$200,000 project :

Congress approves flood study

Congress has approved $200,000 for a flood control study for Right and Left Beaver to be performed by the Army Corps of Engineers as part of a $13 million funding package for flood protection in Eastern Kentucky.

The study is expected to take at least two years to complete and is aimed at finding ways to reduce and control flooding in those areas, said Dave Whalen, press secretary for Congressman Chris Perkins. The process will entail engineer and design studies to gather hydrological data to see what can be done to prevent severe flooding, such as the 1977 flood.

The Corps of Engineers performed a similar study approximately 20 years ago that recommended cleaning out the creeks and riverbanks, but county officials did not proceed with the project, Whalen said.

The Corps will start from "scratch" on the new study due to geographical changes and make recommendations on how flooding can be controlled.

The funding package passed in the House of Representatives on Monday and needs only the president's signature to become law.

Other appropriations approved for Eastern Kentucky projects were:

- $250,000 to complete the Yatesville Dam project;
- $11.299 million to begin work on the South Williamson flood project;
- $400,000 for final engineering and design of the Salsberyville cut-through;
- $200,000 for further engineering for the Hazard flood protection project;
- $171,000 for a solution to the buy-out of residents at Fishtrap Lake in Pike County;
- $220,000 for a reconnaissance study in Jackson; and
- $100,000 for a flood reconnaissance study in West Liberty.

Perkins said the funding package is directly targeted to deal with those areas that have experienced severe flooding problems in the past.

"I believe this funding package is vital to our efforts to improve the infrastructure of our region and thus to ensure a more attractive place for business and economic opportunity in Eastern Kentucky," Perkins said.

In a related development, the conference also increased funding to $170 million for the Appalachian Regional Commission.

Lottery losers are winners in Times contest

You can't win if you don't play, and if you don't win you might win anyway.

Four Floyd Countians found that out this week in the Times' "Second Chance" lottery contest, a program which allows non-winners in Kentucky Cash and Pick 3 games a second chance at winning.

This week's winners included Tina W. Miller, of Auxier, Vivian Keathley, of Beaver, Joyce Conley, of West Prestonsburg, and Wallace E. Tackett II, of Price. All four won $50 when their losing lottery entries were drawn in the Times' contest.

Two more drawings will be held on October 31 and November 7. Send your losing Kentucky Cash or Pick 3 tickets to the Floyd County Times, P.O. Box 391, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653 or drop them by the Time's office at 27 South Central Avenue in Prestonsburg. Entries are good for one week's drawing only, and you may enter as many times as you like.

A sign in the front yard of Ronnie and Patsy Williamson's home at Highland Heights in Gobie-Roberts Addition, warns trick-or-treaters that danger lurks ahead. Tombstones, in humorous rhyme, tell stories of "Big John" and "Little Amy." Williamson is maintenance supervisor at Highland Heights. "Safe Trick or Treat Night" will be held Sunday, October 28, at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn, from 5-8 p.m. Trick or Treat Night in both Floyd County and Prestonsburg will be Tuesday, October 30, from 6-8 p.m. (Photo by Janice Shepherd)

Burglary charges to be filed :

Police pursuit ends in Knott Sheriff's driveway

A man suspected of burglarizing a Martin housing project led city, county and state police on a chase Tuesday evening which ended with his capture in Knott County in the driveway of Knott Sheriff Jimmy Amburgey.

According to Floyd County Deputy Sheriff Rick Thornsby, Tommy Draughn, 41, of Garner was arrested by state police at Leburn and charged with driving under the influence, reckless driving, no operators license, attempting to elude and wanton endangerment in the first degree. He was booked in the Knott County Jail at 10:25 p.m. and placed under a $754 cash bond plus a $10,000 property bond, jail officials said.

Draughn will be arraigned on Tuesday and then be brought back to Floyd County where he is expected to be charged with breaking and entering, reckless driving and wanton endangerment, Deputy Linzie Hunt said.

The chase began in Martin at Grigsby Heights Apartments when Martin City Policeman Jeff Powell received a complaint that a man had entered one of the apartments. Powell said he noticed the back door had been kicked in and he went to check the apartment.

Although Powell found no one in the apartment at that time, neighbors reported seeing a man carrying boxes over the hill behind the complex to an older model yellow truck, Powell said. When the suspect saw the officer he fled in the truck.

Powell pursued the vehicle on Route 80 at Martin and radioed for assistance.

Floyd County Deputy Rick Thornsby, who was in the Martin area, heard Powell's call for aide and joined in the chase. Thornsby asked the sheriff's department to contact the Hazard Kentucky State Police Post to see if any officers could provide assistance.

KSP Trooper Larry Woods set up a roadblock on Route 80 but the suspect got around it, Powell said. The three officers kept up the pursuit until he was captured in the sheriff's driveway. Draughn reportedly was traveling between 60-65 miles per hour on the narrow, winding road at Leburn.

Draughn had been arrested Sunday by Floyd Sheriff's deputies after a woman, whose apartment Draughn allegedly entered, obtained a warrant against him for assault and criminal trespass.

Deputies arrested him at 5 p.m. Sunday at Mi-Dee Mart in Lackey and charged him with criminal trespass, assault, expired registration and no insurance. The warrant had a bond restriction that Draughn have no contact with the woman who filed the complaint.

The incident remains under investigation by Powell, the Floyd County Sheriff's department and the Kentucky State Police.

Highway expansion would be economic boost :

Interstate 66 could run through Pikeville

Pike County could become a major transportation crossroad if a feasibility study authorized this week by Congress comes back positive.

Legislation has been approved by the House of Representatives to appropriate $1.27 million to fund the first part of a feasibility study to extend Interstate 66 across the country, bringing the major highway within 25 miles of Pikeville, according to a press release from Congressman Chris Perkins.

The study assumes that Interstate 66, extending from Front Royal, Virginia, to San Luis Obispo, California, would cross Kentucky east to west, will also come with 25 miles of Jenkins, Hazard, London, Somerset, Columbia, and Bowling Green.

The study was part of a House-Senate compromise transportation

Former sheriff, representative dies :

Heart attack claims Hale

Former Floyd County Sheriff Henry C. Hale died Thursday morning at Atkinson Farm in Harrison County.

Hale was preparing to load two bulls into a truck when he slumped over and then died instantly of a heart attack, according to Harrison County Deputy Coroner Patty Drake. Charles Bailey, formerly of Floyd County, was with Hale when he was stricken and notified the sheriff's office.

Harrison Sheriff Bruce Hampton dispatched an ambulance to the scene and arrived shortly thereafter.

"I was at the scene to rule out any type of foul play," Hampton said. "It appeared he died of natural causes. I then notified the coroner's office."

Drake pronounced Hale dead at 10:30 a.m. at the scene. She said Hale had on his person nitroglycerin tablets and heart medication. No autopsy was ordered and the body was released to Hall Funeral Home at Martin.

Atkinson Farms is located on Old Lair Road approximately three miles from Cynthiana.

Hale was the first Floyd County Sheriff to be elected to serve consecutive terms as authorized by a constitutional change passed in the mid-80s, which allowed sheriffs to succeed themselves in office.

Hale was first elected sheriff in 1981 and held that office until December 1989. He was a past president of the Kentucky Sheriff's Association.

Hale was elected to the House of Representatives in 1948 and served until 1942, representing Floyd County. He was the Sergeant of Arms for the Legislature in 1956.

Hale was a life-long resident of Blue River and had been an independent trucker and in the construction business since 1946. He was a member of the Floyd County Farm Bureau Association.

He served in the United States Navy from 1943-45 during World War II. He was a life member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and a member of the American Legion and the American Veterans.

He was born December 2, 1919, the son of the late James and Susie Stephens Hale.

Hale is survived by his wife, Winifred Osborne; five sons, Lt. Col.

James H. Hale, Tommy Hale, George Hale; John Hale; and Ben Hale; one daughter, Kay Hale; two brothers, Samuel Hale and Edgar Hale; and six grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Carla Hale, and a brother, Thomas Hale.

Friends may call after 6 p.m. today at Hall Funeral Home, said Joe Back, funeral director. Other arrangements were incomplete Thursday.

Non-payers could see taxes raised

The Floyd County Solid Waste Commission has directed Robert D. McAninch, commissioner, to "use every means at his disposal to collect delinquent solid waste bills."

Under the authority of a new state law, McAninch may add delinquent garbage bills to customers' property tax bills. As a result, delinquent customers will receive letters in the mail giving them an opportunity to settle their accounts.

According to McAninch, the collection of past due accounts has become a serious problem.

"We have filed over 250 lawsuits to collect delinquent bills and are preparing to file more," he said. "Participation in the solid waste system is not voluntary. It is mandatory and required by law. And that makes it imperative that we collect on these accounts."

The solid waste board, McAninch said, "has adopted a reasonable and fair charge schedule and does not present an unreasonable cost to anyone."

"It is essential," McAninch concluded, "that everyone pay their fair share and some people are just not doing that. We hope everyone will cooperate."

Fiscal court tables action on local ordinance :

Waste law depends on special session action

by Janice Shepherd
Staff Writer

An ordinance which will require all private companies operating a waste site in Floyd County to obtain a permit has been put on hold until the General Assembly's special session on solid waste convenes in January. County Attorney Jim Hammond told members of the Floyd County Fiscal Court Friday that it would be futile for the court to go forward with the ordinance until the state sets its regulations. "We're just spinning our wheels," Hammond said.

