Recommends 20-year sentence :

Jury finds trucker guilty of murder

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A Pike County coal truck driver was found guilty of wanton murder Tuesday in connection with a traffic accident last year that killed a Floyd County woman.

A Floyd County Jury recommended a 20-year prison sentence for Michael Johnson, 38, of Virgie. Johnson was driving a coal truck that ran through the intersection of U.S. 23 and Route 979 at Harold on July 2, 1991 and struck a pickup truck driven by Glenda Akers, 40. Akers was pronounced dead at the scene.

Johnson's wife collapsed in tears after Circuit Court Judge Harold Stumbo ordered Johnson taken to the Floyd County Jail. His wife sobbed "please God help us" and Johnson told her to "take care of that boy of mine."

The case began Monday with jury selection and testimony began Tuesday because Commonwealth Attorney Jerry Patton was unable to attend Monday's proceedings.

Johnson's attorney, Ned Pillersdorf, said he will petition the court for a new trial because the evidence in the case did not fit the criteria for a wanton murder charge.

Johnson took the stand in his own defense and tearfully told the jury that when he approached the intersection the traffic light was green.

"I looked down to adjust my air conditioner and when I looked up I saw blue to the right," Johnson sobbed. "I slammed on the brakes and sounded the horn hoping she'd stop. I was not trying to run it."

Patton countered that Johnson expected other motorists to yield to him because he was a coal truck driver.

Johnson said he swerved his rig to the left hoping to miss Akers' vehicle but that Akers also swerved to her left trying to avoid the crash.

"If I had thought quick enough to turn to the right, I might have missed her," Johnson said. "I'd have a lot more for it to be me than her."

Witnesses testified that Johnson's truck did veer to the left and they heard him blow his horn.

Pillersdorf asked the jury "not to compound a tragedy" by finding Johnson guilty of wanton murder and said "at best" Johnson was at fault in the accident.

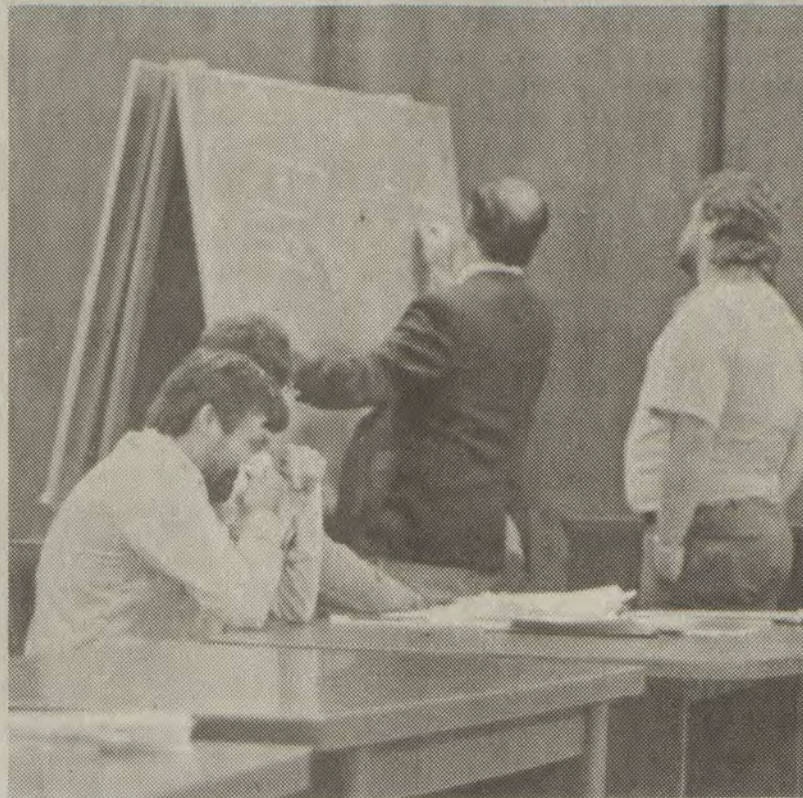

"If we send people to prison for running a red light, then the last one out turn out the lights," Pillersdorf said.

Patton told the jury that Johnson deliberately ran the red light because he wanted to save time so he could haul another load of coal that day.

"This was not an accident," Patton said. "He is saying it's okay to sacrifice a human life to get another load in."

Judge Stumbo earlier overruled three motions by Pillersdorf to dismiss or reduce the charges.

Local option vote at McDowell Saturday

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

There will be a local option "wet/dry" election at the John Ant #22 voting precinct at McDowell Saturday, August 8.

Almost 140 of the precinct's 546 registered voters signed a petition which was delivered to Floyd County Clerk Carla "Robinson" Boyd on June 27 requesting the election to determine whether or not the sale of alcoholic beverages would continue to be allowed in the precinct, which has been wet since the June, 1982 election which legalized the sale of beer, wine and liquor in Floyd County.

The petition contained 137 signatures although only 58 signatures were required to qualify for the special election, Boyd said.

Although there is only one business in the precinct that currently sells alcoholic beverages, Boyd said, area residents who signed the petition are trying to stop the proposed placement of a nightclub in the precinct. The application for the proposed business has not yet been approved.

The officers for Saturday's election will be Bessie Elliott, Ruby Christine Stumbo, Larry Foster Stumbo and Vickie Kendrick.

The voting booths will be located in the gymnasium of McDowell High School. The polls will be open from 6 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Persons with questions regarding Saturday's election should contact Carla "Robinson" Boyd at 886-3816.

Pioneer Folk Festival this weekend :

Auxier to turn back the hands of time

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Thrill-seekers and history buffs alike will flock to the town of Auxier this weekend for the annual Pioneer Folk Festival, which coincides with the Auxier Homecoming '92, a reunion of all those who at one time lived in the community or attended the Auxier Consolidated School.

Auxier, which began as a frontier settlement and in later years became a booming coal town, is a community rich in Kentucky history.

Mathias Harman founded the first area settlement in Blockhouse Bottom just across the river from the present community in October, 1789, naming the region Harman's Station.

Unfortunately, the first settlers of Harman's Station returned to their

Seven to race for two seats on board

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

At least one new face and one familiar face will be seen on the Floyd County Board of Education next year as seven candidates will seek two of the three seats up for grabs this November.

Board member Tommy Boyd is unopposed in the race for district three after potential candidate Robert L. Stewart's petition was declared invalid because it lacked the required 20 signatures of registered voters in that district.

Stewart was frantically trying to round up signers at the Floyd County Courthouse Tuesday before the 4 p.m. deadline.

Boyd is seeking his second four-year term on the board.

In the district four race, incumbent board member Dr. Mary Hall will square off against Edward Patton Jr., a former director of transportation for the school system.

Patton, who has butted heads with Hall before, sued the school board and won his case in U.S. District Court in 1990 claiming he was fired as transportation director for political reasons.

Five contenders filed for the position vacated in district five by 20-year incumbent James Duff, who is ineligible to run because he has two daughters who are teachers in the school system.

Kentucky's Education Reform Act prohibits board members from holding office when they have close relatives employed in the school system.

Hattie Cooley Owens, wife of district two magistrate Jackie Edford Owens, Rabon D. Flanery, deputy sheriff Charles Edward Ousley, Phyllis B. Honshell and Jeffrey Prater filed petitions for Duff's seat on the board.

The drawing for positions on the ballot for the November 3 election will be held at 2 p.m. Friday in Floyd County Court Clerk Carla Boyd's office.

The three board members elected in November will serve alongside board chairman Ray "Shag" Campbell and newcomer Eddie Billips who have two years left in their term.

Board members serve four-year terms and the race is non-partisan.

Voter education forums to be traveling show

The Floyd County Chamber of Commerce, in association with County Court Clerk Carla Boyd and Prestonsburg Community College, is developing plans to conduct voter education forums this fall in each of Floyd County's four magisterial districts.

The forums are expected to focus on four constitutional questions that voters will be asked to decide in the November 3 election.

Non-partisan information on other races will also be provided as will instructions on how to operate voting machines.

An actual voting booth will be used to demonstrate voting procedures.

Rules and regulations governing absentee voting will also be discussed.

Times, places and dates for the forums have not yet been determined.

