called the Pits of Lorenzini. Their function remained a mystery for years, but it is now known that they detect the electromagnetic fields that surround all animals, including man. When getting ready to bite, the shark doesn't need to see; it knows the location of the prey by sensing the electromagnetic field surrounding its body. If the shark wants you, you're his. Your only hope: a third set of pits located in the shark's mouth used for taste.

Normally, however, sharks would feed on a variety of food items ranging from plankton to shellfish, from squid to seals, from fish to porpoises and from sea turtles to whales. They have several rows of teeth, but only the front row is functional. The other teeth are spares that will eventually replace those in the front row.

The intestine is unlike any other in the living world. Instead of being a hollow tube down which food passes, in sharks the interior of the intestine is designed like an augur. The food, therefore, spirals through the intestine. Urea, which is produced as a result of the breakdown of amino acids is excreted in most animals, but in sharks it's retained to help prevent dehydration.

Their skeleton is of cartilage, not bone. Their skin is abrasive to the touch and has been used by Pacific islanders for centuries in lieu of sandpaper. Sharks lack the swim bladder that other fish possess and therefore have a more difficult time maintaining their buoyancy. They compensate for this with a liver high in oil and by constant movement.

Movement in sharks is nothing like other fish. It is actually more closely related to flying than to swimming with the fins functioning like the wings of an airplane. Like flying, when forward movement ceases, sharks fall. It was once thought that sharks had to keep moving to force water over their gills for respiration, but recent finds in Mexico have shown that some large open water sharks can and do rest on the bottom in undersea caves. While resting, water flow over the gills is maintained by the pumping action of the gill covering.

Courtship among sharks can be rough game. Males bite the females behind the head and then use their teeth to anchor themselves in place while twisting their bodies under the females to achieve internal fertilization.

Most give birth to live young, but a few do lay egg capsules. Gestation periods can be as long as two years for some sharks and in some species the unborn young become cannibalistic and will consume their weaker young before birth. Newborn sharks begin to hunt immediately. Their adult size will vary from about six inches in the smallest sharks to over 60 feet in the whale shark.

A whale shark! A shark 60 feet long! No I'm not going swimming. I'll stick to sun, sand and beautiful women—leaving the sea to Cousteau, but there ought to be a way to rid ourselves of these unwanted creatures.

Unwanted? Rid ourselves? Did you know that sharks are used as food, their livers for Vitamin A, their skins turned into hides? That they are fished for sport, most are scavengers and, therefore, important in maintaining the balance of the marine ecosystems and that just recently medical science has started looking for anticancer drugs in their cartilaginous skeleton? That's right, sharks don't get cancer.

But still, a shark 60 feet long. Goodbye Myrtle Beach. Maybe no. Most sharks are not man-eaters and those that are are not numerous. Bites, as seldom as they occur, are frequently due to mistaken identity and most victims survive. Those that die, die of blood loss, not from being eaten.

Attacks have occurred on both coasts of the US and in all oceans of the world, but most attacks are in the warmer tropical waters. The attacks are usually so rare that when they occur, they're front page news in local papers.

Sharks of any type are rarely seen and according to Dr. Eugenie Clark, known as the shark lady, you should feel lucky to see one. As for that 60 foot whale shark, well, whale sharks are big, but they feed only on plankton, the small plants and animals that are carried by ocean currents. Whale sharks are extremely rare, but when one is found, SCUBA divers like to grab onto the large dorsal fin and hitch a ride.

It sounds as if we're back to sun, sand, sea and surf at Myrtle Beach.

New state laws give out-of-work a break

Newly out-of-work Kentuckians will be the beneficiaries of three new state laws that will relax some previous restrictions on unemployment insurance assistance.

The trio of laws, signed by Gov. Wallace G. Wilkinson after passage by the 1990 General Assembly, went into effect July 13.

Commissioner Darvin Allen of the state Department for Employment Services said the most far reaching law, House Bill 93, will affect about 700 Kentuckians annually who are laid off after 10 weeks or less on a job.

Previously, the state would refer to the worker's past job record to decide if he or she qualified for benefits. If the worker had quit the prior job without good cause, including a better job opportunity, benefits were denied.

"Even workers who changed jobs to get more or better hours, more benefits or pay or even better working conditions, wouldn't have been entitled to benefits," Allen said.

"The new bottom line is, as long as hours aren't being reduced, workers won't be penalized for trying to better themselves."

Another provision in House Bill 93 protects employees who earn a sufficient amount of income during a "base period" to qualify for benefits, but the employer fails to pay or does not meet scheduled pay days.

Previously, employees were penalized because benefits were based on wages paid instead of wages earned. Now the worker would qualify for benefits.

A second law, House Bill 231, involves an employee who loses his job because of an extended absence due to a work-related injury.

"If, due to the injury, the employee didn't earn sufficient wages during the base period to qualify for benefits, the state now will refer to his previous job to determine eligibility," Allen said.

The worker also must be eligible for or have received workers' compensation. About 350 workers annually may be affected by this new law.

Under each of these laws, if the worker qualifies for benefits, the money will be drawn from the state "pool," instead of the employer's account.

The third new unemployment insurance law, House Bill 100, prohibits contractors from receiving building permits or being awarded government contracts until they have proven compliance with revenue withholding, workers' compensation and unemployment insurance laws.

"This law is primarily aimed at fly-by-night contractors from out-of-state who work on a project in Kentucky and neglect the state's labor law," Allen said.

"These contractors leave the state holding the bag. Many times their employees will file for benefits because they lose their jobs due to lack of work, but the contractor has left the state without making required tax payments.

"Although these laws will not impact the majority of Kentuckians, they are still important for those people who fall into one of these situations," he said.

Civil War battle gets retelling

The 129th anniversary of the Civil War battle of Camp Wildcat will be observed with a reenactment Oct. 19-21.

Union and Confederate reenactor units from several states have been invited to participate in the battle in Laurel County, north of London. The actual battle involved more than 12,000 men, but had a relatively low casualty count mainly because of rough terrain. It is considered by many historians as the first Union victory of the war.

The reenactment begins at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Reunion

Floyd reunion set for Columbus

The fourth annual Floyd County/Southeastern Kentucky Association meeting will be held at the Anheuser-Busch Park in Columbus, Ohio on Aug. 18, starting at 11 a.m.

Take I-71 North to State Route 161; go west to Busch Boulevard (at the second traffic light) and look for the signs.

Participants are asked to bring old yearbooks, photos, antiques, and any item of interest to share with those who share a common heritage. Spontaneous music and lots of fun for all are anticipated.

The Association will provide hot dogs, brats and soft drinks, and participants can bring their own side dish if they wish. Shelter is available and festivities will take place no matter the weather.

Concert Series tickets on sale

The Eastern Kentucky Concert Series is offering up to seven concerts to people in the area this season, including folk music, Dixieland and Ragtime music, a woodwind group and choir performances.

To acquire a Concert Series season ticket or to become a sponsor, stop by the Community Concert's headquarters during the week of Aug. 13-17. Thirty volunteer workers are now signing up new members, and anyone who is not contacted can join by visiting the two headquarters locations. In Prestonsburg, stop by Owens Music Center in the Highlands Plaza, or call 886-8337. In Paintsville, stop by Citizens National Bank on Broadway between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 11-2 and 4-6 p.m. on Friday.

