Polls predict positive perception :

Promise pushes politician past playmates

The race for governor took an unexpected turn Thursday when a little known independent candidate vowed to "grant three wishes" to every Eastern Kentuckian who voted for him in the May primary.

The campaign pledge pushed Independent candidate Vinny "Wide Load" Testosterone to the top of pre-election popularity polls and sent other gubernatorial candidates scurrying for ideas to outdo the offer.

Reports that the Wilkinson administration had two architects, a road contractor and the Franklin County Bar Association shot for failing to contribute the idea first, have been unconfirmed.

Testosterone said he was the only candidate in the gubernatorial race who could live up to his campaign promises and that his pledge of three wishes to every Eastern Kentuckian was a "guaran-damn-tee." The portly politician said he had achieved "special powers" after purchasing "magical appliances," including a wringer-washer and a lava lamp, at a garage sale near Bagdad, Kentucky.

"Eastern Kentuckians are tired of hearing politicians promise them the moon at election time, then mooning them afterwards..."

"Eastern Kentuckians are tired of hearing politicians promise them the moon at election time and then mooning them afterwards," the candidate said. "Me, I've got the goods to ante up for real."

Testosterone confirmed reports that he had "done some time in the Big House" several years ago after operating an "enchanted" printing press that magically produced likenesses of twenty dollar bills, but he said that machine was "possessed by evil spirits and I was young and impressionable."

He said if elected it would "be like a fairytale come true."

"Think about it," Testosterone said of his pledge to grant wishes. "If I'm elected everybody will have their own four-wheel drive truck, winning lottery tickets and an endless supply of Skoal."

"That's an offer nobody can refuse," he said.

In response, opposing candidate Dr. Floyd Poore said he was taking action to legally change his name.

Quarry questioned :

Quarantine queues querulous quandary

All five members of the Floyd County Board of Education were quarantined this week for "observation" after an uncharacteristic unanimous vote.

"It was just a vote to adjourn," said a representative of Eastern State Hospital, where the board members were taken, "but it's serious enough to raise suspicions. This group has never been in total agreement before. We've got to find out what's going on."

Meanwhile, a team of scientists involved in the investigation reported this week that they had found five "human-size" pods which "look like big milkweeds" at the homes of individual board members.

"Hey," said one of the scientists, "I've seen 'Invasion of the Body Snatchers' twenty times. These pods fit the bill."

If medical examinations prove that board members are, indeed, aliens from another planet the state Department of Education could find itself in a quandary.

"We have provisions for removing board members from office for not doing their jobs or for hiring their families," a department spokesman said. "But we have no laws which say they can or can't be embodied by creatures from outer space."

Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen is expected to monitor the Floyd County situation closely, but a spokesperson for his office declined to speculate on what steps Boysen might take to address the issue.

"I'm only speaking for myself," the spokesperson said this week, "but I suppose, if the board members voted consistently for improvements to the quality of education in Floyd County, Dr. Boysen might be tempted to just look the other way."

In a related move, an organization calling itself Concerned People Whose Concerns Should Concern All Those Concerned, has formed to face the issue.

"We're opposed to any alien, human or otherwise, operating our schools," said a spokeswoman for the new group. "Frankly, we're concerned."

Nettled neighbors no-no nosy newser

Angry readers of The Floyd County Times stormed the newspaper offices Wednesday demanding that staff writer Susan "The Grim Reaper" Allen be censored for consistently reporting negative stories about events in Floyd County.

Cries for retribution came from school officials, who suggested Ms. Allen be required to copy in long-hand every public record she has ever requested under state Open Records law and then be graded for penmanship; from building contractors, who volunteered a pair of concrete sneakers and a free boat ride to the middle of Dewey Lake; and from various and sundry government officials, who suggested she volunteer to clear minefields in Kuwait.

Times publisher Scott Perry, spotting several potential advertisers in the crowd, quickly agreed with the mob's contention that Ms. Allen dwelled on the negative and offered to "hook her up to the positive post of a D-9 dozer battery" to cure the problem.

Perry said Ms. Allen "means well," but her attitude has been affected by an overdose of public meetings.

"It's either that or listening to too much rock and roll," Perry added, noting that rock and roll is "nothing but devil music played to a voodoo beat."

Perry said lapel buttons saying "I Am Not Susan Allen" had been distributed to other members of the Times' staff.

No attempt was made to get Ms. Allen's comments on the matter.

Mutt menace makes municipality moan

Wayland city officials, concerned over the proliferation of stray dogs in that community, adopted a resolution this week which requires all city residents to "walk upright on their own hind legs."

Officials at Wayland have repeatedly expressed their dismay at the lack of funds needed to employ a dog warden for the town, but they rejected as "inhumane" a problem-solving proposal offered by one resident which suggested that motorists should run down "every damn mutt that ain't wearing a flea collar."

"The only way we ever get rid of a stray in this town," that resident noted, "is when them highway department boys come in and scrape 'em offn' the pavement."

Instead of taking the hard line, Wayland council members okayed the "Upright Law", which they said would solve the problem with strays and also rid the community of other undesirables.

"If they can't stand up, they'll have to skeedaddle," said one councilman who asked not to be identified.

The law is designed to protect family pets whose owners can take the time to teach them to walk on their hind legs but, said one opponent to the plan, some of the more aged pets could be in trouble.

"You can't teach an old dog new tricks," growled one protestor.

When asked how stray dogs who have not yet learned how to read will know that they may no longer legally prowl Wayland streets and neighborhoods, a city patrolman shrugged off the inquiry.

"Ignorance of the law is no excuse," he said.

What's in a name?

Disappointed that neither his recent name change nor his wardrobe rearrangement had attracted the attention of state voters, Dr. Floyd Poore held a press conference this week to show off his new face, courtesy of plastic surgery which he performed himself. After the press conference, Poore sang "You Ain't Nuthin' But A Hound Dog" to the cheering crowd.

Bingo brouhaha baffles bettors

A group of Iraqi prisoners of war, quartered at the Floyd County National Guard Armory while awaiting repatriation to their home country, caused a near riot Monday during a field trip to the Prestonsburg High Bingo parlor.

"They were having a pretty good time and behaving themselves until the caller hollered out 'B-52,'" said a player caught up in the scuffle.

On the Job . . .

Governor Wallace Wilkinson visited the jobsite where road construction crews were busy rebuilding Route 23 near East Point. The governor searched the skies for his helicopter, blocking the path of a construction company rock truck. The driver of the truck, angry over the delay, ran over the governor's tail while a traffic control worker shouted obscenities. The worker was apparently irate because the governor demanded she donate her lunch bucket to his political action committee.

Contact cautioned :

Calamitous coiffures clutter coed clinker

A group of Floyd County teenagers, identified only as the "Mousseketeers," has been lodged in the juvenile detention center this week on charges of flourishing deadly weapons.

Police said the teens were jailed after several youths were hospitalized for treatment of puncture wounds and lacerations reportedly caused after the victims came into contact with hairdos sported by members of the Mousseketeer gang.

"All I did," said one victim who called himself "Buzz," "was brush up against one of these mousseheads in the hallway. Now I've got 2,700 stitches to show for it. Man, they ought to have to register that hair."

An emergency room attendant was equally disturbed by the injuries.

"Goodness," she said, "they could have put somebody's eye out."

Officials at the juvenile detention center said this week they were making the "best of a bad situation."

"We're just letting these kids roam around," said one officer. "They're really effective at cleaning cobwebs out of corners, and some of the taller ones are scraping old paint off the ceilings."

When questioned about her arrest, one of the suspects, who called herself "Spike," said: "Gimme a head with hair, long beautiful hair, shinin', streamin', screamin', flaxen, waxen. Gimme it down to there, hair. Shoulder length or longer. Here baby, there momma, everywhere daddy, daddy, hair."

Psychiatrists said that reponse was either "some kind of code or the stuff has soaked through to her brain."

Rocky rationing reviewed :

Road ruckus reaches reasonable resolution

Responding to increasing reports that county road materials were being used on private property, the Floyd County Fiscal Court voted this week to declare "every square inch of earth in the county a county road."

The move, an assistant attorney general said Thursday, will allow the county to legally spread gravel, red dog or blacktop "anywhere and everywhere" in Floyd County.

Certain areas of the county, like cemeteries and the Big Sandy River, will be designated No Parking Zones under the new county ordinance and road materials used in those areas will be specially color-coded to indicate they are off-limits to motorists.

Road materials used to fill the river and other area streams will be a special variety that changes colors with the seasons. In the summer, river gravel will appear as a pleasant blue-green, while in the winter and spring the gravel will be a muddy brown. During flood season, county road crews will distribute extra truckloads of the mud-colored gravel throughout low lying areas and in the bottom levels of homes and stores. Residents may purchase push brooms from area Disaster and Emergency Services offices to sweep the flood gravels out of their homes and businesses where crews will collect the material for use during the next flood season. Those people who qualify for flood insurance will have the cost of their brooms reimbursed. Low income residents may apply for federal assistance.

County officials also announced this week that they would probably offer grass-colored gravel to any homeowner who wished to develop a "lawn."

The ordinance will take effect upon a second reading in fiscal court.

Fiscal court closes in the black

The Floyd County Fiscal Court ended the 1990 fiscal year $3,084,061 in the black, according to a state audit released Thursday.

The county received $1,604,463 over its budget and overspent its budget by that exact amount, the audit indicated.

The audit listed the county's total investments, including a First Commonwealth Bank certificate of deposit worth $1,059,446, as $1,198,199. The audit listed the county's long-term debt at $1,300,000 which included a bond issue for Floyd County Solid Waste Inc. for $1,020,000.

State Auditor Bob Babbage released the audit of the Floyd County Fiscal Court for the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1990.

The report shows that the county received $1,160,373 from local taxes. The county clerk returned $31,200 in excess fees and the sheriff returned $58,243 from 1989 and $1,430 in excess fees from 1988.

The county received $164,002 in federal funds administered by the state and $2,821,559 in state funds for various programs. The county earned $22,469 in interest for the fiscal year, the report noted.

The outstanding bonds of the Floyd County Solid Waste Inc. were $1,020,000 at the close of the fiscal year.

The county entered into nine agreements for the lease or lease-purchase of various pieces of equipment. The largest is for a track-type tractor for $166,414. The payments for this purchase are $2,793 per month and are due to end in April 1994. At the close of the fiscal year, the amount owed was $127,312.

"The loss of Federal Revenue Sharing programs has forced many units of local government to look for alternate ways to meet their budgets and to continue to provide established services," Babbage wrote in his report.

Investing all possible funds into interest bearing accounts is one option many counties are using to enhance their revenues, he noted.

"The public demands accountability from their elected officials and for the use of their tax dollars," Babbage said. "One of the major assignments of the auditor's office is to review the use of public funds and do all we can to ensure that Kentucky taxpayers' dollars are used wisely and honestly."

Noting that many county governments in the state use the state auditor's report as a planning and budgeting guide, Babbage said that up-to-date information is essential.

Calhoun killed Wednesday: juvenile to be charged

A Prestonsburg man was shot and killed allegedly by a 16-year old juvenile Wednesday afternoon after an argument at the juvenile's home at Betsy Layne.

Police reports indicate that Larry Douglas Calhoun, 35, of Goble Roberts was shot once in the head with a .12 gauge shotgun at approximately 4:35 p.m. Wednesday.

Police said Calhoun was shot after an alleged argument with the juvenile charged in the shooting. The juvenile was initially charged with assault in the first degree.

Calhoun was transported to Pikeville Methodist Hospital where he died at 1:27 a.m. Thursday. Calhoun was pronounced dead by Pike County Coroner Charles Morris.

As a result of Calhoun's death, state police said the juvenile would be charged with murder. A juvenile hearing has been set for today, (March 29, 1991).

The shooting remains under investigation by Kentucky State Police Detective Les Stapleton and the Floyd County Sheriff's Department.

Treatment is available for mentally ill

Mental illness is no different from any other illness or disease. People who are mentally ill should not be stigmatized.

Mental illness is not the result of personal failure, lack of will power or moral weakness. It is linked to functional abnormalities in the brain.

Although many people think that mental illness happens only to others, the truth is that one in five people will have a mental illness at some point. The facts are that nearly 3 percent of our citizens suffer from a mental disorder.