The proposed ordinance establishes an annual $25,000 permit fee for privately owned waste disposal companies. Companies dealing with hazardous waste will pay an additional $1,000 per ounce, while companies dealing with solid waste will pay an additional $250 per ton. Revenue generated from these permits, Hammond explained, is earmarked for a special fund to clean up any environmental damage caused by a company.

"We don't want to see Floyd County a dumping ground," Dallas Sammons, a representative of Floyd Countians in Action, told members of the court. Sammons said his group went to Frankfort to stop the burning of medical waste by Medisin, a subsidiary of Consolidated Health Systems, a non-profit holding company that also operates Highlands Regional Medical Center, and Frankfort official "just laughed about it." "They're big boys with briefcases," Sammons said. Sammons compared his group's lobbying efforts with those of major industries as "peanuts to dollars."

Hammond said the proposed ordinance is not directed at Medisin, but the company will come under the proposed guidelines. "We're not regulating under this ordinance; we're just requiring them to have a permit," Hammond said, adding that the county cannot supersede the state. "Regulating is up to the federal government," Hammond said.

"Under this permit, we're hoping to make Floyd County less attractive to businesses that want to operate a waste site here," Hammond said, explaining that private waste treatment companies will probably go to another county or state in order to avoid the cost of the permit.

Confusion and misconceptions seem to stem from the proposed ordinance, according to Hammond. Officials at United Fuel (Columbia Gas Company) earlier expressed concern to Floyd County Judge Executive John M. Stumbo. "United Fuel takes waste from its gas wells, stores it in the county until the tanker is full, and then takes it into West Virginia for disposal," Stumbo said.

Hammond said he has repeatedly told Floyd County companies that the ordinance will not affect them unless they fall within the guidelines of the ordinance by operating a waste site in the county. "No generators will be affected. This only affects incineration or landfill disposal operations," Hammond said.

The state of Florida is keeping its eye on the Floyd County waste ordinance, according to Hammond, who said officials in Stark, Florida, plan to implement a similar plan to control incinerator facilities.

Hammond commended the court for being the first Kentucky county to have a solid waste program, which state officials have also praised. According to Hammond, Frankfort officials say Floyd County is a model program that other counties are following.

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Several road projects and the Hunter Bridge replacement promised for Floyd County earlier this year by Transportation Secretary Milo Bryant have been completed and other projects are on the drawing board.

The new Hunter Bridge on Route 122 at Left Beaver, a project completed by the county, was opened in September at a cost of $79,950, according to the County Judge Executive's office. The contract for the bridge replacement was signed on July 6 and work was performed by Coalfields Reclamation Inc. of Betsy Layne.

The bridge is 21 feet wide and 70 feet long. It was funded through the state Rural and Secondary Roads Program.

The old bridge had been a concern for residents whose children could not ride the school bus across the bridge. The students had to walk across the across the bridge because a five-ton weight limit prevented them from riding the bus to the other side.

Earl Ousley, transportation director for the Floyd County Board of Education, requested state assistance earlier this year due to the dilapidated condition of the bridge. Residents were also concerned for their children's safety because they had to wade through standing water at one end of the bridge.

Two road resurfacing projects were also completed on Left Beaver by the state this summer at a cost of over half a million dollars, said state Transportation District Manager Denton Bilitier.

A four-mile section between Route 979 and Ky 306 was completed on July 27 at a cost of $161,312.87. A 10-mile section on Ky 1101 was finished in June with a $513,570.62 price tag.

Construction on the McDowell-Garrett road is scheduled to begin in March, said State Representative Greg Stumbo in a press release. Right of way acquisition is currently taking place.

The state also plans to prepare roads at Branham's Creek and Little Mud Creek for winter by doing patch work on those sections, Stumbo said.

Work is also underway to extend waterlines into the Weeksbury and Abner Fork sections of Left Beaver with money in the budget to renovate the Beaver Elkhorn Water Plant to upgrade its capabilities, Stumbo said.

According to Stumbo, projects also on tap for the area include:

- a meeting with Governor Wallace Wilkinson or Cabinet Secretary Roger Wells in regards to building an 18-hole golf course at Mayo Hollow near Prestonsburg; and
- construction of a permanent weigh station on Route 23; and
- legislation in the 1992 session to roll back the weight distance taxes on trucks and possible other credits to ease the financial burden on truckers due to rising fuel costs.

Fears relieved

Hunter residents can breath a sigh of relief with the opening of a new bridge which replaced the old one that residents and officials deemed unsafe. The new bridge was opened last month and built by the county with funds provided by the state Secondary and Rural Roads Program. The bridge is one of several projects completed this summer in the Left Beaver area. (photo by Susan Allen) years. Some estimates indicate that, if approved, the highway would take 20 years to finish and would cost the federal government $15 billion to $20 billion.

Congressman Perkins, a member of Public Works Committee, concurred, saying, "The people of the mountains have needed an economic shot-in-the-arm like I-66 for generations. But as wonderful as a new interstate would be, any of its benefits are years and perhaps decades away."

A fact from the U. S. Department of Labor: Most women who were employed as executives, administrators and managers in March 1988 were married with spouse present (60.1 percent), according to the U.S. Labor Department Women's Bureau. Another 18.4 percent had never married while 14.5 percent were divorced. Male executives, administrators and managers were more likely to be married with spouse present (75.3 percent), with an additional 14.5 percent having never married and 6.8 percent were divorced.

Play it safe and keep the fun in Halloween

On Halloween, Bart Simpson-look-alikes and versions of giant green turtles will no doubt wander Kentucky neighborhoods alongside the more traditional clowns and hoboes.

To keep the fun in the festivities, however, trick-or-treaters need to consider more than the zany character they will be on Halloween night, said Terry Wescott, Department for Health Services product safety branch manager.

"The very nature of trick-or-treating leaves wide potential for accidents," he said. "Walking around outside at night in masks and long costumes and taking treats from strangers is not the safest way to spend an evening."

"However, if parents and children alike remember a few safety precautions, the festivities need not be ruined by a mishap."

One of the most important rules to remember, Wescott said, is never let young children trick-or-treat alone.

"Parents should go with young children to help them cross the street and generally stay out of dangerous situations," he said. "It's also a good idea for parents to pay attention to the treats given at each home in case there's a question later on about the safety of a particular item."

"Older children who don't want to be accompanied by adults are safer in small groups," he added.

Before leaving home, children should be reminded of "everyday" safety rules, Wescott advised. "Remind them of such things as don't run between parked cars, don't talk to strangers or accept rides from them and stay out of high-traffic areas," he said.

Wescott offers the following additional hints to adults and children.

Trick-or-treaters should stay in their own neighborhoods where they are familiar with the people and the terrain. Children should visit only houses with the lights on.

Parents should tell children not to eat any treats before an adult has inspected each piece.

Factory-wrapped candy should be inspected for signs of tampering—look for puncture holes or signs that candy has been unwrapped and repackaged. Homemade treats from strangers should be discarded. Any suspect item should be reported to police.

Costumes should be light colored to be easily seen at night. Both costumes and sacks should be decorated with reflective "glow-in-the-dark" tape. If masks are worn, eye holes should be large enough to allow good vision. Make-up is a safer disguise.

Avoid long, billowing costumes—they're easy to trip over. Shoes should be comfortable and easy to walk in. Wigs, masks and costumes should be made of flame-retardant materials in case they come into contact with jack-o-lantern candles or other fire sources.

Stay on sidewalks since lawns may have furniture, clothesline or holes that can't be seen in the dark.

Homeowners can do their part to make Halloween safer for everyone. Remove obstacles in the yard and porch that kids might trip over or run into. Keep pets inside or in the back yard.

Wescott says that the safest way of all to celebrate Halloween is a home party.

"Neighbors can get together and have a block Halloween party, or parents could have a party for a school class," he said. "Parties can be just as fun as trick-or-treating, plus they're a lot safer."

For more information about Halloween safety, contact Wescott at (502) 564-4537. His address is Product Safety Branch, Department for Health Services, 275 E. Main St., Frankfort, Ky. 40621.

Deer hunter shot at Dewey

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

The owner of Buffalo Run store was shot while deer hunting last Wednesday evening by a squirrel hunter at the Dewey Lake Wildlife Management Reserve who had mistaken his moving hand for a squirrel.

Johnny Endicott of Buffalo Run was shot with a 12 gauge shotgun and received seven buckshot hits to his left hand, three to the left forearm, one to the right wrist, six in the left hip and one in the right side. He was shot by Hervy Endicott, his uncle.

"I was hunting with a traditional long bow and I was standing beside a tree in full camouflage," Johnny Endicott said. "I moved my hand and he thought I was a squirrel and I got hit."

Endicott said his uncle panicked after the accident and was apparently going for help when Endicott told his uncle to notify his grandmother or mother. Johnny Endicott said he crawled out of the woods and was picked up by his mother, who took him home. He later drove himself to Highlands Regional Medical Center.

"My mother was so upset I wouldn't let her drive me to the hospital," Endicott said. "So I drove myself."

Endicott was admitted to HRMC and later transferred to Cabell Huntington Hospital in Huntington, West Virginia to receive treatment for the injuries to his left hand.

Endicott said he had seen three or four deer earlier in the day but he had not made a kill before the accident.

"It was just a matter of time before I got one," Endicott said.

The accident was investigated by the Floyd County Sheriff's Department and the Kentucky State Police.

Waste

"If Frankfort says Floyd County has got the best system in the state, it's a case of the blind leading the blind. If they're following us, they'll fall into a big dark hole," Jackie Owens, district two magistrate said.

Hammond recommended tabling the first reading of the ordinance until January when the county can "act fast" and implement its guidelines.

