Turkey Creek man apparently murdered :

Death ruled a homicide

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Police officials are conducting a homicide investigation into the death of a 72-year-old Floyd County man who died Wednesday at his home at Turkey Creek.

Floyd County Roger Nelson said Thursday evening that a preliminary autopsy indicated that Simson W. Smith died as a result of blunt force trauma.

"The case is being investigated as a homicide," Nelson said Thursday. "We are not releasing the details of the preliminary findings while the case is being investigated."

Floyd County Sheriff's deputies and Kentucky State Police were notified of Smith's death Wednesday afternoon when an ambulance crew responded to the scene.

Smith's wife Brenda, 21, told officers that she had found her husband injured and lying beside the road near their home early Wednesday morning, said chief deputy Linzie Hunt. The wife told officials her husband had left their home at approximately midnight Tuesday, Hunt added.

Nelson called the death "suspicious" and the body was sent to Lexington where an autopsy was performed Thursday. Nelson declined to discuss specifics of the case, but said Smith's body had "numerous abrasions, contusions and bruises." He listed the time of death at approximately 3:45 p.m.

In a statement released by state police, Smith had apparently "sustained several injuries sometime during (Tuesday) night."

Smith had apparently refused his wife's request that he be treated at a hospital, Hunt said.

"She said she tried to get him to see a doctor two or three times, but he refused," Hunt said. "She had left the home Wednesday morning to run some errands. She came back around noon and asked him again. He wouldn't go. She said she then took a nap and awoke around 2 p.m. or 3 p.m. and found him unconscious. She went to a neighbor's house to call the ambulance. When the crew got there, they notified the sheriff's office that he was dead."

The case is under investigation by KSP detective Lee Weddington, trooper Mike Thorpe, sheriff's deputy Hunt and the coroner.

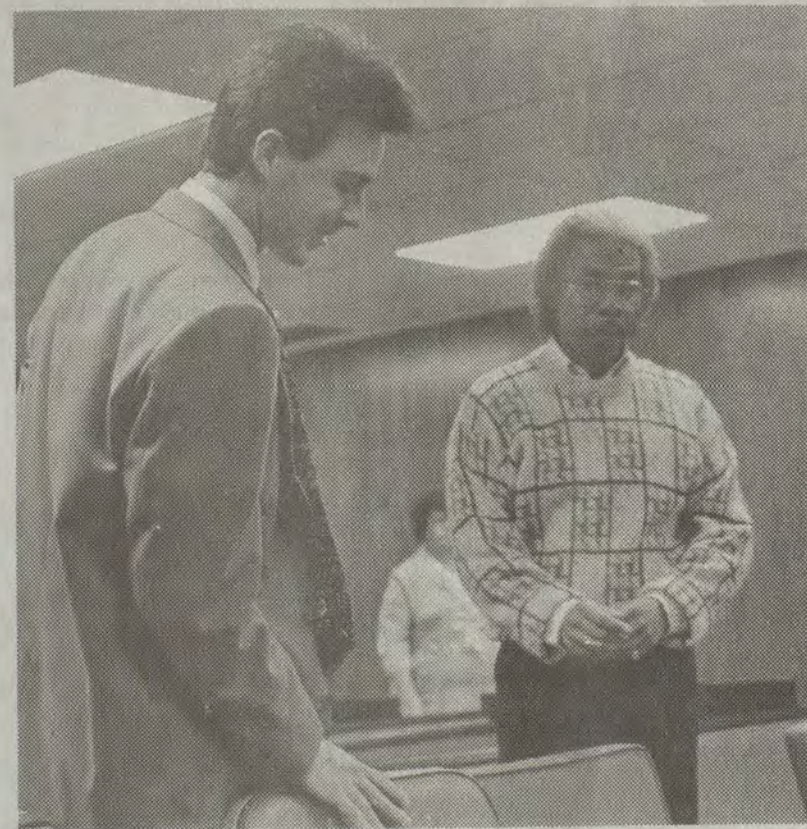

Campers sought for Sheriff's Ranch

Applications are being accepted at the Floyd County Sheriff's Office for the Kentucky Sheriff's Association Boys and Girls Ranch.

The boys' camp will be held from June 21 to June 26. The girls' camp is scheduled from July 12 to July 17.

A variety of activities include swimming lessons, water safety, arts and crafts and camping skills.

For more information or an application call the sheriff's office at 886-6711 or 1-800-834-5430.

July 30 trial set

Near Maytown :

Fear builds as road crumbles

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Floyd Countians living at Wilson Creek in Maytown are afraid. Afraid that one day soon, they, or their children, may not make it home in one piece, if they make it home at all.

The cause of these fears is a relatively small section of the dangerously narrow Wilson Creek Road that is crumbling. That section of the road crosses a culvert that leads into Wilson Creek. When the creek flooded a few months ago, part of the earth underneath the road was washed away, leaving only a thin layer of unsupported blacktop. That layer continues to disintegrate, falling into the creek in huge chunks.

Although concerned citizens have made numerous complaints to the Kentucky Highway Department at Allen since the road washed out four months ago, they say the highway department has yet to respond.

"I've called several times, and they just keep telling me to call someone else in the department," Denise Queen, a Wilson Creek resident, said. "Several other people have also called, and were told the same thing. I'm afraid that it's going to take someone getting hurt before (officials at the highway department) do anything."

Ina Hensley, who lives in front of the damaged section of road, agrees. "They're going to wait until somebody gets killed," Hensley said. "I've called and called, and they won't do anything."

"Somebody's going to wreck there soon," Queen said. "I just hope it isn't a schoolbus. The road is barely wide enough for the bus now."

Dickie Stumbo, a spokesman for the highway department, said that he understood Queen's concerns, and that the department would repair the road soon. He just wasn't sure when.

Eight witnesses subpoenaed by state :

Removal hearing is slated

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Proceedings will begin Monday in Frankfort to determine if former Floyd County superintendent Ron Hager should be removed from office.

Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen charged Hager with willful neglect of duty and misconduct in office in March. Hager was suspended from his job by the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education after an April 10 hearing.

A three-member panel of state board members will hear evidence from the state's Office of Education Accountability whose investigation into the district led to the charges being filed against Hager. The state board has subpoenaed eight witness from Floyd County to testify.

At Monday's hearing, Hager will have the opportunity to call witnesses to testify on his behalf.

The hearing is expected to last at least two days. After the panel reviews the testimony, they will make their recommendation to the state board for a decision.

Hager is charged with filing false annual financial reports; with allowing an illegal bingo game to be conducted at Prestonsburg High School; with placing school construction monies into non-interest bearing accounts at First Guaranty National Bank; with failing to reprimand Martin Elementary principal William Hughes for allegedly filing false annual financial reports; and with failing to follow proper state bidding procedures in awarding school security contracts.

July trial date set for Job Corps counselor

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County District Judge Danny Caudill set a July 30 trial date Wednesday for a Job Corps counselor accused of soliciting the beating of a student at the center.

Clarence Trammell Jr., 52, appeared in district court Wednesday for a pre-trial hearing on two misdemeanor charges of criminal solicitation and criminal facilitation in connection with the beating of a 16-year-old student on January 11.

Trammell's attorney, Keith Bartley, told the judge his client would waive the pre-trial hearing and asked that a trial date be set. Bartley also complained to the judge that the county attorney's office had not provided him with information concerning the case.

Assistant county attorney Bob Bishop handed over the case file to Bartley just before court was called into session.

Judge Caudill directed the prosecution to provide the defense with all records by May 16. Bishop noted that additional interviews of Job Corps staff would be taken, possibly after May 16.

Bartley asked, if the information was gathered after May 16, that he be provided with the information 10 days prior to the trial date. Bishop agreed.

Trammell, who was a counselor at the center, is accused of ordering six Job Corps students to attack 16-year-old David Garcia on January 11. After Trammell's arrest, officials learned Trammell had been convicted of first degree murder in connection with a 1964 shooting incident in New York City. Trammell spent 18 years in Attica Prison on that conviction. He was paroled in 1984 and released from parole in 1988. He was initially hired at the center in 1986 as a supervisor of the boy's dormitory.

Public gets chance to meet superintendent hopefuls

Floyd Countians will have the opportunity Friday and Saturday to meet the eight candidates for the position of superintendent of schools at May Lodge and the Jenny Wiley Convention Center.

The first chance for the public to talk to the candidates is Friday (today) at a noon luncheon sponsored by the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce at May Lodge.

On Saturday candidates will be part of a public forum sponsored by the Floyd County Education Forum and the Floyd County Education Association at 8 p.m. at the convention center.

Courtroom crisis may finally be resolved

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

An announcement is expected today, Friday, from the region's Public Advocacy office that should be good news to Floyd County's accused.

David Williams, director of the Pikeville office, said Thursday that he hopes to be able to announce the placement of two public defenders in Floyd County's circuit court system.

"We've already placed a full-time public defender in the district court system of Floyd County," Williams said. "Cynthia Mulligan was hired a week to 10 days ago to work three days a week in Floyd County. We are now in the process of securing two supplemental public advocates to handle the circuit court cases."

Floyd County's judicial system was thrown into a quandary when then public defender Danny Caudill was appointed to the district judge's seat to replace Harold Stumbo who was elected circuit court judge.

Judge Stumbo complained several weeks ago that the lack of a public advocate had put the lives of persons in jail on hold, sometimes for several months.

Stumbo said the delays in the dispositions of those cases violated the prisoners' constitutional rights. Williams agreed with Stumbo's analysis, but added that a cut in the department's funding had made it difficult to attract qualified lawyers to serve as public defenders.

Williams said Thursday that Stumbo was upset at the delay in appointing an advocate in circuit court, but the recent shuffling of judicial positions had caused the predicament.

"The Public Advocacy office didn't create the problem," Williams said. "I'm sure the judge knows we've made more than a good faith effort (to fill the position)."

The candidates will also meet with local educators Friday evening at 7 p.m. at May Lodge.

The Floyd County Board of Education will meet in special session Saturday to interview the candidates. After the weekend interviews, the board will pare the list to five. When the board agrees on their top choice, the name will be submitted to Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen for approval.

An informal agreement was reached Tuesday between the board and Boysen to let the commissioner approve the board's choice for superintendent.

Wilson Creek worries

Wilson Creek residents are trying to get state highway officials to repair their crumbling road. Residents fear the eroding roadway will give under the weight of vehicles, such as this school bus. State officials said the road will be repaired, but no date has been set for work to begin. (photo by Geoff Belcher)

Congressional candidates square off :

Issues discussed at public forum

Note: The following is reprinted with permission from The Courier-Journal.

by John Voskuhl
Courier-Journal

All but one of the top six Democrats running for Congress in Southeast Kentucky's new 5th District would support federal legislation to allow abortion if the U.S. Supreme Court overturns Roe vs Wade this year.

All but two of them favored amending the U.S. Constitution to require that Congress balance each federal budget.

Only one would favor reducing the federal tax on capital gains.

Those differences—or lack of them—came to light Tuesday night during a forum sponsored by the Somerset-Pulaski County Chamber of Commerce. Appearing were N.P. Bingham, a Harlan auto dealer; Carol Brown Hubbard, wife of U.S. Representative Carroll Hubbard of West Kentucky's 1st District; Jerry Cecil, a Hazel Green farmer; John Doug Hays, a Pikeville lawyer; Ned Pillersdorf, a Prestonsburg Lawyer; and Bobby Rowe, also a Prestonsburg lawyer. Many of the candidates said the event provided the most substantive exchange of views of the campaign.

If also provided an occasion for some jabs.

Pillersdorf criticized Hubbard, who has raised thousands of dollars from individuals and political action committees involved in the bank trade. Her husband is a ranking member of the House Banking Committee.

"Is this a coincidence?" Pillersdorf asked. Hubbard did not respond during the forum but said later that neither she nor her husband had been "bought off" by any contributions.

Nonetheless, Pillersdorf noted that he could solicit contributions from people who have cases before his wife, Judge Janet Stumbo of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, but hasn't. Such solicitations are "unethical," he said.

Pillersdorf also had a heated exchange with Hays. He said Hays' law firm represented insurance companies, after implying that health insurers had gouged and discriminated against the public for years.

Hays countered that Pillersdorf represents "murderers, thieves, rapists, thugs and drug dealers."

In response, Pillersdorf hinted that Hays has represented a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Hays said yesterday that he is currently representing a man accused of child molestation who has claimed to be a former member of the Klan.

Meanwhile, back to the issues.

Only Cecil said he was opposed to abortion except in cases of rape or incest or when a full-term pregnancy and childbirth would harm the health of the mother.

Cecil, who has described himself as conservative, and Pillersdorf, who is perhaps the most liberal, joined in denouncing a proposed constitutional amendment to require that the federal budget be balanced.

Pillersdorf said Congress can and should balance the budget without such an amendment.

Only Bingham favored reducing the capital-gains tax, saying it would spur private investment and stimulate the weak national economy. Others attacked the proposal as an unfair benefit for the rich.

On health issues, Pillersdorf called for creating a national agency to administer all health insurance—to be paid for by an increase in federal income taxes.

Rowe said he supports creating a system of "flexible premiums" under which the cost of guaranteed health insurance would be decided by a national board in accordance with each applicant's ability to pay.

Hubbard called the private health-insurance system "unbelievably ineffective" and suggested that the federal government could do a better job of administering health care. But she provided no specific proposal.

Bingham, Cecil and Hays called for more study of the issue.

On other issues, Bingham, Hays, Pillersdorf and Rowe favored term limitations of some kind for Congress. Hubbard and Cecil noted that the public can already limit congressional terms by voting out undesirables.

Pillersdorf called for revising the federal income-tax code to eliminate tax shelters and establish only two tax rates—6 percent for people with lower incomes and 20 percent for people with higher incomes. He said the rates, though far lower than those now in use, would be fairer if special deductions that tend to favor the rich were eliminated.

Hays called for a 10 percent income-tax cut for the middle class, and Rowe called for an unspecified tax cut for the middle class, coupled with a change that would allow people to deduct interest paid on consumer loans.

The candidates were also asked for their proposals for spending money from the "peace dividend"—budget savings from reduced military expenditures. Projected savings have generally been between $50 billion and $100 billion.

Cecil said any savings should be applied toward the federal deficit, while Hubbard said at least half should be. Hays said the money should be used to spur investment through tax incentives and other programs.

"Get this economy moving and the deficit will take care of itself," he said.

Rowe said at least half the money should go into "job creation," while half should be applied to the deficit.

Pillersdorf called for increasing the funding of the Appalachian Regional Commission from $200 million a year to $800 million—and passing much of that money onto the region through public-works projects.

Two other Democrats are running in the May 26 primary. Logan Turner of Jackson and Steve Maynard of Inez, did not attend the forum. Neither has appeared frequently at campaign events.

The winner of the Democratic primary May 26 will face incumbent Representative Harold "Hal" Rogers, who is unopposed in the Republican primary.

All bets are still off at local racing facility

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Floyd Countians wishing to participate in inter track wagering at Prestonsburg businessman Clyde Woods' Center Stage/Kentucky Downs nightclub can now—wait just a little while longer.

The newly-formed Kentucky Racing Commission has suspended all wagering at the club until Attorney General Chris Gorman issues an official opinion stating whether or not Kentucky Downs meets the qualifications necessary to make wagering legal.

"We're just responding to concerns that wagering (at Kentucky Downs) would be illegal, since the track hasn't been built yet," Mike Fulkerson, a member of the commission, said on Thursday. "We asked the attorney general to decide the dispute, so that all questions could be put to rest." Fulkerson said that the commission had no desire to disrupt Woods' business, or to delay harness racing in Eastern Kentucky.

According to Woods, however, the commission neglected to ask for the attorney general's opinion until Monday of this week, rather than several weeks ago, when Woods was first informed that no wagering would be allowed at his club.

