A Halo man was indicted for murder Monday by a Floyd County Grand Jury for the 1978 shooting death of a Letcher County man.

A murder indictment against Wendell Ray Newman was returned with 64 criminal indictments Monday morning by the grand jury. Twelve sealed true bills were also issued concerning juveniles and domestic violence cases.

Wendell Ray Newman is accused of shooting Walter Hall with a 9 millimeter pistol on July 14, 1978.

Newman was originally charged with conspiracy to commit murder but at a hearing on May 10, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley ordered that the case be sent back to the grand jury for consideration of a murder charge.

In other indictments returned Monday, Romie Adams, 59, of Paintsville was indicted on a first degree rape charge after allegedly sexually assaulting a Prestonsburg Community College student earlier

Midday mishap

Three people were injured Tuesday afternoon when the car they were in plunged over an embankment near the Emma Bridge on Rt. 1428 near Allen. Kenneth Webb, the driver, David Craft and Luther Johnson all of Prestonsburg were taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center and treated and released. Kentucky State Police trooper Eddie Crum said the driver lost control of the vehicle. Members of the Prestonsburg Fire and Rescue team had to use stokes baskets to bring the injured up the steep slope where the accident occurred. Trooper Crum said the injured were not wearing seat belts. (photo by Susan Allen)

Times to increase to 50¢ on July 1

What goes up, must go

The per copy price of The Floyd County Times will increase July 1 to 50 cents, Times publisher Scott Perry announced this week.

The price increase, the first for the Times in several years, is necessary to offset the rising costs for producing the twice-weekly paper, Perry said.

"Like any business, ours has been hit hard by the rising costs of materials, postal rate hikes, and increases in the minimum wage," Perry said. "We've held the line against inflation as best we could, passing only a bare minimum of our cost increase on to our readers and. advertisers." "Most people," Perry added, "don't realize that each single copy of The Floyd County Times costs nearly $1.50 to produce. At 50 cents, readers are still getting a bargain. What else can you buy for a third of what it costs?" Floyd County readers can beat the per copy rate increase, Perry said, by becoming mail subscribers to the paper. In-county subscribers can get a year's worth of the Times, 104 issues, for $24 and save $80 on the new newsstand prices. "The Floyd County Times is Kentucky's best, most widely circulated non-daily newspaper," Perry said. "Readers can still buy it for less than the price of a cup of coffee." The Times publishes each Wednesday and Friday, and offers same-day delivery, by mail, to in-county subscribers.

Three district judges will begin rotating their schedules soon to temporarily replace Floyd County District Judge Harold Stumbo who is recovering from an angioplasty procedure to unblock an artery.

Judges Douglas Combs of Perry County; Daniel Reid Sparks of Johnson, Lawrence and Martin counties: and Charles Huffman of Pike County will begin taking turns presiding over the Floyd County district court docket until Judge Stumbo returns.

A secretary for District Regional Judge Edwin Rice said Tuesday that the stand-ins would "probably" begin immediately assuming the responsibilities for Stumbo.

Judge Huffman said Tuesday that he hadn't received official confirmation, but that Judge Rice had talked to him about the situation.

"I said I'd be glad to help out," Huffman said. "Our authority to act would begin immediately, but for practical reasons we'll have to check our schedules to see when we can be in the courtroom."

Judge Stumbo is recovering in an Atlanta hospital after undergoing a procedure to open a blocked artery.

Mayor casts tie-breaking vote :

Budget debate is heated

By Tess A. Whitmer Assistant Editor

Mayor Ann Latta's tie-breaking vote Monday resolved a city council deadlock and ended a heated debate on Prestonsburg's city budget for the 1991-92 fiscal year.

Bank" theft is solved with arrest of Prestonsburg man

Jeff Stumbo.

Stumbo.

The first bank robbery to take place Conn and John Hunt and detective in Prestonsburg in several years happened before the bank was even built.

Late last Wednesday night copper tubing worth over $100 was taken from the construction site of the First Guaranty Branch Bank in Prestonsburg. to table the second reading of the budget ordinance drew a 3-3 vote from the council. City Attorney Larry Brown advised the mayor could vote to break the tie.

Collins had asked that the second reading be tabled until council could Councilman Billy Ray Collins review a line-item, detailed version questioned Latta's authority to vote of the spending plan. Mayor Latta

Jimmy D. Hall, 26, of West

by unlawful taking and lodged in the on the budget issue after his motion responded that it would be "impossible" to provide a financial plan as detailed as Collins requested.

"We got $2.8 million, that is $683 for every man, woman and child in this town," Collins said. "I just want to understand where it is going."

Collins also alleged a conflict of interest on voting on the budget by Councilmen Bill Callihan and Charles Hale, Collins contended that Callihan's income and Hale's insurance came from the city and therefore the outcome of the vote affected them personally.

"I wish I was as honest as some people project themselves to be," Hale responded to Collins' comments.

Councilman Jerry Fannin took the side of Collins on his request to see a breakdown of the lump sums budgeted in each city department. "There is no use in us having a city council because (the budget) is already decided before we even get here," Fannin said.

Councilman William O. Goebel also voted to table the budget. Larry Hamilton abstained to the motion and the rest voted nay.

Mayor Latta informed the council members that there had been several budget meetings scheduled but no one but she and Councilman Michael Vance showed up. The Mayor then the council. An idea of having a special budget meeting was raised and the convenience of the council. No date was set.

According to Mayor Latta, not much new revenue is in this year's budget, except a $250,000 grant for the downtown revitalization program, of which only $25,000 has been budgeted for a manager and office space. She emphasized that there was money budgeted to buy four new police cars, a new vehicle for the fire night." chief, and to keep paying on the sanitation department vehicles bought last year. There is also money budgeted for the increase in minimum wage to take effect on July 1; the Sanitation department will be receiving a five percent raise on that day, while every other city department will receive a three percent raise.

The vote was called on the second reading of the budget, and it passed with the Mayor again breaking the tie; Collins, Fannin, Goebel and Hamilton voted against the reading and Vance, Hale, Callihan and Brown (who arrived late and hadn't voted on tabling the budget) voted yes.