In other business, the court approved the purchase of three dump trucks for magisterial districts one, three, and four. The trucks were purchased from Ferrill Motor Company, Inc. at the state contract price, approximately $25,300 each.

When Owens asked Judge-executive Stumbo which three districts would be receiving the dump trucks, Stumbo replied, "That was decided when you accepted a private truck," referring to the court's decision to purchase maintenance vehicles for use by county magistrates. Owens was the only county magistrate to accept the offer. Owen's truck was purchased in July for $16,983.

"The old stepchild is district two," Owens said, "but I want to see the new trucks purchased, so I'll vote for it."

Owens, however, voted against the court's awarding of a contract to R & S Body Company to supply truck beds for the vehicles, protesting that May Metal had done the last job for the court. Bidding were May Metal, $5,045, Warco Manufacturing Company, $5,250, and R & S Body Company, with its low bid of $4,700.

Also approved at the meeting was a $50,000 loan to the Floyd County Sheriff's Department. Stumbo explained that the department operates mainly from tax receipts, but due to the implementation of the tax reassessment program, the department is short of funds. According to Lovel Hall, Property Valuation Administrator, tax bills will be delayed until at least December. A stipulation that the money be repaid within 30 days after the tax bills are received was added to the decision.

Fiscal court members received a nod of approval from Dorothy Osborne, who complimented them on county cleanup efforts. However, Osborne expressed concern at the number of political handbills still attached to trees and post. Osborne said she had previously asked for the court's help in removal of the signs. "Has nothing been done in the three months since I've asked?" she said. Hammond answered, explaining that it is illegal to put signs on state right of way.

According to Hammond, the court could pass a revenue bill asking candidates to pay a deposit, but the bill would require an ordinance and three readings.

"The time frame would be difficult for the November election," Hammond said. The court agreed to wait until after the election before taking any action.

Walter Clyde Dingus of Hi Hat also presented a complaint before the court, asking why one small spot of roadway near his father's home has not received blacktop. Dingus said the county is putting blacktop on a section of road that is not traveled, while a section that is traveled is a "rutty mud hole." Stumbo assured Dingus he will visit the site of the road work.

In other action, employees of the Floyd County Jail were awarded a 4.6 percent cost of living increase, which became effective October 20; the court approved the incorporation of three former state roads into the county system, despite the objection of Magistrate Owens in whose districts all three roads are located; the court accepted the monthly treasurer's report and electrical inspector's report; and magistrates approved the payment of claims and bills.

The next meeting of the fiscal court is scheduled November 19.

Pedestrian injured

A Prestonsburg woman was injured Monday morning near Prestonsburg Elementary after apparently being struck by a car, according to Mike Wells with the Prestonsburg Fire Department. Jeanette Prater, 29, was taken to Highlands Regional Hospital with a possible fractured left leg. She was later transferred to Pikeville Methodist Hospital where she was admitted in fair condition. Wells said Prater said she had been struck by a car. The accident happened on the corner of Central Avenue and Mary Jane Lane. The police report on the accident was not available at presstime. A large crowd attended the recent Highland Beef Improvement Association Meeting at the farm of Mr. & Mrs. Miles Whitaker of the Middle Creek - Blue River Community.

Beef meeting held

Beef cattle production and the pasture crops to feed cattle with were the main topics of discussion at the October meeting of the Highlands Beef Cattle Improvement Association.

The meeting was held at the farm of Mr. & Mrs. Miles Whitaker, located just off the Mountain Parkway on the David Road.

Mr. Whittaker reviewed the breeding background of his farm herd and discussed his summer pasture of sudan grass which was used during the droughty portion of the summer months.

Dr. Harold Rice, UK Extension Specialist in Agronomy from the Quicksand Experiment Station discussed the establishment of pastures in the Big Sandy Region.

The Highlands Beef Cattle Improvement Association, headed by Jack Holbrook of Flat Gap in Johnson County, is planning a one day trip to the International Livestock Exposition in Louisville in November according to Gene Ball, Floyd County Extension Agent.

An attempt is being made to get two or three van loads of beef producers from Magoffin, Martin, Johnson and Floyd Counties. Any beef producer from Floyd County interested in making this trip should contact the Floyd County Extension Office at 886-2668 within the next two weeks.

In bus mishap:

Civil Suit Alleges Negligence

by Janice Shepherd Staff Writer

Legal action has been filed in Floyd Circuit Court against a former Floyd County bus driver and the Floyd County Board of Education, alleging the bus driver's negligence caused an automobile accident on October 10, 1988 near Martin.

Litigation was filed October 9, 1990 on behalf of Lamar Hall of Topmost. The lawsuit alleges Hall "received serious bodily injuries" as a result of the accident.

The civil suit alleges that Gloriana Layne was operating a school bus on a road leading from Dinwood, near Martin, which intersects with Route 1428. "Gloriana Layne turned the bus she was driving left onto Kentucky Highway 1428, striking the vehicle owned and operated by the plaintiff," Lamar Hall, the suit alleges. According to the litigation, Hall alleges that he had right of way when the collision occurred.

Danny Caudill, attorney for Hall, said he would not comment on the legal action.

A complaint in a civil suit lists only the plaintiff's cause of action.

New AFDC eligibility rules

One of the major changes in Kentucky's welfare reform plan is in the eligibility of as many as 9,500 two-parent families for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) benefits.

Previously, in order to receive AFDC, children had to be deprived of parental support through death, illness or absence of one or both parents. Under federally-mandated welfare reform, the AFDC-Unemployed Parents (AFDC-UP) program permits couples who meet the state's definition of unemployed to receive aid. The ruling defines "Unemployed" as an individual who works less than 100 hours in a calendar month or who performs work of an intermittent and temporary nature that exceeds 100 hours per month.

Commissioner Mike Robinson, whose Department for Social Insurance administers Kentucky's AFDC program, said, "The traditional AFDC recipient has been a single mother who is either a widow, a divorced parent who doesn't receive child support or has had a child born out of wedlock.

"However, the old rules didn't allow for situations when both parents were in the home of children who need the financial assistance of AFDC. The change means that families should no longer have to split up in order to feed their children," Robinson said. "The goal of welfare reform is to help families become self-reliant," he added. "By keeping them together, the chance of becoming self-sufficient increases. Besides, children need the influence of both parents and with a little financial aid, staying together is possible."

"Another advantage to AFDC-UP," said Robinson, "is that these parents will be eligible to participate in the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) program set up to help Kentuckians become self-sufficient and less dependent on the welfare system."

JOBS is an intensive, targeted program to help Kentuckians qualify for, and find, permanent employment. However, JOBS is available initially only in eighteen counties. Although Floyd County is not among these, more counties will be added as the program grows.

Persons interested in more information about the AFDC-UP program should contact the Department for Social Insurance office in their home county.

Bradley found innocent of arson

A Floyd County Jury acquitted a Martin man on arson charges Tuesday in Floyd County Circuit Court.

Eddie Bradley, 27, was found not guilty of setting fire to the home of George Hale of Martin on July 26, 1989. Bradley was indicted by a Floyd County Grand Jury in September 1989. The verdict was returned after short deliberations by the jury.

In another case, Greg May, age and address unknown, entered a guilty plea in circuit court Monday for theft by failure to make required disposition of property. May was indicted in January 1989 for selling advertisement for WMDJ radio station and keeping the money for his personal use. May was given a one year sentence.

"FLASH!... THE PERSIAN GULF CRISIS, THE BUDGET CRISIS, THE S&L CRISIS, AND THE ENVIRONMENTAL CRISIS HAVE JUST RESULTED IN A CRISIS CRISIS!"

Report to Kentucky

By: Senator Wendell Ford

KENTUCKY CAN TAKE THE LEAD IN NEW DOMESTIC- ENERGY DRIVE

Following the OPEC oil embargo of 1973, Kentucky took a leading role in a national effort to reduce our dangerous dependence on foreign oil.

Kentuckians had the good sense to keep working toward that crucial goal even while some of our national leaders were making the mistake of losing interest in our drive for more efficient domestic-energy production.

As a result of that historic mistake made in Washington in the 1980s, we now face the worst energy-related crisis in our nation's history.

I want to emphasize now, as I have before, that our first response to this crisis should be to support President Bush in protecting American lives and American interests in the Persian Gulf. But our longer-term response must be to renew and redouble our efforts to meet the energy needs of this nation.

I believe that Kentucky is prepared once again to help our nation rise to this great challenge. And I am determined to do everything in my power to see that we are allowed to finish the job this time. Otherwise, we are sure to face even more dangerous energy-related crises in the future.

As governor in the early 1970s, I was pleased to play a role in such initiatives as the creation of our very valuable Center for Applied Energy Research, now part of the University of Kentucky.

The pen used by former President Jimmy Carter to sign federal legislation that would have led to four synthetic-fuel plants in Kentucky still hangs on the wall of my Senate office. We were able to build one H-Coal pilot plant to make oil from coal, but that promising vision was among those virtually abandoned by other national leaders during the 1980s.

In spite of such frustrations, we have continued the search for cleaner and more efficient domestic-energy sources. Much needed clean-coal technologies now are being developed at the Tennessee Valley Authority's Shawnee plant at Paducah. And we are seeing other signs of progress, including plans to reopen a Simpson County plant using corn from this region's farmers to make ethanol fuel for motor vehicles.

We need these and other technologies to stem a rising tide of foreign oil that is now costing this nation $50 billion a year and posing a rising threat to our entire economy. We must counter this threat by making full use of every available source of energy, including natural gas and nuclear power along with solar, geothermal and wind power.

As chairman of our Senate Subcommittee on Energy Research and Development, I intend to work with leaders of the Bush Administration and others to correct the mistakes of the past and develop a forward-looking energy policy for this nation.

