Perkins opts out

Won't seek fifth term; Prestonsburg attorney will enter race

by Scott Perry
Times Editor

A political dynasty that spanned four and a half decades will come to a close at the end of this year when the current term of U.S. Congressman Chris Perkins expires.

Perkins announced Wednesday that he would not seek a fifth, two-year term as Eastern Kentucky's representative in Congress, citing the adverse effects of politics on his personal life as the reason for his decision.

Perkins was first elected in 1984, largely by acclamation, to succeed his father, Carl D. Perkins who died after representing the now non-existent 7th Congressional District for 35 years. The younger Perkins faced no serious challenge to his family's hold on the congressional seat until 1988, when he won re-election by getting just 59 percent of the vote over GOP challenger Will T. Scott.

But the first hint of political trouble greeted Perkins in his 1990 race, when an under-funded, low profile race by Scott came within 3,000 votes of ousting him in the November General Election.

With the 7th District eliminated this year through redistricting and many of his counties lumped with predominantly Republican counties from the 5th Congressional District, Perkins' influence appeared to be further diluted, as evidenced by a growing field of Democratic primary election challengers.

Perkins referred to the redistricting dilemma in the press release announcing his decision to pull out of the race, noting the district's boundary changes created a "politically marginal district" that would cause "constituent service and family to be sacrificed for a continuous fund-raising campaign effort."

Had he remained in the race, Perkins faced a battle in the May primary from announced candidates Jerry Cecil, a Winchester businessman that Perkins defeated in the 1990 primary; and Carol Hubbard, wife of 1st District Congressman Carroll Hubbard.

Should he have survived that race, Perkins would have met incumbent GOP Congressman Hal Rogers in November. A Perkins-Rogers race would have been the first election in modern times pitting two incumbent Congressmen against one another in a general election contest.

Perkins' exit Wednesday prompted a flurry of activity and speculation among the region's Democrats over what other candidates may enter the primary race now that Perkins has opted out. The deadline for filing is January 28, just five days away.

Prestonsburg attorney Ned Pillersdorf wasted little time making his plans known, announcing Wednesday evening that he intended to file for the seat. A Perkins ally, Pillersdorf said the prospect of a Republican representative for the district prompted his decision to run. Pillersdorf also indicated he was committed to continuing the "legislative efforts" begun by Perkins to assist the region's poor.

Others mentioned as potential candidates are Pikeville attorney John Doug Hays, Bill Weinberg, a Hindman lawyer and former law partner of Perkins.

Rumors that former Governor Wallace Wilkinson and current Democratic Party chief Grady Stumbo might be considering the primary race have been dispelled by both individuals.

No-shows stall utility showdown

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

It was a no-show Tuesday night at the Wheelwright Utility Commission meeting when the board lacked one commissioner's presence in order to hold the meeting.

Newly appointed commissioner Robert Hood and Joann Bates Johnson, who is already on the commission and will continue to serve, waited approximately 30 minutes for one of the two other appointees to show up for Tuesday's scheduled meeting.

Three seats changed hands at last Thursday's Wheelwright City Council meeting when the council named the new members to the board. Council's decision drew a verbal resignation from Bill Meade during that meeting.

Council replaced commissioners Fred Salisbury, Gertrude Isaac and Ivory Johnson. Named to the board were Clark Thomsberry, Jerry Tackett and Hood.

A good crowd attended Tuesday's meeting and some appeared to be upset that the commission could not have their meeting. One unidentified citizen spoke up saying commissioners should not be named to the board if they would not attend the meetings.

Wheelwright councilman Andy Akers said Tuesday that a special meeting of the city council could be called to name a commissioner to fill the vacant post. Akers said a special meeting of the utility commission would most likely follow a special council meeting.

Wheelwright Council meets the third Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. Utility commission meetings are held on the third Tuesday at 7 p.m. The meetings are open to the public.

Reaction is mixed locally

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

Local reaction to U.S. Representative Chris Perkins' decision to not seek re-election to Congress has been mixed, but many Floyd Countians agree that Eastern Kentucky will feel the loss and that it is certainly a sad end to a 44-year political dynasty.

Chris Perkins' contributions to Eastern Kentucky can not be denied by many area residents, officials, and business leaders who are well aware of the strides made by Perkins for improved black-lung benefits; health-care and nutrition programs for the poor; money secured for roads, water and sewer projects for the 7th District; and his efforts to raise the minimum wage rates while in Congress. His decision, however, to not seek re-election drew reactions state-wide and locally.

State House Majority Leader and Prestonsburg attorney, Greg Stumbo said in the Wednesday edition of the Lexington Herald that he wished Perkins would reconsider his decision because the move left Eastern Kentucky Democrats in a bind.

"It will be hard to unseat Hal Rogers, and I wish we had had more time to find other candidates," Stumbo told the Herald-Leader.

Greg Stumbo has been a long-time friend and ally of Perkins.

Stumbo told the Times Thursday that initially "we were in shock over the decision."

Stumbo met with potential candidates Thursday afternoon at their request, two of whom were John Doug Hays, a Pikeville attorney who previously served in the state senate, and John Brock, former Superintendent of Public Instruction. Stumbo said he was not soliciting candidates.

"I'm glad to see that there are a number of people who are actively involved in public issues in and from Eastern Kentucky, and who are ac-

Text of Perkins' statement

The following is the complete, unedited text of Perkins' statement.

"First I would like to thank the people of the 7th Congressional District for all of their support and loyalty throughout the years. We have been able to accomplish an awful lot and we should be proud that by working together we have found things can be changed for the better.

Friends, I want to take this opportunity today to share with you my thoughts and feelings about the upcoming race for the newly created 5th Congressional seat. I have chosen not to run for this Congressional seat in 1992. I will continue to represent the people of the Seventh Congressional district and will fight for their rights in Washington, D.C. during the second session of the 102nd Congress. At the end of this Congress I will retire from service in the House and not seek re-election.

Serving in Congress takes a great toll on one's life and in turn, on the family. I have witnessed this cost personally and have decided, with the full support of my wife and family, to forego this career and move onto other pursuits.

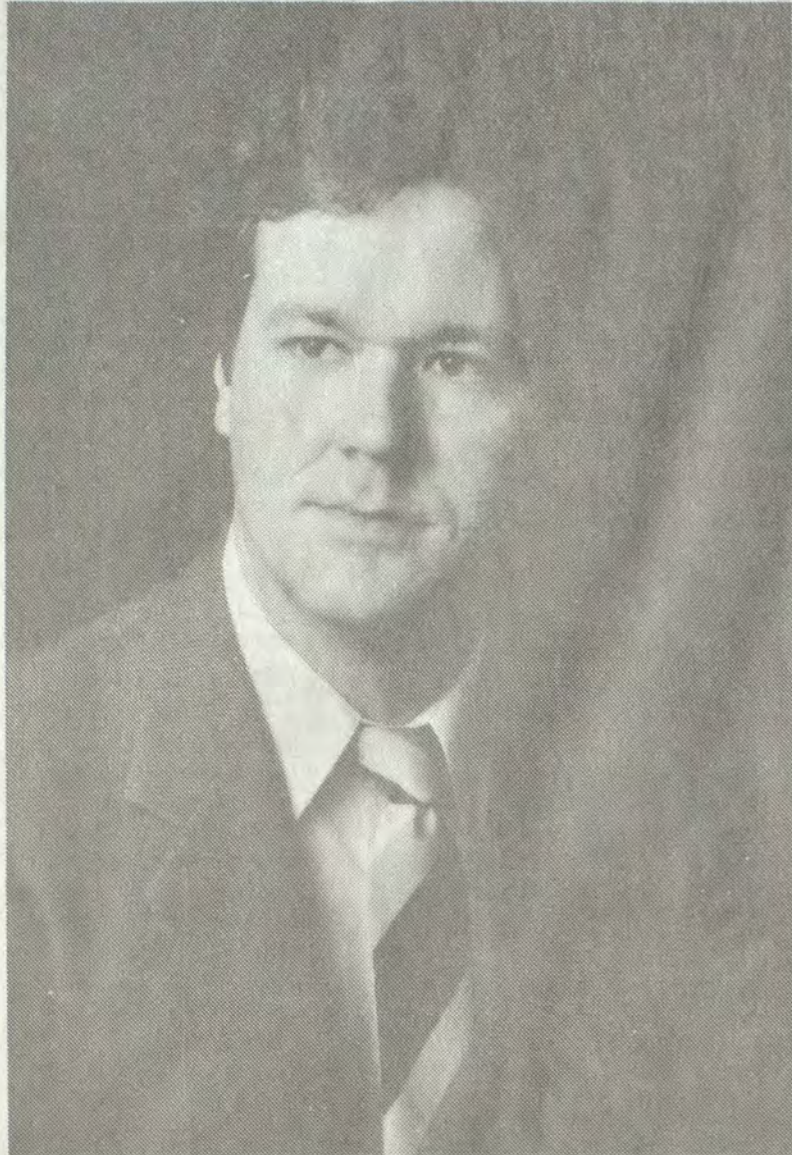

I make this decision so that I might become a real father once again to my two wonderful children. If you are a parent then I am sure that you can appreciate the sense of loss I have felt as I am updated on the latest accomplishments of my children over the phone while hundreds of miles away. Being a good parent should be a top priority for all of us, and I have found that traveling back and forth to Washington, D.C. each and every week, as well as traveling throughout the entire district, simply did not allow for any time with my family. My decision not to run is adamantly supported by my wife, Jan, and is intended to re-establish my family as a priority in my life.

Because of the recent redistricting of the Kentucky Congressional districts my home district has been changed dramatically. With these changes the demands of the job will only be getting worse. The 5th district is a politically marginal district now for both parties. The most important aspect of the job, serving the constituents of the 5th district, will have to be sacrificed for the sake of a continuous fundraising campaign effort. Each and every race will be hotly contested as the state parties pull the district back and forth. Between party primaries and the general election every two years in a politically marginal district, there is not much time left for constituents or for my family.

I have witnessed a change in the kind of service that goes on in the House of Representatives. Many members of the Congress have to spend a majority of their time fundraising and campaigning rather than dealing with constituent needs or working on legislation that helps the country.

I am choosing to step away from this system and step back to my family. I hope that you can understand and respect my decision. Believe me when I say this action is not taken lightly, but with great thought and prayer. Thank you."