"This should've all been over with a long time ago," Woods said. "Instead, they waited until Monday to ask the attorney general to settle it."

A spokesperson for the attorney general said that Gorman was giving the matter careful consideration, and would issue his official opinion as soon as possible.

Although Woods attended the racing commission's regular meeting on Wednesday, May 5, since his case was not on the commission's agenda for the meeting, he was unable to voice his concerns. However, the commission will hear him in a special meeting on Thursday, May 14.

"Just wait until next Thursday," Woods said. "Then, there will be plenty to talk about."

State Officials, Local Communities Salute EMS Workers

Operating on a shoestring budget. Facing the worst tragedies of the community day after day. Saving lives.

This describes the routine of the majority of Kentucky's 307 ambulance services, the core of the state's emergency medical services (EMS).

While most people rarely think about the services that emergency personnel provide to the community — until they are in a crisis — state Department for Health Services officials are saluting the emergency medical system during Emergency Medical Services Week, May 10-16, in Kentucky.

Randy Warner, EMS advisor in the 31-county northeast Kentucky area, says that the 2,900 emergency medical technicians (EMTs) and other members of the emergency response team in his area deserve the recognition and support of the communities they serve.

"These are people who are on the front lines of facing the disasters, the most tragic situations and the most critical accidents in our communities," Warner said. "They often do this for minimum wage or, in many cases, on a volunteer basis."

"They provide Kentuckians with much more than the fastest transportation to a hospital," he said. "They provide the stabilizing, first-response medical care that can make the difference in life and death."

Warner emphasizes that the best response to emergency situations is handled by a team working together.

"Most obvious are the EMTs and paramedics who are the first responders to the emergency," he said. "But the team also consists of the dispatcher who gets first notice of an accident to the emergency room physicians, nurses and technicians who actually treat the victims."

Warner is a Department for Health Services EMS advisor stationed in Rowan County. He is one of four advisors statewide who help local EMS providers with training needs, technical questions and obtaining grant money.

In the 31 northeast Kentucky counties, 107 ambulance services with 2,876 EMTs made 118,783 ambulance runs to the region's 25 hospitals last year.

"Many services — especially ones located in rural areas — have a difficult time finding the training needed to receive or maintain their EMT certification," he said. "One of the main functions of the advisor is to help identify and arrange training for emergency personnel."

"Emergency medical services want to be available at critical times," he said. "But they also want the community at large to know about the live-saving work they do daily."

For more information about emergency medical services in Kentucky, contact Warner at (606) 784-3042. His address is 222 Medical Circle Drive, Morehead, KY 40351.

Pikeville College musicians: reunion scheduled for May 9-10

Former Pikeville College music majors and former members of the Pikeville College Choir and Band are invited to a special music alumni reunion during Alumni/Senior Week-end May 8-10 at the College.

"We would like not only music majors, but anyone who was involved in music at Pikeville College to join us in this special reunion," said Jerry Waddell, a member of the Class of '76. "We'll reminisce and even make some music during the weekend. It should be a lot of fun."

The music alumni will have special seating at the Alumni/Senior Banquet Friday, May 8, and alumni will perform at various events throughout the weekend.

The music alumni will get together on May 9 at 5 p.m. for special banquet in the College Cafeteria, and on Sunday, May 10, will gather for a Music Majors' Picnic at W.C. Hambley Park at 1:30 p.m.

For more information about these events, contact the Pikeville College Office of External Affairs at (606) 432-9326.

Community blood donors help with Floyd blood drive

In the month of April, 123 people from Bank Josephine, First Commonwealth Bank, Music, Carter & Hughes, Carter-Hughes Toyota, Mountain Manor, Riverview Manor Nursing Home and the Floyd County Community volunteered to donate blood at the Prestonsburg Donor Center located at the Municipal building on North Lake Drive in Prestonsburg. Contributing to the success of the drives were Donna Roope, Debbie Hoskins, Norma Wright, Brad Hughes, Charlotte Stone and Linda Everage who served as drive coordinators. The Floyd County Blood Program is greatly aided by the community support of these groups.

Letters

Editor:

As representatives of the Kentucky Council on Child Abuse, Inc. (KCCA), we feel compelled to respond to the situation reported at Wheelwright High School, and to the numerous letters to the editor that have appeared in the past few weeks.

First, and most importantly, the law (KRS 620.010620.050) mandates that a report of "suspected" child abuse be made to the Department for Social Services. We would like to commend the person who made that report. We are sure it would have been much more comfortable for the person to have ignored that mandate.

Second, we would like to commend the Floyd County Attorney, Jim Hammond, for doing his job with courage. He must have felt strongly about the evidence to have considered prosecution in this case. We're sure he gave thoughtful consideration to the ramifications of bringing such a charge to light.

Third, as child advocates, we would like to share with you and your readers a few things we have learned about child sexual abuse perpetrators: They are good people doing good jobs. They are rich. They are poor. They are of both sexes, all ages, all classes, all races, all religions, all ethnic groups, all levels of employment status. We cannot tell who they are by talking to them, working with them, or looking at them. Sometimes they fool the brightest among us; sometimes they are the brightest among us. Child sexual abuse thrives under a cloak of secrecy and denial.

Finally, we would like to respond to Ms. Carol Stumbo's comment on "democracy" published in the letter to the editor in the March 25 issue of the Floyd County Times. Child sexual abuse flourishes in our democracy. During the democratic process, child victims are revictimized because, frankly, we would rather not believe their accounts of abuse. Democracy is a concept which connotes many abstract ideas for each of us and should include all of us. Ms. Stumbo would like for us to reserve our judgment on behalf of the principal involved. We are suggesting that judgment be reserved on behalf of the student and the principal. This child deserves her day in court as well. Enough has been done to punish her for even daring to come forth and make a disclosure in this case.

An attorney recently commented on this situation by saying "you can't legislate human behavior." Until we recognize that children have rights too, already legislated through the same Bill of Rights, Constitution, and democratic process we so quickly point to for protection of our rights as adults, we suppose there will be those who will continue to exploit the vulnerability of children.

We hope that everyone reading this letter will reflect on the effect this reaction by the Wheelwright High School faculty and student body may have had on abused children who will need our support in the future. We shudder to think of the child too intimidated to make a disclosure and the perpetrator who will take advantage of that fear.

Editor:

My name is Stephanie Little and I am a senior at Wheelwright High School. Our journalism class has been working on Earth Day. Earth Day is a tradition that Wheelwright High School takes part in every year. Our journalism class is also part of the "adopt a highway" program. We take pride in trying to clean up our community so that it will be a better place to live in.

We have divided our class into two groups. Each group will do various work at Wheelwright High School, Melvin Elementary and Osborne Elementary. We also work on cleaning up litter on the highway, two miles above the high school. In order to clean up the community, the group must select one form of pollution that it will work on. Our groups chose air pollution. I feel that every type of pollution hurts the air in some way. Trees, for example, are important to the environment. The public uses trees for many different things, mostly for paper and, of course, in order to breathe. If people recycled their Sunday newspapers, over 500,000 trees could be saved every week. That is an entire forest. I feel that the public doesn't realize that trees are our main source of oxygen. Once they're gone, sure we could plant more, but it takes a tree quite a long time to get fully grown. After the tree is grown, it will probably be cut down just like all of the other ones. Only God can make a tree, but everyone can plant one.

I know that recycling aluminum cans is a popular way to make a little money in Floyd County. What everyone doesn't know is recycling aluminum cuts related air pollution by 85 percent. The hole in the ozone layer grows larger everyday. The use of aerosol products destroys our environment. If everyone would just stop and think about the shape that this world is in, then maybe we could try and fix it. If you just have to travel down the street don't drive, try walking. That is one of the best ways to rid ourselves of air pollution. If the public doesn't start taking air pollution more seriously, pretty soon we won't have any air to breathe. Our group feels that we are doing something to benefit not only us, but the whole community as well.

I'm a former resident (21 years) of Floyd County and I take tremendous pride in being from Eastern Kentucky. During the past 21 years I have lived in Cincinnati and have had few opportunities to return home.

During the week of April 27, I returned home for the funeral of my mother-in-law, Versa Turner, who has lived in Cincinnati the past 14 years. Although we have been gone for such a long time, Hall Brothers Funeral Home treated us as if we had never left.

Hall Brothers went the extra mile to make this most difficult period as easy as possible. The feeling of family and professionalism exhibited by Hall Brothers is special and Floyd County can be grateful for their presence.

I would also like to say a special thank you to the singers in the service and to Jerry Manns for his words of comfort.

Editorial:

Who's to blame?

by Scott Perry

There are three sides, they say, to every story.

Yours, mine...and the truth.

The finger pointing in the aftermath of the Los Angeles riots bears out this theory.

Liberals are placing the blame squarely on the shoulders of our conservative White House, suggesting presidents Reagan and Bush have ignored the needs of the needy.

Conservatives are blaming the failed War on Poverty and its supporting welfare programs for pushing the poor into a rut and keeping them there.

Somebody has to take the blame, right?

It's mighty convenient to blame society's ills on the politicians. That way we don't have to admit the truth...that the politicians are nothing more than our own reflections in the cesspool.

We would all do well to quit trying to find someone guilty and realize that none of us are innocent.

Tax Fairness and Tax Facts for the Average American Family

by Dan Witt

In the tax arena, "tax fairness" is the label put on a variety of acrimonious charges Republicans and Democrats exchange as they probe for weaknesses to exploit during this presidential election year.

The usual accusation is that the tax code is unfair because the percentage of taxes paid by different income classes has changed dramatically. After all, we have had so many major tax bills passed in the last decade, it does seem to make sense that the balance of the tax burden would shift. Some say the middle class has borne the brunt of higher taxes, and a glance at how sharply Social Security taxes have risen seems to bear this out.

Just as often, we hear that the poor got the worst of the 1980s—higher excise and sales taxes are usually the culprit here. And although the average person probably has little sympathy for the tax troubles of wealthier Americans, the 1980s saw the demise of hundreds of tax incentives, and the decade ended with the creation of a new, higher income tax rate for approximately the top 2 percent of taxpayers.

Has the tax code been fair to anyone? The simplest answer is no—everyone is paying higher taxes. Total taxes nationwide were 35.1 percent of national income in 1991, the largest portion of the economy to be commanded by the government in U.S. history.

Of course, it's only human nature to see taxes that fall on someone else as more fair than the ones that hurt us personally. But to whom should taxes be "more fair"? Throughout the country, a growing concern about the plight of the American middle-class family has stimulated a number of studies to see how this demographic sector is faring taxwise.

The news is discouraging. Accelerating federal taxes combined with inflation to make a typical American family $362 poorer in 1991 than in 1990. This $362 loss in real income comes on the heels of a loss in purchasing power in two of the three prior years, for a total loss of $695 since 1988. The family made its biggest gains in the mid-1980s when real income rose an average of $768 per year between 1982 and 1987.

President Bush's recently released budget does contain several proposals to reduce taxes, including a higher personal exemption for dependent children, a tax preference for capital gains and a generous credit for first-time home purchases. But the federal budget's bottom line for the typical American family is that the tax burden will be higher than ever—$16,608 in federal taxes alone. That's more than 30 cents out of every dollar earned—and that doesn't count state or local taxes.

Some lawmakers regularly cite middle-class tax relief and the need for new programs when calling for higher taxes on top earners, but this "class warfare" tax policy that plays the rich against the middle class inevitably ends up with everyone losing. For example, imposing higher tax rates on just the top 10 percent of taxpayers—the group that is already paying 54 percent of our personal income taxes—would hit couples with an adjusted gross income of $61,780, an income level which hardly qualifies for "fat-cat" status.

Rather than raise taxes on "the other guy" to make taxes more fair, let's lower them for all income classes. The more disposable income that citizens at all salary levels have, the more freedom they will have to reach their personal goals. Of course, that means government will have to do with less, but if the American family can tighten its belt for several years running, government can give it a try as well.

Dan Witt is executive director of the Tax Foundation, a non-profit, non-partisan research and public education organization that has been monitoring tax fiscal activities at all levels of government since 1937.

Earth Day at David School

Earth Day was recognized by the student body and staff of the David School by picking up garbage on Route 404, for over 2 miles. With the garbage collection in March, a total of 325 bags were collected. A tree was donated by Hensley's Nursery of Prestonsburg and Hazard and was planted at the future site of the new school. Earth Day festivities concluded with an intramural baseball game.

Jody Conley releases single

by Beth Jones
You may know his voice from many various sources. He's a member of the Kentucky Opry; he is "not-Tom Bodet"; he is the voice of "Favorite Son." He is Jody Conley. Mr. Conley is a native of Paintsville, Kentucky. He has been a professional musician for several years; presently, he is a member of the Kentucky Opry. He was one of the original members of the troupe along with Keith Caudill, Raetta Damron, James Whited, and Misty Daniels. "When we first started out, we didn't have any money. There was just five of us, and we worked really hard. But we had fun. We have more fun now, though," he said.

Jody feels that the success of the Kentucky Opry will peak when they get their own building to play in. He also thinks this summer will be big for the Opry. The group will be playing at the Jenny Wiley Amphitheater every Monday night, beginning June 22.

Jody is also the voice of "not-Tom Bodet" in the commercials for Simple Dreams Recording. "This," he said, "began as a joke. It's gone over well, though." He along with Will Freebody, write the jingles. "It takes an idiot to write one of those things," he said with a laugh. Idiot or not, the commercials are very popular.

"Favorite Son" is a single that Conley recently recorded. The song, written by Bill Hall, is a tribute to the late Sheriff Gene Cyrus. Since its release, "Favorite Son" has sold several thousand copies. The emotion-filled song is being played throughout Eastern Kentucky and is expected to be released in all parts of the state. It can be purchased at many stores, such as Jim's Stop and Shop and Paintsville Sundry Store.

Jody will be releasing a four-song album in the next month. As well, he and Bill Hall are going to Nashville in hopes of selling a song. He will also be playing with the Kentucky Opry at all of their shows across the state.

Jody Conley is a man who has high hopes for his future. He loves music and plans to continue playing forever. If his dreams come true, he'll soon be writing and producing his own songs. If enthusiasm and hard work pay off, Mr. Conley will achieve all his goals.

Fourth Annual Kentucky Vietnam Veterans Reunion

The Fourth Annual Kentucky Vietnam Veterans Reunion is scheduled for May 15-17, in Frankfort, at the Capital Plaza adjacent to the Holiday Inn. Activities honoring 1992 as the Year of the Vietnam Veteran, the Kentucky Bicentennial and Armed Forces Day (May 16) will be featured.

The designation of 1992 as the Year of the Vietnam Veteran marks the 20th anniversary of the last fighting troops to leave Vietnam and the 10th anniversary of the dedication of "The Wall" in Washington, D. C.

Highlights of the reunion will include a tribute to veterans from WWI to Operations Desert Storm, services at the Kentucky Vietnam Veterans Memorial, a POW/MIA ceremony and tours of Bicentennial exhibits including military history displays dating back to the Civil War.

Other reunion activities will feature helicopter maneuvers, live entertainment and veteran information booths. An Earth Day celebration will also be occurring next to the reunion site. All reunion events are free and open to the public.

A Senator For All The People

Benny Ray Bailey was born and raised in East Kentucky, on Left Beaver Creek, at McDowell, in Floyd County. Benny Ray graduated from McDowell High School, Alice Lloyd College, Pikeville College, received the M.S. degree from Indiana State University and the Ph.D. from Ohio University. Benny Ray taught school at Prestonsburg and Wheelwright High School and at Alice Floyd College.

Benny Ray is married to Nikki Rieck, has four sons, Malcolm Glenn, Benny Ray, Chet Daniel, and Steven Paul; a daughter-in-law, Susan Justice, and one granddaughter, Courtney. He has lived in East Kentucky all his life and represented the 29th Senatorial District in the Kentucky State Senate since 1980.