Memberships are available for individuals, families and students, and members are entitled to attend all concerts. The time to join is limited, but the entertainment will last all year.

Here it is August already. Time to plant your fall blooming bulbs. These will need full sunshine, sandy and well drained soil. Autumn crocus are the showiest of all crocus. They will bloom very soon after planting before the foliage shows.

Medius and zonathus generally bloom in September, Speciasus in October. Plants range from blue to lilac and red lilac grown as spring blooming crocus—5"-6".

Spring blooming crocus and other bulbs should be planted very soon. They will bloom in February and March. For this reason some companies sell them at a high price as snow flowers.

Bulbs are generally the first and last flowers to bloom in our area. Crocus and a few others tell us spring is on the way.

Bulbs are graded and sold according to size. It is better to buy the largest bulbs you can find and afford. The small sizes can best be used for mass planting. Bulbs are usually worth the exact low price you pay for them. Stay away from wild bargains.

Different bulbs have a different place in our flower gardens. Some need shady areas and cannot tolerate full sun. A few of these are Allium, Amaryllis, Begonia and Museau.

Most all bulbs will grow well in most soil, ranging from clay to sandy loam. They will not live in wet, boggy, poorly drained soil. They need plenty of moisture but demand well drained ground. Bulbs thrive in well mulched beds. They do not have to fight weeds for available nutrients.

Bulbs are a favorite for rock gardens, naturalizing, cut flowers, shady areas and some are very fragrant.

The main problem I have concerning bulbs or my lack of them is plain and simple. You cannot let poultry run out where bulbs are. My turkeys, geese and ducks love all bulb foliage and blooms. I placed a wire cage over some prized tulips, but it didn't really help. The turkey hens still got all the bloom buds and most of the leaves. Goats love flowers and roses most of all. Why eat clover — there's a rose bush.

Keeping PACE

by RON FRASURE

Hey, Bubbas, Last week we learned how to change drives. That's fine in itself, but what do we do when we get to that other drive? I know I told you last week we would learn to change directories, but what is a directory? Let's back up just a little bit and learn.

Are you at your computer? Do you see a command prompt [A> or C>]? If you do, please type DIR and press enter. What happened? Your screen should look something like this:

COMMAND COM 25307
3-17-90 1:19p
ANSI SYS 1678 3-17-87
12:00p
APPEND EXE 5825
3-17-87 12:00p
GAMES <DIR>
6-19-90 1:19p
BASIC COM 36403

Well, that's what it will look like if it didn't run off the screen. The heck, you say. Let's do it again. This time type DIR/P, then enter. Oh, my gosh, it filled the screen and then it just stopped. What's this "Press any key to continue" it says on the bottom of the screen? Go ahead, press any key. Well, it filled up again. Press any key until you get the command prompt.

While we are on the subject, I might as well tell you about DIR/W, too. Have you typed it yet? Yeah, now you're getting the hang of it. What should have happened is that you lost the information about how large the files are and what date and time they were stored on your disk. All we have now is the information that we really want to see. We see the file name and its extension in five columns across the screen.

Okay, I know that's all fine and dandy, but what do we do with all this information? You will notice that the first set of words or group of letters will be no longer than eight letters. These are called files and the three letters that follow them are called extensions. Oh, boy, this is getting good now.

The first thing I want you to look at is the extension. There are several different extensions, but the only ones we want to be interested in are:

- BAT
- COM
- EXE

If you type the word or letters in front of those extensions, something will probably happen. Go ahead and play for now, but be careful of FORMAT. If something happens that you think shouldn't, push ctrl, alt, del keys at the same time.

Play push buttons and, above all, have a good time and I'll write more for you next week. If there is a question of particular interest to you, please write to me. Address your questions to Ronald Frasure Jr., 101 W. Court St., Prestonsburg, 41653, or just come to our PACE computer club meetings. We hold them the first and third Tuesday of each month at the Floyd County Library, starting at 7 p.m. and lasting for about two and a half hours. You all come.

ON THE LEFT WE HAVE...

Dudley Nichols, our Service Manager, resides at Varney in Pike County. His wife of six years is Penny, and they have one daughter, Jessica, who is four years old.

Dudley graduated from Johns Creek High School and attended Eastern Kentucky University. His hobbies include hunting and fishing.

Dudley has been employed in the automobile industry for five years as service writer, warranty clerk, and now service manager. His experience in warranty claims helps us get you all the factory coverage that you are entitled to.

IN THE MIDDLE WE HAVE...

Taylor Caldwell, our Body Shop Foreman, who has over 28 years' experience in automobile dealerships.

Taylor and his wife Pauline live in Campton, and his hobbies are hunting, fishing, boating, and farming. He is a member of the Hazel Green Masonic Lodge, Scottish Rite Council, Oleika Shrine, Elks Club, Wolf County Volunteer Fire Department, Wolf County Rescue Squad, and is a board member of the Middle Kentucky River Area Development Council. Taylor is also a member of the Campton Church of God.

Taylor graduated from both Wolf County High School and Morehead State University. His automotive experience, as well as 4 1/2 years as an independent insurance claims adjuster, assures you of getting quick and adequate claims service from your insurance company.

We have a full line body shop, including the area's first frame rack, and offer 24-hours wrecker service with Eastern Kentucky's most experience and capable wrecker operator, Bobby Hackworth.

ON THE RIGHT WE HAVE...

Mike Short, the newest member of our team, our Parts Manager, who is a native of Johnson County. He graduated from Johns Creek High School and attended the University of Kentucky.

Mike has 14 years' experience in General Motors parts, and was last employed as parts manager for S & R Chevrolet in Leesburg, Virginia, before returning back to Kentucky last year.

Mike is married to the former Verronda Castle of Meally, and has one son, Wesley. His hobbies include golfing and fishing, and for the next few months a complete renovation of our parts department.

We have over $500,000.00 in parts inventory, but if by chance we do not have your part in stock we can generally get it by the next day.

WE'RE GROWING WITH PRIDE AND TOTALLY DEDICATED TO GIVING YOU THE BEST SERVICE AVAILABLE ANYWHERE.

Among the critters

Martin beaten out by flying squirrel in Happy Hunting Ground calendar

Each year the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Resources puts out a colorful and attractive calendar that features photos of small forest creatures such as birds, squirrels, rabbits, owls, fish and deer. The 1990-91 Calendar will have all of that in it also, except for the month of May 1991.

"I am the only living human being in the calendar for the year," said adventurer Barry Martin of McDowell, a social studies teacher at the Left Beaver high school. "I was beaten out for the front cover by a flying squirrel."

Martin enjoys the outdoors and takes every opportunity to share it with the creatures of the woods. After all, they shared a page in their calendar with him.

"I belong to the Trout Unlimited Club — that and the fact that I know Soc Clay, a well known outdoors photographer and author. We backpacked into some woods and he took pictures of us. What Clay does is that he sells his photos to magazines around the country. One photo that he took of me also appeared in Outdoor Life, a magazine that is well known around the country."