Police attack supply side of pot economy

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

While the Kentucky State Police and sheriff's and police departments statewide are conducting Operation Round-up in order to curtail the "demand" side of drug trafficking, the Floyd County Sheriff's Department is still working diligently to utterly destroy the "supply" side.

Deputy Sergeant Lloyd Powers again ventured into the Floyd County hills Friday in what he terms a "search and destroy mission" to recover illicit marijuana plants before they can be sold to "rot somebody's brains."

Powers recovered Friday what would amount to an estimated $15,000 worth of marijuana if it had been allowed to be properly cultivated. Powers found the marijuana on a mountain top near Melvin, acting on a tip from the owner of the property.

Operation Round-up snags three in Floyd

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

At least three Floyd Countians and one Pike County man are currently lodged in the Floyd County Jail as a result of the largest drug bust in Kentucky history.

George E. Kidd, John D. Hall, Charles E. Hall and Arnold E. Tackett were arrested Tuesday morning by officers of the Pikeville Post of the Kentucky State Police as a part of Operation Round-Up, an annual sting operation conducted by the Kentucky State Police and local police and sheriff's departments to wipe out street-level drug sale and abuse.

Kidd, 35, of Harold was charged with two counts of trafficking in a controlled substance. John D. Hall, 25, of Maytown, and Charles Hall, 22, of Wayland, were each charged with trafficking in over eight ounces of marijuana.

Arnold E. Tackett, 59, of Pikeville, was charged with three counts of trafficking in a controlled substance and one count of trafficking in Schedule III narcotics.

Operation Round-Up also resulted in the arrest of over 60 alleged drug dealers in Martin, Magoffin and Johnson counties. There were 63 suspected drug traffickers from those counties lodged in the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center in Paintsville by 1 p.m. Tuesday.

State Police Commissioner Billy Wellman said in a press conference Tuesday morning that Operation Round-Up was a warning to drug dealers.

"While law enforcement must continue to fight the drug problem from the 'demand' side," Wellman said, "we know that attacking the 'supply' side is a fundamental part of the war on drugs.... We will continue to make our presence felt when it comes to drug dealing in this state."

Over 1,000 charges had reportedly been filed statewide as a result of Operation Round-Up as of 5 p.m. Tuesday.

The Paintsville Herald contributed to this article.

Auxier

Members of the Auxier family have lived in the Blockhouse Bottom ever since.

John C. C. Mayo purchased land across the river from Blockhouse Bottom in 1909 and sold the property to the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania-based North-East Coal Company.

In 1910, North-East resident Allen D. Smith sent Richard C. Thomas to the area to begin building the town. Thomas personally supervised the construction of the first house in Auxier in April, 1910. Soon after, Thomas hired Lew Davidson, who along with his five sons is considered the builder of the downtown area.

The first Auxier school, a three-room schoolhouse built in 1910, was moved room by room and made into private homes on Grace Avenue in 1927.

The Auxier Consolidated School was constructed on the old school site in September, 1927. Although the Consolidated School burned in December of the same year, Auxier residents rebuilt it and classes resumed by the next spring.

The first high school class graduated from the Consolidated School in 1932 and the last graduated in 1961, when the school was merged into Prestonsburg High School.

The Auxier Homecoming '92 and Pioneer Folk Festival, sponsored by the Auxier Historical Society, commemorate Auxier's wealth of history and culture. The festivities will be held August 7, 8 and 9 at the Auxier Elementary School and the Community Park, lasting from noon Friday until 7 p.m. Sunday.

The Auxier Homecoming is normally held every five years. Although it was last held only three years ago, event organizers decided to schedule it to coincide with the Folk Festival both to attract more former Auxier residents and to set the Homecoming schedule so that the next two Homecomings will be held in 1995 and 2000. The Pioneer Folk Festival, formerly known as the Sadie Hawkins Festival, officially begins at 7 p.m. Friday.

Festival events will include:

- an Old-Fashioned Country Breakfast, from 8 a.m. until 11 a.m.
- the Pioneer Folk Festival Parade, which will be held on Saturday;
- a Civil War demonstration and reenactments of famous battles at 1 p.m. Saturday;
- an open horseshoe tournament to be held Saturday from 1 p.m. until 3

p.m.;

- a softball game beginning at 3 p.m. Saturday;
- a gospel sing Sunday from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m., featuring such local artists as Candice Sturgill, Traci Wells, the Gobles and Munroe Birdshot of Kentucky Opry fame; and
- activities to be held throughout the festival, such as a dunking booth, hay rides, cake walks, face painting, bean bag toss and a bottle toss.

For further information about either the Auxier Homecoming '92 or the Pioneer Folk Festival, call 886-8348 or 886-3639.

"(Drug dealers) will grow their dope on anybody's property but their own," Powers said.

Friday's raid followed last Sunday's finding and subsequent destruction by the sheriff's department of over 70 marijuana plants, with an estimated street value of over $140,000.

"It doesn't matter how much or how little of this stuff we find," Powers said Friday. "It's just that much more we take off the streets."

Powers added that one of the most valuable weapons the sheriff's department has in the war on drugs is the willingness of the private citizen to report the location of illicit substances and suspected drug dealers.

"It's just like on Crime Stoppers," Powers said. "We just want the information, not your name."

Persons with information that may lead to the discovery of illegal substances or persons trafficking in them are urged to contact the Floyd County Sheriff's department at 886-6171.

It's about Competitiveness.

A Message from Costain Coal Inc.

Competitiveness is the name of the game in the coal business these days. Kentucky miners have had to become more productive to compete. In the future, the companies that survive will be those that work efficiently and adapt to change.

The number of miners working in Pike and Floyd counties has declined in the last two years due to soft market conditions. In the past three weeks we have seen newspaper announcements regarding layoffs of more than 400 mining employees in Harlan, Leslie and Perry counties. Families there will be without work; some may have to leave the places they have called home for generations.

