Superintendent says system in sound financial shape :

Board enacts freeze over Hager's protest

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County School Board members enacted a hiring freeze last Friday night despite objections by superintendent Ron Hager who said that reports that the district will be in a deficit are false.

Hager added at Friday's meeting that the auditing firm of Helton, Linton and Cranfill was hired illegally to perform the school district audit.

When contacted Monday about his remarks concerning Cranfill, Hager declined to comment further on the issue and said the matter would be brought up at the February 11 board meeting.

Board members voted 3-2 at Friday's special meeting to freeze all hiring within the school system, citing a projected $400,000 budget shortfall in state funds and reports that the district is in dire financial condition.

Board member Eddie Billips also said he was informed of a debt to the federal government of over $400,000 stemming from the 1984 flood.

Hager quickly responded that the auditor knew about the debt and that the board had "saved" that amount of money out of last year's budget to repay the government.

Hager said Monday that he had been writing letters to the government since "1988 or 1989" trying to get the debt forgiven. Hager said his efforts have been useless and the debt is "expected" to be repaid this year without putting any strain on the district's finances.

"I expect to leave this school district with a (positive) balance as I have every year," Hager said Monday.

Superintendent Ron Hager told the board Friday that he felt the move to freeze hiring was an obvious attempt to "usurp" his authority to hire personnel.

"I feel this is in direct violation of state statutes and I'd say the courts will decide it," Hager said.

"We'll let the courts decide it," said board chairman Ray "Shag" Campbell.

Permit sought for mobile incinerator :

Soil treatment plan filed for Right Beaver

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A North Carolina Company has a permit application pending with the state Division of Air Quality to locate a soil remediation incinerator at Warco in Floyd County.

EnviroSpec Inc. of Matthews, North Carolina filed a permit application with the state in July 1991 to locate a soil incinerator on 10 acres at Warco between Maytown and Martin.

EnviroSpec president Richard Crosby said Tuesday that his company was seeking a permit in order to be able to do business statewide in Kentucky.

"We have designed and patented a mobile, thermal stripping system that we can mobilize and take to a site and remediate contaminated soil and put it back in the ground, rather than hauling the soil to a landfill," Crosby said. "Actually we do not have a site there; we're preparing to secure a permit to work throughout the state of Kentucky."

Crosby said he was not aware of any potential clients in Warco and called it a "starting point" for a mobile treatment plant in order for the company to work throughout the state. Crosby said the company's registered engineer, Ray Cathey, was in charge of the permit process and he did not know why Warco was listed as the site.

Roger Cook, a supervisor in the combustion section of the permit review branch of the Division of Air Quality, said Tuesday that the department was expecting additional information from the company this week to complete the application.

The company was notified in August and October last year by the state that additional information was needed to complete the application.

Cook said he was notified by phone on January 23 that the company was

Floyd man dies after altercation in Knott County

A Floyd County man was fatally stabbed Saturday after an altercation at a Knott County shopping center.

Samuel Conn, 25, of Hunter died on the way to Hazard Appalachian Regional Hospital after he had been stabbed several times with a knife, according to Kentucky State Police.

James A. Pratt, 21, of Pine Top, was charged with murder and booked at the Knott County Jail. Conn and Pratt were apparently arguing in the parking lot of Holly Hills Shopping Center in Mallie, police said. Conn apparently hit Pratt with a beer bottle and Conn was then stabbed several times at 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

Conn is survived by his wife, Gloria Conn and two sons, Jarred McKay Conn and Andrew Blake Conn of Topmost.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday (today) at 1 p.m. at the Hall Funeral Home in Martin.

Special meeting set

A special meeting of the Wheelwright City Council has been called for Wednesday, February 5 at 7 p.m. at city hall.

The items to be discussed at the meeting were not disclosed.

Four-car pile up injures two

A four-vehicle crash Friday afternoon at the mouth of Cow Creek sent two to the hospital with serious injuries. A car driven by Ricky Stewart collided with a truck driven by Ed Collins. Betty Gayheart and passenger David Woods were caught in the middle and struck from behind by a truck driven by Janie Gobie. Gayheart and Stewart were taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Closure is local issue, official says :

Deadline is extended on airport compliance order

by Scott Perry
Times Editor

The future of Combs Airport is in local hands, a state official said Tuesday, but Kentucky's Office of Aeronautics will keep a watchful eye on the facility's operation and its compliance with aviation regulations.

Non-compliance with state safety requirements has been one issue in the ongoing debate over the fate of the jointly-owned Paintsville-Prestonsburg airstrip and that non-compliance continues to concern state aeronautics officials.

The local facility was ordered to correct by January 30 a list of safety deficiencies found in an August inspection at the airport or face revocation of the airport's landing area designation. Bob Bodner, director of the state Transportation Cabinet's Office of Aeronautics, said Tuesday that the deadline for correcting those deficiencies had been extended to April 30.

Bodner said the local airport board had taken action on a number of the safety problems detailed in the August inspection, but one issue remained a serious concern.

"The major item is the location of a house in the landing threshold," Bodner said Tuesday. "We don't know how to handle that (problem)."

Bodner said it would be left up to the local Paintsville-Prestonsburg airport board to propose corrective measures, which he suggested could include closure of one end of the runway or shortening of the landing strip to "relocate the landing threshold."

"The local airport board must make the choice (by April 30)," Bodner added, "then we'll approve or disapprove their plan."

Bodner said his office is not involved in the continuing debate over whether the airport should continue to operate or be closed to accommodate an industrial site.

"Closing is a local issue," he said. The Office of Aeronautics will, however, oversee compliance with regulations and could, he added, "lift their landing area designation" if regulations aren't met. Without a landing area designation, takeoffs and landings are illegal.

The debate over Combs Field's future arose last year when the mayors of Paintsville and Prestonsburg indicated they would like to transform the airport site into a site for industrial development. Opposition to that plan has been led by a Combs Field pilot's association.

Patton comes home

Wayland council looking for help :

Clean-up plans on hold

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

The Wayland City Council addressed many of the city's short-term problems Monday evening, but long-range plans for bridge repair and creek clean-up continue to be hampered by the city's apparent bleak financial outlook.

Mayor Hobert Webb told the council that Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo had assured him that the Wayland Bottom road would be repaired as soon as weather permitted, but no new solutions were in sight regarding creek clean-up for Wayland.

"We need to clean those creeks, but no one realizes the cost involved in the work," Webb said.

The Big Sandy Area Development District has been approached for possible grant funding, Webb said, but apparently nothing concrete has materialized thus far.

Webb expressed some hope for Wayland, though, reporting Lieutenant Governor Paul Patton's Friday evening claim at the Jenny Wiley Convention Center that Governor Brereton Jones did hope to return possibly 50 percent of coal severance tax monies to Eastern Kentucky.

In a separate matter, city clerk Carol Williams said that for those needing to pick up their yearly $10 parking sticker the city clerk's office will be open between the hours of 8

Chief deputy recovering after suffering heart attack

Floyd County chief deputy Linzie Hunt was in stable condition Tuesday after suffering an apparent heart attack at his home Monday afternoon.

Hunt, 52, became ill at approximately 2:30 p.m. Monday while getting ready to come on duty, said office manager Chuck Hall. Hunt was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center where he was admitted in critical condition, Hall said. His condition had been upgraded to stable Tuesday afternoon.

"He is a very dedicated chief deputy that works too many hours," Hall said Tuesday. "We've become very close in the two years we've worked together and I wish him a speedy recovery. He's needed very much. He's been working 12-15 hours a day."

City police showcase patches

A collection of official Kentucky police uniform patches is now on display on the second floor of the Prestonsburg municipal building. Assistant Police Chief Roy Roberts has invited the public to come by and see the collection and the showcase which was built by the Public Works Department with materials donated by FS Vanhose and Company, Inc. Anyone with police patches who would like to have them displayed may contact Roberts at 886-1010. Sergeant Gerald Clark (left) and detective sergeant Jeff Stumbo (right) are seen with the showcase. Arson suspected at Turkey Creek

by Janice Shepherd
Staff Writer

Arson is suspected in a mobile home fire on Turkey Creek Sunday that Maytown firefighters kept confined to a small area.

"We got lucky on this one," said Darrell Bradley with the Maytown Volunteer Fire Department. The fire was reported by a neighbor around 1:30 p.m. Sunday and firefighters quickly contained the fire to the living room area of the home owned by Leitha Salisbury. Firefighters would not discuss how the blaze was started. No one was at home at the time of the incident.

Maytown firefighters were assisted by the Garrett Fire Department.

The fire is being investigated by Kentucky State Police arson investigator Barry McKenzie.

A mobile home on Branham's Creek Sunday was razed in a separate blaze Sunday. Because a trailer burns in about 14 minutes, said Greg Frasure, assistant fire chief with the Mud Creek Volunteer Fire Department, "there was no way we could have saved it."

The home, owned by Donnie Hall, was totally involved by the time the fire department arrived around 2:25 a.m. Sunday. Therefore, said Ralph Short, Mud Creek fire chief, firefighters "took it as defensive instead of offensive."

"We put our attack toward houses close by," said Short. Quick action by the fire department saved homes situated near the blazing house.

The cause of the blaze is unknown, but Hall's mother, who lives next door, told firefighters she heard an explosion. Because the mobile home was heated by gas, firefighters assume a gas explosion started the fire.

A blaze at a home on Abner Mountain at Melvin brought the Southeast Floyd County Volunteer Fire Department out Wednesday to the scene of yet another fire in that area. The area has been plagued by fires within the last few weeks, according to Daniel Gullett, captain of the fire department.

The fire began in the rear bedroom of the home, which was rented by Bobby Gene Newsome. The cause of the fire is not known, Gullett said, because there was "too much intensive burn to get a clear cut cause." The wooden, single-story home, owned by Dora Johnson, and its contents were a total loss, Gullett said.

Firefighters were able, though, to save a trailer and a wooden house, located on each side of the home, that were threatened by the blaze. Ten Southeast Floyd County firefighters and five Wheelwright firefighters battled the fire, staying on the scene approximately two hours.

Auxier firefighters received a scare Thursday when they received reports of a burning odor at Auxier Elementary School. The school was evacuated until firefighters determined the odor was caused by a melted ballast in a light fixture in the boy's bathroom, said Howard Ferguson, fire chief. Six firefighters responded to the scene.

Students receive Dean's Award

Four Floyd County residents are among 197 students at Eastern Kentucky University to receive the Dean's Award for fall semester study.

Receiving the award were Jamie Lynn Click, Sharon A. Harris, Amy Allen Ratliff and Arnold Brent Turner.

Housing meet set for Thursday

A special meeting of the Floyd County Housing Authority has been called for Thursday, February 2 at 6 p.m. at the housing office in Green Acres.

Items to be discussed are an application for Section 8 housing and the purchase of a computer.

The meeting is open to the public.

Hutchinson, Zeller to wed

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Hutchinson announce the marriage of their daughter, Lisa Ann, to Robert L. Zeller, on Saturday, February 8, at 2 p.m. at the St. Martha's Catholic Church in Prestonsburg. A reception will follow.

Clarification:

Councilman Billy Ray Collins has asked that a quote attributed to him in last Friday's edition of the Times be clarified.

Collins was quoted saying that councilman Charles Hale had shown Mayor Ann Latta a copy of a letter from the Attorney General's office concerning the eligibility of a councilman to serve and hold a city job.

Collins intended to say that Hale made Mayor Latta aware of the letter in question, not that he had shown the letter to the mayor.

"putting together" the additional information needed to complete the permit.

When contacted a second time Tuesday, Crosby said he thought the project had been cancelled.

"I think what happened was there may have been a chance to do some work and it ended up being nothing," Crosby said. "That's why he had submitted an application for that particular location. What we're trying to do is secure a statewide permit."

When told Cook was contacted by his company in January, Crosby said he needed to discuss the project with his engineer.

Cook said if all the additional information is received from Enviro-Spec this week, a permit could be issued within 60 days. He added that a public hearing on the issue is not required under state regulations.

The facility would be used to incinerate soil contaminated by pollutants, primarily petroleum, Crosby said. The company operates seven such incinerators in seven states, he added.

Pike County residents, however, are voicing strong opposition to two similar soil incinerators slated for their county.

Freeze

made the motion to freeze all hiring, said the move was nothing more than an attempt to look at the system's finances and see what action needed to be taken to overcome the projected shortfall.

"This is not an attempt to abolish any positions," Billips told Hager. "It's a hiring freeze and does not usurp your authority to hire."

Hager said Monday if the hiring freeze was an attempt to prevent him from employing personnel for the 1992-93 school year, the board would have to have a new superintendent hired in April or early May to meet statutory requirements for hiring personnel.

Hager's contract expires June 30. The two "no" votes for the hiring freeze at Friday's meeting came from board members James Duff and Dr.

Mary Hall.

Duff questioned the legality of the freeze and Hall took offense that the state had been asked for advice on the issue.

Billips told the board he had researched the issue with the state's Office of Education Accountability investigators, Phil Austin and Steve Yater, to make sure the board did not exceed its authority. That announcement brought criticism from board member Dr. Mary Hall.

"What's the purpose of this motion?" Hall asked. "OEA does not run this board. You shouldn't be getting your advice from Phil Austin and Steve whatever," Hall told Billips. "We run this board."

At that point, chairman Campbell called for a vote on the motion. Hall asked Billips to read the motion for a third time, but Campbell called for the vote.

It passed 3-2 with Billips, Campbell and Tommy Boyd voting in favor of the freeze.

a.m. to 10 a.m. on Wednesdays. After March 1, the cost will be $15. Williams advised that stickers can be purchased by mail, through city hall or from City Police Chief Danny F. Francis.

Williams also told council and city residents that she had been in contact both in person and by mail with Kentucky Power Company regarding the city's faulty street lights, but was getting little response from Kentucky Power to the problem. Williams said that she would send a certified letter to the power company. Mayor Webb and council told Williams to deduct from the city's power bill the cost of the 11 faulty or burned-out lights.

In other business, council: -supported the use of Douglas A. Harvey as a part-time police officer, but decided to check with County Attorney Jim Hammond on the city's liabilities for the move.