A great number of people believe that mental illnesses are rare; this is far from true. Approximately 10 million Americans have some form of depression, 12 million have some sort of phobia, 1.5 million are Schizophrenic, 2.4 million suffer from obsessive-compulsive disorders and 1.5 million have panic disorders.

Because of misinformation and myth, people who have a mental illness often encounter fear and prejudice when seeking work, housing, health care, insurance and friends.

During the last 20 years research has shown that we now have effective treatment for many specific mental disorders. The problem is that a majority of people don't realize that help is available.

Hope for the present lies in urging people to seek the help they need. Hope for the future lies in continued research on the brain and behavioral problems. The goal of the National Institute of Mental Health for the coming decade is to educate the public and intensify research so we may alleviate the enormous suffering and disability caused by mental disorders.

Mountain Comprehensive Care covers a five county area, Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Martin, and Magoffin. If you or your family have any questions concerning mental illness please feel free to call the center in your area. The Mountain Consumer Alliance, a group of people with long term mental disorders meet once a month to discuss their problems and offer support. For more information on this group call 606-478-2225 or 285-3142.

KET telefund '91 tops $180,000 mark

TeleFund '91, KET's annual on-air fund-raising campaign, netted more than $185,526 as of 11 p.m. Sunday, March 3, when the drive officially ended.

The nine-day campaign exceeded its $180,000 goal despite uncertain political and economic times, unseasonably warm weather, sweeps competition from the commercial networks, and a campaign that was conducted in almost half the number of days of previous efforts.

KET officials attributed the success of the effort to a willingness to respond to viewer suggestions and the decision to try new techniques.

"We listened to our viewers, basically," said Development Director Shae Hopkins Martin. "Our research told us that although our viewers understood the importance and cost-effectiveness of the on-air campaign in reaching new members, they wanted less interruptions in their programming."

"We gave them what they asked for, stayed the course in face of adversity and relied on our belief that many Kentuckians feel that KET weekend and evening programs like The Civil War, Sesame Street, NOVA, and The MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour are worth their support."

"We also lowered our basic membership levels and appealed to contributors at every level with the offer of our monthly program guide, Visions, and other programming incentives," Martin added.

According to Martin, the Friends of KET membership drive continues through the month with renewal notices mailed to previous donors and members of the KET Fund For Excellence, made up of contributors of $500 or more to KET.

"KET programming is excellent, but it is not cheap," said Martin. "We need support from every viewer in the state—in whatever amount they are able to contribute—to put KET evening and weekend programming on a sound financial footing. TeleFund '91 has buoyed our hopes that we can accomplish that mission."

Army Infantry regiment plans Sept. reunion

The 32nd Infantry Regiment is no longer a part of the 7th Infantry Division. Today the 3rd Battalion remains on active duty, conducting basic training at Fort Benning Georgia. ## Gas prices show slight increase, AAA says

Motorists traveling over the Easter holiday weekend will find the price of self-serve regular unleaded gasoline averages 99 cents a gallon, according to AAA Blue Grass/Kentucky's most recent survey. This price reflects a one cent increase since the last report of three weeks ago.

The survey, which included 40 service stations in the Lexington area, reflected a range in prices from 95 cents to $1.09 a gallon.

Trash removal

Employees of Jenny Wiley State Park worked to clean-up the park for the upcoming summer season. Robert Slone's clean-up crew has already begun pick up trash around the park. There will be Trash Bash at the park on April 20 in celebration of Earth Day 1991. For more information call Johnny Martin at 886-2711.

'Trash Bash 91' set for April 20

Spring clean-up is underway at Jenny Wiley State Park in anticipation of the busy summer season ahead. A clean-up crew worked last week picking up unsightly debris that has accumulated over the winter season. A "Trash Bash 91" is planned for April 20 at the park.

In celebration of Earth Day 1991, the Army Corps of Engineers and Jenny Wiley State Park has planned a clean-up at the park April 20 from 11-2:30 p.m. A cookout at the Dewey Lake Downstream Recreation Area will begin at 2:30.

Areas targeted for clean-up will be assigned to volunteers or organizations taking part in the clean-up. An April 27 rain date has been set.

Leon Russell, park manager, says trash at the lake is an ongoing problem, but thanks to special funding assistance obtained by Representative Greg Stumbo, progress is being made to clean-up the park.

"Thanks to everyone for their efforts," Russell said. "It's a constant battle for us here to keep the trash picked-up. But, the word is getting out and we're improving the situation."

"With the Floyd County Clean-up committee trying to get everyone involved, hopefully, this problem won't be with us too much longer."

For more information about the trash bash, contact Johnny Martin at 88-2711.

Shaw comments on Gulf war

by Dr. Thomas D. Matijasic, Associate Professor of History
CNN News anchor Bernard Shaw addressed an enthusiastic crowd at the Singletary Center of the University of Kentucky on Tuesday night, March 26. Shaw was one of three CNN reporters in Baghdad, Iraq on the first night of bombing when the Persian Gulf War began. Shaw's remarks concentrated on the mistakes of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

Shaw stated that Saddam's first error was refusing to believe that the United States could rally world opinion against him. Saddam was convinced that the Moslem government of Saudi Arabia would never allow an "infidel" nation to defend her. Shaw noted that photographic evidence provided by U.S. spy satellites convinced the Saudi government that they must seek American protection.

Saddam's second mistake was in believing that the American experience in Vietnam had stifled America's ability to make war. He was convinced that the American people were no longer willing to accept high casualties in a foreign war, so he planned to target U.S. forces in his military preparations.

Thirdly, the Iraqi dictator misunderstood the role of public debate in an open society. Saddam's only experience with Western Civilization was a brief visit to France. Most of what he knew about America and Western Europe came from news magazines and CNN broadcasts. He did not understand that dissent was an accepted part of American society. He believed that anti-war protests and President Bush's futile attempts to negotiate a settlement of the conflict were signs of weakness. As a rule Americans will debate, but once the debate is over, the president will have the support of the people.

Saddam's final mistake was in understanding the quality of the men and women who participated in Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm. Shaw dislikes calling our vets "average Americans." He believes that they are "ultimate Americans," because they are willing to live and die for their country. They are the products of an educational system that has given the American soldier the ability to use high tech weapons. Their moral compass has been refined by America's religious leaders so that their conduct during the war revealed internal self-discipline.

The remainder of Shaw's 30 minute speech concentrated on the proper role of the media in American society. He defended CNN's decision to leave Peter Arnet in Baghdad after the war began. "The role of the media is to inform, not to be popular." He feels that good journalists are essential to the nation and he encouraged dedicated students to seek a career in the news media.

Retirees can avoid quarterly tax payments

Many retirees can have federal income tax withheld from their pensions and annuities to avoid making estimated tax payments.

A retiree who chooses not to have tax withheld may have to make estimated tax payments during the tax year if enough tax is not withheld from other income subject to withholding.

Normally, tax withheld from periodic pension or annuity payments is based on marital status and the number of withholding allowances claimed on the withholding certificate. Form W-4P, or similar form from the payer. However, if a retiree does not give the payer a withholding certificate, the tax will be withheld as if the retiree is married claiming three withholding allowances.

Retirees should keep in mind that they may be subject to a penalty for underpayment of estimated tax if an insufficient amount of withholding is taken from pension and annuities or if estimated tax payments are not made in sufficient amounts.

More information on pension and annuity income, including withholding for pensions and annuities, can be found in free Publication 575. Pension and Annuity Income, and 505, Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax. Call the IRS toll-free at 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676) to order.

It's a joke, son

by Scott Perry

Laugh and the world laughs with you.

Before the phones start ringing, we confess that there is not a word of truth in any article appearing on today's front page.

Sometime between dawn Wednesday and midnight Thursday, we took leave of our senses and became dominated by the spirit of the April Fool season. It happens every year and is undoubtedly the byproduct of an overdose during our youth of Looney Tunes cartoons.

The purpose, of course, is neither to offend nor affront but to take a break from reality with a moment of supermarket tabloid inanity.

It's a joke, son, as Foghorn Leghorn might say.

We've tried to spread our twisted humor evenly, including ourselves in the farce. For those who find our efforts tasteless, we apologize and promise that it won't happen again....until next year.

Between the lines

by Susan Allen

Vote

School elections to decide the fate of site-based decision making in schools next year are getting a lot of attention lately. The vote at Adams Middle School is being appealed to the state's attorney general to see if or how the votes of three teachers who were absent should be counted.

The measure failed, according to some, by three-tenths of a percent. A vote at Prestonsburg High School Thursday morning was 21 teachers voting no and 19 yes, and six teachers absent.

All schools must have site-based decision making in their schools by July 1996. Why not begin now and get a head start on the state's new reform act?

It's time Floyd County was first in the education line rather than being low-man on the totem pole.

Law's the Law

Kentucky passed the Open Records and Open Meetings laws in 1974 to enable citizens of this state to know what public officials are doing and how public money is being used.

It is still amazing how public agencies continue to violate the law by refusing to allow citizens to inspect public records or by trying to pull a fast one to get into a closed session.

One particular agency in the county continues to make it extremely inconvenient and difficult to inspect public records, regardless of the law or an attorney general's opinion about making public records available for inspection. Those less persistent give up their task out of desperation. Others wait patiently while public officials take their time complying with the law.

Why would a public agency make it so difficult to view their own records?

Taking A Trip?

School field trips are always exciting adventures for students and teachers alike. Getting to see famous landmarks or just something different is a joy not all children are privileged to have.

So, the thought of taking student's field trip funds to buy school supplies is ridiculous and even rumored to be not quite right.

The funds in the field trip accounts are monies brought to school by the students, presumably given to students by their parents. The money is for students to explore and see different lifestyles.

The middle school is being touted by school officials as a showplace in the county and the beginning of a new way of modern education for students to exceed old learning limits.

And the school administration wanted students to sell candy door-to-door to pay the phone bill and send teachers to a middle school conference this fall? A new concept for education in Floyd County?

How can anyone expect the parents of these children, who also pay school taxes, to foot the bill for basic school supplies and deprive even one student of the opportunity to enjoy and learn from a school field trip?

Anti Anti?

Being accused of being anti-everything, from anti-positive to anti-American, is not such a bad thing when it's taken into account who's doing the accusing.

But, due to the ever increasing pressure on my homelife and children, I've decided to hang up my keyboard and get out of the newspaper business. It is a tough decision, but one I must make.

The strain and pressure of working in this business day after day gets to one after awhile and I guess my time has come.

Uncovering wrongdoing and mismanagement has always been a challenge and something the public has a right to know about. It is sometimes extremely difficult to keep up the pace.

I've decided to take a job with a local public agency in public relations. So, farewell Floyd County Times...

Nahh!!!! April Fool! This job is just too much fun.

Letters

Editor:

I am greatly disturbed by the events that have taken place between the David School, Prestonsburg High School, and Prestonsburg Grade School. David School students are no longer allowed to wait for their buses on grade school or high school property in Prestonsburg.

I have been a student of the David School for a year and a half. I have heard a lot of stories about students from David School. Most of the things were bad. Few were true. Why don't people stop thinking the worst about students from the David School and give us a chance? We are only humans. We are not perfect. We're not as bad as we are made out to be.

All students of the David School can't be responsible for the actions of a few, just as it is in any other school. And, as in other schools, the majority of our students strongly disapprove of what these few might do.

All I'm saying is that you shouldn't believe everything that you hear. When someone tells you something, listen to it with an objective point of view. Ask yourself, "should I wait until I have more information and then make an objective opinion about these stories?" All of the kids that go to David School are good kids, but they have just had it rough making it through life.

Editor:

I have been a subscriber to The Times for 40 or 50 years. You have improved it in several respects, I am glad.

I do like the reader's various views very much. The Bible itself says:—"but in the multitude of counselors there is safety." Prov. 11:14, 24:6. I'd like very much indeed to express or tell of some experiences of mine.

Our country's economy, problems, etc. concern me very much. I cry, pray and fast for our betterment. Around two weeks ago, I was considering things. As I walked through the hallway, a cloud mist or such came down over my body from above, covering me down to the middle.

It was such a strange feeling and a voice spoke out of the mist from every direction, saying one word, "EARTH." I was made to understand what it meant was really tough, tight times, want, hunger, etc are ahead.

The same revelation taught me to tell my family, relatives, friends and anyone and everyone to: garden, produce, can, preserve and save.