Calling it quits

U.S. Congressman Chris Perkins announced Wednesday he would not seek re-election to his seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. Perkins said he will bow out of the political arena in favor of spending time with his family.

Interest is still light as filing deadline nears

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Unless an 11th-hour rush occurs early next week at the Secretary of State's office in Frankfort, the only dogfight in Floyd County for the May Primary election will be a race for district judge.

Although no candidates had formally filed for the Seventh Judicial District race Thursday, three candidates have announced their candidacy.

Prestonsburg attorneys James Allen, Danny Caudill and Dan Rowland have started their campaigns to seek the judges office, left vacant when former District Judge Harold Stumbo was sworn in as Floyd Circuit Judge in January.

Incumbents for Floyd County's two state representative and senatorial posts had no opposition Thursday afternoon. Democratic State Representatives Russell Bentley, 92nd district, and Greg Stumbo, 95th district, faced no opposition from Democrats or Republicans. It was the same for State Senators Benny Ray Bailey, 29th district, and Kelsey Friend, 31st district. Friend was given 10 Floyd County voting precincts after legislators approved a state redistricting plan in December.

The state's redistricting plan also created a new Fifth Congressional District to replace Eastern Kentucky's Seventh District. Seventh District Congressman Chris Perkins announced Wednesday that he would not seek re-election for his seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Perkins would have faced Fifth District GOP incumbent Hal Rogers if he had won the Democratic nomination.

Three board members ousted

State education leaders ousted three members of the Harlan County School Board Wednesday after finding them guilty of official misconduct.

It is the first time in Kentucky's history local board members have been removed from office by state officials.

State board members heard four days of testimony during closed hearings last week and deliberated seven hours before finding Benny Dale Coleman, David Lewis and Ronnie G. Ball guilty. Board member David Kennedy was cleared of all charges.

Project targets downtown revitalization

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

Downtown Prestonsburg has been targeted for revitalization by city planners and, by the end of 1992, area residents should be able to detect a marked difference visually, historically, and hopefully, economically in the downtown central business district.

Last year the city received a $250,000 state grant for downtown revitalization because Prestonsburg was recertified as a Kentucky Main Street City in 1991 and also due to the efforts of State Representative Greg Stumbo and Senator Benny Ray Bailey.

The city hopes to re-create an appealing, comfortable, and welcome main street atmosphere that is traditionally associated with small Appalachian towns such as Prestonsburg, according to a Prestonsburg Development Fund draft of goals for the downtown area.

The architects of the Main Street Program have created a four-part plan for revitalizing downtown Prestonsburg socially and economically with the grant funds.

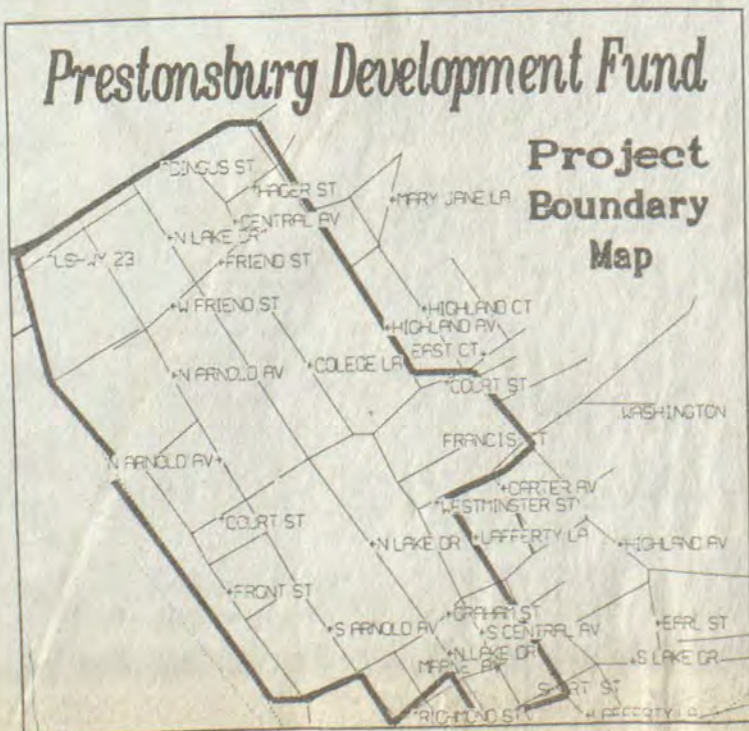

Part one involves a proposal to grant affordable low-interest loans to eligible existing and potential downtown businesses. These loans are to be made possible through a public/private partnership between Prestonsburg's four banks and the city. The cumulative total of loan funds pledged by local banks amount to $207,780. The city's contribution to the loan pool is $170,000 from the grant funds received for the Main Street Program, making the initial capital loan pool $377,780 for revitalization.

Each loan package made through the Prestonsburg Development Fund (PDF) shall consist of two separate loans with 55 percent of the total loan funds coming from a participating bank and 45 percent coming from the City of Prestonsburg funds, according to the PDR draft of initial guidelines. It is anticipated that, by combining the interest rates on the two portions of the loan package, which will be overseen by bank officials, the effective interest rate on the overall loan would be approximately 4.75 percent.

The primary purpose of these loan funds is to finance the costs of renovations and/or restorations on the exterior of impacted buildings and all projects must improve the main building facade. Eligible project activities include acquisition (as long as renovation of the acquired building(s) is an integral part of the total project), emergency stabilization, and preservation of commercial buildings within

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

Starting next week the Big Sandy Area Development District office on South Lake Drive in Prestonsburg will house the Department of Education's (Region 8) regional service center.

Regional service centers are being established by Commissioner Thomas Boysen of the Kentucky Department of Education (KDE) in the eight educational regions across Kentucky to assist district boards of education with the implementation of the reforms that fall under the Kentucky Education and Reform Act of 1990 (KERA).

These centers are to be staffed by employees of the Kentucky Department of Education.

Many of the KERA reforms are to be completed and in place within the school districts by the '95-'96 school year.

The major role of the Regional Service Center (RSC) is that of providing valued services to schools and school districts as they plan, develop, and implement programs and strategies aimed at achieving the KERA goals, according to a KDE draft on the centers.

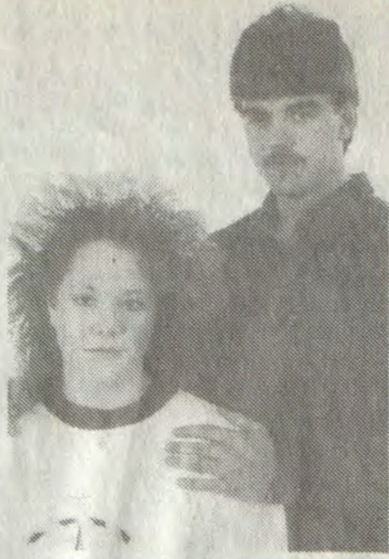

Olen Taylor Collins, former instructional supervisor in the Leslie County public school system, will open the doors of the center as director of Region 8's RSC on Monday, January 27. The center will be fully staffed by June, 1992 with state RSC representatives and consultants who specialize in the KERA initiatives, Bradley A. Matthews, KDE associate commissioner said Wednesday.

The RSC, upon invitation by the school districts, will assist in the professional development of school employees, help to implement KERA plans, offer technical assistance, aid in the KDE program design and development, and lend leadership development. These goals will be achieved either by the consultants or with the help of a regional cooperative such as the Kentucky Valley Educational Co-op or a local partner approved by the state, such as a university or state affiliate.

Five specific KERA reform areas that the RSC will provide assistance to local districts with include curriculum alignment/assistance, early childhood development (pre-school and primary school reforms), educational technology (computers), school-based decision making, and family and youth services with emphasis on extended school services.

In summation, these centers apparently will be helping the regional boards of education develop a uniform system of KERA administration and will be on-line to monitor the programs as they progress.

The counties within Region 8 that the Prestonsburg RSC office will serve are Floyd, Pike, Knott, Letcher, Magoffin, Perry, Breathitt, Wolfe, Lee, Owsley, and Leslie.

Neeley-Kendrick to wed

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Neeley of Harold announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Angela Danette to Basil Dewayne Kendrick, son of Basil Kendrick of Raccoon and Linda Lawson of Pompey. The wedding will be held Saturday, February 8, at 6:30 p.m., at the Auxler Freewill Baptist Church. The reception will follow in the Fellowship Hall of the church. All family and friends are invited to attend.

the designated downtown boundary area. The city can borrow from the loan funds if a need arises in the renovation.

For more information on part one requirements and a downtown business loan application, those interested may contact Henry Mayo, Main Street manager, at 606-886-2335.

Part two of the plan involves the creation of a Main Street office to house the executive director of the program and a secretary. This is the first time a full-time Main Street manager has been available to oversee the progress of the renovation of downtown Prestonsburg. $30,000 of the grant money was set aside to fund part two.

Part three of the Main Street plan set aside $25,000 of the grant money for a mountain arts feasibility study before progress continues on the project.

Part four of the plan involves the creation of a living museum within the city boundaries which will include the erection of historical markers, murals, coal exhibits, and city history to be spotted throughout the downtown area in the hopes that such displays will not only attract tourism, but bring an Appalachian and historical pride into the community.

The archaeological dig on Front Street, the Kentucky Opry building, and the Kentucky Arts Inc. are to be highlighted as downtown attractions when the project is completed.

Those interested in learning more or becoming a vital part in downtown restructuring should attend the public meetings held regularly in the municipal building or contact Main Street manager, Henry L. Mayo.

missioner Thomas Boysen filed 33 charges against all five Harlan board members and superintendent Robert Shepherd after an investigation of the district by the state's Office of Education Accountability (OEA).

OEA is also conducting reviews in the Floyd and Letcher County schools and investigated the Boyd County School System. OEA's review of Boyd County led to the resignation of superintendent Delmis Donta late last year.

Boysen charged that the Harlan board and its superintendent violated state bidding, school construction and open meetings laws. Board members were found not guilty of violating the open meetings law.

Shepherd resigned as superintendent soon after the charges were levied and board member Garry Henson resigned earlier this month because of health reasons.