-discussed the replacement of the 1983 police cruiser currently in serious need of repair.

-heard the claim of a city resident who reported alleged trespass and vandalism in a vacant house near her home. Police Chief Francis said he would continue to patrol the area. Webb said he would check with Judge John M. Stumbo about the city's options concerning the vacant house.

Mayor Webb and all council members were present for Monday's meeting.

Opry workshop held Thursday

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

Area students honed their musical skills on January 30 by performing themselves, then seeing their work done by others during a clinical workshop underwritten by the Kentucky Opry.

The Eastern Kentucky University Show Choir, led by ECU instructor Rob Lawrence, worked with 351 regional high school students and regional music educators from 23 schools at the Jenny Wiley Convention Center last Thursday. The choir taught area students and teachers the musical "Made in the U.S.A." then, following the workshop, performed it in formal attire for everyone in attendance.

Kay Hall, Paintsville High's music instructor and chairman of a choral directors group for this region, and Billie Jean Osborne, Kentucky Opry director, brought the show choir into Eastern Kentucky for the workshop.

Osborne said the day was a successful experience for students and educators, adding that ECU's Show Choir is the first of many special clinics which will be scheduled by the Kentucky Opry.

Big Sandy ADD renews commitment

By Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

The Big Sandy Area Development District (ADD) held its annual meeting on Friday, January 31 at the Jenny Wiley State Park Convention Center to define and clarify participating counties' goals and objectives concerning area development.

Lieutenant Governor Paul Patton; legislator Hubert Collins, district Representative for Martin and Johnson counties; and Commissioner of Local Government Bruce Ferguson attended to address developmental issues of Eastern Kentucky, and also to expound on the economic outlook for Kentucky as a whole.

County representatives from Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Magoffin, and Pike counties divided into work groups early in the meeting to reassess their goals regarding development for 1992.

Human services concerns, improved water and waste water systems, industrialization pertaining to economic development and jobs, tourism opportunities, recreational facilities, transportation issues, and housing were among the major priorities outlined by the county panels for ADD assistance.

Lt. Governor and Economic Development Secretary Paul Patton spoke during the dinner session about the governor's hopes and plans for economic development for Eastern Kentucky and the state.

Patton said that possibly within the last two years of Governor Jones' term that approximately 50 percent of the coal severance tax monies should be returned to Eastern Kentucky.

"It will take two years to plan and the last two years to act and reform (implement)," Patton added.

Patton also told the group about a program which is under development by the governor for our region.

Two offices may be established in Eastern Kentucky that will house part-time industrial development agents. The agents would help "small towns not in the industrialization race" learn how to become a viable participant among other Eastern Kentucky cities who can attract industrialization to their area, Patton explained.

The governor has pledged to attract manufacturing to Kentucky by way of a National electronic mail processing industry and also through a data processing corporation, Patton said.

"We are also working on a tool to help existing industry expand," Patton said, adding that, "The present has never been more bleak or the future more bright."

Pike church opposes track

A Pikeville church group is opposing an attempt to locate a harness racing track in their city.

Pikeville United Methodist Church's administrative board passed a resolution recently that condemns the city's attempts to sway the state Harness Racing Commission to name Pikeville as the site for the track. The church based its resolution on the denomination's Book of Discipline. Gambling is a "menace to society" and "deadly to the best interests of moral, social, economic and spiritual life," according to the book.

Harness racing commissioners are scheduled to return to Pikeville this week to look at possible sites.

Commissioners were in Floyd County Thursday to look at three sites and chairman Wayne Schumate and vice chairman Tom O'Hearn said Floyd County was their personal favorite.

Prestonsburg businessman Clyde Woods formed the Eastern Kentucky Racing Corporation and has a tentative agreement to purchase all the stock of Louisville Downs Inc.

The commission will decide the location of the track at their February 14 meeting at the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington.

Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

West Virginia television station WCHS demonstrated the kind of judgment Sunday that keeps the Charleston ABC affiliate on the low end of the regional TV totem pole when it pre-empted the UK-LSU basketball game to air WVU versus Rutgers.

Talk about gnashing of teeth, the crowd we were with Sunday was all prepared to stage a commando raid on the station before opting for plan B, which involved a continuous stream of, er, uncomplimentary phone calls to the station's Charleston office to protest the Eastern Kentucky black-out.

The way we see it, WCHS has two things to be thankful for:

- The game wasn't close.
- Cawood.

Otherwise, to borrow a line from Jimmy Durante, there could have been a "revolting development."

The presidential debate last week among Democratic contenders was uncharacteristically refreshing.

Issues were actually discussed in the no-holds-barred format moderated by PBS' MacNeil-Lehrer tandem.

What we found most interesting in the debate was the fact that the five candidates went at each other as often as they took shots at their public enemy number one—George Bush. Each offered specifics on why they should be chosen to challenge Bush next November and each offered details on why they were the best choice to run the country.

From what we've seen of Bush so far, any of the five could do a better job.

Two law enforcement officers in Powell County are dead, a deputy in LaRue County is wounded. Thanks to an empty gun, Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson is still alive and kicking. That's scary.

When people don't think twice about drawing down on a peace officer, we need to think more than once about what's going on here.

Bad luck, they say, comes in threes. In two out of three incidents over the past several days, law officers have beaten those odds.

But one tragedy is enough.

At least two of three assailants involved in those three incidents during the past weeks were paroled criminals.

Does that give you an idea of where we need to begin asking our questions?

Meanwhile, back at the ranch...

Things have livened up at the old homestead with the arrival last week of Betty and Veronica, a pair of Siamese kittens who, at 10-weeks-old, are already proving to be a match for our four-year-old son in the category of orneriness.

Not that he needed any help.

Anyhow, we now have three of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse under our roof which, the last time we checked, was still intact.

Make no mistake about it, though, the end is near.

Not for winter.

The groundhog saw his shadow Saturday and that means six more weeks of it.

If this is winter, let it be.

Our son, who'll be five in May, has yet to see enough snow to build a snowman and we haven't been afforded our due parental right in that time to exaggerate about how we used to walk ten miles, barefoot, to school in ten feet of snow with a sack of rocks over our shoulder.

It just ain't fair.

Knock on wood.

Heard an interesting explanation recently for the recession.

It seems that the reason people aren't buying stuff these days is because people have all the stuff they need.

Hah!

There are two things people can never get enough of: peanuts in the shell and stuff.

At our house we employ a very basic economic principle...as long as there is a flat surface, stuff must be purchased to sit on top of it.

If more manufacturers made flat-surfaced goods, the recession would be over in no time.

We gay-ron-tee.

Pass the peanuts.

Help us save our environment (say no to toxic waste)!

Pike County has not been a quiet place lately; numerous meetings have been held with hundreds of Pike countians, lawyers, doctors and state officials debating on toxic waste plants coming into Pike County.

These plants are to contain benzene, ethyl benzene, toluene, xylene, and ethylene dichloride.

This is an experimental things and it's not an issue to be taken lightly. Different doctors have stated certain types of diseases this sort of plant could cause. The lead in the dirt and air could cause lead poisoning in the blood stream, which could lead to death. The benzenes in the dirt and air could cause retardation, brain damage, lung, heart, liver and nerve disease. Also, for pregnant women, just being around the dirt or breathing the contaminated air could cause these same problems or deformities to the unborn child.

Now, I ask you: Are we willing to become Guinea pigs for these people to make money?

This soil treatment plant will affect more than just Pikeville; It will affect surrounding counties in Kentucky and possibly other states, depending on the wind. The smoke-like substance from the plants will blow as far as the wind will take it. That's why we need everyone in Pike County and surrounding counties who will be affected by these two toxic waste plants to pull together and not allow this to happen.

Editor:

We hear much about "safe-sex," but little about sexual continence and from those who practice it. So, I decided to extol some of its benefits and I encourage others to do the same.

I am a mother of five, divorced and I am celibate. Most of my closest friends are single and celibate and we are motivated to abstain from sexual activity for a number of reasons.

We never have to worry if a so-called lover is pretending affection and using us for mere sensual pleasure. And, romantic love is given the ultimate test. We can hold someone and say, "I love you so much that I won't." We can be told, "I still want you as a companion and a friend."

Although sexual intercourse within marriage can be beautiful and sacred, outside of marriage it is wrong. The laws of God clearly forbid all sins against chastity—such as adultery, fornication, homosexuality and masturbations, or the deliberate arousal of sexual pleasure in one's own body. The 9th commandment obliges us to control our sexual thoughts and desires. I believe that as we attain control of our imaginings and feelings, our energies rise. Love becomes purer, more selfless and more intense.

Sexual purity is a virtue that is available to anyone who desires it, even those whose sins are scarlet.

Wiping the slate clean

by Tim Webb,
KPA News Bureau

Four days after Gov. Brereton Jones told a joint session of the General Assembly that he wanted to purge the state's eight university boards, the House of Representatives passed just such a bill.

House Bill 149, sponsored by Rep. Ernesto Scorsone, D-Lexington, calls for the termination of all current state university board members.

New board members, according to the bill passed Friday by representatives, would go through a screening process conducted by a panel of nine people, selected from each of the state's supreme court districts, along with a student and a faculty member. The governor would then pick from the panel's recommendations. Scorsone stressed the likelihood of some current board members being reinstated.

Scorsone said the plan was needed because of the "turmoil and problems" in various higher education systems.

The bill, he said, is not designed to get back at former Governor Wallace Wilkinson, who appointed himself to the University of Kentucky board before leaving office in December.

"It was...a vivid reminder, to the fact that we really do not have a process to get an appointment," Scorsone said. "What we have is appointment by whim."

Several House members said they supported the concept of the bill, but questioned some of its features.

Rep. Louie Mack, D-Lexington, led most of the bill's opposition, saying the bill was like "punishing the entire class" because of "one bad child." His biggest questions with the bill were the dismembering of all board members at once and out-of-state appointments. The House voted almost 3-1 to prevent out-of-state alumni from sitting on a university board.

The House bill must now get Senate approval before it becomes law.

Gov. Jones, who proposed the bill in his State of the Commonwealth address Monday night, seemed to have gained much legislative support for his proposals.

Jones said his administration would take steps to reduce the budget by cutting the size of government.

But, under another program, the governor said productive state workers will be eligible to receive bonuses. Jones said the bonuses would come from money left over in state agencies at the end of the fiscal year.

Other proposals offered by Jones included appointing a task force for health care, returning half of the coal severance tax to coal counties, placing economic development offices in Eastern and Western Kentucky, assigning experts to market Kentucky coal worldwide, adding $100 million to state parks, developing an animal research center at Pin Oak farm in Woodford County, supporting a bottle bill, and cutting campaign contribution limits for governor and lieutenant governor from $4,000 to $100.

In an address to a joint session of the House and Senate Friday morning, Commissioner of Education Thomas C. Boysen said that Kentucky is staying on course in improving education. Boysen added that Kentucky is setting an example nationwide in school reform.

The Senate last week passed a bill requiring earthquake emergency procedures in every public or private school and a bill substituting the term "hard of hearing" for "hearing impaired" in state parlance.

Anthony Little
Editorial: The Conservation Craze

In 1989, several Wheelwright High School seniors and teachers began a program to promote environmental conservation. This program, which was founded on the national holiday, Earth Day, consisted mainly many different contests for the students. We had the hectic scavenger hunt, the widely entered essay contest, the poster contest, and the ever popular dash to see how many cans could be picked up in a week. The prizes for each of these were small, ranging from a small cash sum to twenty bonus points in a class. However, this fact just didn't seem to matter. Almost everyone was just eager to compete. Also the little breaks given in class due to special programs were also appreciated.

The purpose of these events was to increase awareness of certain environmental hazards. The themes of the events could be from how to recycle certain forms of trash to a comparison of the biodegradable attributes of plastic to paper. Most of the awards were paid for by the can collection contest. The group that collected the most cans received a certain percentage of the total profit of all the cans collected. The rest of the money went to paying for the other prizes.

In the following years the entire concept seemed to turn into a wildfire. The first efforts were only participated in by a few of the classes. After that, the entire school joined in the act in one way or another.

Now it has become so important an event that one of the classes has adopted the highway running in front of our school. The same group has established a loosely organized campus cleanup program. Several performances from various classes have shown students acting out skits with an environmental theme. We now even have a stylized recycling can in the bottom hallway of the middle and science buildings for the "proper" disposal of pop cans.

What amazes me is the ferocity in which the concept has caught on here. Nearly everyone has helped with the numerous projects, or at least they have an opinion about what should be done to clean up the campus. Of more importance is the fact that, in recent years, more students seem to be putting their trash in the cans that are provided. It almost seems as if the entire school had a secret desire to clean-up their community. All these people needed was a small boost such as one given in 1989.

This tells me something about the people around here. In some places our communities have a less than desirable reputation. The focus of these negative notions is that most people around here do not care about what's going on. I believe that the community doesn't need feelings but a focus. When we "set our minds" on something we follow it through to the end. This attribute is most often summoned up in a single word: stubbornness! That's the best quality of our school and our community. If you want proof of this you only have to look outside at the people diligently picking up beside the road.

We still have some problems here in Wheelwright. The road is cluttered almost as fast as the students can clean it. A couple of times the students picking up the trash have been put in danger by passing cars. Sometimes, we still use paper plates and plastic forks/spoons in the lunchroom instead of the reusable plates and silverware. Some students still throw down their trash anywhere that is convenient. Despite all these flaws the main point is that the majority of students here at Wheelwright are trying to make it a better place. In this most important sense, they have already succeeded.

Opinions expressed in this column are the views of the writer and not necessary those of the Times.

Legislative Update

Kentucky General Assembly Picking up some steam

Removing political favoritism from state government seems to be the agenda for the 1992 General Assembly.

The House of Representatives passed three related bills Monday, Jan. 27, that would cut ties between campaign contributions and state contracts. House Bill 157 passed 97-1, calling for the creation of committees that would review proposals for non-bid contracts from architects and engineers.

"If this bill passes, the selection process will not include how much money you gave to the last candidate for governor," the bill's sponsor Marshall Long, D-Shelbyville, said.