I am so glad they are giving people garden seed to plant.

May the God of Heaven bless you.

Report to Kentucky

Senator Wendell Ford

Impressions from Kuwait

No amount of television coverage can prepare you for the sights and sounds of Kuwait after the war.

I learned this for myself during a recent congressional tour of the region in the wake of the devastation brought about by Saddam Hussein. Everything we saw and heard was different from anything we could have imagined on the long flight to the Persian Gulf, and almost all of it was unforgettable.

We viewed destruction from the air, but my most vivid impressions are those of our troops helping to start the long process of healing and reconstruction on the ground. All of our troops are as eager to come home as we are to welcome them back, but they continue to make a difference as we work toward a full withdrawal from the Gulf.

I watched American troops helping to rebuild young lives as enthusiastic volunteers at an institution for handicapped children in Kuwait. And I enjoyed a visit with Kentuckians assigned to the 377th MASH unit, which is setting up a desperately needed hospital to care for injured soldiers and civilians in Kuwait City.

The best part of the trip was meeting with scores of Kentuckians at every stop. I did my best to answer questions and meet every request, such as taking pictures and sending them to loved ones or simply making phone calls upon my return.

Our itinerary included southern Iraq, where our troops were digging in to face the dangers that go along with the uprising against Saddam Hussein. I can tell you that these brave troops would like nothing better than to lead an international celebration of the end of this brutal dictatorship.

We saw stark evidence of this brutality in the human costs of Saddam's invasion of Kuwait. And we saw it a hundred times over in the burning oil fields he left behind.

As someone said, the ground of Kuwait is bleeding. Smoke from the constant fires is so thick that you drive with your headlights on at midday. The temperature is 90 degrees in the sun and 45 degrees under the smoke. Troops are being rotated because of high pollution in the worst areas.

It will take at least two years to put out the fires, which are more damaging to the environment than is the vast oil spill engineered by Saddam. Kuwait will lose billions of dollars in oil revenues while Iraq loses none of its potential production.

This should strengthen our resolve to help rebuild Kuwait while maintaining sanctions against Saddam and pressing for full payment from every nation pledging to help pay for the war.

I was pleased to join U.S. Senator John Warner (R-VA) in leading this bipartisan delegation of 17 senators. And I was especially pleased to meet with such leaders as our coalition commander, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf. He impressed me, as he has impressed others, as a man who doesn't have to talk too loud to get your attention.

Marine Lt. Gen. Walt Boomer, Army Lt. Gen. Gus Pagonis and the commanders of each major unit provided full briefings on their activities before, during and now after the conflict.

This fast-paced trip reinforced my opinion that it will take as much effort to win the peace as it took to win the war. But is also strengthened my belief that the region is ready for peace. We can advance this great cause by following the example still being set by our own dedicated troops in the Gulf.

Pike airport awarded grant for runway construction

Pike County Judge/Executive Paul Patton announced this week during groundbreaking ceremonies at the Pikeville/Pike County Airport the awarding of a grant in the amount of $1,879,121.67 from the Federal Aviation Administration for the construction of a second runway at the airport at Cowpen. The new runway will be 5,000 feet long and 100 feet wide—4,000 feet will be blacktopped with a 1,000 ft. overrun.

"This is another major step in our continuing effort to create jobs in this region. This additional runway will allow the airport to accommodate the majority of current commercial and business type aircraft which would be involved in business in the region," Patton said. "Such a significant advancement in our airport improves our infrastructure and enhances our ability to attract industry and more jobs for our people."

Patton stated that the grant was in large part due to the interest and assistance of Senator Wendell Ford whose efforts were instrumental in obtaining the grant. Construction on the airport to date has been accomplished through local and state efforts and this project marks the initial involvement of the FAA.

The first phase of the project will be the grade and drain work and the construction of a roadway around the new runway at an estimated cost of 2.1 million dollars. The second phase, the blacktopping of 4,000 feet of the runway, is estimated to cost slightly over one million dollars.

Patton commended Dr. Walter Hatcher and the Hatcher heirs for their contribution to the Pikeville/Pike County airport, noting that the heirs have given approximately 200 acres of flat mountaintop property, created as a result of mountaintop mining and reclamation, for the airport site.

MR/DD awareness month

March is Mental Retardation Developmental Disability Awareness Month and Mountain Comprehensive Care Center encourages all citizens in the Big Sandy area to learn about mental retardation and developmental disabilities.

What is developmental disability? Is it the same thing as mental illness? The answer to that question is no, it is not the same thing as mental illness. A person is considered to have a developmental disability if before they reach the age of 22 his or her ability to perform some major life activities is limited because of mental or physical impairments, or a combination of both, and that condition is expected to continue indefinitely. The impairment can affect the person's cognitive functioning, but not necessarily the person's emotional development. The impairments require that the person receive a combination of individually designed services to achieve maximum independence and life satisfaction. These services would include the teaching of skills needed and designing individual supports for the developmentally disabled person in order for them to reach their desired goals in life.

If you compared a list of goals for a developmentally disabled person and a non-disabled person you would notice a striking similarity of goals. A person with a developmental disability desires many of the same things that non-disabled people want... The right to vote, the desire to be in the community and not simply integrated, but included in their community. They desire to belong. They have a desire to have a job, a place of their own, someone important in their life with whom to grow old, the desire to make decisions, and control their destiny.

A person with a developmental disability also desires to have the "backing" of their friends and family to help them achieve their desired goals in life. So this month, as well as throughout the year, be involved and give of yourself, to help someone who needs your help.

Easter egg is cherished by Martin family

Easter is a special time of the year for families when they gather together around the table, sharing memories as they share a meal, but to the family of Frances Reed Fields Frazier Crisp of Martin Easter is the time to get out the family egg.

On Easter Sunday in 1978, one of Mrs. Crisp's granddaughters brought a unique egg, among the dozen or so she had colored, to the annual egg hunt at Mrs. Crisp's home. The boiled, colored egg had names of each family member inscribed across its smooth surface.

Mrs. Crisp's daughter, Mrs. Janet Howard, decided the egg was a family heirloom and sneaked it from the basket of those to be hidden. When she returned home, she placed it gently on a bed of artificial grass in a sealed basket. Then, the next Easter she brought the egg to the gathering and it has since become a family tradition.

Each year family membership has increased and the egg is now full. It will be retired this Easter and a duck egg will be used to provide more space for names.

"Some of these names are no longer in our family, because of death and divorce, but they are still part of our history," said Mrs. Howard, who plans to keep the original family egg in its basket for anyone to view.

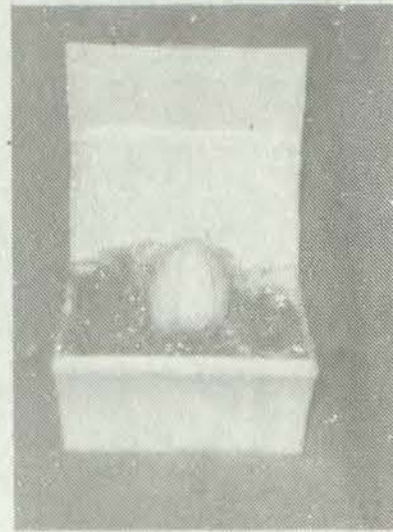

"We'll keep the old egg," she said, "it's a relic to be passed down. We're very cautious with it." Mrs. Howard said the egg had no odor and had evidently dried inside, since "you can hear it thumping inside" the shell.

Around Easter, family members start dropping by Mrs. Crisp's home to view the egg and begin preparations for another family Easter.

This year is also special to the family. "This is the first year in many, many Easters that we will all be home together," Mrs. Howard said.

Mrs. Crisp has three daughters, Mrs. Howard, Phyllis Centers and Pat Shepherd, all of Martin; two son-in-laws; two grandsons and their wives; five granddaughters and their husbands; and seven great-grandchildren. Another great-grandchild is expected soon.

Family treasure

The family of Frances Reed Fields Frazier Crisp of Martin has treasured the family egg, which contains the names of all their family members, since 1978.

Put a lid on it

Cooking is the most common cause of apartment fires. Grease fires are especially scary. The National Safety Council reminds all cooks to pay attention while preparing food. Do not leave pots and pans unattended while you talk on the phone or watch TV.

Do not hang spice racks, pot holders or towels over the stove where they can easily catch fire. Keep the broiler, oven, ventilation ducts and hood grease-free.

If a grease fire should start, the key to gaining control of the blaze quickly is to deprive it of air. In the case of a broiler or oven, turn the heat off and close the oven door.

Refresher course available for former nurses

A refresher course for Registered Nurses who have not been practicing for a period of time and would like to reenter the work force has been developed to address the current nursing shortage.

A report from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Secretary's Commission on Nursing reports a shortage of RN's—of significant magnitude—cuts across all health care delivery settings. Considerable evidence suggests the demand for RN's will continue to increase, but there will not be a commensurate expansion of supply. The total number of full-time equivalent registered nurses needed to fill the current reported vacancies in the hospital and nursing home sectors alone is over 137,000.

Because the technical aspects of nursing have changed dramatically during the last 10 years, the Area Health Education Centers of Kentucky (AHEC) in cooperation with the Kentucky Nursing Continuing Education Network (KNCNE) have developed a Registered Nurse Refrresher Course to address this current shortage of nursing.

The course includes a 12 week self-study didactic and 80 hours of clinical experience under the guidance and supervision of a registered nurse preceptor, for a total of 150 hours of continuing education. The 80 hours of clinical experience may be obtained at The Methodist Hospital of Kentucky who has become a voluntary site for the Registered Nurse Refresher Course.

For further information on the Registered Nurse Refresher Course, contact Methodist's Director of Hospital Education Judy Steffey at 437-3525, or the Southeast AHEC at 439-133, ext. 126.

MR/DD awareness month

March is Mental Retardation/Developmental Disability Awareness Month and Mountain Comprehensive Care Center encourages all citizens in the Big Sandy area to learn about mental retardation and developmental disabilities.

The dignity of risk

There are hidden meanings in the term "mental retardation". For many, this term triggers action words such as "protect," "comfort," "keep safe," "take care," and "watch". Acting on these impulses, at the right time, can be benevolent, helpful, even correct developmentally. However, if they are acted upon too intensely or if they are used exclusively without allowing for each person's (with mental retardation) individuality and growth potential, he/she becomes overprotected and emotionally smothered. In fact, such overprotection endangers the person's human dignity and tends to keep them from experiencing the normal taking of risks in life which is necessary for normal human growth and development.

As we take some time this month to be more aware and sensitive to the person with mental retardation or other developmental disabilities, we need to assess how we would feel and respond to the following questions: What if you never got to make a mistake? What if you were never given a chance to do well at something? What if you were always treated as a child? What if the only chance to be with people different than you was with your own family? What if you never got to make a decision? What if the only risky thing you could do was to "act out"? What if you could do part of the grocery shopping, but weren't allowed to do any because you weren't able to do all of the shopping? What if your money was always kept in an envelope where you couldn't get it? What if you had no privacy? What if you grew old and never knew adulthood?

The above are challenging questions that most non-disabled people do not have to face, but are dilemmas for the person with a developmental disability. As you get involved this month and throughout the year remember the "developmentally disabled" are just "differently-abled" persons just like you and me.

Mental Health Association declares "war on stress"

A "war on stress" has been declared by the Mental Health Association of Kentucky, during this time of fear, crisis and confusion, as events unfold in the Persian Gulf. "When people feel out of control and helpless there is a tendency to push feelings aside to avoid dealing with reality or simply to suffer in silence. The message we want to get out to everyone is, 'Help is available. Call us, we are here,'" said Patrick Raverty, president, Mental Health Association of Kentucky.

The Mental Health Association has new resource materials that takes aim against war related stress, children's emotional conflicts and bereavement. Coping With War is a series of fact sheets that has been specifically prepared to meet the increasing strain on mental and emotional well-being for those whose daily ordeal is to wait and wonder the fate of loved ones in the Gulf.

Information contained in the series includes:

Handling war related stress—War creates a tremendous amount of stress. If it goes unrecognized, stress can severely damage a person's mental and physical health. Stress is defined and tips are provided on management.

Helping children handle war related anxiety—Children experience feelings of helplessness similar to adult. However, they respond differently to the war depending on their understanding and maturity. Tips to help children cope are categorized by age.