We have chained ourselves to the oil lords of the Middle East and to a constant possibility of war in the Persian Gulf. A new crisis proves once again that these chains must be broken. Kentuckians have had their sleeves rolled up for nearly a decade now. It is time for the nation to follow our lead and go to work.

How much should our oil really cost?

President George Bush and Senator Bob Dole have already clearly established that U.S. troops have been mobilized to Saudi Arabia because Iraq's invasion of Kuwait might mean the loss of U.S. access to a major oil resource. Perhaps it is time to consider whether we might have reacted rashly, without regard for the consequences of our actions.

A common argument in support of military occupation of Saudi Arabia is that oil is essential to our American way of life. Granted, our society is dependent upon the automobile as a principal mode of transportation. Excluding necessary commercial transportation, what does this mean in human terms? Would an oil shortage prohibit us from traveling during the holidays? Maybe. Would an oil shortage prohibit us from getting to work? Possibly, but the market for horses (or other alternative means of transportation) might increase.

Write or call your federal legislator today.

William H. Hagedorn
Wheeling, W. Va.

There is still one more way to measure the cost in human terms. Would you kill your son or daughter so you could have cheap oil to transport you to your office or to the movies? Yes, I said kill. It's all well and good for Mr. Bush to talk of a "show of force," but the fact is that our actions have already cost us several lives. If the situation escalates, thousands more of our sons and daughters could lose their lives.

Think about this. We are not even talking about intangible issues like the threat to democracy in Korea or in Vietnam. We are not sending our sons and our daughters into war to die for liberty, justice or freedom. We are sending our sons and daughters into possible war to die for oil.

What measurement would we use to determine the worth of their sacrifice? One life for a barrel of oil? For a gallon? For a quart? Have we as a nation taken leave of what is left of our sense of morality?

As the rhetoric continues to intensify, we are drawn still closer to war. Already Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and our own President Bush have begun to cry out, "we can't back down." This attitude cheapens the sacrifice we ask of our military; for they are not only expected to die for the convenience of oil, but also for the sake of pride—undoubtedly the most worthless of issues.

Editor:

I found your front page coverage, October 19, 1990, concerning a local doctor abhorrent. Front page coverage of an "alleged" breach of duty is unnecessary and only damages the doctor's reputation. This type of journalism is unjustified.

I dare say it will not be front page news if this case is dropped or no judgment is found against the doctor.

I know Dr. Verma is a fine person and a fine physician. You have done him a great disservice.

Mountain Development Receives Grant

The office of Community Services (OCS) of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has approved a $308,000 grant to the Mountain Association for Community Economic Development (MACED), based in Berea, Kentucky. The grant is earmarked for increasing the use of eastern Kentucky's hardwood timber in the manufacture of parts for furniture and cabinet makers within the state of Kentucky. At present much of the region's hardwood lumber is shipped to neighboring states, which then benefit from the value they add to this resource. The total project cost is $1,286,999, 26 percent of which will be funded by the OCS grant. Nongovernmental sources will fund the remaining 76 percent of the project cost in the amount of $978,999.

"With this grant, and another one the Ford Foundation recently gave us for a similar purpose, we should be able to help create more jobs in and strengthen the economy of eastern Kentucky," said Frank Taylor, president of MACED.

MACED is a nonprofit organization which combines research and policy analysis with technical assistance and financial investments to stimulate economic development in Kentucky. Since its founding in 1976, MACED has worked on projects in business development, housing finance, water system management, coal, education, forest products, local governance, and child care.

East Kentucky Beverage Company sold

John B. DuPuy II, Chairman, and John B. DuPuy III, President of East Kentucky Beverage Company, Inc. announced today the sale of the company to PepsiCo, Inc.

In 1931, J. B. DuPuy and J. R. Hatmaker purchased the Pikeville Nehi Bottling Company in a foreclosure sale. Through the nation was in the depths of the Great Depression, these two entrepreneurs had the foresight to purchase the Nehi franchises for several other counties soon thereafter.

In 1933, the company changed its name to the East Kentucky Beverage Company and surrendered the Nehi franchises. In its place, the company obtained the franchise rights to Orange Crush and Seven-Up. In 1935, the company obtained the rights for Pepsi-Cola in eastern Kentucky and two counties in West Virginia. In 1949, the company traded these West Virginia areas for Harlan County, Kentucky.

Although sugar rationing made business difficult during World War II, the company survived. At the end of the war, DuPuy's son, John B. DuPuy II (Jack), joined the business. Tragedy struck in 1949 when both founders died. The company made the decision to sell the Pepsi franchise for Harlan, Kentucky. It was during the 1950s that Pepsi-Cola began its journey as the dominant force in the future growth of the company. The company began to win awards for per capita consumption of Pepsi-Cola. This growth continued during the 1960s and 1970s and the company earned the highest awards for both per capita consumption and quality production. In 1963, the company outsold the competition for the first time, ever.

In 1973, Jack's son, John B. DuPuy III, joined the business and, in 198, was named Chief Operating Officer. The senior DuPuy became Chairman in 1988 while the younger DuPuy became President.

Presently, the Pikeville franchise continues to lead the world in per capita consumption of Pepsi-Cola and Caffeine Free Pepsi. It has received the Donald M. Kendall Award for per capita consumption of all Pepsi-Cola since the inception of the award. In fact, the franchise with the second highest per capita consumption is the company's territory in Hazard.

EDDIE BILLIPS
 SCHOOL BOARD MEMBER DISTRICT #1

For the last twenty years we have had the same leadership, the same promises, and the same results. We have heard over and over again that more of your tax dollars is the only cure for our problems. When that happens we see just where those tax dollars go...for the central office and administrators. HOW MUCH MORE? Now we hear a plan to use the Prestonsburg High School for the central office. This building holds approximately 1000 students, how many people is the board planning to hire for the central office. All this at a time when our children are attending school in buildings that are in much need of repair, transportation is turning into an endurance test, and morale is low. More tax dollars and more administrators with their salaries is not the answer. IT'S PROPER AND EFFECTIVE MANAGEMENT OF WHAT WE HAVE NOW! Let's stop the waste and put our children and their needs first for a change. The choice is clear...it's either our children or the same results as has been produced for the last twenty years.

GOP claims unfair broadcasting practices

The Republican Party of Kentucky today filed a formal complaint with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) against the Kentucky Broadcasters' Association and certain Kentucky television and radio stations. The stations involved are those which have aired certain controversial advertisements as free "public service announcements."

The ads praise "Governor Wilkinson" and "The (1990 legislators)" for "boldly" raising taxes earlier this year, to help provide "better schools." The tax increase of $1.3 billion averaged nearly $1,000 per Kentucky family, and has been the main issue in most contested elections for the General Assembly this year.

Republican State Chairman Bob Gable describes the spots as "blatant political payoffs" to the Democratic Party leadership, which during the 1990 Legislative session decided to "tax the people more, and broadcasters less."

The Republicans complain of three alleged infractions of FCC Regulations. These infractions specifically violate the Zapple Doctrine or "quasi-equal opportunities" rule, political editorial rules, and sponsorship identification rules.

The Republican Party asks the FCC to order that all affected Republican candidates be given free time to respond on the same Kentucky stations which have carried the ad, to take appropriate punitive action against the broadcaster's group, to order the ads stopped, and to require offending broadcasters to answer to the Commission at their time for license renewal.

Gable claims the ads are "deliberately and illegally made to appear as if they are paid political ads, sponsored by some legitimate group arguing a political issue. Instead," he continued, "they seem to be the broadcaster's payoff to Democrat politicians who are up for election, and who are facing the wrath of the electorate for jamming through the exorbitant 1990 tax increase on Kentucky citizens."

"This incident casts a dark shadow over the integrity of the entire Kentucky broadcast industry," Gable said.

Recent editorials in both the Lexington Herald-Leader and the Louisville Courier-Journal expressed similar concerns.

Last week, the Republicans renewed their earlier complaint to the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance, claiming these same ads violated Kentucky election finance laws. On Friday, the GOP also mailed a legal opinion to the broadcasters' group, asking that the ads be recalled. The Republicans implied that they might file a lawsuit if the ads continued to run.

Gable explained why the Republicans are pursuing this matter so vigorously. He said, "Unless these practices are ruled illegal at this time, and appropriate penalties imposed, Kentucky broadcasters may well be blackmailed by Democrat Legislative leaders, if they are still in control, during future sessions of the General Assembly. The Leadership will simply propose taxing broadcasters' advertising revenues again, obtain broadcasters' promises to run free political ads to help the Democrats get reelected, and then call of the proposal to tax the broadcasters. Pure, unadulterated blackmail!"

"I don't know whether this is what happened during the 1990 session," Gable concluded, "but it sure smells like it."

UK college of dentistry announces new service for commonwealth

The University of Kentucky College of Dentistry has announced an expansion of its public service activities for the Commonwealth. The new Mobile Dental Facility, a self-contained, three-chair, 40-foot van, strengthens the College's commitment to better oral health for Kentuckians.

Since 1967, the UK College of Dentistry has provided pediatric dental services in the rural counties of Eastern Kentucky. To further support the College's public service and educational mission, the Mobile Dental Facility will be used primarily to serve indigent children in the Appalachian area.

"According to the 1987 Kentucky Oral Health Survey, Kentucky children ages five to seventeen are much less likely to be without cavities than are children nationally," said Dr. David A. Nash, dean, UK College of Dentistry. "In addition, Kentucky children have approximately the same level of tooth decay as was found nationally in 1979-80."