The two related bills that also passed, House Bill 147 and House Bill 156, would allow Capital Projects and Bond Oversight Committees to issue orders of testimony from people involved in state contract or bond issues and require state lease holders to disclose their names as lease holders before taking a state job.

Kentucky teenagers would be allowed to drive before they are 16, under another bill passed by the House last week. House Bill 31, which passed 56-25, would allow teenagers to get their instructional permit three months before their 16th birthday.

Amid fears of higher insurance rates and traffic accidents, the bill received some harsh criticism on the House floor.

"You can say what you want to... This bill will in fact raise the rates of insurance," Porter Hatcher Jr., D-Louisville, said.

In a close margin, House Bill 25 passed by three votes, Wednesday, requiring farmers to comply with the state plumbing code.

The bill's sponsor Jim Callahan, D-Southgate, said the bill was intended to protect public water systems from contamination by farm waste and chemicals. The bill would only apply to farmhouses and plumbing installed after the bill becomes law.

Former coal buyers sentenced

A former coal buyer for Arch Coal Sales Company was sentenced in Federal District Court in Pikeville Monday for conspiring to defraud the Bank Josephine of over $1 million.

John Kent Clark was sentenced by Judge Joseph Hood to serve 33 months in prison followed by three years of supervised release. Clark was also ordered to pay $23,200 in restitution to the Bank Josephine.

Clark was indicted along with William Eric Charles, president of W.E.C. Coal Company, for sending false and forged coal sales documents to the bank which inflated the amounts due W.E.C. from Arch Coal Sales. The inflated sales amounts caused the bank to loan additional money to W.E.C.

Charles was sentenced in November 1991 to 37 months in prison and ordered to pay the bank $912,000.

Novelist reads at Pikeville College

Novelist Denise Giardina, author of Good King Harry and Storming Heaven, will read from her latest novel, The Unquiet Earth, on Thursday, February 13, at Pikeville College.

Giardina, who lives in Whitesburg, writes in The Unquiet Earth about some of the modern descendants of characters in Storming Heaven. The earlier book told the story of the coming of the coal companies to Kentucky and West Virginia at the turn of the century and of the mine wars of the 1920s. The Unquiet Earth is scheduled for publication in April.

The public is invited to the reading, which will begin at 11 a.m. in Chrisman Auditorium in the Armington Science-Learning Center on campus. Parking is available in the lower parking lot, with shuttle service every five minutes to Armington.

Mentality of Exploitation, Part IV:

Pilgrims discover America is no land of milk and honey

In Of Plymouth Plantation, William Bradford describes the Pilgrims' flight from Holland in these terms:

"So they left that goodly and pleasant city which had been their resting place near twelve years; but they knew they were pilgrims, and looked not much on those things, but lifted up their eyes to heaven, their dearest country, and quieted their spirits."

Because he is writing for posterity and wants to ennoble the colony's founders, Bradford ignores the materialistic motive behind the settlement and stresses instead the spiritual one. Like Lot and his family fleeing the wickedness of Sodom, the Pilgrims "looked not much" on Leyden, but kept their eyes fixed on their heavenly destination. It is this image of the Pilgrim—the image of the high-minded heaven-seeker—which has become enshrined in the American cultural pantheon.

This emphasis on the spiritual is also seen in Bradford's description of the Pilgrims' first landfall on Cape Cod peninsula:

"Being thus arrived in a good harbor, and brought safe to land, they fell upon their knees and blessed the God of Heaven who had brought them over the vast and furious ocean, and delivered them from all the perils and miseries thereof, again to set their feet on the firm and stable earth, their proper element."

According to this version of the story, the country that confronted them that day was by no means a land of milk and honey. On the contrary, it was "a hideous and desolate wilderness, full of wild beasts and wild men."

Because American historians have chosen to make it so, Of Plymouth Plantation is the book on which our modern conception of the Pilgrim is based. Only recently did I learn that another version of the Pilgrim story—an unofficial version, so to speak—has also survived. I am referring to Mourt's Relation, a book originally published in London in 1622. A facsimile edition of this work, with introduction and notes by Henry Martyn Dexter, was published in Boston in 1865. Mourt's Relation is a collection of five narratives describing events that transpired during the first year of the Plymouth Colony, and although Bradford's name isn't on the title page, he is unquestionably the author of the first and longest narrative. "Mourt" was the pseudonym of George Morton, chief agent of the Pilgrims in London, who himself emigrated to Plymouth in 1623.

Written for an upperclass English audience, Mourt's Relation differs from Of Plymouth Plantation like day differs from night. The latter book is somber, dignified, and overly abstract; the former is cheerful, animated, and chock-full of concrete details. This difference arises from a difference in intentions. The purpose of Of Plymouth Plantation was to glorify the founders of Plymouth in the eyes of posterity. The purpose of Mourt's Relation, however, was to lure prospective settlers to Plymouth and persuade wealthy Englishmen to invest in the enterprise.

Both books describe the landfall at Cape Cod, subsequent explorations of the Cape Cod peninsula, and the landfall at Plymouth Beach. But what a difference in treatment! In Of Plymouth Plantation Bradford omits mentioning the feelings of the Pilgrims when they got their first glimpse of America. In Mourt's Relation, however, the sighting is described in these terms:

"The appearance of it much comforted us, especially seeing so goodly a Land, and wooded to the brink of the Sea."

Scattered throughout Mourt's Relation are "catalogs of riches" designed to persuade cautious investors that the Plymouth experiment could reap enormous profits. In this book, when the Pilgrims look at Cape Cod, they see no "hideous wilderness." On the contrary, they see a land "compassed about to the very Sea with Okes, Pines, Juniper, Sassafras, and other sweet wood." Moreover, says Bradford, "Every day we saw whales playing hard by us, which in that place, if we had instruments and a means to take them, we might have made a very rich return."

Bradford's observation about the value of Cape Cod's whales was prophetic, and by the 1820s whaling had become New England's most lucrative industry. St. Jean de Crevecoeur, writing in 1782, noted that Nantucket, the seat of the New England whale fishery, possessed "above 200 sail of vessels," employed more than two thousand seamen, and boasted several citizens "worth 20,000£ sterling." By Melville's time, in the 1840s, these figures had tripled. Today, of course, many of the species of whales which made Nantucket rich have been hunted to the brink of extinction.

It was inevitable that the American whaling industry would be the first industry to try to satisfy the country's enormous appetite for energy. That the market for sperm oil was soon captured by coal oil, kerosene, and other forms of energy in no way lessens the fact that whaling has immense symbolic importance for American history and modern history in general. Melville knew this, and that is why Moby Dick is the classic expression of the theme I deal with in this essay. Ahab's unrelenting war against the White Whale is a metaphor, not only for the whaling industry's war against whales, but for modern industrial man's war against Nature.

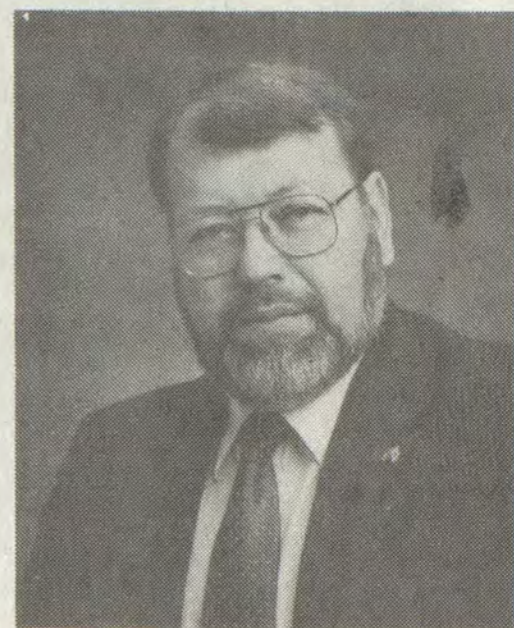

On December 16, 1620, sixteen days after their first landfall on Cape Cod peninsula, a period during which the Pilgrims explored the peninsula in a shallow, the Mayflower traversed Cape Cod Bay and anchored at Plymouth Beach. During the crossing Bradford saw two "fine Islands uninhabited, wherein are nothing but wood, Okes, Pines, Walnut, Beech, Sassafras, Vines and other trees which we know not." Several days prior to this, they had camped for one night on an island they named Clark's Island, after the Mayflower's first mate. According to Henry Martyn Dexter, the editor of the 1855 edition of Mourt's Relation, Clark's Island in 1855 encompassed 86 1/4 acres. In ancient times, says Dexter, before the coming of the whites, the island had been covered with red cedar. After the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, however, this timber had been cut down and "sold in Boston for gate-posts." In Dexter's day five or six of these trees were still standing, although they were in "a gnarled and stunted condition." The largest was six feet in circumference and twenty feet high.

Foster children find "special" families

Kentucky foster children with complicated medical needs find "special" families

For anyone looking for ordinary people doing extraordinary things, Kentucky foster parents caring for medically fragile children fit the bill.

More than 40 Kentucky children, ages five months to 17 years, with birth complications and medical disorders, serious physical disabilities or terminal illnesses are being cared for in 43 foster homes through a program of the state Department for Social Services.

Acting Social Services Commissioner Peggy Wallace said 125 children have been cared for in the medically fragile foster care program since 1985.

"The program has received national recognition and inquiries from several other states requesting information from our foster care specialists," Wallace said.

Estalene Jenkins, nurse consultant and coordinator for the program, said medically fragile children usually go to foster homes directly from a hospital, where they may have spent their first several months. The children no longer need round-the-clock hospital care, but still require continuous medical treatment and monitoring.

"We set out to demonstrate that this type of care is cost-effective," Jenkins said. "Foster parents receive $27 per day; care in an institution would cost around $150, or over $600 in a hospital."

"Also, the child's stay in a hospital is reduced. And last but not most important, these high-risk children can enjoy a family atmosphere with all the love and nurturing any child has in a typical, loving home," she said.

"We were pleased to find many marvelous people — ordinary citizens with a special dedication to caring for children who need them."

The program was started for children born with birth defects or severe medical disorders, Jenkins said. "But now we're caring for babies born addicted or affected by the mother's drug use during pregnancy, and kids who have been severely abused."

"We advocate for every child we've got with us, and use every available community resource to help each of the children develop to their fullest potential despite its medical diagnosis or handicap."

Some children attend local schools and or have in-home instruction. Federal assistance programs and health organizations are tapped for funds for the children's extra needs.

Like other foster parents, medically fragile caregivers may be couples or single adults of any age as long as they can care for the seriously ill child. They have 30-plus hours of training to qualify, and must have an additional 24 hours of training each year.

Jenkins said the state has so far been able to find parents as needed, "but we would like to have a log of parents ahead of that moment of need."

Another "plus" would be to have homes throughout the state, closer to the children's families. Natural parents are urged to visit their child and learn about their child's condition and care needs from the foster parent.

Homes for high-risk children must also be within 30 minutes of emergency treatment facilities, and less than an hour from a medical center.

"Home health agencies make it possible for these children to leave hospitals and live with families," Jenkins said. She also cited respite caregivers, physicians, social workers, health departments, university and public and private agency specialists who make the program work.

Persons desiring more information on Kentucky's medically fragile foster care program may contact Jenkins by calling (502) 564-2136.

Rapping to the rhythm

PCC student nurses hosted a pot luck luncheon and talent show where they participated in a rap song and dance routine.

Nursing students show off talents

On Thursday, January 23, 1992, students in the Associate Degree Nursing Program at Prestonsburg Community College held a joint "pot luck" luncheon and talent show. The purpose of the meeting was to assist socialization among the classes and to recognize students who received awards for the previous semester.

The nursing faculty participated in a rap song and dance describing the program and different body systems. Each class presented a skit or song with the nursing program as the theme.

Students and awards included election to Who's Who Among American Junior Colleges - Tracy Caudill and Lydia Poe; NSG 180 Academic Award - James Bevens and Cheryl Davis; NSG 185 Academic Award - Audrey Spence and Linda Williams and NSG 280 Academic Award - Lisa Fleming and Jerry

Taylor. The members of the Nursing Student Advisory Committee were also introduced to the students; those members are NSG 185 - Tracy Caudill and Keith Murray, NSG 280 - Lydia Poe and Kent Preece and NSG 285 - Estella Burchett and Kathy Osborne. The officers of the Prestonsburg Chapter of the Kentucky Association of Student Nurses were recognized: Terry Whitten, president; Heather Sturgill, vice president; Bob Barker, secretary; and Jerry Williams, treasurer.

Prestonsburg Community College offers the Associate Degree in Applied Science in Nursing and has full approval from the Kentucky Board of Nursing. The program currently admits a new class in the Fall and Spring semesters. Further information about the program will be presented at the next Pre-Admission Conference to be held February 4 or February 18.

Various symptoms point to Cystic Fibrosis diagnosis

by Barbara H. Morris

Cystic Fibrosis is a disease which affects one of every two thousand children born in the United States. It is a disease primarily of white children. Black children rarely have this problem. This information will describe the symptoms of this disease. It will explain its causes and treatment. It will also help you better understand how to cope with it.

Cystic Fibrosis affects the lungs and digestive system. As a matter of fact, it usually affects the parts of the body that produce fluids, such as tears, saliva, mucus and sweat.

Only a doctor can tell if your child has Cystic Fibrosis. However, there are symptoms you can watch for. These symptoms include frequent bouts of bronchitis or pneumonia; a persistent cough and difficulty in breathing; a huge appetite with little or no weight gain; unusually frequent, large bowel movements; a protruding abdomen, or "pot belly"; and extremely salty sweat.

Let's spend a moment discussing each of these symptoms. Difficulty in breathing and frequent bouts of bronchitis and pneumonia were possible signs of Cystic Fibrosis. When a child has this disease, the mucus in the body becomes very sticky and heavy. This heavy mucus clogs the lungs and breathing passages.