"I believe government service is one way that I can serve my people, to try and make sure that the needs and concerns of our people are considered in every decision made in Frankfort. I don't believe any one person can take credit for all things but that a state legislator must reflect the views, concerns and ideas of the people they represent. I have tried to do just that and stand up for our people and our way of life."

What do the independent newspapers of Kentucky say of Benny Ray's tenure in Frankfort? "Outstanding Freshman Legislator, 1980"; "one of the brightest members of the upper Chamber," the Kentucky Post; "thanks to the people of 'his' district for sending such a qualified man to Frankfort," the Lexington Leader; "East Kentucky's most intelligent and influential member of the Legislature," the Kentucky Post; "arguably has had more influence on human service programs in this state than anyone in the past decade," Associated Press.

Kentucky's independent newspapers have found out what people in East Kentucky knew all along. Benny Ray Bailey has the academic training and commitment to improvement of his area that is so necessary in all our elected officials. That's why Benny Ray has earned the respect of the news media; that's why he has been able to accomplish so much for his people and that's why we need to keep him in Frankfort. Benny Ray Bailey for State Senator—it's a vote for you.

Highlands cancer committee update

The American Cancer Society has designated May as "Skin Cancer Awareness Month." Skin cancer attacks one in six Americans each year (about 450,000 people). This year it is projected that 32,000 people will be diagnosed with Malignant Melanoma (the most deadly skin cancer) and one-sixth of these people will die.

Now for the good news, skin cancer is the most easily detectable, curable, and preventable of all cancers. Highlands Cancer Committee reminds you that with a few precautions your outdoor fun in the sun will not cause you problems later.

These problems often occur when people striving to "look beautiful" go to extremes trying to achieve the perfect tan. As teenagers and young adults expose their skin to the damaging rays of the sun and tanning beds, they don't realize that in 10 to 20 years the effects may place them in a battle for their lives.

Doctors have proven that skin damage usually occurs before the age of 20 (50 - 60% of lifetime sun exposure occurs before age 18). A light tan makes all of us feel more attractive, but repeated exposure can cause skin to lose its elasticity and look prematurely old, wrinkled, and leathery, and increase the risk for skin cancer.

There are three known types of skin cancer: Basal Cell Carcinoma, Squamous Cell Carcinoma, and Malignant Melanoma.

According to recent medical statistics, the incidence of malignant melanoma is increasing at a rate greater than that of any other cancer. One in 105 Americans will be diagnosed with Melanoma this year. It appears as a flat or raised dark brown or black patch of skin cancer. It will spread to other parts of the body, and cause death if not treated early. Treatment of Melanoma requires more extensive surgery than other skin cancers.

Highlands has treated cases of Melanoma in people ages 22 to 78. Dr. John Boswell, Highlands Pathologist, stated that he expected to see a trend of increased cases of skin cancer occurring in younger people over the next few years.

Basal Cell Carcinoma and Squamous Cell Carcinoma are the most common skin cancers. They may be red and flat, pearly, raised car-like, bleed easily, crusty, scaly, or firm growth. These cancers are easiest to treat when detected early and usually cause no future problems.

The second greatest hazard to healthy skin is exposure to nicotine. Smoking or being in smoke-filled rooms will cause damage to skin.

Highlands Cancer Committee recommends that you watch for any rough, raised, brown or black areas of skin which develop with one side different from the other, or have ragged, notched, or blurred edges. If you have a blemish or "mole" which has uneven color (tan, brown, black, red, white, or blue), or has increased in size, or a "sore" that will not heal, please have it checked by your family physician.

Be aware, be protected, and have fun in the sun. To receive information on skin cancer or other forms of cancer, please call the Public Information Office at Highlands Regional Medical Center at 1-800-533-4762 or 886-8511 ext 286.

In the vocal solo competition Denise Campbell and Leah Laferty, both of Highland Avenue, were winners. Also competing were Paige Tussey of Highland Avenue, Patricia Baldrige of Martin and Marissa Spencer of Auxier.

Living memorials

Carter Funeral Home of Prestonsburg has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Kentucky.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Kentucky.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by James J. Carter II of the Carter Funeral Home. When the Old Kentucky Home Boy Scouts have planted the tree, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

Patricia Baldrige of Martin won the flute solo competition and the piano solo; Julie Campbell of Highland Avenue also won the piano solo competition.

In the art category, winners included Mashanna Austin of Highland, Kent Leedy of Betsy Layne, and Clint Hunt of Betsy Layne. Austin and Leedy submitted drawings and Hunt entered poetry in the event.

District winners will represent Floyd County in state competition in Lexington on May 16.

Bible category winners

Among those winning the Bible categories were from left, Joe Fannin of Auxier, and from Betsy Layne, Hillary Bryant, Daphne McCoy, Todd McCoy, Shannon Hunt, Brandie Bryant, Staci Reynolds, Heather McCoy, James Roberts, Dougie Cole, Kent Leedy, and Ryan Ortega. In Memory

Betty Kidd Miller
Passed away May 6, 1991

*It's been one year since you went away,
To a better home we know to stay.*

There will never be another mother quite like you, with all your kind words and sweet smiles, you loved all people, saw the good, not the bad.

A better mom we could not have had.

*We have such wonderful memories of you—always there for us you would be—
So full of love it was plain to see.*

*Your life ended far too soon—we feel like we didn't get the chance to show you how much we loved you—
But somehow we think you knew.*

You will always be in our hearts and thoughts. We'll always love you.

YOUR LOVING CHILDREN

THE ILLUSTRATED BIBLE

God Does Wonderful Things

"O Lord, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things, plans formed of old, faithful and sure."

— Isaiah 25:1

Those words, "plans formed of old, faithful and sure," bring to mind the famous spiritual, "Give Me That Old Time Religion." That old-time religion has endured for some 20 centuries now, built on the old, faithful and sure. God, indeed, has done wonderful things, as any who ponder on the creation of the earth and the life thereon will appreciate. Even more-wondrous is that He has planned so well, providing a functional use for everything and everyone in this worldly existence and a haven above for all when our humanly days are over.

Allen Central first; Wheelwright third in EKMC

Allen Central gains eight first places Bailey places first in long jump, Jackson takes first in 100 meter

The rain and cool weather could not dampen the spirits of the Allen Central Rebels track and field team as they claimed eight first places in the 17 events held in the recent Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference this past Tuesday at Jenkins.

What really helped the Rebels was the way they finished in the 400 meter run. Allen Central placed first, third and fourth to pile up 14 points from the one event. Chris Yates, who just keeps getting better and better, placed first with a time of 57:07. The 400 meters last year was the favorite of Robert Jervis who won several first place finishes in the 400 meters. But Jervis graduated and now Yates has come on to take up the loss of Jervis in the event.

Jason Samons, another young runner, placed third at 58:81 and Kevin Patton took the fourth place slot at 59:65.

"That really helped us in finishing first," said Dewey Jamerson, Allen Central's track and field coach. Allen Central took first place by gathering in 109 points for the meet.

Andrew Greenleaf, who was nursing a heavily bandaged shin, tied for first place in the high jump. Greenleaf, another plus for the Allen Central program, had a jump of 5-feet, 8-inches. In watching Greenleaf jump, you could see that he was in a lot of pain.

Kevin Patton and Jamie Slone each competed in the high jump also but did not place. Both had jumps of 5-feet, 6-inches.

Freshman Shawn Robinson keeps throwing the discus farther out as he took first place in the field event. Robinson had a toss of 120-feet, 5-inches. The toss was his longest of Donnie Daniels' Wheelwright Trojan track and field team surprised a lot of people by finishing third in the Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference with a total of 70 1/2 points.

"We had them worried," said Coach Daniels. "We surprised a lot of them over there."

Layne Bailey took first place in the long jump as the field events were held in a cold drizzle rain. Bailey, who hasn't been in many field events, had a leap of 17-feet and 10-inches for first place. Mike Newsome placed third in the event with a jump of 17-feet and 7-inches. Chuck Hutton took part in the event but did not place with his jump of 16-feet and 6-inches.

Steven Jackson took another first place for the Trojans as he placed first in the men's 100 meter. Jackson posted a time of 12:33. Teammate Steven Shelton placed sixth with his time of 12:37.

Arnold Adams showed that football pays off in endurance as he posted a time of 11:40.00 in the men's grueling 3200 meter (two-mile) run. Adams edged out Allen Central's Todd Howard for the second place finish. Rodney Cole took part in the race but did not place.

Mike Newsome knew his long legs would come in handy besides playing basketball. Newsome placed first in the men's triple jump with a 36-foot and 6-inch leap. Hutton placed second with a jump of 35-feet and 8-inches. Wheelwright also got fourth place in the triple jump with Scotty Caudill placing fourth at 34-feet and 8-inches.

John Hall and Layne Bailey tied for fifth place in the men's high jump. The pavement was slippery under the

Wayland White Sox feel unwanted

Who is right? The coaches of the Wayland White Sox or the Board of Directors of the Beaver Creek Little League. Both are locked in an ongoing dispute over the reasons the White Sox were not allowed to become the 12th member of the long time running Beaver Creek Little League Association.

According to reports, the Wayland team, headed up by Ronnie Patton and Donnie Crawford, approached the Beaver Creek Little League about joining the league this year. As far as the initial contact went, there was no problem.

"Until they came to Ronnie's house and told him that we couldn't become a member of the league because the coaches had voted not to accept us into the league," said Crawford.

According to Crawford and Patton, the two coaches were encouraged when they applied for admission to the league.

"They said 'sure come on in,'" said Crawford. Both Patton and Crawford stated that they even went to the league's first meeting this year and were introduced as the new Wayland Little League team and newest member of the league.

"Then after we left the meeting, the other coaches stayed behind and they decided to vote on whether to allow us into the league," stated Crawford.

"We thought we were in until later that night when they came to my house and told us that the coaches voted not to let us in," Patton explained.

"I was told by an unnamed source that Dennis Henson brought it up that they had to vote on his team (the Duff Orioles) being a member and that they should have to vote on us also," continued Crawford.

The rift has created some hard feelings and Crawford says that it steams from two years ago when they had a Pee Wee team in the McDowell Pee Wee League and he feels that it is something personal.

"Not so," says Beaver Creek Little League President Jimmy Goins. "There was nothing personal in the decision that was made. There were no personal feelings involved at all in what was decided. The Duff team was voted in last year before I became the league president. If the by-laws of the league were broken, they were broken last year."

"The sole decision not to allow the Wayland team into the league was because we are limited to 10 teams in our league. When we added Dennis' team (Orioles) we had to call Williamsport (national Little League headquarters) to get permission to expand to 11 teams. They gave us permission and we had already sent our charter into them when Wayland applied for admission. We could not take another team into our league. Our charter would not allow for it."

Goins stated that he had received a letter from district director Nick

Frazier in reference to the situation and was urged to find a place for the kids to play baseball if the team was not accepted by the league.

"I followed his advice to the letter," stated Goins. "We asked the coaches of the Wayland team to give us the names of the players and we would place them on a team in the league. They refused to do so."

Bailey is fifth in high jump!

Wheelwright's Layne Bailey went over the 5-foot, 4-inch cross bar to finish fifth in the high jump event at Jenkins as part of the EKMC track and field meet. (photo by Ed Taylor)

Goins made mention that the existing 11 teams were short of players with some teams fielding only 10 players. Goins said his intentions were to take the Wayland players and distribute them to teams that needed players.

"I talked with the people in Florida (no name was given) about the situation," said the league president, "and they told me that it sounded like the Wayland team was trying to load up with good players. We didn't want that to happen. We also did not know where all the players came from if they did actually live in the district. We also heard that they had two boys from the next county that could throw the ball."

The first vote to disallow the Wayland team entrance into the league was 7-1 against.

"We were running out of time in having a place to play this year so we registered for the American Amateur League in Hazard," explained Crawford. "We had to have some place to play. But we told them at the meeting that we were not going to play American Amateur and that it would be more convenient for the team if we played Little League without having to travel so far. Some of us are out of work and it would have been better for us."

"I just feel like we were done dirty," stated Patton, who has coached basketball at Maytown, Wayland and presently at Duff. "I was surprised that he (Goins) would question my credentials as a coach. They could not give us one solid reason for not accepting us into the league. We asked for a reason and they could not give us one."

A second vote was taken as to the admission of the Wayland team and the team lost out once again but this time by a 6-4 vote, according to Crawford.

Birchell Duff, who is a member and was the only member at the time of the Board of Directors, advised Goins and the coaches that they did not have the right to vote on a team as to admission or not but that that re-

Burke whiffs 18 as Cubs roll over Tigers in Senior League

Prestonsburg Cubs pitcher, Jason Burke, had things his way Wednesday night in the Senior Little League game at Archer Park. Burke struck out 18 batters en route to a 10-1 Cubs win over the Prestonsburg Tigers.

Burke fanned the side in the first, second, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh inning. He walked a batter in the third inning but picked him off first. He struck out 12 batters in a row in four innings. Burke gave five walks in scattering three Tiger hits.

"Jason got ahead of the batters and threw nothing but fast balls to them," said his coach Cecil Lester.

The Cubs took a 5-0 lead after the first inning when they scored five times against Tiger starting pitcher Ryan Ortega. Ortega experienced some early wildness as he issued six base on balls in the first inning. Aaron Bonds, who had two hits in the game, singled with the bases loaded in the first to drive in two runs. The other runs were the result of walks.

The Cubs added a run in the top of the third when Mike Kelly singled and later scored on Jason Hackworth's run scoring double.

It was Bonds again in the fourth inning who helped his team score four times when he singled again with the bases loaded to pick up his third and fourth RBIs.

The Tigers scored their lone run in the bottom of the fourth on a base hit by Sammy Nelson, his second of the game, and a base hit by Jeff Hicks.

Ortega was the losing pitcher working three and a third innings. Ortega walked six, all in the first, and struck out four. Jason Blackburn came on in the fourth with one out and worked the rest of the game.

Wilson places first in 110 hurdles; Reid gets two third place finishes

The Betsy Layne track and field team may not be as large as some of the others in the region but they have two participants who have started to make their mark in the sport.

Chad Wilson placed first in the men's 110 high hurdles with a time of 18:24. Wilson also participated in the triple jump and had a third place finish with a leap of 36-feet and seven-inches.

In the women's events, Nikki Reid placed third in two events and fourth in a third. In the women's 100 meter run, Reid posted a 13:93 for third place and came in third in the women's 400 meter run with a time of 1:10.04. Reid placed fourth in the women's 200 meter run at 30:12.

The Betsy Layne track and field team is coached by Jim Bowling and the team meets each Tuesday and Thursday at the Bob Amos Park in Pikeville. Coach Bowling invites everyone to come out and watch his squad run at the Pikeville track at 5 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday.

The Bobcats squad will be taking part in the regional preliminaries this coming Wednesday evening at Pikeville's Bob Amos Park.

Already a standout runner!

Just a sixth grader, Todd Howard has already made a reputation as a standout runner in the 3200 meters races. Howard placed third in the EKMC 3200 run at Jenkins Tuesday evening. (photo by Ed Taylor)

Improving in shot put!

the year. Another Rebel who is vastly improved in discus, Shawn Bailey, took second place in the event with a throw of 108-feet, 2-inches. Bailey has come on strong toward the end of the year and should help make up some points in the upcoming regional meet. Seventh grader Levi Wells placed fourth with a throw of 98-feet, 3-inches. Wells is highly regarded as a strong future thrower.

In the shot put event, Kenny Crum, trying out a new shot put, abandoned the new put and went back to the old one, but had to settle for a fourth place finish with a throw of 37-feet, 6-inches. Crum has had better throws in competition but seemed intimidated by Elkhorn City's Mike Fraley's throw of over 47-feet.

Bailey also took part in the shot put along with sophomore Ronnie Samons. Samons had a toss of 32-feet, 10-inches. Bailey came in at 31-feet, 4-inches.

