Ku Klux Klan a no-show

A moment of prayer

Local ministerial and political leaders bowed their heads in prayer at Sunday's Brotherhood rally in Prestonsburg. The rally was held in opposition to an expected rally by the Ku Klux Klan. Klan members opted to avoid Prestonsburg, but did march in Pikeville later in the day. (Photo by Kathleen Carroll)

Klan leader threatens federal lawsuit against city :

Rally speakers denounce bigotry, promote unity

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing Writer

Nearly 200 people gathered Sunday in Prestonsburg for a Brotherhood Day rally, but the impetus for their gathering was a no-show.

The Brotherhood event, established in a joint resolution by Prestonsburg Mayor Ann Latta and Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, was set as a counter-demonstration to a scheduled Ku Klux Klan march through the city Sunday.

But instead of marching through

Prestonsburg, where a potential for confrontation existed after city officials denied a parade permit, about a dozen Klan members, women and children paraded Sunday in Pikeville, much to the surprise of residents in both towns.

Pikeville officials said this week they made no announcement of the issuance of the Klan of a parade permit for Sunday, indicating they had no desire to publicize the event. The Klan had marched through Pikeville and Paintsville in 1989.

Meanwhile, Prestonsburg officials await action on a threat issued by Virgil Griffin, leader of the North Carolina-based Klan chapter, who vowed to file a federal lawsuit over Prestonsburg's denial of a parade permit. The permit was denied, city authorities said last week, because the Klan failed to pay a $100 permit fee and specify their parade route. Griffin has labeled the denial "unconstitutional," but he had filed no federal action Tuesday.

Despite the absence of the objects of their concern, participants in Sunday's Brotherhood rally in Prestonsburg denounced the Ku Klux Klan and its creed of racial bigotry.

"The Klan fosters disunity and hatred. Let us counter that disunity with our courage. Let us smother that hatred with our love," said Tom Carroll, assistant professor of history at Prestonsburg Community College.

Edna Higginbotham, Deputy Director of Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center and a native of Charleston, W.V., delivered a sermon, "The Creation," emphasizing that all God's creation is good and worthy of respect.

Mayor Ann Latta expressed her gratitude to the crowd. "Thank you for being here, thank you for caring." Latta said the rally celebrated the diverse community of Prestonsburg, "a community of individuals where

Times' sports editor wins gold medal from 'Games'

Floyd County Times sports editor Ed Taylor has been awarded a Gold Medal by the Bluegrass State Games Committee for his coverage of the 1990 event.

Taylor was the first place winner in judging among Kentucky weekly newspapers. Second place went to the Citizen Voice and Times, of Irvine, and third went to The Woodford Sun. Selections were made by the Games' director and the promotions and publicity staff.

Medals were awarded at a statewide news media appreciation luncheon, held in Lexington on Friday, November 16.

"We are giving the awards this year as a means of saying thanks and to recognize the extra effort that some news organizations put into covering the games," executive director Shirley Watts said.

Some 15,500 athletes from 102 counties, including Floyd County, participated in the 1990 Bluegrass State Games, held July 27-29 in Lexington.

What's open, what's closed

Holiday Happenings

Several area businesses will be closed Thursday and Friday due to the Thanksgiving holiday. Several services may also be affected including garbage pickup.

Floyd County Solid Waste customers who are regularly serviced on Thursday each week, will have their trash picked up on Saturday. Customers scheduled for service on either Wednesday or Friday will have no interruption of regular service.

Customers of the Prestonsburg solid waste system who normally have trash picked up on Thursday will have their garbage picked up on Wednesday (today), with pick up schedules returning to normal on Friday.

All schools in Floyd County will be closed both Thursday and Friday for the holidays. Prestonsburg Community College will be closed on Thursday, with offices remaining open on Friday.

All city, county and state offices will be closed Thursday. Because closings for the holiday may vary, a telephone call may save a trip.

To special legislative session agenda :

Stumbo wants coal tax added

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

January's special session of Kentucky's General Assembly will require some tough decisions to be made by the state's lawmakers as they try to find solutions to environmental, social and economic problems facing the state.

Topics on the state's agenda include, stricter drunken driving laws, dealing with influx of out-of-state garbage, considering a tax incentive for Delta Airlines and the issue of voter fraud in the state.

House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo, who will be seeking his fourth term as floor leader, opposes two issues to be discussed and hopes another will be added to the special session agenda.

In an effort to increase the cash flow to Eastern Kentucky, Stumbo said he will pre-file a bill that would allow for a greater return of coal severance tax money to the coal counties in the state. He hopes the governor will include the issue in the special session.

The coal severance tax issue has prompted business and political leaders in Eastern Kentucky to push for the return of a larger share of tax revenues to coal producing counties. Under a current formula, the majority of coal taxes go into the state's general fund, with excess revenues allocated to coal counties.

Stumbo disagrees with Governor Wallace Wilkinson's proposal to allow "administrative per se" provisions dealing with someone caught driving drunk. The provision will allow any officer who has the authority to make arrests and take possession of someone's drivers license on the spot if charged with drunk driving.

"State's that have 'administrative per se' regulations cannot show, statistically, that they have had a positive impact on alcohol related fatalities," Stumbo said. "The provision would also mean that any officer, a constable, deputy sheriff, not just state police, can stop you, charge you with DUI and take your driver's license. I have a problem with that. What if someone lives at Melvin, has to go to work in Martin County the next day and loses his job because he can't drive to work because he doesn't have a license?" Stumbo asked.

Stumbo said he would not favor any legislation that would circumvent the courts and the jury system. "If this passes, the arresting officer would become the judge and jury," Stumbo said. "I can't vote in favor of that."

A proposed tax incentive for Delta Airlines to expand its facilities at the Greater Cincinnati Airport in northern Kentucky is another proposal that Stumbo will not endorse.

"It may be a good deal," Stumbo said, "but, I can't, in good conscience, vote for this when no one is doing

"For cause" :

Wheelwright police chief is dismissed

by Tim B. Preston
Staff writer

The city of Wheelwright is effectively without local police protection until later this month following the Thursday night dismissal of city police chief Danny Milligan.

Milligan was dismissed by the council "for cause", following unconfirmed reports that he had allegedly misused the city's police cruiser. Wheelwright city clerk Mary Ann Johnson confirmed that the vehicle, along with a credit card issued to Milligan, was returned to the city by a member of the Floyd County Sheriff's Department. Applications for the position of police chief will be accepted at Wheelwright City Hall until November 27. Councilmen have set November 29, as a tentative meeting date to review the applications and hire a new police officer.

In other action at Thursday's meeting, council members approved the first reading of an ordinance which amends the city's tax rate from .40 per $100 to .31 per $100.

A check for $100 was presented to the council from the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 5839 in Prestonsburg to be used in renovation of the Wheelwright War Memorial. Wheelwright Lodge F&AM 889 later presented a $138 check designated for the memorial renovation.

Before dismissing, the council members discussed approval of a pay incentive program for city employees, however no action was taken on the issue.

The next meeting of the Wheelwright City Council will be a special meeting to hire a police officer which has been tentatively set for November 29, at 7 p.m. The next regular monthly meeting will be held on December 20, at 7 p.m. Councilman Dennis Holbrook was the only member absent from the Thursday meeting.

Grant helps finish water tank project

A $10,000 state grant aided the Mud Creek Water District with maintenance work on five water storage tanks in Floyd County.

The grant provided for the sand-blasting, priming and painting of the tanks located in Branham's Creek, Little Mud Creek, Ligon, Tackett Fork and Mink Branch. The repairs were completed earlier this month, said Plant Supervisor Denzil McKinney. The water district added $3,900 for the completion of the project.

The Area Development Fund, a capital projects program in the Department of Local Government, approved the grant upon the recommendation of the Big Sandy Area Development District board of directors.

Vandals wreck, burglarize Auxier Road glass shop

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

An early morning break-in last week at a local auto-glass business resulted in the loss of $25,000 worth of tools and equipment.

A & B Autoglass on Auxier Road was robbed and vandalized at approximately 5:30 a.m. Tuesday, November 13, said Kentucky State Police Trooper Ghomer Prater. The store was entered by someone prying open the back door of the basement, Prater said.

Vandals broke 104 windshields and 1,600 units of safety glass. Also, a chemical agent was poured onto the carpet which destroyed it throughout the store, Prater said.

Employees arriving for work Tuesday discovered the break-in and notified authorities at 7:30 a.m.

According to the police report, items stolen include adding machines, a Shop-Vac, a windshield cutting machine, telephone system and an array of tools. It was also reported that business records and work orders were taken.

KSP Troopers Mike Thorpe and James Hopkins investigated the incident. Anyone having any information about the burglary is asked to contact the Kentucky State Police at (606) 437-7311.

no one stands alone." Dr. Tom Matijasac, Associate Professor of History at Prestonsburg Community College, shared a history of the Klan's violence. "I want to read to you five names... Dr. Michael Nathan, Dr. James Wallen, Bill Sampson, Caesar Croce, and Sandy Smith. What these five people have in common is that, on November 3, 1979, they were gunned down in cold blood — with cameras rolling — in Greensboro, North Carolina by Virgil Griffin and his men." "Their crime was," Matijasac continued, "they dared to organize a demonstration against a march of the Klan. The outrage is, every one of these people got away scot-free." "The Klan is full of paradoxes," Matijasac told the gathering, referring to the Klan's origins in the 1920s. "They have campaigned against the use of alcohol, yet their founder was an alcoholic. They have campaigned for traditional morality, yet the leader of the Klan in Indiana abducted and raped a Sunday school teacher. They campaign in support of the 'American Way', yet Virgil Griffin sought the support of the American Nazi Party in his activities — does the Nazi party stand for the American way of life? I don't think so." "The Klan often marches," continued Matijasac, "wearing army fatigues — a disgrace to those who have worn the uniform over the years in defense of their nation. The irony is, we are now readying for a conflict in the Middle East in which fully one-third of our troops are black." Father Joseph Muench, St. Martha's Church, told the gathering that "all peoples come together to enrich the Christian faith. When we pray for those who live in prejudice we do something for our community, our state, our nation, and our world. Prayer, not bitterness nor anger, is the answer to the Klan's bigotry." Robert Perry, Assistant Professor of English at Prestonsburg Community College, read poem he authored in memory of the three civil rights workers murdered in Mississippi in 1964. Tom Carroll read selections from the writings of Frederick Douglass and Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. John Rosenberg, a Prestonsburg lawyer with the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, also addressed the gathering. "As many of you know," he said, "my family escaped from Hitler's terror in 1941 and came to this land of freedom. While no horror will ever compare to that of the holocaust, the principles underlying the appeal to bigotry by Hitler and the Klan, in my mind, are the same." Rosenberg added, "We must continue to expose the Klan's efforts to shroud itself in a cloak of legitimacy, to expose the principles on which it rests — principles which are contrary to our morality, our Judaeo-Christian tradition, and our constitution." "This rally," said Rosenberg, "does not dignify the Klan's march, but rather it demonstrates our solidarity in condemning the principles which the Klan espouse; and it unites us in the principles of justice, equality, and love for which this nation stands." Rev. Timothy Jessen, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, officiated the event. Rev. French Harmon, pastor of First Baptist Church in Allen, gave the benediction. According to Mayor Latta, Brotherhood Week will become an annual observance in Prestonsburg during Thanksgiving Week.

anything for economic development in Eastern Kentucky. We have coal mines closing, large and small companies, and I believe we should offer tax incentives to our coal miners first." Legislators hope to find a way to control the flow of out-of-state waste coming into the state. Stumbo says the major stumbling block for the legislation is a constitutional clause which prohibits states from restricting interstate commerce. Lawmakers hope to get around the constitutional provision by establishing regional landfills built to accommodate the amount of trash generated by the number of people in the region, Stumbo said. "We want counties to form cooperative associations to develop regional landfills and the amount of out-of-state garbage the state can accept will be minimized," Stumbo said. "We definitely don't want Kentucky to become a dumping ground for out-of-state trash." The issue of medical waste incinerators is not expected to be an item in the special session, Stumbo said. "It's my understanding the incinerator at Highlands meets all the federal standards," Stumbo said. "If that is the case, the state couldn't do anything."

someone from this area in that position. "Someone said to me the other day, that I was the highest elected official from Eastern Kentucky since Bert T. Combs was elected governor." When asked if the state's highest office was in his political future, Stumbo replied, "I wouldn't rule it out in 1995. I wouldn't rule out any bid for statewide office in 1995." All in all, Stumbo sees Eastern Kentucky progressing slowly, citing recent road construction and repair projects, and the construction of two new schools in the county. "We're moving ahead more rapidly than in the past," Stumbo said. "But, we've still got a long way to go before we catch up. The progress that's been made is encouraging."

Wayland, Garrett Volunteers Respond to structure fires

Members of the Garrett Volunteer Fire Department responded to fire at a mobile home owned by Willard Scott of Stone Coal Thursday evening. Rita Scott, the resident of the mobile home, was apparently not home when the fire started, but her daughter, a young girl whose name and age are unknown, was asleep in the trailer and awakened to find the kitchen and living room in flames. The girl reportedly escaped the burning structure, reported the fire and was later treated for smoke inhalation. Firefighters reported that most of the damage caused by the blaze was limited to the kitchen and living room area of the home, with smoke damage throughout the structure. Garrett volunteers responded to the blaze with two pumper trucks and 15 men. An electrical problem is suspected as the cause of the blaze. The Wayland Volunteer Fire Department responded to a fire Saturday morning at a two-story, two family home on Front Street in Wayland. Wayland firefighter Sam Bentley reported that the fire began in a bedroom on the half of the home rented to the Connie Cordial family. The blaze reportedly burned through to the outer wall of the structure, where it was snuffed by the firefighters. No injuries were reported and the cause of the blaze is unknown at this time.

Diabetic Control Program to conduct eye screening

Diabetes is a leading cause of blindness. To help detect diabetic related eye problems, the Kentucky Diabetes Control Program will be conducting eye screening during December.

The screenings will be held at health departments in Johnson County, Magoffin County, Martin County, Floyd County, and at the Pikeville and Belfry locations in Pike County.

Appointments must be scheduled by November 30.

Horn reappointed

Governor Wallace G. Wilkinson has reappointed Carl Horn as a member of the Kentucky Waterway Marina Development Commission.

Horn, of Prestonsburg, will serve for a term expiring October 24, 1994.

Correction

In the November 16, edition of the Floyd County Times a story about the Langley Post Office Centennial incorrectly identified Mrs. Mary Jo Wallen as Nancy Jo Wallen. Also a photo with the story incorrectly identified Mr. Ralph Hogans as Eddie Scarberry.

In the November 16, Floyd County Times story regarding the Kentucky Opry concert at Prestonsburg Community College, the name of Ray Salyer was accidentally omitted from the group of musicians performing. Salyer, bass guitarist with Breakaway, will be performing with the Kentucky Opry band during the November, 25 concert at PCC.

David man busted for acid

One person was arrested and a variety of drugs were confiscated last Wednesday when Floyd County Sheriff's deputies conducted a raid at the home of Bill Tom Shepherd of David.

The deputies, who had conducted an unsuccessful raid on the Shepherd home approximately two weeks earlier, used a back road to the home to avoid observation, and entered the home shortly after a suspected drug buyer had entered. Officers discovered one large bag of marijuana (less than eight ounces), one small bag of marijuana (weight unknown), three bottles of pharmaceutical drugs (Tollectin, Ibuprofen and Mellaril), one small bag of marijuana seeds (weight unknown), a balance beam scale and 39 doses or "hits" of LSD. Officers also confiscated $63 in cash.

Bill Tom Shepherd was arrested following the raid and charged with possession of and trafficking in the confiscated drugs.

Floyd County Chief deputy Linzie Hunt, deputy Lloyd Powers, deputy Larry Newsome, deputy Chester Newsome, deputy Roy Compton, canine officer Chuck Ousley and deputy Dingo Dog conducted the raid with Kentucky State Police Detective Les Stapleton.