Boysen is in charge of the Harlan County school system until he appoints four replacement board members. Boysen said he would advertise for applicants and form a six-member committee to screen the applications.

In a related matter, a bill was approved Wednesday by the House Education Committee that would prevent other local school officials from resigning in the face of being removed from office.

Quick response saves two homes

Quick action by the Left Beaver Volunteer Fire Department Tuesday kept a fire, which destroyed a storage building, from spreading to a nearby home.

Left Beaver Fire Chief Derek Thacker was at work at the the McDowell Appalachian Hospital when he spotted the fire in a storage building near the hospital at 2:25 that evening. Thacker reported the incident to two firefighters who also worked at the hospital, and then went to the fire department to get the fire-truck.

By the time he returned, Thacker said, the building was fully engulfed in flames. The flames charred part of a home located about 4 feet away, before the blaze was brought under control.

Thacker said the fire began near a wood-burning stove in the building. Greg Hopkins, owner of the building, had been working in the building about ten minutes before the fire began. Hopkins had left to eat lunch in his nearby home and was unaware of the fire until firefighters arrived. Approximately twelve firefighters arrived on the scene.

While they were still at the scene, returning their equipment to their truck, Left Beaver firefighters received a call around 3:30 p.m. to a fire at the home of Tony Walters at Minnie. The fire began in the basement area near a furnace, Thacker said. Firefighters contained the fire to the basement of the two-story structure. The home sustained smoke and water damage. No one was at home at the time of the incident, and the fire is under investigation, Thacker said.

tively pursuing and looking at that race (for Perkins' seat). It does appear that there will be a number of viable candidates and that's important," Stumbo said.

Stumbo said that he thought the candidate to replace Perkins should have a history of involvement within the service region and, that to have gained an understanding of the needs of the region, a candidate should have lived there. The candidate should plan to live within the region, Stumbo added.

Floyd County Attorney, Jim Hammond, said that he felt Eastern Kentucky will experience a setback in both democratic representation and in progressive program legislation within the U.S. Congress, because a new congressional representative, without the seniority and personal contacts Chris and Carl D. Perkins had established, might not be as effective overall.

"I see it as sad for the people of this area that we will be in a less competitive position in the U. S. House of Representatives as a consequence of Chris withdrawing. It will make all other (local) officials' jobs here a lot more difficult (as well)," Hammond said.

Prestonsburg civil rights attorney and possible candidate to replace Perkins, Ned Pillersdorf said that he was sincerely saddened by Perkins' decision.

"Chris did have a good legislative agenda going. I empathize with him because sometimes personal problems prevent you from doing good things."

I basically decided to run when I heard (about Perkins' decision) because I'm afraid his legislative agenda could go down the drain if a Republican ran from this district and I kind of think the others running aren't real Democrats," Pillersdorf said.

Perkins has been under fire much of the last three years concerning his personal life and finances. The House ethics subcommittee has been investigating 8,331 bad checks written by Congressmen on a House bank that Perkins has refused to comment on to the press.

Former circuit judge of Floyd County, Hollie Conley referred to this Thursday, saying that now is the time for Perkins to give a "full account and explanation of the bad check situation (in Washington) to his constituents, for his own benefit, if for no other reason."

"It just makes you wonder what part this had to play in the (Perkins') decision not to run," Conley said, adding that "I was certainly surprised at the announcement."

Other local officials expressed their surprise at Perkins' announcement and offered their opinions.

Commonwealth Attorney Jerry Patton said that he was surprised that Perkins had waited as late as his did to announce his decision to not seek re-election.

"It obviously weakens the chances of any Democratic candidate at this point to get a viable campaign together for a run in the primary elections. It left the party at a disadvantage," Patton said.

The "Sage of Cow Creek" and former local attorney, Woodrow Burchett had an opinion.

"We have been blessed with a great congressman for many years representing this area, and if we don't straighten ourselves up we're not going to have a great one again from around here. I would love for Democratic leaders to get a good, strong, and reputable Democrat that would be a good congressman to enter the race and pretty quick, too, because they've only got seven more days," Burchett said. He added that Grady Stumbo or Benny Ray Bailey would make good candidates and each would have "an excellent chance to win."

Newly elected Circuit Judge Harold Stumbo expressed his surprise and said that Chris had been a good representative for this area.

"I thought Chris was alright, but he was not as good as his father," Stumbo said Thursday.

"Chris has helped us quite a bit in Floyd County. I would rather he had run because I feel he could have won," John M. Stumbo, Floyd County Judge Executive said, adding that his announcement had come as "quite a surprise to me."

"Chris and his office (personnel) have always been very supportive of me and to Floyd County," Stumbo said.

Perkins, 37, was quoted as saying in the Thursday edition of the Herald Leader that he would move on to "personal business pursuits" and would work on becoming a "real father" to his children when his political career ends.

OLW smoke-free policy is working

"A Smoke-Free Facility". These ever increasingly popular words are now a prevalent site throughout Our Lady of the Way Hospital.

Our Lady of the Way Hospital began gradual changes toward this goal beginning in October of 1991. These steps included designating a limited smoking area for employees and visitors and posting signs throughout the hospital informing patients and visitors of the planned policy changes. These activities had been in place for several months prior to the total ban on smoking within the hospital which became effective December 1, 1991. "The transition of becoming completely smoke free was somewhat easier than if the changes had been made cold turkey," Nursing Administrator Charlotte Lawson noted. "Our employee's had a longer transition time and our patients were more prepared to accept the policy change."

The move to become a smoke free facility is in accordance with the new Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations standards for participation. The standard states that all hospitals who participate in JCAHO Accreditation must "disseminate and enforce a hospital wide no smoking policy, by January 1, 1992." The policy applies to patients, visitors and employees. The standard does allow for special circumstances in which terminally ill patients may be permitted to smoke in their rooms with written physician orders. Our Lady of the Way's new smoking policy reflects this exception to the no smoking rule.

To assist employees, patients and visitors with these changes, Our Lady of the Way offers Fresh Start Smoking Cessation Classes. In these classes participants learn about the effects of smoking and strategies for quitting. The class also covers relaxation exercises that will help them through the process of quitting smoking.

For more information on the new smoking regulations or about the Fresh Start Classes please call Our Lady of the Way Hospital at 285-5181.

Dewey has prevented $191 million in flood damage

Dewey Dam was built in 1949, not to prevent flooding in the area, but to reduce the damage caused by floods. By holding back a large volume of water in the lake, the Dam keeps that water out of the Levisa Fork, thus allowing for more water to fill the river from the Beaver Creeks, Middle Creek and others. The Dam helps to lower the water level in Prestonsburg, even though it empties downstream of the city.

Each year the Corps of Engineers calculates the flood damages that are prevented by Dewey Dam. The flood damage prevented since the Dam has been in operation exceeds 191 million dollars. This is a large savings when you compare it to the construction cost of $2 million. Both of those figures have been adjusted to compare to today's dollars, but, as you can see, the dam has more than paid for itself since it was first built!

During the last flood event, November 30 to December 5, 1991, Dewey Dam held back 12 feet of water. Holding back that water prevented 162 thousand dollars in flood damages.

For more information on the Dam or Lake call the Corps of Engineers at 886-6709 or 789-4521.

Environmental photographs on exhibit at Appalshop

"I wish I'd spoken to her," an exhibit of photographs of the vanishing natural world by Hoyt Spence can be seen at the Appalshop Gallery beginning Tuesday, January 14.

Spence, a native of Pike County, Kentucky, describes his work as "environmental portraiture." He travels extensively throughout the Appalachian region in search of pristine settings for his photographs.

"In view of our environmental plight," Spence says, "my vision is to remind people of the essence of the real surroundings. I try to find that life of the forest that makes us tremble, to share the woodland spirit."

The exhibit of 57 color photographs will be on display at Appalshop through February 29, and is open to the public, free of charge. The Appalshop Gallery is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.. Appalshop is located on Madison Street in downtown Whitesburg, Kentucky.

Opportunity knocks

by Scott Perry

Chris Perkins' departure from the political scene is a surprise more from a standpoint of timing than in the reality of the situation.

Perkins was expected to be highly vulnerable to defeat in this race and was, for the first time since his father Carl D. won the seat in 1949, a decided underdog.

Chris Perkins' narrow victory in 1990 over under-funded, low-profile GOP opponent Will Scott was a signal that the Perkins dynasty was in trouble, and a redistricting this year that would have pitted Perkins against GOP incumbent Hal Rogers, further eroded his re-election chances.

But Perkins' exit does not mean the Democrats are surrendering the seat in Congress they've held for nearly half a century. In fact, this is an opportunity to cement the party's hold if, and that's a big if, the right candidate comes to the front of the class.

Mr. or Ms. Right must recognize that this district is among the poorest in the nation and that past policies of throwing money at our problems have been dismal failures and we have been treating the symptoms of poverty without adequately seeking a cure.

The right candidate must offer our region hope that goes beyond the first of the month check in the mailbox.

Opportunity knocks.

We have five days to find someone who'll answer.

Legislative Perspective

Rep. Russell Bentley

As we await details of the governor's budget plans, higher education moved to the forefront of House deliberations last week, specifically, the way we choose our university governing boards.

Gov. Jones addressed a joint session of the General Assembly last week, providing a general outline of the programs he will push during the next several months. Details on how these programs mesh with our tight financial condition will come in a couple of weeks, when the governor delivers his budget message.

Among the things the governor told us he favored is a phased in four-year plan to return a greater share of coal severance-tax money to coal counties. Under Jones' plan, that share would rise to 50 percent by 1994-95.

He also discussed several measures aimed at reforming Kentucky's elections. Among them: limiting individual contributions to $100, public financing of elections for the state's two highest offices, a reduction in the number of statewide offices and fewer elections.

All of these ideas will generate a good deal of discussion on both sides in the coming months, but work on one key issue will be postponed until later in the year.

Although determined to address the health-care crisis in Kentucky this year, Jones said he would first appoint a task force to study how to provide comprehensive, affordable health care. That panel's report would lead to a special legislative session later in 1992.

Perhaps the most controversial proposal offered by the governor is the removal from office of all current members of university governing boards. "Striking while the iron is hot," as one lawmaker put it, a House bill on this subject has already been approved by our Education Committee. Floor action could come within a week.