Shane Stumbo keeps showing why he is a serious state contender as he won two first place finishes. Stumbo placed first in the 110 hurdles and again in the 300 hurdles. Stumbo posted a time of 17:22 to take the 110 hurdles and then ran a 44:86 in the 300 hurdles.

Teammate Jamie Slone was close behind in the 300 hurdles as he finished second in the event. Slone came in at 48:20. Justin Salisbury was timed at 55:05 in the 300 hurdles.

Again in the 110 hurdles, Slone ran a 20:29 and Gary Webb recorded a time of 22:20.

Chris Yates outran the field in the half mile (800 meters) race with a time of 2:12.97 for first place. Kenneth Scarberry posted a time of 2:29.43 for fifth place.

The Allen Central men's relay team of Phillip Anderson, Scarberry, Yates and Mike Allen placed first in the men's 3200 meter relays. The Rebel runners breezed to the win as Anderson took the stick first and outran the others. Handing off to Scarberry, the fleet-footed Scarberry opened the margin wider as Allen and Yates finished the course in 9:55.02. But Coach Jamerson said they could do better.

"They can get it down to nine minutes," he stated, "but it was a good time for them."

Allen Central dominated the men's 1600 relays with Scarberry, Stumbo, Yates and Slone came in at 4:03.95 to take first place in the event.

Mike Allen set a new school record in the triple jump with a leap of 34-feet, 9-inches. Allen placed third in the event. Gary Webb came in fifth in the triple jump at 33-feet, 9-inches. Kevin Stumbo finished at 30-feet, 6-inches.

Allen Central had two who placed in the long jump. Jamie Slone took fourth place with a jump of 17-feet, 7-inches. Kevin Patton was fifth with his jump of 17-feet, 4 3/4-inches.

A third place finish went to the Rebels 400 meter relay team. Some bad handoffs prevented the Rebels from finishing higher. The team of Trevor Fitch, Jason Samons, Kevin Patton and Kevin Stumbo ran a 49:93 for third place.

In the men's 1600 meter run, Phillip Anderson took second place with a 5:30.00. Shawn Amburgey and Todd Howard also ran but no time recorded.

In the men's 100 meter run, Jason Samons placed second with a time of 12:38. Adam Wright came in at 13:19 and Trevor Fitch ran a 13:55.

Samons was fourth in the 200 meter run with a time of 25:43 and Patton placed fifth at 25:66. Fitch came in at 28:28.

Sixth grader Todd Howard set a new school record in the men's 3200 meter run. Howard placed third in the event, nudged out by Wheelwright's Arnold Adams. Howard's time was 12:11 for the school record. Seventh grader Estill Stumbo placed fifth in the event at 12:47. Bradley did not place with his time of 13:19.

"We won where we expected to win in the meet," said Jamerson. "We expected to win in the 400 and 800 meters—in the hurdles with Shane and the one and two mile relays. I thought we might win in the two-mile run, but we didn't.

"I was very surprised—and pleasantly surprised at that—in that we took two places, third and fifth, in the triple jump," he continued. "I would have been happy with one place. Things went as I expected in the discus. I thought we would have the top three but we placed three out of the top four."

Jamerson and his squad discussed their success at the meet and pointed out the key was they scored in every event.

"We had 14 kids who did not place, but out of 41 one, that isn't bad," he commented.

Jamerson thought that Howard would have finished higher in the two-mile run but he got a surprise when Estill Stumbo placed fifth. "Todd wasn't feeling well at the time," explained Jamerson.

Allen Central will be looking toward the regional preliminaries this coming Thursday afternoon at Pikeville's Bob Amos Park. Some field event finals will also be held on that day. The finals of the regional meet will take place on Saturday.

bar but the two managed a jump of 5-feet and 4-inches. Caudill did not place with a 5-foot even.

Bailey placed second in the men's 800 meters with a time of 2:19. Freshman Brandon Holbrook took fourth place with his time of 2:17.

Adams came in fourth in the men's 1600 meter run. Adams recorded a time of 5:17 in the run. Dennis Crager ran but did not place.

In the men's 200 meter run, Jackson ran in at 27:00 and John Hall was just behind him. Eddie Shelton ran but no time was reported. Neither runner placed.

Kelly Burger ran just under a minute at 59:06 to place fourth in the men's 400 meter run. Justin Ray came in at 1:03 and Merlin Isaac finished with a 1:10.

The relay team of Eddie Shelton, Teater Shelton, Hutton and Jackson placed fourth in the men's 400 meter relays with a time of 51:08.

"They have done better than that before," said Coach Daniels. "They ran a 49:00 before."

The relay team in the 1600 meter relays came in one place better—third—as Kelly Burger, Steven Shelton, Scotty Caudill and Brandon Holbrook represented Wheelwright in the mile relays.

It was a first for the team of Mike Newsome, Merlin Isaac, Rodney Jackson and Jody Johnson in the men's 3200 relays. The team finished fourth despite not having run before.

"They wanted to run it so they could get some points," explained Daniels. "It was the first time either one ran the event."

Wheelwright took third and fifth place in the men's 110 hurdles. Mike Newsome placed third and Muntu Oden came in fifth. Newsome was disqualified in the men's 300 hurdles because he ran in the wrong lane.

"He came over the first hurdle all right but got into the wrong one on the third hurdle," stated Daniels. "He had a good time though."

Oden placed fifth in the men's 300 hurdles with a time of 51:02.

Todd Daniels placed fifth in the shot put with a toss of 35-feet and 7-inches. Jody Johnson had a toss of 34-feet and 6-inches. Johnson did not place.

In the discus, Marty Tackett sailed his discus 91-feet and 6-inches for fifth place. Daniels and Ronnie Newsome also threw but did not place. "It was a very good meet," said Daniels.

Places first in triple jump!

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

WHITE SOX FEEL LIKE "DIRT"

The recent battle between the Wayland White Sox Little League team and the Beaver Creek Little League Board of Directors is certainly a good indication that a vision of the real meaning of the game has been lost.

The White Sox's application for membership into the league was denied because of not being able "to take another team in because the league is limited to just 10 teams."

However, the area district director, Nick Frazier, told the local board members to handle their own problems. So, with a split vote between the board members, a deciding vote was cast by the league's president, Jimmy Goins.

I have known Jimmy Goins for a long time. I believe he is a fair man and wants to do what is best for the kids in the area. I really believe that. I know that this is his first year at the helm of the prestigious Little League organization. But Jimmy was put into a situation that he should not have been. Instead of having six board members, there should have been seven named in order to assure no tie votes—thus putting the president of the league on the spot.

However, Goins, certainly cast the wrong vote and should have allowed the team entrance into the league. No one will be more hurt by all this than the kids.

Personal feelings—and I have reasons to believe that was the real reason—should never have entered into the decision-making process. If the Duff Orioles were admitted as the "eleventh" team with special permission, why couldn't special permission have been granted for a twelfth team. After all, Little League is for the kids and not adults. Feelings toward others should never, ever enter the picture.

EKMC MEET WET AND COLD—BUT COMPETITIVE

Tuesday evening I made the trip to Jenkins to cover the EKMC track and field meet with Allen Central and Wheelwright competing. As I watched our local runners and field participants compete and saw how well they were doing without the benefit of having the facilities to practice on, I certainly felt proud of the way they finished. Then I thought, if we did have the facilities, what a program we could have here in Floyd County and how much better our athletes would be.

I just wish some of our county officials and school administrators would just go to one meet and watch the fierce competition. With all the building we are doing around here with new schools and such, surely there's a facility that could be used by all Floyd Counties. I would much rather see a track and field arena than a harness racing track. I realize that is a personal endeavor, but everyone is jumping on the band wagon and counting the big bucks to be made from it.

Don't our officials and administrators care about the lack of facilities in the county. Why can't we have our own facility?

Allen Central won the meet at Jenkins and Wheelwright placed third. We also have a program at Betsy Layne with coach Jim Bowling heading up the program. Three schools, and I am sure that if the facilities were available we would have five and could hold our own county meet, currently are competing in the sport so it's not like we are doing it for one school.

Track and field is great fun and very enjoyable to watch. I would love to see the old "field days" in grade school brought back. Grade schools would meet at a certain place and compete against each other. Good healthy competition is fun.

ALUMNI GAMES IN F.A.C.E.S FESTIVAL

This year's alumni games, part of the Festival of FACES activities, will be held at the Adams Middle School gym. The old gang from Maytown and McDowell will battle it out for the championship as, three years after it all started, the finals will finally be played.

Should be a lot of fun as the old timers from bygone years face each other on the hardwood one more time.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports!

Music's two-run double gives Prestonsburg 6-5 win

Stephanic Music clubbed a two-run double in the bottom of the seventh inning to send the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats to a 6-5 win over the Lady Cats of Betsy Layne in girl's high school softball Wednesday night.

The win ran the Lady Blackcats' record to 9-2 on the season as they have lost only to Sheldon Clark twice.

Jamie Clay led off the Prestonsburg seventh with a double and Amy Reed drew a walk. Carolyn Reffitt beat out an infield hit to load the bases for the hard hitting Music. Music delivered the double that scored Clay to tie the game and Reed ventured home with the winning run with no one out. Betsy Layne erased a 2-0 Prestonsburg lead by scoring five times in the top of the fourth inning. Bartley opened the inning with a base hit and Dee Dee Martin then singled behind her. Bartley scored on Misty Clark's RBI single and Susan Clark followed with a base hit that loaded the bases. After Kidd fouled out, Osborne drilled a two-base hit that scored two runs. Two more runs crossed home plate on Spradlin's RBI hit. Betsy Layne led 5-2 after four innings.

Prestonsburg took their 2-0 lead in the first on a leaf-off double by Clay and scored on Music's two-bagger. Music came around with the second run of the inning on a double by Missy Bailey.

The Lady Blackcats cut the 5-2 Betsy Layne lead down to one with two runs in the bottom of the fifth. Clay singled to start the inning and Reed followed suit with a base hit, moving Clay to third base. Clay scored when Reffitt grounded out for the second out. Music then delivered a base hit that scored Reed to make it a 5-4 game.

Betsy Layne went out in the next three innings as Bailey picked up the win for the Lady Blackcats. Veronica Dale was the losing pitcher for Betsy Layne.

Clay and Music each had three hits in the game. Music collected four RBIs in the contest. Osborne had two RBIs for Betsy Layne.

Prestonsburg will have a chance to avenge their two earlier losses as they host the Lady Cardinals of Sheldon Clark next Tuesday evening at 4:45 p.m. in a doubleheader.

sponsibility lay with the board of directors.

A board of directors was formed rather quickly which included Steve Jenkins, Jad Deaton, Birchell Duff, Ed Moore, Carlos Elswick and Ernie Moore.

After the board was assembled a third vote took place with the six members deadlocked at 3-3. Goins had the tie breaking vote and voted not to permit the team into the league.

"Well, we were mad again," said Crawford, "and we went to district director Nick Frazier, Circuit Judge in Johnson County, for a ruling. He told us that the coaches had no right to vote on such a matter and also that it was the decision of the local league and it's president."

Goins stated that according to Little League rules the president of a league has the right to reject or approve a coach and manager.

"We could sit them aside for a year," said Goins, "before we approve them."

"It was a decision for the board of directors," said Frazier from his office in Paintsville. "I wrote Jimmy Goins and told him the procedures to follow and that it had to come before the board of directors. But I also instructed him that a spot must be found for each kid on a team if the team wasn't allowed to play."

"You see, the way Little League works is that the managers and coaches are approved by the league board and their president," said Frazier.

"The way I understand it is that the fellow in question (Patton) got a team together, came to the meeting and said here we are and we come as a total package. I will be the manager of the team. It was take all of us or none."

Frazier also made reference to the question of playing American Amateur baseball and Little League, also something that is not permitted. However, Crawford and Patton both stated they informed the directors of their plans of not participating in the American Amateur this year in Hazard.

"I just can't go into a district and tell them how to do things," explained Frazier. "It is a local dispute that must be settled by the local organization. They have their local procedures and they must run them themselves. As long as they go by the rule book, I cannot interfere."

Both Patton and Crawford feel the kids are the ones who were the losers in not being permitted to play in the Beaver Creek Little League.

"They want our players, but they don't want our players playing against them," said Crawford.

What bothered the two coaches was the fact that Goins questioned Patton's ability to coach a team and his calling Florida about the situation.

"Here each coach goes out and gets his own team members," said Crawford. "There is no draft. If there were a draft and a need for a new team because of a shortage of teams, then I could see the president of the league appointing a manager. But here there is no draft."

"I feel that it is a personal thing against us," Crawford stated. "It is because they don't like us, because we beat them in Pee Wee baseball at McDowell. It was the three McDowell directors who voted against us, I learned. The other three tried to convince them to let us in."

One director whom I contacted, but who insisted on remaining unnamed, concurred what Crawford and Patton had stated.

The member of the board of directors stated that he would have like to have seen the Wayland team permitted to play and, if there were any problems with the two coaches, then the league could have acted on that. The board member also stated that he felt there were hard hearts toward the two coaches and that "the others were not thinking about the kids." He also felt that it went back to the Pee Wee league in McDowell and how the "two acted" then.

Goins stated that as far as he is concerned the matter is a closed one and that the league would go on.

Several have question the decision of the board in punishing the kids because of personal feelings (if there were any) toward the two coaches. It is the kids who suffer in a situation such as this one.

Alumni games to continue at Adams School

If the Adams Middle School gymnasium is smelling with the scent of Ben Gay, try to understand that the old-timers on the floor are a bit out of shape.

The Floyd County Alumni-Games will continue on Saturday, May 23, as part of the Festival of F.A.C.E.S festivities. McDowell and Maytown will meet in the championship game in a tournament that began two years ago. The Right Beaver and Left Beaver (Battle of the Beavers) will square off at 8:45 p.m. But there will be a lot more basketball action before the final game rolls around.

Denzil "Hoss" Halbert will lead his Martin Purple Flash team against the Wayland Wasps in the first game of the night (5 p.m.). In the evening's second game, the Wheelwright Trojans coached by the fearless Frankie Francis will tangle with the Black Devils of Garrett coached by John Conley. The game is scheduled to start around 6:15 p.m.

Ron Robinson will lead the Prestonsburg Blackcats onto the court as they face Tommy Boyd's Betsy Layne Bobcats in a 7:30 p.m. game. Maytown and McDowell will then square off for the championship. Gene Frasure will lead the Wildcats of Maytown and Pete Grigsby Jr. will head up the Daredevils team.

An array of talent will be blowing the whistle for the games. Referees like Harry Burke, Ted Hall, Burchell Duff and Bill Hall will officiate. Mr. Joe Back will man the public address system for the games.

Up and over!

Festival of FACES Athletic weekend, May 23

Mark it down on your calendar. May 23 is going to be a busy weekend in the sports world here in Floyd County.

As part of the Festival of FACES festivities, three sporting events is sure to catch the eye of all sports fans in the county.

This year a 5K race, alumni basketball games and a golf tournament are being conducted on Saturday, May 23, and have been appropriately named Festival of FACES Athletic Weekend.

In it's fourth year, the 5K race will be coordinated by veteran runner, Rick Roberts of Paintsville. The Festival of FACES 5K run has historically attracted several runners from various states. The race will begin at the Bank Josephine main branch at 10 a.m. on Saturday and the race will proceed through the downtown streets of Prestonsburg. Winners of the men and women's divisions will be presented trophies by officials of the Bank Josephine, which is sponsoring the race.

Golf fanatics will be able to become part of a four-man, best ball scramble at the Jenny Wiley Golf Course. The golf outing is sponsored by the Prestonsburg Athletic Club. Entry fee into the tournament will be $20 per person. A meal will be served after the scramble. Prize awards will be presented to the winning teams.