Workers nabbed with contraband in search at EKCC

Sandy Hook — "Frankly, I didn't expect to find that amount (of contraband) and what amazed me was the number of weapons," said Warden Michael O'Dea following last week's unannounced search of construction workers and their vehicles at the Eastern Kentucky Correctional Complex at West Liberty. State Police officers using drug-sniffing dogs and assisted by a special squad of correctional officers from the new medium-security prison turned up four hand guns, several bags of marijuana, knives, syringes, ammunition, beer, vodka, and assorted pills during a search of workers and their vehicles when they reported to work at the prison at 6 a.m. on Oct. 31. Thirteen of the construction company employees were arrested and jailed on charges of promoting contraband in the first degree, a felony, and 13 others who were charged with promotion of contraband in the second degree, a misdemeanor, were released on their own recognizance. Battle of the bulge might be Lexington police's next mission

LEXINGTON — Future Lexington police officers might have to stay in good physical shape throughout their careers or risk losing their jobs. The Urban County Council is expected to consider a recommendation today that the city provide a six-month pilot physical fitness program for police officers through a local health club. If the city agrees to pay for such a program permanently, then staying physically fit will be a job requirement for future officers — beginning with recruits hired this spring, Police Chief Larry Walsh said. There now are no fitness standards for most officers to meet after their probationary period, other than those set in medical examinations, Walsh said. (Lexington Herald-Leader)

Sheriff dropped as defendant in 1989 civil rights lawsuit

PIKEVILLE — Pike County Sheriff Charles "Fuzzy" Keese and three of his deputies were dropped as co-defendants in a 1989 case charging deprivation of constitutional rights. In the original suit filed June 9, 1989, Keese was listed along with deputies Paul Hatfield, Fred McCoy, Bob Compton, Winifred Maynard, John Darbyshire and Bill Hackney. Defendants Andrew Justice and Antonio Pasquerello Jr. are seeking damages in excess of $4 million in the suit. The suit was filed almost a year after deputies arrested the pair near the Southside Mall at Goody. Justice and Pasquerello allege that after being taken into custody they were searched repeatedly and abused physically and verbally. They also contend the car driven by Pasquerello was unlawfully searched by forcing the trunk open with a steel bar and personal property seized. The suit further alleges that the Sheriff's Office denied them medical attention, legal counsel and did not inform them of any charges. (Appalachian News-Express)

Boyd schools still in crisis, report says

ASHLAND — A curriculum audit said Boyd County schools continue to operate in financial trouble, using students to raise money, while the district drifts about a management crisis. The audit also said that the district improperly placed youngsters in a remedial class so their teacher could be paid out of federal funds, and sold sugar water to students at one school during lunch hour. Nine education experts, most from the Kentucky Department of Education, said in the report that Boyd County students don't get a free education because operation of the schools depends on aggressive, year-round fund-raising. Bowl to pay for minority programs

LOUISVILLE — In the wake of local black leaders' opposition to the University of Louisville's participation in the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl, U of L President Donald Swain announced yesterday that all net proceeds from the bowl appearance will go to U of L programs benefiting minority students. Controversy over the Jan. 1 football game arose because Arizona voters defeated a measure that would have made Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday a paid state holiday. When announced that U of L would accept an invitation to play in the game in Tempe, Ariz., Swain said the bowl appearance — for which the university's guaranteed minimum is $2.5 million — would yield $200,000 for minority scholarships. Former South East miners file charges of unfair practices

WHITESBURG — More than 280 charges of labor practice have been filed against South East Coal Co. Sherry Brashear, a lawyer with the United Mine Workers, said the allegations have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board on behalf of 241 miners in Letcher and Knott counties and 46 workers at South East's coal preparation plant in Estill County. The two complaints, filed on behalf of Local Union 3007 in Letcher County and 3008 in Estill County, say that "on or about May 13, 1990, and continuing thereafter to the present, the employer discriminated against the employees with regard to their terms and conditions of employment, and threatened and intimidated these employees, all in violation of their rights under the National Labor Relations Act." Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

by Scott Perry

Scientists believe that dinosaurs became extinct because they had tiny brains and were unable to adapt to changing climates.

That's bad news for the KKK.

Governor Wilkinson has hinted that one topic of an expected January special session of the state's General Assembly could involve incentives for economic development.

We're anxious to see what specifics the governor has in mind.

And, as usual, we do have a few suggestions for the agenda.

First, we'll renew our plea that the Legislature find some way to return a larger share of coal severance tax revenues to coal counties for use in economic diversification projects. Life after coal must be considered as a critical issue for the entire state, not just in Eastern Kentucky.

Next, we'd like to see the General Assembly revise a 1990 law that restricted how cities could use revenues from local restaurant taxes.

The 1990 law effectively eliminated recreational projects from the list of things that could be funded from restaurant tax revenues and earmarked almost all those revenues for the development of tourism.

Recreation is a critical element in economic development, particularly in its relation to how small cities can attract new businesses.

Since the lion's share of restaurant taxes are paid by local people, it's only fair that they should see more of the benefits.

It's Thanksgiving. Time to be thankful.

If you're having trouble in these troubled times finding something to be thankful for, here's a list from which to choose:

—Thanks for the national recession. Now we can honestly say that Eastern Kentucky's economy is equal to that of the rest of the country.

—Thanks to the U.S. Army for not building their underground nerve-gas storage facility close to the New Madrid Fault.

—Thanks for the news exposing the singing group Milli Vanilli as lip-synching frauds. The group had boasted that their debut album was more of an impact on the music world than the debuts of such notables as the Beatles, Bob Dylan and Elvis.

—Thanks to the Arlington County, Virginia School Board for putting sex education in its place by announcing it would cut back some sex education classes, including the popular game, "Pin the Organ on the Body."

—Thanks to the Rockcastle (Kentucky) County schools for getting their educational priorities in order and dismissing classes so that students could go deer hunting.

—And finally, an extra special thanks to whoever dreamed up those plastic Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle "action figures" (accessories not included) just as we paid off the loan we needed to finance the now-obsolete HeMan collection.

And, if you're wondering why they call lifeless pieces of plastic "action figures," try stepping on one barefoot at six in the morning. Happy Thanksgiving.

The new access road to the Big Sandy Regional Airport is unofficially open to traffic, and boy is it a change for the better.

We say "unofficially" because a sign at the road's intersection with Route 3 warns drivers not to use the new access. We have learned, though, that the road may be used when access isn't blocked by a cable stretched across it, and that makes sense, since you can't get on the road when the cable is up.

Anyhow, the new road not only makes the trip to the airport shorter, the drive is pleasing to the eye and considerably easier on the nerves.

Congratulations to Times sports editor Ed Taylor, who was awarded a Gold Medal by the Bluegrass State Games committee for his coverage of the annual event. Ed took top honors among weekly newspapers in the judging.

The win comes as no surprise to us at the Times.

Ed's a one-man show when it comes to sports coverage and, as far as we're concerned, nobody does it better.

Editor:

As we approach this day of Thanksgiving, we have many things for which to be thankful.

From the crucible of Valley Forge and throughout this nation's history, many brave men and women have come forth and met the call of arms and colors. Many have paid the supreme sacrifice and many have become Gold Star mothers. Hundreds of thousands have been maimed and wounded both physically and mentally. Many thousands more have service-connected disabilities, as will others in the future.

No nation can fully repay the wartime veterans or those who have stood ready in time of peace to defend this great land, even now in "Operation Desert Shield." Yes, we can be thankful and not forget!

There are many Eastern Kentucky veterans who have to travel to Lexington or Huntington, West Va., to receive medical care at the Veterans Administration Medical Center. This too will change!

A new Veterans Administration Medical Center is soon to be located in Eastern Kentucky where our veterans will be able to receive medical attention closer to home. This center will reduce travel and make hospitalization easier for the veteran, spouse, and family.

How can we say THANKS? We can show our gratitude by contacting Representative Chris Perkins and Senator Wendell Ford and say, "We want this medical center to be located in Floyd County!" Floyd County would be of near proximity for other surrounding counties.

DON'T FORGET—CARE ENOUGH—WRITE TWO LETTERS—MAKE THAT CALL!

Editor:

I was greatly distressed to read that the animal shelter is in danger of being closed. Surely, with all the give away programs Floyd County has, money could be allocated for the animal shelters. It is very sad to see animals sick or mistreated or abandoned. Nothing can make me dislike a person more than someone who is unkind to animals. They are almost always nasty unpleasant people.

I have noticed a decrease in abandoned, stray animals in the past years, due, I am sure, due to the excellent work of the animal shelter. The next step is to educate people to have their cats and dogs spayed, when they don't want them bred. It is horrible to see a female dog or cat with a litter of kittens or puppies with no one obviously caring for them. Many people like the cute kittens and puppies but when they become adults they are abandoned. Shame on someone who does this.

Please people, support your animal shelter either by tax dollars, (a sensible, wise move) or by donations.

Peace: Not just the absence of conflict

by Rev. Timothy Jessen

What began as a somewhat anxious attempt to counter an organization known for hate and violence took fruition in our community last Sunday as a beautiful testimony to human brotherhood and peace. And it is peace that I want to talk about in this column, for we often have a wrong understanding of it.

We think of peace as "the absence of conflict," and conflict we seek to avoid at all costs. We think we will find peace in a difficult situation by withdrawing, refusing to take sides, and in the case of responding to the Klan march, by "not getting involved." After all, there might be violence, there might be a confrontation, it might get messy and put us in an uncomfortable position.

That is our view of "peace," in which we are more interested in "keeping" it than "making" it. Not so, the view of the Hebrews and the Bible: Peace in the Old Testament tradition is "shalom," which means wholeness, harmony, a blending together of differences in a mosaic that is unique, yet beautiful. "Shalom" is a positive presence, not just the absence of conflict. It is that kind of peace that has made America the land of brotherhood and sisterhood. Many diverse faiths, races, and backgrounds meld together as one, yet each maintains distinctive traditions and beliefs.

That is what we saw Sunday in the Brotherhood Day. It was not so much "against" something, but rather for something more precious and great that we often neglect and fail to see. For months, our community—and nation—have been facing one crisis after another: The Persian Gulf military buildup, the teacher's strike, the imprisonment of hostages, including our own Bader family, difficult and divisive election campaigns, and most recently, the disruption of community peace at Thanksgiving time by the threat of a Klan march. Three ministers who served as shepherd to hundreds in the Prestonsburg area and beyond have departed, another loss we feel.

Sunday's rally became exactly what it was intended to be, whether or not the Klan marched in our presence: a positive statement of what our community longs to be—in spite of our differences—a place where people of all races, backgrounds, political and religious beliefs can meet in harmony and reconciliation. With minimal planning, the response was phenomenal, indicating a deep yearning in our midst for a symbol of reconciliation, brotherhood, mutual understanding, and genuine peace.

If you thought you would avoid conflict by not attending, you did so. But you missed something far greater, the positive sense of "shalom" that is the gift of God to all people. What we experienced together was something intangible, difficult to describe, but definitely felt—a peace for which this community has been hungering and a sense of brotherhood which we desperately need.

Maybe the Klan did us a favor, by bringing us together in a positive way and giving us again a taste of what Thanksgiving is all about: a sense of brotherhood, peace, and harmony in a land of amazing diversity and remarkable strength.

I'm here. It's actually happened. After a 29-hour flight, counting layovers, I arrived in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, on Wednesday, November 7, 1990. The plane ride itself was quite an experience. We traveled in a huge military aircraft called a C5B. Not bad as military flights go, but non-comparable to commercial airlines.

We had about a three-hour layover in Westover, Mass. Thanks to the Red Cross, the surrounding community and an Air Force Reserve unit, it was quite pleasant. They had everything we could possibly ask for there—cots, TV, volleyball, food, books, sundries, showers—all for free.

The next stop was in Spain. The wait there was considerably longer, about 6 1/2 hours. They also had all the amenities of home at the waiting area, including a small postexchange where we were able to purchase forgotten items and post cards to send home.

From Spain we traveled directly to Saudi Arabia, refueling once in flight. When we stepped off the plane, reality smacked us in the face. After the bitter cold weather in Massachusetts and pleasant but rainy weather in Spain, the heat and sunshine was quite a change. I had forgotten to dig out my sunglasses before departing and my eyes began watering considerably as I tried to squint through the sunshine.

When we were escorted to the waiting area, a very large Saudi tent, we had to trudge through about six inches of very fine sand. Trying to cope with the heat, the jet lag and breathing in dust was rather overwhelming. Then we were given bags of water, compliments of the Royal family. It was awful—like drinking warm salt water. I thought, if this what we have to put up with, I won't be able to handle it.

We received word about an hour later that the site we were moving to was a hard tack with a roof and electricity. Everyone said, "Great, a building." Wrong. We are in a temporary holding facility called "the port." We are literally on a pier staying in what resembles a very large carport. There are four other units in our "building" and about 2000 troops total occupy this pier. There are two other piers and I have no idea how many troops are there.

We are presently looking for a more permanent site, but until then, we continue to sleep in cots and live out of duffle bags. The Saudis contract out to cater our breakfast and dinner meals, but we eat Army rations for lunch. We also have this little truck that comes around and drops off danishes, bananas and oranges, Pepsi and fruit drinks. I mostly eat the stuff from the little truck and some Ramen Noodles I brought from home. I can't bring myself to eat the Saudi version of American cuisine. I've gone through the chow line twice and each time I've gotten a couple of bites and thrown it away. Everything smells so different...The water has gotten better though, so has the temperature. It's actually quite pleasant. Since we are on the water, we have a continual breeze, sometimes rather strong, and it only gets up to about 90 degrees. I'd love to sun bathe if I could get away with it.

The only really bad part, so far, is the latrines, the showers and the noise. The lack of privacy is a little annoying, but this is the Army, so I shouldn't expect anything different, I guess.

Today is Saturday, November 10. They say the mail is really slow so I don't know when this will make it into print—I hope before Thanksgiving. The president is supposed to be here then. Maybe I'll get to meet him. I doubt it though.

God bless everyone and I hope to be back safe and sound. The thought of being back soon is a fleeting one. We hear that we could possibly be here a year now.

Thanksgivings

'Tis the season to pause and ponder our blessings. Thanksgiving is a celebration of all that seems right with the world—our humanity, our compassion, our courage and our dignity.

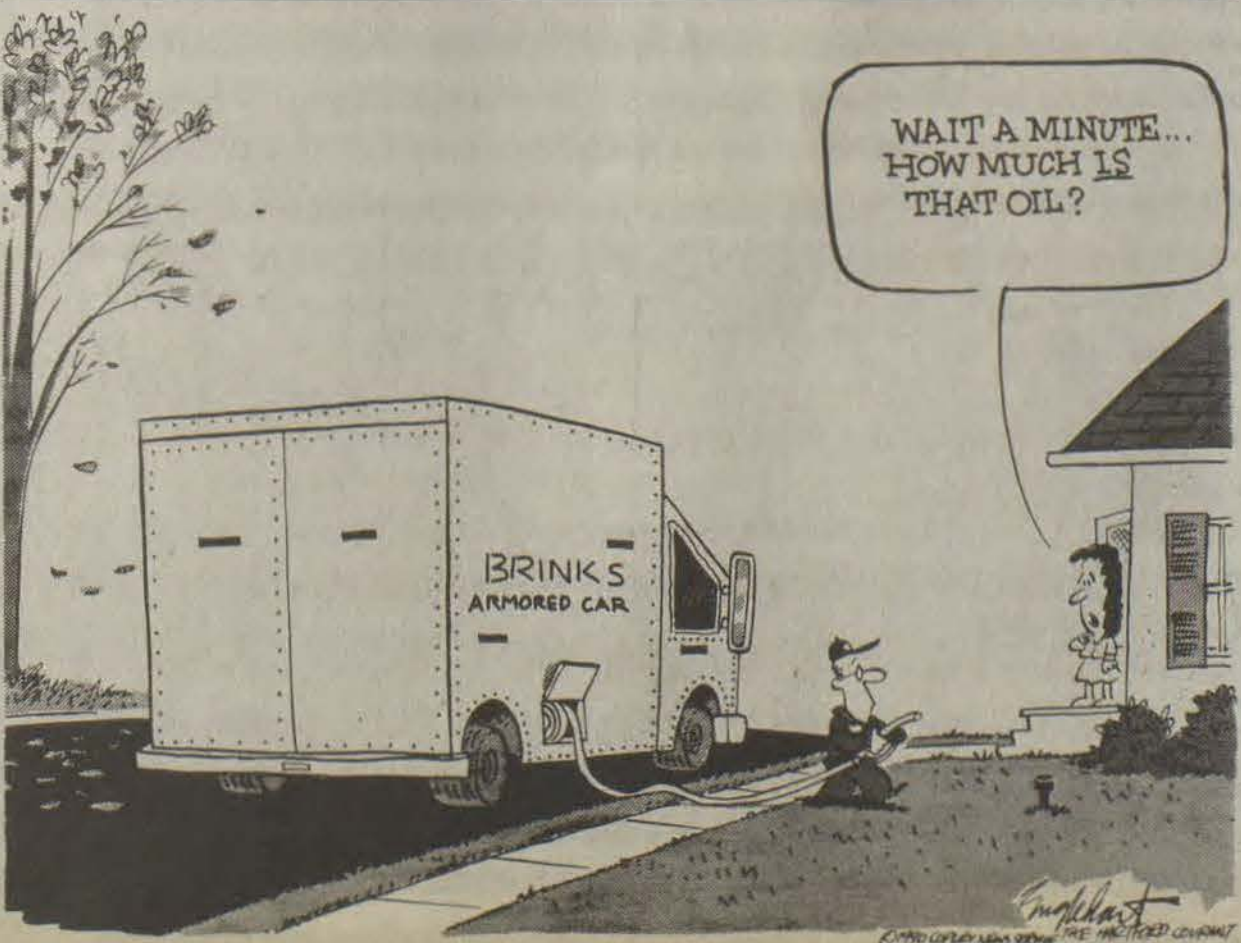

The response of this community to the actions of the Ku Klux Klan is an example of those positive values. The Klan hoped to find potential recruits for their program of hatred and bias in Eastern Kentucky. They were completely disappointed. Instead of responding to their invitation to prejudice, Floyd County gathered in a spirit of tolerance and affirmation of human dignity.

Sunday's Brotherhood rally, which promises to be an annual event, exhibited the maturity and responsibility of its participants, who collectively witnessed that it is better to love than to hate. What better way to deal with a threatened "invasion" by the Klan's advocates of racism than by reaffirming our dedication to what is best in America.

At the beginning of this holiday season, the troops in the Middle East are also prominent in our thoughts. Our hearts go out to the men and women displaced by the Gulf Crisis and to their families. Whether reservists unexpectedly called to active service in the last few months or members of the peacetime volunteer army, no one could have predicted in the last few months, when the Cold War ended and the Berlin Wall was reduced to chips being sold as souvenirs, that troops would be in danger of combat. We hope a peaceful solution will allow them to return home soon.

The same hope goes out to the hostages held by Saddam Hussein and their families. As we reflect on our blessings this week, the greatest thanks we could offer is for the hope that all Americans in peril would safely return home.

Holiday travelers Should buckle up

The holiday season is a popular time for travel. What could be more festive than celebrating the season and spending time with family and friends — especially those we see infrequently.

The National Safety Council reminds motorists that heavy traffic and severe weather conditions can make winter holidays a dangerous time to be on the roads.

All travelers are encouraged to buckle up, even for short trips around town. If the weather conditions are bad, be sure to reduce your speed and increase following distances. Drive defensively: always expect the unexpected from other drivers and don't drink and drive. Happy holidays!

Local educator joins conference

A local educator participated in the 80th Annual Convention of the National Council of Teachers of English in Atlanta November 16-21.