Generally, the bill calls for establishing a nine-member screening panel, which would present the governor with a list of qualified candidates for board positions. The governor would be required to make selections from that list.

When the screening panel is set, the boards of all eight public universities and the state Council on Higher Education would be abolished and its members replaced. Terms would be staggered so that no future governor could stack individual boards. Appointees to the screening board would have to be confirmed by the General Assembly and new board members would be in place by July 1.

The intention of this selection system is to remove our university governing boards from the political patronage system, ensuring that only the best qualified candidates are entrusted with oversight of Kentucky's higher education hierarchy.

However, some House members felt we moved too quickly on this issue and that it gives our current governor too much power since he would be able to select the first screening panel entirely.

I look forward to hearing your comments on this or any other issue. If you would like to express your views, you may reach me in Frankfort at 1-800-372-7181.

End Of Something

U.S. Congressman Chris Perkins' announcement that he will not run again met with mixed reviews from various sources.

Some have called it the end of a dynasty and others have said all along he couldn't fill his daddy's shoes. He's been praised for keeping an eye on Eastern Kentucky and chided for his personal lifestyle. And who can forget the famous "Jar Wars" episode in the 80s.

He was not his daddy, no son can be expected to fill his father's shoes. Some say his father, Carl D. Perkins, is responsible for making the mountains a gold mine for welfare recipients. Some likened him to the Man Upstairs.

Whatever the case, most everyone has something to say or think about Chris Perkins.

One thing is for certain, his fax machine in Washington must be ready for retirement too.

You're Out

A giant step for the education reform act took place Wednesday in Frankfort with news that three members of the Harlan County School Board had been ousted from office.

The State Board of Education found them guilty as charged of misconduct while in office and for not using the proper bidding procedure for a school construction project.

An important message is being sent to school boards across the state: the "good 'ole boy" way of doing business is out and accountability, the Office of Education Accountability, is in. It's time to start doing things right.

The board members have declared their innocence from day one and said evidence presented to the state board would acquit them of any charges.

How come they have never presented any of the "evidence" to the public? If all this proof of their innocence exists, wouldn't they be glad to share it?

They claim being thrown out of office was "politically motivated," and harmed education reform. (Snickers)

It seems the state is finally singing a different tune with OEA singing backup.

Could Floyd County be the next stop on the concert tour?

Refreshing Change

Citizens of Wheelwright are in for an exciting time if Thursday's city council meeting is any indication of things to come.

The four new council members showed no hint of being inexperienced and it was obvious the majority had done their homework on what the job entailed.

They apparently want to do things right and don't mind reading it straight from the book to clarify any questions that may come up. The fact that several had well-worn copies of a publication describing their duties and responsibilities was a good sign Wheelwright residents can expect their council to make educated decisions.

Wouldn't it be nice if all elected officials were so informed and willing to take the time to learn their job before going to work?

Keep an eye on Wheelwright. It could be the start of a new beginning.

We Want To Hear It

Floyd County superintendent Ron Hager and board member Dr. Mary Hall raised a lot of questions about the Left Beaver High School project at the December meeting, most of which were directed to the architect.

But, when the architect, James Ellis, came to the January meeting to respond to the comments made concerning project delays and a claim of excessive design changes, it seemed the two didn't want to hear it.

Hall was unusually quiet about the new high school, a pct project of hers, and Hager wanted the issue discussed behind closed doors.

Board attorney Cliff Latta, Ellis' attorney Phil Damron and board member Eddie Billips said the issue should be discussed in public because those questions were raised before the public.

Ellis refuted the statements made in December and told his side of the story.

Damron wasn't allowed to address the board at the meeting and instead called a press conference in the foyer at Betsy Layne High School, where the meeting was held. The fact that all of the media and part of the audience left the meeting to hear what Damron had to say was a telltale sign that the public wanted to know what he wasn't allowed to say.

Damron had plenty to say and raised some important issues.

But, it's not the public's job to find the answers, it is the job of those we elect.

Is anybody besides the taxpayers listening?

Legislative Perspective

Rep. Gregory D. Stumbo

Kentucky's new Governor came a courtin' the General Assembly last week and most legislators were receptive. He received a resounding welcome when he arrived in the legislative chamber to deliver the State of the Commonwealth address. And, while his delivery style is dramatically different than that which legislators experienced during the four years of the last administration, Jones definitely made several points that put his "dance" program at least near the mainstream of the political action.

He took the controversial side of several welfare issues, staunchly supporting increased health care benefits for the poor and unemployed. He especially emphasized his support of family resource centers, a part of the Education Reform Act. And, he committed to keeping the act as approved by the 1990 Legislature on its timetable. He also expressed his intentions to strengthen laws that protect women and children from domestic violence.

Jones advocated a bonus system to reward good state workers and fire workers who do not do their jobs. I am also pleased that the Governor included East Kentucky's needs among his priority issues. He reaffirmed his commitment to the return of additional severance tax money to coal producing counties starting in 1994. He announced his intentions to promote Kentucky coal worldwide. A continued effort to promote economic development in Kentucky was also given priority status by the Governor. He said economic development offices would be opened in East and West Kentucky to intensify efforts to preserve and attract jobs. More money for capital construction at state parks was also part of the Jones' agenda which will mean improvements for Jenny Wiley.

He reiterated his support of dramatic changes in campaign financing for gubernatorial elections. Jones advocates a $100 spending limit on personal contributions.

Following up Governor Jones' remarks on reorganizing the state's eight university boards, removing all current members and replacing members under a new process—a bill proposing those measures passed by the House of Representatives following a lengthy floor discussion. It would set up a screening committee, nominated by the governor and confirmed by legislators, to select candidates for each university board seat.

The governor would make appointments from a list of three nominees chosen by the committee. Current board members would lose their seats June 30. The bill now goes to the Senate.

To keep up with legislative activities or to contact me while I'm in Frankfort, feel free to use the toll-free lines sponsored by the General Assembly.

Hazelett, Otolaryngologist opens practice at Highlands

Highlands Regional Medical Center announces that otolaryngologist, Gregory V. Hazelett, D.O., P.S.C. is now seeing patients in the Medical Offices on second floor. An otolaryngologist is an ear, nose, and throat specialist and treats patients of all ages.

Dr. Hazelett is a resident of Pikeville, Kentucky. He attended Mullins

Dr. Greg Hazelett

High School and went on to attend the University of Kentucky College of Pharmacy where he received his Bachelor's Degree. After practicing as a registered pharmacist for a number of years, Dr. Hazelett decided to go back to college and become a physician. And so in 1981, Dr. Hazelett entered medical school at the West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine in Lewisburg, West Virginia where he graduated in 1985.

Dr. Hazelett completed a rotating internship in 1986 at Botsford General Hospital in Farmington Hills, Michigan. He completed his residency training in general surgery at Oakland General Hospital in Madison Heights, Michigan in 1987, and completed his residency training in ENT and Otolaryngology at Oakland General in 1990.

During his residency training, Dr. Hazelett studied with many notable otolaryngologists, one of which was Dr. Mark May of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, a leading name in the field of ENT.

After completing his residency, Dr. Hazelett was an attending surgeon on staff at Oakland General Hospital, Botsford General Hospital, BiCounty Community Hospital and Mt. Clemens General Hospital, all in southeastern Michigan until August, 1991, when he returned home to eastern Kentucky.

As a specialist in ear, nose and throat disorders, Dr. Hazelett treats conditions which include sinusitis, allergies, myringotomy (ear tubes), malignancies of the throat and voice box, and certain hearing losses.

Dr. Hazelett is also trained to perform a revolutionary new sinus surgery known as endoscopic sinus surgery. Previously this procedure has been available only in metropolitan areas, but will be available in the very near future at Highlands.

When asked if he ever regretted giving up a thriving pharmacy business to become a physician, Dr. Hazelett replied, "Never-I thoroughly enjoy dealing with patients one on one, and playing an integral role in their care. I believe that some of the most interesting and significant surgical developments in recent years have occurred in the field of endoscopic sinus surgery and I am pleased to be able to come back home to eastern Kentucky and practice medicine."

Dr. Hazelett will accept patients by physician referral (although not exclusively). Limited self referrals will also be accepted.

Functional endoscopic sinus surgery

by Gregory V. Hazelett,
D.O., P.S.C.

In 1984, endoscopic sinus surgery was introduced in the United States by Dr. Messerklinger, as Australian otolaryngologist. This revolutionary procedure brought sinus surgery out of the "dark" ages. Prior to this, traditional sinus surgery was performed either through the nose with poor visibility, through an incision on the skin, or by going beneath the upper lip and through the maxillary sinus. The disadvantages of these methods were many. Operating through the nose required using a headlamp which usually provided inadequate lighting and thus meant poor visualization. As a result, there was often difficulty in identifying landmarks. Leaving a scar on the skin was not pleasing to most patients. Operating beneath the upper lip and through the maxillary sinus (transantral approach) was often accompanied by moderate pain after surgery. Today, endoscopic sinus surgery has changed all that. We are now able to operate through the nose using excellent lighting and magnification. This permits the surgeon to more easily identify landmarks inside the nose and to perform better and safer surgery.

Four sets of sinuses exist: maxillary, ethmoid, frontal and sphenoid. These start developing while the fetus is still in the womb and complete development in early adulthood. These are basically cavities in the skull and skull base, lined with ciliated mucosa. These sinuses produce approximately one quart of mucus per day. This mucus provides a protective blanket allowing the nose to act as an early line of defense by trapping dust, bacteria, and other pollutants. As the mucus is produced in each of these sinuses, it is propelled by the cilia (finger-like projections) toward the natural opening of each sinus. It then travels to the back of the nose and is swallowed, allowing the stomach acids and enzymes to destroy the harmful bacteria, etc. If the natural openings to these sinuses become blocked, sinusitis results. Many conditions can cause blockage of these openings. Most frequently, inflammation and swelling of the turbinates caused by upper respiratory infections, lead to nasal obstruction and blockage of these openings resulting in sinusitis. Generally, this acute infection is easily recognized and treated.