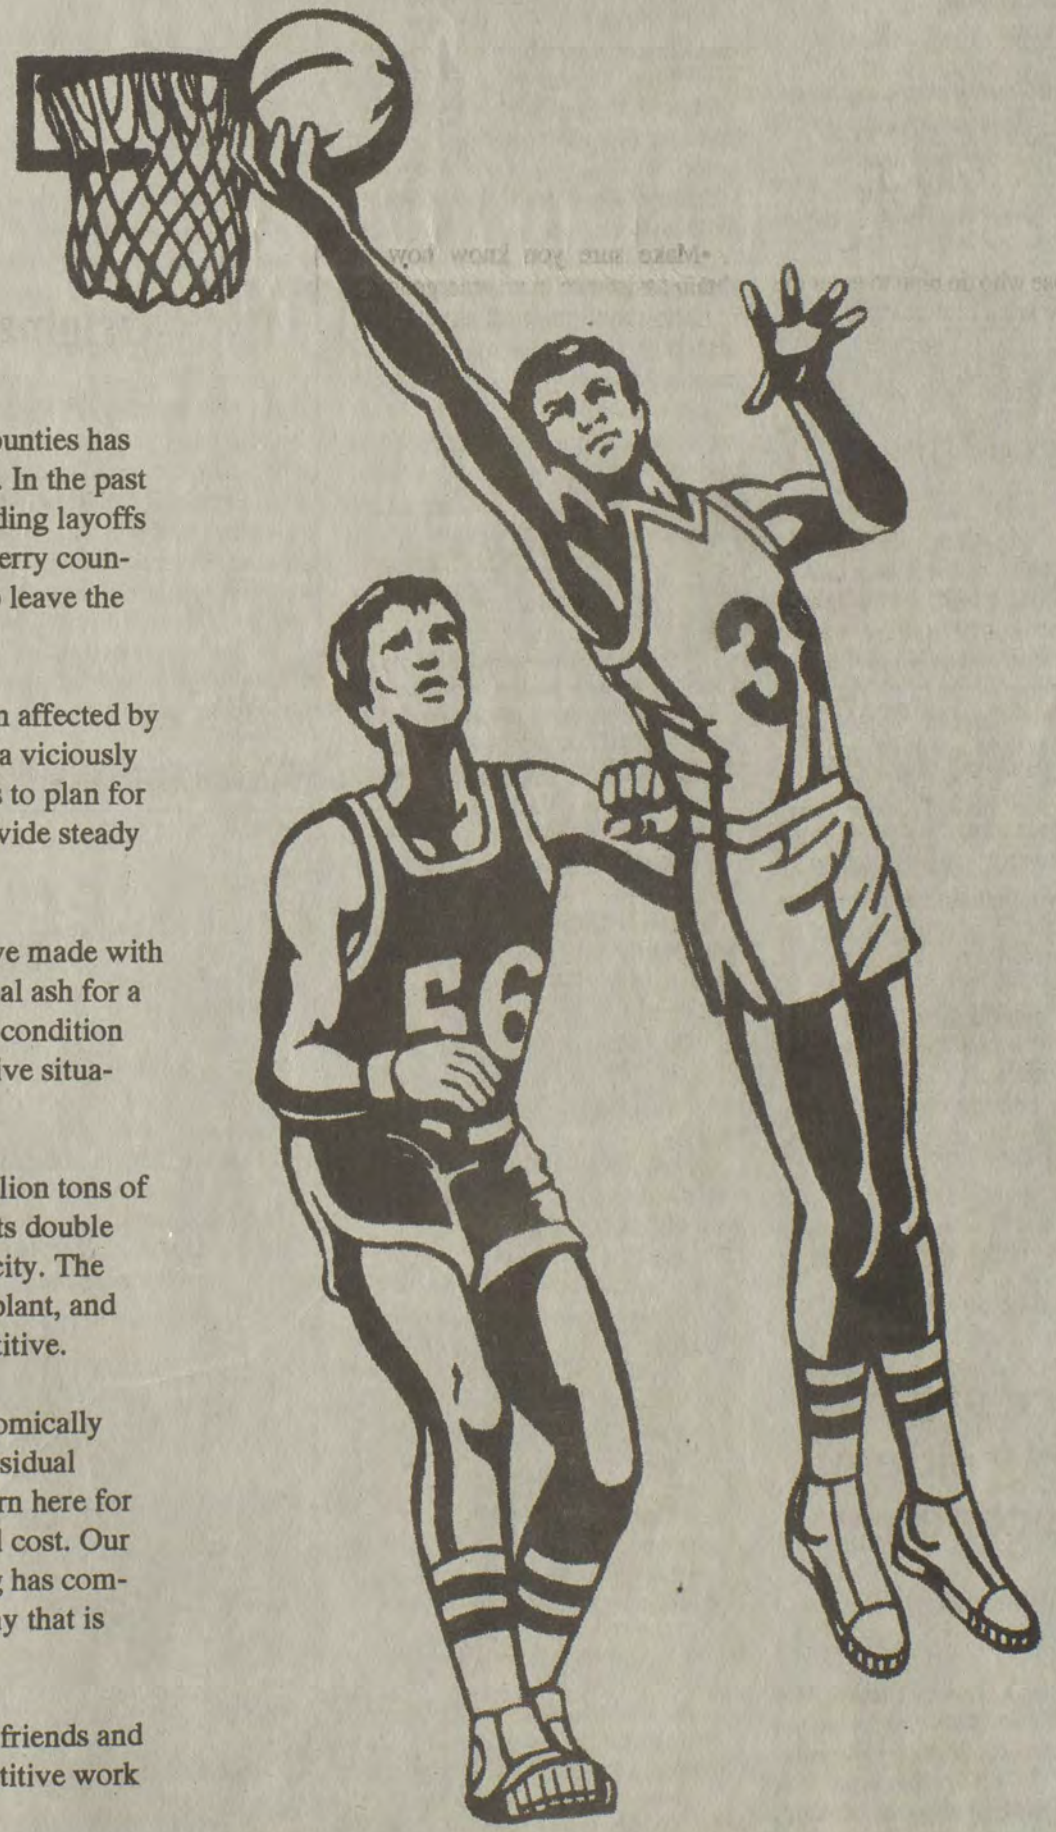

Like many mining companies, Costain Coal has been affected by a lack of steady mining contracts and has been operating in a viciously competitive spot market for coal. Steady contracts allow us to plan for long-term capital investments in the local economy and provide steady employment for our workers.

Some are skeptical about the recent contract we have made with a Florida company, wondering why Costain must handle coal ash for a customer. The opportunity for Costain to sell coal—on the condition that we also handle the ash—results from another competitive situation.

The customer that has contracted to buy up to a million tons of our coal per year for 20 years is a cogeneration plant. It gets double duty out of burning coal, generating both steam and electricity. The steam is used in a paper recycling factory right next to the plant, and the electricity is sold to keep the cogeneration plant competitive.

Similarly, our ability to handle coal efficiently, economically and safely—from production, to shipping to handling the residual ash—has given us a competitive edge. The trains must return here for more coal, so they can carry back the ash at little additional cost. Our work force is here, we own a suitable site here—everything has combined to create a situation in which we can compete in a way that is environmentally responsible.

Please support our hard-working employees—your friends and neighbors—in their effort to remain one of the most competitive work forces in Kentucky.

How to survive lakes, ponds, rivers, and creeks

Most drownings occur in natural water environments such as lakes, ponds and rivers. And one-half to two-thirds of all drownings result from unintentional water entry. These victims never intended to go into the water; they fell from docks, piers, bridges or boats. This is why it is so important for everyone near the water, whether or not they intend to swim, to wear personal flotation devices.

For those who do plan to enter the water, here are a few safety tips:

- Check water temperature before you jump or dive in. Even on the hottest summer day, lake temperatures remain very cold. A sudden plunge into cold water can cause an automatic gasp reflex that draws water straight into the lungs.

- Check the bottom, too. Unless you are certain of the water depth and condition of the bottom, never dive or jump in. Soft, muddy bottoms and water plants can easily entrap victims.

- Swim only in areas that are clearly safe for swimming and supervised by lifeguards.

- Make sure you know how to obtain assistance in an emergency.

- Ask about the local aquatic life both in the main water and in surrounding inlets.

- Also ask about animal life that is frequently seen in the area.

Murder

Pillersdorf argued Monday that Johnson was being "selectively prosecuted" by police because official records indicate that Johnson is the only trucker in Pike or Floyd counties involved in a traffic fatality, who was not under the influence of alcohol or drugs, to be charged with the crime since 1989.

Kentucky State Police trooper Ghomer Prater was questioned in chambers Monday and told the judge that Johnson is the only one to his knowledge who has been charged in that type situation since 1989.

After the jury's decision, Pillersdorf asked that Johnson be allowed to remain out on a $10,000 bond until formal sentencing.

Judge Stumbo denied that request saying he couldn't take that chance with a wanton murder conviction.

Security was tight at the trial after it was reported that a member of Akers family had had a gun in the courtroom during a pre-trial hearing in the case. Bailiff Homer Neeley search everyone entering the courtroom and found no one carrying a weapon.

Editorials :

First come, first served

by Scott Perry

All this bickering over where to build a new Prestonsburg High School appears irrelevant given the financial status of the system's construction fund, which at last count was considerably less than the amount needed to build a school anywhere.

But beyond the financial considerations, we wonder if the system's building priorities aren't a bit skewed.

While we'd like to see every Floyd County student in a new and modern facility, we'd be much more impressed by a building plan that started, like most buildings do, from the ground up.

Whatever dollars are left in the system's construction fund ought to be channeled toward improving conditions at the variety of elementary schools throughout Floyd County which desperately need attention.

The primary grades are the most critical in any young person's education. That's why they come first. That's why they're called "primary."

Young students must have an environment conducive to learning. Older students are better equipped to cope with or adapt to a less than perfect environment.

New high schools are nice, and most are needed. But it takes most students nine years— from kindergarten through eighth grade — to make it to high school.

The early years are best served first.