Martin says the purpose of the Trout Unlimited Club is to stock streams with trout. The photograph was taken at the Beaver Creek Wilderness Area around Somerset.

"It's for the betterment of cool water streams," he stated, "and we will backpack fish to the streams. It is a good group that got started in West Virginia and spread to here."

Martin says that his group has been working the Red River Gorge also.

Besides being featured in the Fish and Wildlife 1990 Calendar, Martin's summer has been anything but boring.

Floatin'

Barry Martin, McDowell, stands in front of the Big Sandy River that he ventured on July 4. Martin has spent the summer "floating", climbing and fishing. He is featured in the Happy Hunting Grounds 1990-91 calendar.

"Bobby Allen and I sort of took on a challenge of climbing the highest point of mountains in our region," explained Martin. "We have reached the high points of mountains in Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee." Allen is a math teacher at the McDowell school also.

Martin, who is 50 years old, says that the highest mountain they climbed was Mount Mitchell in North Carolina which has an elevation of over 6400 feet.

"It was enjoyable," he remarked. "I don't know if it was fun or not, but we enjoyed it. We would just take our time." The Mount Mitchell climb took nine hours.

"It was a four-and-a-half hour trip there and back. However, we got disoriented and got lost coming back. We just meet some people on the trails and they pointed us the way we should go," said the social studies teacher.

Martin and Allen also took on the challenge of Mount Rogers, a hike of 13 miles. Spruce Knob in West Virginia has an elevation of 4,863 feet.

Black Mountain in Harlan County was also on their challenge list, and although they found nothing back there but a fire tower, Martin said Black Mountain has a lot of potential for development.

"The problem with Black Mountain is that it is privately owned," explained Martin. "It could be developed if the government had it." Black Mountain has an elevation of 4200 feet.

When Martin is not being photographed trout fishing and climbing high mountains, he finds it enjoyable to float down the Big Sandy River, go "floating" he calls it.

"We floated down the Big Sandy on the fourth of July. We put in at the low water bridge there at Allen and floated down to the state boat ramp behind the Playhouse Restaurant. We have floated as far as Greenbrier, W.Va."

Martin, who has been teaching for 27 years, advises people stuck on what to do over a weekend to float the Big Sandy.

"It has some great possibilities," says Martin. "We did see some garbage in it, but there were some nice areas also. I was surprised how clear it was."

Martin says that he and his colleague will have to look for some new adventures for next summer, although there are a lot of good float streams around the area.

Martin also says that his wife sometimes accompanies him on his adventures which they travel in a Winnebago. And she also sometimes tries her hand at scaling the mountains.

"She is very understanding, though, when I just want to go with the men," he explained. "She is a librarian, and she likes to read. She enjoys it. We have been to the Smokies, Florida and other southern states. However, there are a lot of good places close by."

Martin says that he likes to keep busy during the summer months and spends a lot of time fishing and hunting and looking for summer activities.

"Anymore, I enjoy just reading about those places rather than doing them," he says.

So take it from the man who lost the front cover of a calendar to a flying squirrel, there are a lot of mountains to climb and streams to float.

May pin up in Happy Hunting Ground

Saying that he lost the front cover of Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's Happy Hunting Ground calendar to a flying squirrel, McDowell's Barry Martin is shown fishing for trout in a backwoods stream. Martin will be featured in the calendar for May 1991. Martin is the only human being in the calendar that is colorfully decked with squirrels, owls, fish, deer and birds. ## New law allows 7th graders to play in high school sports

A new law that overturned a regulation that the Kentucky Board of Education passed in November, prohibiting seventh and eighth graders from playing football, baseball, soccer and wrestling on the high school level, has drawn a lot of criticism because of the vast difference in ages and physical strength.

The safety of the younger players is the concern of the parents who are the most vocal.

The state law prohibits any state school board from interfering with any seventh and eighth grade player who wishes to participate in the four sports.

In Floyd County, eighth graders have been permitted to play on the varsity teams of county high schools. Dewey Jamerson, head football coach at Allen Central High School, disagrees with those who are protesting the ruling. Jamerson believes that if seventh and eighth graders are capable of playing varsity football they should have the chance to do so.

"It depends on the kid and his size," Jamerson said. "I played varsity football, or I was on the varsity team as a seventh grader and got in on maybe two defensive plays toward the end of the year. However, I started at Wheelwright as an eighth grader and I weighed 175 pounds then. I see nothing wrong with letting the seventh and eighth graders play if they are capable of performing."

Jamerson says that size is not the only factor in determining if a seventh or eighth grader plays varsity.

"The key is if a kid is ready to play," he said. "He may be big enough to play but not able to play. There is a difference. Being big doesn't make you a football player. You have to know how to play and be ready to play."

Jamerson stated that when he was in the eighth grade he had just as much experience in football as some of the upper grade players.

"If the grade school system did not have a football program," stated Roger Johnson, head coach at Wheelwright High School, "I won't hesitate one minute to play a seventh or an eighth grader. I see nothing wrong with the new law. The lower grades could play on the junior varsity team. Even with that ruling we could have a freshman team."

Johnson echoed the same thoughts as Jamerson when he said that the players should be physically able to play and know how to play before taking part on the varsity level.

In Floyd County there are four football teams in high schools, and grade schools in their areas do not have an elementary program.

Release set for January

Rose begins jail term

The new federal prison site in Ashland was to be the home of baseball's all time hits leader, Peter Rose. However, because the construction on the new facilities was not complete, Rose was moved up river to Marion, Ill., where he began to serve his five months in prison Aug. 8, for cheating on his income tax.

Rose arrived at the minimum security prison with members of his immediate family as he turned himself in to prison officials. Rose will also be required to stay three months at a halfway house in Cincinnati after his five months of incarceration has been completed at the Illinois facility.

Published reports of the Illinois facilities picture it more as a summer camp area rather than a prison, with basketball courts, weight rooms and handball courts. Warden John L. Clark said that Rose will have full access to all the facilities at the institute. Clark said that the prison's guards will not be permitted to seek Rose's autograph and the baseball legend has asked that all request for interviews be denied.

Rose, 49, was banned from baseball for life a year ago for gambling. He can, by baseball rules, file for reinstatement in baseball this month. However, that seems unlikely at this time. Rose delayed incarceration because of knee surgery he had to undergo for a torn ligament in his right knee. He had until today (Friday, Aug. 10) to turn himself in.

Rose is serving time in the Illinois prison for failing to report more than $350,000 in income from autograph signing and gambling winnings.

Rose is scheduled to be released on Jan. 7. The former Cincinnati Reds manager is reported to have said he still hopes to be home for Christmas with time off for good behavior.

Allen and Martin at Mt. Mitchell

Bobby Allen, left, and Barry Martin both teachers at McDowell High School stand in front of the trail that leads to Mt. Mitchell, the highest peak in North Carolina. The duo spent the summer reaching new heights — mountain heights, that is.

Sparky Anderson: 'Lou, don't panic'

by Bob Queenan
Scripps Howard News Service
Sparky Anderson, manager of the winningest team in Cincinnati Reds history, has a message for Lou Piniella, his counterpart: "Don't panic. Just take it day by day."