Coping with bereavement—The loss of someone close, especially as a casualty of war, is one of life's most stressful events. The process of bereavement is characterized along with tips for coping.

Organizing a mutual support group—Small and even informal gatherings can provide an important and healthy source of strength and encouragement. Tips to plan and organize a support group are provided.

Other fact sheets include helping children cope with grief, helping a friend cope with bereavement, military resource for family support in crisis situations, and a comprehensive listing of resource organizations and military hotlines.

Funding for the Coping With War series has been generously provided by The Sun Company.

The public can obtain these fact sheets and additional information on programs and support groups by contacting the Mental Health Association of Kentucky at (502) 893-0460.

Appalachian center seeks candidates for fellowship

The University of Kentucky's Appalachian Center once again is inviting eastern Kentuckians to apply for the Commonwealth Fellowship Program, an intensive leadership program designed to help residents play an active role in the future of the region.

Applications are available at Prestonsburg Community College.

The program will begin its second year this August with an initial seminar at the Kentucky Leadership Center in Jabez, near Somerset.

The two-year program features a series of seminars and other activities designed to promote effective leadership and participation, including the development of such skills as computer networking, effective communication and team-building.

Specific issues will also be addressed during the seminars, and will deal with economic development, the environment, education, land and water use, community service, public health and government.

"We want to stress that the fellowships are designed for new and emerging leaders from diverse social, economic and educational backgrounds," says Lance W. Brunner, director of the program.

"Although the program is designed for those in the early to middle stages of their working lives, older citizens are not excluded," he adds.

"The only requirement for application is residency in eastern Kentucky for at least the past three years, as well as a demonstrated commitment to improving the region or specific communities."

Daniel H. Barrett, one of the first group of fellows and area parks manager for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Jackson, says his involvement in the program helped him develop friends and acquaintances with whom he intends to stay in contact.

He agrees with Brunner that the next class will "probably be a better one because they'll have a bigger pool of applicants to draw from. Personally, I've recommended it to at least half a dozen people and I've urged them to apply."

Fellows are given a $2,000 fund for working on a community-based project, and a computer that will allow them to establish electronic mail systems and networks with others in the program. They are asked to pay $250 toward purchase of the computer, unless economic hardship makes that impossible.

The program is part of the Appalachian Civic Leadership Project, designed to help citizens participate fully in the democratic process, Brunner says.

Both programs are coordinated by UK's Appalachian Center and employ the resources of the university's Lexington campus, the community college system, the College of Agriculture's Cooperative Extension Service and the Brushy Fork Institute of Berea College.

Substantial start-up funding for the project has come from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation in Battle Creek, Mich.

Applications—and informational brochures—can also be obtained after April 1 at community colleges in Ashland, Cumberland, Hazard, and Somerset, or at the Appalachian Center, 641 S. Limestone St., Lexington, Ky., 40506-0333.

The deadline for submitting applications is May 15.

Second-look

A bovine display at Heilig-Meyers is worth a second look. The realistic display will be on view during the first two weeks in April.

Heilig-Meyers shows work of well-known artist

"Is that cow real?" That will probably be an often heard question during the first two weeks of April when Heilig-Meyers displays life-size, wooden cows painted by J.P. "Happy" Kuhn in each of its 320 stores. In conjunction with the chain's "It's No Bull" promotion, the bovine visitors are sure to attract some attention.

Heilig-Meyers prides itself on preserving the qualities of a small-town merchant, such as personal service and easy credit terms tailored to the customer's budget. It also takes advantage of its huge buying power which allows the chain to offer everyday low prices and wide selection. Since most of the chain's locations are in rural towns with 50,000 or less residents, the company thought it would be fun and appropriate to bring a nationally known artist's rural artwork to town.

Kuhn has been painting cows seriously for five years and says that over 60 percent of the cows he creates are used in people's yards. He also does sheep, pigs, horses and various other animals. He credits his interest in cows to his childhood dreams of being a cowboy and a dairy farmer.

"Happy", a truly unique man, was trained as a fine artist, attending Maryland Art Institute and the Chicago Art Institute. He has been actively involved in the art world since the early 60's and growing up had the influence of a father who was a sculptor and painter.

Highly recognizable in his derby hat, bow tie and bowling shoes, "Happy" spends a large portion of his time painting murals in doctors' offices and hospitals. He recently finished a 2,000 foot mural in the children's ward of the Medical College of Virginia.

"I don't mind if people think I'm a kook," Kuhn said. He thrives on encouraging children to think independently and stretch their imaginations through his artwork. "I think now that I would rather paint for children the rest of my life than for critical acclaim," he said.

Other credits during "Happy's" career include painting a mural at Children's Hospital in Washington, D.C.; album cover designs for Polydor Records; working as a courtroom artist for the Washington Post during the Watergate hearings; rendering portraits of high-level government officials for The McNeil, Leherer Report; many gallery exhibits; portraits of Muhammed Ali and Mickey Mantle, and last but not least, crafting a special cow for the yard of well-known singer Arlo Guthrie.

Heilig-Meyers and "Happy" hope that the cows will bring smiles and laughter into the lives of those who get to see them and will serve as a reminder to customers that Heilig-Meyers is striving to keep its small-town rural philosophy...and "that's no bull!"

Congressman Hopkins proposes investment fund for state businesses

Congressman Hopkins announced recently his proposal for using the coal severance refund as seed money for expanding Kentucky industry.

The Congressman said that money-making business has been leaving Kentucky when its valuable raw materials are processed elsewhere. "One real change we need in Kentucky is to start being an export state for finished products," Hopkins said.

In Congressman Hopkins' plan, some of the coal severance refund money would be used to help build factories in state. The plants, which will employ Kentuckians and use natural resources, would be private enterprises.

"I want to take Kentucky beyond its sawmills," the Congressman said. "The good jobs and good wages are at the other end of the chain where Kentucky's trees become finished wood products such as furniture."

"I propose that a portion of the coal severance tax be invested in state-of-the-art wood processing plants that can be operated by private enterprise right here in Eastern Kentucky and in other parts of the state."

"We shouldn't be letting workers in other states reap the profits from Kentucky's forests," Hopkins said. It's not good enough to have a "grown in Kentucky" label on our trees. We want a "made in Kentucky... by Kentuckians" label on finished wood products."

Highlighting his proposal, the congressman said that the Kentucky Hardwood Industry—which currently supports about 24,000 workers—has room for thousands more employees if processing stayed in the commonwealth. For example, he noted a study showing that for every job in a furniture plant, 12 other jobs are created locally.

With in-state processing, the Wood Industry could grow from an estimated $900 million a year to $3 billion a year, according to the Kentucky Cabinet for Economic Development.

"Eastern Kentucky cannot be viewed as a colony where raw materials are harvested by cheap labor and sent to other areas that reap the profits of manufacturing," Hopkins said.

The Congressman said similar projects could be developed in other areas of Kentucky business, such as agriculture.

"I'm talking about investing in specific ventures that will produce immediate results—jobs—not just temporary, dead-end public works type jobs that we've seen come and go in our state," Hopkins said.

The Congressman made his statement as an invited guest of the East Kentucky Economic Development and Jobs Creation corporation in Hazard.

Leslie named to Hopkins campaign

U.S. Congressman Larry Hopkins, Republican candidate for governor, has named Dr. Larry Leslie of Prestonsburg as chairman of his campaign in Floyd County.

Hopkins praised Leslie for his record of community service and Republican leadership. "I'm proud to have such a loyal Kentuckian on my team," he said.

The announcement of Leslie as chairman coincides with statewide announcements of the Hopkins for Governor leadership team. Area coordinators, chairmen and co-chairs were announced in counties where more than 90 percent of registered Republican voters reside. With more than 200 people named to campaign leadership, announcements are continuing, the Hopkins campaign reported.

Old friend hosts couple's dream vacation in Hawaii

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Breeding recently spent an 8-day "dream vacation" in Hawaii as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell (Cotton) Anderson of Ypsilanti, Michigan, who spent the winter months at Waikiki Shores, Waikiki Beach, Oahu, Hawaii, where they own several condos.

The Andersons entertained the Breeding's daily with private tours of the Island of Oahu, where they saw the USS Arizona Monument at Pearl Harbor, the Punch Bowl National Cemetery, Diamond Head, the Kodak Hula Show, the Dole Pineapple Canning Factory, the Kahala Beach and Golf Course, etc. Each day they dined at the finest restaurants with various cuisines. They shopped at the International Market Place, the Aloha Stadium Flea Market, Liberty House, and the Ala Moana Mall during their stay. They attended four church services at the Koolau Baptist Church in Kaheohe, Hawaii, where the Andersons are active.

Lester and Russell graduated from McDowell High School together in 1950 and always enjoy reminiscing about their school days and friends. Les, Betty, and Russell are Kentucky Colonels and are planning to attend the Kentucky Colonel Barbecue on May 5 in Bardstown.

The Breeding's and Andersons kept in touch throughout the years in Michigan. While Mr. Anderson is still actively involved with his businesses in Ypsilanti, the Breeding's retired from the Lincoln Park, Michigan School System in June 1988, and moved to Lexington. However, Mr. Breeding has since returned to full-time employment as the coordinator of Clinical/Field Experiences and Admissions to the Teacher Education Program at Morehead State University.

Mountain Voices

by Willie Elliott

Twenty rules to improve your writing

Although I am no authority on writing, I think I have taught the subject long enough to offer some fundamental rules that will help a beginning writer improve his/her writing. I offer these rules free of charge. Usually this kind of material demands big bucks, but I give it as my contribution to fellow writers.

Let's start this lesson with some simple material. Begin every sentence with a capital letter. Don't use fragments. Since this is one of the most often violated rules and causes many problems in writing. Don't run your sentences together this will confuse your reader and drive your English teacher crazy. A comma splice is just as bad, it should not be used. Study word pairs that cause trouble. Their is no excuse for making a mistake with these easy words. The last rule in the easy section is this: make sure you spell your words write.

Now we get to material that is somewhat harder. Every writer should have a good grasp of contractions and not confuse them with possessives. If a dog hurts it's leg, the writer needs to use the right word to say that. Don't end a sentence with a preposition. If you do, your reader will wonder where you went to school to. Everyone has been warned against the double negative. My advice is don't never use no double negative (or triple negative, for that matter). You have heard about infinitives: Try to never split an infinitive.

This section deals with the style of writing. Never use a gargantuan word when a small one will do. On the other hand, try not to be redundant, that is saying the same thing twice. If you do this, your teacher may ask you to redo your paper over.

Now we will deal with some usage problems that demand a lot of attention. All good writers should make sure that their subjects and verbs agree. By the same token, pronouns and their antecedents should match up correctly. Everyone expects their writers to follow this rule. We writers must learn about adverbs and adjectives. I say, by all means, use adverbs correct. When using adverbs and adjectives, remember that adjectives are the easiest of the two. Sometimes we writer get lazy and dangling participles sneak into our writing. Using the utmost care, your paper should not have any dangling participles in it. When using who or whom, just guess; everybody else does. As for voice, use this general tip: unless there is a reason for it, make sure that the passive voice is not used.

If a writer has followed all these rules, there is only one thing left to do to insure that he/she has a well-written document proofread the article so it will be as free of errors as this article is.

Strange Enough

by Tim Preston

Only one more to go...

This is the official next-to-the-last Strange Enough that I will write. As of next Friday, I will no longer be a part of the editorial staff here at the Floyd County Times.

Since I have been here, I have had several job offers and I have declined. Some of those jobs offered better pay or better hours, but I felt that I served a better purpose writing for this paper. The sometimes harsh reality of life hits home eventually, and there comes a time when you have to decide what is best for the many (in my case, that is my wife and I) as opposed to what is good for the one (that's me). I have been very happy here. The idea of leaving tears me apart, but that's part of the game we all must play. I doubt that my work here will be missed, but I do like to think that I have tried my best for everyone I wrote about.

To my memory I have only lied to two people since I have been here. My apologies to Ricky Thomsberry and John Hunt, who I told I would show up, and didn't.

I will carry many memories from this job with me as I go; jumping off cliffs on a rope, playing shoptifter for the police, going on dope raids with the sheriff, etc. Also, I promise to not forget the good people (The Dennis Deboard family, the people of Mud Creek and Wheelwright, Richard Elkins, Greg Hall, Jeff Stumbo and Roy Roberts) and so many others.