It causes a persistent cough and makes it difficult for the child to breathe. The child may make a wheezing sound when breathing. Because of the heavy mucus, infections are more likely to occur. The mucus can clog passages to the pancreas. The pancreas is an organ which helps the child absorb his food and gain weight in a normal fashion. When the passages to the pancreas are clogged with mucus, however, this organ cannot help in the proper absorption of food and the child is not able to gain weight. When food is not properly digested the child's stomach may appear swollen and he or she will have more frequent bowel movements.

A child with Cystic Fibrosis may have perspiration, or sweat, that is extremely salty. When the sweat dries, the salt collects on the skin. You may have noticed this when you kiss your child. This is often the first symptom a mother reports to a doctor.

Cystic Fibrosis is not contagious; that is to say, a child with this disease cannot give it to anyone else. Doctors have determined that Cystic Fibrosis is hereditary. This means that, if both parents have the same certain abnormal trait, or gene, in their blood, there is one chance out of four that their child will be born with Cystic Fibrosis. It is thought that approximately one person in twenty has this abnormal trait. If both parents carry traces of this disease in their blood there is one chance out of four that their child will be born with Cystic Fibrosis. If only one parent carries the trait, there is no chance of their having a child with Cystic Fibrosis.

There is no known cure for this disease. But, there are proven treatments. First, doctors have designed a simple, painless test to determine if the child does, indeed, have Cystic Fibrosis. It is called a sweat chloride test. It can be done in a hospital or laboratory and it is not necessary for the child to be away from home overnight. The test simply measures the amount of salt in the child's sweat.

You may be asked to help your child by performing a procedure called "clapping." This means that your child will have to lie flat, with the feet slightly raised, and you will clap him or her on his or her back and chest. Clapping is important because it helps loosen the mucus which is clogging the lungs and breathing passages.

It is important that Cystic Fibrosis be diagnosed as soon as possible. Salty sweat alone may not cause any serious problem. However, sticky mucus can cause problems which may threaten your child's life. Remember, though, such a condition can be treated, if it is discovered in time.

Constitutional reform advocates present recommendations

A citizens committee this week released its recommendations for updating Kentucky's 100-year old Constitution. Two Floyd countians sit on the committee: John Rosenberg with Appalachian Research and Defense Fund and Ann Latta, mayor of Prestonsburg.

The Constitutional Improvement Policy Council, which was formed by the Kentucky Center for Public Issues last year, recommended four areas of reform: gubernatorial succession and eliminating some statewide elected officers, reducing the number of elections, and campaign finance reform, economic development and merit election of judges.

The most recent call for constitutional improvement grew from a series of forums sponsored by the Kentucky Bar Association in 1989 and '90. In 1990, the Shakertown Roundtable focused on constitutional reform throughout its annual meeting. The policy council's recommendations are the outgrowth of six months of intensive research and discussion among the fifty-three civic leaders who compose the council.

"The momentum for improvement of our Constitution has intensified with Governor Jones' commitment outlined in his State of the Commonwealth Address," said Sheryl G. Snyder, chairperson of the center. "There also is strong interest in the issue among the leadership of the General Assembly," said Joseph H. Terry, co-chair of the council.

"We have an opportunity to craft from our 19th century Constitution a better framework for our government as we enter the 21st century," said Snyder.

The first recommendation is an "Executive Article" cluster amendment. This proposal would reduce the number of statewide elected offices to four: Governor, Lt. Governor, Attorney General and Auditor of Public Accounts. The amendment would also allow those four officeholders, after 1995, to succeed themselves for one additional, consecutive four-year term. It calls for candidates for Governor and Lt. Governor to run as a team for the primary and general elections, allows the governor to retain his or her powers when out of the state, and provides for any situation in which the governor is disabled and cannot discharge his or her duties.

The council also recommended that elections be held in even-numbered years only; that the proposals of the Center's Campaign Finance and Electoral Reform Policy Council be adopted and that a new section of the constitution be created to allow the General Assembly to establish limits on the amount statewide candidates can spend on their campaigns as well as the amount individuals can contribute to candidates.

"Meaningful campaign finance reform may be a prerequisite to legislative support for gubernatorial succession," said Terry, the chair of the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance. "The time has come for both campaign finance reform and constitutional reform," said Terry.

The council also called for support for economic development through an amendment which enables state government to appropriately regulate corporations, railroads, and public utilities, while repealing several outmoded sections of the constitution which may hamper business and economic development.

The council proposed a constitutional amendment to make the terms of office of district judges coterminous with terms of circuit judges, and to increase the experience requirements of district judges.

In its final recommendation, the council proposed a statutory amendment permitting merit retention of judges, allowing incumbent judges to stand for reelection on their records. "Merit election of judges is unfinished business under the Judicial Article, which the people of Kentucky adopted in 1975," said Morton J. Holbrook of Owensboro, chair of the council's subcommittee on the judiciary.

Snyder said that the constitutional and statutory recommendations have been presented to the General Assembly for consideration during the current legislative session. "If the General Assembly agrees with any of these constitutional recommendations, they will appear on the ballot in the November General Election for voter approval," he said.

Snyder added that the work of the council will continue beyond the November election. "We expect some amendments to pass in this legislative session and to be approved by the voters in November," he said. "But our antiquated constitution has shackled us for a century, and we therefore expect our efforts to change it may take several years. We hope to bring the Constitution of Kentucky into the 20th century before it is over," he said.

"Cowboy Monk" sentenced to fourteen years in prison

Karen Caldwell, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky, announced recently that Daniel Lee Monk, age 41, also known as "Cowboy Monk," of Knox County, was sentenced to 168 months (14 years) incarceration for mailing an extortionate threatening communication to witnesses who saw him kill Ernie Logan in Dewitt, in Knox County, in June of 1990.

According to Michael R. Baer, the Assistant U.S. Attorney who prosecuted the case, Monk was originally charged with murder in Knox County, but pled guilty to a lesser charge of manslaughter, for which he received a ten (10) year sentence. On June 11, 1991, Monk mailed the letter to a family, two members of whom had seen Monk kill Logan.

Monk told the family that they would have to pay for turning him in to the authorities. The letter went on to say that even though he was in prison, he could still "have it done." He then said:

you give me your land and I will spare your life. If not you all will die... All I have to do is say (the word to my men), and it is done. So you turn your land over to us, and I will spare you all, ... As you can see I Love Blood, But what will come of you is to Bad to look at. \ Dan Monk was already in prison on the manslaughter conviction at the time the threatening letter was mailed. His extensive violent criminal history led to his 14 year sentence, officials said.

Floyd attorneys establish scholarship

The Floyd County Bar Association honored Judge Hollie Conley by establishing an endowed scholarship for a Floyd County student at Alice Lloyd College. The Floyd County Bar Association raised $3,600, that was matched by the Conley family, in the amount and a check in the amount of $6,600 was presented to the college by attorneys John Rosenberg, Woodrow Burchett, and Robert Rowe Jr., acting in behalf of the Floyd County Bar Association.

The endowment principal will remain intact and will be named the "Hollie Conley Scholarship." "We encourage others to contribute to the scholarship fund; certainly attorneys, but also friends and family members who wish to express in a tangible way their gratitude for Judge Conley's many years of service," commented attorney Burchett.

Judge Conley attended Alice Lloyd College from 1939 to 1941. He enrolled at the University of Kentucky in 1941 and lived at "Caney Cottage," a residence provided by Mrs. Lloyd for two-year graduates of Caney College (now Alice Lloyd College). Following his Bachelors degree, Judge Conley entered Law School at Duke University where he completed his Law degree. He returned to Floyd County and immediately sought public office. He served six years as County Attorney, eight years as Commonwealth Attorney, and twenty-eight years as Circuit Judge, a record for Circuit Judges in Kentucky which accorded him the name of the Dean of Kentucky Judges. He retired this year.

Judge Conley is married to the former Minnie Martin of Right Beaver Creek. They have four children:

Melanie Warford, a physical therapist in Gibson City, Illinois; Judelle Conley, a United Parcel Service employee in Lexington; Danice White, Tazwell, Virginia, also a physical therapist; and Hollie M. Conley, a psychotherapist in San Francisco, California.

"I want to personally thank the Bar Association for establishing this scholarship in my name," said the Judge. "I just hope that some young person will be able to continue his/her education that otherwise may find it impossible without financial help."

The scholarship will be awarded to a high school graduating senior who exhibits academic excellence and demonstrates financial need.

To contribute to the scholarship fund, make checks payable to "Hollie Conley Scholarship Endowment," c/o Alice Lloyd College, Purpose Road, Pippa Passes, Kentucky, 41844.

CPAs host annual dinner for students

The Eastern Kentucky Chapter of Kentucky CPA's held their annual Student Night, Friday, January 31 at the Ashland Plaza Hotel in Ashland.

Also during the evening, the CPA chapter membership held their annual business meeting and election of officers for the upcoming year.

The guest speaker for the dinner meeting was Ben Gratzler, the executive director of the Kentucky Society of CPA's.

Other guests included representatives from the Becker CPA Exam Review Course. The door prize valued at $1,100 was won by an accounting student from Alice Lloyd College.

Pvt. Danny R. page Jr. has completed basic training at Fort Jackson, South Carolina.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

The soldier is the son of Catherine and Danny Page of Banner. He is a 1991 graduate of Betsy Layne High School.

Two local students are student teachers

Two Floyd County students at Eastern Kentucky University are among 270 teacher-education students doing student teaching this spring semester.

Local student teachers, their addresses and schools they are assigned to are John A. Salisbury, Martin, Model Laboratory, Richmond; and Elizabeth Everly, Prestonsburg, Daniel Boone Elementary, Richmond.

EKU's College of Education places its student teachers in classrooms for the last 12 to 13 weeks of the semester to gain practical classroom experience, said Dr. David Rush, director of EKU's professional laboratory experiences office.

The student-teaching experience, which is required before a college graduate may be certified, follows on-campus instruction in teaching fundamentals.

EKU students preparing for teaching careers also have the unique advantage of gaining practical classroom experience at Model Laboratory School, the only university-operated laboratory school in Kentucky. It is designed to provide educational experiences for future teachers that might otherwise be unavailable.

Most of the student teachers, 150, are working at the secondary level. Others are teaching in elementary classrooms, and several are assigned to special education classrooms, Rush said.

Eastern is the state's largest producer of classroom teachers.

In fact, a recent survey by the American Association of Colleges of Teacher Education (AACTE) ranked EKU among the nation's 20 leading producers of new classroom teachers.

Eastern Kentucky University is a comprehensive, regional University serving more than 16,500 students on its 35-acre Richmond campus, throughout its 22-county extended service region, and beyond.

Jaycees ask for support

The Prestonsburg Jaycees are asking for support in raising funds for the Jesse Stuart Book Project. Local Jaycee chapters across the state raise funds to purchase a book for every 6th grade student in their town or county.

The Prestonsburg Jaycees are asking for help to pay for the 720 books that they have ordered for the Floyd County 6th grade students as well as for all the libraries in the county.

The book that will be distributed is titled "Old Ben" and each book cost $1. After the books are purchased, the Jaycees will place an ad in the paper, thanking those who participated. These books must be paid for by February 14. Contributions toward this project would be greatly appreciated.

All contributions should be mailed to: Prestonsburg Jaycees, P.O. Box 602, Prestonsburg, Ky 41653. Make checks payable to the Prestonsburg Jaycees with the memo: Book Project. For more information contact Patti Williams at 886-6709 or Lisa Meade at 478-2025.

Radiologic Technology students achieve national milestones

The August 1991 graduates from Morehead State University's associate degree program in Radiologic Technology has distinguished themselves by achieving two special milestones.

In taking the national registry examination, the 41-member class attained a 93 percent passage rate, the highest in the MSU program's history, and exceeded the national average score.

The MSU rad tech students also earned an average test score of 83, which was 1.12 points higher than the national average, according to Dr. Betty Porter, chair of MSU's Department of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences.

Accredited by the Joint Review Committee on Education in Radiologic Technology, the 24-month long program began in 1973. Its curriculum offers students the opportunity to spend half of their time in the classroom and the remainder gaining hands-on experience at various hospital affiliates.

MSU is affiliated with 12 such clinical centers. These include: Highlands Regional Medical Center, Hazard Appalachian Regional Hospital, Humana Hospital - Lake Cumberland, Humana Hospital - Louisa, Meadowview Regional Hospital, Mary Chiles Hospital, Pikeville Methodist Hospital, Morgan County Appalachian Regional Hospital, Patic A. Clay Hospital, St. Claire Medical Center, Lexington Good Samaritan Hospital and HCA King's Daughters Memorial Hospital.

Veterans bonus program wraps up

The Amended Vietnam Veterans Bonus Program closed as of December 31, 1991, after processing more than 5,000 applications from Vietnam or Vietnam Era veterans who also had service in a previous war-time period.

The amended bonus program approved approximately 40 percent of the applicants paying an average of $178 each for a grand total of $350,000. The original Vietnam Veterans Bonus Program, which closed operations earlier in 1991, processed over 102,000 applications and approved nearly $32 million in payments to just over 88 percent of applicants with the average bonus amount of $368.11.

The amendment to the original Vietnam Veterans Bonus Act authorized payment of the difference between the amount qualified for the Vietnam Bonus and the amount of bonus already paid for service during previous wartime periods. The maximum amount any veteran could receive for service in all conflicts was $500. In Floyd County the original $256,765 authorized was amended to include an additional $2,298.

For more information about the Kentucky Vietnam Veterans Bonus contact the Division of Veterans Affairs at (502) 564-4883.

Reffitt scores 16..

Prestonsburg wins fourth straight with 58-49 win over Morgan

Mark it down. The Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats are readying themselves for the upcoming district tournament and at the expense of non-district teams.

The Lady Blackcats got a balanced scoring attack and posted a 58-49 win over tough Morgan County for their fourth consecutive victory. The win improved Prestonsburg's overall record to 11-4 on the season. It was a game that was a concern early for Prestonsburg coach Bridget Clay.

"I was worried more about this game than any other all year," she explained. Morgan County (9-5) is one of the top rated teams in the 16th Region and came into the game with a 9-4 record.

Missy Bailey, 6' 1" center, scored 18 points to lead the Lady Blackcats in scoring. Carolyn Reffitt tossed in 16 with Raquel Cain scoring 10.