The dental disease rate is high in the Appalachian region due to a lack of good nutrition and generalized fluoridation in rural water supplies. In addition, the low income of the Appalachian population often prohibits obtaining needed dental care.

This new service may be accessed upon request of a community and with the support of local dentists. The UK College of Dentistry will assist in treating children who are not receiving sufficient dental care. The targeted population is children from kindergarten to third grade, and eligibility for care will be based upon economic need. Children from families having the ability to pay for services will be referred to dentists in their community.

In conjunction with UK Medical Center's regional pediatric heart clinics, the facility will also be used to treat children and educate parents about dental disease and how it can complicate heart conditions. Other uses for the facility will include geriatric dental treatment, and educational programs for dentists and the public. In the future, the College hopes to assist local dentists, health departments and public schools in designing educational, prevention and comprehensive care programs for underserved Kentuckians.

"The University, the Medical Center and the College of Dentistry are challenged to provide essential health care services to underserved individuals and underserved areas," Nash said. "The Mobile Dental Facility allows the College to contribute dental treatment services to Kentuckians and introduce students to dental practice in rural areas."

With this new facility, the College can improve and expand its pediatric services and provide clinical experience to forty student dentists, as well as six to eight pediatric dentistry and general practice residents. A team of faculty dentists, residents and student dentists from the College will provide treatment. Comprehensive dental care may be provided within the facility. The College will make every effort to complete each child's treatment and implement an individualized maintenance schedule.

The facility, including the dental equipment, cost approximately $250,000 and was paid for with private funds and grants. Major contributors include the Appalachian Regional Commission, Steele-Reese Foundation, The Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels, Chatlos Foundation, and the Christian Appalachian Project.

Kentucky Housing Corporation Bonds Ensure Future Low-interest Rate Loans

Kentucky Housing Corporation recently issued $75 million in federal tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds to finance loans for low- to moderate-income homebuyers throughout Kentucky. The bonds, issued in two series, will help ensure lower interest rate loans to many families who would not qualify for conventional mortgage loans.

John Martinez, executive director of KHC, said the corporation went ahead with the C and D bonds as Congress had set a September 30, 1990 expiration date on the sale of tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds. "As the sunset of MRBs occurred, the opportunities for lower- to moderate-income Kentuckians looking to purchase their first home became fewer. By issuing these bonds prior to the sunset date, KHC ensured that funds will be available for the remainder of the 1990 and most of 1991 to meet the needs of this group."

KHC, created in 1972 by the General Assembly, had used tax-exempt mortgage revenue bond funds to finance more than 29,000 single-family loans as of June 30, 1990. Because the bonds sold are tax-exempt, they usually yield interest rates approximately two percentage points below market.

The first in the series is the 1990 C bond issuance of $37,500,000. It is a long-term bond which will offer homes a fixed interest rate of 8.68 percent. The second bond is the 1990

D issue of $37,500,000. This issue is comprised of convertible option bonds with a maturity date of December 19, 1990. The bonds will then be converted into long-term bonds with proceeds available for mortgage loans on or after March 1, 1991. Interest rates on the D series bond will depend on the condition to the financial market at the time for remarketing.

Proceeds from the C and D bonds will not be put to use until the 1990 A and B bond monies have been exhausted. A and B bond funds are currently available at a fixed rate of 8.45 percent to first-time homebuyers.

New dean named at Pikeville College

Ron Damron has been named dean of students and director of continuing education at Pikeville College, according to College President William H. Owens.

Damron comes to Pikeville College from Citizen's Bank of Pikeville, where he worked for eleven years, most recently as vice president and director of administrative services. A graduate of Virgie High School, he attended Pikeville college in 1968 before graduating from Eastern Kentucky University in 1971. He taught for seven years at Feds Creek and Millard high schools and earned a master's degree in counseling from Morehead State University before joining the staff of Citizen's Bank.

"I really enjoy the field of education," Damron says, "and I was eager to work in some capacity at the college level. When this opportunity came up, I took it. It is exciting to be a part of a growing institution like Pikeville College. I feel that the college over the next decade will just keep getting better and better."

Damron will assume the duties of dean of students from Jerry Waddell, who was recently named chair of the education Division at the college, and the continuing education duties from Associate Dean John Sanders, who now will focus his energy on student recruitment and financial aid.

Damron plans to spend the first several months in his new position learning about the programs the college offers and how they can be improved.

"Eventually, I would like our continuing education program to become one of the leading small college programs in the state," Damron said. "The community has gotten behind the college in recent years, and we need to respond by providing programs that the community needs. I think that my role is to help bring the college to the community."

Damron's service to the community has been long and varied. He was honored by the Pike County Chamber of Commerce this year with the Outstanding Service Award. He chairs the chamber's Tourism Committee, and last year chaired its Finance Committee. He was also chair of the Pike County Fair Committee this year. A member of the Pikeville Rotary Club and its board of directors, he was honored in 1989 with the club's Rotarian of the Year award.

He helped to organize the first annual Pike County Free Enterprise Conference for high school students five years ago, and is a board member of the Pike County YMCA.

Greene appointed to the Education Standards Board

Governor Wallace G. Wilkinson has appointed Daniel Greene as a member of the Education Professional Standards Board. Greene, of the David School of David, shall serve for a term expiring September 18, 1994.

Republican leaders offer education incentive

House and Senate Republican leaders have proposed a plan that would guarantee a college education for low-income students who might not otherwise be able to go to college. The College Guarantee Achievement Incentive, sponsored by Rep. Bill Strong and Sen. John Rogers, will be considered by the 1992 General Assembly.

Under the Republican's plan, students will have their tuition to a state college paid for by the state if they meet certain criteria, among which are: a minimum grade point average of 2.5, a good score on the college entrance exam, and the demonstration of financial need.

The plan also requires the applicant to be free of any criminal record and will pay only the tuition of students who sign a letter of intent to seek employment in Kentucky. The core of this plan is modeled after legislation that has been signed into law in five states.

"I have never understood how paying teachers more will make students learn more. House Bill 940 provides generous incentives to everyone but students," Rogers said. "Our bill tells kids that if they stay in school, stay out of trouble, and stay in Kentucky to look for a job then the state will pay for their college."

Strong agreed adding, "We've raised so much money that is supposedly for education reform, but we've done nothing to put the incentive for achievement where it belongs—with the student."

The Republicans believe that if students are informed at an early age that college is a real possibility for them, then they will perform well in high school. Strong pointed to a Louisiana group as evidence of this assertion. New Orleans businessman and philanthropist Pat Taylor identified a group of low-income Louisiana teenagers who had failed twice in high school. He promised he would pay for their college education if they would raise their grades. The positive results were so dramatic that he fought to have Louisiana's legislature offer the same incentive statewide — but funded by the state budget.

MOUNTAIN VOICES

by Willie Elliott

As I go about my business of teaching about words and phrases, I find certain misconceptions that seem to linger year after year. In some cases the logic to the word or phrase seems so sound that it is hard for students to believe that they are wrong.

Ask any ten people at random about the expressions "B.C." and "A.D." and most will tell you that the abbreviations stand for Before Christ and After Death. We Latin scholars (if we can be so presumptuous as to call ourselves that) know that "A.D." is the abbreviation for Anno Domini, which translates to "in the year of our Lord." We started measuring time with the birth of Christ — not his death. If Christ were alive, he would be one thousand nine hundred and ninety years old (thus 1990 A.D.). The abbreviation "B.C." does, however, stand for Before Christ.

Another misconception has to do with a food item that we use every day: milk. When I ask students to give a definition of homogenized milk, they invariably tell me something like this: "milk that has been boiled to get rid of germs, etc." Obviously, they are talking about pasteurized milk. Homogenized milk has been blended so that it is all of one kind. After studying the prefix "homo" (meaning one and the same), students can see how the meaning of the word makes more sense.

Another misconception has to do with the spelling of simple words. Each time I correct student papers, I get the BIG TWO: alright (for all right) and alot (for a lot). Even after spending time on these two "demons," they appear all year long. Students will actually argue with me that those are correct expressions.

The next misconception is not limited to high school students. It has to do with the word "myself." How many times have you heard a statement such as "Send the note to the office or to myself?" Well, it should be this way: "Send the note to the office or to me." Myself should be used as a reflexive pronoun: "He did himself a favor;" or as an intensive pronoun: "I did most of the work myself."

The "I" or "me" debate is probably the result of over-teaching. We were told to say "John and I" so often when we were young that we use the expression in all situations. How often have you heard sports announcers say something like "Join Bill and I next week for the game of the week"? Of course, if we took the "Bill and" out of the sentence, it would read: "Join me next week..." By extension the correct statement would be: "Join Bill and me next week for the big game."

Language does change. If you don't like some of the words the way they are used today, hang around. In a few years it may be alright to use alot of these words.

Whitley featured on KET

Austin City Limits features the late Keith Whitley, a Kentucky native, when it encores on KET at 11 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 27.

Although it was bluegrass music that gave Keith Whitley his first taste of national recognition, he would later perform the music that was closest to his heart. Raised in Sandy Hook and inspired by country greats like Hank Williams, Whitley turned to bluegrass "as a way to get in a band." At fourteen, he was learning bluegrass so rapidly that he was invited, along with fellow Kentuckian Ricky Skaggs, to join Ralph Stanley's Clinch Mountain Boys.

In 1984, Whitley moved to Nashville and worked as a songwriter and demo singer while waiting for a deal with RCA to take shape. His 1988 album release, Don't Close Your Eyes, finally showed him off as the "many-sided honky-tonker" he always believed himself to be. By 1989, Whitley had already scored five Top 20 and three Top 10 singles.