Piniella's Reds, who got off to a 33-12 start (.733 winning percentage), have posted a 29-32 record (.475) since. They were 3-7 in their last 10 games going into Tuesday's game at home with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Reds have virtually no hope of surpassing Anderson's 1975 Cincinnati team which won 108 games. Today's Reds would have to win 47 of their final 56 games, an .839 winning percentage, to top the 1975 Reds as the winningest in Cincinnati history.

Even winning 100 games — a realistic possibility two weeks ago — will be difficult for Piniella's Reds. They would have to play at a .678 winning percentage, winning 38 of 56 games to achieve what only four Reds clubs have done since 1876.

"I don't think either club (Cincinnati or San Francisco) can win 100 games," said Anderson. "Besides, when you do that, even if you have a great team, and both of those teams are great, all it means is the other teams in your division are awful."

Anderson's 1975 and 1976 Reds teams won 108 and 102 games, respectively, and both got off to excellent starts en route to World Series Championships.

Going into Tuesday night's game, the Reds were 62-44, a .585 winning percentage after 106 games, and five games ahead of San Francisco. The 1975 Reds were 69-37 (.650) and 14-1/

2 games in first place after 106 games; the 1976 Reds were 68-38 (.641) and nine games in front.

But even those teams weren't invincible.

"In 1975," Anderson said, "we were playing our last game in the series that year with the Giants at San Francisco. By the third inning, we were down nine runs and they ended up killing us. Then we came home to Riverfront and played three with the St. Louis Cardinals and by the third inning of each of those games we were down by at least seven runs and they killed us, too," Anderson said.

Pitino: UK to be same

University of Kentucky head basketball coach Rick Pitino was in Ashland as guest speaker in the city's Night Out Against Crime program on Tuesday night.

Pitino, who has brought respectability back into UK basketball, said that although his Wildcat basketball team may not be of NCAA quality this season, they will be back the following year with a team that will be able to compete.

"We will be the same type of team as last year with the same type of offense," the second year UK coach told the media at a news conference. Pitino said that Kentucky fans will see more pure motion from the Big Blue team, meaning there will be less of the three-point shooting.

Pitino talked of his hiring of new assistant coach Bernadette Locke — the first woman assistant in college basketball — and the impact that she has made on the UK team. "She is going to be a great asset to the program. I think we have the top staff in the nation."

The Wildcats have broken tradition and have placed Western and Eastern Kentucky universities on the schedule for 1991. Pitino said that future schedules will include games with Big East Conference teams but that probably won't come until year after next. Louisville, Western and Eastern will be three Kentucky teams on the Wildcats game plan next year.

Pitino also announced that the Wildcats will have tri-captains next season. Deron Feldhaus, Reggie Hanson and John Pelphrey will share the title. Pelphrey is from Paintsville and, according to the UK coach, he along with Feldhaus has put on 15 pounds of muscle.

"After losing four in a row, I told (coach) George Scherger, 'Shug, we may never win another game.'"

Anderson, now manager of the Detroit Tigers, said losing streaks are nearly as inevitable as the panic that sets in among fans, media, players and management.

"You get off to a great start and I don't know why or how it happens, but it's almost impossible to keep that enthusiasm and momentum you had going," Anderson said. "I guarantee it, every club will run into a losing streak just as the worst team will run into a winning streak."

Shelton out for 6 weeks

Just what Wheelwright football coach Roger Johnson did not want to happen, did. Running back Eddie Shelton's injury in the Panorama against Allen Central proved more serious than suspected.

"Eddie broke his collarbone and will be lost to the team for at least six weeks," reported the Trojan mentor. "That is really going to hurt us."

Shelton scored the game's only touchdown with a six-yard run in the first quarter as the Trojans got past the Rebels 6-0. However, later in the game Shelton, 5-6, 145, was taken out because of being hurt.

After the game he was taken to the emergency room where he was told the results and the bad news of having to sit out for six weeks, putting the possibility of his return around either the Evarts game or a road game to Raceland.

The slender Shelton rushed for 49 yards against Allen Central on seven carries. He has a run of 32 yards.

Johnson said in an earlier interview that his club could compete if it could stay clear of injuries. The Trojans are not that much overmanned and depend on several key players to go both ways on offense and defense.

Mike Justice is also suffering from an injured knee, however, he did play against the Rebels Saturday night.

Going for the green

Floyd Countians attend camp

A group of fifth and sixth graders from Floyd County arrived at Camp Robert Webb Monday for a week of outdoor fun and instruction recently. Camp Robert Webb is one of the three conservation education camps operated by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. The campers who have all participated in the department's Conservation Education Program in the schools, spent the week swimming, boating, fishing and in instruction in boating safety, conservation and safe gun handling. From Floyd County are Susan R. Akers, Carla J. Bailey, Joan M. Banner, Melissa Kay Barrowman, Tracy Michelle Clark, Pamela S. Fannin, Amanda B. Hall, Stephanie Hamilton, Karra Beth Lafferty, Angela D. Little, Virginia L. Mead, Melanie Renee Newman, Misty D. Rose, Valerie Stratton, Sarah S. Vickers. (Camp Photo)

Nature can be striking -- and lethal

by Tom Stienstra
A hiker was killed by a lightning bolt at the summit of Mt. Whitney recently — an ominous warning to visitors of the high Sierra.

Sudden afternoon thunderstorms, a risk of mountain sickness from high altitude, and Giardia from drinking stream water are three built-in dangers for mountain hikers.

Matt Nordbrock, 26, was sitting in the small stone hut that pokes through the sky at 14,496 feet atop Mt. Whitney, when a lightning bolt harpooned the hut's steel roof. Nordbrock, wearing metal rim glasses, was thrown several feet by the electrical charge and later died. Four others were seriously injured.

In 1985, I climbed Half Dome in Yosemite Park the same week a lightning bolt struck a hiker in the center of his forehead, who then staggered off the west cliff and fell several thousand feet.

Afternoon thundershowers are common in the high country, especially on hot summer days, when thunder rattles off canyon rims and tumbles down valleys, and lightning bolts ricochet off mountaintops.

They are created when cool sea breezes out of the west push hot air eastward against the Sierra Nevada mountains. That creates a lifting force of warm, humid air, which creates cumulus clouds above ridge lines. In less than an hour in the late afternoon in the Sierra Nevada, warm blueskies can suddenly be filled with foreboding clouds and shortlived storms of remarkable intensity.

When much of California was being brazened with 100-degree temperatures, one such storm blasted Tahoe with so much rain in an hour that flash flood warnings were posted.

Since trees act as lightning rods, the most dangerous place for hikers is above the tree line. In fact, at the tree line at 10,000 feet near Island Pass in the Ansel Adams Wilderness, most of the sparse lodgepole pines have been fried at one time or another by lightning bolts.

That is why the Forest Service has built rock huts at Muir Pass, where there are no trees for several miles in any direction, and also atop Mt. Whitney, the highest point in the contiguous United States. The difference is that the hut at Whitney has a sloped metal roof to deflect snow. But it also attracts lightning strikes.

pack and anything metallic, then try to hide in a rock crevice.

Other Hazards in the high country can also be dealt with safely.