Carla Nickell led Morgan County with 11 points. Melissa Whitt, Jodi Gillespie and Kim Lang each scored eight points.

The game was a seesaw affair until the fourth quarter when Prestonsburg took the lead for good. Down 39-39 on a basket by Morgan County's Leigh Ann Kelly, Prestonsburg went on an 11-2 run that netted them a 49-41 lead. Bailey's free throw tied the game at 39-39 and the Lady Blackcats took the lead 41-39 on a basket by Keri Merion. Bailey then added another free throw for a 42-39 contest.

Nickells kept the game close with a short jumper but Prestonsburg ran off seven unanswered points for a 49-41 advantage. Reffitt hit a three-pointer and Amy Reed had a basket plus a free throw in the spurt.

The Morgan County bench was hit with a technical foul with four minutes left in the game. Prestonsburg converted both free throws and then scored when they got possession of the ball to break the game open.

After the game, Reffitt reflected on how physical the game was. "Morgan County was a very physical team," said Reffitt, "but we played well together tonight and played really good defense."

"We thought coming into the game tonight it would be a physical game," said Prestonsburg mentor Clay. "We knew that Morgan County would be a tough team and we struggled at times. But we hit the free throws when it counted and played good team ball. Now we get ready for a big conference game at Allen Central (played Tuesday night)."

Prestonsburg led at the first stop, 13-10. Bailey got the Lady Blackcats on the scoreboard first with a layup off the opening tip-off. Morgan County tied the game at 2-2 on a basket from Nickells. The game was tied at 4-4 before Prestonsburg took a 8-4 lead. Reffitt's first trey of the game gave Prestonsburg a 11-6 lead. The lead was at five a second time at 13-8 before Tracy Brown's jumper made it 13-10.

Whitt scored on a layup and was fouled to open the second quarter for the Lady Cougars to make it a 13-12 game. Whitt missed the free throw. Reffitt's free throw gave Prestonsburg a two point lead before Carrie O'Connors' jumper tied the game at 14-14.

Prestonsburg experienced some coldness in the second period and Morgan County raced to a 19-14 lead on two field goals from Lang and a free throw by Kelly.

Prestonsburg righted themselves and went on a 6-0 run for a 20-19 lead. Gillespie hit a three-pointer for the Lady Cougars to give the lead back to Morgan County at 22-20. Reffitt tied the game with a rebound basket but Gillespie nailed another trey for a 25-22 Morgan County lead. Reed hit a short jumper for Prestonsburg to close to within one point, 25-24 at halftime.

The lead exchanged hands seven times in the third period with Prestonsburg taking a 38-33 lead late in the third stanza. Back-to-back baskets by Lang kept Morgan County close at 38-37 entering the fourth quarter.

The difference came at the free throw line where Prestonsburg shot 25 free throws making 12. Morgan County attempted seven connecting on four.

Merion finished with six points for Prestonsburg with Reed scoring five.

Prestonsburg will have a return engagement against the Lady Cougars as they travel to Morgan County Monday evening.

Check Out "The Wild Turkey Review"

As the wild turkey population soars throughout the United States, so does the number of turkey hunters. In 1992, some 3 million men and women will take to the woods in 49 of our 50 states to match wits with this exciting gamebird.

The Wild Turkey Review, which debuts February 1, is a bi-monthly newsletter designed to help these hunters attain the highest levels of skill and knowledge in this sport. Each issue will contain 8 pages of timely information on turkey hunting techniques, hotspots, new gear, research findings, etc. "In effect, the Wild Turkey Review will be the newspaper of turkey hunting," says writer/editor Wade Bourne. "It will contain the very latest and best news on the sport presented in tightly-written articles."

Bourne continues, "The Wild Turkey Review will be slanted to hard-core turkey hunters, but beginners will also pick up plenty of information that they won't find in any other publication. Also, I promise to print 100 percent reliable information, not payback articles about sub-quality places, methods, or equipment."

Wade Bourne is a good friend of mine who helped me get started as an outdoor writer. He is one of the top outdoor writers on this continent who has published articles in every major magazine in the country. He is a senior Writer/Hunting for Southern Outdoors Magazine and the host of In-Fisherman Radio, the largest syndicated outdoor radio show in the country.

But perhaps even more important, Bourne is an avid, longtime turkey hunter. "I've hunted and written about most gamebirds and animals in North America, and the wild turkey is hands-down my favorite," he says. "There's no other sport that matches the challenges, rewards, beauty and mystique of turkey hunting. I live it, breathe it and sleep it, and that's why I'm excited about publishing the Wild Turkey Review. I promise it'll be on target with information and advice to help readers enjoy this sport to the max."

In addition to feature articles, each issue of the Wild Turkey Review will contain such regular columns as "Hunting Hotspots," "Wade Bourne: My Call" (an editorial), "Gearing Up," "Books/Videos," and "Aim for Safety." In addition, each issue will include a guest column by one of North America's premier turkey hunting experts.

Hunters wishing to subscribe can do so by writing: Wild Turkey Review, 450 Old Trenton Road, Clarksville, Tennessee 37040, phone 1-800-252-3474. Subscription price is $14.95, payable by check, money order, or VISA/MasterCard. Satisfaction is guaranteed; a full refund will be made upon request. Also, those who subscribe before February 1, 1992 will be eligible for a drawing for an all-expense paid turkey hunting trip in Kentucky with pro hunters Harold Knight and David Hale during the 1992 spring season.

Indianapolis hosts National Wild Turkey Federation Convention

The National Wild Turkey Federation's 16th Annual Convention and Sports Show is scheduled for February 20-23 at the Convention Center in Indianapolis.

A full slate of activities will attract hunters and outdoor enthusiasts from across the country. The show will feature over 175 exhibits offering the latest in turkey, deer and waterfowl hunting equipment plus big game hunts, guns, knives, camouflage clothing, and wildlife art and other collectibles.

Informative hunting seminars will feature some of the nation's foremost authorities on calling and hunting the wild turkey — Paul Butski, Tom Duval, Ray Eye, Walter Parrott, Wil Primos, Terry and Robby Rohm, Eddie Salter, Tom Stuckey and many more.

World champion duck caller Roy Rhodes will also be there, and whitetail deer enthusiasts will get to see the King's Collection — 21 Boone & Crockett heads from throughout North America — and the Indiana Deer Hunters Association's Whitetail Hall of Fame, a collection of the best Hoosier trophy racks ever assembled.

Convention-goers will also get to meet 3-time Indy 500 winner Johnny Rutherford, former pro quarterback Bert Jones, and other sportsman-celebrities.

Rutherford and Patrick R. "Pat" Ralston, director of the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, are honorary co-chairmen of the convention.

There will also be panels and speakers on turkey hunting safety, wild turkey management and related topics, and the animal "rights" issue and how to deal with it. A continuous wild turkey hunting video theater will also be featured.

A highlight of the show, and always top crowd-pleasers, will be three grand national competitions: the wild turkey calling (senior and junior divisions), the taxidermy, and the carving championships. Some of the best turkey callers in the country — each a champion — will face preliminary rounds on Friday, February 21, and the finalists will compete for the 1992 title on Saturday, February 22. All entries in the taxidermy and carving contests will be displayed in the exhibit hall both days.

Sportsmen are also invited to bring their trophy whitetail deer racks and their best turkey beards and spurs to the exhibit hall for scoring.

Hunting and fishing trips will be auctioned at noon Friday, and the Grand National Celebrity Auction and Dinner will be Friday evening. An auction and luncheon for ladies will be held at noon Saturday.

"Besides the annual fun of three rousing fund-raising auctions and musical entertainment at our conventions, we conduct a lot of Federation business," said Rob Keck, executive vice president. "Our technical committee, which consists of professional wildlife biologists, reviews grant proposals; our directors make policy decisions and approve grants; we recognize outstanding service to wild turkey research and management through our awards program; and we spotlight our partners in conservation work, including sporting arms and ammunition manufacturers, federal and state wildlife agencies, and the volunteers who make up the 400-plus state and local chapters of the National Wild Turkey Federation."

Admission to seminars, exhibits, videos and contests is $5 at the door, with children under 12 admitted free. Tickets are available to auctions and entertainment, beginning with a Hoosier Welcome Party Thursday evening, February 20, at the Convention Center.

The National Wild Turkey Federation is a not-for-profit conservation organization incorporated in 1973 and dedicated to the restoration and management of the American wild turkey and other wildlife. National headquarters is the Wild Turkey Center in Edgefield, South Carolina, telephone (803) 637-3106.

NEWS OF SAFETY

Off-Highway Driving Tips

There are almost 200,000 miles of roads and trails available for motor vehicle use in 156 national forests, in 42 states. For an off-highway trip in your 4-wheel drive vehicle that's safe for you—and the environment—here are some tips from the National Automobile Dealers Association (NADA).

Resist the urge to pioneer a new road or trail. This can cause soil erosion and damage to vegetation that may take decades to heal.

Before attempting off-highway travel:

- Know the operating limitations of your vehicle. Keep it in good repair. There are no service stations in wildland areas.
- Know your own limitations in handling this vehicle. Don't take foolish chances. Ask 4WD vehicle dealers, associations, and clubs about off-highway training and safety classes.
- Know in advance any rules, regulations, and restrictions, including current travel and weather conditions, that apply to the off-road area where you'll be driving. Check with the appropriate park superintendent nearest to your destination.
- Take the TREAD LIGHTLY! pledge: Travel only where permitted; Respect the rights of others; Educate yourself; Avoid inflicting harm; Drive responsibly.

ule for all teams, I suppose on paper the advantage will go to Prestonsburg. Wheelwright has three conference games remaining (two after last night) and all three are on the road. However, members of Jackie Pack's ballclub have shown they can play on the road as well as at home. Wheelwright must visit Betsy Layne (Tuesday night) where in the past, they have never played very well. The Trojans have stops at Allen Central and Prestonsburg remaining, also. The Trojans are scheduled to face the Blackcats on February 18. Both teams could very well come into the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse with 6-1 records and the very game that could decide the top spot in the conference.

Prestonsburg must travel to Allen Central (Tuesday night) and then to McDowell on February 14, Valentine's Day. I assure you there will be no "love" displayed at the "Devil's Den" on this Valentine's Day as the two powers hook up. It will be a very important game for Prestonsburg who finds the E.P. Grigsby Fieldhouse as not being very kind to them in the past.

McDowell has two conference games remaining with Prestonsburg at home and a road game at Betsy Layne. Seemingly, McDowell has third place locked up and, barring a complete breakdown, should finish right there. The Daredevils still have a shot at the top spot but will require some help from Allen Central and Betsy Layne to make it.

All three of Allen Central's conference games are at home as Prestonsburg, Wheelwright and Betsy Layne must make an appearance. If the Rebels should win all three, third place is the best they could accomplish.

Betsy Layne will travel to Allen Central, host McDowell and Wheelwright in their final three conference games.

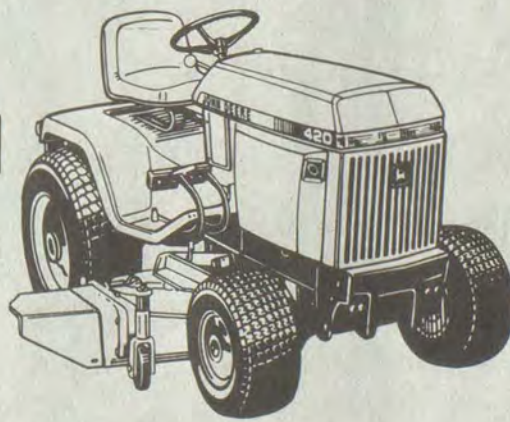

In part two of this series, we want to look at the key players for each team. In part three, the areas of improvement, strengths and games that got away. Part four will give us what the players and coaches think.

In Friday's sports section, we will look at the women's conference race.

Concentration: Key to tournament success

One of the keys to Larry Nixon's great success in professional bass tournament fishing is changing lures. Or, rather, not changing them.

"One thing I really hate to do when I'm in competition is take the time to change lures," says Nixon, who recently won his third consecutive B.A.S.S. MegaBucks* tournament and its $87,000 first prize.

"Not only does it break your concentration, it often leads to self doubts," the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler said. "When you open your tackle box and see all those lures, you begin to question your decisions about lure size and color, and when you do that, you lose your efficiency."

That is one reason the tournament pros not only carry the maximum number of rods allowed with them during competition, they have those rods already rigged with different lures and ready to use instantly.

During the MegaBucks tournament, in which 10 finalists rotate through 10 different fishing holes for a specified amount of time, Nixon had 10 different rods ready to use.

"With only about 45 minutes of fishing time at each hole, you don't have time to experiment with different lures, retrieves and techniques," notes Nixon, whose bass tournament winnings have exceeded $1 million.

"You look at the water, decide what lure will cover it the most efficiently, and start casting.

"We were able to look at the different holes just briefly before competition, and I decided which lures I had to have ready. I put on spinnerbaits, topwaters, plastic worms, and crankbaits so I could cover all the depths and conditions as I came to them."

Tournaments are won or lost more on fishing decisions like these than on fishing ability, says the Evinrude pro, and most successful anglers try to make as many decisions as possible before actually starting to fish.

"That's why practice time is so important," Nixon explains. "We use that time to make the decisions that will govern us during the competition. That includes not only choosing where to fish, but also how to fish and which lures to use."

"Then, once the the competition begins, all we have to do is concentrate on catching the fish."

Nixon, like many tournament pros, talks very little while fishing, nor does he take time to eat. He may drink several sips of water during the day, but that's all. His total concentration centers on casting, retrieving and catching fish.

"It only takes about 45 seconds to change lures," laughs Nixon, "but, honestly, that's all it takes to break my concentration. If I already have another rod rigged and ready with a different lure, I can change in less than 10 seconds and never miss a cast."

EAGLES DOWN LINDSEY WILSON BEHIND WEBB'S 19 POINTS

The Alice Lloyd Eagles got off to a slow start against Lindsey Wilson College last week, but rebounded in the second half to easily hand the Raiders a 91-72 loss.