On May 9, 1989, Whitley died of an alcohol overdose. Prior to his death, he had finished an album that would later be released upon the wishes of his wife, country singer Lorrie Morgan.

BELFRY HEADS LIST OF 15TH REGION POWERHOUSES

Defending 15th Regional Champion, Belfry gets my pick as the number one team in the region this year. The Pirates are returning a veteran team that went to the "Sweet Sixteen" last season and are a good choice to repeat. J. J. Hylton and company will be a strong contender.

The Golden Eagles of Johnson Central comes in at the runner-up spot. Of course Alvin Ratliff's team was considered one of the top teams last year. But better guard play along with 6' 10" Jody Salisbury will make the Eagles a high flying team. Third place goes to the Betsy Layne Bobcats regardless of how much they think that is overrating them. The Bobcats will return four starters from last years team led by Adam Gearheart and Phillip King.

Sheldon Clark will not be the same team that played last year. The Cardinals will have a boat load of talent and back with experience that will take them a long ways in the region this year. The combination of Dorton and Virgie high school's did nothing to lessen the strength of a tough Virgie team. Instead with the consolidation of the two institutes, the Shelby Valley basketball team will be one of the top five teams in the region. Mike Rowe returns to lead Coach Bobby Osborne's team.

Gone from the Cougars of Elkhorn City team is Kermit Belcher but don't shed any tears for coach Randy McCoy's team. The Cougars returns 6' 4" Tyler Bailiff and eighth grade sensation Todd Conley, 6' 3".

Coach Johnny Ray Turner's McDowell Daredevils will be one of the regions top teams as they return All-District, All-Conference and All-Region guard Stacy Hall. Last year's freshman sensation, Mark Duddleson will also add to the scheme to things for the Daredevils plus a group of young talented players.

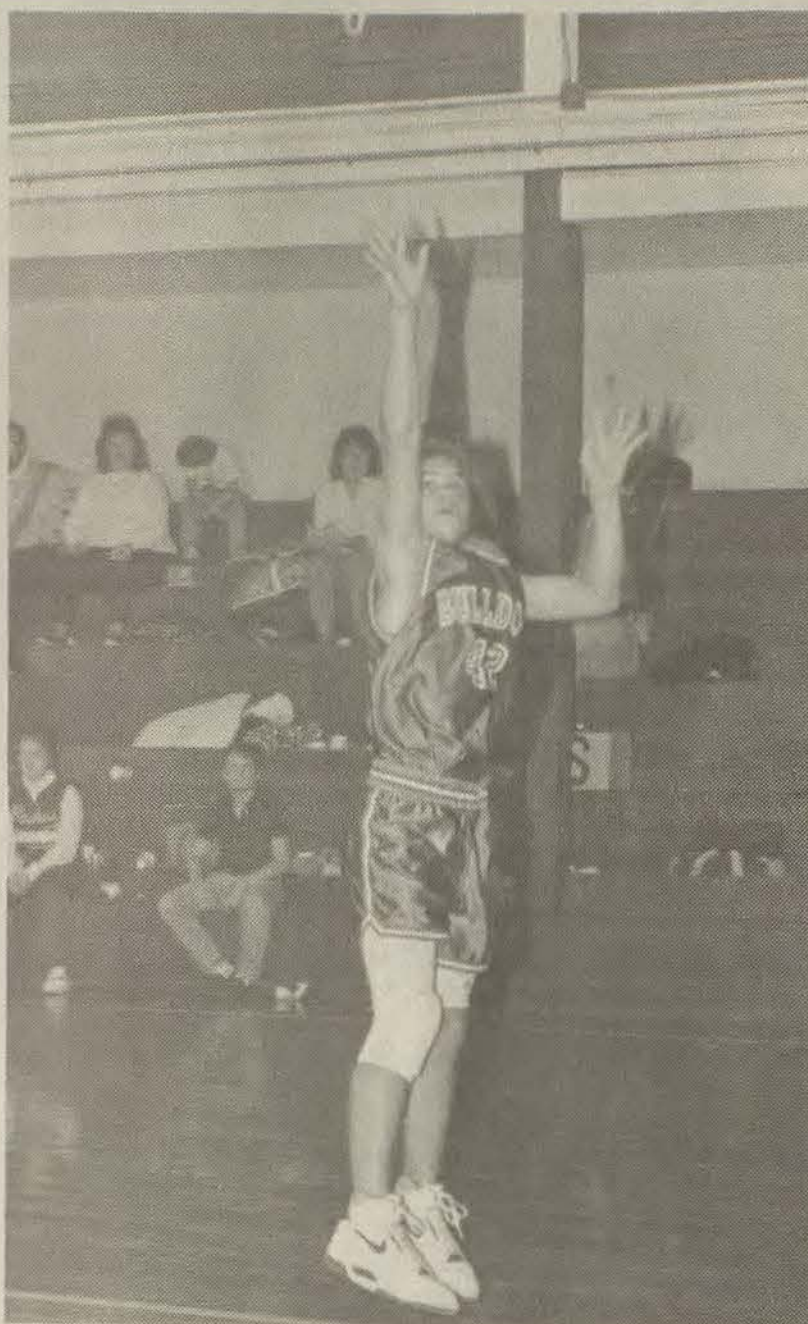

The number eight spot goes to Pikeville, who probably was hit harder by graduation last year than any team. Gone are Johnny Hale, Steve Bailey, Brian Wilson from a team that went to the Class A state tournament last year. However, returning will be Chris Smith, 6' 1" senior and Lee Jones. This may not be the power house of the past Pikeville teams, but it will be a good one.

Paintsville will be trying to rebuild this years team but the Tigers are not that far from having a great basketball team. They will be very competitive this year and will surprise a lot of people. The number 10 spot goes to Monroe Jones' Wheelwright Trojans, who I feel will have one of their finest teams at Wheelwright in a long time. Junior Harold Johnson, 6' 1", will be in the thick of things for the Trojans this year. Add a Steven Johnson, Bryan Rhea, Jimmy Helton, Layne Bailey plus some other talented players, and the Trojans will be tough competition for regional teams.

Prestonsburg, Allen Central are my number 11 and 12 teams with Feds Creek holding the 13th spot. Johns Creek will be a good team this season good for number 14. Phelps, Magoffin County, Millard and Mullins round out the 15th Region.

I know that this is just my opinion of how things will go this year. There will no doubt be a "sleeper" somewhere in the race. It could be a bottom five team that will be the showcase of the 15th Region. Regardless of who is the top 10 teams, it is going to be an exciting 1990-91 basketball season. Be looking for our 1990-91 basketball tab coming out in late November just before the start of the basketball season. We hope to have some interesting sports coverage not only for high school basketball but the local college scene and state colleges.

We are about three weeks away from the start of a new season. I for one cannot wait until it starts. We want to do something special this coming year just before the games begin. Stay tuned. Until Wednesday, good sports and always be good sports!

Duff Surprises Martin 55-52 Behind Hall's 26 Points

In the '50s and early '60s the old Wayland High School gym was a place where you could go and see a good basketball game. The crowd was always large and loud. The era of Kelly Coleman and company saw to that. The old school still stands and the crowds are still large and loud.

Case in point: Tuesday night when Duff Elementary defeated the Martin Purple Flash 55-52, the noise level reminded one of the old high school days at Wayland.

With the consolidation of schools (Martin, Maytown, Garrett, Wayland) the rivalries between schools lives on between the grade school teams. The action was fast, and turnovers dominated the game. Donnie Comb's three point play and a basket off of a steal by Jeremy Osborne erased a five point Martin lead, 52-47, to tie the game at 52-all. Three freethrows by the Bulldogs in the final 52 seconds, gave Duff the victory.

Martin held a five point lead 52-47 with just 1:55 showing on the clock but turnovers hurt the Purple Flash in the final minute. Robinson missed two free throws for Martin and was called for walking on a crucial play.

In fact, missed layups for Martin cost the Purple Flash some valuable points. That, plus the fact that Martin was not able to solve the Bulldogs press early in the game.

Jeremy Hall scored a game high 26 points to lead the Bulldogs in scoring. Coach Ronnie Patton made some changes in his starting lineup, and the changes paid off.

Duff pulled out to a 10 point lead at the end of the first quarter, 17-7, as they picked off some of Martin's passes in the first period and caused some walking violations, too. After the Purple Flash took a quick 2-0 lead on a basket by Toby Robinson, Duff ran off seven straight points to go up 7-2. Chad Stone scored from underneath for Martin and a three point play by Robinson following a bucket by Hall, made it 9-7. Duff scored the final eight points of the quarter to take the lead. In the period Hall tossed in 13 points.

Martin cut it to six, 17-11 with the first two baskets in the second period. Hall hit two early baskets and Matt Crawford added another to propel Duff to a 12 point lead, 23-11. Martin outscored the host team 7-2 to close to within seven 25-18. Duff went to the lockerroom on top 29-22.

It was all Martin in the third quarter as the Purple Flash blitzed the Bulldogs 18-6 in the period. Martin opened the quarter by scoring the first eight points to take a 30-29 lead. Crawford's basket put the Bulldogs back on top 31-30 as the lead began changing hands until Martin scored the final six points of the third quarter to lead 40-35 at the third stop.

It was Jason Bevins to the rescue for the Purple Flash in the early going of the final period. The big center scored six of Martin's first eight points of the quarter, getting some good offensive rebounds for put backs. Martin led 48-42 with 4:16 remaining in the game. Hall, who was held scoreless in the third period, found the basket for nine points and brought Duff back to within one point, 48-47. At that time Byron Gearheart fouled out on a three point play by Hall. Martin was held scoreless the final 1:55 of the game as Duff scored the final eight points.