Also, this is the third year for the alumni basketball games hosted by McDowell and Wheelwright. The games will be held at the Adams Middle School on May 23.

The games will feature alumni from Floyd County's present and past high schools. This year, Maytown and McDowell represent teams who are unbeaten and the two teams will be playing for the championship on May 23.

A lot of fun and excitement await the sports fan in Floyd County and you can be part of it all.

Help lead Kentucky to educational excellence!

Kentucky Commissioner of Education Thomas C. Boyesen is seeking an experienced, culturally diverse team of outstanding professionals to join his staff to provide leadership for education reform.

An integral part of the organization plan adopted by the Kentucky Department of Education is the concept of regional service centers, as mandated by KRS 156.017. The centers will provide focused technical and professional development resources to local districts in the implementation of the initiatives of the Kentucky Education Reform Act.

Available June 1, 1992, are program consultant positions in Region 7 and Region 8. They will have a salary of about $37,000 and a complete benefits package.

Region 7 includes these counties: Bath, Boyd, Bracken, Carter, Elliott, Fleming, Greenup, Johnson, Lawrence, Lewis, Martin, Mason, Menifee, Morgan, Robertson and Rowan.

Region 8 includes these counties: Breathitt, Floyd, Knott, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Magoffin, Owsley, Perry, Pike and Wolfe.

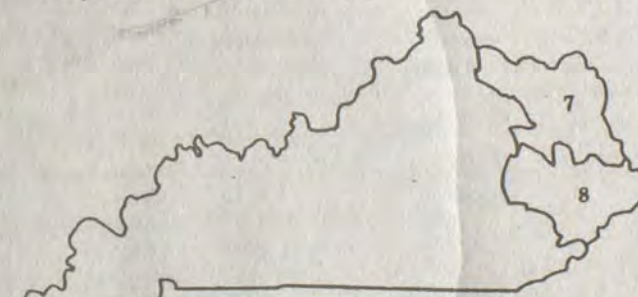

Position Description

Reporting to the regional center's division director, program consultants will coordinate services for a specific education reform initiative, such as instructional technology, school-based decision making, curriculum/assessment, or preschool and primary programs. They will join others employed by the education department on special tasks and on special projects involving assigned regions. They will coordinate training programs within the region and occasionally will join specialists from other regions to share ideas, concerns and plans.

The consultants will be hired on loan from other agencies through personal contracts and memoranda of agreement. While the agreements may be reviewed and renewed annually, the consultants ideally would hold a position for a two- to three-year term before returning to work for previous employers. The work year will be roughly equivalent to a school year with some extra days.

To apply, send a letter of application indicating whether you prefer Region 7 or Region 8, a resume and current salary to Dr. Brad Matthews, Associate Commissioner for Regional Service Centers, Kentucky Department of Education, Capital Plaza Tower, First Floor, 500 Mero Street, Frankfort, KY 40601. FAX: 502-564-5680. Deadline: May 28.

(This is a new search, Previous applicants need to reapply.)

Soap Updates
by Selii Grovas

ALL MY CHILDREN: Craig tried to persuade Dixie he now loved her, although he admitted that he barely knew Tad and had come to Pine Valley just to con her out of money. He also confessed his sordid relationship with Gloria. Dixie asked Joe and Ruth to let her and the baby stay for a while. Jack feared that Craig and Gloria might skip town now that they're the primary suspects in Will's murder. Gloria, reacting to Craig's admissions by overdosing on sleeping pills, was found by Erica just in time. Wait To See: Brooke's interest in Edmund grows stronger.

ANOTHER WORLD: Iris told Dennis she didn't believe that Marley had no feelings for him. Jenna was unaware that Dean was trying to use her to find out more about Rick. Marley was stunned when Dennis finally admitted he loved her. Ada realized Roger was trying to squeeze her out of running Paradise. Cass and Frankie told Felicia Lorna's birth records were sealed and she would have to get the information directly from her. Wait To See: Lorna has a surprise in store for Felicia.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Jessica warned Duncan about a proposed partnership with Lucinda in Kruger Industries. Gavin assured Barbara he'll take the secret of Jennifer's paternity to his grave. Iva agonized over keeping the secret of Aaron's paternity from Holden. John Eldridge told Carl he needed help in changing his will. Lisa had a nightmare that she told Tom the truth about her past, and he refused to forgive her. Margo began her maternity leave. Wait To See: Lisa faces another shocking situation.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Jake told Macy he had, indeed, stolen the formula, and urged her to forget him and go back to Thorne. Later, Jake accused Clarke of the theft and warned him never to hurt Macy again or he'll come after him. Bill assured Margo he felt their marriage was worth saving, but she insisted she's leaving him. Taylor was stunned to learn Ridge was staying in the same island resort hotel. Feeling the need to get out, Faith entered the restaurant where the Spectra gang was holding a birthday party for Darla and unwittingly became part of the background as a camera clicked off a picture of the celebrants. Wait To See: Clarke sees another opportunity to advance his personal cause.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: John realized that the coffin Gregory said was delivered to Lawrence was so small, it had to be that of a child. He and Isabella were determined to learn the identity of that child. Vivian stole a sample of John's hair for a secret DNA test to determine if he really was Lawrence's brother. Vivian secretly decided not to contact Bo and Carly with any more news from Goddard. Roman learned he'd been demoted at the police station and hoped his friendship with Abe wouldn't suffer as a result. Kayla considered joining Kimberly in Los Angeles. Wait To See: Vivian has another shocker for John.

THE TIMES' WEEKEND

Smile Awhile
by Sarah Hopsorn

MIS FOR THE MANY THINGS I GIVE HIM

To make my usual long story short, I just wanted everyone to know that my son told me he wanted to nominate me for Mother of the Year, but he knew I would be too busy to write the nominating letter. That's my boy. My son has such an active social life that disengaging himself from the telephone keeps him busy. Aside from this, he spends a lot of time avoiding his father so he won't have to mow grass, or I'm sure he would have written an excellent expose' on me.

It would have probably been very similar to the following:

"My mother makes the best microwave pizzas in the whole world. She adds extra pepperoni to them and cuts it up in four pieces for me. She always forgets to bring me something to drink when she carries the pizza to my room so she always has to go right back and get it - immediately. Sometimes she forgets what she went after so I don't always get something to drink with my meal until I'm already finished. It's pretty dry eating, but I manage. When she realizes she's forgotten my drink, she feels so guilty about it, she usually goes out and buys me some special kind of dessert.

One night last week, she fell asleep so early she didn't get to make me a snack. So I woke her up so she could fix it anyway. She forgot the extra pepperoni.

My mother also washes all my baseball uniforms if Dad hasn't washed them already and she's usually available for me if she doesn't have something to do for somebody else.

My mother also cleans my room if she gets a chance. The only thing my mother can't do is sew. This means that when I lose a button off my shirt, I either never wear it again, or Mom staples it together after I put it on. If I'm lucky, she takes it and lets someone sew it back on. She sewed a button on for my dad once, but it fell off as soon as he buttoned his shirt. She says she didn't take Home Ec because she was never going to get married.

All my mother did for me last week was pick me up after school and take me to the ball field. Then I sent her back to the house to get my friends and me T-shirts. When she came back with the T-shirts, we sent her to get us some Gatorade and sunflower seeds. When she came back with those, I sent her back to the house to get my belt. Then when she got back home, she and Dad came on to the game. That's the excuse she gave for not having supper cooked.

The next day she picked me up after school and later that evening I realized I had lost my ball cap. She called all the people who I had seen or spoken with after school and they didn't know where it was either. I would have called them myself but it was too embarrassing, and if you can get somebody else to do it - it's better. At 10:30 p.m., my mother took me to the Candy Corner (which is the last place I remember having it on), and I looked through the window with a flashlight but I couldn't see my cap. The police came by and started to arrest her for breaking and entering, but she convinced them that what we were doing was legitimate. The next day, a friend found it and brought it to school. I forgot to tell her and she bought me another one because I convinced her I would get in trouble.

Sunday night I was standing in the middle of the family room showing my parents my special pitch when I accidentally threw the ball and broke a picture on the wall. Mom said, 'I can't believe he did that with us sitting here.' Dad said, 'I can believe it. We watched him break a light fixture with a basketball exactly the same way.' They didn't ground me or anything, but we had been discussing what I wanted for my birthday so I told him I didn't want anything. Mom told me to call the neighbor and borrow her Dirt Devil to clean up the glass, but I told her I was too embarrassed to do it so she called and the neighbor brought it over because I would have been too embarrassed to go get it. (Mom believes if children are embarrassed, they will have low self-esteem. This theory works to my advantage as well.) Mom then cut her Music festival queen pageant to kick off Festival of F.A.C.E.S.

MaShawna Renee Aiken

Lorie Cordial

Stephanie D. Little

Karrie Newsome

The Fine Arts Festival will kick off the Festival of F.A.C.E.S. on May 14 at 7 p.m. at the Prestonsburg High School.

Vying for the title of the Floyd County Music Festival Queen are MaShawna Renee Aiken, Lorie Ann Cordial, Stephanie Dawn Little, Karrie Newsome, and Allison Ratliff.

Aiken, a senior at Prestonsburg High School, is the daughter of Paul and Ramona Aiken. She has been a member of the Prestonsburg High School Honor Choir for three years and is a Governor School for the Arts finalist. She attended the Festival of F.A.C.E.S. for three years and has earned three superior solos and three superior ensembles at the KMEA Music Festival at Pikeville.

She is a member of the All-State Chorus, the All-District Chorus and the Girls Chorus. A member of Prestonsburg High School's Marching Band, she plays the piano and clarinet.

Aiken, who has appeared at the Daytona Beach Music Festival for two years, has been singing solos in church since she was three years old. She was voted most talented in her senior class, and she serves as secretary of the senior class and the student council. She is a member of the Drama Club and SADD organizations. She is in the top 25 percent of the 1992 graduating class. She plans to attend Eastern Kentucky University, majoring in speech pathology with a minor in music education.

Betsy Layne High School senior Lorie Ann Cordial is the daughter of Stevie and Katie Cordial of Harold and Rita Boyd of Dana. She has received superior ratings in solo, duet, and ensemble competition at the KMEA State Festival where she has competed for the past four years. She is a member of the Betsy Layne High School Honor Choir, and is an 8-year member of the band.

She has participated in the All-County band as second chair-Saxophone for one year and third chair-Saxophone for two years. She has been a member of the Betsy Layne High School Majorettes for four years and has served as captain for two years. You are what you collect

One of the most common hobbies in all the world is collecting.

Probably everybody who ever was, was at some time or another a collector of something.

There are art collectors, baseball card collectors, coin collectors and dust collectors.

Some of us are so good at collecting that we are capable of collecting more than one thing at a time.

Collecting is a hobby that can fit any budget.

For instance, if you have, say, $150,000 bucks to spend, you can collect one used Rolls Royce.

Our budget hasn't allowed for such extravagances so far, so we've stuck with collecting science fiction and horror movies made in the 1950s and 1960s.

Sometimes we'll even splurge for a "classic" like "Dracula" that was made before they invented color film and Arnold Swartz, uh, Swartz, er, Swertz oh, you know, the Terminator.

Dracula is still a pretty scary movie, and you don't see one drop of blood.

Most of today's "thrillers" will show two dozen murders before the titles.

For collecting purposes, we prefer movies with giant bugs, and space ships from Mars to those gory slasher flicks.

You can see a good chop-'em-up most evenings on the national news, anyway, but you'll rarely see a 50-foot cockroach unless, of course, you live in Texas where 50-foot cockroaches are considered "normal."

The best of our collection are those movies made in the early 50s when development of the A-Bomb scared the wits out of most people and caused deformities in almost every animal species known to movie directors.

We have in our possession movies which star huge atomic grasshoppers, ants, crabs, various and sundry lizards, and one chicken.

We also have in our possession the worst three movies ever made, and these three aren't likely to be budged from those celebrated positions.

Long heralded as the worst movie ever made, "Plan Nine from Outer Space" ranks on our list as third-worst.

The movie's star, Bela Lugosi, dies half-way through the filming and has to be replaced.

Number two (no matter how you look at it) on the all-time worst movie list is a Mexican beauty called "Rock and Roll Wrestling Woman vs. the Aztec Mummy."

Even the translators who dubbed this show in English knew it was a bomb....

Get this scene, and I swear it's true...

Two men are outside the arena, reading the card of the night's events, which is written in Spanish. One, who apparently speaks no Spanish, asks the other what the card says.

"It says," replies the man, "that whoever loses this fight has to watch this movie again."

The runaway favorite for worst movie ever made honors is called "The Creeping Terror."

The makers of this dandy somehow lost the original soundtrack during the editing process so they just narrated the whole thing.

The star of the show is a giant dust mop that eats everybody in town despite the fact that it moves slower than a slug.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

LEAD STORY

—A 31-year-old man turned himself in to Anchorage, Alaska, police in January claiming to be the fugitive "Dr. Diaper," who had been appearing at local day-care centers in diapers and trying to get them to take him in. Two years before, Dr. Diaper contracted with a baby sitter by phone, claiming to be the parent of an 18-year-old boy who had the mentality of a toddler, and who needed to be changed and fed, and whose bad habits should be ignored. When the baby sitter arrived, the giant baby was Dr. Diaper himself. On another occasion, a prospective baby sitter said Dr. Diaper had come to her door once carrying his own 3-year-old son because he could not find a real baby sitter for the boy while he went out on his escapade.

vey Hicks of Costa Mesa, Calif., was sentenced to 20 years in prison in February as a result of his conviction for launching aerial bombs at one Internal Revenue Service building and trying to blow up three others in 1991. Hicks had become distraught that the IRS had refused to allow him a tax deduction for an $8,000 donation to a mail-order "church."

—In Quebec City, Canada, in February, Serge Pouliot was sentenced to 18 months in prison for assaulting his supervisor, who had threatened to turn Pouliot in for sleeping at work. Both men operate an X-ray machine at a shipyard, where Pouliot committed the assault by severely X-raying the supervisor, subjecting him to the equivalent of 20 years' on-the-job exposure.

chased him, forcing him to leap from a parking deck 25 feet to the ground, injuring his leg. He managed to hobble to, and climb underneath, a parked car, but the owner of the car got in a few minutes later, started it up, and ran over Brockington's feet, breaking several bones.

CREME DE LA WEIRD

—Gregory Putnam, 42, a veteran sheriff's deputy who had been on inactive status since 1984 after a heart transplant, was disciplined in November by an Oregon City, Ore., judge, who lifted Putnam's license to carry a concealed weapon. Putnam, apparently frustrated at being shelved from "active" status, had modified his car so that it would resemble a state patrol car and had allegedly stopped at least three motorists on his own to lecture them on lawful behavior. Putnam said later that he had "let the old days get the best of me."

SPORTS NEWS

—In Nashwauk, Minn., Hibbing Community College beat St. Paul Bible, 85-6, in football in September, amassing 764 yards total offense by passing on its every single play. It would have been worse, but St. Paul Bible was in a "prevent" defense the entire game.

—Among the rituals of Atlanta Braves minor league pitcher Turk Wendell in 1991: He always crosses the foul line with a kangaroo jump; demands that the umpire roll the ball to him to start the game; chews licorice on the mound and then brushes his teeth every inning; occasionally makes a pick-off throw to first base with no runners on; and once took a camera to the mound in his pocket, took it out, and snapped a photo of the batter before pitching to him.

—Jeremy Edge, an Owensboro, Ky., high school basketball player, scored 7 points in one second in a January game against Hancock County. He was fouled with :01 left in the first half and made both free throws. With the clock still stopped, a technical foul was called against Hancock County and Edge made both shots. When the ball was inbounded, he got off a 3-point shot before the buzzer sounded.

JUST CAN'T STOP MYSELF

—Richard Smith, 31, celebrated his release from jail in March with a dinner at the Tara Hyannis Hotel in Massachusetts. He had served 90 days for running out on nine restaurant tabs last summer. He was promptly arrested again, for running out on the $28 check at the Tara.