Former McDowell product, Henry Webb, tossed in 19 points to lead the Eagles scoring. Todd Johnson and Russell Clark each added 18 points.

The Eagles fell behind in the first half due to the sharp shooting of Joe McGeorge and Michael Earles. The Eagles trailed at the intermission 46-40.

 GEORGETOWN DOMINATES SECOND HALF IN WIN OVER LADY EAGLES

It was a game that Alice Lloyd Lady Eagles coach John Mills would just as soon forget. The Lady Eagles saw what was a close first half turn into a nightmare against Georgetown College last week.

The two teams played to a 43-43 tie through the first 20 minutes of play but it was a different tune in the second half. The Lady Tigers used a lot of players in the second half and tired out the Lady Eagles on defense. Susan Van Arsdale led Georgetown with 23 points hitting 87 percent of her shots. Katrina Short had 21 points to lead the Lady Eagles. Former Betsy Layne standout, Brenda Hamilton, added 13 points for Alice Lloyd.

The Lady Eagles are currently 10-12 on the season and 5-8 in district play.

 EAGLES 12TH IN NATION IN OFFENSE

The latest statistics for the National Association Intercollegiate Athletics, Division II, lists Alice Lloyd College as 12th in the nation in team offense. The Eagles, with a season record of 11-6, have averaged 93.3 points per game.

 JOHNSON IS TOP TEN IN ASSISTS

Todd Johnson of Alice Lloyd College is the ninth leading assist player in the nation, according to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, Division II. Johnson has registered 7.29 assists per game.

 SHORT ONE OF TOP SCORERS

Katrina Short, All-American center for Alice Lloyd College, is the 11th leading scorer in this week's National Association of Intercollegiate Association statistics. Short also ranks 11th in rebounding nationally.

 WEBB IS TOP TEN IN SCORING

Fomer McDowell standout Henry Webb, is listed as 10th in the nation in individual scoring by the NAIA. Webb, a native of McDowell, is averaging almost 26 points per game.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS

by Beth Jones

"BASKETBALL ETIQUETTE"

Have you ever noticed how the rules for expected behavior change when one attends a basketball game? Basketball games, especially high school games in eastern Kentucky, are somewhat magical events. They actually transform people from being mild-mannered to outrageously hyper at the moment of the tip-off.

In all the years I've attended games, I've seen many a bizarre sight. I've observed people paint their faces, throw confetti, make obscene gestures at the officials and the opposing team, threaten to lynch the refs, and turn beet-red (I'd imagine from high blood pressure) at high-anxiety moments.

I admit that at times some of those characteristics could have described me well. But I wasn't alone — there were huge crowds around me acting in the same fashion. My most vivid memory is the 1989 15th Regional Tournament. The setting was the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse. The tip-off for the championship game between the McDowell Daredevils and the Prestonsburg Blackcats was set for 8 p.m.

The gymnasium was filled to capacity by 6:30. I had never seen so many fans at a single game in my entire life. The fans began yelling at each other. Some Daredevil fans had a stuffed cat on a fishing pole and were casting it out on the floor and reeling it back up into the stands. Some of the Prestonsburg crowd had painted themselves from the waist up. Many things were taking place. The police escorted a few people out. However, my fondest memory is of a normally mild-mannered McDowell teacher running up and down the sidelines yelling, "Get up! Get up!" It was a touching sight.

Unfortunately, McDowell lost the game. It did prove, though, that society's rules for expected behavior change during a basketball game. Over the years, I have compiled a list of "basketball etiquette."

1.) One is not expected to act prim and proper at the game. He or she is able to act emotionally, irrationally, and totally uncivilized.

2.) One is expected to stand for not only "The National Anthem," but for each playing of the "school song," as well.

3.) It is impolite for the opposing team's band to play while the other team's cheerleaders are on the floor. There is such a thing as taking turns. As well, it is rude for the band, any band, to play while the game is in progress. (I recall this occurring last week at the All "A" Classic. YOU KNOW WHO YOU ARE.)

4.) One should not worry wondering if he is making a fool of himself in front of other spectators. Usually, they are acting in a similar manner, and will be ashamed to gossip about you later.

5.) It is perfectly acceptable to use phrases such as, "Kill the ref!" and "The referee needs glasses!" if he indeed made a call that everyone can see was wrong.

6.) It is in good taste to wear one's school colors to the game.

7.) It is rude to stand up in front of others, unless they are standing, too, or unless one is acting out of pure emotion.

Of course, there are other rules regarding "basketball etiquette," but unfortunately I don't have the time nor space to list them all. I hope everyone can use these seven items as guidelines. Until next week, "Go McDowell!"

OUT OF STEAM

Earl Ogle is a very pleasant fellow who is also the postmaster in Gatlinburg, Tennessee. People who go to the Smokies on vacation could have their pleasure doubled just by stopping in to see him.

I see Earl occasionally, and once I asked, "Do they still have that tourist train ride in Gatlinburg?"

"No," he answered, "they finally took that off."

"That's a shame," I said. "It looked like great fun."

"Yes," he agreed, "it was very popular, and at first they put it on a tri-weekly basis."

"You mean they ran it three times a week?"

"No," he explained, "they'd take it for a run every week and try to get in back in."

NEGOTIATING

Earl was elected president of the National Association of Postmasters and two year tenure required that he live in Washington for the years of '88 and '89. His duties required that he deal with some important people — members of congress, postal headquarters staff and people from all walks of life.

His consistent wit and good humor kept them in such a congenial mood that it became easy to negotiate with them on more important matters. He enjoyed telling about his relatives and friends back in Ware's Valley, Tennessee, where he grew up, and those stories kept him in demand as a speaker for their dinners and meetings.

One account involved a time when he was about five years old and had encountered his mother's displeasure.

He said, "Mama had a little chicken that had something wrong with it, and she put it in a lot by itself so the other chickens couldn't peck at it or bother it."

"I looked at it and decided it couldn't live anyway, and I jerked its head off. Soon as I did it I knew it was the wrong thing and that I was in big trouble."

"I saw her come out the door to take it some water and check on it, and I decided I'd better hide. I went to the open place at the back of our house where I could crawl under the floor."

"Sure enough, it wasn't long before I hear her calling to me; but I just sat there quiet as a mouse."

"Finally she thought to look under the floor and there I was, back as far as I could get."

But he was able to negotiate, even back then, for he looked straight at her and said, "Better not come under here, Mama. A snake might bite you!"

SPECIAL TREATMENT

Another postmaster friend is Charles Ethington of Taylorsville, Kentucky. Like most members of his profession, he is interested in his community, and especially he is interested in the children of his town.

Charles was working around his home one Saturday and decided to walk up the street to pick up something at the store.

One his way he saw that two children, a little brother and sister, had set up a lemonade stand by their front gate. They'd printed and posted a sign that read: LEMONADE — 25¢ A GLASS.

The few glasses he saw looked as if they might have been used, but there was a box of supplies nearby.

Charlie stopped to chat and do business with the children. He handed the little boy a dollar and said, "Keep the change."

"What did you say, Sir?" asked the child.

And so he repeated, "I said to keep the change."

With a pleased look the little boy instructed his sister, "Give him a clean glass!"

Out of the Mouths of Babes!

This week our out of the mouths of babe selection, comes from Taylor Robinson of Tampa, Florida.

Taylor is three years old and was grocery shopping recently with her mother Kathi Jo.

Taylor had her very own shopping cart trailing along behind mom. Her mother had turned the corner and was checking the prices, thinking Taylor was close behind. Then she heard the three-year-old jabbering up a storm. She poked her head around the aisle to see who Taylor was talking too.

Taylor had Mrs. Butterworth by the neck saying, "Talk, talk, you talk on T.V., now talk."

Not being able to hold her laughter, Taylor's mom burst out in giggles.

Taylor, looked at her with her big blue eyes and said "Why won't she talk to me mommie? I can't make her talk."

How, Kathi Jo explained Mrs. Butterworths not talking we're not sure.

But, Taylor's wonder did not end there.

After watching a Disney movie on dinosaurs, Taylor sat down to a family dinner. "Mommie," she said, "Did you know dinosaurs live in the mountains?"

"A long, long time ago, millions of years ago, I guess they did, Taylor," her mom answered.

Florida has no mountains, huh Mom?

"No," said her mother.

Gram has mountains.

"Yes, she does, Taylor," answered her mother.

Excited as could be Taylor continued to tell how the dinosaurs live here in Eastern Kentucky.

Her mother explained, "There are no more dinosaurs."

Why, Taylor asked.

"They ran out of food her mother told her."

Well, said Taylor, couldn't they go to the grocery?

Thanks Taylor for bringing a smile to our faces and thanks to you, mom, for sharing it with us. Till next week, send in your entry and keep smiling.

Employment services is job pool for employers

by Leesa Kruse

The Kentucky Department for Employment Services is no longer just "the unemployment office." With a wide range of services, the department offers assistance to both the job seeker and potential employer.

For employers, services offered by the department can save time and money.

"If a company runs a help-wanted newspaper ad or advertises on a marquee, they're going to get qualified, unqualified...everybody and their brother will go in to apply," explained Deborah Allen, field office manager at the Prestonsburg office. "If we do their job search for them, we screen their applicants and only send them the number of people they request to interview."

"We also do testing," she continued. "If they want a secretary who types 60 words per minute, we do the testing here and only send them applicants who can type 60 words per minute."

The employer saves the cost of advertising and the time it would have taken to see all the candidates who might otherwise have applied for the job.

"We get most of our job listings from employers who call us," said Allen. "They pay for our services through their FUTA tax (Federal Unemployment Tax Act). We say we're a free service, but actually we're a pre-paid service for any employer who uses us."

Employers may be eligible for tax credits for hiring certain workers from the Department of Employment Services. The Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) is an incentive program aimed at giving disadvantaged groups an opportunity to work. Those groups include handicapped persons and recipients of state and federal general assistance, among others. Tax credits of up to $2,400 are available through TJTC.

Employers may also be entitled to a $100 Unemployment Tax Credit for each person they hire who is drawing unemployment benefits.

The Department serves a pool of more than 10,000 applicants. Those who apply there will find many programs to help them, including counseling, job search training and in many cases, educational assistance. The JOBS (Job Opportunities and Basic Skills) Program is one which Allen finds helpful. "JOBS is set up to train people who are receiving benefits from social insurance—food stamps or AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children," explains Allen. "We give classes on interviewing skills, how to fill out an application, good child care, budgeting money, and even how to dress for an interview. The classes can really help someone who has never been exposed to these sort of things before."

According to Allen, the classes are currently voluntary but will soon be a requirement for all AFDC recipients.

JOBS also offers educational benefits with GED completion and literacy programs, and continuing education at technical schools or community colleges.

Disabilities Act protects civil rights of disabled

If you own a public business like a retail store or a restaurant and don't have a wheelchair ramp or your rest rooms aren't modified for use by people in wheel chairs, you are breaking the law.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) was signed by President Bush July 26, 1990 and was designed to protect the civil rights of disabled people by barring discrimination and guaranteeing equal access to public accommodations and services.

"This Act is probably the most comprehensive since the Civil Rights Act of 1964," said Deborah Allen, field office manager for Prestonsburg Department of Employment Services. It affects employment, transportation, public accommodations, state and local governments, and telecommunications.

All state and local governments and all public businesses such as restaurants, hotels and retail stores were to be in compliance with the Act by January 26, 1992.

Other employers who have 25 or more employees must comply with the ACT by July 26, 1992. Employers with 15 to 25 workers must comply by July 26, 1994. Private businesses with less than 15 employees are exempt. Religious organizations and private clubs are also exempt from some provisions of the Act.

The Act states that employers may not discriminate in hiring or promoting a disabled person who is otherwise qualified for the job. While an employer may ask an applicant about their ability to do a job, they can no longer ask if someone has a disability or test to screen out people with disabilities.

"This means employers won't be able to use applications with a laundry list of questions like, 'Do you have diabetes?' or 'Have you ever had an ulcer,'" explained Allen. "They're no longer going to be able to ask questions like that."

ADA states that all public accommodations—hotels, theaters, doctor's offices, libraries, day care centers, parks, etc.—may not discriminate on the basis of a disability. For instance, auxiliary aids and services must be provided for persons with vision or hearing impairments so they may have equal opportunity to participate and benefit.

Also, all physical barriers in existing facilities must either be moved or an alternative method of providing services, must be offered. All new construction and alterations and renovations must also be accessible.

The Floyd County Chamber of Commerce is planning a seminar for employers on ADA in the near future. If you have questions now about the American with Disabilities Act and how it affects you or your business, call the Department for Employment Services at 886-2396.

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?

I got to the check-out counter with my sole purchase — a box of trash bags — at almost the same time as the lady pulling one heaping grocery cart as she pulled another.

I didn't want to appear rude or anything, but in as much as I could have checked out and already been home by the time she'd unloaded just one pile of her groceries, I started to step in front of her.

However, I found myself on the receiving end of one of those "don't even think about it" stares and she nearly ran me over as she pushed (and pulled) in front of me.

A little embarrassed, I apologized and stood quietly behind her as she slammed her items — three of four at a time — onto the slow-moving belt. She had her check written and was out of the store before the carry-out boy could bag her buns.

As I fumbled for the correct change to pay for my trash bags, I heard her say something to the young man assisting her as he made his way to the front door, trying to negotiate the narrow opening from behind a cart-full of tall brown bags.

The last I saw of the woman she was pointing in the direction that I'd assumed she'd parked her car. By the time I got to mine, she was long gone.

Boy! Was she in a hurry, or what? Sometimes I get the feeling that something extremely urgent is going on that the whole world knows about except me. It's like some philanthropist somewhere is handing out hundred dollar bills. It's like everybody has to get wherever it is they're going right now, or else.

I guess it's like the old saying, "He who laughs last... doesn't get the joke." Maybe I'm a little slow in more ways than one. Maybe if I knew why everybody was in such a fizzle, I'd be in one, too.

I am smart enough, though, to realize that even here in Eastern Kentucky, where, comparatively speaking, we're supposed to be more laid back and easy going, we also live in a hyped-up, listen-up, hurry-up oriented society. Everywhere we turn people are emphasizing speed.