There have been so many people whose stories came to mean more to me than just something to write about, I couldn't begin to list them all.

Also, if Scott Perry will let me get away with it, I promise that next week's Strange Enough will be my official highly opinionated run down on public officials in Floyd County.

Sound like fun? You bet!

Cruisin' and playin the radio
(Actually it was cruisin' and playing the CD player)

I had a real throwback experience this week when former Grumble Bunny bassist Rob Castle and myself hit the road in his Camaro.

I hate to sound like some old guy who freaks out and starts free-form dancing whenever a Beach Boys song comes on the radio, but as Rob and I rolled down the highway cranking up bone crushing heavy metal music, I felt like a sixteen year old again.

One decade ago (when I was 16) my greatest thrill in life was to borrow my brother Mark's Z28 Camaro, drive ridiculously fast and listen to my KISS tapes as loud as the 8-track would go. Yes kids, that was back in the dark ages when a trip to the bootlegger was the start of any decent weekend and nobody would even think of putting something like a cassette player in a vehicle.

Not better days by any means, only different. Days with lots of mischievous memories attached. It is hard to be 26 years old and think, "Back when I was young", but (once again) that's part of the game.

To this day I hope my parents don't find out about the things I did with that car. They are still convinced that I am not too old to be grounded.

What is that old cliché? You know, the one about the more things change, the more they stay the same?

Allen Central awarded superior rating for student publication "Freedom"

 by Janice Shepherd
Staff Writer

Freedom is an important word in the world of publishing and also to an elite group of students at Allen Central High School who are experiencing the sweat, toil, and fame of publishing.

Allen Central's composition students have been learning about the facets of publishing through writing, editing and layout, and along the way have garnered a superior rating for their magazine "Freedom." The rating was bestowed on this top-notch magazine through the National Council of Teachers of English in a program designed to recognize excellence in student literary magazines.

In the national competition, Allen Central left in their wake schools in Louisville, Lexington and Covington. Approximately 1,159 schools across the United States submitted entries; only 313 of those received a superior rating. A Superior rating was awarded to magazines that showed "outstanding writing, a wide variety of genres, excellent editing, high-quality design and graphics, appropriate to themes of writings, clear evidence of interdepartmental and interdisciplinary involvement with good writings from other subject areas, and that students dominate editorial, production and business aspects. Magazine judging was based on a 100 point system and those scoring between 91 to 100 points were received superior.

Rosemary Weddington, director of the Division of Recognition and Special Events, expressed her sentiments in a letter to those involved in the project. "You honor Kentucky by being among this group of exemplary literary magazines from across the nation," wrote Weddington.

"(It's) not an academy award, but to us, it's close," said Ms. Patricia Watson, writing/layout advisor. She added that this fourth issue of the magazine was "by far the best one produced."

"As teachers, we can tell our students that their work is as good as students' works anywhere in this country, but it takes recognition for them to really believe their worth," said Watson.

Watson also expressed pleasure with her student's editing skills. "Students enjoy reading each other's literary efforts since they personally know the authors. They can identify with them, and they feel that they can write equally as well as their peers. I've found the literary magazine to be a successful tool for teaching!"

Her strategy seems to be paying off. A relaxed learning environment is evident in the classroom. Several students have returned to the class to work on this year's edition of Freedom. Students share their thoughts and the workload. Approximately 40

A grey, changing impact

 by Brian Blake Meadows
First place winner, narratives

Many young people take for granted the things they have. This, however, is no longer a problem for me because of a tragic lesson involving my dad. On February 6, 1988, my dad had a heart attack and the effects of this day have, in fact, made me a better and more responsible person.

My story begins late on Friday, February 5, 1988. I had finally gotten into the cozy confines of my new waterbed in hopes of attaining a good night's sleep. I knew that the mourning would come early and be filled with strenuous physical activity. I was, at the time, participating in a Mormon Church League basketball tournament and practice was slated at an eye-opening 10 a.m. Mr. Dale McKinney was the hard-nosed, very enthusiastic coach of the Martin LDS (the LDS standing for Latter Day Saints). Dale and my dad, Blake, were good friends because they coached basketball at Clark Elementary School, my alma mater. Dale was the boys coach and my dad coached the girls, respectively. So naturally, my brother and my dad went to and participated in every practice we had as the undermanned opposition, of course.

As the morning light began to crack through the window, I thought maybe it would be a little warmer today than it was yesterday. Then, as I listened closely, I could hear the cracking ankles and popping knees of a tired, yet highly respected individual moving down the hall towards my room.

My door opened with a squeak and in a typical calm, collected voice my dad said, "Brian you had better get up. It's almost nine and your breakfast is getting cold."

"O.K., I'm awake. I've been sitting her thinking," I sleepily replied. "Well, let's hustle-up. I've got a few lessons to teach you when we scrimmage this morning," he said confidently.

"Don't be too cocky, Blake. Your boy might be growing up and you might be growing old," I jokingly reverted at him, ever so nonchalantly. My dad was a really good basketball player and like most coaches tried to teach his sons everything he knew about leadership and a winning attitude. After I got up and ate, Brett, Dad, and I loaded up in our 1982 Chevrolet station wagon and started on our way to Martin. In the car, our conversations ranged from U.K. basketball to taunting each other about our friendly competitiveness and rivalries. As we arrived at the church, the sun was shining, there wasn't a cloud in sight, and the little patches of snow that remained glistened like stars on a cloudy night. Then we entered the gym, still taunting each other in the way siblings and fathers can only do.

Practice went by quickly and was pretty strenuous as I had anticipated.

Before we left, Dad was complaining of a pain in his chest that ran down through his rib cage, so he asked me to drive. I had just attained my permit and eagerly, without realizing Dad had a problem, I accepted. Nevertheless, I soon began to see that my dad was very sick and I decided not to stop at my grandmother's as planned, but continue to Highlands Regional Medical Center. Something was strange and at first I didn't realize what it was, but as I drove on, I figured out what was so weird, it was the weather. In less than two hours the gleaming of the sun had been replaced by a dark, cloudy aura of mystique and an almost sadistic drizzle had started to fall. At this point, I sensed a dramatic change in my life about to take place. By this time, we had reached the red light in Prestonsburg, and I was terrified. The color had fled from my dad's face and there, beside me, in the car was a pale, grimacing individual who looked entirely different only hours ago.

"Boys, it's getting pretty hot in this car, isn't it?" Dad inquired in a shaky voice.

"No, Dad, I'm still freezing back here," was the worried reply from Brett, who was in the back seat.

I asked, "Would you like for me to crack your window, Dad?"

"Yes" was all that came from his discolored lips as he began to hyperventilate and the most tragic series of events in my naive life began to unfold.

Smile Awhile

If it's Spring, it must be time to mow the grass

Last week's wave of warmth that swept through our area awakened me to the fact spring has definitely arrived. And while I'm thrilled it's here, I'm somewhat apprehensive about the condition our yard will be in when autumn leaves start to fall.

Passing motorists, who view our lawn from the street, are apt to comment on its unkempt appearance. Though the reason may seem inane to them, our family has gotten used to the idea we will never qualify for "Yard of the Month."

"Are you going to plant grass seed in that mound of dirt?" a neighbor asked.

"Are you crazy! That's the pitcher's mound."

"But it looks horrible. So does that old throw rug. Surely you're going to pick that up, aren't you?"

"Sara," Gertrude lamented. "You shouldn't let the kids do this to your yard. And out of curiosity, what's that big post over on your side of the yard?"

"Oh, that's the T-Ball field."

"Heavenly days, Sara," Gertrude droned. "Is your backyard in the same shape?"

"No, it's in better condition. It's a soccer field."

"If I were you, I'd have those kids put to sleep."

I gritted my teeth and said, "I like to look out and see my son playing even if the yard suffers in the process." With those words, Gertrude shook her head and left, leaving me to ponder earlier years when J.R. and his friends spent hours digging up dirt around our house.

The "Goonies", a loving term bestowed upon the neighborhood kids, would start ringing our doorbell before daylight, rousing J.R. into action as they began their day constructing make-shift sports arenas from our once manicured landscape.

"Sara," they'd ask, "where's the shovels?"

"Why do you need shovels?"

"We have to have dug-outs for the teams."

"Ask her for a rake, too!" another shouted. "There's too much grass out in right field."

"What are you eating, Jason?" I asked.

"Onions," he answered, sheepishly.

Since we had never planted onions—and Jason was one of those children who would eat anything—I knew the tulips which used to grow along our sidewalk had been yanked from their roots to provide snack food for the impish worker.

"Mom, we're thirsty," J.R. called.

"Fix some Kool-Aid."

As honorary maintenance crew for the team, I never cared to furnish nourishment, yet I despised the task of gathering up the plastic glasses when dusk settled on the yard (which by that time had taken on the appearance of the old Wrigley Field).

"J.R." I remember asking one day, "where is the front car seat, I have to go to the store?"

"No, Mom!" he screamed. "We need it for bleachers."

"Your Dad's going to be upset," I said, gazing out over the yard. "By the way, what happened to the tree we planted?"

"You mean that old, scrubby bush. We had to pull it up to make room for our shortstop."

Those were the days I thought. As I stood there reminiscing, a motorist stopped and inquired, "Is this the Paintsville Park and Playground, or the county landfill?"

"See," Gertrude shouted standing amid her neatly aligned jonquils and daffodils. "You've allowed this neighborhood to look like a pig sty! It's a disgrace how you allow the kids to destroy your yard."

With my face aglow, I held my head up high and started back into our home through the dirty, hand-smudged front door. Along the way, I dodged the baseball card and candy bar wrappers that the Goonies and my son had carelessly left on the porch.

Safe within the confines of a neater environment, I gazed out the window at Gertrude as she meticulously pinched petunias and pruned roses, and reflected on the words of my late grandmother, who was forever defending my sisters and me against complaining neighbors by saying, "The grass will come back, but the children won't."

I think my grandmother had the right idea.

hours are spent on the magazine project.

"(It's) collaborative learning," said Watson, who allows the students to work at their own pace.

Student Melissa Corbett thinks the class is unique. "It's our class. We decide what we're going to do and how we're going to do it," said Corbett.

Mendy Rice liked working with the play which the students had written and performed. "We had to revise, revise, and revise," sighed the student.

Alysa Taylor, who will pursue a career as a writer, concurred. "Never fall in love with your first draft," said Taylor.

Inga Ferrell agreed. "Writing is a step by step process," she explained.

Don Daniels, former principal at the school, credited the magazine project as being one of the best learning experiences within the school. Students are involved in the project from beginning to end, including deciding which writings they want to appear in their magazine. They do the actual layout and have the copy print ready for the publisher.

Special art-work for the superior magazine was contributed by Allen Central's art students under the direction of Mrs. Caralita O'Quinn. Heath Wiley, special art student, designed the front cover of the magazine.

Technical assistance was given by Carol Stumbo, teacher at Wheelwright High School, and Willie Elliott, teacher at McDowell High School. Printing was done by Arrow Printing with Jack Howard directing production. Individuals and businesses from the community contributed to the printing costs.

Copies of the magazine are available for $4, but copies are limited; only 300 issues were printed. For more information about purchasing a copy, call the school at 359-9543. Proceeds from the sales help defer publishing costs.

Students on the staff of the award winning magazine included Zelana

Bentley, Carla Coburn, Matthew Collins, Melissa Conn, Juanita Duff, Inga Ferrell, Mary Hall, Evelyn Howard, Susan Mayo, Stephanie Moore, Teresa O'Bryan, Chantel Reed, Mendy Ricke, and Kimberly Robinson.

Students in this year's composition class include Matthew Collins, Mendy Rice, Inga Ferrell, Juanita Duff, Gina Rickman, Michelle Castle, Jessica Weyer, Melissa Corbett, Bryan Lafferty, Ashlee Fraganeno, Alysa Taylor, and Charles Compton. Patricia Watson and Caralita O'Quinn served as faculty advisors.

Students in Mrs. Carlotta Jones' Chapter I Reading class read 1,712 books in four weeks. Students and staff expressed their thanks to parents and Wheelwright Senior Citizens for listening to the students read. Balloons were launched. Each balloon had a card inside telling how many books the student read and the school's name and address. Students hope someone will find their balloons and send the cards back to our school. Winners of the Reading contest won books and medals. Pictured are winners in a second grade class: Glen Rackey, Amanda Williams and Joshua Newman.