Carol Stumbo of Wheelwright High School participated in two panel presentations, Student's Writing, Teaching and Learning: Cases from the Bread Loaf Writing Grants Program on November 21 and Connected Writing Environments on November 17. Her topics included writing projects, largely telecommunication, that she has been involved in with her students at Wheelwright High School.

Some 5,000 teachers and supervisors of elementary and secondary school English, college faculty in English and rhetoric, and teacher educators from all parts of the United States and Canada attended this year's NCTE convention. On the agenda for the meeting were over 200 concurrent sessions and workshops focusing on all aspects of the teaching of English, talks by well-known educators and authors, exhibits of new teaching materials, sessions of working committees, and business meetings.

The National Council of Teachers of English is a professional organization made up of more than 100,000 teachers and supervisors of English at all levels of education. Its aim is to improve the teaching of English and language arts in the nation's schools and colleges. NCTE conducts national meetings and conferences, publishes journals and professional books on problems and issues in the teaching of English, and provides other teaching aides. The Council's task groups carry out a variety of projects to enhance the teaching of English.

Martin Co. Coal is recognized

Martin County Coal Corporation has been honored by the Big Sandy Area Development District as the outstanding corporate citizen for 1990. The board of directors of the five-county district recently voted to present Martin County Coal with the "Corporate Citizen Award" at the 26th annual Governor's Industry Appreciation Luncheon in Louisville on November 13.

As a district winner, Martin County Coal is one of 15 eligible to be named the statewide Corporate Citizen of the Year by the Cabinet for Economic Development in Kentucky.

"In order to be a good corporate citizen, we believe in going above and beyond providing jobs," said Raymond Bradbury, president of involved in our communities to make them better places to live and work." Bradbury has been involved personally in several service organizations in eastern Kentucky, and many of MCCC's employees also are community leaders.

"Our commitment to the community has taken many forms including financial assistance, the use of equipment, manpower and volunteers," said Bradbury. The company has been a major contributor to regional projects in areas such as education, the environment and economic development. Martin County Deputy Judge-Executive Mike Cassidy said the company was nominated based on the 31 projects it has been involved with so far this year alone.

Martin County Coal Corp. is a subsidiary of A.T. Massey Coal Company. The Big Sandy Area Development District encompasses Martin, Pike, Floyd, Johnson and Magoffin counties.

Holiday plants

The bright red color of holiday holly berries and Jerusalem cherries is a great temptation to children. But while they look good enough to eat, consuming such plants could cause serious stomach problems or choking.

The National Safety Council suggests keeping these plants where children can't get at them.

Coal Mac, Rifle Coal honored

Barrett Frederick, left, accepts the Outstanding Reclamation Award for the Prestonsburg Regional Office on behalf of Coal Mac Inc. and Rifle Coal Company from Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet Secretary Carl H. Bradley during the awards banquet in Frankfort.

State names mountaintop reclamation outstanding

Coal Mac Inc. of Pikeville was recognized at the annual Governor's Conference on Environment for outstanding reclamation efforts on a mountain-top removal operation in Martin County. The awards banquet was held last month in Frankfort. Rifle Coal Company of West Liberty, contractor for the site, shared the award.

The methods used on this site served as a model of outstanding reclamation on steep slope areas, said Carl H. Bradley, Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet Secretary. Hollow fill construction techniques used here are impressive, Bradley said. The operator end-dumped material into the fills in distinct lifts to increase stability in the fill areas, and rock-lined, trapezoidal drains were installed throughout the permit area to minimize erosion. The postmining land use plan of wildlife habitat and forestland is also being developed. The site was planted with a mixture of grasses and trees to provide food and cover for the wild-

Columbia Gas Offers Help With Heating Costs

For people with financial struggles, the arrival of cold weather also marks the beginning of heating bill worries. But Columbia Gas of Kentucky is reminding payment troubled customers that help is indeed available. "We do not want anyone to be without natural gas to keep warm, and we want to urge customers in need of assistance to contact us for any assistance they might need in taking advantage of a variety of programs that are designed specifically to help meet their winter heating costs," says Columbia Gas President Richard J. Gordon.

Some of the plans available to customers include: HomeEnergy Assistance Program (HEAP): A federally funded program which pays a portion of eligible customers' heating bills. The income requirement is up to 110 percent of the federal poverty level. Emergency HEAP: A one-time payment of up to $300 to avoid utility shut-off, or to get disconnected service restored. WinterCare Energy Fund: A fund-of-last-resort, created from customer contributions—which Columbia's stockholders match $1 for every $2 received—and through a gas-purchase arrangement between Columbia and Citizens Energy Corp. The Community Action Agencies determine eligibility of applicants, who must first exhaust other forms of assistance. Information on all assistance programs is available at any local Columbia Gas office, Gordon said. "With the weather turning colder each day, now is the time to contact us. We can help."

Roberts appointed to state respiratory board

Ricky J. Roberts of Harold has been commissioned to the Kentucky Board of Respiratory Care by Governor Wallace G. Wilkinson.

Roberts, technical director of respiratory care at Highlands Regional Medical Center, joins the seven member state board as a representative of respiratory care practitioners. The board consists of two pulmonologists, four respiratory care practitioners and one citizen at large.

"This newly formed State Board of Respiratory Care was the result of the legislative passage of Senate bill number 136 which established statutory regulations for the practice of respiratory care. Previously Kentucky had not state regulatory board for this specialty.

"I am very glad that Governor Wilkinson appointed someone from Eastern Kentucky to serve on the board in a time when many important decisions concerning the future of respiratory therapy are going to be determined. I will be glad to take before the board any concerns or suggestions from other respiratory care personnel in our area," Roberts said.

Respiratory therapy is one of the fastest growing fields in Allied Healthcare (nearly 1300 personnel statewide), and especially in Eastern Kentucky where there is a high incidence of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, emphysema, and chronic bronchitis. Roberts added, "On an average day, Highlands Respiratory Department performs over-all (In-patient/Outpatient) approximately 100 respiratory treatments and 30 diagnostic procedures. With Dr. Ragu Sundaram, Board Certified Internal Medicine Specialist and pulmonologist as medical director of our department, we are able to provide the same comprehensive treatment as that offered in Lexington."

Roberts, whose term began October 12 and will expire October 1, 1993, said that one of his primary goals as a member of the Kentucky Board of Respiratory Care will be to press for the mandatory certification of all respiratory technicians statewide, and thereby enhance the quality of care available to all respiratory patients.

Frazier speaks at AARP meeting

Chalmer Frazier was the guest speaker at the Jenny Wiley Chapter No. 3528 American Association of Retired Persons' meeting held Friday evening, Nov. 15.

Frazier praised the AARP organization and the Jenny Wiley Chapter for the work being done. He reported on several activities that AARP was involved in and stressed the importance of members keeping informed on issues and consulting their congressmen when necessary.

He was especially concerned about the scare tactics of some organizations to get money from Social Security recipients to protect their Social Security benefits. He discussed the new federal budget and how it affects persons on Medicare.

Before the meeting began the group enjoyed an hour of food and fellowship at Highlands Regional Medical Center's cafeteria. After the meal, Dorothy Osborne called the meeting to order. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and the treasurer's report was read.

Mrs. Osborne distributed literature regarding preparedness during and after an earthquake. She recounted the many programs and the community activities the chapter had been involved in during the past year.

She also presented certificates of appreciation to those who had assisted her during the past year.

New officers were installed in the following offices: president, Sina Blanton; first vice-president, Gladys Allen; secretary, Shirley Callihan; treasurer, James E. Goble.

Those attending were the following members and guests: James E. and Marie Goble, Dorothy Osborne, Matilda Johnson, Toots Parsley, Orville and Gladys Cooley, Hager White, Jack Freed, Chalmer Frazier, Lucy Regan, William and Shirley Callihan, Russell and Sarah Laven, Mable Donahoe, Fannie Reynolds, Margaret Ackerman, Maman Leslie, Pearl Robertson, Shirley and Nelva Lewis, Flem and Sina Blanton.

Pikeville computer dealer joins ranks of independents taking franchise route

Computer Management Systems, a division of Eastern Telephone Company, Inc. has joined Connecting Point of America. In doing so, the company becomes part of the largest computer organization in North America.

Independent dealers across the country are joining franchises to remain competitive in terms of price, product availability and technical support. Connecting Point, the fastest-growing franchisor in the industry, now has over 490 stores in all 50 states and Guam, all of which have converted from one-time independent dealer status.

"Becoming part of Connecting Point means we are joining a strong organization that is going to make us stronger," Darrell Maynard, president of Computer Management Systems, said. "We'll be able to offer our clientele better services, including better product availability and more competitive pricing, by having a larger organization behind us."

Maynard emphasized that the business will remain under local ownership and control. "It's important for our customers to know that because of the way Connecting Point structures its franchise agreements, we're not sacrificing our independence in any way," he said. "Instead, we're gaining a strong business partner. Connecting Point gives us tremendous support in every area."

Computer Management Systems will continue its concentration in accounting, desktop publishing, and networking. In addition, the store will continue to provide high levels of in-store and on-site service, and extensive training opportunities for computer users.

"We redefined franchising in our industry by offering a program geared to the needs of independent dealers who wanted to become more competitive," Connecting Point CEO Mark Shumate said. "Store owners are allowed a high degree of freedom, and they only pay us for those services they want. They can leave the franchise at any time they choose, so we have to earn our role as franchiser every day." Since a new management team took over the Denver, Colorado-based Connecting Point of America in 1985, the company's store count has grown from 26 to 491, a trend that is projected to continue.

Along with Today's Computer Business Centers (TCBC) and Entre Computer Centers, Connecting Point of America has been acquired by Intelligent Electronics, Inc. of Exton, Pennsylvania. These acquisitions form a company that is the largest computer organization in North America, with over 100 individual outlets in all 50 states, Canada, and Guam.

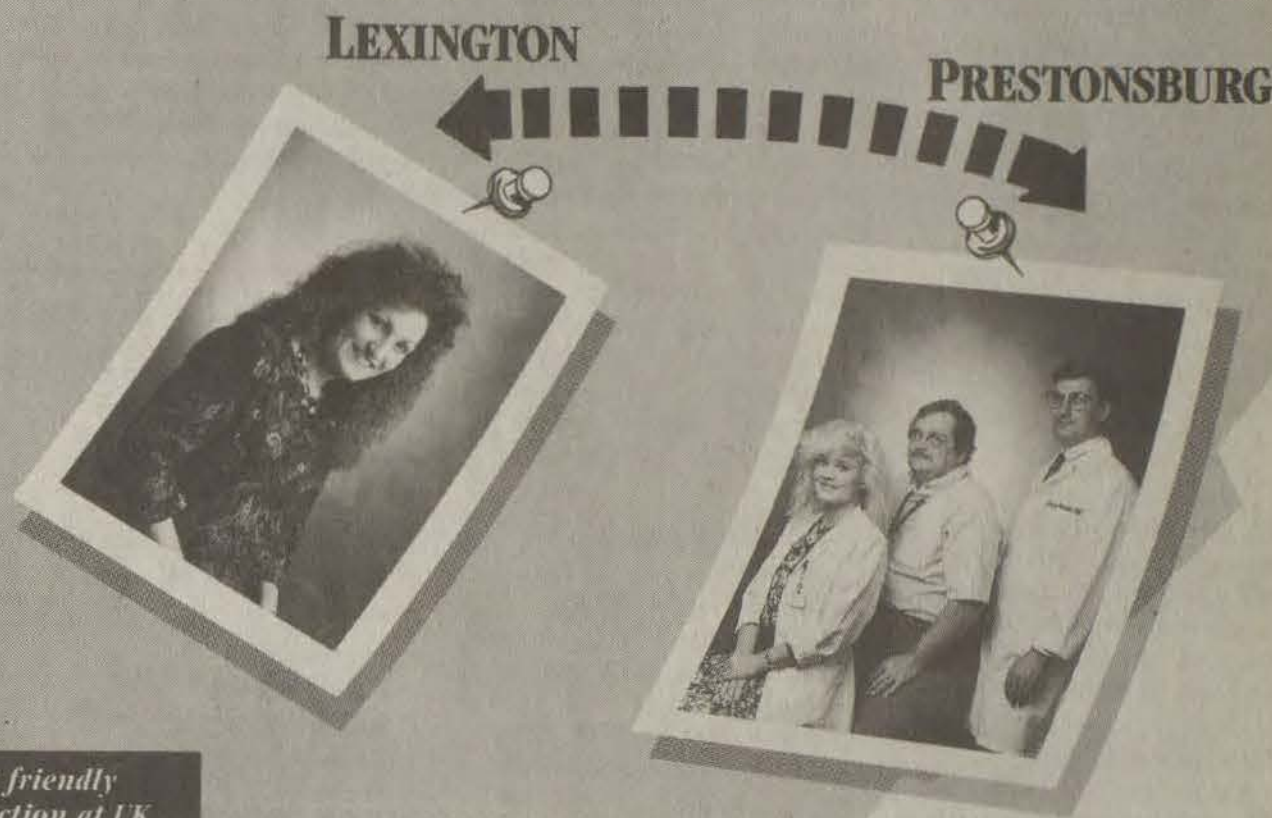

Wrap up holiday hazards

Colored gift wrappings add brilliance and spark to holiday festivities. However, these wrappings may release lead and other toxic metals when they are burned or chewed on by a child.

The National Safety Council suggests discarding wrappings as soon as gifts have been opened — without burning them.

Tanya Skeens, the friendly face of Care Connection at UK Medical Center, working in support of Highlands patients and staff.

A Friendly Face Where You Need It Most.

U.K. MEDICAL CENTER. The doctor says you have no choice. Suddenly you're on your way. You don't doubt the medical treatment. But the trip is all so bewildering. There's a serious health problem or the fear of one. Maybe an emergency. The 128-odd miles of Mountain Parkway stretches to eternity. The City, The maze of streets. The sprawling medical complex. Finding the right building. Parking. Corridors. Elevators. Strange faces. Paperwork. The waiting. Seems like the whole family came along. But now it only adds to the confusion. How long will it be? What if we have to stay overnight?

Every year, thousands of Eastern Kentuckians are referred to Lexington through Highlands and our family physicians. We're concerned about your healthcare and we're concerned about the stress and the outright hardship of the trip. We're concerned, too, about your return home for critical follow-up care. The transfer of records and reports. The loss of valuable time.

That's why we created Care Connection, a patient representative — a friendly face — from Highlands at UK Medical Center. There to help you find your way. To help speed up the paperwork. To help ease the waiting and the worrying for patients and their families. To help physicians prepare for their patient's return.

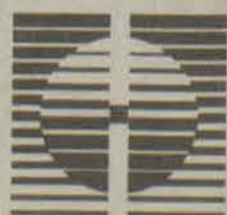

Care Connection is a community service at no charge. It's part of a growing healthcare network for the greater convenience, comfort and continuity of care of our patients and our physicians.

Your doctor will give you a Care Connection handbook with maps and other vital information about Lexington. Once you're there, Care Connection takes care of you.

Kentucky Baptists meet in Paducah

By the close of the Wednesday afternoon session of the annual meeting of the Kentucky Baptist Convention in Paducah, 2255 of an anticipated 2500 messengers had registered to participate in the election of a president and deal with business and resolutions that affect the 783,000 members of the Southern Baptist religious denomination in Kentucky. An additional 260 visitors and guests registered with convention officials but unregistered attendees swelled the crowd to well over 3000. The annual meeting was held at Paducah's First Baptist Church, with an overflow crowd participating via satellite television from Immanuel Baptist Church in Paducah.

J. Robert White, pastor of First Baptist Church, was elected over C. Wyman Copass, Farmdale Baptist Church in Louisville, in the presidential election. C.C. Brasher, Briensburg Baptist Church was elected first vice president and Orville D. Hickey, Grays Baptist Church, Gray, was elected second vice president.

Re-elected were Doris Yeiser, Archivist, Kentucky Baptist Convention, secretary of the Convention and retired Louisville minister G. Allen west, assistant secretary.

Two controversial proposals, recommended by Convention president, Bill Messer, pastor of First Baptist Church, Ashland, and approved by the Convention Executive Board in emergency session before the beginning of the annual meeting were presented during business sessions held on Tuesday. In the first measure, Messer called for the creation of a special Convention committee to study current policies governing how the KBC receives and qualifies Cooperative Program funds. The Cooperative Program is the means by which Southern Baptists receive and distribute church contributions to denominational causes. The proposal was passed by a narrow margin.

The second proposal provided for the creation of an endowment fund to benefit the Baptist Joint Committee was, for many years, the only means by which the major Baptist denominations in the United States exercised a voice in secular politics on issues concerning separation of church and state. At the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention in New Orleans last June, messengers voted to cut approximately 63 percent from the committee's annual allocation and vest the cut cut funds in the SBC's own Christian Life Commission. The action was considered offensive by many politically moderate members of the denomination who sought to restore funding by other means.

Messer proposed money from KBC year-end funds be used to establish an endowment fund managed by the Kentucky Baptist Foundation. Another one-time gift would cover this year's KBC portion of Cooperative Program funding for the BJC. Church who wished to contribute to the endowment could do so; thereby providing financial resources without going through the cooperative program. The proposal was defeated by fewer than 100 votes.

Four resolutions were brought to the floor during business sessions. These included: a resolution on increased giving to the offering Southern Baptists use for foreign missions; a resolution against gambling; a resolution on human rights, dealing with the hostage crisis in the Middle East; and a resolution on appreciation, to First and Immanuel Baptist Churches for the contributions of their staff and members to the success of the 1990 convention.

Most of the Tuesday afternoon and evening and Wednesday morning and afternoon floor times were occupied by reports from the various agencies, institutions and committees of the Kentucky Baptist Convention; and with reports from the divisions of the KBC Executive Board. Also, inspirational messages were presented by Convention President Bill Messer, R. Keith Parks, president of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention,

C.C. Brasher, newly elected vice president of the Kentucky Baptist Convention, and Roy L. Honeycutt, president of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville.