The most common affliction is mountain sickness, which is actually high altitude pulmonary edema, caused by a lack of oxygen in the blood stream. One summer in the Muir Pass area, the Forest Service made 60 emergency helicopter rescues in a 45-day span.

The first symptom is a headache, which is common to newcomers to high altitudes. It is followed by nausea, disorientation, and in the later stages, a coma. When someone starts babbling, it's time to treat it as a life threatening illness.

The antidote is simple enough: Immediately descend to a lower altitude where the oxygen density in the air is higher.

Giardia is another problem easily solved. Giardia lamblia, a microscopic protozoan, is not uncommon in major watersheds. Some call it "beaver fever," but by any name, it can be ingested by drinking untreated stream water, which then causes stomach cramps, nausea and long term diarrhea.

The answer is filtering all drinking water with one of the pump units available at outdoors stores. They not all only filter out the Giardia, but all kinds of other little critters.

Years ago, before I started filtering all my drinking water, I can remember filling up a clear canteen from a river and holding it up to sunlight. You can see dozen of little creatures swimming around.

That was all the convincing I needed.

KIDWELL NAMED ASSISTANT AT MSU

Merle Kidwell, a former standout athlete at Lewis County High School, has been named a graduate assistant coach on the men's basketball staff at Morehead State University.

Kidwell comes to MSU from Shawnee State, where last season he served as assistant basketball coach and sports information director.

Following an outstanding athletic career at Lewis County High School, the Vanceburg native played one season of basketball at Shawnee State, which was then a junior college. He then transferred to Otterbein College, where he served two years as a student assistant basketball coach.

Kidwell, the son of long time Lewis County basketball and baseball coach Gary Kidwell, earned a bachelor's degree in English from Otterbein in 1989.

JACKSON REACTIVATED BY REDS

Cincinnati Reds lefthander Danny Jackson has been reactivated by the Reds, ending his stay on the 15-day disabled list. The Reds sent righthander Keith Brown to Nashville to make room for Jackson. Jackson had complained of a tightness in his left shoulder, sparking speculation of a season-ending and perhaps career-ending injury for the 4-2 Reds moundman.

Jackson was on a four-game personal winning streak when he felt the stiffness in his left shoulder while warming up. Scott Scudder replaced Jackson in the game and hurled the Reds to a 6-2 win over the Atlanta Braves. ****

PROCTOR WELCOMES FIRST EAGLE TEAM

Morehead State University's first year head football coach, Cole Proctor, is in the process of welcoming the first Eagle football team to campus in preparation for the 1990 season.

More than 40 freshmen are already on campus for two days of practice before the veterans arrived last Wednesday evening. Proctor and his staff expect more than 100 candidates to be on hand by the time the first non-contact practice session begins on Friday (today).

The Eagles will have their first contact workout on Tuesday, Aug. 14. They open the season on Sept. 1 at Marshall.

MSU was picked sixth of seven by Ohio Valley Conference coaches and sports information directors in a poll released Aug. 2 at the conference's annual football media day.

Eagle quarterback Chris Swartz and tight end Brandon Ford were named to the preseason all-conference team.

Not named to the preseason all-conference team but still receiving a great deal of attention is free safety Darrell Beavers. The 6-3, 230-pound

Halloween Forest

by April Johnson
Prestonsburg High School
First Place

When you walk through the woods
You must beware
For witches and goblins
Are hiding there.
Every year on Halloween night
When the air is filled with eerie fright
They take out their cauldrons, pots and bells and cast all their hoaxes, jinxes and spells.
Potions swirl and dead leaves curl until the midnight hour.
With torture, death and untold pain
they reveal their awesome power.
The air pulsates and tree roots shake as in a hellish, nightmarish dream
As an innocent girl, by the blade of a sword, dies with a bone-chilling scream.
Round the big oak tree in the middle of the woods
Stand the Druids in black velvet robes and hoods.
Their satanic chantings echo and ring,
As they sing praises of the Goblin King.
Ghosts and apparitions fill the air
With earth and blood caked in their hair.
The long-dead zombies arise and walk the earth
To proclaim the Goblin Prince's prophetic birth.
The Evil Ones guard their forest well
With three-eyed monsters and hounds of hell.
They'll grind your bones and your skin will be burned,
As the last people who entered Halloween Forest learned!

E.O. Robinson's legacy lives on long after his death

E.O. ROBINSON

Disturbing news was spreading like a prairie fire on June 25, 1934, the day Edward O. Robinson died. His obituary in the next day's newspapers was overshadowed by reports of staggering unemployment levels, of the choking dust storms in the Midwest, of the awkward initial workings of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal, of the brutal rise to power in Germany of a failed Austrian artist named Adolf Hitler.

But Robinson's death in a Northern Kentucky automobile accident was momentous news for many who read the paper that day.

This almost larger-than-life lumber baron, active and vital and treated like a celebrity, one of the state's leading philanthropists at the time, was gone. He was 67.

A dozen years before his death, he donated $1 million to establish a fund that would help the people of Eastern Kentucky obtain both education and health care.

At the same time, Robinson deeded a 14,000-acre tract of logging-ravaged land in Breathitt, Knott and Perry counties to the University of Kentucky.

Today, a regenerated forest bears his name, as does the fund that provides college scholarships and a wide range of health care services to the mountain region.

Robinson, during his 14 years of logging and milling — from 1908 to 1922 — developed an affectionate bond with the people of Eastern Kentucky, according to documents at UK's Margaret I. King Library in Lexington.

In one letter, Robinson referred to them as "gentle hill folk," and wrote of his obligation to give something back to the mountains from which he had extracted a fortune.

Humble beginnings may have figured into later generosity.

He was born in rural Sumner, Ill., two years after the end of the Civil War. He was one of five children, but unlike the others, he left home as a young man. He settled in the Cincinnati area, and soon formed a friendship with Fred Mowbray.

They worked together at Cincinnati's C. Crane Co. for a decade and saved their money. In 1900, after hearing reports of huge amounts of money that could be made harvesting trees in Eastern Kentucky, they formed the Mowbray & Robinson Co. and began looking for timber land.

Land agents put them in touch with Miles Bach of Quicksand. In 1908, Bach, reputedly a German immigrant descended from the same family that produced Johann Sebastian Bach, sold Mowbray and Robinson more than 15,000 acres of wilderness that later would become Robinson Forest.

The company ruthlessly logged the virgin stand, leaving only small trees that had no market value. Taxes on the land were high, while economic prospects were low, old records indicate.

But Robinson saw a use for the land. He gave it to UK on the condition that the university would use it only for reforestation and agricultural experimentation, to show Eastern Kentuckians what could be done with their mountainous terrain.

Robinson sold the mineral rights to a West Virginia man, but when the man failed to make his payments, Robinson foreclosed on the mortgage and deeded the rights to the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Recent efforts to mine for coal next to the forest "would probably make Mr. Robinson very angry," says Lyman V. Ginger, the former superintendent of public instruction in Kentucky and the chairman of the E.O. Robinson Mountain Fund's board of directors.

"He wanted that area regenerated and preserved for future generations," Ginger adds. "He was adamant about that."