Freedom

I punched the accelerator violently to the floorboard and recklessly darted from the red light that had detained my ever-so-important progress. When I had reached Hardees, my father had already died, and my brother was in a frenzy trying to hold him still as he lifelessly rocked back and forth with every tap of the brake or depression of the gas pedal. My speeds reached in excess of 100 miles per hour as I dangerously swerved in and out of traffic. At times, the car bounded harshly and almost uncontrollably, as I struck pothole after pothole on the deeply rutted road known as U.S. 23.

I don't recollect much about the drive to the hospital, and I honestly don't know how I made it. Nevertheless, as soon as I reached the emergency room entrance and put the car in park, Brett had already been in and was returning with people to administer the life-saving process known as cardiopulmonary resuscitation. There, on the cold and wet, snow-dampened concrete they began CPR on my father's lifeless body. Then we (Brett and I) were taken inside as they earnestly continued the process in hopes of saving my father's life. After I had made a phone call to inform my mom that Dad was sick, a nurse came into the ammonia-scented, smoke-filled room to inform us that Dad had regained his own pulse rate and was now alive, but comatose. Soon after, my mother came through the doors crying and in a panic-stricken hysteria. After I calmed her down, I started explaining what had happened. Before I could finish, Dr. Rodney Handshoe appeared and said that he needed to talk to us, all of us. I knew something was terribly wrong.

"Mr. Meadows is going to be flown to Lexington," he said in a professional voice.

"When?" I suddenly asked.

"Within the hour," he said hesitantly.

"Well, can you tell us his condition?" I asked puzzledly.

Dr. Handshoe replied, "Blake has had a major heart attack due to blockage of his arteries. He was clinically dead for a period of close to eight minutes. Things aren't looking good at all, being totally honest with out, he could die within the next twenty-four hours."

When the helicopter arrived, they put Dad on it and took off for Lexington. We traveled by car. My father was in the University of Kentucky hospital for a month; he stayed in intensive care for 3 weeks, and lay in a coma for 13 days. Then he spent 10 weeks relearning some of his motor skills at Cardinal Hill Hospital. Now, my father suffers from brain damage due to the lack of oxygen during the time he was dead. He goes to therapy three days a week, and I'll always hold on to the dream that one day he will be fully recovered, but right now it's like having a kid brother that I have to keep an eye on.

My mother's life has drastically changed and she now devotes most of her time to the welfare of my dad, because without her, he couldn't function. She's the greatest, and the credit she gets, she definitely deserves.

Before my dad got sick, I had it made, but now I know if you want something you've got to work for it. I sometimes wish I had the opportunity to go back and say "I love you" just so he'd know for sure. If this opportunity is present for you, tell your parents you love them because you never know how good you've got it until some one or some thing takes it away. They say God works in strange ways, well this way was strange to me, but I have become a much better person, my family a stronger unit, and one day this lesson I have written about may be taught to you.

Yet, I hope not in such a tragic manner, but one that is needed. For in my life, this lesson has brought about a gray, changing impact.

Editor's note: Brian, who has since graduated from Allen Central, placed in the top four of the SWEET 16 regional finals and went to state competition at Lexington for this narrative. During the printing of Freedom, Brian's father, Blake, died.

Floyd County Technical students place first in regional competition

Students from Floyd County Technical High School won first and second places in the regional competitions of Principles of Technology sponsored by the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA). The event was held Friday, March 22, at Mayo State Vocational School.

Winning were Billy J. Hall Jr. and Derrick Owsley. Hall brought home the first place gold medal and Owsley received a silver medal for second place. Both are also students at Allen Central High School.

Hall, 16, is an all-day student at the technical school where he is a junior. His winning presentation concerned Mechanical Rate demonstrated by stroboscopes. He will compete at the state level in April at Fort Mitchell, near Covington with this demonstration for a chance to attend the national competitions held in Louisville this year. A Wayland native, he is the son of James Hall.

Owsley, a senior, is an alternate for competitions at the state level, and may demonstrate electrical work with solenoids as his project. He is the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Owsley of Estill. He will attend Lexington Electronics Institute and plans to remain in electronics for his career.

These students are to be congratulated for their enthusiasm and energies in the scientific and technical fields of their choice. They represent the kind of workforce members that are being developed at the newly formed Floyd County Technical High School. Traditional vocational skills and technical skills are highly recruited by employers, and are demonstrated by the co-op program which allows these students to gain experience through working for local employers the second semester of their senior year.

New History club forms at Prestonsburg

Prestonsburg High School has announced the formation of the Prestonsburg High School History Club and Society. The history club was formed this year by sponsor Bernard S. Wicker and by co-sponsors Keith Stewart and Bobby Hamilton.

The 50-member club meets on the first and fourth Wednesday of the month at the school. All members of the club are also members of the Kentucky Junior Historical Society (KJHS). As such, club members are eligible to participate in the annual KJHS convention in Frankfort. This year's convention takes place on April 19 and 20 in Frankfort's Civic Center.

A large number of the local club members hope to attend this convention. The members will be presenting exhibits at the convention and any business or local citizens who would like to donate historical objects or interviews should contact Mr. Wicker at the high school. Any monetary donations for the club can also be directed to the high school.

The officers for this new club are Kevin Conley, president; Alan Derossett, vice-president; Krissy Hall, secretary; Stacy Calhoun, treasurer; and Mamata Majmundar, reporter. These officers, the club sponsors and all of the members would like to thank Mr. Robert May, principal of the high school, for his encouragement and backing of the new club.

Prestonsburg grad elected president of Transy board

Commedia dell'arte comes to ACHS

My Nose Turns Red Theater Company recently came to Allen Central High School for a performance presented to the student body.

"Commedia" is a clown-theater play centered around the lives of two traveling clowns, Juice and Shootang. It is called "commedia" after the commedia dell'arte, a style of theater that rose to popularity during the Italian Renaissance. The performers, Jean St. John and Steve Roenker, explained the background to the students and those members from the audience to play roles in the improvisational performance.

The company was contacted through an Arts Showcase by Mrs. Carolita O'Quinn.

Host families sought

Host families are being sought for high school exchange students from Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Holland, Switzerland, Germany, Spain, France, Italy, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Brazil, Ecuador, Japan and Australia for the school year 1991-92 in a program sponsored by the American Intercultural Student Exchange (AISE).

The students, age 15 through 17, will arrive in the United States in August, attend a local high school, and return to their home countries in June 1992. Students are fluent in English, have been screened by their school representatives in their home countries, have spending money and medical insurance.

Host families may deduct $50 per month for income tax purposes.

Families interested in host family program should call Toll Free: 1-800-SIBLING.

A black and white photograph by June Savage Hamilton, a Morehead State University senior from Grethel, will be included in the final round of judging in a national photography competition.

There were 26,800 submissions from the United States and Canada in the 11th annual College Photography Contest, sponsored by Photographer's Forum, a Magazine for the Emerging Professional. Hamilton's entry was among the top five percent of entries selected for final judging, according to notification she received from contest officials.

Hamilton submitted a photograph she had taken in her Basic Black and White Photography class, taught by David Bartlett, MSU associate professor of art. "I selected one from the 'Intimate Moments' series because of the contrast," she said of the entry.

An art and secondary education major with a minor in radio-television, she plans to teach art at the college level. Believing that one needs to develop a skill while in school, Hamilton said that she takes advantage of every opportunity to broaden her educational base and takes pictures regularly.

Hamilton has been entering her work in competitions for some time. Last year, she won the student division award in the Morehead Art Guild's show with a collage and one of her photographs was included in the Spring 1990 edition of Inscape, an MSU student literary publication. Currently she is one of 13 persons with work in the "obscure/Lucidity" exhibit at Prestonsburg Community College.

A nontraditional student, Hamilton believes she has learned the importance of education in succeeding in life. "Whatever I do now has an effect on what will happen later," she said.

Besides photography, painting and sculpture, the Floyd County native enjoys reading and playing the guitar. She is the mother of two: Laurie Lovejoy and Jessi Hamilton.

Honorable Wallace G. Wilkinson, Governor
Honorable John M. Stumbo, County Judge/Executive
Members of the Floyd County Fiscal Court

Independent Auditor's Report

We have audited the statement of assets, liabilities, and fund balances arising from cash transactions of Floyd County, Kentucky, as of June 30, 1990, and the related statement of cash receipts, cash disbursements, and changes in cash balances for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the Floyd County Fiscal Court. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit.

We conducted our audit in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards, the Single Audit Act of 1984, the provisions of OMB Circular A-128, Audits of State and Local Governments, and the Audit Guide for County Governments issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts, Commonwealth of Kentucky. These standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audit provides a reasonable basis for our opinion.

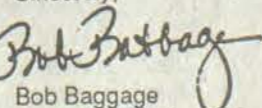

Floyd County, Kentucky, prepares its financial statements on a prescribed basis of accounting that demonstrates compliance with the cash basis and laws of Kentucky, which is a comprehensive basis of accounting other than generally accepted accounting principles. Consequently, certain revenues and the related assets are recognized when received rather than when earned, and certain expenses are recognized when paid rather than when earned, and certain expenses are recognized when paid rather than when a liability is incurred. This cash basis system does not require the maintenance of a general fixed asset group or general long-term debt group of accounts. Accordingly, the accompanying financial statements are not intended to present financial position and results of operations in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

In our opinion, the accompanying financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the assets, liabilities, and fund balances arising from cash transactions of Floyd County, Kentucky, as of June 30, 1990, and the related statement of cash receipts, cash disbursements, and changes in cash balances for the year then ended, in conformity with the cash accounting basis described above.

Our audit was made for the purpose of forming an opinion on the financial statements of Floyd County, Kentucky, taken as a whole. The accompanying additional information, provided on Schedules A through E., including the schedule of federal financial assistance is presented for purposes of additional analysis and is not a required part of the financial statements. This information has been subjected to tests and other audit procedures applied in the audit of the financial statements and, in our opinion, is fairly presented in all material respects in relation to the financial statements taken as a whole.

As required by the Single Audit Act of 1984, we have reported on the county's financial statements (page 1), internal control structure, and compliance with laws and regulations.

As in prior years, we found the county's accounting procedures and compliance policies in good order. We wish to commend the county for its effort and urge that similar efforts be made in the future.

Sincerely,

Bob Baggage

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

OFF TO KNOXVILLE

Here it is Wednesday and I am writing my column a day earlier than I normally do because I am getting the sports section ready for Friday's paper.

You see I will be in Knoxville by the time this column comes out Friday morning where I will be covering the National Junior Pro Varsity basketball tournament at the Northwest High School Gym at 8 a.m. The Wayland Lady Wildcats will be going after the national title and they have a legitimate shot at capturing it this year. Watch Wednesday's sports' section for pictures and stories.

I sure hope that those fine people who have junior pro programs will see to it that it never goes down and that someone will take the initiative to keep their programs strong.

WE NEED TO HOST EAST REGIONAL

Some of the coaches in our junior pro programs would like to have the opportunity to host the East Regional in our area. I certainly believe we would be capable of handling the task. We have the motel facilities and all the eating places. The gyms are there to be used. We have all that it takes.

I can say for sure it brings dollars into an area. I know, I've been there. I'm positive that our county and city officials would be more than glad to help out. Such a thing should be pursued by our junior pro folks.

Another thing I would like to see in our program in Floyd County — strong Floyd County teams. When we got to these regional, state and national tournaments we should put together strong Floyd County teams — I mean training league, junior varsity and varsity teams. That is what the other teams do — Southeast Lexington teams, Henderson County, Hopkinsville and Madison County. That is why they are able to compete. Not that our teams don't compete — they do — but we could go farther.

Our varsity all-star team was made up of Floyd County players. They were one of the strongest teams in the tournament. We need our junior varsity and training league teams the same way.

Well, after this weekend, the junior pro season will end and another junior sport will begin — Little League baseball. Robert Damron, president of the Harold-Allen-Prater (HAP) Little League says their season will open the middle of April. The Beaver Creek Little League usually gets underway late in May. It will be another exciting baseball season. We certainly look forward to it.