Monday, November 12, at the annual Pastor's Conference, also held at First Baptist Church, Harold Skaggs, pastor of Cadiz Baptist Church, Cadiz, was elected to preside over the fraternal organization of Southern Baptist pastors in the state. Ron Mitchell, Bellview Baptist Church, Paducah, was the only nominee for vice president. Bill Forte, Rich Pond Baptist Church in Bowling Green, was the only nominee for secretary. Both were elected by acclamation.

Easter Seal Society places to in Nation

The National Easter Seal Society, meeting in Baltimore, announced last week that the Kentucky Society has once again placed in the top four of all Easter Seal Societies nationwide. Arthur E. Abshire of Lexington, president, accepted the award at the national annual meeting.

Since the inception six years ago of the National Performance awards, the Kentucky Society has ranked in the top four, and has ranked number one in two years.

The awards are based on 18 criteria, including fiscal management, quality and variety of programs, and ratio of administrative to program expenses.

In 1989, the Kentucky Society served 24,000 disabled children and adults through its programs in Ashland, Covington, Lexington, Louisville, Paducah, and Camp Kysoc.

Upon learning of the award, Executive Director Guion Miller said, "We are very grateful to have received this recognition for the sixth year." He continued, "it is the result of countless hours of volunteer and professional service from our board and staff, and the public's generosity."

Temperatures, Religion Affect Choice Of Food, Gifts Sent To Persian Gulf

Differences in the climate and religious practices will affect your choice of food gifts sent to family and friends in the Persian Gulf area, according to a food and nutrition specialist at the University of Kentucky.

The extremely high temperatures, time it takes packages to arrive, and different religious beliefs are among the factors to consider when choosing food gifts, said Fudeko Maruyama, an Extension specialist with the UK College of Agriculture.

"Extreme temperatures, ranging from 120 to 150 degrees Fahrenheit, can cause fat to separate in foods," Maruyama said. "Therefore, food gifts containing chocolate, cheese and peanut butter are not recommended. In addition, canned vegetables are susceptible to spoilage by bacteria that grow in hot temperatures. Canned fruit and fruit juices withstand hot temperatures better than vegetables and would be safe to send."

It generally takes two to four weeks for packages to arrive, she added. So choose foods that will retain their quality freshness and allow plenty of time for the gifts to reach the final destination.

Any form of alcoholic beverages and pork items are taboo because of religious beliefs in the Persian Gulf area, according to Maruyama.

Military officials recommend that home-baked foods be sent only to relatives and friends. For general giving, send commercial products.

Acceptable food gifts include individually wrapped hard candy or peanut brittle; cookies; canned fruits and juices; vacuum packed nuts; pretzels; dry cereal; seasoning packets; hot sauces or seasoning mustard; dried fruits; snack mixes made with dry cereal, nuts, pretzels and the like; dry beverage packets such as lemonade, presweetened Kool-Aid, flavored ice tea; jams and jellies.

Unacceptable food gifts include alcohol, carbonated beverages, products in aerosol cans or glass containers, and pork products.

Food gifts should be wrapped and packaged carefully to ensure safe arrival. Packing materials can include plastic bubble sheets, styrofoam or unflavored popcorn. "Packages weighing 70 pounds or less should be sent by first class mail to the APO address," Maruyama said. "Contact the post for information on mailing packages by direct mail." Recommended non-food gifts are disposable razors, eyedrops, shampoo, plastic storage boxes, sunblock, sunglasses, sun visors, crossword puzzles, small, portable games, writing materials; pens and sewing kits.

The Red Cross, church and civic organizations also accept gifts and donations for military personnel stationed in the Middle East.

Holiday gas prices increased

Thanksgiving holiday motorists will find the average price of self-serve regular unleaded gasoline up ten cents a gallon since the Labor Day weekend, AAA Blue Grace/Kentucky reported recently.

A survey conducted of 550 Lexington area service stations shows the average price of regular unleaded gasoline is $1.30 a gallon, with prices ranging from $1.26 to $1.39 a gallon. Full-serve regular averaged $1.56 a gallon with prices ranging from $1.26 to $1.79. Local gasoline price averages are slightly above these figures, ranging from $1.34 to $1.52 a gallon.

Gas prices in the state of Kentucky are somewhat lower than the national averages of $1.385 for self-serve regular unleaded and $1.57 for full-serve regular unleaded.

Nationally, 81 percent of stations will maintain normal operating hours over the holiday, with 31 percent remaining open 24 hours.

Gasoline supplies remain adequate to meet holiday travel needs, but AAA urges motorists to conserve fuel by observing posted speed limits, keeping their car properly maintained and packing to minimize weight in the trunk or on the roof rack.

Quotes and Quibbles

Coordinated by Sandra Robertson, PCC Director of Library Services

Confused

by Dr. Roger H. Goodwill, Assistant Professor of Biology

My high school graduating class just held a joint reunion with other graduating classes that ranged from 1955 to 1964. I was unable to attend this reunion, but did keep up on events through newspaper clippings forwarded to me by my father.

It was exciting to see pictures, read stories, and reminisce about days long gone. Times seemed simpler then. I'm not sure that they were, at least not for all Americans, but to an 18-year-old white boy whose biggest problem was finding a couple of bucks for the gas tank, they didn't seem all that bad.

Vietnam and civil rights were in the early stages and far removed, drugs were not a major problem, the sexual revolution was unknown, and the feminist movement hadn't yet begun. Our vices consisted of the occasional cigarette after school, a taste of alcohol lifted from our parent's liquor supply, and peering at an occasional Playboy magazine (for the articles, of course). It was a time when boys were boys and girls were girls and telling the difference wasn't a major problem regardless of the direction from which they were viewed.

The same can't be said about today. Today I worry, not only about my finances, but how Congress will balance the national budget, taxes, about the Middle East and the possibility of war, oil prices that continue to go up, the crime wave, the drug epidemic, AIDS, the destruction of the environment, the homeless, what's on the latest list of harmful foods, cancer, heart disease, the cost of health care, educational costs and quality, and whether or not I will be the next to be laid off. To top it all off, I am occasionally under the impression that a nicely shaped woman with well styled shoulder length hair is walking in front of me only to have her turn around and be sporting a full beard and mustache.

Life today is all so confusing, at least for this middle aged boy who graduated in 1962.

Using terms, girl, lady, and woman always manages to offend someone, and they all let me know it. I'm not sure whether to use the term Mrs., Miss or Ms. when addressing an individual of the opposite sex, and no matter which I choose it always seems to be wrong. It used to be simple—Mrs. referred to a married woman and Miss referred to an unmarried woman. Then Ms. cropped up and the trouble began. According to the dictionary Ms. was actually coined back in 1923 by combining Mrs. and Miss and was to be used when the marital status of a woman was unknown or unimportant. Using Ms. when the marital status was unknown makes sense. The trouble begins when you assume that marital status is unimportant. What is important to one woman is not important to another. Lately, I've just been using the catch-all "hey you."

Writing is especially difficult. When writing a business letter, I can't use the salutation Dear Sir for fear of offending, so I usually write Dear Sir/Madam. But I'm not sure that's correct either. Pronouns are especially difficult to use since all the singular ones fall into either masculine or feminine camps. The result is having to write everything in he/she, him/her terminology. If used more than once or at most twice, these terms can become very grating for the reader. We really need a nonsexist pronoun. Maybe those individuals who thought up the term Ms. could come up with one.

I also have a difficult time with doors. I can't seem to get doors right. Do you hold it open for a member of the opposite sex (I couldn't decide whether or not to use the term woman or lady and this seemed the best way out) or not? Half of the time the answer is yes and the other half it's no. I think it depends on age. Younger ladies/women/girls expect to open the door themselves unless their hands are full and then its nice to have the door opened for you regardless of sex; and older ladies/women (I won't say girls here—see I'm learning) expect the courtesy. However, like most rules, there are exceptions. I have to remember that the current feminist movement was started by women in and around my age group and they seem to like opening doors themselves.

Now, I don't set out to purposely offend people and I am more than happy to speak and act in a manner that others find acceptable, but I almost never seem to get it right. Half of the women want it one way, the other half another. It would be nice if, in addition to wearing shirts with various slogans, the female gender would express, somewhere on their person, their preferences for such things as title (Mrs./Miss/Ms.), general reference (lady/woman/girl/gal), and door (opener, nonopener). This would at least give me a fighting chance.

Clothing! Did someone mention clothing. Today knees and thighs peak out from beneath subtle and not so subtle tears that slowly inch their way upward towards the derriere and crotch. A bum you say? No, just fashionable jeans worn by both sexes in public. The greater the tear and the higher on the leg it occurs, the greater the fashion. Clothes my mother used to throw out are now high priced boutique items. I no longer know whether to complement someone on their fashionable attire or give them a few dollars for a meal.

Thirty years ago one's sex could be identified by clothes alone. Now women wear men's work clothes, business clothes—tie and all, and even men's underwear. I don't know whether to check my son's or my daughter's closet for my missing clothes. Half the time when putting away the laundry, my children put my underwear in my wife's dresser.

Men aren't much better. It's true they haven't taken to women's clothes, that is, if you don't count the panty hose worn by Joe Namath while playing for the Jets, but men are sporting earrings and necklaces. My son tells me an earring in one ear is tough, but an earring in each is wimpy.

Hair spray, curlers, permanents, and beauty salons are all part of the macho scene. I wonder what ever happened to the Marlboro Man. He's probably sitting under a hair dryer right next to you at your local salon. How do barbers stay in business today? Maybe it's a dying profession, and as soon as some of us middle-aged guys die off, barbering will become an extinct profession.

It's no wonder I'm confused. My mother used to say boys will be boys and girls will be girls, but I'm not so sure any more. My daughter's sociology teacher tells her that times change and not everyone changes with it. Maybe that's the problem. We all change at different rates and so the rest of the world seems out of sync. It would seem that the best advice would be not to take offense where none is intended.

The Goodin Brothers of Lebanon Oak Flooring Co. are accustomed to standing on solid ground. That's why they've kept Blue Cross and Blue Shield since 1953.

A lumber company has stood on this site since the 1890s. Lebanon Oak Flooring Co. itself has been in business since 1919. Today, Charles and Robert Goodin still turn Kentucky Oak into nationally renowned hardwood floors. And they still keep the health insurance company they've kept for 37 years—Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky.

"We take a paternalistic outlook toward our people. We want to take care of them. We want the best."

Sure, the Goodins have talked to other insurers in the past. Some companies have offered them lower rates than Blue Cross and Blue Shield. But Lebanon Oak Flooring keeps coming back.

"You can take your Blue Cross card and go to any doctor you want, anywhere you want."

At one time, there were 13 companies producing hardwood floors in Kentucky. Today, there are only two. Lebanon Oak survived by offering the highest quality products at fair prices.

The same is true for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky. Health companies have come and gone. But year in, year out, none have been able to match the quality, accessibility and service offered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield for over 50 years.

We're honored to have been the Lebanon Oak Flooring Company's health insurance company for 37 years. We'd be honored to work with your company for the next 37. For more information, call us or your local Blue Cross and Blue Shield representative.

We'll put you on the ground floor of Kentucky's most popular health insurance company.

Many Celebrate Adoption Month, But Others Still Waiting In Kentucky

Adopted Americans, including more than 1,100 children of special circumstances who have been adopted in Kentucky in the past decade, celebrate November as National Adoption Awareness Month.

But for 250 Kentucky children, November is a time of waiting and hoping to celebrate year-round with new families who have yet to find them.

Linking those children with a stable, loving family environment is a 12-month-a-year effort by staff of the Special Needs Adoption Program (SNAP) of the Department for Social Services, Kentucky's state adoption agency.

Social Services Commissioner Larry Michalczyk said, "To a child, the family represents guidance, love, concern, discipline and self-worth. A child awaiting adoption has had those emotions interrupted and wants to have them restored in a permanent, caring home."

"For children with special needs, adoption can carry an even greater meaning: that, in spite of those needs, someone wants to share their lives."

Kentucky's SNAP children vary in their "needs."

"Some are simply older, no longer cute, cuddly babies," Michalczyk said. "Some are brothers and sisters, hoping to stay together in a new family."

"Some have physical, medical or emotional disabilities which will require that their new families be as they are—special."

"Yet, they all are alike with other children in one very important way," he said. "They need that permanent relationship of child-to-family, that security and trust and that knowledge that they are wanted and cared about."

Nancy Rawlings, director of local Social Services offices statewide, said that adoption itself is a process requiring patience and understanding.

"As much as we want to place these children in permanent homes, we do want people to realize that wanting to give a child a home is only the beginning," Rawlings said.

"Training and education of prospective adoptive parents, followed by screening through background checks and interviews, are a prelude to very careful matching of child and family. These things are vital," she said.

After adoptive placement, the Department for Social Services remains, for a while, a part of the "team" of family, child and caseworker to help with advice on how to make the adjustments of the new home go more smoothly.

Kentuckians interested in more information on adoption and the SNAP program can contact any local office of the Department for Social Services or may call toll-free 1-800-432-9346.

Automation To Speed Kentucky's Child Support Collection Efforts

A $9.5 million dollar computer network is being installed to help Kentucky speed the process of tracking, monitoring and enforcing the state's more than 200,000 active child support cases.

Over the next nine months, the Kentucky Automated Support and Enforcement System (KASES) will be brought on line to enable child support staff to move cases through the system faster, keep a case-by-case electronic file and know, on a daily basis, what actions need to be taken.

Commissioner Mike Robinson, whose Department of Social Insurance oversees Kentucky's child support enforcement program, said KASES terminals will be placed in the Division of Child Support Enforcement in Frankfort, its 19 regional offices and in the local offices of approximately 103 contracting officials (county attorneys, commonwealth attorneys and special prosecutors).

"This system will increase a case worker's effectiveness and capability to handle a volume of cases in a timely fashion," Robinson said. "It will eliminate a great deal of paper work and should produce a significant increase in collections because cases can be updated and handled faster."

KASES went on line Nov. 1 in Frankfort and in Anderson, Henry, Shelby and Woodford counties. Seven more counties (Carroll, Franklin, Harrison, Oldham, Owen, Scott and Trimble) will be on line Dec. 1.

Child Support Enforcement division director Maxine Stricker said, "These first four counties were chosen to open the program due to the size of their case loads and proximity to the central staff offices in Frankfort."

"This way we can give the system a shakedown for equipment or other problems without having to waste time traveling very far," said Stricker.

Stricker said reaction to the possibility of immediate access to up-to-date information and communications in tracking and acting upon child support enforcement orders and payments has been very positive.

"The staff is excited about working on a system which will save them time, increase their productivity and ultimately help their clients."

"Of course, our goal of collecting the child support so Kentucky's children will live under financially-stable conditions will be more attainable with this system," added Stricker.

Seven-year cancer study to benefit Kentuckians' health

The Kentucky Department for Health Services has received a $512,000 federal grant to develop a detailed picture of three primary cancers in the state and then move to improve that picture.

Health Services Commissioner Carlos Hernandez, M.D., says that the seven-year effort—funded by the National Cancer Institute—to look at cervical, breast and lung cancer among Kentuckians will evolve in stages and will involve legislators, state health organizations and universities.

"Our first step will be to study the various statistics we have on cervical, breast and lung cancer in order to get a better handle on the extent of these diseases in the state," Hernandez said.

"For example, we know that a 36-county eastern Kentucky area has a high cervical cancer mortality rate," he said. "We could potentially find other similar problems in other parts of the state or in certain age groups."

"By bringing together all existing data, the study will add significantly to the body of knowledge concerning cancer in Kentucky."

The department will look at mortality rates, available cancer incidence data, a Kentucky behavioral risk factor survey and health department patient smoking, Pap test and breast self-examination data.

"That will lead to the next step: pulling together a group of experts to help us draw up a plan with solutions for any identified problem areas," Hernandez said.

Barbara E. Sonne, R.N., the agency's cancer program coordinator and the study's principal investigator, said the group will involve a broad cross-section of Kentucky general medicine and cancer specialists.

The study group will include representatives of the American Cancer Society, Markey Cancer Center at the University of Kentucky, Brown Cancer Center at the University of Louisville, Kentucky Medical Association, Kentucky Health Care Access Foundation, Kentucky Public Health Association and three members of the Kentucky General Assembly.

In addition, staff from the Markey

Cancer Center will provide data management consultation to the department as the information is analyzed and assist with intervention and evaluation.

"We expect that this consortium of interested professionals will look at the data analysis and assist us in drawing up a comprehensive plan that will target any problem areas we find," Sonnen said.

"The group will look at particular population areas that need to be addressed as well as the best way to reach these people with education and/or treatment."

Sonnen said that the department expects to have the data analysis completed within a year and the plan drawn up in the next two years.

Educated labor force first priority in Rural community development

Cheap land, labor and capital are no longer sufficient to entice business to locate in rural communities. Rural leaders must add a skilled labor force to their bill of fare.

"The rural renaissance of the late 1970s ended with the promise of economic prosperity to rural communities unfulfilled," said David Freshwater, main speaker at the University and State Government Responses to Rural Economic Challenges in the 1990s held in Lexington October 31. Freshwater is an agricultural economist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Corporations seeking cheaper land, labor and capital can transfer production offshore rather easily. But they can't necessarily find skilled workers to handle many of the tasks of modern business, Freshwater said.

"The business of business is changing and unless rural leaders understand what is necessary to entice business to their communities, they will fail, as will their communities," he said.

Already, rural communities are experiencing economic problems because they did not anticipate the changing context of business.

"During the 1980s, growth in the nation was concentrated in urban areas on the two coasts, while rural areas and the center of the country were stagnant at best," he said.