And he was adamant about his bequest to the Mountain Fund. His correspondence regarding the fund indicates that he wanted the money used in ways that would allow mountain people to help themselves.

Robinson had been in Louisville on fund business the day he died. He was driving home to his wife Lydia in Fort Thomas when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel. The car rolled down a steep embankment near Beaver Lick, Ky., and — in a final touch of bizarre irony — crashed into a tree on the edge of a forest.

Local students attend seminar

MELISSA CORBETT

Two Floyd County students, Melissa Corbett and Nikki Ratliff, recently attended the Hugh O'Brien Youth Leadership Seminar in Lexington.

Both girls were selected from sophomore candidates at their schools where she is a member of the Academic Team, Math Club, Future Problem Solving Team, Beta Club, annual staff and newspaper staff.

She received the English, geography and Future Business Education Awards and was listed in Who's Who Among American High Schools.

Representing the June Buchanan School, Ratliff is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ratliff of Estill. She is active in student government, journalism club, girls softball and basketball, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, show choir, cross-country and Future Problem Solving Team. She is also vice president of her class and was voted Outstanding Sophomore by her teachers.

In addition, she received the prestigious June Buchanan Scholar-Athlete Award for girls varsity basketball and the sophomore English Award. She is a member of the National Honor Society and is listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

KHEAA pot for students dried up

Funds for the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA) College Access Program (CAP) Grants for students enrolling in college for the 1990-91 academic year at least half-time are depleted, according to Paul P. Borden, executive director of KHEAA.

More than 17,000 students received funds totaling $47,724,400 for this new program initiated by Gov. Wallace Wilkinson. CAP Grants are for needy freshmen and sophomores who enroll at a Kentucky public or private nonprofit college. The award amount is $640 per academic year which will fully pay tuition at a community college.

Funds are still available for eligible CAP Grant applicants who enroll in the 1990 fall semester for three to five semester hours. Awards to students in this category will be made through the last date to enroll at the college. The award amount is $27 per semester hour which is the community college tuition rate.

Program information and applications are available from participating colleges, KHEAA, and social service agencies throughout the Commonwealth.

Funds for State Student Incentive Grants (SSIG) and Kentucky Tuition Grants (KTG) are also depleted. SSIG awards totaling $5,218,000 and KTG awards totaling $7,690,000 have been

Johnson woman featured at PCC

Prestonsburg Community College Art Gallery presents the works of Nan Spradlin, Johnson County artist, through Aug. 30.

Spradlin is a native of Johnson County and a 1970 graduate of Johnson Central High School. She has degrees from Berea College, Eastern Kentucky University and Morehead State University.

Since 1979, she has been employed by the Carl D. Perkins Rehabilitation Center in Theima as an art instructor.

PCC Art Gallery hours through Aug. 16 will be by appointment only. From Aug. 16-31, the Gallery will be open on Tuesdays from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and on Thursdays from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. For a special appointment to view the works, call 886-3863, ext. 201.

Memories

by Leigh Ann Smith
Betsy Layne High School
Third Place

That which once had been
So vivid in my mind
Has now turned a faint shade of yellow
Tarnished by time.

The thoughts that I had so previously Placed in those pockets called memories
Are now buried so deeply
That they are unretrieved.

But what does come with age
Is a philosopher's mind —
A mind willing to accept what it sees,
A mind willing to succumb to time.

August focus on handicapped

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson has designated the month of August as Commission for Handicapped Children Month to promote the services of the commission. The Kentucky Outreach Project for Handicapped Children's Services is a three-month marketing campaign beginning in August.

The goals of the project are to create greater awareness in all Kentucky parents and professionals of the services that can be available for handicapped or potentially handicapped children.

The mission of the Commission for Handicapped Children is to prevent handicapping conditions in children under 21 through early identification, diagnosis, treatment, and remediation and to maximize the capabilities of the handicapped child.

Anyone anywhere may refer a Kentucky child in need of medical attention to the commission by calling the closest clinic or the Louisville headquarters. Basic eligibility requires the condition be one that usually responds to treatment, and that the family meet financial guidelines.

For additional information, contact: Susan Foushee, Kentucky Commission for Handicapped Children, 982 Eastern Parkway, Louisville 40217; (502) 588-3264 or (502) 499-7217.

Interns in Jordan

Charlotte Hale, daughter of Walter and Terri Hale of Newport News, Va., formerly of Floyd County, has been selected to do a journalism internship with The Star, an English language newspaper in Amman, Jordan. The granddaughter of Mattie Ferrell and the late Herbert Ferrell of Manton, she was graduated in May from Boston University with a bachelor of science degree in journalism, with honors. The National Council on United States-Arabic Relations select several graduates each year to work in the Middle East to promote relations and understanding between the US and Arab countries. The internship is for three months.

Simile of Love

by Chris Griffith
Prestonsburg High School
Second Place

Love is like an eagle that soars high above the ground
Majestic in flight and noble in form for love is rarely found
Love is like the diamond that shines for all to see
It glistens with the light of hope, as your eyes do when you're with me
Love is like the teardrop that falls from your lovely eyes
It pierces my chest and makes its way to the place where my heart lies
Love is like a thunderstorm that quickly passes by
The lightning flashes, the thunder shrieks, but then a rainbow graces the sky
Love is like the waning moon that glows like a polished jewel
It is sometimes empty and sometimes halved, but always returns in full
Love is like a newborn child whose life is sweet and pure
Although it's young, it will strengthen and grow till its course is steady and sure
Love is like the heart's desire that one must forever pursue
But in my life, my goal is clear, for the one I love is you.

3 earn Pikeville scholarships

Three Floyd students, Brenda Hunter of Printer, Melissa Dye of Price and Christopher Kidd of Honaker, have been awarded Appalachian Honors Scholarships at Pikeville College for the coming year, according to Associate Dean John Sanders.

The three were among 37 incoming Pikeville College students to be awarded the scholarships, which provide one-third tuition and free room and board.

To be eligible for Appalachian Honors Scholarships, students must have at least a 3.0 grade point average in high school or at least a score of 20 on the American College Test, Sanders said.

Melissa Dye is the daughter of Jimmy and Thelma Dye of Price. She is a 1990 graduate of McDowell High School where she was on the honor roll and active in the Beta Club, Students Against Drunk Driving, Future Homemakers of America and Future Business Leaders of America. She is 18 and plans to major in either accounting or prelaw. Her grandpar-

Brenda Hunter is a 1973 graduate of Betsy Layne High School and has attended Prestonsburg Community College. She plans to major in elementary education at Pikeville College.

BRENDA HUNTER

Christopher Kidd is 18, the son of Miles and Ailene Kidd of Honaker. He is a 1990 graduate of Betsy Layne High School where he participated in the Beta Club, band, academic team, FBLA and the science club. He is the grandson of Marion Akers of Honaker and plans to major in medical technology.

Allen receives KASA leadership award

Lawrence W. Allen, son of Woodrow and Grace Allen of Grayson formerly of Floyd County, received the leadership award in the category of school superintendent, presented by the Kentucky Association of School Administrators at its annual statewide conference in Louisville on July 24.