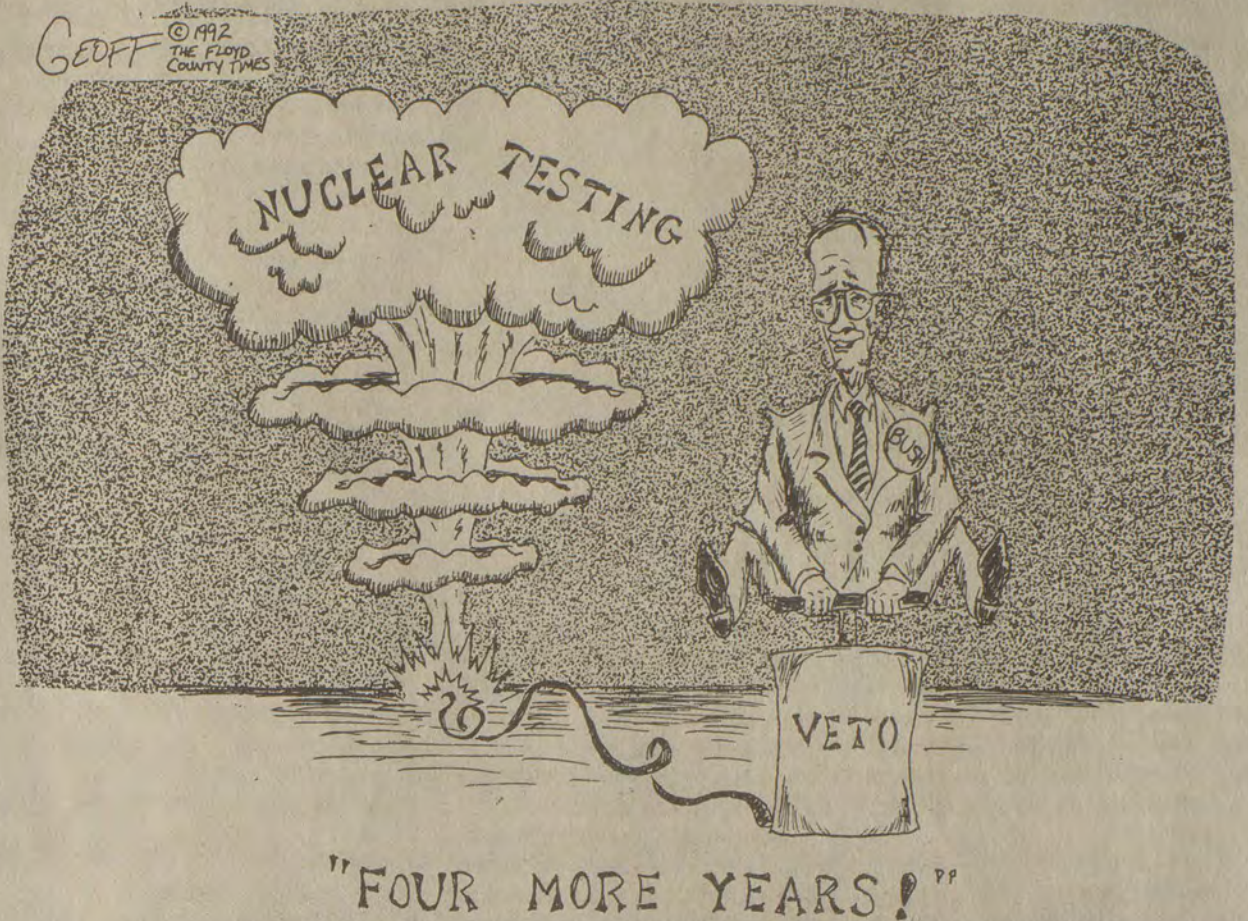

A simple lesson

Tourism, or more appropriately who ought to get the credit for causing it, was the topic of a letter last week which left us scratching our heads in wonder.

What difference does it make who draws the crowds as long as they come? Everyone benefits.

What purpose does it serve to create divisions among those attempting to boost our area's struggling economy?

A simple lesson to remember: There is no "I" in "We."

Lobbyists don't deserve "Bad Guy" status

Editor:

The ongoing investigation of corruption in State Government is yielding both positive and negative results. The indictment and conviction of those who have violated the law upholds the fact that the democratic system works. Six guilty pleas have been entered, more are expected.

The negative side of the investigation lies with the "broad brush" used to paint all participants of the system. The overwhelming majority of General Assembly members are honorable men and women with a strong sense of public duty. It violates the spirit of American justice to label all of them guilty.

Moreover, lobbyists have become the villains of the entire investigation. To date, one lobbyist has been indicted but the focus of the media and legislative ethics task force has been directed primarily on the conduct of legislative agents.

This attack is unjustified and fueled largely by a widespread misunderstanding of a lobbyist's role, which has long made us the subject of prejudiced and uninformed opinions.

The role of lobbyists is communicating on behalf of citizens who have common concerns and wish to be involved in the legislative process but have little time to do so. As the voice of the National Federation of Independent Business in Kentucky, I relay the views of more than 6,000 small businesses throughout the Commonwealth. Additionally, we keep our members informed of important developments and monitor daily activities at the Capitol.

For any informed person to suggest that the influence of any lobbyist is based on the weight of their wallet is outrageous and defamatory. It is an unjustified smear on a Constitutionally guaranteed system that enables lawmakers to make informed decisions and create legislation that truly addresses the concerns of those most affected by it.

Indeed, on behalf of NFIB and fellow lobbyists, we join all Kentuckians in their desire to rid from the legislative process the proverbial bad apples who denigrate the system and assassinate the reputations of all others involved in it.

Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

Over in Breathitt County, members of the fiscal court have decided to go straight to jail rather than pass a county-wide occupational tax that the Department for Local Government says is needed to erase a hefty budget deficit.

The financial fiasco has all but shut down Breathitt County government which, ironically, may be the ultimate resolution to the problem.

As long as government is shut down it shouldn't cost anything. If the magistrates stay in jail, where they can't spend any money, the deficit ought to clear up in no time.

Breathitt County taxpayers, meanwhile, probably won't miss a thing.

One of the more bizarre stories in the news this week was the one of the carnivorous rabbit which nibbled the fingers off a five-month-old child whose hand got stuck in the cage.

The child had apparently been left unattended for hours.

The rabbit was killed.

A suitable fate for all those responsible?

Our hearts bleed for NBC, which is expected to lose sacks full of greenbacks on the failed pay-per-view Olympics

Triplecast.

With virtually every athlete in the games sponsored by someone and virtually every product on the market touted as the "official" product of the Olympics coupled with NBC's pitiful coverage (between the usual barrage of commercials) on regular network time, it looks like we ought to be paid to watch.

From the estimates of what NBC stands to lose on pay-per-view, the network probably could have saved money by sending us all a few bucks.

A suspect in a Bell County triple-slaying has had his no-bail status amended to a six-days-a-week work release so he can earn money to hire an attorney.

The suspect is accused of participating nine years ago in the murders of a couple and their 3-year-old daughter during an apparent drug buy-turned sour.

Bell Circuit Judge Farmer Helton said the suspect, charged with capital murder, should be allowed a work release because he had a good job and needed the money to hire a lawyer to represent him during his trial.

Now there's a novel approach to saving taxpayers the expense of a public defender.

Oh, by the way, didn't John Wayne Gacy have a good job, too?

AT ISSUE

Reauthorize the Endangered Species Act?

James P. Leape is the senior vice president of the World Wildlife Fund in Washington, D.C.

YES

Should the Endangered Species Act be reauthorized?

Yes. The Endangered Species Act (ESA) provides a fundamental "safety net" for the protection of our nation's rich natural heritage. The Act establishes a process for identifying and protecting species on the brink of extinction such as the bald eagle, the Florida panther, and hundreds of other animals and plants. The diversity of life on Earth gives us crops and medicines and is the foundation for the very health of our planet. The ESA is essential for the protection of that diversity.

What impact has the law had on our nation?

Since the first European settlers arrived, nearly 500 species of plants and animals native to the United States have become extinct—forever lost. The ESA has helped to stem this tide. During the last 20 years, the Act has prevented the extinction of scores of endangered plants and animals, and has consistently done so in ways that conserve natural communities, while minimizing adverse impacts on employment and economic growth. The history of the ESA is a history of resolving conflicts between economic development and the protection of endangered species. It is very rare (in less than 1 percent of all cases) that such conflicts have remained unresolved.

What changes, if any, would make the law more effective?

Congress must appropriate the resources necessary to make the ESA fully effective. More than 3,000 species at risk remain unprotected because they have not been formally evaluated for listing under the Act. Even for many of the listed species, the government has not yet developed plans to provide for their recovery. Promptly listing and developing recovery plans for species at risk will help reduce both costs and conflicts. We also should make a more serious effort to identify and protect areas that are important habitats for multiple species. America's wild plants and animals represent one of our greatest endowments; we cannot allow that endowment to be diminished.

NO

Should the Endangered Species Act be reauthorized?