Rural economies were hit hard by declining prices of raw material, strong foreign competition and the changing international economic order. Core rural industries lost markets, traditional skills of rural workers became superfluous and local governments faced increased responsibilities and reduced resources, he said.

"Clearly, what we need is an educational program that gives rural communities the boost they need to attract industries that provide jobs and a tax base," he said.

Freshwater said that "the New Federalism," which places the burden of paying for social programs and services onto local governments, demands that rural communities act soon to augment their economies.

"In the short term, disadvantaged communities may need some sort of equalization assistance to improve human capital, social services and the basic infrastructure necessary for development," he said.

Because development will upset the established social order, he said, rural communities may be conflict ridden—at least in the short term.

"Community conflict, regardless of the subject, is really about who has the authority to make decisions. When outsiders come in, decision-making shifts can cause social conflicts to become rancorous," he said.

A third trend affecting rural communities in their quest for economic parity with urban communities is a projected labor shortage in the United States by the turn of the century, Freshwater said.

"Rural areas are one segment of the country where we know there is widespread underemployment of the labor force. Rural leaders will need to make sure these underemployed persons have the skills necessary to take advantage of these opportunities," he said.

Kentucky grocery bag manufacturer Introduces 100 per cent recycled product

Look on the end of most paper bags and you'll find some kind of slogan that the bag is made "in part from recycled fibers."

Until recently, the word was that it wasn't possible to make a paper bag completely from recycled fibers.

Now—without much failure—comes the impossible: a grocery bag made from 100 per cent recycled fiber. It may be the most significant innovation of the decade.

It's from the Duro Bag Manufacturing Co. of Covington, and is the only grocery bag now on the market made from 100 per cent recycled fiber.

To get to the market, however, required some heavy duty research into a persistent question within the industry—whether bags made from 100 per cent recycled paper stock would prove as strong as bags made from virgin, or at least part-virgin fibers.

Many felt the bags would not prove strong enough.

Enter Menominee Paper Co., which already had the technology to make a similar paper from 100 per cent recycled fiber but had not applied it to stock for grocery bags until requested to do so by Duro.

Now, more than 100 million bags into the marketing of a 100 per cent recycled grocery sack, a Duro spokesman says the company has not encountered a single such failure and does not expect to encounter such a problem.

Duro fabricates—the technical word is "converts"—bags from paper made by other firms. It does not mill its own paper.

The paper used in the manufacture of the new bags is made from old corrugated containers gathered from grocery stores, industrial users and other sources, as well as some double-lined kraft paper clippings and carrier cartons. All would have gone to landfills if it had not been repurchased by the mills. In theory, at least, all such bags and boxes can be utilized in the remanufacture of paper for more bags and boxes.

The innovation is not likely to be one of those ideas that are introduced and then abandoned. Duro is too big a firm for that.

Founded in 1953 and based in Ludlow, Duro is the seventh-largest privately owned company in the Greater Cincinnati area. It is the second largest manufacturer of grocery sacks and bags in the United States, and employs some 2,000 persons in its eight U.S. plants, 740 of them in the two Northern Kentucky plants.

The bags are now being used by some Kentucky stores, he said.

Overall, some of Duro's biggest customers include the Kroger Co. and Topco, a Chicago-based buying group.

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL — OFF THE DEEP END

The 1990 football season is slowly drawing to a close and basketball season is fast approaching. Still there remains some baseball news around the country.

The big ordeal for the Major League baseball clubs owners and general managers is to decide what to do with their potential free agents. Some are making ridiculous demands on their present clubs. I know of no other player that is being more ridiculous or more demanding than Cincinnati's Tom Browning. So, he had a 15-9 record. So, he led the Reds in victories. So what! Browning does not deserve the kind of contract for which he is asking — a guaranteed five year contract worth over $5 million. That is the most ridiculous demand I have heard. Browning should feel fortunate that the Reds even want to keep him. He certainly wasn't impressive during the latter part of the season when the Reds needed him most. And besides that, five innings was all he could go. It took Dibble and Myers to keep the other teams at bay to record the win for the southpaw.

Let Browning go to San Francisco, Los Angeles or Chicago if they are foolish enough to offer him such a deal. I sure hope the Reds will not soften their stance to sign Browning, but the things that Marge Schott has done lately, it would not surprise me if she changed her mind.

If there are two pitchers that deserve a raise and a long term contract, it is Rob Dibble and Randy Myers. Give them more money! They are young, strong and pitch just for the love of the game.

Browning is through as a pitcher. If Browning signs a five year GUARANTEED contract with either the Reds or one of the three that are SUPPOSEDLY interested in him, baseball has gone off the deep end.

Another case in point is the re-newing of Tim Leary's contract for three years at a cost of $5.95 million. The Yankees did such a thing recently. I thought George was out of baseball. Look at his record for the just completed season — a 9-19 record, a 4.11 ERA, and a career record of 54-75. Forgive us Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale, Bob Gibson for making you pitch for peanuts. It is silly to pay such an enormous amount of money to a pitcher who, almost lost 20 games for you.

ENJOYED MCDOWELL PANORAMA

I enjoyed some good basketball at McDowell Saturday afternoon. Some of the top teams in the 15th Region were on hand for a Panorama hosted by the Lady Daredavils. Sheldon Clark looks every bit the number one choice in the region this year. However, I haven't seen the likes of Shelby Valley play yet; and they tell me Belfry is going to be a lot tougher than fans want to give them credit.

Three of our county schools came away with victories in the event. Betsy Layne looked good, winning over Johnson Central. Allen Central will be a team to reckon with come tournament time, and Wheelwright won over Johns Creek. Even though McDowell and Prestonsburg lost their games, they made a good impression and should have a very successful season. This season should be one of the best in Floyd County for some time. The teams are so evenly matched that it is hard to single out one team that will be there when the season ends.

Girls basketball is on the rise and all the good young players coming into the high school programs will put us right up there with the Pike, Johnson and Martin county teams in the next two years.

I hope all the fans will go and encourage the girls team this year and show their support for them. Let's get a radio station covering the games this year.

Until Friday, have a Happy Thanksgiving. We have a lot for which to be thankful. Be a good sport. Good sports are automatic winners!

Adams Middle School Captures Own Invitational Over Stumbo, 54-36

The Adams Middle School Blackcats captured their own First Annual Invitational Basketball Tournament Friday night with a convincing 54-36 win over the John M. Stumbo Mustangs at the Adams school gym.

Stumbo, losers of just one game going into the tournament, experienced some cold shooting in the opening minutes of the game as Adams raced out to a 7-0 lead. The Mustangs failed to do what they had been doing all season and that's run the court. John M. had the open shots but they did not fall off the break.

The Blackcats, a team to be reckoned with in the county, looked like the team that everyone expected them to be. While no one player stood out, the Blackcats got some balanced scoring from seven different players in taking the championship game. Thomas Ratliff led the attack with 13 points. Ryan Ortega tossed in nine and Robbie Risner, off the bench, tallied eight. Risner and "T" Tom Slone came into the game and sparked a Blackcat run both in the third and fourth quarters. Larry Morris added seven points and both Jason Spurlock and Jason Spencer scored six each. Slone finished with five.

Adams held a 9-2 lead with 2:15 remaining in the first quarter until Stumbo hit three baskets to cut the lead to 9-8. Derrick Newsome, who had 19 points to lead Stumbo, scored on a short jumper. Chris Hamilton followed with a basket and Rocky Newsome intercepted a pass off the press for two points. Ratliff scored just before the buzzer to make it 11-8 at the first stop.

Jason Spencer hit a 12 footer and Ortega followed with a layup to move the Blackcats up 15-8 with 4:42 remaining in the half. Stevie Johnson scored on a 10 footer and Derrick Newsome tossed one in from the corner to cut the lead to three, 15-12.

Adams got baskets by Spencer, Risner and two freethrows by Morris to open up eight point lead, 20-12. Again the Mustangs cut the lead to three on a basket by Stevie Johnson and a three-point play by Rocky Newsome. Ratliff's two free throws made it 22-17 at the half.

Adams put the game farther out of the reach of the Mustangs with nine unanswered points starting the third quarter. Baskets by Slone, Ortega, Spurlock and Ratliff opened up a 31-17 lead. Derrick Newsome outscored Adams 10-3 to pull his team to within seven at the end of the third period.

Rocky Newsome and Joe Bryant fouled out early in the fourth quarter causing coach Paul David Tackett to go to his bench. Adams scored the last seven points of the game in winning 54-36.

Besides Newsome's 19, Steve Johnson added eight points and Rocky Newsome had five.

For Adams, Ratliff had 15 rebounds to go with his 13 points and Morris hauled down eight. Prestonsburg was the top free throw shooting team in the tournament hitting 21 or 30 attempts.

AMS Lady Blackcats Fall To Caney 39-33 Behind Thornsbury's 20

The Caney Lady Cardinals faced a good Adams Middle School girls basketball team in the championship game of the Adams Middle School Invitational tournament Friday night with the Lady Cards coming away with a 39-33 win. Kathy Thornsbury scored 20 points and Amy Gibson added 10 to lead Caney to victory.

The game was close throughout with Adams having several chances to close the gap even more. However, turnovers late in the fourth period prevented the Lady Blackcats from making their comeback. Trailing 36-30, Allison Allen hit a base line jumper to make it 36-31. With 2:16 showing on the clock, Jenny Morrison followed with a basket to cut it to three, 36-33. Caney missed on their trip down the court with Morrison pulling off a key rebound for the Lady Blackcats. However, on the trip up the floor, Jamie Clay lost the ball. Caney called a time out with 1:55 remaining and went into a mild stall, forcing Adams to foul. Caney was not in a bonus situation and had the ball out of bounds. With :46 seconds to go, Clay stole the ball but on the break away lost control, turning the ball over to Caney. Thornsbury was fouled out of the stall and hit one of two shots to make it 37-33. On the second missed shot, Caney rebounded the ball and was called for a walking violation. Morrison then missed an easy basket underneath with Caney rebounding the missed shot. Gibson was fouled and canned both freethrows as time ran out on the Lady Blackcats.

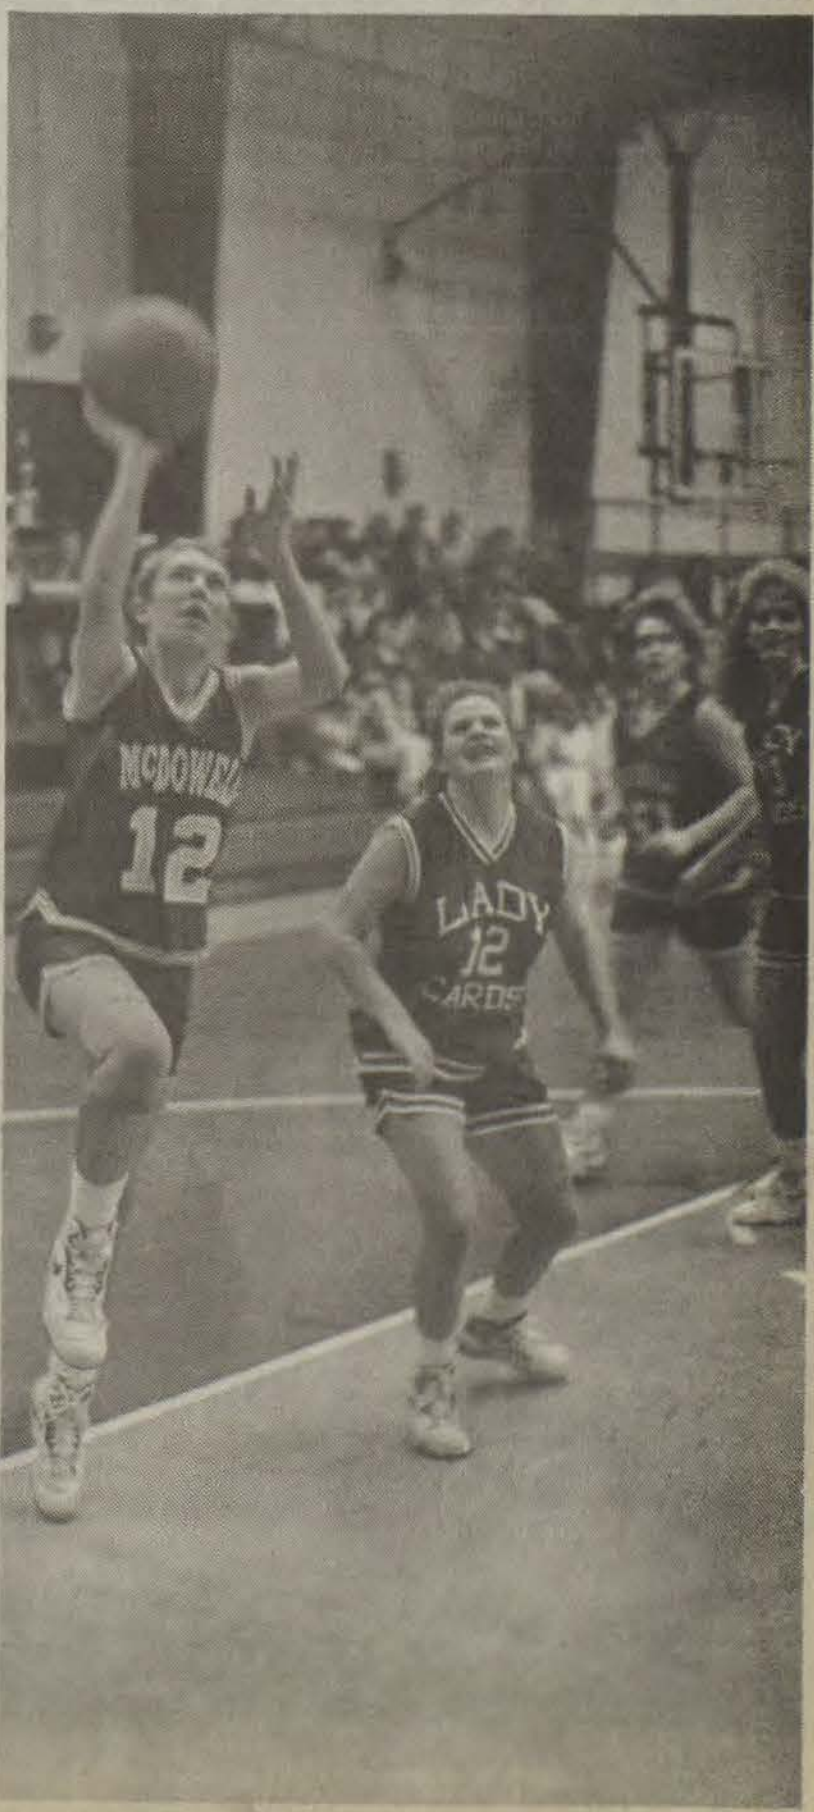

Clay, who had 18 points to lead the Lady Blackcats, started the scoring for Adams with a freethrow in the opening seconds of the game. Thornsbury then hit five straight points to give Caney a 5-1 lead. After a freethrow by Maria Hicks, Thornsbury hit again for a 7-2 lead. Baskets by Clay and Morrison made it 7-6 at the end of the first quarter.

Hicks scored a basket opening the second period to give Adams its first lead and Allen hit two shots from the charity stripe to make it 10-7. Caney tied the game on a freethrow by Stephanie Slone and a basket by Allison Maggard. The Lady Cardinals then ran off 9 unanswered points before Hicks hit with 2:17 to go in the half for a 18-12 halftime lead.

Clay went to war in the third period for the Lady Cats by scoring the first nine points for Adams. Buckets by Gibson and Thornsbury at the close of the quarter gave the Lady Cards a 30-25 lead.

Clay led Adams with 18 points and Morrison finished with six. Hicks hit for five points and Allen had three.

Kentucky State Champion Fairdale To Face Logan, W. Va In Panorama

If you like good high school basketball and you like the excitement of close games and a lot of scoring then the Sheldon Clark High School gym is where you want to be this Friday night after all the turkey is all gone.

Four games are on tap for this one as the Johnson Central Golden Eagles with 6'11" Jody Salisbury and Avery Fairchild take on the Prestonsburg Blackcats of coach Gordon Parido in the opening game at 4:30 p. m. The Blackcats will be led by Worthie McGuire and John Thomas Clark as the beginning of the basketball season rounds the final turn.

Sheldon Clark, who will be one of the top teams in the 15th Region this year, will entertain preseason favorite Belfry in game two. The Cardinals are expected to provide some stiff competition for area teams this year being led by Brian Pinson and J. R. Hammond. Belfry returns an array of talent, led by J.J. Hylton. Even with the loss of Paul Stafford to Williamson, the Pirates are expected to repeat as regional champions.

In game three, the "Dream Game", Kentucky state champions Fairdale will face one of, if not West Virginia's best in Logan. The two teams will square off at 7:15 p. m. Fairdale will be led by Jermaine Brown, leading candidate for "Mr. Basketball" in Kentucky. Also Maurice Morris and Carlos Turner will be in action for the state champions.

Paintsville, 57th District Champions, will face a good Betsy Layne team in a 8:45 scheduled start. Paintsville will be led by Todd Porter and a company of supporters. The Bobcats will hinge their game on Phillip King and Adam Gearheart.

If good solid high school basketball is your cup of tea, then be sure to check out the Sheldon Clark High School gym this Friday night. You will be glad you did. It should be a great night of basketball.

BUCKS AND GRUNT CALLS

A week ago this evening I was sitting in a treestand deep in the swamps of a plantation in South Carolina. Though the gun season was in full swing in South Carolina's low country, I was carrying my bow, bound and determined to spend the week hunting two gigantic bucks I had seen here back in August while hunting whitetails in velvet.

Some thirty deer or more had already passed under by stand, most of which were does and small bucks, when I spied one of the big boys. He was walking steadily about a hundred yards in front of me, his monstrous 10 point rack shining like a yellow halo in the fading orange sunlight. Just before he followed a doe into a thicket, I pulled my grunt call from inside of my jacket and gave a single grunt.