All the farm leagues, as well as senior and Babe Ruth leagues, will get underway in May also. At last count we have about 70 teams in Floyd County's youth leagues. That's great. Can you imagine how many coaches and assistants it takes to handle that many kids. How about moms and dads. Whoa! Practices. Games. Don't worry mom, it's just two and a half months long.

Plenty of good high school baseball on tap during the next two months. Floyd County should be in the thick of things regional-wise this year. Wednesday, we will have a team-by-team look at the five high school teams and in next Friday's sports' section we will take a close look at girls' high school softball.

Well, I have to go find my other shirt and get ready for my trip down 1-75. Until Wednesday, Good Sports everyone!

McDowell sweeps doubleheader over Letcher County, 7-3, 13-0

The 1991 Floyd County high school baseball season got underway Monday evening at the Allen Park as the McDowell Daredevils (2-0) swept a doubleheader from the Letcher County Eagles (0-2) 7-3 and 13-0.

Toby Vance (1-0) went the distance for McDowell in the first game giving up but five hits. Vance fanned six batters while issuing four walks. Eric Blair got the loss for Letcher County. Blair walked two batters and yielded four hits in giving up six runs in the two-thirds of an inning that he worked. Blair gave up a three-run home run to Shawn Newsome in the first inning.

Letcher County took a 2-0 lead off Vance in the top of the first inning on a walk to Blair and an RBI double to Joe Smith. Vance got Clay Collier to pop out and Shawn Campbell then lined a single to center field to score Smith. Kevin Fouts popped out to first base for the third out.

McDowell didn't waste any time in getting on the scoreboard. Scott Ousley led off for the Daredevils with a base hit and promptly stole second. Ousley came around to score on an RBI single by Bud Kidd. Catcher Barry Hall singled to right field setting up the blast by Newsome, a long drive over the left field fence.

Vance kept the inning going with a solid base hit to center and Britt Stumbo reached on an error at first base. Earl Cook reached on a fielders choice when Stumbo was caught in a run down. Cook scored on a fielders choice by Ousley.

McDowell picked up another run in the third inning when Kain Caudill, who led off the inning with a base hit, scored on a single by Barry Hall.

Letcher County scored their final run in the top of the fifth on a RBI double by Collier that scored Smith who had reached on an error by Kidd at short.

McDowell collected 11 hits in the game with Ousley, Kidd, Vance and Stumbo getting two hits each. Stumbo tripled in the fourth inning leading off but was nailed at the plate trying to score on a slow roller off the bat of Cook.

Newsome had three RBI's in the game. Ousley picked up an RBI as did Barry Hall. Kidd had one RBI.

Coach Frank Campbell's ball club collected but five hits and committed six errors. McDowell committed only one error in the contest.

In the night cap of the doubleheader, Barry Hall pitched a two-hitter in the shortened game as McDowell posted a lopsided 13-0 win over Letcher County.

McDowell scored all their runs in the first inning as they sent 16 batters to the plate. The big blow was two run home runs by Barry Hall which cleared the left field fence, scoring Scott Ousley who had reached on a lead off error. After Shawn Newsome walked and Vance singled, Britt Stumbo cleared the bases with a two-run triple, his second in the twin bill. Later in the inning, Hall had a two RBI double and Earl Cook finished the scoring for McDowell with a two run double.

Letcher County scored their lone run in the top of the first inning when Jeremy Spears led off with a walk and came around to score on catcher Scott Jones' RBI single.

Hall struck out three batters in the win. He issued three bases on balls and yielded only two hits.

McDowell played error free baseball in the second game, while the Eagles had six errors.

Hall led the Daredevils at the plate with four RBIs. Stumbo drove in two and Cook also had two RBIs. Scott Ousley had one run batted in.

Hall (1-0) got the win while Jason Campbell (0-1) took the loss. Campbell had no strike outs and walked three batters.

McDowell will host the Magoffin County Hornets in a doubleheader at the Allen Park on Monday, April 1. The Daredevils will travel to Wheelwright for a doubleheader on Wednesday, April 3.

Akers notches victory :

Betsy Layne opens season with 15-3 victory over Millard

Betsy Layne coach Junior Newsome and his baseball nine got the 1991 high school baseball season off to a good start with a 15-3 road win over the Millard Mustangs Monday night.

Todd Akers went the distance in picking up the win. Akers recorded five strike outs and walked two batters while yielding only four hits in the contest. David Little absorbed the loss for Millard (0-1). Little gave up six runs in the third of an inning he worked.

Betsy Layne made it a rout in the very first inning when they scored eight times to take an 8-0 lead. Keith Hall walked to lead off the inning and later stole second. Chris Potter followed with a walk and Adam Gearheart singled to load the bases for the Bobcats. Darren Gearheart brought home the first run of the game when his fly ball was misplayed in the outfield, scoring Hall. Todd Aker's drew a one out walk forcing home the second run of the game. Danny Page then sent two runners home with an RBI double. A passed ball allowed the fifth run of the inning to score.

Barry Clark and Barry Collins walked to load the bases again. Hall singled to drive in a run and Potter's sacrifice fly sent the seventh run of the inning scampering home. An infield error accounted for the final run of the inning.

Millard cut the lead to 8-2 when they plated two runs in the bottom of the first. Betsy Layne added to their lead by pushing across five more runs in the second inning and two in the fourth.

Millard had only four hits in the game — Steve Coleman's double, David Little's RBI triple, Jason Adkins' RBI single and Ronald Adkins' base hit.

Adam Gearheart, Page, Hall and Clark each had two base hits for Betsy Layne. Page and Gearheart each had doubles for Betsy Layne. Hall, Page and Potter each picked up two RBI's in the Bobcat win.

Betsy Layne (1-0) will travel to Cocoa Beach, Florida next week for a tournament in the Sunshine State.

Little's single sends Millard past Rebels

The Allen Central Rebels got their 1991 baseball season off to a rocky start as they traveled to Millard Wednesday night to open the new season. Allen Central (0-1), the 58th District defending champions, dropped a 5-3 decision to the Millard Mustangs (1-1) in their opening game on the road.

David Little's two-out, two-run single in the bottom of the fourth inning enabled the host Mustangs to rally past the Rebels. Little's fourth inning hit gave the Mustangs a 4-3 lead and he later scored the fifth run when he stole third base and came home on an error.

In the decisive fourth inning, Brett Moore started the game winning rally with a walk. Pinch hitter Gary Adkins' infield grounder was thrown away as Moore scored the first run for the Mustangs, who trailed 3-1 going into the inning. Adkins stole second before Little's basehit.

Allen Central took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Stewart Hall walked and Stevie Robinson followed with a sharp single to left field. B. J. Aldrich picked up an RBI when he sent Hall home by lining a basehit up the middle. Starting pitcher John Martin's fielders choice scored Robinson.

The Rebels went on top 3-0 when they plated a run in the third inning. With two out, Robbie Sexton drew a walk. Phillip Richie singled advancing Sexton to third base. Frank Martin got an RBI single that scored Sexton with two out.

Millard scored their first run in the third inning off Martin. Neil Lawson drew a lead off walk from Martin and Steve Coleman singled. Jamie Damron was hit-by-a-pitch to load the bases. Lawson came home with Millard's first run on a grounder by Ron Adkins.

Jamie Damron picked up the win for the Mustangs in going the distance. Damron gave up four Rebel hits while striking out five and he issued eight base on balls. Millard had only two hits in the game.

Chuck Laferty suffered the setback for Allen Central in relief of Martin in the fourth inning. Laferty allowed the final two runs in the fatal fourth. Laferty fanned two Mustang batters. Martin, who started for Allen Central, pitched the first three innings allowing one hit, two earned runs while striking out four. Martin

McDowell Daredevils To Field Experienced Team

For the McDowell Daredevils and coach Greg Johnson the 1991 high school baseball season should be a fruitful one. Johnson returns several starters from last year's club that put together a winning season.

The pitching staff of the Daredevils should be one of the better ones, not only in the 58th District, but also in the 15th Region. The staff will be headed by Toby Vance, a hard throwing right hander who likes to mix his pitches. Vance has one problem — being consistent for seven innings.

Also on the hill for McDowell will be Barry Hall. Hall is a hard thrower, but to be a consistent winner he must come up with a second pitch. Bud Kidd will be a third starter for Johnson's diamond nine. Kidd has perhaps the best assortment of pitches than any other Daredevil hurler. Shawn Newsome will round out the rotation for McDowell.

Defense will be a very strong point for McDowell this baseball season. Britt Stumbo will anchor down the right side of the infield at first base. Stumbo brings a big bat to the Daredevil lineup. Barry Hall will be behind the plate when he is not pitching. A long ball hitter, Hall is a good .400 plus hitter.

Bud Kidd plays short for the Daredevils and has good range at the position. He has a knack for going deep in the hole in fielding grounders and being able to throw out runners.

Shawn Newsome, the number four hitter in the McDowell lineup, also hits with power. A good consistent hitter, Newsome roams the outfield with the best of them.

Kain Caudill brings some speed to the McDowell scheme of things. The Daredevils will be a running team and challenge any of the opponents catchers.

McDowell will play a 36 game schedule this spring, highlighted by a Saturday tournament on April 13. The tournament will involve Allen Central, Belfry and Mullins as well as the Daredevils and will be played at the Allen Park.

McDowell will have an opportunity to play on the new Alice Lloyd College field when they face Cordia on April 14 in a 10 a.m. game.

The Daredevils will play 16 doubleheaders in the next two months.

RUMORED TO REPLACE COMSTOCK

After Pikeville College head basketball coach Marc Comstock unexpectedly resigned to accept a position at Lincoln Memorial University, rumors began circulating as to who will replace him. Some familiar names include Randy McCoy of Elkhorn City, Raymond Justice Jr. of Belfry, Alvin Ratliff of Johnson Central, Danny Adams of Magoffin County, Ralph Good of Feds Creek. All names are rumored as a possible future Bears' coach. With either one, Pikeville could not go wrong.

Applications for the job are now being accepted by Pikeville College.

AMS intramural girls basketball program to play on Wednesdays

Adams Middle School girls' basketball coach, Gaye Hatfield, announced that the AMS girls' intramural basketball program would be getting started soon and all games will be played on Wednesday nights at the Adams Middle School gym. Two games will be played each Wednesday beginning at 5:30 p.m.

"We offer this program to all girls in our school and also to girls at Clark and Prestonsburg Elementary schools who will be coming to Adams Middle School later," said Hatfield. "Our principal, Mr. (Thomas) Tackett has always been interested in the intramural program and it was with his approval that we have set it up."

Hatfield said the purpose of the program is designed to teach all girls interested in playing basketball, the basic skills of the game in an informal setting so that they may gain experience and confidence. "This enables many girls to join our regular team in the fall," added Hatfield.

"This year we have had two young men who have volunteered a lot of time in coaching our girls," Hatfield explained. "They are polite and courteous gentlemen. They have taught the girls a lot about a basketball game, because it is a sport they know a lot about." Hatfield was referring to Chris and Craig Collins, standout basketball players at Paintsville High School.

"Their father, Charlie, has also helped with the girls' program by refereeing," stated Hatfield. "We would like to thank all three of them and let them know how much we appreciate them."

Hatfield went on to offer praise to Bennett Leslie for his contribution to the girls' program the past four years. "Bennett has been a valuable asset to our program, and we would like to thank him also," added Hatfield.

Hatfield said that the public is invited to come and watch all the girls' games. There is no admission charge as all games are free. "We just want people to come out and see what a good job our girls do," remarked Hatfield.

McDowell (Continued from B 4)

With all the talent this ball club has coming back, the nod for first place has to go to the Daredevils with the Betsy Layne Bobcats a very close second. Prestonsburg is going to be a young club, but with a lot of talent also. Allen Central, defending district champions, lost a lot when Bret Meadows graduated early and went to join Uncle Sam. The loss of Meadows will affect the Rebels pitching corp. Wheelwright comes into the season with some untested players. They could be a surprise in the race this baseball season.

"We'll be alright this season," said Johnson of his ball club. "We will be a good ball club. Britt (Stumbo) will help us a lot with his bat. We can go deep in our pitching and that will be a big help to us. We also will be a good defensive team."

Johnson sees Betsy Layne as a strong contender for the district championship this season.

"They have two pitchers who will be tough to beat," said the McDowell mentor. "Plus the fact they are going to be a solid ball club."