The budget will be printed in The Floyd County Times next week, before the third reading to make it official. The budget must be passed before any funding can be obtained from the state.

In other old business the council agreed to advertise for an auditor and to negotiate a price for blacktopping with the current contract holder, Mountain Enterprises, since no bids were received. A resolution to go ahead with Mountain Enterprises proposal on paving the Salisbury Lot (next to Mountain Comprehensive Care) was also approved.

Maxine Bierman of Prestonsburg appeared before the council to ask for assistance in organizing and running the Jenny Wiley Festival. The festival is in its 10th year and Bierman has been the festival committee chairperson in the past.

Councilman Collins thanked Bierman on behalf of the council and the City of Prestonsburg for her help in this endeavor. It was suggested, and so moved, that Fred James of the Prestonsburg Tourism Commission become a full-time participant to advise, counsel, provide leadership and direction for the festival.

Mayor Latta informed the council proceeded to answer questions from that the city had applied for a $16,800 grant to provide a temporary shelter to the homeless to be located above the mayor said it would have to be at Fire Station #2. She stressed that referrals for the temporary housing would come through the police department and other details would be approved through the council.

> 'We have no provisions for the homeless and we do get more than you think coming through here," the Mayor explained. "Right now the Ministerial Association gives money to put them up at a hotel for one Pluma Stumbo, wife of the judge, said Tuesday that Judge Stumbo was "doing great" after having the angioplasty procedure performed Monday at Emery University Hospital in Atlanta. Judge Stumbo was transferred from Saint Joseph's hospital in Lexington to Atlanta on Saturday.

"Hopefully, he can come home tomorrow or Thursday," Mrs. Stumbo said Tuesday. "We're glad it's over with. The doctor didn't refer to it as surgery, but more like a X-ray procedure.'

Mrs. Stumbo said an artery near her husband's heart was 95 percent blocked, but that doctors said the procedure went very well. Angioplasty is medical procedure in which a balloon is inserted to enlarge and unblock the affected artery.

Stumbo's son, state Representative Greg Stumbo, said Friday that his father did not have a heart attack, but that he was having chest pains when he was admitted to the hospital. Representative Stumbo said his father has a rare medical condition in which his body organs are on the "wrong" side.

"This condition is found in one in 800,000 people," Stumbo said. "Dad found out in the Army that he had this condition. His heart, liver and kidneys are all on the wrong side.'

Stumbo said his father should be back to work by the end of the month and "looking forward to the fall campaign" for the Floyd County circuit judge's seat. Stumbo will face Paul Burchett in the November 5 election.

Representative Stumbo and Mrs. Stumbo said they have appreciated all the cards, calls and flowers his father has received since being hospitalized.

I applaud the integrity of such people as Ron Eller, Ron Hustedde, Bill Keesler, and Jerry Skees for publishing such information.

Unfortunately, we should not count on the incumbent Congressman (7th District) to do anything different than he has done for the last six years or so. He will continue to focus on a narrow band of his constituency, while ignoring the plight of six citizens out of ten who are outof-work in many of the counties he represents. Those out-of-work citizens are predominantly non-union workers who have few, if any benefits or retirement plans available to them; no safety net! There are many of us who have humble origins and come from working class roots who are hard at it every day to run a farm, teach a class, sell an automobile, serve our country in far away places, or pick up trash that others have made. Yet, little attempt is made to listen to the ideas and concerns of ours. We have no unions to protect us, no one to guarantee wages, no one to vote our views. This report by the Appalachian Center may have done the greatest service imaginable to Appalachia by informing all of us that the politicians have been putting a sugar coating on unemployment statistics while continuing to live their lavish lifestyles. The recent statewide elections have shown us again our democracy is being sold to the highest bidder and minority of voters. Time will tell if the same holds true in next year's Congressional elections.

What has happened to educational values in Floyd County? It seems with every new news from home I hear of dissension among teachers for more money. School was sadly interrupted last year over the same.

-Will Rogers

Why should this grieve me so? Perhaps because is it so strange to my memory, so appalling. My concern is for dear nieces and nephews and other relatives seeking education there. Any lack of resolve on the part of teachers confuses their minds and weakens their motivation. To be a good teacher is to be a saint. Many of your readers can go back with me; what beautifully dedicated teachers we had throughout the county. These people, God bless them, had an impact beyond measure. Their students would have been shocked at the mere mention of money. This is a thank you letter to those precious people still living. They can indeed be proud of their contribution. Yes, times have changed, but real values have not, and I know there are still devoted teachers there. Unions, now almost an anachronism in industry, are quite active in the public. sector. They are generally after the quick buck and education be damned. To me, unions are somewhat demeaning to the process and not the proper forum for educators. On the other hand, educators are our most valuable resource and they must be properly compensated according to the standards of the community and its

Kentucky's new chairman of the Democratic Party may have fired the first shot to be heard around the commonwealth as far as election reform is concerned when he suggested this week that the party should not accept a bagful of money from First Lady Martha Wilkinson.

Democrat Party chairman Dr. Grady Stumbo said Sunday the party would not accept nearly $750,000 left over from Mrs. Wilkinson's aborted campaign for governor because of questions about "how that money was raised."

All would agree that education now and more education must be priority one. Money does not yield better education. It is a product of dedication and hard work. We must get back to basics, especially in Eastern Kentucky, given the peculiar economics of the region. Hopefully, Floyd County will shy away from the liberal agenda and get on with a first rate educational system. The school day really needs to be extended from six hours to at least eight, and educators properly compensated. Finally, the school board there has the duty to insure that school programs are not held hostage to unreasonable or excessive demands, even if this entails the dismissal of certain agents and replacement by more dedicated ones. FREE TRADE BENEFITS KENTUCKY FARMERS Make no mistake, agriculture is an export industry. The agricultural sector of our nation's economy has consistently exported more than we import. In most years, the United States is the world's number one exporter of food and fiber.

Of all the sectors of our economy, agriculture has the greatest stake in trade negotiations. For example, the sale of farm products to foreign consumers adds close to $40 billion per year to the incomes of our nation's farmers. This means that one of every three acres of crops harvested in the United States is sent overseas. That fact alone demonstrates the importance of exports to America's farmers.