The award is given to one superintendent annually and recognizes "exemplary educational leadership ability" and the fact that the recipient has "brought honor to his colleagues, his profession, and to himself."

A native of Floyd County, Allen and his wife, the former Sandra Everman of Grayson, now resides in Paducah with their sons, Chad, 20, and Casey, 18. Allen, who has been superintendent of the Paducah City Schools since 1983, has been a school administrator for the past 20 years, having served as assistant principal, staff member for an education cooperative and the Kentucky Department of Education, and federal project director. He was superintendent of the Caldwell County Schools for five years before moving to Paducah.

Allen, who holds a BA degree in mathematics and English from Morehead State University and a masters and doctorate in educational administration and supervision from the University of Tennessee, was 1986-87 president of KASA, the largest professional association for school administrators in the state. He also has been a member of the organization's board of directors and has served on various committees.

Gas company gives

E.B. Jenkins, president of Kentucky West Virginia Gas Co. of Ashland, presents a check for $3000 to Pikeville College President William H. Owens. The company's gift is to be used for general support at the college, Jenkins said. Owens called the gift "a welcome sign of support from one of the leading companies of our region."

Dedication

Dedication ceremonies for the James D. Adams Middle School on South Lake Drive in Prestonsburg will take place Sunday at 2:30 p.m., sponsored by the Floyd County Board of Education.

On a field trip

The Wayland Elementary School Junior Beta Club and Sheilah Ratliff's fourth grade class posed for the camera during their field trip to Fort Boonesborough in June.

Coast guard academy accepting applications

The United States Coast Guard Academy is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as Cadet, US Coast Guard, Class of 1995. Applications are being accepted for both men and women.

Appointments as Coast Guard Cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional nominations or geographical quotas.

Applications must be submitted to the Director of Admissions prior to Dec. 15. Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or American College Testing Assessment (ACT) prior to or including the December 1990 ACT and SAT test administrations.

Appointments as Cadet are tendered based on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and have demonstrated proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

Candidates must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1, 1991.

All candidates must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1991. All candidates must have completed a minimum of three years of English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard Cadets obtain an undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances fully adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses. The constantly updated Academy curriculum leads to a Bachelor of Science degree with a strong academic emphasis on engineering and science.

The selected major studies, when combined with varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career. Graduates of the Academy are commissioned as Ensigns in the US Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools, in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

The young Academy graduate can look forward to a varied, exciting, and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard Officer. Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard performs a variety of missions. These include search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintenance of advanced electronic and other aids to navigation around the globe, operation of icebreakers which clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforcement of marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

To obtain an application for further information write: Director of Admissions, US Coast Guard Academy, 15 Mohegan Avenue, New London, CT 06320; or call (203) 444-8501.

Award winner

David Pigman has been accepted by the United States Achievement Academy as an award winner in history and government. A Prestonsburg High School student, he was nominated by his world civilization teacher Aileen Brown. He will appear in the US Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published nationally. He is the son of Audrey Pigman and the grandson of Hargis and Dockie Bell Pigman of Prestonsburg.

UPS foundation funds scholarships

Fifteen independent colleges and universities in Kentucky will receive $32,250 in grants from a $22 million educational fund established in 1974 by the UPS Foundation. The UPS Foundation is the main charitable arm of United Parcel Service.

"We are happy that The UPS Foundation has a part in helping young people achieve their educational goals in independent colleges throughout the country," said Clement E. Hanrahan, director of The UPS Foundation. "We know that education is the key to a competitive and productive work force and that corporate America has a significant stake in providing our nation's young people with educational opportunities."

The grants, used for scholarships and student aid, will be distributed in the state through the Kentucky Independent College Fund, one of the 39 state and regional associations affiliated with the Stamford, Conn.-based Foundation for Independent Higher Education (FIHE), administrator of the fund.

Area colleges that will receive UPS Foundation grants include:

Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes; Asbury College, Wilmore; Bellamine College, Louisville; Berea College, Berea; Brescia College, Owensboro; Campbellsville College, Campbellsville; Centre College, Danville; Cumberland College, Williamsburg; Georgetown College, Georgetown; Kentucky Wesleyan

College, Owensboro; Pikeville College, Pikeville; Spalding University, Louisville; Thomas More College, Crestview Hills; Transylvania University, Lexington; Union College, Barboursville.

Pikeville College received $2,150, according to an announcement from the college.

The more than $1.2 million generated by the fund this year will be distributed to 600 independent colleges and universities throughout the country. Since its establishment 15 years ago, The UPS Foundation educational fund has provided over $9 million in scholarships and student aid.

TV PIPELINE

Richard Gere began career in high school productions

By Polly Vonetes

Q: I am a great admirer of Richard Gere. Could you please tell me how he got started acting and where I could write him? Please sign my letter with initials since my husband may not understand. —N.L.J., Fort Madison, Iowa

A: It's OK to admire from afar—keep your distance, and maybe he will understand. Gere was born Aug. 29, 1949, in Philadelphia, Penn., the son of an insurance broker. He grew up in Syracuse, N.Y., where he got his first acting experience in high school. He attended the University of Massachusetts for two years before he opted to pursue his acting career full time at the Provincetown Playhouse. He finally came to national attention in the film Looking For Mr. Goodbar. You may try writing to him c/o Screen Actors Guild, 7065 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif., 90028.

Q: I'm a big fan of Lecy Goranson, she plays Becky on Roseanne. I was wondering if you could give me more information about her, and how I could write to her? —Steve Going, McAlester, Okla.

A: Lecy (a family nickname for "Alicia") was born in Evanston, Ill., on June 22, 1973. Her role on Roseanne is her first professional acting job. She grew up in a suburban household in Evanston, where her father is a statistician for the EPA and her mother is a teacher in the local high school. When she was eight years old she expressed an interest in attending an acting workshop at the nearby Piven Theater. She has been taking classes there ever since. A teacher recommended that Lecy audition for the role of Becky, and suddenly she found herself on a plane to Hollywood. She has an older brother, Adam. She enjoys jazz dancing, riding her bike, soccer, tennis and badminton. Her favorite subjects in school are gym, lunch, reading and language arts, in that order. Write to her c/o Roseanne, The Carsey-Werner Co., CBS-MTM Studios, 4024 Radford Ave., Studio City, Calif. 91604.

Richard Gere

Q: I enjoy the show Empty Nest. They keep talking about a daughter named Emily that's in college. Will they ever have her on the show? And if they do, who will play the part? —Carol Elliott, High Point, N.C.

A: I have learned to never say "never" about anything on television, as all things are possible. Emily was not ever cast, except as a voice on the phone. If the powers-that-be believe a visit from her would improve ratings, she may suddenly come home. Who she will be is anyone's guess. Sorry, I can't be of more help.

Please send your questions about television past and present to: Polly Vonetes, TV Pipeline, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, Texas 76102-0748. Because of the volume of mail, only questions of general interest will be answered.

Forest superintendent knows value of woods

As a child growing up on his father's Boyle County farm, John Overstreet knew the value of the woods.

"Probably 75 percent of our farm was forestland," he remembers, "and we needed the forest, like we needed all the rest of our land, to survive. We had four wood-burning stoves, for example, but we also took walks in the woods and enjoyed the wildflowers."