For example, people are always talking about the "fast" lane. A pill is no good, unless it's "fast" acting. We spend millions of dollars on "fast" food. Some of the finest people I know drink "instant" coffee and Nestle's "Quik". Your best basketball teams are those with good "fast" breaks. While the greatest baseball pitcher nearly always has a blistering "fast" ball.

I can't for the life of me, however, even begin to understand why those things designed to have a total opposite affect on us makes us hurry. Why do you suppose we go faster when we come upon a yellow caution light? Or, when we see a sign saying there is a dip in the road, why do we accelerate instead of braking?

Oh well, I guess it's just my nature to be slow. As a matter of fact, I've been told that I'm as slow as Christmas, and have even been metaphorically compared to cold molasses on a number of occasions.

I don't care, though. After all, I'm seldom late for anything. I mean, I get to work on time. I get to church on time. I even get this column in on time. As a matter of fact, sometimes I'm even early. Like filing my income taxes. Would you believe that I qualify for a ... should I say it? A "quick" refund?

Retirement and your IRA

If you are nearing retirement and have an Individual Retirement Arrangement (IRA), or are planning on rolling over assets from another retirement program into an IRA, the IRS would like to alert you to special rules that apply to you.

Generally, you cannot withdraw assets from your IRA before you reach age 59 1/2 without having to pay a 10 percent additional tax. Exceptions may include hardship situations such as disability or death, and distributions that are rolled over or are qualified annuity payments.

A rollover is a tax-free distribution to you of assets from one qualified retirement program which you contribute to another program within 60 days. The amount you roll over tax-deferred, however, is generally taxable later when the new program pays that amount to you or your beneficiary. Generally, you must make the rollover contribution by the 60th day after the day you receive the distribution.

You must start receiving distributions from your IRA by April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach age 70 1/2. If you do not withdraw the entire balance by the required beginning date, you must start making periodic withdrawals. The minimum withdrawal amount is figured based on payments over a period not longer than the life expectancy of the owner, or the joint life expectancies of the owner and beneficiary.

Rules affecting IRA's are contained in IRS Publication 590, Individual Retirement Arrangements (IRA's). Taxpayers can get a free copy of the publication by calling the IRS at 1-800-TAX-3676, or by stopping by your local IRS walk-in office in Kentucky.

Homemakers to resume meetings

Mrs. Frances Pitts, Floyd County Home Economist, announces that all Homemakers Clubs will resume their regular meeting schedules, beginning February 1. (Meetings for the month of January were discontinued on account of the weather).

Local Churchwomen meet at Community United Methodist

The Local Churchwomen met Friday morning, January 31, at 10:30, at the Community United Methodist Church. Prior to the meeting, refreshments were served by Mrs. Cheryl Sexton, of the host church. The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Mabel Donahoe. Due to the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. Dot Marshall, no financial report was given.

Mrs. Sue G. Martin, who served the group as president during the past year, installed the officers for the year, 1992-93. These were president, Mrs. Kay Hale Ross; vice president, Mrs. Bess West, (in absentia); secretary, Mrs. Mabel Donahoe, and treasurer, Mrs. Dot Marshall (in absentia).

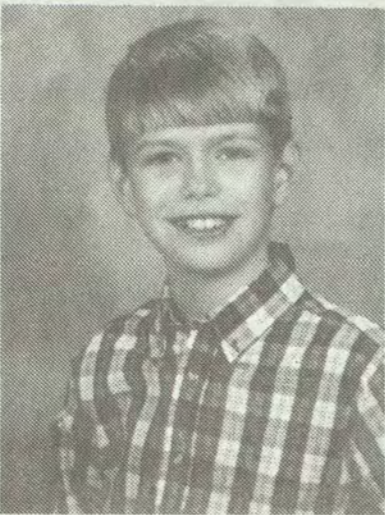

It was announced that the annual World Day of Prayer would be held at the Christ United Methodist Church, at Allen, on March 1, at 7 p.m.

At the suggestion of the new president, Mrs. Ross, meetings which had been held on the third Friday of every-other month were changed to meet Saturdays so that more churchwomen who work during the week may have the opportunity to attend these events. The next meeting will be Friday, March 21, at 10:30 p.m., at the First United Methodist Church.

The annual Holy Week services, a joint effort by the Floyd County Ministerial Association, whose members are responsible for the planning and presentation of the programs, and the Local Churchwomen, who are responsible for the furnishing and serving of light meals for these meetings, are scheduled to be held this year from April 13-17, at the First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial). Easter Sunrise Services will be held at Jenny Wiley Park

A discussion, led by the Rev. Timothy Jessen, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, was held in regard to the Cooperative Christian Ministries and its relation to the locally sponsored food pantries. Several problems regarding this matter remain to be solved, but it was generally agreed that canned goods and monetary gifts are needed for this project. It was suggested that canned goods be taken to churches each Sunday.

The former president, Mrs. Martin, has spent much time in helping with the food pantry, the membership of the organization, and other matters of importance to the Local Churchwomen, and the new president, Mrs. Ross, expressed her will-

Healthcare changes bring about individual choices

Our Lady of the Way Hospital and the Big Sandy Area Development District are jointly sponsoring sessions called Advance Directives.

Advance Directives give patients information about their right to make their own healthcare decisions, the individual right to accept or refuse life-sustaining medical treatment. This change comes about due to the Patient Self-Determination provisions on the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (OBRA 90).

Advance Directives are instructions each person needs to write, in advance of incapacitating illness — formal documents that state a patient's choices about treatment, or their instructions may name someone to make such choices if the patient becomes unable to make decisions.

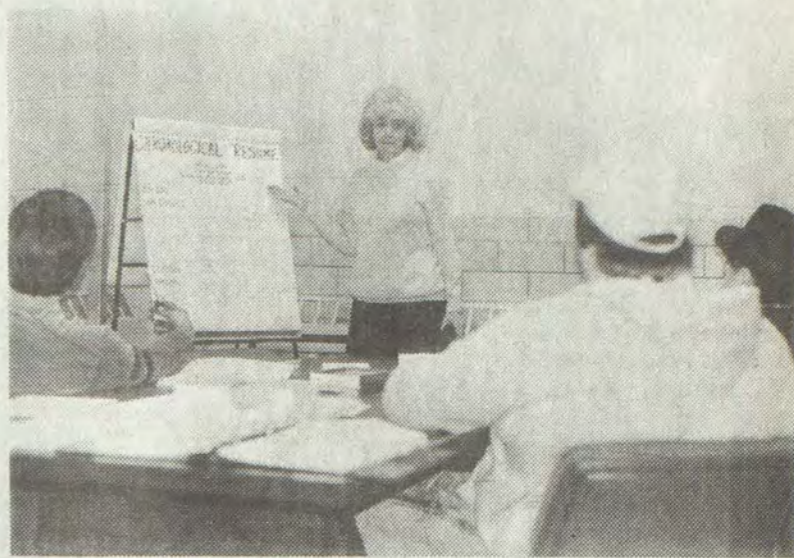

Laws concerning the Patient Self-Determination Act differ from state to state. In Kentucky, the legislature has enacted the Living Will Act, the Health Care Surrogate Act and also the Durable Power of Attorney Law.

The purpose of each of these Advance Directives is to ensure that the wishes of individuals regarding medical treatment and healthcare decisions are carried out by care providers.

On Monday, February 7, from 11-11:45, the twelfth of these sessions will be held at the Betsy Layne Senior Citizens Center at Betsy Layne.

JOBS underway

Darnell Nunnery, unit coordinator for the JOBS Program, instructs students in her Job Readiness Class, preparing them to be more competitive in the local job market.

The Dislocated Workers Program is one of Allen's favorites. "This program helps those people who have never had to use tax dollars before," she explained. "It helps those who have worked hard all their lives and all of a sudden find themselves out of a job and without a marketable skill because their coal mine or whatever went out of business."

"The program can pay for up to 104 weeks of training to develop new skills for dislocated workers and participants can still receive their unemployment benefits while in the program." Allen said the department had recently received a $2 million coal grant to work with those people who become unemployed in a coal-related field.

While it's not the only job at their office anymore, the Department still handles Unemployment Insurance Claims. "We have a very seasoned and competent staff here," noted Allen. "If it takes working nights or weekends, by Friday afternoon all of our claims are worked up. Now, that's dedication. It's been difficult since the new extended benefits were approved. We've reopened some of the older claims and extended newer ones, but our staff makes every effort to make sure that everyone gets the benefits they deserve."

If you're looking for a job or you're an employer with a job to fill, call the Department at 886-2396 or visit their office on North Lake Drive in Prestonsburg.

Pikeville Methodist Hospital

Yours For Life

Pikeville Methodist is a great place to start out. And here's double proof: Stephanie and Amanda Combs, twin daughters of Steve and Teresa Hefner Combs of Pikeville.

Amanda and Stephanie arrived on December 11, 1989, almost two months earlier than expected. (Just couldn't wait, I guess!) Because twins are often premature, the Combs family anticipated an early arrival and planned accordingly.

"Having the Neonatal Unit at Pikeville Methodist was definitely a factor in our decision to stay at home to have our babies," said Mrs. Combs. "It's more convenient to stay home and it's nice to be near family and friends at a time like that. But the most important thing is doing what is best for the babies. We felt like the Pikeville Methodist Neonatal Unit would give our children the best start they could have anywhere."

Dr. Ruth Ann Shepherd, full-time staff neonatologist, was in the delivery room when Amanda (4 lbs. 4 oz.) and Stephanie (3lbs. 10 oz.) were born. They were taken immediately to the Neonatal Unit where they stayed for almost a month. During that time, the new parents could be with the girls anytime they wanted.

"Dr. Shephard explained everything to us in detail. We never had to wonder what was going on," Mrs. Combs continued. "Some of the little things I remember especially, like there was music playing all the time and a guest book in the hall for visitors to sign if we were out when they came by."

"I guess one of the most touching moments was when we finally got to take the girls home. You could tell the staff really cared. We were told we could call anytime we needed, day or night. And I did!"

Amanda and Stephanie Combs today

"I know we made the right decision to have our babies at Pikeville Methodist. Just look at them now -- could there be any doubt?"

Another February, another birthday. Seems strange that just a few years ago it took 3 to 4 years for February and my birthdays to roll around, and now they are showing up 2 or 3 times each year. I have yet to find a birthday twin, and I have been looking for several years. I have met lots of people born on February 3, but never one born in 1926. Oops! Better watch it or I could be telling my age.

Breaking the cycle of abuse:

Prevent substance abuse: a parents guide

No doubt about it. Your son or daughter will be asked to use alcohol, tobacco, marijuana or some other drug. At that moment, he or she will make an important decision. Unless you have prepared your child otherwise, the choice may be based on misinformation, curiosity or fear of rejection.

Alcohol and drug use have reached an epidemic stage nationwide. Our children are being seduced into their use earlier and earlier. Almost 30 percent of high school seniors say their friends get drunk at least once a week. One-third of students grades 4 through 8 think alcohol is a "big problem" among children their age. Almost half say the same about drugs. Most teen substance users do not know or seem concerned that dependency may result from the frequent use of alcohol, tobacco or certain drugs.

YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

The good news is that as a parent

you can prepare your child to resist these substances. But the best time for action is before substance abuse even starts to make inroads in your youngster's life. Parents play a critical role in prevention.

You protect small children from household chemicals and dangerous places. However, with older children you may not feel qualified to discuss substance abuse. Assuming that children already know about it from television or school is a mistake. Without specific parental guidance children may make important decisions based on peer pressure or misinformation. When you teach young people specific facts about drug and alcohol risks, they develop the understanding and motivation to avoid those intoxicants.

Schools and community groups also can positively influence children. Catchy announcements on radio and television increase awareness and teach prevention skills. Slogans like "Be Smart, Don't Start!" and images of popular youth discouraging drug use reinforce the value of making wise choices.

Your own use of any drug may springboard your child into unwise personal and social decisions. Be aware of your influence as an example to your child.

Pre-teen years offer opportunities to discuss family values, expectations and rules of the home. Children also need to know what happens when these rules are broken. Take time to listen to your children so they feel safe talking about these issues. As you work with them, they will develop confidence. Later, when offered drugs at the party or out on the playground, they will be more equipped to withstand the emotion of the moment.

An assertive attitude is a good defense. Even a child with strong values needs to resist actively. When asked, "Don't you drink?" a young person, instead of feeling inferior, might say assertively, "No!" "No thanks," or "I'm not into chemicals."

STEPS TO HELP YOUNGSTERS RESIST DRUGS:

The Just Say No Foundation offers these suggestions to young people who are invited to use drugs:

1. Understand what is happening. Someone is inviting you to use alcohol and drugs. They should not be asking you to do it.
2. Keep in mind why you should say no. Drugs are illegal and so is alcohol if you are under 21. It's also bad for you physically.
3. Say no. Have the courage to do what you feel is right. You don't have to give a reason unless you want to. Say "No thanks!" in a clear, strong voice.
4. Offer other choices. If a friend offers drugs, you might say, "Let's play ball or go swimming instead."
5. Leave. If your friend won't respect you when you say no, walk away. You may have to give up some friends.

MYTHS

Young people may hear that alcohol or marijuana will not harm them or that a small amount is safe. Replace misinformation such as, "Everybody else does it," and "A little bit won't hurt me" with facts. For example, if a child claims "pot" is harmless, explain that marijuana is 5 to 6 times stronger than in 1970. Marijuana affects short term memory, coordination, concentration, motivation and judgment. Regular marijuana use may affect the lungs and reproductive system. A person also can become psychologically dependent on it.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PARENTS

• Learn the facts yourself. A good local source of information is the "Talking With Your Kids About Alcohol Program" developed by the Prevention Research Institute (see resource section).

• Provide clear, consistent messages to your child. Children respond to accurate information. Without threatening, tell them about the risks involved.

• Be a good role model for your children. Your example is a powerful influence.

• Be consistent in your expectations and discipline. Set clear rules and limits, and have the courage to enforce them.