Yet, there is a fear in some parts of our nation's farm economy that a new trade agreement means an end to all commodity programs, an end to continued prosperity for farmers. The current U.S. proposal does not call for the elimination of farm programs. I would fight hard against any agreement which proposed an end to commodity programs. However, many organizations with farmers interests in mind already support fast track. They include the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the American Business Conference, the Business Roundtable, and some 400 other business organizations. Also in support of fast track are the American Farm Bureau, the American Soybean Association, the National Corn Growers, the National Cattlemen's Association, the National Pork Producers, and almost 50 other agricultural groups. Making a case for free trade in Kentucky is simple - FAIR trade has already made a difference in Kentucky. As a result of the Tokyo Round and the current Uruguay Round trade discussions, Kentucky farmers have access to new markets. Access to these previously closed markets has added over $100 million to Kentucky farmers' income each year. But what does a new trade agreement mean to the entire U.S. farm economy? It lowers the trade deficit, creates millions of jobs, and puts money into our farmers pockets. For every $1 billion increase in U.S. exports, 20,000 new export-related jobs are created. A new, fairer trade agreement will mean more exports and more jobs, not the loss of jobs that many protectionists proclaim.

The vote which the U.S. Senate reject any trade agreement submitted will cast this week is simply this: a by the President, and I would not vote to allow the President of the hesitate to vote against a bad agree-United States to explore new trade ment. Any agreement that comes initiatives. It is not a vote to approve before the Senate will receive my any agreement, not a guarantee for close attention, so that I may conapproval of any agreement. But with- tinue to help Kentucky's farmers out the approval of fast track, no benefit from foreign trade. NO negotiations can take place, and the AGREEMENT IS BETTER THAN possibility of gaining fairer trade ends. A BAD AGREEMENT.

"IT'S NEVER RIGHT TO DO WRONG, NEVER WRONG TO DO RIGHT. IT'S ALWAYS WRONG TO DO WRONG, ALWAYS RIGHT TO DO RIGHT - SO DO RIGHT"

A catchy little saying, to say the least. The phrase could be said of any phase of life. But in the sports arena, it takes on a double meaning when the thought is "win at any cost."

That seems the be the attitude of some sports people in our day and time. Colleges are always looking for ways to get the edge over other institutions and cheating is one way to get ahead of the rest. Some will cheat regardless of the circumstances. The attitude seems to be filtering down into the high school ranks as we hear of high schools doing some illegal "recruiting." "Win at any cost" is the motto of many in the sports world. It doesn't have to be that way. Winners are not the ones that come out in first place. Winners are those that learn how to accept what comes their way in life, including on the sports scene. Winners know how to accept defeat as well as victory.

Sad to say, it is now in our summer programs. It is win regardless! I personally think we ought to "do right" regardless. DORIGHT REGARDLESS OF THE PEOPLE YOU'RE WITH

Some times the people we run with in life determines if we do right or not. Most people go with the flow. If the group is a good group, we try to blend in with that group. Then, when we are with another group, we try to be like them. I say "do right" regardless the people you are with.

People determine the way we dress. They determine our manner of speech. They help deter-

Watkins To Compete In National Bass Tourney

by Chris Altman

Next week, one of Eastern Kentucky's finest bass fisherman will be competing in what is perhaps the most prestigious bass angling tournament in the country. Tee Watkins, a dedicated and industrious angler from East Point in Floyd County, battled through the Red Man Tournament Trail last year to earn himself a trip to the Red Man All-American Tournament.

The Operation Bass Red Man Tournament Trail is a wickedly competitive national tournament series designed for the grass roots angler. In essence, the country is divided into 20 divisions, and up to 360 anglers in each division compete against one another in a series of six qualifying tournaments. Following those six tournaments, the top 30 anglers from each division advance to one of four regional tournaments. Ultimately, the top 10 anglers from each region compete in the Red Man All-American, a tournament boasting the nation's largest cash prize awarded to a single angler. The All-American victor will not only garner the satisfaction of being proclaimed the top Red Man angler of the year, but will also take home a check for $100,000.

Nine years of patience, diligence, and hard work finally paid off for Tee Watkins. In 1990, Watkins' success earned him a spot to the Red Man Regional Classic held last November on Alabama's Demopolis Lake.

Competing against 150 of the top anglers throughout the greater South, Watkins boated 19 pounds, two ounces of bass in the two-day tournament to establish himself as one of the Red Man Tournament Trail's top 40 anglers for 1990. That fifth place finish clinched Watkins' berth in the Red Man All-American, a week-long series of events that will be held next week in New York.

Watkins will travel to Buffalo, New York, next week to compete in the Red Man All-American. That event will be held on Niagara River and Lake Erie, two tough bodies of water that will test the mettle of each of the 40 anglers vying for the coveted national champion's title. Tee's success in the preliminary tournaments earned him and his family an "all expense paid" trip to New York for the week.

The two-day tournament spans nearly a week of activities. Tuesday and Thursday are pre-fishing or practice days that will help the contestants get a feel for the waters and, hopefully, will help them learn just what the fish are doing. During Thursday's "press day," anglers will meet with outdoor writers and photographers for photo sessions and in the Red Man Mountain division interviews. The two day tournament will be held on Friday and Saturday, and each angler is given an identically-rigged Ranger boat for use in that event.

Now 37, Tee began fishing the Red Man circuit nine years ago. Though he has enjoyed a successful life of tournament angling, nothing can compare to qualifying for the All-American tournament. That accomplishment might take on a new meaning for you when you consider that, through the course of the year, Watkins competed against some 7,000 anglers. Of those thousands of anglers from across the country, only 40 qualified for the Red Man All-American. In a very real sense, qualifying for the Red Man All-American is much like qualifying to compete in the Olympics.

"People ask me if this is a dream come true," Watkins says, "and I always say 'I've never dreamed this big!"