The buck froze and swung his head in my direction. When he looked back away from me, I gave another grunt and the buck wheeled and came walking toward me. A fenceline, overgrown with trees and thick vegetation, separated that old buck from me at a distance of about 40 yards. Predictably, he ambled to the cover of that fenceline and stopped, looking for the other buck that had invaded his domain. When his eye was hidden behind a tree, I gave one more grunt, this one very quiet. The thick, high racked ten point immediately jumped the fence and stopped standing broadside to me at a distance of about 40 yards. I pondered the situation for a millisecond: it was a long shot for a bow, but I had practiced diligently at 40 yards and felt confident that I could make the shot cleanly.

That millisecond was all the time he gave me, for before I had drawn the bow, the buck gave one great leap and disappeared into the swamp's tangled vegetation off to my left.

Two days later, I repeated the sequence with a different buck from a different stand. Though this buck, a fully grown eight point with enough to rack to easily make the Pope and Young record book, responded almost angrily to my grunt call, I could entice him no closer than 60 yards to my stand.

On my last night in South Carolina, I moved my stand a bit closer to where I had last seen one of the two monster bucks. Though he didn't show that evening, I was nevertheless well rewarded. I spied a big cowhorn picking acorns on an oak flat about 75 yards in front of me. Though there were nine does under my stand at the time, I slipped the grunt call from my jacket and gave a single grunt. The does never looked up, but the buck swung his head my way and began walking toward me with a stiff-necked, stiff-legged gait. When he paused about 40 yards away, I gave another grunt and he immediately headed my way. The does all scattered, but the buck moved to within 20 yards of my stand and presented me with a broadside shot. My Beman Hunter carbon arrow fitted with Muzzy's 90 grain broadhead flew straight and true, and the 157 pound buck fell within 40 yards.

Though rarely used and little understood by many deer hunters, grunt calls are tools that can turn the odds in your favor. If you do not own one, you should get one. And then don't leave home without it.

David Hale, one half of the nationally known game call company, Knight and Hale game calls, developed on of the first grunt calls, and Knight and Hale's EZ-GRUNT-ER Plus remains one of the most popular and easy to use grunt calls in the country. Without question, Hale is one of the most experienced and most respected game callers in the America, and his knowledge of Whitetail vocalization is unsurpassed by anyone in the world. David taught me how to use a grunt call several years ago, and so I thought it only fitting to provide some of his thoughts on the use of a grunt call. Hale offers two keys to the successful use of a grunt call.

1. "The key to successful grunting is to call AFTER you have seen a buck. That way, you can gauge his reaction to the call, and that will then tell you when to grunt and when not to grunt." Most often, a single grunt will illicit some type of reaction from the buck. Blow only enough to keep him coming to you, and never blow the call when he is in close proximity to you because he will see you.

2. "Do not call too often, and do not give the buck more than he needs." In other words, if a single grunt will cause the buck to move back in your direction, there is no point in calling again. Calling too frequently will allow the buck to pinpoint your location, or simply spook the deer.

On occasion, you may want to grunt even if you haven't seen a buck. Hopefully, a buck in the area will hear your call and will come looking for its source. In this instance, I like to give three grunts with about a three second pause between grunts. After grunting, watch the woods closely all around you for you never know where the buck will come from.

Grunt calls are, without question, one of the most useful tools a deer hunter can carry with him into the woods. Because they are most effective on big, dominant bucks around the time of the rut, you need to be using your grunt call right now and on through gun season.

Until next week, good hunting!

Auxier Wins Third In Row With 58-51 Win Over Osborne

It has been quite awhile since an Auxier Hornet basketball team has won three games in a row. But the 1990 Hornets of coach Jerome Greathouse did just that with a 58-51 win over the Osborne Eagles Monday night. The win ran the Hornets record to 7-5 on the season. The difference in the game came at the freethrow line where Auxier shot 33 freethrows compared to Osborne's five. The Hornets connected on 24 of the 33 with Jason Burke getting 15 of the 25 in scoring a game high 37 points.

"We have certainly improved in our freethrow shooting lately," said Greathouse. "Overall, we looked good in the game."

Auxier held a 16-12 lead at the end of the first quarter with Burke and Ervin Osborne scoring six points each. Osborne finished the game with 13 points but played a good floor game in dishing off the basketball. Auxier held a 31-22 lead going into the locker room at halftime. Osborne picked up some ground in the third quarter as they made a run at the Hornets. Kevin Johnson, who led the Eagles in scoring with 18 points, scored 10 of his 18 in the third quarter to bring the Eagles back to within eight points of Auxier, 44-38.

In the fourth period, with four minutes to go, Johnson fouled out for Osborne. However, Don Tackett, a promising grade school player, scored eight points in the fourth quarter to try and rally his team. Kevin Slone hit two pressure freethrows for Auxier in the stanza to squelch any comeback attempt by the Eagles.

A. Hall scored 12 points for Osborne and Tackett added 10. "We were able to stay out of foul trouble against Osborne," stated Greathouse. "That is something we hadn't been able to do earlier. Catrell (Farler) played a good game for us. He went from the beginning to the end and stayed right in there for us. We're just glad to have won three in a row."

In the game, Osborne had 25 field goals to Auxier's 17. The Eagles hit only one of five freethrow attempts.

Bassin' with the Pros

WINNING TOURNAMENTS HASN'T ALWAYS BEEN EASY FOR THIS PRO

Today, Nashville, Tennessee angler Linda England makes winning national bass tournaments look easy, but she's the first to admit it hasn't always been that way.

"I fished my first professional tournament in March of 1977, on Toledo Bend Reservoir in Louisiana," explains England, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff, "and my first thought upon seeing all the other competitors was, 'kid, you're way in over your head.'"

"Toledo Bend was filled with standing timber in those days, and fishing there was a totally new experience for me. Coming from western Tennessee where the lakes are deep and clear, I'd never seen a lake with trees growing in it before."

On the first competition day, England's partner ran their boat into a sand bar, forcing them to wade into the water and push it free. On the second day, a sky blackening thunderstorm drenched them.

"I finished 51st, out of 168 entries," remembers the popular Johnson pro, "but I lost one bass that would have put me into the top 20. It lit a fire in me that's been burning ever since."

A fire that not only has been burning but flaming, it would seem, looking at England's tournament record since then. She's won seven national tournaments, two women's world championships and five angler-of-the-year titles. This year she won the top angler award in both of the ladies' professional tournament circuits, Bass 'N Gal and Lady Bass, the only time anyone has accomplished the feat.

"I've been fishing since I was a child," says England, who, despite her accomplishments, has no intention of slowing down.

"A friend and I fished for bass and catfish in a creek on a small farm. The farm owner wasn't able to fish but he loved to eat them, so we took it upon ourselves to catch fish for him."

"We had one cane pole and one casting rod, and we'd stalk the fields around the creek for grasshoppers to use as bait."

Today, England travels thousands of miles annually throughout the United States to compete in national tournaments and her garage is filled with the latest rods, reels and lures. She does radio and television programs, is in great demand as a seminar speaker, and has co-authored one fishing book.

She makes it all look easy, but she's the first to say it wasn't always that way.

McDOWELL PANORAMA

MCDOWELL HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS PANORAMA

Twelve teams gathered at the McDowell High School gym Saturday afternoon for a 15th Region Basketball Panorama. A good crowd gathered to get a sneak preview of what teams will be the strongest in the region this year. Sheldon Clark, Elkhorn City, Fleming-Neon were on hand to show their talent to all the fans. Locally, Betsy Layne, Allen Central and Wheelwright won over their respective teams while Prestonsburg and McDowell fell.

Christy Sexton of Jenkins won the Most Valuable Player trophy presented at the conclusion of the panorama. Game summaries are as follows:

PRESTONSBURG VS FLEMING-NEON

Three-time state bound Fleming-Neon Lady Pirates held off a good Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats team to post a 48-42 victory in the first game of the panorama. Melody Sturgill scored 18 points and Heather Watkins tossed in 13 for the Lady Pirates.

Kathy Slone led the Prestonsburg team in scoring with 26 points with 16 coming in the second half. Fleming-Neon led 24-11 at the end of the first 15 minutes of play. The Lady Cats came on in the second half and looked like a different team on both defense and offense. Slone scored the first two baskets of the second half for Prestonsburg to make the score 26-15 after a basket by Sannie Stewart. When Heather Whatco scored on a layup, Prestonsburg ran off eight straight points to make it 30-23. Slone scored six points in the run as she proved too quick for the Lady Pirates defense. Prestonsburg's defense caused the Lady Pirates to turn the ball over on four consecutive possessions. Melody Sturgill broke the drought with a basket at the 8:15 mark and 32-23 lead. A three-point play by Slone closed the lead to six. Melissa Bailey was an intimidating force under the basket for the Lady Blackcats with four blocked shots.

Raquel Cain and Stephanie Music scored four points for Prestonsburg while Carolyn Reffitt and Amy Reed (a three-pointer) each had three. Edwinna Hale had two points.

SHELDON CLARK VS MCDOWELL

The region's preseason number one team displayed the reason why they are number one. Sheldon Clark rolled to a 80-47 win over the McDowell Lady Devils in game two. The Lady Cardinals were awesome in their play as All-Stater and Miss Basketball candidate Ina Bowen scored 18 points, four baskets coming from 15 feet and beyond range. Angela Bailey added 16 points while Katina Preece scored 12. Mandy Horn scored 10 points and Linda Slone finished with eight. Cindy Horn had seven points while teammate Ann Bowen scored four. Jackie Harless finished with two.

Lorie Bryant led the Lady Devils with 19 points and Jenny Slone added 14. Debbie Fannin scored six points and Christy Pack added three. Christy Mullins and Shelby Howell tossed in two each.

Sheldon Clark took an early 15-2 lead as they ran off the first seven points before Bryant hit for two.

Bowen came down and connected on a 15 footer off the right side and Bailey followed with a move underneath on a pass from the top of the post by Bowen. Preece connected on a short base line jumper and Bowen added two in the middle.

The Lady Cardinals took a 42-23 halftime lead. The lead went to 76-35 late in the second half and the Lady Cards were never threatened.

BETSY LAYNE VS JOHNSON CENTRAL

Sheila Hall and Jamie Smith combined for 27 points to lead the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats to a 49-44 come from behind victory over the Lady Eagles of Johnson Central in game three. Hall finished with 14 points while Smith added 13.

The Lady Bobcats trailed 30-23 at the half. Things changed after the Lady Cats came out of the locker room. Whatever new coach Bill Newsome said at the intermission certainly worked as the Cats clawed their way not only back into the game but into the lead with a 15-0 blitz of the Lady Eagles. Smith scored on a basket underneath. A Lady Eagle turnover, a basket by Susan Conn made it 30-26 with 12:30 to go. A turnover, bucket by Hall made it 30-28. A missed basket, an offensive rebound basket by Hall tied the game at 30-30. Five second call on Johnson Central. Bucket by Smith. 32-30 Betsy Layne. Two more baskets by Smith and another by Hall and it was 38-30 before Susan Roberts scored on a layup. Nikki Webb hit two freethrows and Briana Boyd scored for a 42-31 lead.

Johnson Central made it 42-37 and closed to within four points 44-40 with 3:06 to go. Betsy Layne held on to win the panorama game 49-44.

Webb finished with six points for Betsy Layne and Boyd had five. Nancy Shepherd had five points also and Susan Conn scored four while Tina Rice had two.

Roberts led Johnson Central with 15 points. Castle added six and Williams five.

ALLEN CENTRAL VS PIKEVILLE

It was three-point time for the Lady Rebels of Allen Central as they connected on five trey's in defeating the Pikeville Lady Panthers 47-29 in the fourth contest of the afternoon. Darnella Bradley tossed in 12 points and Teresa Gibson added nine points, on three three-pointers. Gibson displayed her shooting touch from three point range that she had last season.

What was a rarity in the game was a four point play by Stacy "Mini" Moore when she hit a three pointer and was fouled on the shot. She connected on the freethrow to complete the four point play. Moore finished with eight points. Jenny Wiley had six points and Stacy Moore added five. Newcomer Angela Bentley scored three, a three pointer, while Jenny Yates and Rhonda Leedy, coming off knee surgery, tossed in two points each.

Allen Central opened up with a 13-0 lead on two baskets by Moore and a single bucket by both Wiley and "Mini" Moore. After Teresa Lockhart missed two freethrows, Gibson hit her first three-pointer and Wiley followed with another basket. The Lady Rebels extended the lead to 21-5 on a "zone buster" by Gibson. It was 24-12 at the half.

Allen Central got some good play out of the center position from Bradley who scored five straight points to open up a 31-18 lead. Moore hit her four point play to make it 37-20. A basket by Bostic and a freethrow by Lockhart made it 37-23 and then Allen Central ran off seven unanswered points to go up by 21, 44-23. Teresa Lockhart had 13 points to lead the Lady Eagles. Latonia Anderson scored six and Bostic finished with seven.

WHEELWRIGHT VS JOHNS CREEK

Becky Allen led a late Wheelwright Lady Trojan charge in the second half that earned them a 33-30 come from behind win over the Lady Bearcats of Johns Creek.

The Lady Trojans were down by four points with a minute remaining in the game when they scored eight straight points to take the lead for good. Allen had 13 points to lead Wheelwright. Stephanie Little added eight and Vicky Johnson also scored eight. Hall had four points in the game.

Pam Pinson scored 11 points to lead the Lady Bearcats. Stephanie McCray had nine points and Amber Bowman netted six.

ELKHORN CITY VS JENKINS

Panorama Most Valuable Player Christy Sexton hit a three-pointer with five seconds remaining in the game to give the Jenkins Lady Cavaliers a stunning 48-47 win over the Elkhorn City Lady Cougars in the final game of the evening. Just before Sexton's heroic shot, Julie Belcher had hit a three-pointer to send the Lady Cougars out in front 47-45 after trailing 45-44.

Sexton tossed in 27 points to lead the Lady Cavs in their win. Christy Smith added nine points and Christina Mullins had three.

Samantha Cook was the leading scorer for Elkhorn City with 15 points. Julie Belcher and Amber Francisco each scored eight.

Newsome Scores 15 As Stumbo Rolls Past Caney, 52-31

Derrick Newsome scored 15 points to lead the John M. Stumbo Mustangs to a 52-31 victory over the Caney Cardinals in the opening round of the Adams Middle School Invitational basketball tournament last week. Stevie Johnson added 11 points in the win for the Mustangs.

Both teams struggled in the first quarter as the Mustangs could not find the basket on the fast break as they missed several easy layups. OUTLOOK GOOD FOR GOOSE AND DUCK SEASONS

One the day when most folks sit down to a traditional turkey dinner complete with all the trimmings, many Kentucky sportsmen "flock" to blinds and waterways.

Thanksgiving Day (November 22) marks the beginning of the 1990-91 waterfowl season in Kentucky. For the first time, goose hunting and duck hunting opens on the same day. The early portion of the split season closes after November 25.

Last year, Canada geese invaded far Western Kentucky in record numbers and experts are predicting even greater quantities this year. Hunting in the Western Waterfowl Zone is forecast as "excellent."

Barring severe winter weather conditions, goose hunting in the Eastern Waterfowl zone is projected to again be "good" — much the same as last year. There are several regulation changes which affect waterfowl hunters this year.

First of all, the daily bag limit for Canada geese in the Eastern Waterfowl Zone has been reduced to one. The reduced limit is aimed at bolstering the Southern James Bay population of Canada geese which does not frequent far Western Kentucky.

Also, the daily bag for ducks may include no more than one female mallard or black duck. Previously, duck hunters could take one female mallard and one black duck.

Kentucky's Steel Shot Zone has been reshaped to include all of Henderson County. Steel shot is also required in Bracken and Oldham counties.

Goose hunting resumes statewide December 1 and extends through January 31, 1991. The Western Waterfowl Zone could possibly close earlier — if the harvest quota for Canada geese is reached prior to the scheduled closing date.

Fulton County will remain open for Canada goose hunting through February 4 — unless the Ballard Reporting Area harvest quota is reached prior to that date.

The second portion of the duck hunting season opens December 12 and closes after January 6, 1991.

Waterfowl seasons, limits, and guidelines are set within and must comply with parameters established by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Hunters are encouraged to obtain (and read carefully) a copy of the 1990-91 Kentucky Waterfowl Hunting Guide, which includes current regulations as well as exceptions to standard statewide guidelines. The guide is available at most locations where hunting and fishing licenses are sold.

CANADA GEESE — WHAT'S THE STORY?

Why is the limit on Canada geese lower in the Eastern Waterfowl Zone than it is in the Western Zone? What's the Mississippi Flyway? How are different populations of Canada's identified?

These and other questions are answered in HAPPY HUNTING GROUND magazine as the January '91 edition takes an in-depth look at Canada geese in Kentucky.

Also included in the January issue are interesting articles on the history of buffalo in Kentucky, the crappie situation at Barkley and Kentucky lakes, and plans for the restoration of river otters in the commonwealth.

HAPPY HUNTING GROUND magazine makes an excellent Christmas gift for the outdoor enthusiast on any shopping list. A one-year subscription costs only five dollars; a three-year subscription is just $14.00 — and includes an additional one-year subscription for a friend. Be sure to indicate on your order that the subscription is a "gift" and a card will be sent to the recipient.

For more information on HHG subscriptions, contact the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Division of Public Relations, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, KY 40601.

WINTER WATER SAFETY

Drowning and hypothermia have claimed the lives of more waterfowl hunters (and other sportsmen who use the water) than accidental gunshot wounds.

Most hunters use small, lightweight johnboats or canoes. Though these boats are highly versatile and easily transportable, they are not as stable as larger craft.