No. This costly program has been a gross failure. Our bungling government has rescued only four creatures—three tropical birds in Palau and a weed called Rydberg's milk vetch—from a list of 681 threatened and endangered species. A few more like the brown pelican and American alligator have partially recovered. For that, our bureaucrats spent hundreds of millions of dollars since the law was passed in 1972—even the government doesn't know the exact amount. The devastating side effects of the law are even more outrageous: construction stoppages costing billions, jobs slashed by the thousands, interference with private property rights sparking frustration and rebellion. Congress never intended that.

What impact has the law had on our nation?

Everyone knows about the spotted owl putting thousands of Pacific Northwest forest folk in the unemployment lines. The way the law is written—with $50,000 fines and a year in prison for harming critical habitat—every one of those 681 species hurts somebody. The red-cockaded woodpecker costs logging jobs from Georgia to Arkansas, the golden-cheeked warbler thwarts home builders in the Texas hill country and the desert tortoise ruins ranchers in the Southwest.

What changes, if any, would make the law more effective?

Scrap the whole idea and start over. Junk those punitive fines and the threat of imprisonment. They make people dread finding endangered species on their property. Instead, offer tax credits and outright cash payments to people who welcome endangered plants and animals on their land, or otherwise nurture them. How to pay for it? Stop pushing costs on the little guy. Let millionaire tax-exempt environmental organizations like the Sierra Club and National Wildlife Federation donate some of their budgets. With total assets over $1.5 billion and annual incomes over $500 million, the top dozen eco-groups can easily afford to put their money where their mouths are.

OPINION

Looking Back at Rio

by Jerry Taylor

Now that we've all had a chance to recover from the mind-numbing political histrionics that accompanied the Rio de Janeiro Earth Summit, it's time to consider the road before us as laid out by the United Nations.

The entire human race, and indeed, the entire planet, are said to be on the verge of extinction. According to Maurice Strong, the U.N. secretary general of the Earth Summit, nothing less than "historic civilizational change" is required to save the Earth. The "historic civilizational change" most of the attendees had in mind, of course, is a supraglobal army of U.N. bureaucrats charged with centrally planning the environmental health of the planet. Massive redistribution of wealth to the Third World also is a major component of the plan, as is expansion of government regulatory power over the economy.

Yet, as H. L. Mencken once observed, "The whole aim of practical politics is to keep the populace alarmed—and thus clamorous to be led to safety—by menacing it with an endless series of hobgoblins, all of them imaginary." Clearly, a number of the crises brandished about at Rio are imaginary. They are little more than hobgoblins designed to scare us into the socialism that so much of the world rebelled against during the past decade.

Global warming is one such hobgoblin. According to the U.S. Climate Data Center, the Earth has experienced a slight cooling since 1938, during the very years in which we put most of the so-called "greenhouse gases" into the atmosphere. If the emission of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases leads to apocalyptic warming, we certainly haven't seen any sign of it yet.

The only evidence the apocalypse lobby marshals in support of the global warming hypothesis is computer models designed to predict the future. These models, which are very crude and incomplete simulations of the global biosphere, fail to reflect accurately atmospheric physics. Moreover, they produce bizarre climatic conditions when asked to predict today's climate (one NASA computer model in use today, for example, says that the polar ice cap should have completely melted by now).

You may have missed it in the newspaper, but Greenpeace recently conducted a survey in which it asked the world's top scientists involved in global warming research whether they agreed with the statement that "business as usual will eventually lead to runaway global warming." Only 13 percent agreed with that statement.

Another Rio hobgoblin is resource depletion. The air was filled with denunciations of the West's piggish overconsumption of the world's resources. Let's, however, bear a few things in mind. First, although we do consume a large share of the world's resources, we also produce the lion's share of the world's goods and services. Second, consumption per se is not evil; the fact that Americans do not live in destitute conditions is not something we need to apologize for. Third, if the environmentalists truly want to restrict our consumption through the coercive powers of government, let them spell out what they intend to restrict and then let them practice what they preach.

The "historic civilizational change" proposed by the Rio activists would accelerate, not mitigate, environmental destruction. The worst cases of environmental degradation have occurred where government, not private stewards, own and manage the land. The environmental devastation of Eastern Europe, the deterioration of the Florida Everglades, the shrinking old-growth forests of the Northwest, and the disappearing rainforests of Brazil attest to that fact. We also know that wealthy, free-market economies pollute far less than underdeveloped socialist economies. A quick tour through Eastern Europe, Mexico City, or Bangladesh makes that abundantly clear.

Why weren't private stewardship, property rights, and free-market capitalism, then, on the agenda at Rio? Because the "historic civilizational change" envisioned at Rio was socialism, not environmentalism.

Jerry Taylor is the director of natural resource studies at the Cato Institute in Washington, D.C.

Give cussin' kids hail Columbia

by Scripps Howard News Service

Even as Pavlov's mutt salivated at the sound of a dinner bell, adults of a certain age can scarcely hear a curse word without tasting Ivory soap. True, advanced child-rearing theory has relegated soap bars to secondary purposes, such as bathing. All the same, a few brave souls like Florida principal Dennis Reed are sustaining the fight against childhood cussing.

Reed decided to take action after several teachers at Tampa's Dickenson Elementary School complained of raw language by their students. Even kindergartners were using words once seldom heard this side of a whaler's bar. Figuring that moral training begins at home, the principal is visiting parents.

Reed says, "If we surrender and say that's just the way it is, what will become of our schools? What will become of our kids?"

Alas, these noble words seem destined to be drowned in the din of the Zeitgeist. As parental influence wanes (for many reasons), children are being raised by each other and by a ubiquitous electronic culture—and we don't mean The Lutheran Hour. Yet Reed just might do some good.

Adulthood with all its darkling casts and disreputable habits will come soon enough. Grade school is way too soon. Give 'em hail Columbia, Mister Reed.

1992 season draws to a close at Jenny Wiley Theatre

One of the most successful, most talked about seasons in the history of Jenny Wiley Theatre is quickly coming to a close.

On Sunday, August 23, The Wizard of Oz will close the 1992 season with its final performance. The Wizard of Oz, starring Misty Daniels, Richard Browder, David Stokes, and Michael Fisher as well as Jodie Lynn May as Toto, are setting single night attendance records and is loved by all.

Big River, the classic Mark Twain tale of Huckleberry Finn set to the music of Tony award winner Roger Miller, returned for its second season. Playing before sold-out audiences, lead actors Darren Bagert and Ervy Whitaker astonished theatre-goers with comic performances and songs that left them breathless.

The Cole Porter classic Anything Goes was likened to that popular 70s television comedy The Love Boat. Stars Eric Holland and Lisa Dames wowed audiences with their performances and the slapstick comedy, roaring songs and flashy tap dance numbers brought people to their feet performance after performance.

The amazing, beautiful, and touching all-new The Jenny Wiley Story is perhaps one of the most talked about shows ever presented at the theatre. Musical Direct or Richard Oberacker's new score combines various musical styles to tell the timeless tale of our theatre's namesake. The first outdoor historical musical drama which is entirely sung gives audiences a new theatre experience. The story's message and music is brilliantly displayed in the portrayal of Jenny Wiley by Jennifer Lampert whose voice echoes almost hauntingly in the hills where the story actually took place.

There's still, although not much time, for you to be a part of one of the best seasons in Jenny Wiley Theatre history. All the shows: The Jenny Wiley Story, Anything Goes, Big River, and The Wizard of Oz, still have a few performances left.

Call the box office today at (606) 886-9274 and be a part of this exciting season. You'll see shows that the entire family will enjoy and talk about for years to come.

See you under the stars for Broadway in your own backyard!

Pikeville College PBL Club brings home awards

The Pikeville College chapter of the Phi Beta Lambda Organization won five awards this month in the national PBL competition in Chicago. (PBL is the pre-eminent organization for business students at the college level.)

Lawrence Bartley, vice-president of the chapter, won first place in the Marketing competition, Kim Smith, the club's secretary, won sixth place in Impromptu Speaking and Jill Dotson, treasurer, won eighth place in Economics. The club as a whole received the Kitty Guy Gold Seal Chapter Award of Merit, "given in recognition and appreciation for active participation in programs and projects advancing the goals of PBL."