Although he has never fished the Niagara River nor Lake Erie, Watkins has a game plan already devised. "I'm fairly confident that the tournament will be won on the lake - if the water is not too rough to fish out there - simply because that it where the larger fish are. We will be fishing with a five-fish limit," Watkins says, "so every ounce is going to count mine our attitudes and actions. DORIGHT REGARDLESS OF THE PLACES WE'RE IN

If it is wrong to act one way in Floyd County, it is wrong to act that way in Johnson or Pike County. Some people let where they are determine whether they act and do right or not. "No one knows me here!" Do right regardless of where you are. In other words, if you wouldn't be a bad sport in Floyd County, don't be one in Johnson, Pike or Martin county.

DORIGHT REGARDLESS OFTHEPROBLEMSITMAY CAUSE

I will guarantee you that if you determine to "do right" you will have some problems. However, determine within yourself as a fan, coach or player that you are going to what is right regardless of the problems it may cause you. High school and grade school players feel that if they don't go "along with the crowd" they will have some problems. Do right, regardless of the problems is causes.

DORIGHT REGARDLESS OF THE PRICE IT MAY COST YOU

If you play any sport and you refuse to go along with what is wrong, it will cost you. It may cost you what you thought was your best friend. It may cost you in popularity. It may even cost you as far as harm goes, but nevertheless, "do right" regardless of the price it may cost.

IN THE LONG RUN, DOING RIGHT IS THE RIGHT WAY

A person can look at himself or herself and say they did right. Doing right creates a rich feeling inside when you know you were a good sport, a good loser or a good winner. Yes, a good winner! Never rub your victories in to the other team. Be a good sport in all phases of your game. It will certainly return to visit you later in life. Never make fun of an opponent's weaknesses. Why? Because "it's never wrong to do right, never right to do wrong. Always right to do right and always wrong to do wrong!"

Until Friday, be good sports and always "do right"!

Harold Pee Wee Tourney Continues

Greg Nelson picked up the win for Garrett going the distance. Nelson fanned only two batters in the game while hitting one. He gave up eight runs on 10 hits and he issued eight walks.

Wheelwright starter Justin Ray was the losing pitcher, working the first four innings for Wheelwright. Ray walked nine batters and fanned six. Kevin Johnson came on to pitch the fifth inning, but didn't get a batter out. He walked seven batters in the inning. Brian Johnson came on in relief in the fifth with no outs, and faced lead-off batter Neil Hicks.

Kevin Johnson walked Greg Nelson, Jeremy Hall and Roy John Martin, to load the bases for Garrett in the fifth. Barry Combs worked Johnson for a RBI walk, and Aaron Hunter followed with a run producing single. Matt Crawford, batting singled up the middle to drive home a run. Jeremy Hall walked, forcing home yet another run, and Martin lined a base hit to left to score two more runs.

Wheelwright looked as if they were going to avoid a "mercy rule" game as they scored five times in the bottom of the fifth inning. Kevin Johnson was the first of 10 batters to bat for Wheelwright in the fifth. Tackett reached on an error at shortstop, and Terry Cager drew a one out walk. Brian Johnson hit a fly ball to right field, scoring Tackett from third base. John Caudill, who came on in the fourth inning, singled home Cager. Justin Ray picked up his second hit of the game scoring Holbrook, who reached second on a catcher's error. Cruise Caudill walked and, after Matt Johnson walked, Timmy Bryant's ball was misplayed in centerfield and two which scored Hunter, who had walked leading off.

Wheelwright responded with two runs in the second to take a short lived 2-1 lead, Willard Johnson had a one out triple, Crager was hit by a pitch and both runners scored on Aaron Hall's base hit.

Garrett pushed across four in the third to resume the lead at 5-2. Nelson singled for the Braves leading off the third. He stole second and then third to set up a run that crossed home plate when Jeremy Hall was safe at first on an error at short. Hall went to second on a pitcher's error and stole third base. Martin walked and went to third on an error again at shortstop. Martin eventually scored on a passed ball. Combs completed the scoring when he came in on a fly ball to right by Todd Bingham.

come time for the weigh in. I hope to find a concentration of smallmouths on one or two of the reefs out in Lake Erie, and I plan to toss grubs, Silver Buddies and jigging spoons to them. We really don't have a lot of time, so I believe I'd be best off sticking to the basics rather than trying to come up with some new technique." Should Lake Erie not produce, Tee then plans to move into the Niagra River and throw crankbaits, and toss spinnerbaits in pockets and marina areas off of the river.

His greatest concern is simply learning to run his boat in the enormous waves and swells of Lake Erie. "Just running the lake will be a big challenge in itself," Watkins says, "and I plan to spend much of my practice time learning how to get out into the lake. I am confident that the tournament will be won in Lake Erie, so I want to be out there if at all possible. If I can get there, I believe I can catch the fish. A lot of people will be intimidated by such an expanse of rough water, so I'm hoping a lot of my competition will stay in the river. If the wind is not too bad and the water not too rough, I think it will take about 30 pounds of fish to win the tournament.

A switchman for South Central Bell by profession, Tee's avocation is bass fishing. Already feared by local tournament competitors, Watkins is now gaining a national reputation, and his qualification for the Red Man All-American will certainly push him a bit farther into the limelight. His skill and expertise have warranted his inclusion into several national articles in such magazines as Bassmaster and North American Fisherman.

Although competitive on the water, Tee is more concerned with helping fellow anglers whenever possible. Each year, he teaches an instructional class called "The Basics of Bass Fishing," a community service class offered through Prestonsburg Community College. Additionally, Tee has initiated several anglers into the world of tournament bass angling and has been instrumental in their success. As the Big Sandy Sales Representative for Larry's Marine in Morehead, Tee also hosts angling seminars are several area boat shows each year.

Watkins, who makes his home in East Point just outside of Prestonsburg in Floyd County, says his number one sponsor is his family. His wife, Sharon Rice Watkins, provides his inspiration and unwavering support, while his son Jeremy (11) and daughter Telah (7) are his most devoted fans.

Although Tee says that he is not too nervous about the tournament, he admits that he will probably get the heebie-jeebies before the first day of the tournament.