Besides Hall's 26 points, Combs tallied 13 and Crawford finished with six.

Stone's 16 led Martin while Gearheart scored 10 before fouling out. Robinson netted eight points as did Bevins.

Martin shot only five freethrows in the game, all by Robinson, connecting on two. Duff attempted 14, hitting nine.

Martin (52): Toby Robinson, 8; Kevin Stumbo, 6; Jason Bevins, 8; Chad Stone, 16; Byron Gearheart, 10; Brian Conn, 4.

at Duff (56): Jeremy Hall, 26; Donnie Combs, 13; Jeremy Osborne, 5; Matt Crawford, 6; Jason Osborne, 4.

Lady Flashes Hold Off Upset Minded Lady Bulldogs, 46-29

The Martin Lady Flashes came into the Tuesday night game a heavy favorite to capsize the Lady Bulldogs of Duff Elementary at the Wayland gym. But the Lady Bulldogs thought different as they had upset on their minds.

Veronica McKinney and Kristal Floyd combined for 27 points to lead the Lady Flashes to a 46-29 win over the much improved Lady Bulldogs. McKinney tossed in 14 points and pulled down 14 rebounds. Floyd added 13 points and had 13 boards in the game. Kathy Hall netted 10 points in the Martin win. Kathy Conn had 12 rebounds for Martin.

The Lady Bulldogs employed a full court pressure defense against the Martin team that caused them to turn the ball over numerous times. Martin looked rattled in the early going, but found the scoring of McKinney and Floyd as the key to the win. Martin took a 3-1 lead, but a basket by Jamie Fultz tied the game at 3-3. McKinney missed two from the charity line but a basket by Floyd made it 5-3. Jennifer Mullins' basket ran it to 7-3. Baskets by Lisa Wallace and Lucianna Francis tied the game at 7-7. Duff took the lead for the first time at 11-10 on two baskets by Fultz. One came off a steal on the press. McKinney put the Lady Flashes ahead for good, 12-11, with a bucket just before the buzzer to end the first quarter.

A 10-5 run by Martin opened it up to 22-16 and by the half the Lady Flashes went to the lockerroom with a 27-20 lead.

"We got into foul trouble," said Lady Bulldog coach Kevin Webb, "and could not press like we did earlier. Our girls have improved a lot since the season started and we hope to have them ready by tournament time."

Seven straight points by Floyd in the third period opened up a 10 point lead at 34-24 as the Lady Flashes began to add to their lead.

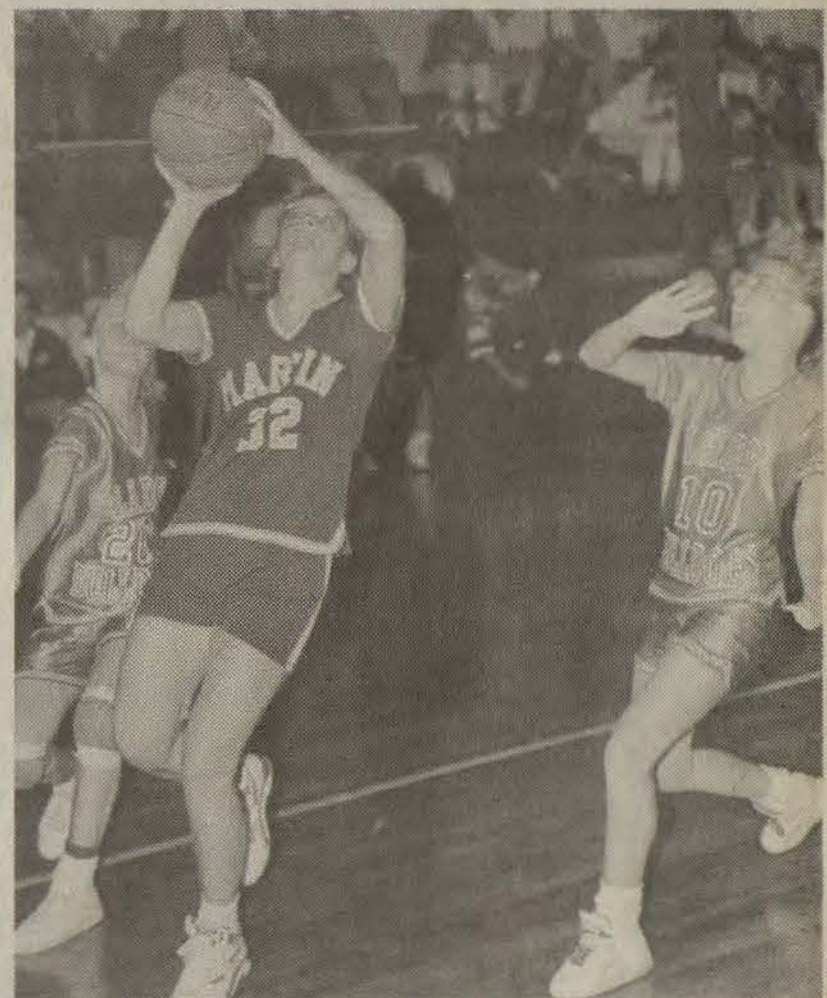

Once Martin overcame their inability to handle the pressure defense of the Lady Bulldogs, Duff found themselves having to play catch up basketball, something that was difficult to do with key players in foul trouble. Martin outscored Duff, 12-5 in the final two minutes to win by 17 points.

Leading scorers for the Lady Bulldogs were Fultz and Francis with 10 points apiece. Duff hit only three of 18 free throws. Martin wasn't much better with just eight of 26 charity tosses. Francis had 20 rebounds in the game for Duff.

Martin (46): Veronica McKinney, 7, 3-0-14; Jennifer Mullins, 1, 2-1-3; Kathy Hall, 4, 6-2-10; Kristal Floyd, 5, 9-3-13; Kathy Conn, 1, 6-2-4; Melissa Mullins, 1, 0-0-2 at Duff (29): Lisa Wallace, 1, 4-1-3; Jamie Webb, 1, 2-0-2; Jamie Fultz, 5, 0-0-10; Lucianna Francis, 4, 4-2-10; Tiffany Francis, 2, 4-0-4.

Martin's "B" Team Stays Perfect After 43-20 Win

Coach Mark Hall's Martin "B" team kept its perfect record intact with a 43-20 victory over the Duff Bulldogs "B" team Tuesday night. The win ran the unblemished record to 5-0 on the season.

Mike McKinney scored 10 points to lead the junior Martin team to victory. Kevin Robinson tallied nine points in the win with Adam Coleman and Thomas Jenkins scoring six each.

For Duff, Brad Allen had four points and several players scored two each.

Martin jumped to an early lead on a basket by Coleman and a free throw by Coleman to take a 8-2 first quarter lead.

Martin scored the first seven points of the second period to rush out to a 15-2 advantage. Duff's two points in the first period came on a basket by Ephriam O'Quinn. Ryan Owens and Todd Bingham had second quarter buckets for Duff. Early in the third period, Chris McKinney hit a nice bank shot and Jenkins showed a lot of hustle in picking up two baskets for a 15 point lead at 23-8. After Brad Allen hit a two pointer, Wade Damron's free throw made it 24-10.

Byron Patton and Brian Crawford had two and one charity tosses respectively.

C.K. Dingus hit two quick fourth quarter baskets to make it 28-12 but a basket by Brad Allen and a free throw from Ross Goble cut it to 28-14.

For Prater, Heather Nelson led the Lady Cougars with six points. Patricia Kidd and Christina Boyd each scored two points.

The game was a ragged played game as both teams were guilty of turning the ball over early. The only lead the Lady Cougars held was a 1-0 at the end of the first quarter, as Betsy Layne was unable to score in the first period.

Betsy Layne outscored Prater 12-2 in the second quarter to go to the lockerroom with a 12-3 lead.

OUTDOORS FISHIN' TIPS

FROM THE TRACKER PROS

Most people who fish from a boat spend much of their time casting shorelines. Visible structure proves much easier to fish than hidden structure. However, it is the deep, underwater structure that generally attracts the bigger fish.

It takes a good sonar depth sounder to identify the hidden structure. Once located, mark the potential hot spots with a colorful plastic marker buoy.

Once the buoy's weight reaches the bottom, the marker stays in place and helps keep the angler in touch with his quarry. To prevent tangling with the buoy line, avoid dropping the marker directly on the structure to be fished. Mark a couple of feet to the right or left of the target.

Keep a marker handy should a favorite outfit accidentally fall over board. A buoy dropped on the spot will aid recovery.

Fishin' Tips are presented by America's #1 Fishing Boat.

The cry around here on Thursdays has been "how did I do" in the picks. This week, we picked early so I could get this chart done. Kathleen had a very rough week in the picks. Several of the prognosticators finished 8-4. Charlotte made the move upward and Susan Coleman is threatening to fire her "bookie". Several are just satisfied to stay ahead of Tim. Kentucky is expected to fall against Georgia this weekend. However, this could be a big upset. Eastern Ky. is looking every bit a champion, and on the local scene, it will be the Blackcats and Rebels coming away with victories. No one understands what is wrong with the Browns. It will be rough out in San Francisco. Look for Bengals to lose.

Hamilton's 28 Leads Prater In Come From Behind Win

The Prater Cougars scored a come-from-behind 53-47 victory over the Betsy Layne Bobcats Tuesday night behind the 28 point performance of Ronnie Hamilton. Hamilton got some help from guard Brent Akers who added 14 points in the win.