Howard Roberts, the club's advisor, received the Advisor Service

Recognition Award, "given for untiring efforts, dedication, significant contributions and interest and support in the development of students preparing for careers in business."

Participating in this year's national competition were hundreds of colleges and universities from across the United States and the Virgin Islands. More than 2,000 students and advisors met at the Palmer House Hilton and Convention Center in Chicago where the meetings were held.

"These students have worked extremely hard this year and they have certainly earned every award they have received bringing honor not only to Pikeville College but also to the Commonwealth of Kentucky," says Roberts. "The competitive events were entirely academic and Pikeville College was the only college or university in Kentucky to earn a first place honor."

In addition to their academic competitions, Pikeville PBL members attended workshops to learn new ideas and sharpen business skills, voted on national officers, made important business contacts, visited the Sears Tower, and Wrigley Field, took a cruise on Lake Michigan.

The PBL organization has worked to assist many community agencies with special service projects and encourages involvement with local business leaders. The club is open to college students with an interest in the business world. If you would like to know more about PBL contact Dr. Howard Roberts, advisor, or Judy Rollins, president (432-9200).

Vacation Bible School at Allen Baptist Church

A blaring firetruck, watermelon, free candy, helium filled balloons and happy children—add these together and you get the ingredients for a Fantastic Voyage.

Vacation Bible School is in progress at Allen Baptist Church. Bible School began Sunday, August 2, with a fun-filled evening for all at Stumbo Park. The evening began with a caravan through the community led by the fire truck and ended at the park with free candy for the children. The activities at the park offered something for everyone—balloons, games, watermelon and fun. During this time VBS workers registered children for class to begin on the 3rd and go through the 7th. The evening ended with church services at the park and an inspiring sermon delivered by Pastor French Harmon.

The first night of classes at Allen Baptist Church was filled, not only with many children but much fun for all involved. One hundred and one people were present to participate in Bible study, missionary moment, recreation, refreshments, crafts and music.

Children ages 2 thru 12 are encouraged to attend "Fantastic Journey" at Allen Baptist Church, August 2-7, 6-9. The pastor is French Harmon and director of the Vacation Bible School is Bonita Porter

Lawrence Edward Conley

It's been one year since God took you from me. Now all I do is think of a song that fits the way I feel about us.

"I'm wishing on a star to find out where you are. I'm wishing on a dream to find out what it means, and I'm wishing on all the rainbows that I see. And, I never thought I'd see a time when you would be so far away from home, so far away from me."

I wish we could be together now and forever.

Couple to celebrate anniversary August 8

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Whitt

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Whitt, lifelong residents of the Pike and Floyd County areas, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on August 8. The couple was married on August 8, 1942 in Pikeville by the Rev. Vergil L. Moore.

Mr. Whitt is the son of the late Columbus and Vata Blackburn Whitt. He is a retired employee of the Kentucky Power Company. Mrs. Whitt is the former Helen Gearheart, daughter of Rachel Roberts Gearheart and the late Fred Gearheart. She is a retired Pike County school teacher.

They are the parents of Patricia Seegmiller of Huntington, West Virginia and the late Glen S. Whitt. Their grandchildren are Michelle Whitt of Lexington, Erin Stone, Jacob Stone, Rachel Stone, and Tyler Seegmiller, all of Huntington, West Virginia.

An open reception will be given in their honor on Saturday, August 8, from 1-4 p.m., at Immanuel Baptist Church, North Mayo Trail, Pikeville.

Friends and relatives are invited to attend. No gifts please.

Late summer is prime bee sting season. Honey bees, wasps, hornets and yellow jackets are all out in full force. These insects can inflict a painful sting, which for some people produces a potentially fatal allergic reaction. Don't take a chance. If a bee sting victim is known to be allergic, go to a hospital immediately. Do not wait for signs of a reaction. A quick response can save a life.

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor

WITH BASEBALL SEASON OVER....

It is time to turn our attention to the football season.

The other day someone told me that when football season starts that's when they take a break until basketball season gets underway.

It was a way of saying they did not like football. However, football is a great game that is filled with exciting moments. When you get to know some of the players and follow a particular team, you will find yourself getting involved in the sport.

I certainly enjoy our local and regional football. I like seeing the kids and players doing well.

We'll be doing some team analysis during the next four weeks leading up to the start of the season on August 28. We also will be profiling some of this year's top players as well as taking a look at some of the behind the scenes items. So stay tuned!

MANY INQUIRIES OVER THE PROPOSED RULE CHANGES....

On the street, on the baseball diamond, phone calls at work and at home late at night. That's the way it has been since I did the story on the proposed rule changes that has been presented to the Board of Education for their approval governing elementary and high school athletics.

While most of the inquiries were on the positive side, there were some negative remarks as well. However, the final approval hasn't yet been given and some of the proposals could be changed or rejected.

Overall, I feel it is just what our elementary system needs in order to keep our high schools competitive with the other districts. I like the proposals but would like to see a couple of things altered some.

Here are some of the objections that I have heard

- A fan would like to see elementary basketball players playing both Junior Pro and grade school basketball. The new proposal would prevent such a move.

- Another would like to see our teams continue to play in the RAX Invitational Tournament. The tournament is usually held at the end of the season and therefore the new proposals would prevent local teams from taking part. Once our county tournament is over, the season for all schools would end.

- The new proposals do not allow enough practice time for elementary schools as far as basketball goes. More time should be allotted teams before the season starts. The new proposals would prohibit schools from starting practice until October 30 and their season may begin 10 days later. A suggestion of allowing schools to start practice on October 15 has been offered and only for those who do not play grade school football.

- Yet another sees the elimination of outside coaches (coaches who are not employed at the school or in the school system) as becoming a problem, especially if no one can be found in the system who will take the responsibility of a team. However, the new proposals state that if no one in the school system can be found, then an outside coach may be utilized.

When you look at the overall proposals, you can see many positive things. I think the committee of principals, fans, and board administrators did a fine job in drawing up the new proposals. Their openness to the suggestions of others is to be commended.

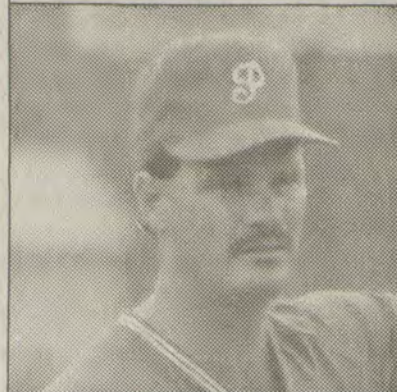

I think it is a move back to the days when "Hoss" Halbert was the county athletic director and the grade school programs, both football and basketball, were second to none. What a strong elementary program we had back then. Then, slowly, the program started getting away from what it was designed to accomplish and was almost in shambles.

Now, we can see a positive

Brown, Lemaster says thanks to players, fans

While it has been a successful year for the Paintsville Big League baseball team of coaches, Paul David Brown and Johnnie Lemaster, runners-up in the state of Kentucky, still the thought of a second title getting by hurts. Out of this hurt the two coaches took time to relay their appreciation to the many fans, parents who stood by and supported the team.

Paul David Brown

"In a time when the norm seems to be a complaint or a news story about young people getting into trouble or not wanting to work, I would like to commend this group of young men and their families for all their hard work," said Coach Brown. "We have had a couple of teams to advance farther but none worked harder than this year's group."

"Even though they represented several different high schools, they bonded together to form a "baseball family" who sweated, bled, hurt, won and lost without a negative word," continued Brown. "We finished 1992 as the Kentucky Big League runners-up, but more importantly, we finished playing as a unit with pride, discipline and the respect of the people who we played against."

Coach Brown continued to say that he and Coach Lemaster were very proud of the players they had this year and hope the communities were as well.

"Thanks guys for a great year," said Brown.

Big League baseball is for those who are in or have just finished high school. But it also affords a player to be seen by several college scouts who are looking to hand out scholarships to deserving players.

The Paintsville team has received their share of those scholarships. Going to Jacksonville State on scholarship will be John Thomas Clark (Prestonsburg). Clark also had gotten a close look from some major league scouts.

Paintsville's Joe Collins will be heading to Lee's College where he will play baseball this fall and next spring. Also traveling to Lee's College will be Billy Elam, Sean Williams and Hatler Riddle from Paintsville High School.