If Tee Watkins wins the Red Man All-American, what would that mean to him? "It would mean that I was out of debt!" he says with a laugh. "It would also be a wonderful opportunity for gaining some promotional support from sponsors that would allow me to fish a few more tournaments each year." To most dedicated tournament anglers, winning the All-American would serve as a stepping stone into full time tournament fishing. But Tee is a confirmed family man, a man who does not lose track of his priorities. "I don't believe I would try to fish full time because I would not want to be away from my family so much," he says, "....not at this point anyway."

The heroics belonged to Jason Shannon as he slammed a bases loaded home run over the left-center field fence in the bottom of the sixth inning to provide the margin of victory. Three walks preceded Shannonas Shannon Slone, Martin Hagans and Matthew Hagans drew back to back walks. Shannon then parked a Rusty Hall pitch over the fence with one out.

Reds coach Lonnie Robinson, although glad to get the win, wasn't too pleased with the play of his team.

"We made a lot of errors in the game," he explained. "We just haven't been able to get any practice time in scored two runs and loaded the bases because of the field here at Martin for McDowell. Landon Frasurg being used so much. We just didn't play that well in the field." The game was marred by a protest from the McDowell side. Stars coach Carlos Elswick claimed that an interference call should have made against a Reds runner that resulted in two runs scoring for the Reds. 'The base runner for the Reds didn't try to avoid my player," said Elswick of the call. According to Robinson, the umpires ruled that there was not that much contact between runner and fielder and did not constitute an interference call. Coach Elswick said he saw it differently. The protest is still before the protest committee of the Beaver Creek Little League. "I did not think the game would be close like it was," said Robinson, whose Reds team is currently in first place with the best record in the league at 9-1. The Reds have only lost to the Garrett Pirates. McDowell scored four runs in the fifth inning to tie the game at 15-15. Nick Compton had a three-run triple. Compton scored when Brent Ousley reached on an error by Shannon. The Stars took an early 3-0 lead with a three-run first. The Reds took a 4-3 lead in the bottom of the inning when they plated four runs. Martin went on top 9-3 with five in the second. Shannon Slone walked and Martin followed with a base on balls. Kevin Robinson then lined a double to left-center scoring Slone and Martin. Jason Shannon walked and with two out, Jeff Sexton doubled, scoring Robinson. Sexton later scored on Todd Howard's double.

Besides his home run, Shannon also had a first inning double that scored two runs. Shannon finished the game with six runs batted in. Kevin Robinson, Jeff Sexton and Todd Howard had doubles in the second inning when the Reds scored five runs. Robinson picked up four RBIs in the contest. Rusty Hall for the Stars had a third inning double to go with his triple.

Darren Newsome started for McDowell and went one inning before being relieved by Hall. Newsome fanned two batters in the one inning he worked and Hall had six strikeouts. All totalled, McDowell pitching issued 18 walks in the game.

Wayland, although the home team, was playing like a team away from home. Martin team members, playing on their home field, played as if they were somewhere else. Neither team could get the feel for who was supposed to have the advantage -Wayland because it was their home game, or Martin because it was on their home field.

Martin Braves walked away with a a 12-10 lead with nine in their half of 26-18 win over the visiting (oops!) home standing Wayland Dodgers.

Martin starter Chris Cornette had walked seven batters in a row in the first inning before being lifted by Martin coach Steve Jenkins. Beau Tackett came on in relief of Cornette and picked up the win. Tackett struck five in the fifth for a 26-14 game.

Hackworth, Poston Hook Up In Pitching Duel As Rangers Post 3-0 Win

In one of the best Little League games of the year, the Prestonsburg Rangers and Prestonsburg Mets hooked up in a good old-fashioned pitching duel with the Rangers coming away with a 3-0 win over the second place Mets after scoring three times in the top of the sixth inning. The win was the second time the Rangers have beaten Danny Hamilton's ball club this season. It was the third loss for the Mets. Jason Hackworth and Jake Poston battled it out on the mound for their ball clubs.

The Mets squandered chances to Poston score in the game by leaving the bases loaded twice - in the first and sixth inning. The Rangers stranded six runners, leaving the bases jammed in the fifth.

In the top of the sixth inning, Kalen Harris entered the game for the Rangers as a pinch runner. Shawn Ousley opened the Rangers sixth with a leadoff double. Harris entered to run for Ousley as coach Beecher Shepherd wanted to get more speed on the base paths. The Mets intentionally walked Jason Hackworth. The next two batters for the Rangers struck out, making the move by Coach Hamilton look good. However, Brooks Stumbo ripped a double down the left field line to score Harris with the games first and winning run. Drew Brown followed with a double, scoring Stumbo for the second run. Brown scored the final run on a passed ball.

Both pitchers were throwing BB's in the all-important sixth inning.

The Rangers improved to 5-6 on the season while the Mets fell to 8-3. The Rangers will face the Giants in a 7 p.m. game Thursday in their final regular season game. The Mets close out their season against the Indians at 5:30 p.m. on Friday.

Small World-The diet is an old high school friend and partner of mine in many causes. We have both gone through stages of change in some way, but the friendship has remained, lasting and good.

At one time Anna decided she'd like to lose a little weight-not a lot, but enough to make her skirt bands loosen up a bit.

She discussed this with her doctor so he could suggest foods to cut back on and others to leave off altogether. He marked her weight on a chart and asked her to come by about every two weeks so they could check on her progress.

The first time she went back to the AnnaLayne Hayes of Betsy Layne doctor's office she had actually lost a pound, but the very next time she stepped on his scales they showed she had gained four more.

The doctor would discuss with her what she might be doing wrong and he would encourage her to try again. Succeeding visits ran about the same. If one checkup showed she'd lost two pounds the next would likely prove she'd gained three. She was becoming a little discouraged.

After about four months of talking diet she went to the doctor again. "Well, Ann," he asked, "how are you doing today?'

"I want to tell you something,

Finally we were out the door and in the car. Before we were even out of the driveway we heard, "Mom, she's looking at me." and "Mom, tell her to shut up!"

Well, I let out this horrendous scream "Stop this car!"

My husband calmly looked at me as though I was temporarily insane. And, to be quite honest, I felt like I was losing it.

"Forget Florida. I will not go on vacation with you people," I continued to rant. "No way will I be confined in this car for 16 hours and put up with this."