Here are some tips on how to avoid an unexpected dunking: Avoid large bodies of water during rough weather; don't overload your boat with passengers or equipment; minimize standing and moving about in the boat (this includes your dog); remain seated when shooting; know your boat and its capabilities.

All boaters are required by law to have on board a Coast Guard approved personal flotation device (life preserver) for each person in the craft. The key word is "all" — this regulation applies to hunters and fishermen as well as pleasure boaters. Float coats and flotation coveralls not only keep a person afloat, but will also provide some protection from hypothermia.

Hypothermia is the number one killer of outdoor sports enthusiasts. It's a dangerous condition that develops when the body loses heat faster than it can manufacture heat.

The most common symptom of hypothermia is uncontrollable shivering. Other symptoms may include slurred speech, incoherence, stumbling and drowsiness.

Most outdoorsmen relate hypothermia to sub-freezing temperatures, but most cases develop in 32-50 degree weather!

Here are some safeguards against hypothermia:

Stay dry. Wet clothes lose 90 percent of their insulating value; pay attention to the wind. Wind drives cold air under and through clothing; use clothing properly. Put on rain gear before you get wet. Put on warm clothes before you start to shiver; guard against exhaustion. Exhaustion reduces normal endurance; understand and respect the cold.

As water temperatures tumble to winter levels, remember 50 degree water is unbearably cold! In all likelihood, a person who falls into 50 degree water will be unable to stay afloat or swim to safety without a flotation device. Body movement can be severely impaired by a severe cold water shock to the system.

If you fall into the water while wearing a personal flotation device and can't get back to shore or back in the boat, you can delay hypothermia by assuming the HELP (Heat Escape Lessening Position). Cross your ankles, place your arms across your chest, draw your knees into your chest and lean back. The HELP position lessens the loss of body heat in cold water by 50 percent.

If you suspect someone may be suffering from hypothermia, get the victim out of the weather and strip off all of their wet clothing. Put the person into warm, dry clothing or a sleeping bag. Supply sweet, warm drinks. If the victim's condition is severe (semi-conscious or worse), put the patient in skin-to-skin contact with another person. Two "warmth donors" are even better. Start a campfire or otherwise build up heat in the immediate area.

As with all outdoors sports activities (especially hunting), there is NO place for alcohol. Alcohol can contribute to hypothermia as well as lead to accidents.

FISH AND WILDLIFE COMMISSION MEETING
The next meeting of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission is scheduled for December 3 and 4. Included among the items for discussion are the 1991 harvest seasons for deer, small game, upland game birds and furbearers. The meeting is open to the public and will be held at the department's central office on US 60 West, in Frankfort.

The Betsy Layne High School Majorettes competed at a DMA National Open Twirling Competition held at Millard High School, Saturday, November 3. The squad brought home two first place awards: one in the high school twirling division and the other in the Senior Dance Team division. These first place awards qualify them for the National Competition in Bolling Springs, North Carolina next August. Squad members are: top row, Galilea McKinney, Lorie Cordial (head majorette), Amanda King; bottom row Kim King, Dana Akers and Cristi McClanahan. The squad is sponsored by Sandy and Tammy Tackett.

Kentucky Star Signs With Western Ky

Darrin Horn, a 6-5 guard from powerful Tates Creek High School in Lexington, has signed to play his college basketball at Western Kentucky University.

"Darrin is an excellent athlete who has the ability to play both ends of the floor," commented new WKU head coach Ralph Willard. "He's a fine shooter who will fit into our style of play. And, he's an excellent student who will be an outstanding member of our University community."

Horn, an honorable mention All-Stater last year and a candidate for Kentucky's prestigious "Mr. Basketball" honors this time around, has started the past two seasons for Coach Nolan Barger's Commodores at Tates Creek. He was a Lexington All-City pick both years.

"Darrin has the potential to be our all-time, overall MVP for everything he does for the team," commented Coach Barger in the Lexington Herald-Leader's Tuesday (November 13) edition. It's just his overall approach and attitude, work habits and talents."

Last winter, as a junior, he helped lead the Creeker's to a 19-4 record and the number 10 ranking in the final polls with his 16 points per game. He led the team in field goal percentage (52 percent) and was selected as the squad's Most Valuable Player. An outstanding shooter, he also canned 81 percent of his free throws and he made good on 46 percent of his three-point attempts. He scored a career high 28 points on three occasions as a junior.

He earned berths on the Bluegrass Festival All-Star team and All-Tournament teams at the Laurel County Invitational and the Commodore 4 tournament.

Horn is the second outstanding prospect to take advantage of the November signing period to ink with Western Kentucky. Lorenzo Lockett, a 6-9, 215 pound power forward from Indian River Community College in Ft. Pierce, Fla., has also signed with the Hilltoppers.

FISHIN' TIPS FROM THE TRACKER PROS

Tommy Martin

Most anglers agree there is not a more exciting method for catching fish than with a top water lure. Bass, white bass, hybrids and stripers can be readily taken on surface lures from late spring through late fall. Any number of top water lures are effective. Chuggers, poppers, buzz baits and rat-like lures all work well. Early morning and late evening are choice periods for top water. As the sun goes down, switch to darker lures. Black is the #1 color for night fishing.

Don't set the hook too quickly with a top water lure. Baits like the Zara Spook are great for taking big bass. Wait a second until you feel the fish before striking back. Too often an angler jerks at the swirl, resulting in a missed strike.

Use a trailer hook on a buzz bait to get the short strikers.

Patton Takes First Place In Kentucky Wrestling Invitational

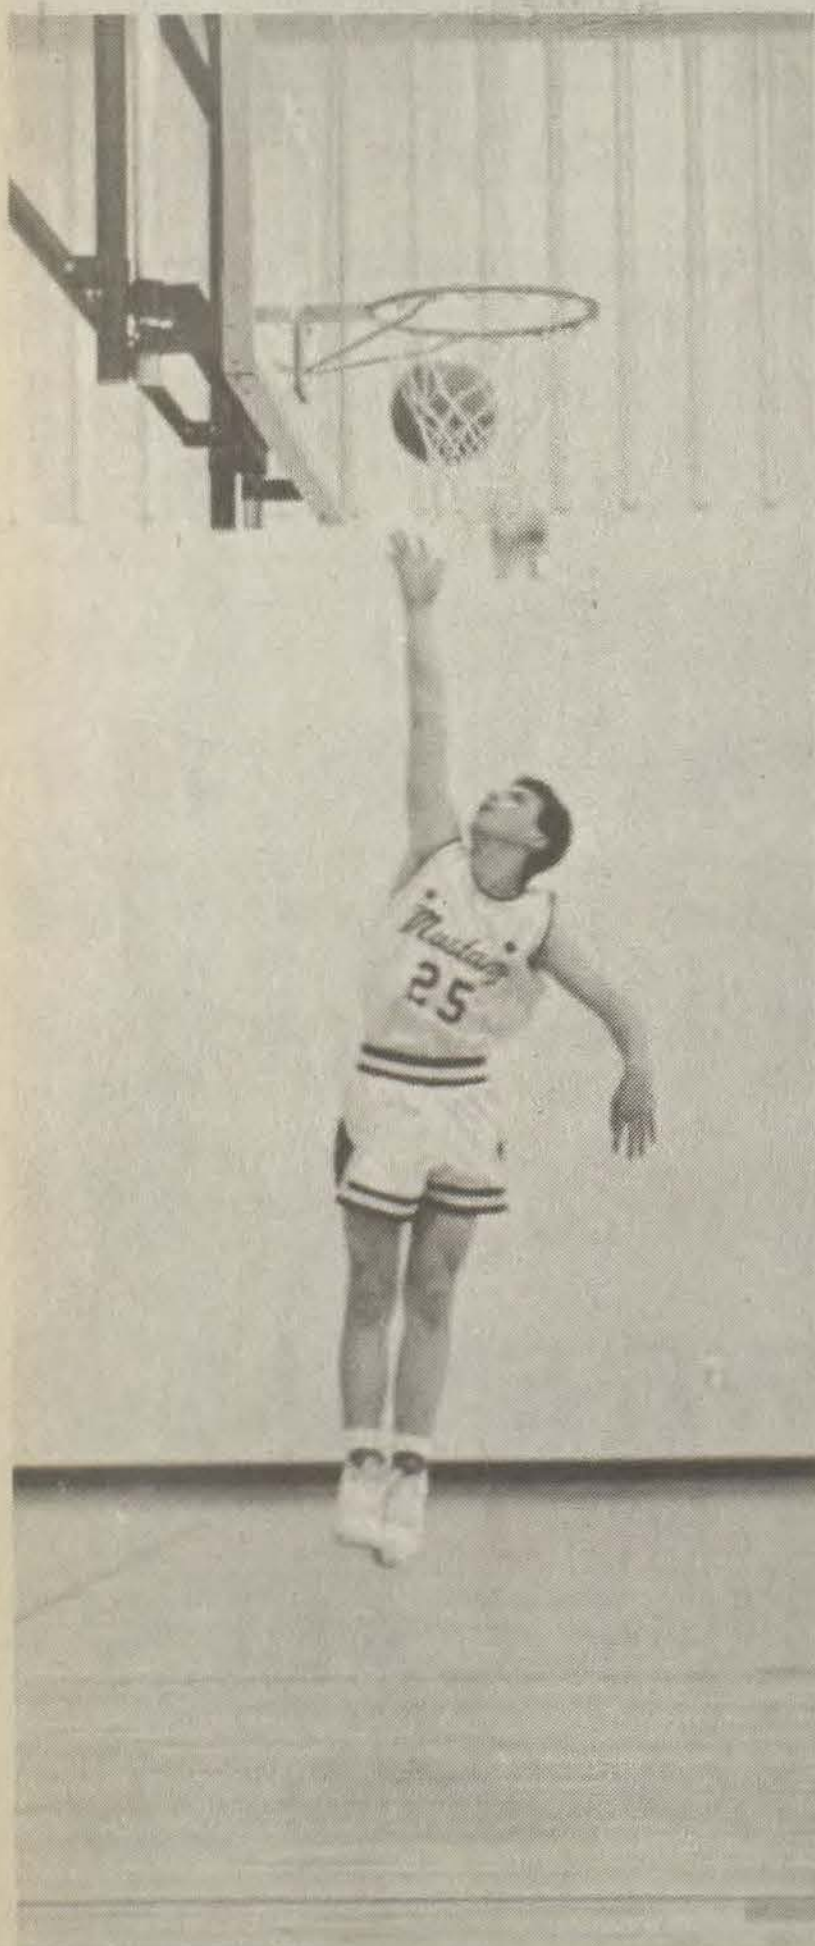

Kevin Patton, McDowell, and student at the Kentucky School for the Blind recently won first place in the Kentucky Wrestling Invitational that took place in Louisville. Teams from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio as well as Kentucky took part in the one day event.

Patton, who is has excelled in the sport of wrestling since being at KSB, posted a win in his first match that lasted only a minute and a half. Patton drew a first round bye. He won the tournament by default when his scheduled opponent had injured his leg.

"He was certainly mad that he did not get to wrestle any longer than he did," said his mother, Sharon Patton.

Patton also was voted the Outstanding Wrestler in the event. He wrestles in the 145 pound division and will be taking part in the All Jefferson County Invitational next. The match is scheduled for January. Patton then will be taking part in regional, district and county meets after that.

FISHIN' TIPS FROM THE TRACKER PROS

Sandy Dwyer

Throughout our country there is no more popular species for young and old alike than the bluegill. They are found in nearly every lake, pond or stream in America. They can be caught readily and provide excellent table fare. Often where you find bluegill, you will find similar species such as red-ear sunfish, warmouth, goggle eye, etc. All are fun to catch and good to eat.

There is no better bait for bluegill and sunfish than small red wigglers. Crickets probably rank a close second, along with a number of additional types of live bait.

Bluegill will bed in late spring, generally April or May, and may bed more than once a year. Look for dinner plate size indentations in a shallow, shaded bank. Stay just out of sight of the beds and use light spinning tackle for great fun.

Fishin' Tips are presented by America's #1 Fishing Boat

COLLEGE OUTLOOK

The Longhorns of Texas have been a surprise this season, coming off a 5-6 year in 1989 preceded by a poorer 4-7 record in 1988. Texas lost a 29-22 decision to Colorado earlier, but have come on stronger each week. The Longhorns played at TCU last Saturday, but Baylor and Texas A & M still lie ahead. The Bears walloped Texas 50-7 last season, and they will host the Longhorns Saturday. Baylor, tied by A & M, beaten by Houston, still has a good chance at the Cotton Bowl berth. And so does Texas A & M. This week we're picking Texas to knock Baylor out of the race and Texas A & M to hold the line with a win over TCU. Looking ahead, the Longhorns will nudge the Aggies in the finale next week.

Ole Miss and the Bulldogs of Mississippi State meet in their annual intrastate battle in Jackson Saturday. Mississippi has been another surprise team this year. Until their all-important meeting with Tennessee last week, the Rebs had lost only to Auburn, and were in the thick of the Southeastern Conference race. Mississippi is favored.

In another traditional game, Southern California and Notre Dame will close out their seasons Saturday in Los Angeles. The Trojans lost 28-24 last year and they are underdogs again.

In Big Ten finales Saturday, Iowa travels north to Minnesota. The Gophers stunned Iowa in Iowa City last year 43-7, and the Hawks would like to avenge their 1989 defeat. In Minneapolis, they will. The Ohio State Buckeyes are at home in a game that has always been an outstanding conclusion to the conference schedule — against Michigan. It'll be so close — Michigan.

Finally, On December 8, Army versus Navy. The Midshipmen hold a 42-41 series lead over the Cadets by virtue of a 19-17 upset win last year. Typical of a traditional series like this, anything can happen. We think that Army will tie the series at 42-41.

One of my husband's most treasured possessions is a 33 foot motor home. If someone ever gave him one of those "Home Sweet Home" plaques, he would likely mount it over the windshield rather than over the mantle at his house.

This vehicle has allowed him to be at "at home" from Alaska to the Florida Keys, from Maine to the Mexican border. Each part of the country has some special interest for him.

One of his most extended stays was in the summer of '88, surrounded by lakes and rivers in Manistee, Michigan. It was a beautiful and healthy atmosphere with just enough challenge to make it interesting.

Fishing was great in Manistee. The fish were abundant and hardy—and so were the mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes there were the largest I ever saw. Their little bodies bulged and, as they flitted about, their long legs dangled down like tiny bits of ribbon.

They were so healthy they seemed to have no fear and so they were easy to swat. If you didn't barricade them out with the screen door you would need a swat to swing both ways like a windshield wiper. But, of course, there was the screen door and you learned not to be careless with it. After four months in Manistee, Walter decided to come home to Kentucky for a while. It was October so he parked the motor home and locked it up. But after more than six weeks he got the wanderlust fever again and together we made a trip to Florida. By now it was November and the weather was cold in Kentucky. No insects were in evidence anywhere.

It was pleasant driving down Interstate 75, but a little way out of Palm Harbor I said, "Walter, I hate to tell you but one of those Manistee mosquitoes has hidden out in a drapery or somewhere and has come along with you."

There was no mistaking the oversized body and the long ribbon-like legs dangling down. And typical of his breed, he flitted right in our faces as though he had the strength of Samson.

The mosquitoes in Florida are no slouches. They have fame all their own for sheer number and size, but there isn't a mosquito in all of Florida that wouldn't have been impressed by this northern counterpart.

But, sad for insects, it was not to be. So strong and spontaneous is the impulse that, almost without thinking, I took one hard swat and slammed him against the wall. He was an easy target.

I lay back in the passenger seat and for a good while we drove along in silence. Then Walter asked, "Are you asleep?"

"No," I said, "I was just thinking what an adventurer your little stowaway has been." Over a period of seven weeks he had endured isolation and traveled more than 1,500 miles through seven states.

He had come so close to being in a whole new world and maybe to starting a brand new breed of mosquitoes. So close, only to be laid to rest in a Kleenex and buried in a small wastebasket in the motor home.

I decided he deserved at least a name and some mention so I took a small white card from the glove compartment and printed these words:

Manisquito
1988
Rest in Peace

Then I closed the liner in the wastebasket and laid the card on top. As I sat back again I said, "We'll not empty the wastebasket until we reach our destination."

I felt we owed him the few extra miles.

Elk Horn Coal Company:

A look back into Floyd County's Coal History

by Jeanette Knowles

The best coal in the United States—that's what Richard Broas thought of the coal he stumbled on in Elkhorn Creek in Pike County when he was there as a captain in the Union Army.

A prospector by training, Broas knew these washed up coal samples had to originate in a king-coal vein. In 1881, he returned to Kentucky, prospecting for the vein around Louisa but did not find what he was looking for.

Moving up the Big Sandy River to Johnson and Pike counties, Broas then entered Letcher County where he finally found the 'true Elkhorn' vein of coal on Joe's Branch. The year was 1883, and the site was near to where the largest and one of the finest company towns in Eastern Kentucky would eventually be built—Jenkins.

Thirty-two years later, a company took its name from these grand seams of coal. Elk Horn Coal Corporation incorporated November 18, 1915. Mr. J.F. Caulfield, assistant secretary of the three companies uniting to form Elk Horn Coal, sent inquiries by telegram to Virginia an West Virginia asking if the name was already in use.

On November 16, 1915, he received a telegram saying: "You may use the name Elk Horn Coal Corporation for a new corporation in West Virginia, Stuart F. Reed, Secretary of State." Two days later, Elk Horn Coal Corporation was officially chartered in the state of West Virginia.

The three companies merging to form Elk Horn Coal were Elk Horn Fuel Company, Elk Horn Mining Corporation, and Mineral Fuel Company, which was already a wholly-owned subsidiary of Elk Horn Mining.