—John Fogleman, 30, serving time for rape in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was arrested in November for making obscene telephone calls from inside the jail.

—Mahad Omar, 22, who is imprisoned for robbery and assault in Kingston, Ontario, but who had been given a one-day pass in December to attend a religious ceremony, was returned to jail before the day was over for robbing a woman at knife-point in St. Michael's Cathedral in Toronto.

SMOOTH REACTIONS

—James L. Ramey, 53, of Clyde, N.C., was charged with assault in November after a 15-minute brawl at the rural Full Gospel Holiness Church. The brawl began when one person wanted to occupy the back pew, which was occupied, as usual, by a church regular. The church minister's son suffered a bite to the neck that required 31 stitches.

ARKADY LEOKUM TELL ME WHY

WHY DO WE CRY?

Most of us imagine that the only time we cry is when we are sad. Did you know that we actually cry about a quarter of a billion times in the course of a lifetime?

In each eye there is a tear gland, located over the outer corner of the eye. There are also ducts that carry the tears to the upper eyelid and canals that carry off the tears from the front of the eye.

Every time we blink our eyelids, suction is exerted on the opening of the tear ducts, which takes out some fluid. The purpose of this is to irrigate the cornea of the eye and prevent it from drying out. But mechanically speaking, this is no different from crying. It is exactly what happens when we cry.

What about crying when we are sad? Of all living creatures, we are the only ones who cry to express emotion. Only a thinking and emotionally sensitive person cries.

What happens, then, is that our emotion, instead of finding expression in words, is channeled into the mechanism that produces tears.

It is a reflex action that happens despite ourselves. But the reason it happens is that the body has found it can express itself in this way when we can't, or won't, use words to convey what we feel.

OLD FARMER'S
THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC
MAY 11-17, 1992
FULL FLOWER MOON, MAY 16.

THREE CHILLY SAINTS

May 11, 12, and 13, are the feast days of St. Mammertus, fifth-century Bishop of Vienne in France; St. Pancras, a fourth-century boy martyr in Rome, and St. Gervais (also Ger-vatius or Servatius) fourth-century Bishop of Tongres. In The Old Farmer's Almanac these are known as the Three Chilly Saints, not because they were cold during their lifetimes, but because these three days are traditionally the coldest of the month. English and French folklore (and later American) held that these days would always bring a late frost. In Germany, they were called the Icemänner, or Iceman days, and people believed it was never safe to plant until the Iceman were gone, but after that, the threat of frost was over for the season.

Who shears his sheep before St. Gervatius' Day loves more his wool than his sheep.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Don't store your pewter in oak drawers or cabinets. Oak gives off a corrosive acid that damages pewter.

MUSHROOMS IN WINE

- 1 pound mushrooms
- 1/4 cup butter
- 3 tablespoons chopped chives
- 3 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- 6 tablespoons dry white wine
- salt and pepper to taste

Slice mushrooms and saute in butter. Stir in remaining ingredients and simmer for 3-5 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Clear north, cloudy and showers elsewhere; turning colder, cold snap north, warmer south.

SOUTHEAST: Clear and very warm, showers through coastal states; cold and thundershowers then clear and warm.

MIDWEST: Rainy and cool, sunny north; ending with clearing, sunny, and warmer.

NORTHWEST: Sunny and warm; a few sprinkles toward week's end.

SOUTHWEST: Warm and sunny, partly cloudy desert; light rain and cooler, some sunshine.

EARTHWISE

Once the last frost is past, it's time to store woolens. Wash and dry clothes completely before storing. There's no need for toxic mothballs with so many natural ways to discourage moths. Cedar, the traditional alternative, is available as oil, balls, and animal shapes. Lavender is a good, but mild deterrent. Try mixing it with rosemary, tansy, and peppermint to increase effectiveness. Cloves or bay leaves can be scattered among the clothing or secured in cheesecloth packets. Or, simply sprinkle your clothes with black pepper to keep the moths away.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: After facing someone from her past, Holly made a quick exit from The Outback. A.J. agreed to help Ruby and Nikki. A newcomer to the Quartermaine clan, Jenny commiserated with Monica about life with the family. Bill offered Julie evidence that would clear his name, and then stalked out. At the Quartermaine's lavish gala honoring a high profile industrialist's visit, as well as Monica's birthday, the guest of honor arrived with a surprise date on his arm. Nikki stunned Monica and everyone else with a presentation of her own. Wait To See: Holly realizes she's caught in the middle of something disturbing and potentially dangerous.

GUIDING LIGHT: In Cambrai, Roger arranged to bring Eve, a woman from Nick's past, back to Springfield. Frank was furious with Blake when he learned she'd tipped off the Immigration officials about Eleni. A mysterious figure watched Hank and Gilly as they were wed at the country club. Later he grabbed Gilly when she was alone in the honeymoon suite. Mallet worried his cover might be blown when Jenna crashed the wedding. Wait To See: Ross becomes the unwitting means of Blake's vengeance against Holly.

LOVING: Stacey and Trucker located Tim Sullivan to learn more about the mysterious love nest. Clay and Giff went to find Trisha. Ava told Paul goodbye. Trucker comforted Stacey after she and Jack argued. But the two resisted going further because they didn't want to complicate their friendship. Paul and Carly decided to move to New York to begin their new life together. Isabelle planned to nominate Gwyn for CEO of Alden Enterprises. Staige had plans for Cooper that might concern Hannah. Wait To See: Stacey is suddenly confronted with a new mystery.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: In Ohio with Jason, Dorian tried to learn if her sister, Agatha, really was still alive.

Hank asked Asa about his lack of an alibi for the night Carlo was murdered. While Blair plotted to make Asa her husband, Asa and Renee attempted a reconciliation, but another argument squashed their efforts. Viki worried what might be going on between Jason and Lee Ann. Andrew and his father, Sloan were at odds. Dorian, unable to understand why Blair was trying to destroy her, fired her. Addie and Dorian came face to face, with Addie rushing at her with a pair of scissors. Wait To See: A new danger awaits Dorian.

SANTA BARBARA: Lionel told David C.C. suspected Gina was behind the strange happenings in Mason's house. After the wedding rehearsal, Santana doubled over in pain, fearing for her unborn baby. Lilly arrived for the big bash at the roadhouse only to find it filled with fraternity boys who quickly surrounded her. Meanwhile, Rafe, unaware that Cruz, Reese, and Jodie were following him, followed Lilly to the house and ordered the boys to let her go. During the seance, Gina went into a trance and murmured the mystery woman's name: Abigail. As Jodie comforted Connie, a battered wife, the woman's husband became violent: Both Jodie and Connie were hit. Wait To See: David becomes concerned about Gina's safety.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Victor asked Jack to keep Victoria away from Ryan while he (Victor) was on his delayed honeymoon trip. Sheila tried to think of a way to keep Scott from going to the farmhouse. At his request, she reluctantly called Lauren to thank her for her efforts to get them insurance benefits. During the call, Sheila cruelly added that the two women should get together with their babies sometime. Lauren confronted Sheila in her lab. Sheila, who got the worst of the confrontation, threatened to get even with Lauren. Wait To See: Sheila's plans for vengeance go a little too far.

EDELL HEALTH NOTES

EARACHES: TRY ANTIBIOTICS FIRST... Like skinned knees and sore throats, earaches are among the most familiar childhood afflictions. Ear infections not only make children miserable and their concerned parents weary, they also are the main cause of childhood hearing loss.

In recent years, the insertion of tubes to drain fluid from infected ears has become one of the most common pediatric operations. By one estimate, more than a million children in the United States get ear tubes each year. Now a study from Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario in Ottawa, Ontario, looks at whether this relatively new surgery really makes more sense than good old antibiotic treatment.

The researchers relied on either tubes or antibiotics to treat each of 125 children whose infections included some hearing loss and fluid in the ears. Examining the children several times over a period of 18 months, they found that in the long run, the antibiotics succeeded almost as often as the surgery. Among the children whose treatment was successful, those who took antibiotics recovered as fully as those who had received surgery. Moreover, only 9 percent of the children who got antibiotics developed complications, as compared to half of the children in the surgical group.

The researchers concluded that a child with infected, fluid-filled ears should be given a trial with antibiotics before surgery is considered. This could go a long way toward preventing permanent hearing loss, which can happen when ears fail to heal properly after surgery.

DOCTORS WITHOUT HEALTH CARE... We hear a lot these days about the growing number of people at risk medically and financially because they have no health insurance. If you're like me, you think of these people as poor, unemployed or homeless. In fact, almost one out of every 10 health-care workers is uninsured, including some 15,000 physicians, according to research at the Center for National Health Program Studies at Harvard Medical School.

Why so many uninsured health-care workers? The researchers think that the high cost of insurance deters many employers from offering it. Costs are especially high for small businesses, which include most physicians' offices. In fact, more than half the people who work in doctors' offices receive no employer contributions, and 6 percent are uninsured. In addition, many insurers set higher premiums for health-related occupations or decline to cover them at any price because they presume employees in the health field to be heavy users of medical care. All I can add to this is my belief that it's cruel for the insurance industry to continue doing business this way.

BICENTENNIAL

The Father of Medical Controversy

Thomas Hunt Morgan, nephew of Civil War cavalry daredevil John Hunt Morgan, received the Nobel Prize in 1933 for his work in genetics. While teaching at Columbia University, Morgan left his earlier field of embryology and led a team of researchers studying the inbreeding of fruit flies. Influenced by 19th century monk Gregor Mendel's genetic studies, Morgan ultimately proved the theory of dominant and recessive traits, that genes are part of chromosomes, and that sex is determined by chromosomes. His research, in fact, led to many of today's social issues including whether to test for genetically carried diseases.

Morgan also served as biology department head at the California Institute of Technology, researching cell differentiation. He died in 1945, and the University of Kentucky named a school of biological science for him.

Dr. William C. Devries, another Kentucky physician, made medical history by pioneering transplant surgery, featuring the Jarvik-7 mechanical heart. The surgeon relocated to Louisville in 1984.

BEN JOHNSON

LOTTERY COLUMN

Who says cows are so dumb?

Q: What's this about some Montana rancher using cows to pick lottery numbers and winning $50 million? Did that really happen?—O.T.

A: Yes, it really happened. Darlene Sharp of Havre, Montana, used her herd of 34 cattle to develop a set of six numbers: 1, 9, 15, 17, 34, 52. Those six numbers won her $47 million on Nov. 23, 1991, the third largest lotto prize in history.

What was her winning system. Darlene said that 1 was for her first bull Slammer; 9 was for Scrubby the cow's ear tag number; 15 was the total number of her heifers; 17 was the number of her steers; 34 was total number of cattle; and 52 was Slammer's ear tag number. So much for scientific number selection.

Q: Do you know anything about some person to Indiana who was trying to point out that playing the lottery was a waste of money, and so to prove it bought a lottery ticket, and won?—H.N.

A: I believe you are referring to Craig Stanley of New Albany, Ind. He was trying to give his children a lesson in frugality when it backfired on him. He had been trying to dissuade his family from buying lottery tickets, pointing out that the majority of players never won anything and that "A fool and his money are soon parted." To prove his point, Stanley gave his family $1 to spend on a lotto ticket. His youngest son, Matt, promptly bought the winning ticket worth $1.25 million. "The only thing I can say right now is if you can't beat 'em, join 'em," declares Stanley now. He now plans to start playing the lottery regularly.

But, this story doesn't have a happy ending. Even though Stanley and his family won, they also ended up losers. After the Stanleys announced to the media—in detail—when they were planning their trip to lottery headquarters to claim the jackpot, trouble struck. The Stanleys arrived home after picking up their check to find that thieves also had made good use of the time they were gone and had burglarized their home making off with cash, jewelry and other valuables. Lottery officials advise winners not to publicize any travel plans. There are several lessons to be learned in this story.

Q: I have been thinking of playing the lotteries of other countries by using the subscription services that sell lottery tickets of several European countries. These services advertise heavily in publications I receive and I also receive solicitations from them through the mail. What do you think? How do I know my tickets will even get purchased, or that I will get paid if I do win?—J. J.

A: If you have any doubts about the integrity of the subscription service you are anticipating using, don't use it.

Lottery subscriptions services are companies that purchase lottery tickets for you in states and countries where you are not a resident. collect the money for you if you win, and then send it to you.

Although the majority of subscription services are thoroughly professional and honest, the problem is that you have very little assurance that your tickets are really being purchased. After all, you are using your credit card to purchase your lottery tickets through the telephone. You don't actually receive the tickets you purchase; if anything, you receive and a record of your numbers wagered.

There is very little way for you to check on your wager. If you don't live in the lottery state or the foreign country, how will you even know what day the drawing is, let alone what the winning numbers are? For most people, learning the winning numbers of a specific drawing in a foreign lottery is next to impossible.

Another major problem with more than one subscription service that purchases lottery tickets for you in foreign countries is that they don't actually send you the money if you win. Instead, if you win, the amount you win is put in an account for you to use in placing another subscription wager. It is not an option; they just do it. It is also not something that you are told up front when you place your wager.

In short, if you are going to use a commercial subscription service to place your lottery wagers, learn as much about the service as possible before you spend your money. Incidentally, it is probably not a good idea to use a subscription service that has been in business for less than two years. It takes about that long for a subscription service to establish a pattern of business practices that you can rely on.

"Good news. You've been released on a work furlough."

"How do you do it, Helen?"

JUNE FULLER

THE COUPON CLIPPER

MOM USES PROOFS TO PAY FOR VACATION

Dear June—In 1991, I sent for a total of 131 mail-in offers—two or three each week. Of these, 82 were cash refunds that came to $194. The remaining 49 were mostly premium offers that only required proofs of purchase and a small fee to cover the postage and handling.

Here is a sampling of the premiums I received: a Philadelphia Eagles mug, T-shirt and squeeze bottle (my husband is a big fan); a Tropicana watch, T-shirt and log book for recording refund information, a Kodak watch and fanny pack; and a Lipton beach bag, squeeze bottle and tea tin.

I am a stay-at-home mom with three children—all still in diapers. There were many great baby-product offers last year. I received three Huggies T-shirts, three Luvs T-shirts, two Huggies baby sun hats, a Snuggly bear, a Cookie Monster doll and night light, a baseball, a first aid kit, a Chubs bib and a baby-sitter memo board.

My husband thinks I am a bit odd for responding to these offers, but they bring me a great deal of satisfaction. I look forward to receiving the mail each day, and my children love to open the boxes and packages when the premiums arrive.

The money I save all goes into a special account, and I am planning on a nice vacation with my husband using my savings and his frequent-flyer mileage. — Carol Morton, Howell, New Jersey.

Dear Carol—This is what refunding is all about: turning Universal Product Code symbols, which would otherwise be useless, into cash. It is a great game, and the national brand manufacturers invite everyone to play.

Sending for two or three mail-in offers a week is not hard, especially if you are buying for a family. Consider all of the branded items you purchase at the supermarket each week. Most of them will have refund or premium offers at some time during the year. Many brands have several offers each year.

You could start saving the required proofs of purchase after you see the offer advertised or find a mail-in certificate at the supermarket. But avid refunders save all of their proofs of purchase, so when they find the offer they may already have some of the required Universal Product Codes or labels. They may even have all the requirements!

Here are some refunding tips for collecting all those proofs of purchase.

The most commonly requested proof of purchase is the Universal Product Code found on each package (the thin black and white lines with the number beneath them). I use photo albums to file my Universal Product Codes. With lots of transparent pockets they making filing easy.

Identify your Universal Product codes; many of them do not have identification for the name of the product or the size. Size is important, because many refund offers require proofs of purchase from specific sizes of a product.