"What!" I screamed. "How do you know what PMS is!"

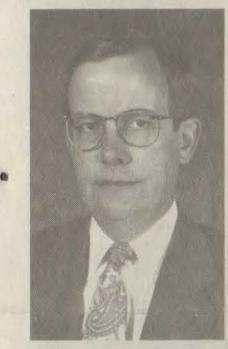

"I don't" she said, "but most the time when you act like this Daddy says 'She'll be okay next week, girls, don't worry'."

"Oh really," I said while shooting my husband my smuggest look.

"Boy, I can't wait to get to work," I was saying to myself.

Not ten minutes after I'd gotten to work I also got this huge guilt trip hanging over me for my foul mood that morning. Patience

LITTLE BROTHER'S EYEVIEW

My brother is convinced as we grow older, and Mom does too, that she's growing a little shaky as well.

All in fun, and no harm meant. he claims that the noises he hears are the sound of one dear, sweet mother's brain fluids swishing around in her head.

"Hear that Sis, do you hear is?" he'll say. "I'm tellin' you, I'm worried."

"Scott, be nice," I say as I double over in stitches.

Then, as we were on our way out to dinner last Friday evening I began to notice more closely my brother's viewpoint.

Angie and Scott were in the back seat and Mom and I up front. Angie made the comment that Mom's new hairstyle really suited her and she really liked it.

Mom, being the sweetheart she is, turns around (while driving) to get that eye to eye contact with Angie and asks if Angie is really sure about liking her new hairstyle. While the two are carrying on their hair conversation my brother and I are holding on for dear life as Mom's car seems to take to the curves by itself. Funny, isn't it, how you're car seems to know just when to take over?

"Ma, Ma, Ma, MOM!" I shrilled.

"Oh," she said, "sorry." "Scott," I said.

"Yeah, Sis?" he answered.

"I hear that noise you were talking about earlier." Whack!

"Hear that?" Mom replied, as I received the ol' hand slap on the leg. Oh, well, I guess you're never too old to be disciplined.

Till next week...Keep both hands on the wheel and both eyes on the road.

Poison Oak-

Remembering my father

Bill Pack was my father. He died March 7, 1969. He was 68 years old.

Except for some obvious facts, though, I knew little about him. No, I didn't come from a broken home or anything. What I mean is, I knew very little about him as a person.

Oh, I knew he worked hard, that he was honest, that he was a deacon at the Thealka Freewill Baptist Church, and that he was a man of few words who loved coal mining, pickled hogs feet and roses.

I knew, too, as did everyone else with whom he ever came into contact in his limited travels, that he was a good man and a good neighbor who minded his own business and who carried bushel after bushel of home-grown vegetables to the widows and elderly of Society Row.

The only thing that I can safely say that he truly hated was gossip. "If you don't know it, don't speak it," he'd say.

In most ways, he was the typical Eastern Kentucky coal miner, and I suppose I was the typical coal miner's son. He never spoke to me, though, (most likely because I never once bothered to ask) about his youth; about his life before I knew him in 1939. I never once heard him talk about his parents or his brothers or his sisters or his boyhood friends.

I gathered from smatterings of conversation - from bits and pieces here and there - that he was reared in Martin County; that he had little or no schooling; that he was the oldest son of a large family and was completely responsible for the livelihood of all its members by the time he was fourteen. I knew he had worked in the coal mines by that age and probably had to grow up fast, never really having had the opportunity to experience a real boyhood.

As a father, I knew that he never lectured his children. Yet, I'd have to say he was an effective disciplinarian. He taught by example. He didn't talk; he acted. He loved me enough to dering about stuff like this. I mean, get to know him.

tan my hide when I did something when I was a kid, I was too wrapped wrong.

The older I get, though, the more I could kick myself for not getting him off by himself and asking, "When you were a boy, what did you want to be when you grew up?" Or, "Did you ever go fishing when you were a kid?" or, "Did you ever fight with your brothers like Joe and I do?"

I'd love to know, too, how he met and courted my mother. Did he ever pick wild flowers for her? Did he ever have any girl friends besides Mom?

I suppose it's just human nature to up in myself to care. When I became a man, I married and had a family of my own.

Then, he died.

I only wish that I had been more curious about the man who fathered me and my six other brothers and sisters. I wish our father-son relationship had not been such that he lived in an adult world consisting of the responsibilities of work and family, while I wandered in a child-like state - probably even beyond what was reasonable and natural.

My biggest regret about my father wait until it's too late to begin won- is that I didn't have sense enough to

Senior citizens hold "commencement"

"Commencement," according to Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary is, "a time of commencing; the ceremonies, or the day for conferring degrees or diplomas; the period of activities at this time."

The three-day series of commencement programs sponsored by Patsy Evans, director, and members of the Senior Citizens' group at Archer Park, embraced all phases of this definition

On Wednesday, June 5, at 11 a.m., they enjoyed a "Senior Prom" at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn. Dressed in party attire, the ladies were presented corsages and the men boutonnieres by Mrs. Evans as they entered the dining room, which was decorated in colors of black, white and silver. Tables, with white cloths and black napkins, were centered with mirrors holding lighted white candles and metallic balls.

A menu, consisting of a vegetable salad, chicken Halushki (dumplings in a seasoned cream sauce), sliced peaches, rolls, coffee and beverages was served under the direction of Linda Martin by Sharon Isaac, Ralph Compton and Ken Blackburn.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. Evans and Tim Collins, the D.J., conducted a short program. It was announced that the Queen and King to reign at this event would be drawn by number. Lucy McGuire and William Wilson were the lucky ones drawn for these honors.

With soft music playing in the background, some of the members of the group danced the "hokey-pokey" and did various exercises. Sylvia Nunnery gave a reading entitled "A Well-Circulated Letter," Orville Cooley told some brief stories from the "Reader's Digest," and Deward Stephens played "Movin' On," "Wildwood Flower," "Lost Train Blues" and other familiar tunes on his harmonica.

It was announced that Orville Cooley, Nelle Harless, Deward Stephens and Patsy Evans were observing birthdays during the month of June.