It's no surprise that Overstreet, now 34, lives in a forest, supports his family with it, imparts its wonders to his two-year-old son.

Overstreet is superintendent of the University of Kentucky's E.O. Robinson Forest, a sprawling 14,000 acre tract of regenerated mountain woodland in Breathitt, Knott and Perry counties.

It was deeded to UK more than 60 years ago by lumber baron Edward O. Robinson, who cut most of its trees and donated it specifically for reforestation and agricultural experimentation.

The forest is important to UK because it allows the university to conduct research in such areas as water quality and flood control, and to give forestry students hands-on experience.

"If you didn't know better, you'd think this was pristine, untouched," Overstreet says. "It has grown back so well that sometimes I can't believe it."

He calls it "an ocean of forest, just incredible. These Appalachian forests have an amazing ability to regenerate themselves. But if you could roll back time to the logging days, you'd think there had been a nuclear explosion here."

Overstreet knows the forest better than most. After working for the US Forest Service in Tennessee and Colorado in the late 1970s, he was hired by UK in 1980 to inventory the forest, a two-year effort that took him to every corner of the woods.

"In a systematic manner, with 4000 sample points throughout the forest, I had the check the volume and quality of the trees, and then analyze the data. It was an almost overwhelming thing to do, but I loved it, and I came out with a deep feeling for the forest."

Not long afterward, Overstreet was appointed assistant superintendent of the forest, and in 1987, was named superintendent. He and his wife Gloria, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., and their son Zachary make the forest their home.

Overstreet and Gloria met while at UK. He was studying forestry and she was studying wildlife biology. Zachary is studying both.

"Sometimes as recreation, we'll feed animals in our yard, deer and foxes, and Zachary can already mimic several species of birds. He's growing up differently from most kids, but he loves it here."

No on, Overstreet is convinced, "can come out here without tasting the peacefulness, and I really love the peaceful character of the forest."

When he's troubled or worried, Overstreet says he likes "to climb up to the fire tower and look out over that expansive Cumberland Plateau, onto the Cumberland Mountains, just marvel in it, and I feel the peace again."

Recording nature

Part of Robinson Forest Superintendent John Overstreet's job is to keep track of tree growth. This tree is one of thousands that have grown back since the forest was logged in the early 1900s.

MSU confers summer degrees

Morehead State University's alumni rolls increased with the conferring of more than 350 undergraduate and graduate degrees by President C. Nelson Grote during summer commencement ceremonies on Saturday, Aug. 4.

An overflow crowd of more than 1400 heard the student speaker Stephanie Jean Davis of Morehead tell her classmates that previous graduates had already proved that MSU alumni can "compete and win with the best of the best."

Davis, who received the AB degree summa cum laude, said that those who say the university experience is not real life were in error. "It has certainly shown us we need to learn to budget our time, assume responsibility and deal with diverse personalities," she said.

In spite of what all the new graduates had learned, Davis told them, they had made "only a small dent in the amount of knowledge that mankind had amassed."

A journalism major with minors in radio/television and art, Davis is the daughter of Don and Pauline Young of Morehead and Bill Davis of Olive Hill.

Accomplishments of previous graduates was also the theme of Dr. Grote's remarks as he addressed the graduates, families and friends in Button Auditorium and those watching the ceremony on closed circuit in the adjacent Drill Room.

Noting that MSU has 30,958 living alumni, Dr. Grote told the graduates that there had been many before them, "most of whom had been very successful in their careers."

Taking a statistical look at the active alumni, Dr. Grote said there were 2211 MSU graduates who are teachers, principals and superintendents, making an impact on the lives of thousands and thousands of young people.

Another 1695 graduates are working in the field of business as chief executive officers, presidents and managers of major corporations. Working in various medical professions are 1092 MSU alumni, while 162 have chosen legal professions.

While MSU does not offer an engineering degree program, the university's alumni rolls include 244 people who began their studies at Morehead State and went on to engineering programs elsewhere.

"Our graduates have done well. They have contributed to society in important and significant roles," he said, adding that "each of you graduating today also will be successful and we will add you to these lists in years to come."

Following the conferring of degrees, Ted Coakley of Harrison, Ohio, president of the MSU Alumni Association, inducted the new graduates into the Association.

MSU President and Mrs. Grote greeted the new graduates and their families after commencement at an Alumni Association-sponsored reception on the lawn of the president's home.

10 telecourses offered by KET for fall credit

This fall, KET is offering 10 telecourses for college credit in a variety of subject areas through a number of institutions. The courses, including one graduate-level telecourse in economics for teachers, span the curriculum from poetry to political science.

The graduate course, Economics USA, is being offered through several Kentucky colleges for graduate credit for elementary and secondary teachers. New to the KET telecourse lineup, Economics USA is a blend of historic footage, documentary sequences, interviews, and news-style analysis.

A second new course offered for the fall 1990 semester is The Western Tradition. A two-semester telecourse, the second half will be offered in the spring 1991 semester. Based on the classroom lectures of an internationally renowned author, historian, and professor, The Western Tradition begins with influential pre-Western civilizations and continues to the early Renaissance. In the second semester, it follows history through industrial modernization to the present.

The Business File, an introduction for those who wish to expand their understanding of the contemporary business environment; The Earth Explored, a telecourse providing students with an international field trip in physical geology; Focus on Society, which offers clues to understanding the sociological events of our time; Here's to Your Health, which examines today's health issues and presents contemporary approaches to maintaining good health; and Understanding Human Behavior, an introduction to psychology.

KET offers a free informational booklet about college credit telecourses that lists participating institutions, broadcast schedules, and registration information. To obtain a copy, contact KET Higher Education Manager Mary Olson at (800) 432-0970.

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MINE

Pursuant to Application No. 836-5158, Amendment No. 2

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that Bebe Coal Corporation, P.O. Box 3428, Pikeville, Ky. 41501, has filed an application for an amendment to an existing underground coal mining and reclamation operation. This amendment will underlie an additional 318.63 acres, located 2.3 miles east of McDowell, in Floyd County, for a total permit area of 914.15 acres.

The proposed amendment area is approximately 1.7 miles west of KY 1929's intersection with KY 979 and located on Hamilton Branch of Mud Creek and Hall Fork of Frasure Creek. The latitude is 37° 28' 06". The longitude is 82° 41' 26".

The proposed amendment area is located on the McDowell U.S.G.S. 7 1/2 minute quadrangle map. The proposed amendment will underlie land owned by Otis Hall, Jr., Estalene Jones Rafter, Foster Howell, Bobby Hall, Ted Evans, Kenis Evans, Sylvia Eversole, Butler Howell, Free Tackett, Bill Evans, Donna Tackett, Martha Newsome and Cleveland Tackett. The operation will affect an area within 100 feet of public road KY 1929. The operation will not involve relocation of the public road.

The application has been filed for public inspection at the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Prestonsburg Regional Office, 503 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653. Written comments, objections, or requests for a permit conference must be filed with the Director of the Division of Permits, #2 Hudson Hollow, U.S. 127 South, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

This is the final advertisement of the application. All comments, objections or requests for a permit conference must be received within 30 days of today's date.