Elk Horn Fuel developed in order to acquire and consolidate properties of other mining companies (or land holding companies) in Eastern Kentucky and West Virginia. It bought properties from Northern Coal & Coke Company, Beaver Creek Consolidated Coal Co., Copland Coal Co., Harold Coal Co., Otter Creek and Long Fork Coal, Kellioka Coal & Coke, and E.D. Jobe for a total of 185,000 acres in Kentucky. It bought another 15,000 acres in West Virginia from Rich Mountain Coal Company.

For years these early coal companies conducted much of their business in New York City, which placed them close to banks, bankers, and influential twentieth century industrialists. Offices were maintained on Wall Street, but meetings were often held at the old Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where the Empire State Building stands today.

At a meeting held there on March 27, 1913, the board of directors of Elk Horn Fuel unanimously accepted a proposition from Mr. J.W.M. Stewart, an attorney from Ashland representing John C.C. Mayo and others for the purchase of 107,000 acres from Beaver Creek Consolidated Coal, Rich Mountain, Copland Coal, Mineral Fuel, Harold/Blackstone Coal, Long Fork, Otter Creek and Hardaway Coal. He furthermore retained the right to subsequently transfer all assets of Northern Coal & Coke to Elk Horn Fuel. The board resolved to carry these transactions into effect.

These properties were leased to other companies that wanted to begin mining, and Elk Horn Fuel formed a company for itself: Elk Horn Mining. In March of 1914, Elk Horn Mining had 20,000 acres in Floyd and Knott counties under lease from Elk Horn Fuel, and 4,500 acres in Letcher County from Mineral Fuel Company.

Mineral Fuel Company purchased all its acreage from Mineral Development Company on April 30, 1913, and began mine development before it subsequently leased this property to Elk Horn Mining in October 1914.

Early on, the lease states: "The lessor and the lessee, on the faith of this lease being executed, having heretofore erected upon said leased premises, miners' houses and other improvements, all of which pass under this lease... and having made openings and driven entries preparatory to the shipment of coal; and a railroad having been constructed to said leased premises; the lessee covenants to push development and operation of the demised premises as rapidly as the conditions of the market, railroad facilities, and labor conditions will reasonably permit."

At the time these three companies merged, they all had the same officers. Clarence Wayland Watson was president of all three, George W. Fleming was vice president, J.W.M. Stewart was secretary and John F. Caulfield was assistant secretary. George Fleming was Clarence Watson's nephew, and his father had been a governor of West Virginia.

Watson was a recent president of Consolidation Coal Company—a company he manipulated to the category of 'coal giant' in 1909 through the merger of several major coal companies. Soon he would be the chairman of the board of directors of that prestigious company. In 1913, Watson was also completing a two-year term as U.S. Senator for the state of West Virginia.

Consolidation Coal had wanted to purchase all the property of Elk Horn Fuel, Elk Horn Mining and Mineral Fuel but couldn't. Mr. Caulfield testified in 1953: "Well, I was in the Consolidation Coal Company from May 1, 1902, until Elk Horn Fuel Company was organized in February 1913, and Consolidation had an opportunity to acquire about 200,000 acres in Kentucky, but owing to the fact that they had a good many mortgages on their other holdings, there were financial reasons why they should not acquire them as additional holdings of Consolidation Coal Company.

(Note: Consolidation Coal bought 100,000 acres of land in the Jenkins area of Letcher County in late 1910 and early 1911.)

So, Senator Watson, who was the head of the Consolidation at that time, arranged for the formation after financing of Elk Horn Company, a new company manned entirely by Consolidation Coal Company employees and officials.

The Elk Horn Coal Corp. vs The United States of America, Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals 1953, p. 34a. (re: property condemned for Dewey Dam Reservoir.)

So the two companies of Elk Horn Fuel and Elk Horn Mining were formed to resolve this situation. John C.C. Mayo's dream of developing the properties he had gathered for the last 30 years was being acted out now in the board rooms of men who had devoted their lives to business transactions that reaped fortune upon fortune.

(Later, some of these corporate and individual fortunes would be gambled and lost in the stock market crash of 1929. Senator Watson, like others, brought his fortune and Elk Horn's to the gaming table and lost for both.)

Anybody who was more than a mountaineer wanted in on the game.

A list of stockholders of Elk Horn Fuel at the close of business August 14, 1913, is partly a roster of people already heavily involved with this kind of business, and partly a list of people from Eastern Kentucky who wanted to help bring the dream to life.

In the first group were Van Lear Black and H. Crawford Black. Crawford Black was a director of Consolidation Coal, president of Fidelity & Deposit Company of Baltimore, and owned 11,138 shares of

There are several forms of discipline a parent may try to get the exceptional behavior they wish from their child. But what happens when all forms of discipline are used, and the end result isn't exceptional?

by Kim Frasure

If you find yourself in this dilemma, then you may try the following solutions:

— Screaming loud that neighbors a block away know the lady up the road as lost her mind.

— Pull your hair out by the roots until your parents wonder if you have a vitamin deficiency.

— Run through the house like a Comanche on a rampage.

— Pick up your keys, slam the door as you make a fast exit, get in your car, and drive.

As you skid into a stop at the red light that you almost see in your blinded fury, don't worry about the people in the car beside you who are giving you strange looks because your mouth is going to beat ninety.

Once you've managed to vent your frustration and you feel as if you are calm and serene, return home, sit down in a quiet area, and calmly discuss the situation with your child.

If your child insists on interrupting you with "But you do this," or "if you wouldn't do this, then neither would I," count to 10.

Once the two of you are speaking calmly and the future looks bright and promising, it's time to hit the sack. A new day awaits you in the morning.

Next morning, you anticipate a smile and a cheerful "Morning, Mom," but instead, all you get are complaints and gripes.

"I hate these pants! Where's my other ones? I don't like this shirt, it itches! Is this all we've got to eat? Uck! Hurry up, we're going to be late! Do you have to stop and get a pop?"

Help! I feel the urge to scream, run, and drive.

Poison Oak

In Search of the elusive gible

What with Thanksgiving being at hand, I'm sure to be treated to another one of my wife's patented Thanksgiving dinners. I'm really looking forward to it, too, because nobody can roast a Butterball, make tastier stuffing and candy them yams any better than she can.

No doubt, by the weekend, I'll be as stuffed as a toad full of lightning bugs, and probably feeling guilty for overdoing it—again. But how can anyone—especially with no more willpower than I have—worry about fat grams at a time like this?

As good a cook as she is now, though, there was a time when Thanksgiving around our house wasn't always as successful as it's been here lately. I mean, at one time in our married life, Thanksgiving was an adventure.

Take the first time she decided to fix a turkey, for example. It was back in the sixties and we hadn't been married too long. Heretofore, we'd had Thanksgiving dinner at her mom's or my mom's—or both. But, being the domestic type that she is, she decided that this year she'd fix the dinner and they could come to our house. She did, they did, and it was wonderful—but not before one minor scare.

She began preparing the meal the night before, and as she collected everything she needed, she was disappointed that the frozen turkey we'd bought didn't have any giblets.

"I've got to make gible gravy," she announced. "You've got to find me some giblets."

Now, I'd never been much good at hunting squirrels and rabbits and stuff, but if her heart was set on a gible, I'd just have to get out the trusty old .12 gauge and along about daylight in the morning, go hunt her one.

I felt like Barney Fite as I rummaged through my dresser drawers looking for my shells, but I couldn't keep from wondering how it must have been in the days of the first Thanksgiving and how Johnny Pilgrim must have felt when his lovely wife, Priscilla, sent him off to the wild New England woods in search of the wily gible. Then again, since I've never read anything about it, perhaps the Indians brought the giblets—along with the maize. Regardless, though, I was getting excited.

However, later that evening as I sat thumbing through the encyclopedia trying to find a picture of the sneaky little critter, so at least I'd know one if I saw one, she shrieked from the kitchen, "Oh!...It does have giblets. I've found them!"

"Where were they?" I asked, a little disappointed.

"You'd never believe where they put them," she answered.

Here I am again, though, thinking about the holidays in terms of my stomach. I really should be ashamed of myself because Thanksgiving Day needs to be remembered as more than just another excuse for my gluttony, the Detroit Lions on TV and laughing, back-slapping, cheek-pinching relatives. We all really need to try and remember its original purpose and devote at least some time during the day to religious thinking, church services, and prayer.

While we enjoy our gible gravy, let's not forget to look around us and county our blessings.

Have a happy Thanksgiving.

Johnson to display David craft exhibit at MSU craft market

Julie Johnson of Prestonsburg will represent David Appalachian Crafts at Morehead State University's Appalachian Christmas Arts and Crafts Market which is set for Saturday, Dec. 1, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Laughlin Health Building.
 She will display traditional mountain crafts which are produced by artisans in 11 Eastern Kentucky counties. Among the items available will be quilts, cornshuck and wood figures.
 The annual market draws more than 100 craftsmen who exhibit and sell their work. Every exhibitor's craft is judged for originality and as is the design of the display booth, said Georgia Sammons, coordinator.

Coal Company

Elk Horn employees picnic

Elk Horn Fuel stock. J.N. Camden and S.D. Camden together controlled 40,766 shares. Johnson Newlon Camden got his start through oil production and later merged his company with the Standard Oil Company created by John D. Rockefeller. J.N. Camden was president of Northern Coal, Coke & Iron Company in 1905, and in later years, S.D. Camden served as vice president of Consolidation Coal.

George Fleming owned 3,970 shares, John C.C. Mayo had 15,258 shares and Jere Wheelwright, president of Consolidation Coal, had 9,503 shares. Howard Warfield held 27,646 shares. J.W.M. Stewart from the legal firm of Hager & Stewart in Ashland, owned 33,157 shares. Mr. Stewart provided legal counsel for years to all these emerging coal companies, and signed documents as secretary or president of many of them.

Clarence Watson held the most shares individually—34,665. Others who helped from and promote the development of Elk Horn Fuel and who held shares (bought or awarded) were J.W. Caulfield, Robert Garrett & sons, Lucy and Fannie Langhorne, and five other members of the Watson family.

Locally, individuals who assisted John C.C. Mayo in past endeavors were jumping on this bandwagon too, as it was the final stage in bringing economic development and pleasures of the twentieth century to the mountains. This list of people included John Buckingham, James W. Turner, George Copland, and Dan Davis of Paintsville; B.F. Combs and the Harkins family of Prestonsburg; John F. Hager of Ashland; W.F. Hite of Huntington; and C.B. Slemph of Big Stone Gap. Judge John Hager had been with the prospecting party of Richard Broas in 1883, and understood first-hand the wealth they were just starting to uncover.

Two banks from Baltimore were included in the list of 193 stockholders. Elk Horn Fuel issued a total of 70,000 shares of preferred stock and 190,000 shares of common stock in 1913.

When Elk Horn Fuel and Elk Horn Mining (including Mineral Development Co.) merged in 1915 to form Elk Horn Coal Corporation, there were already 18 mines in operation—seven in the Wayland division, seven in the Fleming Division, and four in the Wheelwright division. The total capital stock of Elk Horn Coal upon completion of the merger was $27,045,000. On November 30, 1915, just 12 days after its birth, Elk Horn Coal acquired all the property of Elk Horn Fuel and Elk Horn Mining, including all mining camps and appurtenant mine works and equipment, the 205,452 acres of land they jointly controlled, and an option to buy 50,000 acres more from Beaver Creek Consolidated Coal.

Getting down to business on December 1, 1915, Elk Horn took control of mine works already set up by Elk Horn Mining and still in progress. At one of these locations, up on Right Beaver Creek at Steele's Creek, there had been confusion as to what to call the mining town under construction. The nearest post office was at the town of Allen. (The community of Garrett had a post office, first named Ballard, but mail going to Steele's Creek was distributed from Allen Post Office.)

Letters were addressed to "At Camp, Steele's Creek, Allen P.O." or "Watson town, Allen P.O." or "Wayland, Allen P.O." A courier for the company would be at Allen to receive mail when it arrived, they ride the train (or a horse) up to Stone Coal and Steele's Creek where the mail would be distributed.

On May 18, 1914, however, "Wayland" was established as an official U.S. Post Office (named after Clarence Wayland Watson) and mail rode the train under its own power to this destination.

(In addition to the engineering offices maintained at Wayland, Fleming and Wheelwright, Elk Horn also maintained business offices for the convenience of its lawyers, bankers and officers who had family homes in other states. Offices in New York City were used as meeting places and addresses when the three development companies formed and required powerful financial backing. Some years later these offices were closed and the office in Cincinnati opened. This office was used until 1942 when it was relocated in Charleston, WV; in the early 190's it was moved to Beckley. In 1974 Ethyl Corporation bought Elk Horn Coal and in 1976 established corporate headquarters in Richmond, Virginia.)

In Floyd County, Elk Horn initiated mining at Wheelwright, but credit for expanded construction and development must be given to other companies as Elk Horn Coal sold its holdings in the Wheelwright area in 1930. Elk Horn's predecessors also established Weeksbury and mines there, but these holdings were sold to Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates.

The towns built at Garrett and Wayland were large mining centers until the last mines closed in the early 1950s. At Garrett, mine postings indicate mine 326 closed in 1927, mine 327 in 1943, and mine 325, the most extensive one on Stonecoal Branch, lasted until January, 1956. At Wayland, mine 330 was shut down in 1928, mine 331 in 1936, and 332, 328, and 329 held out until 1954.

A 1937 report on Elk Horn mining operations states in part: "Each of the six active operations (two in Floyd County and four in Letcher) is a complete mining plant with tipples, railroad yard, shops and electric power substations on the surface and with underground workings equipped with mining machines, locomotives, mine cars, electric wiring, fans, pumps and other facilities necessary for mining and preparing the coal for shipment. Each plant has its own town with dwellings, stores, streets, electric light lines, water supply and other facilities necessary for the housing and comfort of the employees. (The town of Fleming services both the Fleming No. 1 and Fleming No. 2 operations.)

"The Wayland mine is operating the Elk Horn No. 1 seam which has a general average thickness of about 42 inches of coal. The underground equipment includes 26 electric cutting machines, 25 electric locomotives, 500 new steel mine cars, one mechanical loading machine and 23 underground conveyors. These conveyors are arranged to load from 12 working places and to gather the coal to four separate points where trips of mine cars are loaded.

"The Haymond mine is operating the Elk Horn seam (E-3) which has an average thickness of from 60 to 69 inches. The underground equipment includes five electric cutting machines, 13 electric locomotives and 610 mine cars. This mine and its equipment has an estimated capacity of 1635 tons per day; the actual output in the year 1936 was 315,733 tons in 234 working days—an average of 1350 tons per day.

The Wayland and Garrett operations were given an estimated life of 30 years, to be extended as more boundaries of coal were added to the mining limits. Both Fleming plants were given a death warrant for 4-5 years hence. The Haymond plant had a life expectancy of eight years, but the operation at Hemphill was expected to carry on at least another 40 years! None of these mines, however, lasted much past the mid-1950s.

After the company mines closed, Elk Horn expanded its leasing business, but the lessees now provided all mine equipment and employees. Many of these mining enterprises went into the abandoned works of Elk Horn's big mines at Wayland and Garrett and mined small blocks or panels of coal. Mine 328 apparently was worked in 1960.

The tipples at Wayland was leased to Evans-Elkhorn for many years. When Evans-Elkhorn no longer needed it, the tipples was leased to Blackstar Coal which was the last lessee until the tipples was torn down in 1978.

In 1937 Elk Horn Coal Corporation reorganized under the federal bankruptcy act and changed its name to The Elk Horn Coal Corporation. Today it is owned by Tredegar Industries, a spin-off of Ethyl Corporation, which also maintains corporate headquarters in Richmond, Virginia.

Cabbage Patch

By Marie Harmon

Well managed succession crops begin with the seed order. Always try to have a good variety of vegetable seeds on hand.

As weather permits, you are able to plant early. When the early plantings are finished, you can promptly plant a new crop. Always rotate vegetable varieties in your replanted rows. If at all possible try to have a root crop following your leafy crop, so they will benefit from the nitrogen left in the soil.

When and where possible, have several rows of early vegetables together. Then you can till up a larger area for the second planting all at once, rather than row by row.

Plan your garden so you will have fresh vegetables for every month in the year. If the right vegetables are planted at the right time, and you store them, then you can have something different each month. An example is asparagus in April; lettuce and spinach in May; peas and green beans in June. On into October (when most gardens are finished) Cauliflower and sweet potatoes; kale, parsnips, and brussels sprouts in November and December; squash, potatoes and endive from your root cellar or basement in January, February, and March.

Sometimes you can still pick Kale if the winter hasn't been too hard, or if you haven't used it all by then. In March the local wild greens are large enough to start picking. Parsnips left in the ground over winter will be at their sweetest. It takes some careful planning to have at least one different vegetable each month, but it can be done. Gardening is a life-long adventure. Every year offers another chance to experiment, improve and discover.

I began sowing seeds indoors in February. I have been accused of sowing seeds so I could play in the dirt; either way I do have plants ready to transplant in the spring when the soil and weather conditions are ready. My plants have been hardened off so they stand the shock of transplanting. The ones you buy from stores in the early spring has not always been hardened off; if not, many will die and others will be stunned. I have nothing against buying plants and I have bought plenty of them. Always look for short and sturdy plants rather than tall spindly ones when you do buy and always let them stay in their containers in full sun and over night for a few days to harden off.

A lot of time and money can be saved if you save your own seed. Never save seed from hybrid plants. When you save your own seed they have become acclimated and will produce more and also, generally larger vegetables the following year. If you do plan to save seeds next year, be sure you do not plant your cucumbers, mushmelons, squash, pumpkins and watermelons near each other, because they will cross.

Those clever soil-improvements you have or will be reading about will only make a difference if they are put to practice in your garden.

Upon receiving the check, Akers commented, "I sure did not think I would be here for 35 years, but I guess I'll be here another 35 years if they will have me." Hall & Clark Insurance Agency has been in business for 40 years, and plans to grow and develop for another 40 years.