The director announced that the next luncheon-meeting at Holiday Inn would be on Wednesday, July 3, at 11 a.m., and that the theme of the event would be Hawaiian.

We are exposed to dioxin in many ways: from incinerator emissions, discharges from the pulp and paper industry, contamination of paper products, releases from treated wood and wood treating sites, herbicide spraying. Any studies that show a link between exposure and health problems will immediately be used in lawsuits by victims exposed to and affected by dioxin. If this happens, there will be a huge bill to pay. Veterans exposed to Agent Orange, for example, are suing the government for more than $1 billion.

Floyd Countians In Action in conjunction with the Citizens Clearinghouse for Hazardous Waste propose the following incineration regulations:

- 1. Ban waste incineration in 5 years (not a moratorium or postponement).
- 2. Expose close relationships between regulators and industry and push for ethics codes.
- 3. Nationwide and regional networking to demand:
 - Local democratic control & responsibility on waste;
 - Expanded right to know and;
 - Ash treated as hazardous waste, not "special" waste.
- 4. In place of incineration, mandate reduction.
- 5. Watch out for and oppose: sewage incineration, waste authorities that divert attention from real issues, deregulation of ash, ash in building and road materials, and "sham recycling" (e.g. in cement kilns, industrial boilers, etc).

HRMC: Hometown hospital now is the medical center for Eastern Kentucky

Secretary

Edward Nairn, Burl Wells Spurlock, Chalmer H. Frazier, Board Chairman Vice-Chairman

Editor's Note: The following story is a public relations piece from Highlands Regional Medical Center. This article was inadvertently omitted from our recent Profile section. ASP III

Geographically, Highlands Re-gional Medical Center is at the center of the eastern third of Kentucky, ideally suited to serve the residents of up to 16 counties, including several in West Virginia. However, the term "Center" goes beyond mere location. Since the early 1980's, Highlands' growth and progressiveness has advanced it to a position of pre-eminence in the healthcare of the region. It has accomplished this entirely with native eastern Kentucky independence, spunk and ingenuity as a community-owned, not-for-profit hospital.

While many hospitals are affiliated with large chains and/or owned by outside interests, Highlands has tapped its native roots. It began with a mission laid out by a Board of Trustees who were drawn from the executive ranks of leading businesses in Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin counties. They gave Highlands its regional vision and the drive to achieve it. The Board supported the plans, facilitated the financing and authorized the investments in technologies and personnel needed to transform a small community hospital into a leading regional institution, a true Medical Center. AGAINST THE ODDS time a new system or new technology was acquired, the people had to be in place, ready to make it work.

O.T. Dorton,

Treasurer

Highlands promoted programs through the University of Kentucky, Prestonsburg Community College and Pikeville Community College to develop curricula for nursing, medical technologies and business programs. Supported by scholarships for local students plus tuition underwriting for its own employees, these programs enabled Highlands to create a homegrown human resource system. This system now contributes to the educational quality of the region, providing the means and incentives for area youth to seek a higher education, along with the opportunities to pursue careers closer to home. Highlands has, in fact, become the largest private employer in Floyd County. In cooperation with its par-, ent company, Consolidated Health Systems, also of Prestonsburg, scholarships and educational programs are being expanded at college and postgraduate levels.

Technology advances in healthcare are accelerating at a bewildering pace. The cost of a single high technology system, such as cardiac catheterization, can reach a quarter of a million dollars. In five years, it needs replacement because it's worn out, obsolete or both. Each technology - and Highlands has a dozen or so - requires its own team, and sometimes two, of skilled techniclans, nurses and staff physicians functioning within a well coordinated, highly sensitive system. Because patients aren't just processed for clini cal treatment, they are moved with sympathetic care through a series of procedures that must always respect their human and individual needs. It is a tribute to the staff and employees of Highlands that the system not only works, but is earning a widespread reputation for both clinical excellence and personal sensitivity. Again, the right balance and a major factor in Highlands' success.

The 1980s were not good to hospitals anywhere. Small community and rural hospitals fared especially badly in an economic climate that saw them squeezed between rising costs and falling revenues. Many closed their doors, leaving their communities without essential services.

Nor was the economy of eastern Kentucky conducive to building a thriving healthcare system. Underemployed and underinsured, the region could hardly be tapped for new resources sufficient to support ambitious growth plans. Instead, revenue dollars would need to be imported.

There were two ways to reach out and touch these revenue resources. and the strategies were formulated early on by Highlands administrator Clarence C. Traum. First, there were government sources. By securing the designation "Rural Referral Center," Highlands' Medicare and Medicaid payments could be enhanced. Combined with participation in such programs as the Federal Black Lung Program, Highlands succeeded in maximizing the assistance it received from Frankfort and Washington.

Second, by expanding its service area beyond its traditional four counties, Highlands could attract paying patients from distant communities. Both strategies, however, required that the hospital offer extraordinary capabilities. This faced the hospital with a classic "chicken and egg" proposition: it needed revenues to expand capabilities and it needed capabilities to expand revenues. The solution was a carefully measured, step by step process of adding a little of both chicken and egg at the same time over a ten year span. It took patience to get patients, but it also took careful management to keep. operating expenses under control. To that end, Traum organized a team of management talent from within the hospital and supported them with some of the best management systems available.

THE RIGHT BALANCE OF PEOPLE AND TECHNOLOGY

Again and again, balances had to be struck. Technology and systems cannot function without highly skilled, highly motivated people. From administrative management through clinical practitioners, Highlands' focus on people involved a combination of recruiting from outside and nurturing from inside. Every Highlands' Breast Center was the first hospital based mammography unit to be certified in the state of Kentucky. Earlier this month, Highlands' surgical team became the first team in eastern Kentucky to perform laparoscopic gallbladder surgery, a procedure that significantly reduces post surgical discomfort and recovery time.