Betsy Layne held a 27-24 lead until the third quarter when Prater went on a 13-4 run to go ahead 37-31. Hamilton scored 11 points to lead the spurt. In the run, Betsy Layne's leading scorer, Randy Wallen, experienced one of the new rule changes in basketball this year, when he was whistled for a technical foul. The technical foul fouled Wallen out of the game. The new rule change makes a technical foul on a player a personal foul also.

Prater went on to build a 12 point lead, 43-31 behind the scoring of Hamilton and Akers. A 6-0 run by Betsy Layne made it 43-37. Two freethrows by Hamilton and a basket by Darren Kidd put the lead back to 10 points. Betsy Layne then went on a 8-1 spurt that closed the lead to three 48-45 with :52 showing on the scoreboard clock. Prater held off the late charge by the Bobcats to win their third game of the season.

Jeremy Rogers led the Bobcats in scoring with 14 points. Wallen finished with 10 points before fouling out. Tim Parks had six points.

Martin's 34 Points Sends Maytown Past Auxier In 73-63 Victory

The Maytown Wildcats, after a disappointing double overtime loss to the Betsy Layne Bobcats earlier in the week, came away with a high scoring 73-63 win over the Auxier Hornets Wednesday night at Auxier.

Chris Martin had a game high 34 points for the Wildcats and Nick Hagans tossed in 22.

The first quarter proved to be the down fall of the Hornets, who got off to a slow start falling behind 20-11 at the first stop.

"We didn't play well in the first quarter," said Hornet mentor Jerome Greathouse. "Normally we score big in the first quarter, but not tonight. I think the kids kind of doubted themselves in the first quarter when some calls went against them."

The Hornets looked good in the second period, cutting the lead to six, and the score was 36-30 at the half. "We got things back under control in the second quarter," explained Greathouse. "We made a comeback before half time. In fact we were ahead by six points until I had to pull my big men from the game. Maytown's press hurt us and we fell behind again"

The Hornets were in immediately foul trouble with their big men as leading scorer, Jason Burke and Ervin Osborne pick up their fourth personal foul before half time.

"When Burke and Osborne had to leave, Martin hit some big baskets against us," said Greathouse. "He scored eight points back to back against us."

The Hornets lost four starters to fouls in the fourth period and had to finish the final three minutes with four players.

Auxier placed four players in double figures with Burke leading the way with 24 points. Cantrell Farler and Ervin Osborne each totaled 15 points.

Auxier is 1-2 on the year and Maytown improves to 3-3.

In "B" Team play, Maytown won easily over the Hornets 42-16 to go 5-0 on season play. Todd Howard scored seven points to lead the junior Wildcats in scoring, Nick Halbert and Chad Martin tossed in five points apiece while Tommy Brown had four. Chris Bailey also had four points. Levi Wells, Charles Twiss, Robert Castle had two points each. Martin, Thacker, Hagans each two points in the game. In an earlier game during the week, the Maytown junior Wildcats defeated Betsy Layne in a close one, 18-15. In that game, Tommy Brown scored four points to lead the win. Todd Howard and Chris Bailey each tossed in three points. Nick Halbert, Charles Twiss, Robert Castle and Edmond Slone scored two points. Chad Martin had one.

Maytown (73): Nick Hagans, 22; Gary Webb, 2; C. Martin, 2; Chris Bailey, 2; Chris Martin, 34; Shawn Robinson, 6; John Moore, 2; Ethan Stumbo, 3

at Auxier (63): Cantrell Farler, 15; Ty Wright, 4; Jason Burke, 24; Ervin Osborne, 15; Greg Richmond, 4; Jason Hicks, 1

KENTUCKY FAVORED BY 1 POINT OVER GEORGIA THIS WEEKEND

Kentucky will win this week as the home team over Georgia who continues to struggle. In preseason Georgia was picked to be a factor in the Southeastern Conference race. However, Georgia is not in the top 50 and continues to lose games that are close. Kentucky looks better now that North Carolina is number 43 in the Power Ratings.

Louisville won again last week against Pittsburgh and improved their record to 6-1-1 as they continue toward a bowl. Louisville is favored by 31 points against Western Kentucky.

Eastern Kentucky continues to be the class of Division 1-AA and is seven points better than the second place team. Eastern Kentucky is favored by 30 points over Tennessee Tech.

Morehead was doing better, but now must face the Middle Tennessee team that is second on the Power Rating. Middle Tennessee is favored by 24 points.

National games of interest include sixth ranked Colorado against fifteenth ranked Oklahoma. Colorado is favored by seven points. With the upset shuffle, Washington benefit the most, moving up to fourth place. Number one Virginia and number two Nebraska are the only two teams remaining that are undefeated, and would meet for the national championship New Year's Day in the Orange Bowl if they continue unbeaten.

Bobcats Squeeze By Maytown in Double Overtime

Jeremy Rogers hit two crucial freethrows in the closing minute of the second overtime to lift the Betsy Layne Bobcats over the Maytown Wildcats 53-49 in a "barn burner" at the Maytown gym on Tuesday night. Rogers had 10 points in the game for Betsy Layne and eight steals. But scoring honors went to Randy Wallen who tossed in 18 points to lead in that category. Ryan Newsome tallied 15 points in the win.

The Bobcats seemed to have an easy time with the home standing Wildcats as they built an eight point advantage at the end of the first period, 16-8 and led by three at the half, 28-25 as Maytown rallied in the second quarter, outscoring the Bobcats 17-12.

The spurt for the Wildcats came in the fourth quarter when they outscored Betsy Layne 14-8 to tie the game at 43-43. In the quarter, Chris Martin grabbed three offensive rebounds and stuck them back in to tie the game as the crowd roared its approval.

Maytown took a three point lead, 46-43 in the first three minute overtime but Wallen's three point play tied the game and sent it into the second overtime. Wallen scored five of the seven points for Betsy Layne in the second overtime but it was Rogers' charity tosses that sealed the game for Betsy Layne.

Nick Hagans had 18 points for Maytown to lead them in scoring.

Martin tallied 10 and Chris Bailey had a good outing with eight points. For Betsy Layne, Wallen had 10 steals in the game and Ryan Newsome pulled down 19 rebounds.

The win ran Betsy Layne's record to 3-4 on the season while Maytown fell to 2-5.

Betsy Layne (53): Jeremy Rogers, 10; Randy Wallen, 18; Tim Parks, 4; Jason Hall, 4; Ryan Newsome, 15; Wesley Frazier, 2.

at Maytown (49): Nick Hagans, 18; Chris Martin, 10; Shawn Robinson, 4; John Moore, 6; Chris Bailey, 8; Estill Stumbo, 3.

Will New Ruling Entice Illegal Recruiting?

What will the ruling by the Kentucky High School Athletic Association do to transfer athletes who want to go to another school? The recent transfer of Shannon Hoskins from M. C. Napier to Clay County surely will have an effect on where a student athlete wants to play basketball.

Hoskins, a standout guard for the Navaho's basketball program the past two years, averaged 29.7 points per game for Napier last season. The sharp shooting guard is considered by many as one of the premier shooters in the state.

Under the old ruling, before a student could transfer he or she had to be living in the district they would transfer to. KHSAA Commissioner Tom Mills stated recently that under the new ruling a change of residence is not necessary. "If the principal releases him (and both principals agree the athlete should be allowed to compete at the new school), we can waive the (transfer) rule," said Mills.

Questioning the legality of the move is not the intent here. But whether such a ruling and a move of the magnitude as this one is, will open the doors for "illegal recruiting" by schools.

If a player does not want to play for a certain school he or she can just transfer, whether they live in the district or not. Any principal of a high school is not going to balk at the release of such a player if that student athlete doesn't want to play for a particular school. Such was the stated reason for the transferring of Hoskins.

"He didn't seem to want to play for us," said Harold Combs, principal of the M.C. Napier school and head basketball coach which replaced Denny Fugate as the school's head coach.

So if a player feels he is not being treated right at one school or wants to play for a consistent winning program, he is free to transfer under the new ruling as long as the two principals agree.

Some high school coach which has no respect for the rules in his "win at any cost" attitude, will take advantage of this ruling. A kid in high school can be persuaded many ways to transfer if the enticing is strong enough. Certain promises, whether sincere or not, can appeal to "non thinking" students.

The ruling is not a fair ruling unless it has more stipulations than just two principals agreeing. The fear is that this will open the door for some illegal recruiting among high school coaches.

The blasting site consists of approximately 2.82 acres located 0.9 miles NE of Handshoe in Floyd County, Kentucky. This area is located 0.2 miles West of Kentucky Route 2029's junction with Kentucky Route 1280 at latitude 37°-28'-47" and longitude 82°-53'-38". Detonations of explosives are proposed to occur from sunrise to sunset.

Control of the blasting area will be maintained by blocking access roads to the blasting area ten (10) minutes prior to the blast. Post detonation access to the blasting area will be allowed only after an inspection and determination that no hazards exist.

A predetonation warning, consisting of three (3) long blasts of air horn/siren will be given. After personnel are cleared from the area, two additional long blasts will be given two minutes before detonation of explosives. Just prior to detonation, one additional long blast of siren/horn will be sounded. A postdetonation all clear signal, consisting of a series of short blasts on the air horn/siren will be given. These signals will be audible over a minimum distance of one half mile. Events which could lead to blasting at times other than scheduled include but are not limited to rain, lightning, or other atmospheric conditions which involve personnel, operational or public safety. If conditions occur that require blasting at times other than the normally scheduled blasting hours, the audible signals described above will be used to warn the public of the blasting activity. 10-26-1tF.