Other causes of disturbed mucus flow (mucociliary transport) or blockage of the sinus openings are bacterial infections, viral infections, fungal infections, allergies, polyps, anatomical deformities, traumatic nasal deformities, benign tumors, and malignant tumors. Allergies and chronic irritants cause swelling of tissues by allowing fluid to escape from the vessels into the tissues. This can result in nasal polyps and thus blockage of the natural openings of the sinuses. Infections affect the mucociliary transport system causing the secretions to become thicker and move slower. Common anatomical deformities include enlargement of the turbinates, concha bullosa (ethmoid air cell involvement of the middle turbinate), and nasal septal deviation.

Sinusitis is most commonly diagnosed by its sign and symptoms. These include post-nasal drainage, nasal stuffiness, headache, facial pain and pressure, change in smell and/or taste, chronic cough and hoarseness. Occasionally, plain sinus X-rays or a CT scan of the sinuses may be necessary to further evaluate the problem.

Can sinusitis be dangerous? Consider the close proximity of the eyes and brain to the sinuses and the answer becomes obvious. Most of the time, sinusitis is treated medically and without difficulty. Occasionally, complications of sinusitis can occur. Some of these include facial cellulitis/abscess, orbital cellulitis/abscess, visual changes due to optic nerve inflammations, osteomyelitis (infection in the bone), meningitis, brain abscess, and death.

The progression from acute to subacute to chronic sinusitis involves changes in the mucus membrane lining of the sinuses. These changes result in increased volume of mucus production, increased thickness of the mucus, and slowing of the mucus flow. Many of these changes are reversible and thus the need for endoscopic sinus surgery.

Endoscopic sinus surgery requires special training and highly sophisticated instruments and equipment. Surgery is indicated for patients who have chronic or recurrent sinusitis or for some patients who have complications of sinusitis. Surgery is usually performed on an outpatient basis and takes approximately one to one and one-half hours to complete. Either local anesthesia with sedation or general anesthesia can be used. In either case, the nasal passages are decongested and a topical anesthetic is applied, followed by a local anesthetic with vasoconstrictive properties. An endoscope which is connected to a light source and camera, is then inserted into the nose. This provides a magnified picture of the inside of the nose, shown on a TV screen. The surgery is then done with special instruments inside the nose while using the picture on the TV monitor. Visibility is exceptional due to the magnification and excellent lighting, allowing safer surgery to be performed. Usually, nasal packing is not required and the surgery and post-operative period are tolerated very well.

During the first one or two weeks after surgery, the most common complaints are nasal stuffiness and crusting. These gradually go away as nasal breathing and relief of sinus symptoms rapidly improve. Normally, the first week after surgery requires avoidance of strenuous activity, so this may necessitate missing work for one week. Complete

Church women to hold meeting

Kaye Hale Ross, president of the Local Church Women announces that the next meeting of this group will be Friday, January 24, at 10:30 a.m., at the Community United Methodist Church here. Attending church benefits community

People who attend religious services "weekly or nearly every week" give over four times as much of their household income to all charitable causes as do people who do not attend.

This is among the findings recently reported to religious groups throughout the nation by Religion in American Life (RIAL), the not-for-profit, interfaith research and public information organization. People who attend services regularly gave 3.8 percent of their household income to a variety of causes; those who did not attend contributed .8 percent.

Volunteering in the public interest is also greatly influenced by attendance at churches, synagogues and mosques. People who attend services "weekly or almost every week" volunteer an average of 3.4 hours per week. Those who do not attend volunteer less than half that amount.

RIAL works with congregations in all faiths to increase membership by urging current attendees to "Invite a Friend" to join them in the life and work of their congregation. People interested in having their own congregation take advantage of RIAL's free media messages and other "Invite a Friend" resources can call for a free brochure entitled, "Discover the Inviting Spirit in Your Congregation." Dial RIAL at 1-800-428-8292.

Smile Awhile — by Sarah Hopson

Time-out
Around October 15 of this past year, something unusual began happening in our home. I can't put my finger on what prompted the change, but that's when I noticed our family stopped having normal conversations and began talking in a foreign language.

"Jimmie, can you come in here a minute?" I asked one Saturday afternoon.

"You'll have to wait for a commercial time-out."

It was obvious he was watching a ball game, but I needed help lifting the refrigerator off my foot.

"Jimmie!" I screamed. "Help me!"

"Just a few more seconds."

Minutes later, I pulled my foot from beneath the refrigerator and limped pitifully into the family room.

"I see you got 'fouled,'" he remarked.

"Don't worry about it. I didn't need that foot today."

"Technically, you're right. Should have stayed within your regular

'boundaries' and cleaned under the fridge next year."

"What?"

"You got outside the perimeter. You should never clean under the fridge on a weekend. Stay with the 'fundamentals'. The best strategy is to ask for help."

"I did!" I cried.

"But you left yourself 'wide open.'"

"I don't know what you're talking about."

"You need to have a 'game plan'. If you wanted to clean under the refrigerator, you should have had someone 'assist' you. 'Passing off' some of the duties would have been a more responsible way to act, but you 'snow-birded'. You took your best 'shot' and bombed."

"What's wrong with your foot?" our son asked as he came into the room holding a Sporting News and a Sports Illustrated in one hand and a container of Gatorade in the other.

"I dropped the refrigerator on it."

"Don't rub it!"

"But it hurts," I winced.

"You must have been out of your 'range'. Right, Coach?"

"That's what I told her, son. She's 'out of shape', but it wouldn't have mattered anyway because she didn't 'warm-up'. Practice, practice, practice is my motto," my husband said as the telephone began ringing.

"I guess you didn't have time to 'dribble' before it came down on your foot. What kind of injury is it?"

Whoever these two people were, they weren't related to me. While I endured the agony of defeat, they were engrossed in the thrill of attaining victory at all costs.

"J.R., do you mind answering the telephone?"

"We'll be over at half-time. If it's still burning then, we'll call the fire department," I heard my son say.

"Who was that?"

"The neighbor. Her kitchen's on fire."

"My Lord, J.R.! She needs help."

"But, Mom. It was 'intentional'. She left a skillet of grease on a hot burner."

I shook my head in amazement. Here were two people who had lost all sense of reason because they couldn't think in terms of anything but basketball. My foot was broken, our neighbor's house was in danger of burning down, and they were talking in Dick Vitalese.

"What's wrong with you two?" I screamed.

"Not now, mom. The game's too close."

I started hobbling out the door to help my neighbor when I heard Jimmie yell, "Walk!"

"I'm walking the best I can on a bum foot," I yelled back.

"Pivot!"

"I can't pivot. It hurts," I called back. That's when I realized he was talking to the television and not to me.

"Get your man!" he cried out.

That's exactly what I decided to do. If he wanted to play hard ball, I'd pick the court. Thankfully, I have two weeks of uninterrupted "living" time before baseball season starts.

Students to receive degrees from Eastern

Twelve Floyd County students received degrees from Eastern Kentucky University at the end of the University's fall semester.

The University's 970 December graduates were honored by receptions Dec. 14 sponsored by ECU's nine colleges.

Faculty and administrators of the college were on hand, as well as hundreds of family members and friends of the new graduates.

Eastern holds no formal commencement ceremonies in December, but all fall semester graduates are invited back to participate in the annual spring commencement—this year scheduled for Saturday, May 9.

The new degree holders join more than 60,000 ECU alumni in Kentucky, the region and across the United States.

Eastern Kentucky University is a comprehensive, regional University serving more than 16,500 students on its 35-acre Richmond campus, throughout its 22-county extended service region, and beyond.

Writing to Read is stress-free fun at Martin Elementary

A favorite activity of the Martin Elementary Kindergarten and first grade students is to visit the Writing to Read computer lab. In a pleasant, stress-free environment, they spend an hour each day participating in various components of a program designed to help students learn to read and have a better understanding of sentence structure.

The rationale behind the Writing to Read concept is that children build on oral language skills they already possess when they enter school. Students learn to write words they use in their speaking vocabulary by combining sound symbols in various ways. They say; they write; and in turn, read everything they themselves have written.

Under the supervision of the teacher and computer aide, children move freely and independently through the lab to complete tasks at each of the six stations: (1) talking computer - where students see and hear letter and sound symbols; (2) work journal station - for reinforcement of letter and sound symbols; (3) writing station - to compose stories; (4) listening stations where students hear and see words in print; (5) make-words station - for application and expression of the writing process through the use of games and manipulatives; and (6) the book-browsing station. Teachers say their students really look forward to their computer hour and are eager to find their assigned stations.

Computer lab

Laura Hyden, Writing to Read Aide, prepares the computers for students at Martin Elementary.

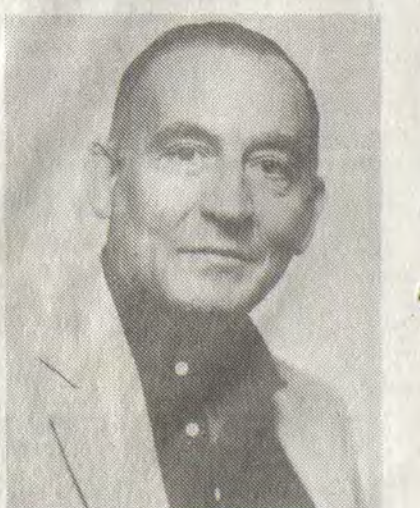

(officially) to the school staff this year, Hyden has served at Martin in a voluntary capacity since the program's inception.

Hyden's main duties as a computer lab aide is to assist and guide the young participants as they move through the six stations. She maintains a clean and orderly room and provides a pleasant atmosphere in the lab. When the room is unoccupied, Hyden can usually be found formatting and copying diskettes or digging into one or more technology manuals in an effort to learn more about computers.

The Writing to Read aide is a very mild-mannered person who likes to work with children. Her philosophy is that one should work hard for things that one truly believes are worthwhile.

PCC faculty member presents paper

Dr. John Shiber, Assistant Professor of Biology at Prestonsburg Community College, recently presented a paper at the Annual Meeting of the Kentucky Academy of Sciences held in Owensboro (November 7-9). The paper, entitled "Preferences, Increased Student Involvement and Enhanced Learning with Teacher-Prepared Objectives in Biology Courses," summarized the results of a year-long study in which Dr. Shiber provided instructional objectives, which he prepared, to 516 PCC students enrolled in his classes. In effect, he listed the specific concepts, principles, etc. which one must grasp to succeed in the course. The results indicated that the majority of students (at least 95 percent) preferred using instructional objectives because they were very helpful in learning the material and preparing for tests. Furthermore, with the use of instructional objectives, the students felt less pressured as they became actively involved in completing the objectives at their own pace, and, hence, felt more in control of the grades they earned. Their enthusiasm for the teacher-prepared instructional objectives was significantly reflected in their successful achievement, i.e., their grades. "Interest and confidence in learning the subject matter increases and ultimately enhances student achievement," Dr. Shiber concluded. The abstract of his paper will appear in the next volume of Transactions of the Kentucky Academy of Science, due to be published in March, 1992.