WITHOUT DOCTORS, THERE'S NO HOSPITAL

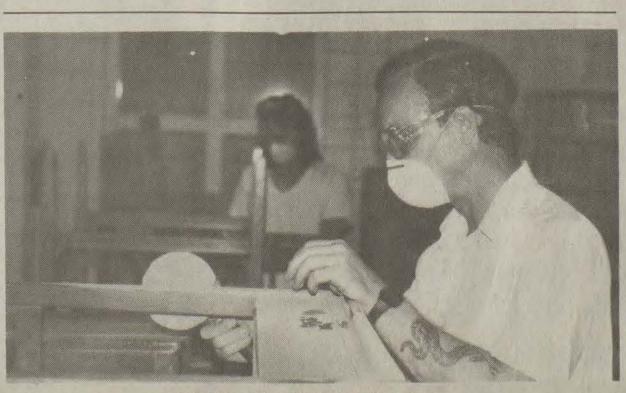

The very first healthcare in eastern Kentucky was a doctor on horseback administering to the sick and injured from whatever he carried in his legendary little black bag. It was the little black bag that grew into a hospital - simply more and bigger instruments, more and bigger bottles of medicine - the tools of the healing arts at the physicians' bidding. Highlands began its life as Prestonsburg General Hospital, springing from the little black bag of Dr. George Archer. And just like the little black bag, the hospital wouldn't be worth much to anybody without the doctor.

The hospital serves a complex network of physicians inside and outside its walls. A journey through the network usually begins in the office of the family practitioner or internal medicine physician. Most healthcare problems can be handled right there. Once in a while, the family doctor spots a big problem and needs help in either diagnosing or treating it, or both. Diagnosis - the business of identifying the nature or seriousness of a disorder - is where much of the hospital's technology is put to work. Often, the diagnostic technology is administered by a physicianspecialist such as a cardiologist for heart disease, an oncologist for cancer and so on. Treatment, medical or proposal with the Kentucky Public Service Commission to offer Caller ID as part of the company's TouchStar(R) service. The feature will let a customer see the telephone number of any incoming call from anywhere in the same calling area on a special piece of equipment.

If the proposal is approved, the service will be offered for a small monthly charge. Customers would also need to purchase a display unit which shows the date, time and the number calling. The unit then stores that information enabling customers to return missed calls.

Caller ID would have the potential to reduce the number of false calls to police, fire and emergency medical services.

Real Estate

Real estate companies increasingly are turning to computerized mortgage networks to help home buyers find financing best suited to their needs, according to a nationwide survey of firms by the National Association of Realtors.

The association's "Profile of Real Estate Firms: 1990: showed that 8.0 percent of the estimated 100,000 real estate firms in the National Association of Realtors are affiliated with electronic mortgage networks. The share rose from 4.0 percent in 1986 and 1985, and from 3.0 percent in the future of residential brokerage." 1984. "This jump indicates that real estate firms realize that information on available mortgage funds will be a mortgage prequalification and applikey to their future success or failure," the survey says.

might still seem relatively minor, it real estate firms nationwide. In addiconstitutes 31 percent of the industry sales force, because many of the firms using the systems tend to be larger ones. Twenty-nine percent of the firms with more than 50 sales agents study showed that most real estate are affiliated with electronic mortgage networks, compared to just 5.0 percent of the firms with five or fewer agents.

Use of the mortgage location systems by real estate firms reflects growing consumer demand for a more efficient, expedient homebuying process, said NAR President Harley E. Rouda. "buyers expect real estate brokers to stay on top of all financing options. Computerized loan origination (CLO) systems allow the buyer to choose from a wide choice of mortgage instruments and interest rates without having to leave the real estate broker's office," he said. "Matching a buyer with a mortgage to complete a home sale plays big in Sixty-one percent of the firms indicated the system they use supplies cation submission information.

The firm survey, conducted in Although an 8.0 percent share April 1990, covered more than 10,000 tion to affiliations with other services, it includes a broad range of firm characteristics and industry trends.

As in previous surveys, the 1989 companies continue to be small-scale; nine out of ten firms were found to be single-office operations, and 52 percent have five or fewer sales associates. An average of eight sales agents per office was reported. However, although the majority of the firms have a small sales force, only 8.0 percent of the sales agents in the industry are affiliated with small companies. This percentage has dropped from about 12.0 percent in 1979

In contrast, firms with a sales force of more than 50 representatives constitute 53 percent of the industry's sales force, up from about 30 percent in 19790. Yet, only 3.0 percent of the industry's firms are this sizable. Despite the growing concentration of companies, "there is definitely room" for real estate small companies in today's marketplace, Rouda said. "There will always be entrepreneurs who want to remain independent. Small firms will remain an important part of the industry," he said.

During the 12 months prior to the survey, smaller firms lost a greater proportion of their sales force than larger firms. However, both small and large companies gained enough agents to offset the losses. Companies with fewer than five agents lost 25 percent of their agents, but experienced a 26 percent gain in sales representatives. Companies with more than 50 agents lost 13 percent, but picked up 14 percent. On the whole, the firms collectively posted an 18 percent loss in agents and a 21 percent gain.

Home sales remain the leading source of business for most firms; 70 percent cited residential brokerage as their primary real estate activity. An cial and industrial property brokerage as their main activity. The study notes that other services provided by firms include appraisals, property management and insurance sales.

Nearly two-thirds of the firms surveyed use part-time sales agents. However, the proportion of agents who work part-time has declined over the past decade, falling from 17 percent in 1979 to 19 percent in 1990. 'The increased complexities of the real estate business make the industry less appealing to part-timers," the study says.

According to Rouda, part-time agents tend to lack the dedication necessary to be fully successful. "Real estate is just as demanding as any other profession. And, if you decide to get in it, you don't go halfway," he said.

The survey also found growing use of buyer brokerage, which involves an agent representing the buyer in a transaction for a fee paid by, or on behalf of, the buyer. Three out of every 10 firms reported that their firm has buyer's agents, the same additional 12 percent listed commer- share as in the 1986 study. However, although this percentage was unchanged, an increasing number of firms reported having several buyer's agents, rather than just one agent engaging in buyer brokerage.

Buyer's agents are more apt to be found in larger firms, and are found most frequently in the West and least often in the Northeast, according to the report. Interest n buyer brokerage has grown as home buyers have become more sophisticated and feel the need to have their own representation, the survey notes. "The most frequently cited reason for the success of buyer brokerage is that clients know the agent has their interest as the number one priority."