Betsy Layne's Chuck Laferty will play at Pippa Passes at Alice Lloyd

Laferty inks letter with Alice Lloyd

Betsy Layne's Chuck Laferty signed a letter-of-intent with Alice Lloyd College to play baseball for the Eagles this coming fall and next spring. Laferty played for Junior Newsome's Bobcats this past spring and saw them advance to the finals of the regional tournament in Pikeville.

On hand for the signing was Eagles head baseball coach Scott Cornett and Laferty's parents, Charles and Rita Laferty of Martin.

"We are tickled to have Chuck joining us at Alice Lloyd," Coach Cornett stated after the signing. "He played summer ball with us in the Connie Mack League and he has come a long way since then."

Cornett cited the big bat that Laferty has been swinging this year as being a plus for his team this coming year.

"We also plan on using Chuck as a pitcher," explained Cornett. "It's nice when someone comes along with power in his bat and has the potential to pitch for us also. We will work with him on his form and his delivery. He needs to get a little quicker."

Cornett said that Laferty was a real find for his club in that "he is a player who can throw."

"We intend to help him develop and help him all that we can," said the Eagles coach.

Last year was the first year the Eagles made the NAIA District 24 playoffs and Cornett expects his ball club to be strong this coming season.

"We had a ten game winning streak at the end of last season that got us into the playoffs," he commented. "We return some experienced players from that team next year and we expect to be competitive."

Returning for the Eagles will be Tackett Wilson, Kevin Spurlock (Allen Central) and Mike McQuate (McDowell), Jeff Lovely, (Magoffin County) and Jonathan Jett to name a few.

"We are looking for a good year," Cornett said, "because of the progress we made last season."

Cornett said that he feels that the Eagles have had another good recruiting year which gives them three (See Laferty, B 2)

Chaffins stressed that all cheerleaders must also register for the upcoming season. Entry fee for each athlete is just $20.

Roberts competes in 472nd race

His goal is 500 races before the racing season ends this year.

"That's my goal," said Roberts as he competed in his 23rd race this year when he ran the two-mile Moonlight Race in Corbin this past weekend. "I may have to run two or maybe three to make 500 this year, but that is the goal that I set for myself."

Roberts posted a time of 10:59 in the Moonlight run to place ninth in a race that he was fourth in last year.

"There was a big difference in the weather this time compared to last year," said Roberts. "It was much cooler this time and I finished ninth. Try and figure that one out."

Austria's Patrick Materna took first place with a time of 10:16 taking the lead over Tim Bailey, who finished fourth in the race with a time of 10:48.

Roberts time of 10:59 was good for second place in his age group of 35-39.

Roberts plans to just keep running, running and running until he hits his goal of 500 races. Hopefully, that will yet come this year.

"I feel like chicken tonight!"

THE HAROLD DODGERS recently won the Harold-Allen-Prater Little League B team tournament at Stumbo Park. Team members include: (not necessarily in order) Robert Rose, Justin Bartley, Anthony Tackett, Clayton Case, Brad Brooks, Chase Gibson, Shannon Williams, Brandon Conway, Josh Meade, Ryan Hamilton, JR Conn, Arron Collins. The team finished with a record of 8-6.

College this fall. Another former Betsy Layne player, Barry Hall, will take his talent to Union College.

Several of the Paintsville Big League players will be returning for another year of high school. Players such as Betsy Layne's Bud Kidd, Paintsville's John Holbrook and Brent Hamilton, Johnson Central's Ray Collins as well as several reserve players who did not make the cut for the state tournament.

Paintsville defeated Lincoln County 7-1 in their opening game of the state tournament before falling 5-4 to Laurel County. Paintsville rallied back and swept Louisville Valley 5-4 in a good game and in the nightcap that evening handed Laurel County a 4-0 shutout behind the pitching of Brent Hamilton to give Laurel County their first loss, forcing a second game. Paintsville fell 12-5 in the finals in a game that was closer than the final score would indicate.

Laferty

in a row in building a solid program. "We have signed Wes Needem, who is a lefthanded pitcher," he stated, "as well as Kevin Bowling from Shelby Valley and Millard's Kevin Justice. We also signed Cumberland's Brad Harris, who is an outstanding prospect. It's a super class for us and our third in a row."

Alice Lloyd will play a 20 game fall schedule that will mostly be intrasquad games but will also be playing other schools.

"By playing intrasquad fall games that gives me the opportunity to watch 18 players on the field instead of nine," reasoned Cornett. "We are hopeful that we will have our new road to our new park ready by the fall season."

The Eagles built a new facility two years ago that any ballclub would be proud of. The Eagles finished 18-17 last season.

Laferty hopes to be able to contribute early at Alice Lloyd but will do whatever is asked of him to make the Eagles a winner.

"I played in the Connie Mack League last year over there. Coach Cornett helped with the league and I got acquainted with him there," said Laferty. "I know that they have some good players returning and just whatever I can do I will do."

Laferty said that he hasn't decided on a major yet but that he is just excited about going to Pippa Passes next season.

"Yeah, I'm excited," he said. "At Alice Lloyd it's academics first and I like that. Coach Cornett told me that he wanted to work with me on my pitching such as my mechanics."

"Chuck has a problem of throwing across his body," said Cornett of the righthander. "We plan on working on that and other things."

Laferty just completed a season with the Paintsville Big League team where he was a big part of the team's offense, although he did not pitch that much. Laferty had a big state tournament as Paintsville finished second in the state.

Jenny Wiley Waves swim on in trying to gather public support

The Jenny Wiley Waves summer swim team could very well be called the Rodney Dangerfield of the swim world—they get no respect. With no respect comes not much support from the community as they represent Floyd County in the Big Sandy Summer Swim League each year.

This has been a banner year for the local swim team as they went undefeated in five meets and added a third championship this past Thursday night by winning the final meet of the year at the Jenny Wiley pool.

"We don't get much support from the community," said team President Rhonda Clark. "The only support we get is from what donations we can get from different business places around the county. I went before the tourism board to get their support, but they mostly wanted to just support things in Prestonsburg. I went before them and talked 50 minutes just as hard as I could talk."

But the lack of support hasn't dampened the spirits of this team president as she is determined to get the team and league on a solid foundation. Clark says that the next step is to get the local school board to open up the Allen Central school pool and form a high school swim team that can compete in the region.

"When a swimmer is through in the summer league, they have nothing," commented Clark. "We want to get on the next docket at the next board meeting and present our claims before the board."

Clark is hoping with a new superintendent in the arena that some support will come from the board to repair and open the pool so that it can be used.

"We don't know if we can get on this month's docket, but we do want to get on the next one and present our case," said the determined team president.

Clark says that she has been told that the pool at Allen Central was cracked and it would cost several thousands of dollars to repair.

"I want to see the crack and then I want to know what has happened to the money that was supposed to be used for the upkeep of the pool. Where did that money go to?"

The summer swim league has been a help to local swimmers in many areas and all have high praise for the summer league.

"I have fun competing in the league," said Maytown's Nikki Queen, a first year swimmer. "It allows me to meet new people and make new friends. We have to practice every day, about two hours a day."

Queen said that her strongest event is the butterfly but that she also competes in the freestyle and breaststroke.

"Stamina is very important in swimming," said Queen. "You have to practice a lot to be able to compete."

Tosh Akers is in his second season of the summer league and says that the daily swimming helps him build his muscles and helps when he plays basketball or softball.

"It is very good competition," he said of the meets. "I enjoy swimming and it allows me the chance to do a lot of swimming."

Akers stated that he practiced almost everyday and that he thinks his strongest events are the freestyle and breaststroke. He looks forward to his squad having an undefeated season.

For Nicholas "Bullfrog" Hall, it is the competition and making new friends that he likes.

"I've been swimming for the past two years," he stated, "and I just love competing against the other teams. I also get to see my friends and make new friends."

Kelli Newsome hopes that the summer swim league helps her to better things.

"I want to train all winter long if I can," she said, "and next year I want to be able to swim in the Bluegrass State Games in Lexington." The Olympics are much on her mind also.

Swimming is not only for the lightweight but for some heavyweights also. Take Joey Nunn who plays football for the Prestonsburg Blackcats. Swimming has a way of helping with his conditioning program.