Here's a refund form to write for: a coupon good for one free Maxwell House Filter Packs (up to a $3.99 value). GENERAL FOODS/MAXWELL HOUSE Filter Packs Offer, P.O. Box 8034, Kankakee, IL 60902. This offer is good until July 31, 1992 (or while supplies last), but requests for the form must be post-marked by May 31, 1992. While waiting for the form, save one proof of purchase/Universal Product Code cut from the side of the Maxwell House Filter Packs Naturally Decaffeinated Ground Coffee Canister, along with the cash-register receipt with the purchase price circled.

Here is this week's list of refund offers. Start looking for the required refund forms, which you can obtain at the supermarket, in newspaper and magazine advertisements and from trading with friends. Meanwhile, start collecting the needed proofs of purchase as detailed below. Remember, some offers are not available in all areas of the country.

Today's refund offers have a value of $8.19.

TALK TO US

BREAKING UP, NOT DATING OFTEN TOUGH

Q: I'm a junior and my girlfriend is a senior. We just broke up. We really still like each other, but she's graduating and going off to college. We are both miserable, but we think we did the right thing. What do you think? — 17-year-old male

A: STUDENT PANELISTS FROM GRISSOM HIGH SCHOOL, HUNTSVILLE, ALA.: You did the right thing. Long-distance relationships are very hard to maintain even for people who have been dating for many years. Your girlfriend is going to be in a completely new environment and she will probably meet new people, but she will still remember all of the people she became close to in high school.

We suggest the two of you keep in touch, and when she comes for holidays and such that you still see each other. But you should also respect each other enough not to make each other miss out on the fun of the upcoming year.

What we're saying is that you must be reasonable in your situation as you have shown in your decision to break up. You can still be close if you're not doing everything together. It will take some time to get used to not having her around, and we're sure it will feel the same for her.

However, you are both doing each other a favor by giving each other space to grow. If you find that in time you are destined to remain together, then you will have to sit and talk to each other about that. In the meantime, enjoy your senior year and remember that you made the right decision.

PAT AND DAVID: You sound like two honest, caring people who realize that it's awfully hard to maintain a no-see, long-distance relationship. However, being "right" doesn't keep you from hurting.

If you're still feeling miserable or angry, talk about it with a friend or counselor you trust. We hope you'll be able to remain friends even though you're no longer boyfriend-girlfriend.

TALKBACK FROM PUEBLO, COLO.: To (the) boy in Tampa, Fla., who cannot find a girlfriend and "would be happy with a lunch date." I, too, am a senior in high school (who) has never had a boyfriend her entire life.

Perhaps you aren't the problem in your attempts to find a girlfriend. Perhaps the problem is the girls with whom you are trying to establish a relationship.

You seem to be a very considerate and generous person. ... There is a lot of mucho-macho (deleted) in my school and I'm getting sick of it, as I know many girls my age are. I want to see some guys who aren't afraid of being HUMAN, who don't have to hide behind a tough mask of "strength" ...

The girls who are attracted to these macho "stud" men are women who are perfect candidates for abuse and who easily submit to their demands. ... You shouldn't feel alone. There are many of us out there (who) are "single."

FROM SEYMOUR, TENN.: This is concerning the letter from the senior in Tampa, Fla. I was wondering if you could give me his name and address. I would like to write to him and give him words of encouragement. ... I would just like him to know that there are girls out there who appreciate a gentleman who takes the time to get to know her.

NATASHA'S STARS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) One thing no one can accuse you of, especially this week, is dragging your heels. Mars moving into your sign has you the firecracker of the zodiac. You heat up any situation. And as for the weekend—ooh la la, play you will and play you must.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You are such an earthy, solid sign, and this week you need to gather together your possessions. Be careful though—someone may really resent being treated like a possession. Talking could further inflame them. Try actions rather than words. Work on a cozy, cuddly weekend at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep a certain matter hush-hush. Remember, secrets can be fun. You could get what you want, whatever that may be (and as long as it is within reason). Though money is on your brain, you certainly have a party all week and weekend long. Make the most of these "high" vibes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You ride the roller coaster one more time. And remember what goes up, must come down. Or better yet, what goes down must go up again. And you do (go up and stay up) for quite a while. You're the "personality kid" lassoing that object of your desire. Be sure you want it.

LEO (July 23-August 22) You are on a roll most of the week. You may plummet for several days, but rather than cry the blues, recharge your batteries. You explode into a burst of energy and vitality this weekend. Those around you burst into a similar frenzy.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22) You're on top of the world most of this week. First, a you're veritable force to be dealt with at work. Then you're highly sought after on the social scene. Worry less, dear Virgo. Trust and it all works out. Plan a secluded weekend away with a loved one.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22) Responsibilities could hit very hard this week, but in between handling everything, you manage to focus, create and manifest. You have many, many reasons this weekend to celebrate and toast to life. A special friendship plays an enormous role in the outcome—of the weekend, that is.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21) You gain big time with your interpersonal skills this week. Business associates, as well as social acquaintances, respond big time to you. Of importance is to get down to the basics to rebuild so you can skyrocket to your desires. Definitely a heavenly period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21) You'll like the next few days, since everyone who knocks on your door seems to want and adore you. Careful, careful—don't mix business with pleasure though it certainly might seem tempting. Consider calling a spade, a spade, and taking a vacation week off!

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19) You are definitely the workhorse of the zodiac. It seems as if you are psychic, because you intuitively know how to get it all done as fast as possible. And for good reason as the fun times roll in early this week. You charge the air with intensity and ... Oh well, it is spring.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18) You not only delight those close to you this week, but you infuse others with happiness, too. As you skip through the fields, please do take time to be loving to a friend who can't seem to get past the moody blues. Right now you are on the magic carpet of life.

PISCES (February 19-March 20) You need to recharge quickly this week if you are to handle all that breezes in. Go for the moment (and the opportunity), because what is once offered, may never be offered again. There is plenty of time for work tomorrow. (Or how about next week?)

BRUCE WILLIAMS

SMART MONEY

Deduct limo costs for late service

DEAR BRUCE: Seven months ago, my husband of 40 years passed away. We made all of the funeral arrangements with a local mortician. Everything progressed normally until it was time for us to be picked up by limousine to be taken to the funeral.

The limousine didn't appear. We called the funeral director, and he said it would be there in a few minutes. Finally, in desperation, we grabbed one of the family cars to get to the church on time. You can't imagine how frustrating this was. The funeral director followed up during the services, and the limousine was there to take us to the grave site, but I was extremely upset.

I have yet to pay the funeral bill. I think that they cost me a great deal of suffering and anguish and should be punished, at least by not being paid for the funeral.

My children think I'm being unreasonable, and my attorney says he would not feel comfortable defending this position. How can they get away with this and what can I do?—G.B., Philadelphia

DEAR G.B.: Obviously, you were and are distressed, and that's understandable. But the mere lack of a limousine from your home to church is hardly grounds for not paying for the entire funeral.

Deduct whatever the pro-rated cost might be for the transportation from your home to the church, but pay the balance of the funeral costs. As your attorney has tactfully tried to point out, if the matter goes to court (as it most certainly will), you will lose and it may be you will not only lose the amount that is owed but be required to pay the funeral director's attorney expenses as well.

If I were you, I would write the check and put this matter behind you. Please accept my condolences on your loss.

DEAR BRUCE: We are going on an extended vacation. We are perfectly satisfied with the arrangements the tour operator, who was contacted through our local travel agent, has made.

You have always cautioned that it is wise to charge trips of this kind on a credit card, and we concur. Our problem is that the trip far exceeds our credit limit.

Can you suggest some way that we can accomplish the charge. Our problem is that we've contacted the credit-card company, and they say that while our credit is A-1 we are maxed-out as far as the available credit, relative to our income.—N.I., Cincinnati

DEAR N.I.: I don't think it's a big problem. Give the credit-card company the additional money in advance, but still, make the charge on the credit card.

This way, in the event that some service is not delivered, you will have a much easier manner of redress. For example, suppose the well-intentioned tour operator makes a deal with an airline that is no longer in business by the time your trip is ready. You will have a clear claim against the credit-card company for a credit, because the service was paid for and not delivered.

I am certain that the credit-card company will not have any problem with your making an advance payment of whatever it takes to pay for the trip, and still charge it on their card. They are in no jeopardy, and they will make their commission. You ought to pay off the trip as nearly as you're able, that way you'll have the availability of the credit card during the vacation.

DEE AND TOM HARDIE

GRANDPARENTING

GARDEN PROVIDES FUN ALL SUMMER LONG

Q: As we enter springtime, I recall the romantic writing of Francis Bacon, "God Almighty first planted a garden; and, indeed, it is the purest of human pleasures."

I believe this is true. However, I have a 9-year-old granddaughter, Lisa, who lives nearby, and only cares about dolls and TV, and never gets out into her parents' garden. She will visit me for weekends for the rest of the spring and all of summer.

As a gardener, how can I introduce her to these "purest of human pleasures"? — still Hopeful, Chambersburg, Pa.

A: When Dee worked as an editor in London soon after World War II, she was greatly impressed by the British character and their love of gardens and flowers. Despite the devastating bombing, Londoners still nurtured their tiny garden plots. Even apartment dwellers kept their feet on the ground with colorful window flower boxes.

By a timely coincidence, we recently chatted with our good friend Rosemary Verey, of Gloucestershire, England, one of the premier gardeners of the world. She advises the Prince of Wales on what to plant, along with the pop star Elton John. She has also written five books on gardening, and edited seven more.

Mrs. Verey, who has nine grandchildren, said that one of the most dramatic ways to introduce Lisa to gardening would be to work with her and plant evening primrose, a beautiful yellow flower. As the temperature drops in the evening, she could actually marvel at the buds unfolding.

Lisa could also hear a gentle crackling noise as the flowers open, she added. The petals at first are like crepe paper and later like satin, and Lisa could touch, and feel, and see action as well as beauty.

In the same manner, the buds of Oriental poppies are the size of ping pong balls, and when the green sepals begin to open, the bright red poppy petals are revealed and in a few hours the flowers will open and bees will discover the nectar.

This summer Rosemary suggested that you plant sunflower seeds, an annual. About a week later, if the weather is favorable, you and Lisa should see them beginning to grow and flourish. And as you probably know they grow to great heights — seven to eight feet. This should amaze any child. Then at the end of the summer Lisa can harvest the seeds from the face of the flower, and feed the seeds to the birds in the winter.

Another experiment would be to line a jam jar with blotting paper and place lima beans between the glass and paper. Cover the bottom of the jar with water to keep the paper moist, and watch the beans actually germinate.

Encourage Lisa, and also her friends, Rosemary added, to go out into the garden to pick their favorite flowers, and bring them into your house and arrange them to their own satisfaction, maybe in a simple jar. Urge them to experiment!

Also, if you have enough room, plant some carrots, Rosemary suggested, and encourage Lisa to pull them up, and eat them on the spot — always a pleasure, always a surprise.

Rosemary Verey's latest books include "The Garden Gate" and "A Countrywoman's Year," both published by Little Brown and Co., Boston.

The Grand Remark of the Week:

"I was in the kitchen and my 6-year-old grandson was playing in the back yard. When small boys become too quiet, look out! I asked, 'Damon, what are you doing? Remember that God sees you.'

He replied, 'I know he does, Grandma, but you don't!'" — Frances E. Sutton, Cocoa, Fla.

We welcome your Grand Remarks of the Week. Many thanks.

Dear Abby

Stepmom is hurt when She's overlooked on Mother's Day

DEAR ABBY: Sixteen years ago just before Mother's Day, I clipped your column from the Chicago Tribune because it described my own situation so perfectly, I could have written it. Please run it again. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago, I married a divorced man whose sons came to live with us because their "real" mother thought they would be better off with their father. (They were then 11 and 13.)

I love these boys and I think they feel some affection for me, yet on Mother's Day they always remember their biological mother with flowers, and I don't even get a card.

In six years I've done a ton of laundry, mended their clothes cooked for them, shopped for them and spent hundreds of hours chauffeuring them around. I've nursed them when they were sick and listened to their troubles. I lectured them about sex and drugs, instilling in them decent moral values. I couldn't have done more had they been my biological children.

Their "real" mother has had very little time for them. She has never taken them on a trip or asked them to spend a holiday with her. (She phones occasionally and makes plans to be with them, but if something better comes along, she cancels.)

I think stepmothers deserve a little recognition on Mother's Day. Just because we didn't bear the children doesn't mean we don't feel like "real" mothers. It would be a kindness to all stepmothers if you would print this.

HURT ON MOTHER'S DAY

DEAR HURT: I have long held the view that giving birth to a child doesn't make a woman a mother any more than owning a piano makes a person a musician. But the woman who takes a child into her home because she wants to, and raises that child with love and understanding, is in every sense of the word a "real" mother.

DEAR ABBY: I have read many letters in your column about sending announcements of graduations, births, anniversaries, weddings, etc., and I agree that it may appear to be a subtle hint for a gift.

I am 42 years old and recently graduated with my MBA. How to share my accomplishment with acquaintances from past years—the ones we send Christmas cards to—and not appear to be asking for gifts or money was also my dilemma.

I solved the situation by mailing announcements of my graduation after the fact. We could have only six people witness our graduation because of space limitations in the auditorium. I then added a separate letter telling them that I had finally earned my MBA! I also typed in bold letters: NO GIFTS, PLEASE—JUST JOB LEADS AND/OR REFERRALS.

Abby, not one person sent a gift. Several gave me employment ideas and one even mailed the classified ads from the Los Angeles Times!

SEEKING EMPLOYMENT

DEAR SEEKING: Congratulations. Thanks for a couple of bright ideas that other graduates can use. I especially like your "No gifts, please—just job leads and/or referrals." It will offend no one, and all you need is one lead or referral that will pay off.

DEAR ABBY: I smiled when I read the letter about the lady who was accused of talking to herself.

My mother, may she rest in peace, used to talk to herself. Once I said, "Mom, you're talking to yourself again."

She said, "Yes, I know, but I'm the only person I know who won't give me an argument."

IDA IN COBLESKILL, N.Y.

YOUR HEALTH

Q: I've been eating cereals with fiber just as the magazines and television ads say I should. I don't feel any sicker or healthier than I felt before. Can you explain what fiber is supposed to be doing for me?

A: Fiber has caught on in recent years and initial reports seemed to indicate that adding a reasonable amount of fiber to one's diet could reduce the chance of developing cancer of the colon (large intestine) and rectum. Scientists now definitely believe that an increased amount of fiber in the diet is advantageous to health in general. Americans normally eat an estimated 10 or 12 grams of fiber every day. Raising this level to about 30 grams a day is suggested.

Fiber is an indigestible plant cell element. One of its important characteristics is that it can absorb water, thus it thickens the contents of the stomach and intestines. Because of this, food moves more slowly through the entire intestinal tract, and this allows the body to absorb more of the valuable nutrients in the food we eat. In addition, fiber tends to soften the stool and helps to rid the body of fats and bile fats.

Although exact quantitative evidence of the reduction of colorectal cancer is not positively established, fiber is important to good health.

It is true that fiber is an enormous boost to the cereal industry. But, the educational advantage of that industry's advertising is great. Through it, Americans have learned to include a sensible, moderate fiber intake in their diet.

It is undeniable that the addition of bran in cereal to diet has been extremely significant in alteration of "intestinal behavior." Constipation and diarrhea have been markedly reduced by judicious use of fiber in cereals.

It is also interesting to note that for a long time, the whole idea of fiber was treated almost as a joke in medicine. Today, it is a firm reality. Incidentally, I cannot help pointing out that in the last few years and, more importantly, the past few months, a great deal of information is coming to light about the judicious use of vitamins and food supplements. Many scientists and physicians had taken too casually the teachings of some scientists who were most enthusiastic about the value of vitamins as a preventative of disease. The key, of course, is "judicious" use of vitamins taken in doses recommended by the physician. Unfortunately, there is a tendency to believe that if 200 units of anything is good, 500 units is better. This is false thinking. Vitamins are very significant in their contribution to health, but when overused in dosages that are excessive, they can be dangerous.