National PTA offers advice to parents

Many parents wonder what they can do to get their children off to a good start in reading. Should they invest in a computer and educational software? Should they buy the phonics program they heard advertised on the radio? Actually, the most precious gift a parent can give a beginning reader is time—time spent enjoying a good book together.

Mary Renck Jalongo, Ph.D., addresses childhood reading in the February issue of PTA Today. "A relaxed, informal introduction to reading is just what the young child needs," says Jalongo. "Children need to be invited into the world of literature, not dragged," she continues. Jalongo believes that reading aloud increases children's vocabulary, reading achievement scores, listening and speaking abilities, letter and symbol recognition, and the ability to understand language and thinking skills. "Perhaps the most important result of reading aloud is the development of positive attitudes toward reading," states Jalongo.

The National PTA thinks it is important for parents to select high quality books for their children and recommends several ways to find out not only about the classics but also about new books.

- Ask a librarian who specializes in children's literature to suggest some titles.
- Visit a bookstore that is stocked with high-quality children's books or, better yet, one that specializes in children's books.
- Ask a teacher to recommend some titles that are geared to your child's reading level, or consult a children's literature textbook.
- Go to your school's book fair or purchase paperback books through a classroom book club.
- Apply some basic criteria of your own, such as: Does the content and level seem appropriate? Do the pictures complement the story? Do preschoolers respond enthusiastically to the book? Would I enjoy sharing the book with my child?

Copies of PTA Today are available for $2.50 each by sending a check or money order made payable to the National PTA, 700 N. Rush St., Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Auxier Elementary News

Keeping up with the times. Almost every teacher at Auxier Elementary would attest to the fact that this first half of the school year has been a very time consuming one. This is due partly to the implementation of a pilot primary program and an experimental upper grade program, using group learning and teacher collaboration.

This has required numerous hours in attendance at conferences, training sessions, workshops etc. which included; Writing Assessment workshops. Science Conferences, Young Authors, Academic Coach Conference, Writing to Read and TLC training, along with others.

Approximately 330 hours were spent collectively by the staff in training sessions on Saturdays and after school hours. This was in addition to other school responsibilities and extra curricular activities. Often one activity ran into another and day ran into evening and sometimes night, leading teachers to jokingly remark, "We need to get ourselves a bed here."

Pizza and fast foods were sometimes brought in after school to sustain energy for the meetings being held. The picnic-like atmosphere and congeniality of staff members made the after school hours a little more tolerable. This was enhanced by the principal, Mrs. Constance Tackett, who made every effort to create a friendly and relaxing atmosphere for teachers to work in.

Despite these busy times, the Auxier staff found time to share many new ideas learned at conferences as well as sharing their own innovative ideas with one another. This supportive attitude has been an additional bit of informal staff development, all of which has been transferred to the classroom and to the students.

At this point in time, the teachers at Auxier are not certain whether or not their new approach to teaching is effective or not, but the students are excited about certain types of new learning being tried. Teachers hope that "A" not only stands for Auxier but that it stands for "A" for effort.

A class in the running. Keeping to their tradition of good attendance last year, Mrs. Patricia Burke's class at Auxier Elementary, has won the Best Attendance Award three months out of four this year, thus far. This has been attributed to fierce competition with other classes in the school as well as students' pride in themselves to be number one.

Although some of the comforts of home are lacking in the classroom setting, nonetheless, the Grade Five students have adopted the motto "Home Sweet Home" for their classroom. The words are proudly displayed on the outside of their classroom door below the Attendance banner for all to see. This not only demonstrates the students' feelings, but also shows an attitude and spirit in the students themselves which enhances other learning experiences.

Not to be overlooked are other accomplishments made in recent months by this class. Jarrod Goble was the school winner in a Geography bee sponsored by National Geographic. He is taking part in the county competition and could become eligible at the state level if he wins locally.

Shelly Greathouse, a tough little Auxier Hornet, stung her competitors when she won the county wide free throw tournament in girls' basketball this past month. The trophy was bigger than Shelly! The basketball hoop had to seem awfully high up for her during the competition, yet, she won. Obstacles can be overcome when determination persists.

In a poster contest entitled, "Everyone Wants to be Part of the Action", three students in Grade Five had their posters selected as part of the school competition. Samantha Cross, Jason King and Douglas Marsillett, whose posters will be submitted to the Kentucky Developmental Disabilities Council for further judging, feel confident that one of them will win. But win or lose, they are proud of their accomplishment at the school level.

When asked how they feel about these good works they have been doing, one student's reply was, "I guess we're trying hard."

Martin Elementary teachers learn from pilot program

by Pamela Wohlford

One of the teaching-learning techniques teachers frequently employ in their classes and have found to be effective is that of peer tutoring. Another equally successful method of learning is through demonstration and observation. With this in mind, the principal and teachers at Martin Elementary decided to combine and utilize the same learning principles for themselves as they enter the planning stages of the ungraded primary program tentatively slated to start at the beginning of the next school year.

Through the cooperation of the Prater school principal and his primary staff, Martin Principal William Hughes arranged for two teams of teachers to visit the Prater school on consecutive days to observe, absorb, question, and learn of the school's primary program. The visiting groups consisted of teachers from each area that will be closely involved in the project - classroom, special education, state remediation and Chapter 1 teachers.

Team members say one of the first things they noticed was the smoothness and ease with which the Prater teachers carried out their carefully coordinated primary program, one of the Floyd County pilot projects begun this year. Evidence of extensive and methodical preparation was readily apparent as the teacher teams followed student groups through their day's activities.

The ungraded primary, part of the Kentucky Education Reform Act and now referred to as just "primary," was informally begun on a small scale at the Martin school this year. In some of the primary classes, unit themes are being taught and peer teaching and cooperative learning techniques are being used to help students grasp and utilize basic and advanced skills.

The Martin teachers noted the consistency of the advice offered by the individual Prater school primary teammates: be well-prepared and begin planning now! Teachers at Prater spent most of their summer preparing for an apparently successful effort in initiating the primary concept.

One of the Martin group commented that the visit to the Prater school demonstrated the fact that there are extremely competent and professional teachers and administrators in this county who are capable and willing to serve as consultants and/or resource personnel in an effort to help build a better school system.

A Look At Sports
by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

IT HAS BEEN A ROUGH LAST SEVEN DAYS

While at Wheelwright last Friday night to cover the Trojans and Prestonsburg conference game, I suddenly realized I wasn't feeling my normal self. I felt tired and had a sharp pain in my lower jaw that seemed to get progressively worse during the evening. Saturday at the Floyd County tournament at Maytown it wasn't any better and was still getting worse. I made it through Sunday, but not too well. It has been one rough week.

The infection in my jaw has, needless to say, been hard to cope with. Sleepless nights with the pain. Not able, not wanting to eat. (I've lost 25 pounds but only 17 lately). You know how I feel don't you? When you feel bad even the thing you love doing has to take second place until the pain is gone.

I sit down to write and words come hard to put down. You feel you would rather be lying somewhere trying to get some sleep you didn't get the night before and knowing you wouldn't get any if you had the chance. It has been rough!

Many around here deserve credit for helping through all this. Wednesday's section was part mine and a little of everyone else's. I work with a great group of people. The best.

Nancy (my wife) certainly has been very helpful and without her it would have been rougher.

I'm not back to 100 percent as of yet, but today (Thursday) I was able to put in a full day's work.

I certainly miss not being able to do my job. I guess I am very fortunate to have the position I have. And not being able to perform my duties lately has taught me just how much I really do enjoy covering sports.

I have been asked in person and over the phone by so many people why my column hasn't been running on a regular basis like it used to. Hopefully, it will be back in the sports section on a regular basis now.

I tried to take in the Kentucky/Tennessee game Tuesday night after listening to the Wheelwright/McDowell game on radio. The Wildcats struggled big time, but I was in so much pain that night I found it hard to feel sorry for them. There will be more games like that for this year's Wildcat squad. Tomorrow's game with Arkansas promises much of the same. If the Cats don't hit the treys they are in trouble. Have you noticed how much the opposition is letting them shoot and they still can't hit. But it will still be a banner year for Coach Pitino's crew.

Wheelwright won three of four conference games at home and all three were barnburners. They went on the road and beat McDowell by nine at the Devil's Den. The "Jack Pack" is for real and they could very well go far in next week's Class "A" Classic.

Allen Central is playing better basketball also. I look for the Rebels to be a normal Rebel team. When tournament rolls around they will be right in the thick of things.

Prestonsburg is also showing more consistency in play. A big weekend in store for Coach Parido's club. Allen Central at home Friday night and their own shoot-out Saturday night.

McDowell continues to be hit hard by defections. What has happened to loyalty to your school? The KHSAA certainly made a big mistake in allowing and making it easy for a player to transfer and still play ball. I say let them stay where they are or, if they transfer, let it be for academic reasons only. Someone has to put a stop to what is happening around our area.

McDowell will be the host of this year's 58th District Tournament. I certainly hope that the rumor coming out of Left Beaver is not true! If it is then we all will protest!

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports! See you on the hardwood.

Trojans Silence Critics With 72-63 Win At McDowell

It's not easy to go into the "Devil's Den" and win a basketball game on the McDowell Daredevils home court. A basketball team will find it hard to come away with anything but a moral victory. But for the Wheelwright Trojans and coach Jackie Pack, the critics have been silenced as to whether the Trojans are capable of winning on the road.

Wheelwright played their first four conference games at home, winning three of the four. Skeptics thought once the Trojans got away from the friendly confines of Wheelwright the Trojans would find it hard to win. But for Coach Pack and the Trojans they always knew they were a good basketball team.