Like most coaches, Johnson likes to divert attention away from the strength of his club. The McDowell Daredevils will definitely be a contender this baseball season for the district title and a regional tournament berth.

Trifecta...

by Mike Rosenberg

"There was a crooked man, who walked a crooked mile..."
These words are as appropriate as any I can find to start an article about everyone's favorite whipping post, UNLV. This team is under fire yet again, this time for recruiting violations in regard to UCLA freshman Ed O'Bannon. Jerry Tarkanian wants the NCAA to stay away and just let his team play basketball instead of causing his players endless distractions.
Well, why shouldn't they be distracted? The NCAA decided to be lenient toward the boys out west and delay their probation a year so the Rebels could defend their national championship. Of course, in the same year, the NCAA gave out one year probation to three tournament caliber teams (Maryland, Illinois and Missouri). Lest we forget, the Wildcats are still serving their probation. The NCAA is clearly guilty of bowing to the almighty dollar in the case of UNLV. Would the NCAA be hurt by the lost revenues caused by a UNLV-less tournament? Probably not, especially in light of the $1 billion (yes, that's not a misprint) deal with CBS to carry the tournament.

For the love of money, the powers-that-be in college basketball has given a reprieve to a coach who has successfully coached two teams to NCAA probation (Long Beach State went on probation just after "The Shark" left) while punishing other teams who had done relatively less, in the eyes of the Infractions Committee. Whatever happened to rivalry and playing for fun?
Anyway, the Rebels will be in the tournament as obvious favorites to defend their national title. The only question that looms is—can anybody beat Larry Johnson, Stacey Augmon & Co. The answer is yes, although with difficulty.

Everyone remembers the 103-73 shellacking of Duke (I sure remember) in the final game. Most people forget that Vegas just got by Ball State (with power forward Paris McCurdy, remember him?) 68-67 in the round of 16. Ball State could provide a clue. Take care of the ball, make every possession count and get the ball to the big men—that might be a way.
As for who could beat Vegas. My best bets would be Arizona (if they play well), Georgetown (those big men can dominate anyone on a given night), LSU (same logic), Ohio State or Duke (well, I can hope). Taking nothing away from Vegas, you've got to call them the favorite. I've never seen a starting lineup with that much firepower.
Anyway, it's tournament time. Thoughts of probation go out the window for the next few weeks as the armchair hoops junkies try to out-guess the coaches in the yearly race for #1.

SPRING TURKEY SEASON OPENS IN APRIL

Kentucky turkey hunters can look forward to improved hunting opportunities as the April 17 season opening day approaches.
Turkey hunting popularity is growing rapidly. It's an intensely challenging sport which requires exceptional calling and marksmanship skills as well as a considerable amount of advance scouting and preparation.
The wild turkey has made a dramatic comeback in Kentucky over the past decade. Thanks to the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' wild turkey restoration program, turkeys can now be found in 118 counties where suitable habitat is abundant. Fayette and Bourbon are the only counties where turkeys have not been reintroduced, due to lack of proper habitat.
Kentucky's current wild turkey population numbers more than 25,000 and that figure is expected to climb steadily over the next 20 years. As populations have taken hold, regulations have been developed to allow the carefully controlled harvest of wild turkeys where populations can support it.

"Right now, our success rate is about 20 percent. This means that for every 100 turkey hunters in the field, 20 will get a quality bird," says George Wright, KDFWR's turkey program coordinator. "Eventually, we'd like to generate a 30-33 percent success rate."
All hunters born on or after January 1, 1975, (except those under age 10) must have a valid hunter education course completion card in their possession while hunting in Kentucky and a turkey hunter under age 18 must be accompanied by an adult capable of maintaining reasonable control over the young hunter at all times. The spring season limit is two turkeys and only birds with visible beards may be taken.
Shooting hours during the spring gobbler season are one half hour before sunrise to 1 p.m.
Turkey hunters must possess a valid Kentucky hunting license (unless legally exempted) and a valid turkey permit.
Hunters must tag their turkey immediately after harvest and the bird must be checked on the same day at the nearest open check station. Turkeys may not be hunted on any baited area. A baited area is any place where feed, grains or other substances capable of luring wild turkeys have been placed. Remember, an area is considered baited for 10 days following the complete removal of all bait.

Although it's not a legal requirement, wearing hunter orange is strongly recommended for turkey hunters — especially when they're changing locations in the field or carrying a harvested bird.
Turkey hunters should obtain a copy of the "1991 Kentucky Turkey Hunting Guide" and read it carefully for complete season information. The free booklet is attached to the turkey permit and also is available at most locations where hunting and fishing licenses are sold and from the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Division of Information and Education, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, KY 40601.

IT'S A FACT.....

The Elkhorn City Cougars hit four home runs in one inning against the Millard Mustangs. The feat took place on April 23, 1987. The national record is 11 home runs in one inning by Choctaw, Oklahoma against McGuinness, Oklahoma back in 1977. That's a fact.....Lawrence Buell of Middlesboro, KY holds the national record for most hits in one inning, five. He had four hits in the first inning versus Pineville, KY and then in the same inning hit a home run. That's a fact.....Donnie Wright of Dorton High School is in the National Record Book for hitting a home run in four consecutive times at bat. Wright accomplished the feat against Millard on April 14, 1987. The record is six by Timothy Morgan of Georgia. That's a fact.....Marty Burke hit three grand slams in one game for Birmingham Huffman, Alabama—a national record. Burke hit two in one inning to tie a national record. That's a fact.....William Campbell of Middlesboro, KY holds the national record for the most RBIs in one inning — 10.....In the United States over 16,000 teams participated in boys' basketball which involved 517,271 athletes. There were 16,188 girls' basketball teams which involved only 389,668 players.....The most popular boy's sport nationwide is basketball. The most participated sport in the nation for boys is football. For the girls, the most popular and participated sport is basketball.

UNDERSTANDING THE BAROMETER'S EFFECT ON BASS LURES

Most bass fishermen agree barometric pressure has an effect on how actively the fish will bite, but at least one tournament pro thinks the barometer has an effect on his lure as well.
"When the barometer is high, such as right after a front," explains well known angler and Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member Ricky Green, "I just can't feel a plastic worm as well."
"I know my lure is crawling along the bottom, but I don't feel it nearly as distinctly as I do when the barometer is lower."
Why not use a heavier slip sinker? "When you fish a plastic worm Texas style, with a slip sinker on the line directly in front of the worm, you

"If the bass are suspended, this is a much more effective way to fish for them, and with the heavier sinker you can feel the bottom."
Another lure that might be used at this time is a crankbait, explains the Johnson pro, because it will also work mid-range depths for suspended bass. Bass may not want a lure moving as fast as most crankbaits do, however.
"A crankbait is probably the easiest lure to use to catch bass under these conditions, if they'll hit it," says Green, "but suspended bass, particularly those found on high pressure days when the sun is bright, are not always very active fish."
"With a Carolina-rig worm, you can bounce the sinker along the bottom as fast or as slow as you need to make the fish bite. If you use a high flotation plastic worm, it will dart erratically up off the bottom behind the sinker where the fish are more likely to go after it."

HOROSCOPE

March 31 through April 6

By C.C. Clark

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

This is a busy week for you, especially at work or school. Try to keep a level head. It is important to clarify any details that could cause problems later on.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

A friend or relative who makes you happy will visit soon. It is important to look your best, as you may gain a new relationship or rekindle an old flame.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

This should be a week of relaxation for Geminis. Take time away from those things that give you stress and just sit back and take it easy. You deserve it.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

Straighten out loose ends this week, especially when dealing with finances. Check those details closely and you may find some extra cash you didn't know you had.

LEO (July 23 - August 22)

This is an exciting week for lucky Leo. At times things may seem crazy, but even the madness will be fun. Share this time with special friends and loved ones.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22)

Don't let loved ones be overly critical of you. They probably don't realize the kind of pressure you have been under. If you explain things calmly, they will understand.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22)

Celebrate with friends this week, but don't undertake the burden of making sure everyone has a good time. Let others take charge of organizing some of the activities.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21)

Be affectionate toward loved ones; they need your undivided attention. You will be surprised how good you feel by helping others make a better life for themselves.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 21)

Things that wouldn't normally upset you probably will this week. Avoid gossips. The topic may seem interesting at first, but it will soon make you uncomfortable.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19)

Whatever happens this week, don't take out your frustrations on loved ones or friends. Making these people angry will only cause you more headaches.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)

It is time for a change, and you are most definitely ready for whatever might come your way. A friend may offer advice, but it is probably best to follow your intuition.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)

It is important for Pisces to stay away from situations that would involve making hasty decisions. Be careful not to overlook an important detail on the domestic front.

TV PIPELINE

Odd-job career was short for successful Robert Duvall

By Polly Vonetes

Q: Who was it that played Gus in Lonesome Dove? Please tell me a little about him, how old he is, what else he has been in, etc. —Betsy Paton, Tribes Hill, N.Y.

A: Robert Duvall played Augustus (Gus) MacRae in Lonesome Dove. A self-confessed "Navy brat," Duvall, who was born in San Diego, Calif., Jan. 5, 1931, grew up in Virginia, where his Naval officer father was stationed. He earned a degree in drama at Principia College in Elsah, Ill., before going on to study at New York's Neighborhood Playhouse under Sanford Meisner, working odd jobs to support himself. The odd jobs didn't last long. Within a few years, he had been seen in more than 60 productions on and off Broadway. Since his film debut as Boo Radley in To Kill a Mockingbird, Duvall has worked steadily at his craft. Some of his films include The Detective, True Grit, *M*A*S*H*, The Godfather, Network, Apocalypse Now, The Conversation, The Great Santini and Tender Mercies. His television credits include the six-hour miniseries Ike for ABC and The Terry Fox Story for HBO. He has earned four Oscar nominations and a best actor award for Tender Mercies.

Q: Recently I have been watching reruns of the series Stingray. Could you please give me some information on the lead actor, Nick Mancuso? He seems as mysterious as the character he portrays. —Debbie Wayman, Gary, Ind.

A: Nick Mancuso, born in Italy in 1956, was raised in Toronto. The acting bug bit him in high school when he starred in a production of Hamlet. However, it wasn't until after he earned his psychology degree from the University of Guelph that he became a full-time actor. In 1982 he won Canada's Genie Award as best actor for his performance in the film Ticket to Heaven. He currently resides in Los Angeles.

Q: Could you please give me an address for Oprah Winfrey? I've looked up to her for years. As a black woman, she has given me a lot of strength and encouragement to follow my dreams. On her talk show she did a segment on alcoholism. I have, since then, become a recovering alcoholic. I will soon be celebrating a year in recovery, and I wanted to write her and share this special time in my life. I pray you can help me, if not, maybe by some chance she might read this in your column. —Rita Broussard, Palmer, Alaska

A: Congratulations, Rita. I am sure Oprah Winfrey would be very happy to hear from you. The address I am sending you is of her production company, where she should receive your letter. Write to: Oprah Winfrey, Harpo Productions, 35 E. Wacker Drive, Suite 1782, Chicago, IL 60601. Good Luck!

Please send your questions about television past and present to: Polly Vonetes, TV Pipeline, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, Texas 76102-0748.

Alfred Hitchcock set pace with 'The 39 Steps'

By Steven Alan McGaw
The 39 Steps (1935)

Alfred Hitchcock instituted many of his film trademarks with this suspense classic. Madeleine Carroll was the first in a long line of "icy blondes," Robert Donat was the innocent man wrongly accused, and there is no shortage of things that are not what they appear to be.

Film historians tell us lines were added at the end of the film to remind us what "the 39 steps" (the MacGuffin, for true Hitchcock aficionados) even is; the plot itself is just a vehicle to bring Donat and Madeleine Carroll together. Their biting repartee set the standard for romantic comedy for years to come.

There are, certainly, some breathlessly exciting touches in the film. The first such chill comes as Donat grimly realizes powers on both sides of the law wish to see him convicted for the murder of the strange Teutonic woman who told a garbled tale of espionage just hours before her demise. She'd told him to beware of a man missing part of his little finger; shortly after, he finds himself in the man's living room! Donat stumbles into a political meeting where he is welcomed with surprising fervor. Minutes after, he's introduced as the featured speaker of the evening... and raises the crowd to its feet.

Hitchcock made slicker, darker films than this, but The 39 Steps remains a stylish, very entertaining film.