A Mother's Hands

The hands that rocked my cradle were the hands that shaped my life. The hands that held me gently were the hands that kept away strife. The hands that were soft and gentle were the hands that wiped my tears. The hands that were strong and subtle were the hands that dissolved my fears. The hands that held my comfort were the hands of my mother's art. The hands that are gnarled and wrinkled are the hands that hold my heart.

Happy Mother's Day, Mom

Bush denounce Medicare and school lunches

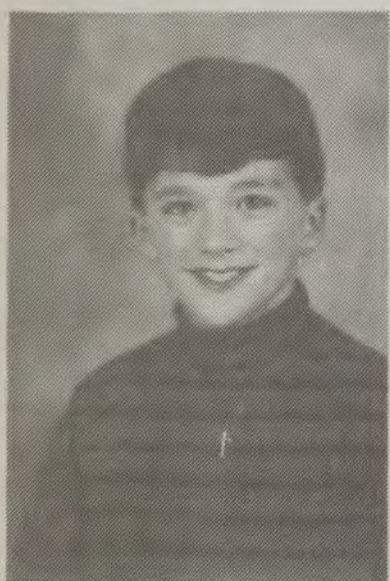

President Bush had just proven the four-year allegations that he completely lacks any kind of a domestic agenda to be true. U.S. Rep. Chris Perkins' office announce recently. Perkins' statement came in response to the President's announcement that the riots in Los Angeles and other cities across the country were rooted in the failure of the broad range of social programs—including Medicare, Head Start, job corps, Chapter 1 programs, and the Appalachia Regional Commission—initiated by Lyndon Johnson in the 1960s.

"This is a public outrage," Perkins said. "In effect, the President has just denounced school lunches, Medicare, and Head Start. He has dismissed Eastern Kentucky, as well as other rural and urban regions across America which benefit from such social programs."

President Johnson announced his "War on Poverty" in Martin County in 1965; since then, there has been a fifty-percent reduction in the number of people living below the poverty level in Eastern Kentucky. "I'd call that progress," Perkins stated. "How can you look at a poor child who is reaching his/her potential because of subsidized lunches and Chapter 1 programs...and then blame that system for the violence in Los Angeles. It just doesn't paint a coherent picture."

The lesson of Los Angeles is that poverty, homelessness, and racism cannot be ignored. "If anything, the situation in Los Angeles should be an urgent signal that more needs to be done in this country in the way of social programs," Perkins asserted. "For the president to publicly denounce the social programs that have changed the face of America is simply an outrage."

Noel Price is among students to be recognized

TIP, the Duke University Talent Identification Program, is sponsoring a recognition ceremony to honor some of Kentucky's most talented seventh-graders. Noel Blake Price who attends Adams Middle School will be one of over 660 students recognized for their academic achievement on May 28 at Van Meter Auditorium, Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green. He is the son of Rose and Phillip Price of Prestonsburg.

All students attending the ceremony scored as well or better than the average college-bound high school senior on either the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Testing Assessment (ACT). These tests are administered as part of an annual Talent Search, which TIP has operated since 1980.

TIP conducts recognition ceremonies in a 16-state region across the Southeast, Midwest and Southwest. These ceremonies are the largest of their kind in the world with nearly 25,000 people attending in 1991.

Over 60,000 mathematically and verbally gifted seventh-graders were identified by the Talent Search this year. As a benefit of their participation, TIP offers students a variety of educational materials and publications.

TIP is a nonprofit, educational organization. The program receives support from student fees and donations from individuals, corporations and foundations.

ACHS' 8th Annual Math Day

Participants in Allen Central High School's 8th annual Math Day/Math Challenge on April 30 included students from Duff, W.D. Osborne, Maytown and Martin elementary schools. The event was sponsored by ACHS' Math Club.

Math Challenge hosted by Allen Central

The eighth annual Math Day/Math Challenge was hosted by Allen Central Math Club April 30. Duff Elementary won first place in written assessment with Martin Elementary placing second. Special guests W.D. Osborne Elementary placed second in the quick recall competition as Duff Elementary finished first. Individual winners in written assessment were as follows: Ephraim O'Quinn (1st, Duff); Kyle Akers (2nd, Osborne); Allison Conley (3rd, Duff); Adam Coleman (4th, Martin).

Representing Maytown Elementary were Pam Goble, Dremia Kilgore, Crystal Martin, and Donna Gibson. Maytown students were accompanied by coach Forrest Hughes.

W.D. Osborne students, coached by Rita Caudill, were as follows: Anthony Yonts, Sharlonda Sammons, Kyle Akers, Donna Sha Newsome, Leigh Ann Thornberry, Amanda Forman, Lisa Moore, Amy King and Angie Hall. The group was accompanied by parent Lois Newsome.

Coach Doug DeRossett's Martin team was comprised of the following students: Amy Crum, Shelley Ward, Regina Sexton, Kelli Thompson, Tabitha Meade, Jada Webb, Amanda Holbrook, Shannon Yates, April Spurlock, Brandon Slone, Bobbie Clay, Regina Frasure, Sabrina Hancock, Amy Howard, Amanda Sammons, Beau Tackett, Tom Jenkins, P.J. Holbrook and Amanda Yates.

J.A. Duff Elementary was represented by Ephraim O'Quinn, Amanda Wallen, Jessica Slone, Karen Wallen, Allison Conley, Latish Yates and coached by Stanton Watson.

Members of the math club officiated the competitions, presided over the game room and provided refreshments for their guests. The following students worked in various capacities: Claude Webb, Becky Isaac, Gina Scott, Michelle Corbett, Melissa Corbett, Melissa Lafferty, Connie Brown, Connie Marshall, Angela

Trophies were awarded by ACHS principal Jody Sword to winners. Math Day '92 shirts were given all visiting students. Shirts were graciously donated by Mountain Right-of-Way, Amos Gibson, President, and Garrett Quick Stop (formerly the Loose Caboose), Cheryl Gibson, owner.

The event was coordinated by Pam Frasure, Charlotte Moore and Joyce Watson. All questions and answers were written and secured by Joyce Watson.

Piarist School to hold exams

The Piarist School will hold an entrance exam for any student wishing to enter the ninth or tenth grades this fall. The exam will be held at the school at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, May 9 and will last until noon.

The school administers the Scholastic Testing Service Standard High School Placement Test, which tests students in five areas: verbal skills, quantitative skills, reading, mathematics, and language. College Preparatory Students usually score in the 70th percentile or above in these areas.

The Piarist School is a small, private, college preparatory school, located on Route 80 in Martin. The school is tuition-free and has an exceptionally low teacher-to-student ratio.

Students may register for the exam on Saturday morning. For more information, contact Rev. Thomas Carroll at 285-3950.

Area vocational schools are winners in regional meet

Region 11 Vocational Industrial Clubs of America Regional Skill Olympics held its competition April 1, at the Mayo State Vocational-Technical School. These events were a preliminary qualifier for the VICA National Leadership Conference and United States Skill Olympics to be held in Louisville, June 22-26.

Winners were:
Brian Branham of Floyd County Tech High School, first place in the secondary Electronics; James Manns of Floyd County Tech High School, second place in the secondary Electronics; and Alex Hughes of Floyd County Tech High School, third place in the secondary Electronics;

Paul Gayhurd of Floyd County Tech High School, first place in the secondary Precision Machining; and Grady Dawson of Floyd County Tech High School, third place in the secondary Precision Machining;

John Click of Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, first place in the post-secondary Auto Body Repair; Russell Conn of Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, second place in the post-secondary Auto Body Repair;

Ansel Hall of Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, first place in the post-secondary Job Skill Demo A; Everett Gayheart of Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, second place in the post-secondary Carpentry;

Stefanie Cantrell, Baxter Murphy, Richard Anderson, Russell May, Charles Mims, James Little, Rodney Stanley, Kevin Maynard, William Chandler and Chuck Harris, students at Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, first place winners in the post-secondary Chapter Business Team;

Shawn McKenzie, William Bentley, Robert Mims, Darren Gin-

ter, Hillary Rose, Mike Cline and Matthew Kendrick, students at Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, were second place winners in the post-secondary Opening and Closing;

Shawn McKenzie of Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, third place in the post-secondary Residential Wiring; and Sidney Meade of Mayo State Vocational-Technical School, first place in the post-secondary Air Conditioning and Refrigeration.

To earn the right to compete in the regional contest, entrants must have finished in the top three places in their school's Skill Olympics.

First place winners will represent Region 11 at the State VICA Skill Olympics to be held in Paducah, on May 6-9.

Students named to dean's list

David Lee Spiggle, a graduate of Prestonsburg High School, and William Sheldon Terry, a graduate of Allen Central High School, have made the dean's list for academic achievement at Transylvania University in Lexington, Ky., for the 1992 winter term.

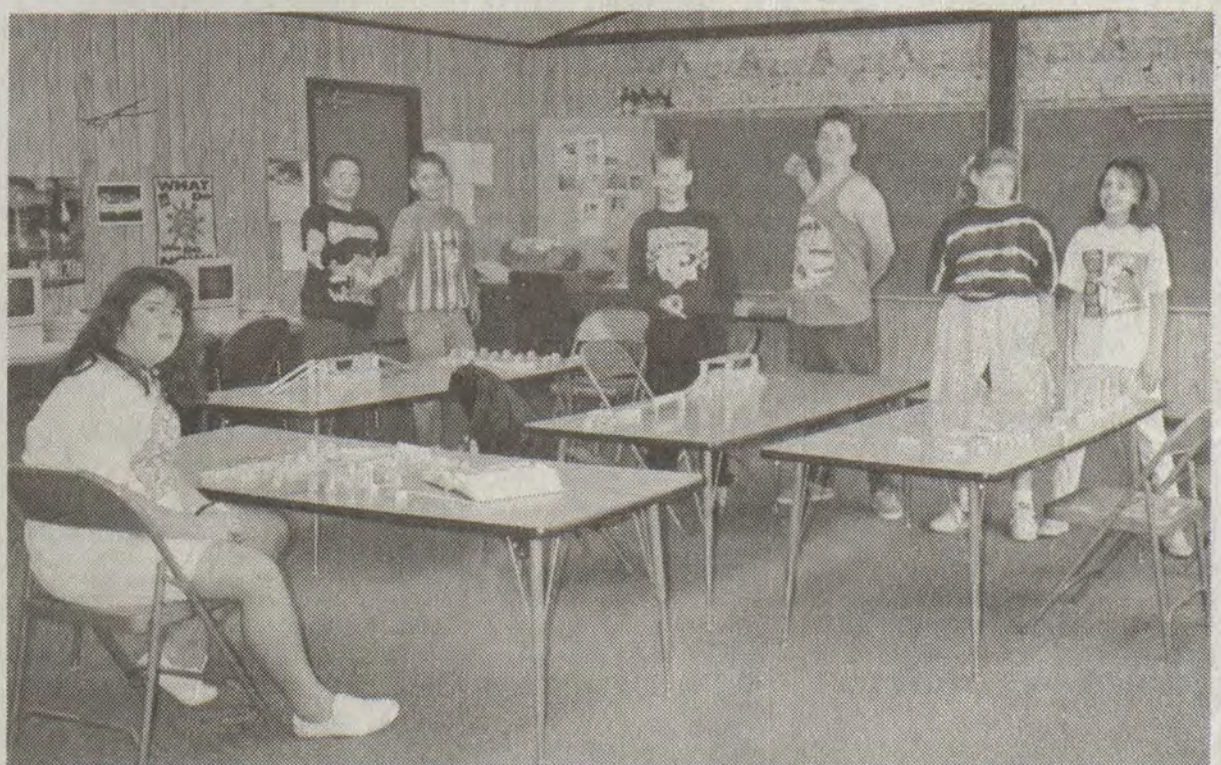

A student must achieve at least a 3.5 grade point average during the term to be named to the dean's list.

Spiggle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Spiggle Sr. of Prestonsburg. Terry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Robert Terry of Martin.

Easter fun at Auxier

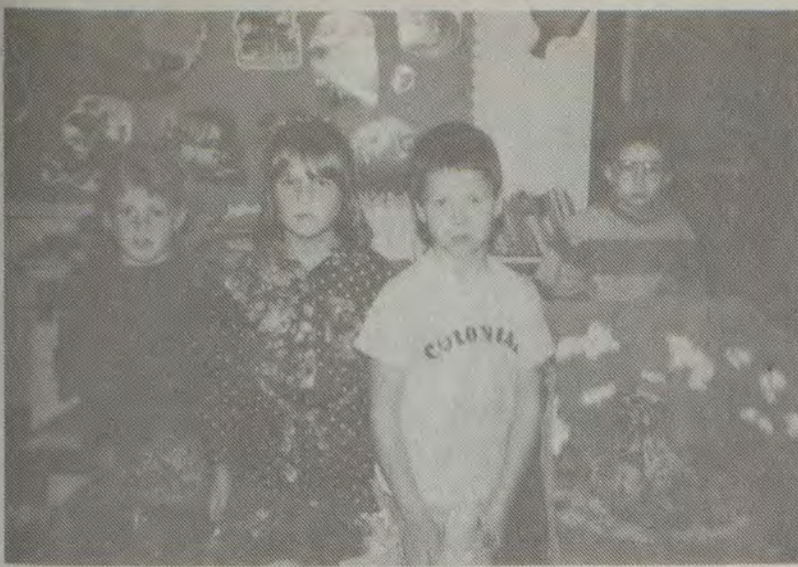

The students in Mrs. Ford's class at Auxier Elementary had a great time making Easter eggs for the parents. The eggs were made from modeling dough which the students made, colored, rolled out and cut with cookie cutters.

Oops! Back to the drawing board

Grade six students in Mary Scinta's class at Auxier Elementary were recently challenged to build a wooden bridge out of scrap wood using the principle of weight and balance. To their credit and surprise, students created various bridges, including: a covered bridge, a swinging bridge, a walking bridge, a two level bridge, and a high water bridge. All bridges stood independently without the aid of glue or interlocking pieces, a task not easily achieved when a table gets bumped accidentally or a hand makes a slip. Pictured with their works are: Jessica Branham, Clabe Hall, Donald Wilcox, Jesse P. Craft, Bryon Marsillett, Rebecca Hensley and Kimberly Crider.

Prestonsburg Elementary honor roll

A lot of lava

The students in Mrs. Donna Collins third grade class at Prestonsburg Elementary School exhibit their volcanoes made for a study in science and reading.

A fruitful thanks

Prestonsburg Elementary School recently took the opportunity to thank the Prestonsburg Fire Department employees for the many times they have assisted them at their school. They presented them with a basket of fruit to show our appreciation to them for their kind and efficient service they have given to them through the school years.

Smokey Bear visits

With a Rangers hat and shovel and a pair of dungarees, you will find him in the forest always sniffin' at the breeze. That familiar line almost always holds true except the students at Prestonsburg Elementary got to see Smokey Bear up close and personal as he made a visit to their school recently. Teaching the kids about preventing forest fires has always been Smokey's main concern. For a special treat, Smokey and his friends gave the students a small tree which they could plant and the students in return gave Smokey and his helpers smiles and hugs to remember them.

CPR training through the American Red Cross

The Auxier Elementary 8th grade class has been working toward certification in Standard First Aid and CPR training through American Red Cross during the month of April. Bill Callahan, who is an EMT for Prestonsburg Fire Department and certified instructor for American Red Cross, volunteered his time and spent 3 days with the 8th grade students teaching them the skills to enable them to pass the test for certification. The certification consists of a written test and a performance test where they practiced the skills on the appropriate mannequins used in CPR and practiced first aid techniques on each other. Sixty percent of the students received certification in CPR and Standard First Aid from the American Red Cross.