• Listen to your children. Consider their point of view, even if it differs from yours. Ask questions and then listen with respect. Don't interrupt. With a safe haven for discussion, your children will be more inclined to listen to you and trust you.

• State your own values. Children need to know what you personally think and feel about the issues.

• Help your child develop skills and talents. When a child invests time in friendships and activities she enjoys, she gains confidence and feels valued. A reasonably active life leaves little room for boredom.

• Teach your child to identify the truth. Others may exaggerate their use of alcohol or drugs to gain peer approval. They may also lie about the dangers.

• Encourage individuality and assertiveness. The child who confidently resists stays free from alcohol and drugs. She protects herself from peer pressure and develops a strong inner sense of what is right.

• Practice refusal skills with your child before he faces strong peer pressure. Play-acting possible social events teaches your child to resist negative situations. When the time comes, he can say no to drugs and yes to positive alternatives.

• Stay calm, firm and well informed. Share factual information. Keep fear, anger and distrust in check as you discuss this difficult topic. Avoid sarcasm, accusations, and emotional appeals. They may cause your child to stop listening.

• Work out prevention strategies with other parents in your school and community. Many children in the community may not be receiving preventive attention. Help like-minded parents set family policies which may stop the cry that, "Everyone else is allowed to!"

Provide your children with a warm, accepting atmosphere in which they feel comfortable confiding in you. Listen with respect to what they say they are feeling and thinking. Be trustworthy, and encourage the same quality in them.

Wedding vows exchanged

Sandra Denise Crum, daughter of Earvin and Kathleen Crum of Martin and Rodney Alan Stevens, son of Jack and Joyce Stevens of Hueysville, were married in a candlelight double-ring ceremony by the Reverend Kenneth Salmons at the Faith Bible Church of Martin on December twenty-first at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The church was decorated in the Christmas theme with fresh red and white poinsettia and fresh greenery and wreaths. The pews were trimmed with bows made of Christmas plaid.

The bride wore a white silk organza Victorian style wedding gown with a long train trimmed with pearls and sequins. Her veil was short and trimmed with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath with lace ribbons and pearls.

The Maid of Honor, Yevette Depoy of Allen and bridesmaids, Denise Porter, Joann Conn, and Annie Porter all of Martin, wore tea-length gown with long black velvet bodices and long sleeves; the skirts were made of satin Christmas plaid. They each carried a single red rose trimmed with ribbons.

The groom and his best man Danny Brian Slone of Martin and ushers, Calvin Crum, brother of the bride, Brian Conn of Martin and Matthew Yoho of Gallipolis, Ohio, wore black short-waisted tuxedos. The groom wore a white rose boutonniere and the others wore red rose boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride wore a cranberry red street length dress with winter white accessories. Her corsage was of white roses with cranberry red and white ribbons.

The mother of the groom wore a winter white wool suit with a gold silk blouse and winter white accessories. Her corsage was of red roses with gold ribbons.

The grandmother of the bride, Elizabeth Crum of Allen, wore a black dress with black accessories. Her corsage was of white roses with silver ribbons.

The grandmother of the groom, Clara Pack of Hueysville, wore a black suit with a red silk blouse and black accessories. Her corsage was of red roses and silver ribbons.

The flower girl, Sarah Yoho of Gallipolis, Ohio and the cousin of the groom, wore a white lace tea-length gown with red accessories and carried a flower-petal basket made of satin Christmas plaid.

The ring bearer, Justin Frasure of Martin, wore a black short-waisted tuxedo and carried a white satin ring pillow.

The fathers of the bride and groom wore black short-waisted tuxedos and red rose boutonnieres.

The music and singing were provided by Chris Lafferty and his sister Sabrina Holbrook of Martin. The Maid of Honor also sang the "Lord's Prayer" during the ceremony.

The reception, which was continued in the Christmas theme, was held in the May Lodge at Jenny Wiley State Park, Prestonsburg, Kentucky. The couple took a honeymoon trip to Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. They then returned to the University of Louisville Dental School to continue their education in dentistry.

Working Social Security beneficiaries should check annual requirements

If you work and receive Social Security benefits, take a look now at your final 1991 W-2 forms. If your 1991 earnings are over Social Security's annual limits, you will need to report them to Social Security.

The 1991 earnings limits are $9,720 for beneficiaries who are age 65 through 69 and $7,080 for beneficiaries who are under 65. The earnings limits do not apply to people who are 70 and over the entire year.

We used your estimate of 1991 earnings submitted when you applied for benefits (or when you filed last year's earnings report) to figure out the Social Security benefits you would be paid in 1991. The purpose of this year's annual report is to enable us to compare your actual earnings to your estimate to see if you have been overpaid or underpaid. If you were underpaid, you will get a check for the additional benefits. If you were overpaid, we usually deduct the overpayment amount from your future benefits, unless you prefer to make a refund.

In addition, the report must also include an estimate of the earnings you expect to make in 1992. Again, your benefit check will be adjusted to reflect any excess earnings anticipated.

If our records show that you expected to have earnings over the 1991 limits, we will send you an Annual Report of Earnings form in the mail automatically. If you do not receive a report form by the end of February, you can call our toll-free number to have one sent to you. Instead of filling out the form, you can give us your earnings report over the phone if you choose.

You must return the earnings report to us by April 15. There is a substantial penalty for not filing an annual report of earnings on time. You can be penalized up to 1 full month's benefits for nonfiling, and also be required to repay any overpayment.

Filing a Federal income tax return does not take the place of filing an annual report with Social Security.

Note that the 1992 earnings limits are $7,440 for beneficiaries under 65 and $10,200 for beneficiaries who are 65-69.

To file an earnings report or get more information, call Social Security toll-free at 1-800-772-1213, or call the number listed in your local directory. The Big Sandy Area Social Security office is located on U. S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

Choose Your Weapon

February is National Heart Month

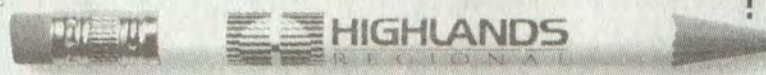

Heat disease is the leading cause of death in eastern Kentucky. It's also the leading cause of disability, pain, loss of income, back breaking health care costs and a heartbreaking toll on people and families. The real tragedy is that many of these can be avoided through prevention, early detection and early treatment.

Your best weapon is knowing what to do and acting on it. The free Heart Test on the right is a good way to start. So is a visit with your doctor to check your blood pressure, cholesterol, triglycerides and other factors. Then learn to recognize the early warning signs of heart attack:

- ♥ Recurring pain or tightening in the chest which occurs with exertion, but eases with rest. Often mistaken for heartburn or gas.
- ♥ Pain, pressure, fullness or squeezing in the chest for two minutes or more. This may radiate to neck, shoulders, arms, jaw or teeth. Often mistaken for indigestion.
- ♥ Shortness of breath, sweating, dizziness, nausea, vomiting and anxiety.

Not all signs occur at the same time in every heart attack, but if they do, don't delay, call your doctor or an Emergency Medical Service immediately. Minutes count.

This weapon is FREE!

THE HEART TEST

A RISK FACTOR ANALYSIS

It can help reduce your risk of heart disease.

Are you at risk for heart disease? The Heart Test can help you find out. It can tell you what risks you face and, most important, what you can do to reduce controllable heart risk factors. In other words, it may help save your life.

The Heart Test has been featured on ABC-TV's "20/20" and PBS-TV's "OK Heart." Now you can take it yourself. Simply complete this confidential questionnaire as accurately and honestly as possible and return it to us.

We'll analyze your answers and send you a personalized report that will tell you how you can change your lifestyle to increase your chances of remaining healthy and active as you reduce your risk of heart disease.

You, your doctor and the heart team at Highlands, working together, have a better chance of preventing or reducing the severity of a heart problem.

Fight Heart Disease

Stress Testing closely watches the heart when it is pushed to peak performance on an exercise machine. This can help doctors tell the kind and severity of a possible problem.

Echocardiography uses sound waves to create moving pictures of the heart in action and to measure its blood flow. By seeing valves and muscles at work, problems can be detected and measured.

Cardiac catheterization permits doctors to look at the tiny blood vessels that feed the heart muscle. Blockages in these vessels send a warning—heart attack! But we now have new ways to break up blockages before they kill.

Monitored exercise is prescribed for certain high risk or post-heart attack people to improve conditioning of body muscles, breathing, blood vessels and heart, enabling them to work harder and withstand exertion. Good physical condition helps lower risks.

Employment option

Prestonsburg's Department for Employment Services helped Michelle Hughes (center) find a job with the Harold Telephone Company. Also pictured are Georgia Hyden and Claude Ratliff, employees of the employment services.

Employment service matches great workers with great jobs

Where can businesses find good employees? The Department for Employment Services office is a great place to start. The Prestonsburg Department for Employment Services helped prepare Michelle Hughes for her position at the Harold Telephone Company.

Ms. Hughes utilized the Big Sandy Community Action Program and Department for Employment Services to obtain training funded by the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA). Then she worked at Employment Services, as well as an insurance agency, a coal-related company, and the David School before finding her current employment.

The Department for Employment Services staff, Ms. Hughes says, "really does help people," and that they "take time with everyone."

For more information about training, placements, or other employment related opportunities, contact the Prestonsburg office at 443 North Lake Drive, 886-2396, or the Salyersville office in Magoffin County Court House at 349-3120.

NFIB survey shows growing frustration of small business

The annual survey of the state's largest small business group shows considerable distrust toward a proposal put forth this month to solve the problem of uninsured workers in Kentucky and toward other state programs.

James E. Hammons, owner of J & L Equipment in Mt. Vernon, said it's time to level the playing field between the people who pay for health care and those who provide it, in the survey conducted by the National Federation of Independent Business/Kentucky.

"If the state is ready to regulate doctors and hospitals like they do my business, then I will support health (insurance) plans, but not until then," said Hammons. "I can hardly afford my own insurance, much less others."

Hammons was one of many who responded "no" when asked if the state should create a small-business health access corporation to provide coverage for firms with fewer than 24 employees. Hammons' sentiments were echoed by many respondents.

Louisville business owner Ronald Snyder said, "This access corporation would only create a new department and result in more corruption and wasted money." Marion Humphries, a jeweler in Russellville, added, "The health access corporation is not the way to solve the problem, you must focus on the greed of the entire health care industry."

Tom Underwood, NFIB/Kentucky state director, said that member comments this year expressed more displeasure than ever toward state initiatives. Health care was not the only target.

The state lottery system also provoked highly-charged and negative feedback. Eighty-two percent said they were not satisfied with the financial disclosure of the Kentucky Lottery Corporation. More than half said it has not benefited the state and 66 percent said lottery proceeds should benefit a specific program and not go to the general fund.

"The lottery and the state administration have done a very poor job of providing information as to how the money is spent," said Larry E. Rogers, owner of Dixie Schwinn Cyclery in Louisville.

Underwood said he expected comments that illustrated the impact of the recession and the difficulty business owners have meeting the rising costs of running a business while faced with lower revenues. But he wasn't fully prepared for the high degree of cynicism expressed in the survey.

"This (survey) shows that small business has all but lost the faith in state government," said Underwood.

"What we're looking for is leadership and accountability, and hopefully the '92 session will prove these qualities still exist."

Job Opportunities

Highlands lab granted renewal by AABB

Quality counts

Dr. John Boswell, right medical director of Highlands Clinical Laboratory and Don Hick, left, technical director of the Lab, review all work to assure quality service to patients

The Clinical Laboratory at Highlands Regional Medical Center has been granted renewal accreditation by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB), according to John Boswell, M.D., pathologist and medical director of the Laboratory.

Accreditation follows an intensive on-site inspection by specially trained representatives of the Association and establishes that the level of medical, technical and administrative performance within the facility meets or exceeds the rigorous standards set by the AABB. By successfully meeting those requirements, Highlands Clinical Laboratory joins more than 2,200 similar facilities across the United States and abroad that have earned the Accreditation rating and recognition.

Dr. Boswell explained: "The AABB's inspection and accreditation procedures are voluntary. It is not legally necessary for a blood bank or transfusion service to be accredited, but our laboratory sought accreditation because it represents a level of professional and medical expertise that meets and exceeds government regulations. The primary goal of the program is to assist laboratories like ours to achieve excellence, and thus provide higher quality blood, blood components and other services to patients."

Highlands Laboratory is staffed by a team of 14 highly qualified technologists, medical lab technicians and lab assistants (some staff members have over 20 years of experience in the field.) Work is continually reviewed by the technical lab director and the medical director.

Voluntary Clinical Laboratory accreditation is part of Highlands ongoing commitment to provide quality health care services to eastern Kentucky.

Retired teachers are needed for part-time work

A Louisville company is recruiting retired teachers for part-time, temporary positions.

Advanced Systems in Measurement & Evaluation, Inc. has 60-70 vacant slots for test facilitators who will assist in statewide student assessment between March 17 and May 22.

Facilitators will travel to elementary and secondary schools to administer performance events testing. Individuals selected will divide students into work groups; ensure that testing materials are available; collect test papers or test products; set up equipment and format for testing; and record test results according to approved standards.

Daytime travel is required within an assigned geographical location. Compensation will be at a per diem rate of $60 plus travel expense.

Preference will be given to those individuals with a Bachelor's degree, although a minimum of a high school diploma or its equivalent supplemented by applicable work experience may be considered.

Interested retired teachers should call 1-800-573-2324 for more information.

Porter attends Photography Institute

"Advanced Portraiture" was the subject of a week long course recently attended by Steven G. Porter of Porter Studio in Prestonsburg. This comprehensive course was targeted for experienced studio owners who wish to improve their artistic and business skills necessary to operate a successful portrait business.

Professional photographers from all over the world travel to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to attend Triangle Institute held in January each year. The institute attracts up to 350 students—and offers at least 20 photographic courses ranging from advanced photography, computers in the studio, and retouching, P.P. of A., the world's oldest and largest association for Professional Photographers, has helped photographers worldwide grow professionally through its educational services.

The highlight of the week was a banquet sponsored by Eastman

Kodak, where each student received credit toward his or her "Master of Photography" Degree.