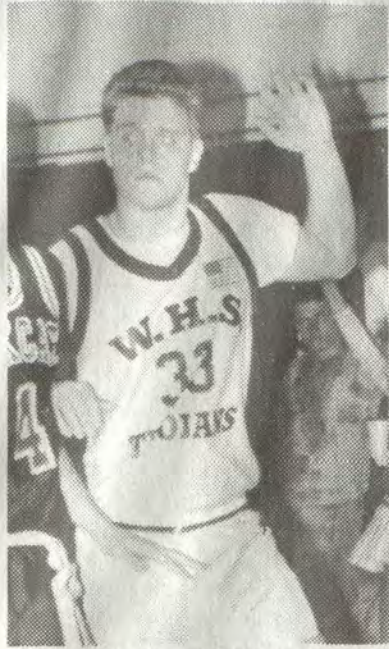

"This ball club is not worried about playing on the road," he said. "Before we played any conference games we played seven games on the road and won. This is mature basketball team with mature kids that can play anywhere."

What few skeptics remained up to the McDowell game have to be convinced now that the Wheelwright Trojans are for real. A solid, bonifide team that right now has to be considered the favorite to win the Floyd County Conference this year.

The Trojans improved their overall record to 10-5 on the season and head up the conference standings with a sparkling 4-1 record.

When you talk about the success of this year's Trojan basketball team you can point to senior forward Harold Johnson. Johnson scored a game high 23 points and most of those came in the final three quarters. While McDowell was trying to do a number on the high scoring Trojan, Layne Bailey and Mike Newsome rose to the occasion, scoring all but two of the Trojans' 16 first quarter points.

Harold Johnson

Bailey had seven points in the period and Newsome had seven also. Johnson scored the other two at the end of the period.

It seemed each quarter had its heroes with John Hall taking center stage in the second. Hall hit two crucial three-pointers that tied the game at 25-25.

"Here's a sophomore that is playing on the floor with seniors and performs the way he does," said the

Wheelwright mentor. "John has shown a lot of maturity and is tremendous basketball player."

In the third period it was Jimmy Helton that emerged as if each player was taking time to share the limelight with Johnson. Helton, held scoreless up to the third period, put on an offensive display that netted him nine third quarter points. Helton, the smallest man on the floor, waded into the tall timber and hauled in three offensive rebounds, one a put back that gave Wheelwright a 50-47 lead with 2:18 remaining in the period.

"Jimmy played the best of the year for us," said Pack of his guard's performance in the third period. "It has to give him a lot of confidence the rest of the way."

In the fourth quarter, all five starters for Wheelwright were involved in the offense.

The game was much closer than the final score would indicate. McDowell stayed in the game by controlling the boards on both ends. The Daredevils, led by their leading scorer Dale Hinkle with 20 points, were constantly getting second and third shots at the basket.

Wheelwright began to put some distance between them and the Daredevils inside the final four minutes of the game. Leading 61-59 after a Matt Johnson basket, Wheelwright went on an 8-0 run that netted them a 10-point, 69-59 margin. McDowell, with some talented three-point shooters, just couldn't make up the margin from the outside.

A basket by Alan Joe Moore made it a seven point game, 70-63. Bailey hit two free throws for the final score.

The score was tied 10 times in the first half and 11 times in the contest. The last tie came at 37-37. The lead changed hands 21 times in the course of the game with McDowell's last lead coming at 41-40 in the third period.

The Trojans were very impressive in the win, taking the ball and doing what they had been instructed to do.

"It's hard to take a running team and slow them down," explained Pack, "but this is a disciplined ball club that even when taking the break are still looking for a good shot. Our team is like that. They can run the ball and also slow down for the good shot. That will make us a better team. Our kids in practice everyday listen. We practice being patient on offense. It's just a good bunch of kids."

Floyd County basketball fans are seeing now that the Trojans are for real and are bound to keep a promise they made each other at the season's beginning.

"The kids made a promise that whatever it took they were going to be a good basketball team," added Pack.

The Trojans face a tough Elkhorn City team at Elkhorn City tonight, but coach Pack is not a "moral vic-

Bailey, Reed Lead Prestonsburg To 71-40 Win Over Lady Trojans

Amy Reed set the tone against Wheelwright in conference play at Wheelwright as she hit four three-pointers in the first quarter and Melissa Bailey controlled the block area as the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats rolled past host Wheelwright 71-40 to improve to 3-2 in conference play and 8-4 overall.

Bailey scored a game high 27 points in dominating the inside. Reed finished with 14 points with 12 coming in the first quarter. Sheena Collins continued to play well for Wheelwright with 19 points.

Both teams had one starter out but for different reasons. Keri Merion missed the Prestonsburg game with the flu but Becky Allen was serving a one-game suspension for the Lady Trojans.

Prestonsburg struggled in the second quarter as they could only manage six points. Bailey scored all six points in the quarter.

"We didn't do a whole lot in the second," explained Lady Blackcat coach Bridget Clay. "But other than that we ran our offense pretty well and played some good team ball. We looked like a basketball team and everyone that played contributed to the win."

Bailey wasted no time in making her presence under the basket known as she picked up the first two baskets in the first quarter on easy inside shots. Carolyn Reffitt scored off a turnover and then Reed hit her first three-pointer. Stephanie Music followed suit for a 12-0 Prestonsburg lead.

Stephanie Little got the Lady Trojans on the scoreboard with a jumper and Bailey answered inside for Prestonsburg. After Rhonda Thornsburg scored for a 14-4 game, Reed hit back to back treys to send the Lady Blackcats out in front 20-4. Collins nailed three consecutive jumpers for Wheelwright as the first quarter ended with Prestonsburg in front 28-10.

Prestonsburg's 18-point lead was cut to 10 in the second period as the Lady Trojans outscored Prestonsburg 14-6 in the second period. Little scored nine points in the second quarter to lead the Lady Trojan charge.

Prestonsburg led at the half 34-24. Reed was moved to the point guard position for Prestonsburg in the absence of Merion. After the first quarter Reed didn't seem to be looking for her shot as she was looking underneath to Bailey. Reed had eight assists in the game.

"Amy did a good job of running our offense," said Clay. "Melissa is one of the hardest players to stop Stumbo's streak ends at 16-1...

Newsome's 21 Points Give AMS Lady Cats Floyd County Championship

Two years ago the John M. Stumbo Lady Mustangs were riding an undefeated season as they entered the finals of the girls Floyd County Grade School championship. At that time the Maytown Lady Wildcats ended that dream and streak with a loss.

This year the Lady Mustangs, a clear favorite to take it all, came into Wednesday night's championship game with a 16-0 record only to have it blemished with a 47-45 loss to the Lady Blackcats of Adams.

April Newsome tossed in 21 points to lead Adams to their first girls' championship. Crystal Layne added 10 points for the winners.

Newsome, who did not play basketball this year until transferring from Allen to Adams, scored six of the last seven points Adams scored in the final period. But they were a big six points. Leading 41-39 with time running out on the Lady Blackcats, Penny Tackett hit a basket for a 43-39 lead Stumbo lead. Adams misfired on two attempts at the basket and on each miss Mandy Hall was fouled. Hall missed four consecutive free throws that could have sewn the game up for the Lady Mustangs. Adams took advantage of the Stumbo misfortunes and outscored the Lady Mustangs eight to one to pull the game out.

Misty Price hit one of two free throws to make it 43-40. Penny Tackett connected on a pair of charity tosses for a 45-40 lead for Stumbo. The Lady Mustangs suffered a big blow to their offense when Ashley Tackett picked up her fifth personal foul with 5:19 remaining in the game and was forced to leave the game.

April Newsome hit two foul shots to make it a 45-42 game. Layne missed two charity tosses but came back and was fouled again where she hit one of two to make it 45-43. Newsome, on a break, hit a lay up to tie the game at 45-45 and she was fouled. Newsome gave Adams the lead, 46-45, by converting the free throw. Newsome was fouled and put on the charity stripe where she hit the first of two for the 47-45 margin.

Blackcats Blow Big Lead But Hold On For 83-74 Win Over Johnson Central

It was a big night at Johnson Central High School Tuesday night when the Golden Eagles hosted the Prestonsburg Blackcats. Not only was there action on the floor but out of the stands as well, as a fan was removed from the gym after coming onto the floor.

It was a night that saw 13 three-pointers scored. It was a night when one team scored three points back to back in three different ways. It was a night that saw the Prestonsburg Blackcats, who are starting to play up to their expectations, build a 27-point lead, take the starters out only to see them having to return to preserve the win — thanks to the three-point shot. It was a night that John Clark scored 24 points to lead the Blackcats.

Against the Golden Eagles no lead is really safe with the shooting of Robbie O'Bryan. O'Bryan knows how to bury the treys from 19' 9" circle. It was quite (not quiet) a night of high school basketball.

Prestonsburg looked sharp, dull and then sharp again as they battled the Golden Eagles on their home floor. The Blackcats went on top 76-49 on a jumper by John Clark in the fourth quarter as the game was going the Blackcats' way. Coach Gordon Parido went to the bench late in the game and put his reserves in. The move almost proved disastrous as the Eagles began to flutter their wings and made a comeback attempt. Tim Delong connected on a free throw, Matt Ward had two free throws and a field goal with Delong scoring underneath to cut the lead to 20 points, 76-56. A free throw by Kevin Conley and two from Sean Damron put the lead back to 23, 79-56. Then began a Johnson Central 17 to zip run that saw the lead shrink to six points, 79-73.

It was the three-point shooting and the unusual three-point scoring of the Golden Eagles that got them back into the ball game. First, Shane Moore drilled a three-pointer. After Conley missed two from the free throw line for the Blackcats, O'Bryan was fouled behind the three-point circle and awarded three free throws where he connected on all three for a 79-62 game. Second, Shane Radliff hit a basket underneath and was fouled and went to the free throw line and completed the three-point play for a 79-65 score. O'Bryan then hit a three-pointer to cut the margin to 11 points, 79-68. Clark missed the front of a bonus shot for Prestonsburg and Delong was fouled on an offensive rebound where he connected on the back end of the two shot foul for a 10-point game. O'Bryan hit his fifth three-pointer to narrow the margin to seven, 79-72. Delong's charity toss made it 79-73 before Corey Reitz hit two free throws for Prestonsburg to break the Blackcat drought. Delong scored on a free throw for a 81-74 game and Clark's basket at the horn made it a final 83-74.

The Blackcats saw the points come just as easily in the first period as they came difficultly for them in the final period. The Blackcats opened up a 19-6 first quarter lead only to see the Golden Eagles make a run.

Clark, who led the Blackcats with 24 points, hit the first two shots for Prestonsburg for a 4-0 lead. O'Bryan nailed a trey only to see Chris Burke score back to back baskets for an 8-3 Prestonsburg lead. O'Bryan hit his second three-pointer but Prestonsburg ran off the next 11 points on a basket and three-pointer by Reitz. Back to back buckets from Burke and Clark's two free throws followed. Clark's two free throws were the result of a technical foul on the Johnson Central bench following a dunk by Burke.

Then the Eagles erupted for 13 unanswered points to tie the game at 19-19 at the end of the first quarter. Johnson Central hit two three-pointers in the run — one each by O'Bryan and Moore.

In the second period, Prestonsburg recovered enough to extend their lead back to 10 points, 33-23, behind the scoring of Jason Crisp, who finished with five points in the game. Clark and Reitz led a Blackcat spurt that gave them a 46-33 halftime advantage.

It was all Prestonsburg in the third period as they took a 71-45 lead into the final period.

Reitz finished with 18 points in the game for Prestonsburg as he seemed to have ended a shooting slump. Burke, who also has been lost in the offensive scheme for Prestonsburg, tossed in 17 points. Reitz had two treys and was a perfect eight of eight from the charity stripe. Joe Whitt hit two three-pointers for six points.

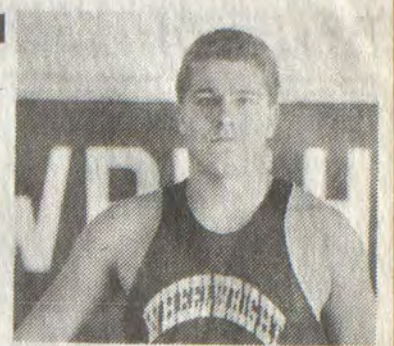

O'Bryan took game scoring honors with 25 points on five three-pointers. Delong finished with 18 points and Moore collected 14. Moore had two three-pointers in the game. Prestonsburg moves past the .500 mark at 6-5 on the season. Johnson Central falls to 9-7 overall.

The Blackcats will host the Allen Central Rebels in a conference match up Friday night at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse. Saturday night the Blackcats will also host their second annual Saturday Night Shootout when they will face the Yellowjackets of Whitesburg at 6:30 p.m. In the second game, McDowell will play Elkhorn City. A junior varsity game between Prestonsburg and Whitesburg will begin at 5 p.m.

ROBERTS PLACES NINTH IN KENNEDY MEMORIAL 5K RUN

Paintsville's Rick Roberts placed ninth overall in the 28th annual John F. Kennedy Memorial 5K Run in Washington, D.C. Sunday, January 19.

"If I hadn't had a bad leg I could have won it," said Roberts who also stated he may have to take a few weeks off to allow his leg to heal.

Several hundred runners departed from the Jefferson Monument to battle each other and the weather. At 10 a.m. the temperature was a very cold 15 degrees with 40 mile an hour winds coming off the Potomac River for the first half of the race.

Rusty Moore of Alexandria, Va., won the 3.1 mile even in 17:14. Roberts finished with a recorded time of 19:00 flat, second in his age group of 35-39.

Stumbo took a 10-5 first quarter lead and led at the first stop 13-8. Adams pulled to within one point in the second period on a free throw by Layne and a basket by Price to make it 18-17. Tera Tackett scored for a 20-17 Stumbo lead but Donna Hall cut it back to one with a jumper. Penny Tackett missed two free throws but two trips later hit a jumper for a 22-19 lead. Layne's lay up cut the lead to 22-21 at the half.

Stumbo looked to have things going their way in the third stanza. After Price hit a basket for Adams to give the Lady Blackcats a 23-22 lead, the Lady Mustangs went on a 9-0 spurt that netted them a 31-23 lead. Newsome completed a three-point play to cut the margin to five, but back to back baskets by Penny Tackett extended the margin to nine, 35-26.

The Lady Blackcats were not ready to concede the game and made it three points after three quarters by scoring the final six points of the period to trail 35-32. Layne hit a lay up and Newsome followed suit. Jenna Fannin scored before the period ended.

Price finished with eight points for Adams. Fannin had four and Donna Hall three. Heather Collins had one point.

Penny Tackett led Stumbo with 21 points. Ashley Tackett scored 10 before fouling out. Tera Tackett added six as did Mandy Hall. Stephanie Hamilton scored two points.

After the game, awards were presented to various individuals. April Newsome won the individual free throw trophy by hitting 77 percent. The team free throw trophy went to Prater with 50 percent. Adams won first place in the cheerleader awards with John M. Stumbo taking second and Prater third.

Adams Middle School coach Gaye

Hatfield was named "Coach of the Year."

Also named was an All-Tournament team. Named to the squad were: Heather Nelson, Myra Akers of Prater; Crystal Layne, April Newsome of Adams; Pam Goble, Jessica Prater of Maytown; Melissa Tackett, Crystal Tackett of Melvin; Penny Tackett, Ashley Tackett of Stumbo; Jana Bates of Allen and Chrissy Tackett of McDowell.

Lady Rebels Falls To Top Ranked Elkhorn City 63-50 In Class "A" Classic

The last time Elkhorn City and Allen Central met at Elkhorn City, which was the first game of the season, the Lady Rebels gave the top-ranked Lady Cougars all they wanted before losing. In fact, Allen Central led most of the game only to falter in the closing minutes.

This time around, the Lady Cougars were not wanting any surprises as they faced the Lady Rebels in the second round of the Kentucky All "A" State regionals at Elkhorn City.

The Lady Cougars looked sharp in the opening quarter as they blitzed Allen Central and raced to a 23-6 first quarter lead. Allen Central only got two field goals from Jenny Wiley and Marsha Brown's two free throws. The host team scored the first 10 points of the game as they were just too much for the Lady Rebs. The height advantage of the Lady Cougars was evident as Elkhorn City controlled the boards early.

The final three quarters, Allen Central held their own and actually outscored the Lady Cougars 22-14 in the fourth period.

Wiley was the Lady Rebels' leading scorer with 20 points. Staci Moore added 12 points in hitting three, three-pointers. Moore had been in a scoring slump of late but seems to have found her shot again.

Allen Central trailed by 21 points at the end of the first half as the two teams played even basketball in the period. But the first quarter blitz by Elkhorn City was just too much for the Lady Rebels to overcome.

Allen Central did manage to cut the margin to 15 points in the fourth quarter on an 8-0 run. Wiley had a rebound basket, Angela Bailey hit a jumper, Wiley scored another lay up before Moore's lay up completed the spurt.

Veronica McKinney and Wiley were the top rebounders for Allen Central with five each. Wiley also had three assists. Bailey came up with three steals.

The absence of any scoring from Jenny Yates added to the Lady Rebels' woes. Yates usually plays well against and at Elkhorn City.

Amber Francisco scored 10 points as did Glenda Little. Elkhorn's big center, 6' 1" Samantha Cook tossed in eight points. Miranda Cure netted seven.

Allen Central (6-5) will travel to Belfry Monday night to face another top ranked team in the Lady Pirates.

In 1952, Bill Mosenko of the hockey team, the Chicago Black Hawks, scored an amazing three goals in just 21 seconds.

Wins by forfeit over W' Wright...

McDowell Lady Daredevils Post 58-40 Class "A" Win Over Feds Creek

Coach Jimmy Hopkins has a 3-3 record since taking over the Lady Daredevils of McDowell basketball team. In fact, Hopkins has his team in the semifinals of the Kentucky State Class "A" regionals (Thursday night) at Elkhorn City. The Lady Daredevils posted a 58-40 win over the Lady Vikings of Feds Creek behind Michelle Hall's 15 points and a balanced attack.

McDowell won the first game of the tournament over county rival Wheelwright by way of a forfeit because of a misunderstanding of the schedule.

McDowell, who never did trail in the game, improved their record to 4-7 on the season with the win.

The Lady Daredevils jumped out early in the game, racing to a 19-10 first quarter lead and went to the lockerroom at the half with a 33-21 advantage.

Feds Creek stayed as close as one point in the first quarter but saw a run by the Lady Devils open up a seven-point lead of 15-8. Hall hit a lay up and Shelby Howell grabbed an errant shot for the Lady Devils and stuck it back in. Keri Newsome nailed a 10-foot jumper for the seven-point advantage. After Trory Hurley's rebound basket made it 15-10, baskets by Debbie Fannin and Kristy Mullins gave McDowell a 19-10 first quarter lead.

Cold free throw shooting haunted the Lady Vikings in the second period as they had a chance to draw closer to McDowell. The Lady Vikings missed on eight attempts in the period with several being bonus shots.

McDowell built a 25-15 second quarter lead but Feds Creek came back and cut the lead down to six on a rebound basket by Hurley to make it 27-21. McDowell scored the final six points of the period on two layups by Howell and a easy basket by Newsome to take their 33-21 halftime lead.

McDowell extended their lead in the third quarter to 20 points, 43-23. Feds Creek ran off seven unanswered points to cut the margin back to 13 before baskets by Mullins and Hall made it 47-30.

McDowell scored the first six points of the fourth quarter to take their biggest lead at 53-30. Hall scored the first five points in the period on a free throw and two layups. She also missed two other charity tosses.

Feds Creek could get no closer than the final margin of 18 points.

Kristy Mullins and Newsome both finished with 10 points each. Howell tossed in nine points. Debbie Fannin and Nikki Mullins each had four points.

McDowell was four of 12 from the free throw line with Feds Creek hitting four of 13.

Jessica Blair led Feds Creek with 13 points. Monica Fuller added 11 points and Hurley finished with 10.

Hopes were that the McDowell and Wheelwright game could have been played as part of a doubleheader that was scheduled for Tuesday night when the two teams were to meet in a conference game at McDowell. The winner of the game would be the winner of the tournament game also. However, rules did not allow for the change and the forfeit stood.

A win for McDowell over Elkhorn City would put them into the finals of the tournament against either Pikeville or Johns Creek. The winner of the regional tournament will advance on to sectional play at Cumberland next week.