"The summer league is a big help to me while I am getting in shape for the football season," he said. "It's a good conditioning program and all football players should try it."

For Jay McIntire, not only has it been a conditioning program for him but mostly it has helped him shed some pounds in the three years he has been competing.

"I've lost 50 pounds since I started three years ago," said McIntire. "I enjoy the competition because competition is good for you."

The summer swim league is even more to Holly Grasse, who swam for the Johnson Central high school swim team.

"I like finishing first," she said, "and that is the reason that I came over to the Jenny Wiley team. I like working myself hard and sometimes I work myself near exhaustion."

The Olympics someday is not out of Grasse's mind either. Grasse says that while she enjoys all events of the meet she feels her best event is the breast stroke, although the freestyle is her favorite.

Clark said that it takes a lot of volunteer help to put on a championship meet. It requires people to be judges, timers, umpires and coaches of which all the positions are filled by parents from the different teams.

Rodney Gardner was the meet director and drew the praise of Clark for his hard work.

"I couldn't do without Rodney," said Clark. "He does so much at a meet. He just sees that everything is taken care of and stings the ropes in the pool and takes them down."

Clark says the problem the league has is the money end of it. She stated that the community needs to get behind the program more and help keep it going for the future swimmers.

"We just need for the community to help us out," said Clark. "The only money we make is from the concession stand. Over in Paintsville, the tourism board supports and sponsors the whole tournament they hosted last year. They saw to it that each kid on the winning team got a trophy and they took care of other things."

Clark stated that Leon Russell, superintendent of Jenny Wiley State Park has made what would have seem impossible, possible.

"He has been a great help," praised Clark. "Without him we wouldn't have been able to put on the meet. He has allowed us to keep all the money from the concession stand which was very good."

Clark said the summer swim league is open to anyone who wants to swim and can swim. She would like to see some of the auxiliaries and perhaps clubs like the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs supporting the meets.

Close to 500 people took in the two-day championship meet that took

Did You Know Dean And Susanne's Latest Home Improvement Involves Your House?

Dean Johnson & Susanne Egli, hosts of the HOMETIME television series.

DEAN: When this house was built, flower power was the rage.

SUSANNE: Conserving power wasn't.

DEAN: It has an old, inefficient central air unit. By replacing it with a high-efficiency electric heat pump...

SUSANNE: ...you're installing the most efficient cooling and heating system available today.

DEAN: In fact, you could save enough on your winter heating bills to practically pay for summer air conditioning.

SUSANNE: Gives a whole new meaning to power to the people.

DEAN: Groovy idea.

SUSANNE: No, it's a SMART idea.

You can make your house cool with the high-efficiency electric heat pump. It's a central air conditioner in the summer. Plus, it heats your home so efficiently in the winter that you may save enough on heating to practically pay for summer cooling. Now that would be a smart improvement.

Get A Heat Pump. It Cools.

Hunting safety for the week of Sept. 28

Each year hunting season brings reports of accidental shootings of people and sometimes valuable domestic animals. These make the headlines.

But there are other dangers which are perhaps more likely to be encountered and which affect more people, but which don't attract attention.

Some of these threats of which hunters should be particularly aware are tularemia, rabies and tick-borne diseases.

Tularemia is a bacterial septicemia primarily of wild rodents and lagomorphs, but which is readily transmitted to most animals including man both directly and indirectly. Primary hosts are cottontail and jack rabbits, beaver, muskrat, meadow voles and sheep.

It is a classic zoonosis and can be transmitted either by droplets in the air, direct contact, ingestion or by an intermediate carrier such as ticks. Hunters are among persons regarded as being at high risk.

Tularemia is treatable by several antibiotics, however treatment can be expensive and can be prolonged.

Then there are Lyme disease and Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, the two most frequently reported tick-borne diseases in Kentucky. They are a danger to hunters because in Kentucky ticks are quite active during hunting season.

The deer tick, the dog tick and possibly others are vectors which spread these diseases to humans.

For humans, treatment is available for each of these three diseases. Unlike tularemia, Lyme disease or RMSF, rabies is not treatable in either animals or humans once symptoms have appeared.

It is a viral disease of the Central Nervous System, spread in the saliva of the infected animal and usually through a bite.

Because the primary reservoir of the disease in Kentucky is skunks and raccoons, and sometimes bats, it is important to think of your hunting dogs as well as yourself.

Vaccinated dogs will neither contract rabies, if bitten by a wild animal, nor will they carry it to others. Vaccination of dogs and cats is the primary barrier of protection between humans and animals.

Humans have to be more careful, as there is no commonly available vaccine.

Be aware that rabies comes in two forms: furious and dumb. Furious rabies causes the animal to act agitated and become aggressive. Dumb rabies results in a lethargic animal, which will still bite if irritated.

Best advice if you see a wild animal which acts in an unnatural manner is to avoid it. Wild animals have a normal fear of man and will usually run if they are not cornered. If an animal seems overly aggressive, or on the other hand seems to have lost its fear of man and wants to come close, avoid the animal. Kill it if possible, but do not let it bite. Be sure to not damage the head or the brain, as the brain is needed to determine if the animal is rabid. If you use a gun, aim for the heart or the body. If the head is shattered, no test can be made.

Your veterinarian can advise you on the instances of rabies in your community and give you an idea of how much risk you may be running when you go hunting. He or she can also give you tips on how to recognize possibly rabid animals and to get away from them.

And veterinarians are also your only source of vaccination which carries legal protection. Occasionally, you find vaccines available from other sources. Be aware that the wrong vaccine can kill your animal or give it rabies, or no protection at all. Also, be aware that do-it-yourself vaccination gives no legal protection whatever.

Your veterinarian can give you more details about any disease which may be of concern to hunters.

FLOYD COUNTY 13-YEAR-OLD ALL-STARS

Floyd County All-Stars fall to Somerset, 5-2

As far as Coach Tom Holbrook is concerned the Floyd County 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars may not have been crowned state champions in the Babe Ruth state tournament in Louisville last week but they are still number one with him.

"This was a fine group of boys," said the coach of his team's effort. "I am proud to have been able to work with them. They played hard and did an excellent job. I just hated it that we didn't go farther than we did."

Holbrook emphasized the hard work ethics of Brandon Castle who pitched well in the tournament but came up with nothing to show for it.

"Brandon did a super job on the mound," he continued, "not to have won any games. He's a winner and he likes to win. I believe he pitched 21 innings in the tournament for us and had 38 strike-outs."

The Babe Ruth team fell to Somerset for their second loss of the tournament and elimination. Somerset posted a 5-2 win scoring three runs in the fourth inning to take a 3-1 lead. They pushed across single runs in the fifth and seventh inning against Castle. Josh Stevens and Eric Sellers collected back-to-back singles and both runners scored on John Goody's two-run double.

Floyd County had taken a 1-0 lead in the second inning as Castle was sharp through the first three innings. Kevin Robinson singled to lead off the second and he came around to score on Doug Keathley's RBI double.

Untimely hitting for Floyd County squealed two other rallies they had going.

Castle scored in the sixth inning for the local team after he walked to lead off. With one out, Chris Moore singled to move Castle to second and he came in to score on Kidd's double to make it a 4-2 game.

Castle suffered the setback although he pitched well enough to win. However, his team failed to produce any runs for him. He struck out eight batters and fanned the side in the second inning while walking but one batter. Castle hit one batter in giving up five runs on five hits.

Keathley had two hits in the game in driving in one run.

"We lost Eric (Cook) in the game leave it seemed that the team just got down," said Holbrook. "Eric was a big part of our game." Cook had played through the district and state games with a badly bruised thumb—and catching behind the plate did not help things.

Floyd County defeated Pikeville 8-1 in their second tournament game. Kevin Robinson scattered five hits and fanned nine in picking up the win. He allowed but one run while walking five.

Robinson held the Pikeville All-Stars scoreless through the first six innings and allowed his only run in the top of the seventh when Eric Estep scored on a base hit by Elswick.

Five runs crossed home plate for Floyd County in the second inning as eight batters went to the plate. A base hit to Keathley, walks to Chris Holbrook and Beau Tackett loaded the bases for Floyd and two runs scored on Eric Cook's two-run single. Wesley Collins doubled home two runs with one out and he scored on a passed ball to give Floyd County a 6-0 lead.

Moore tripled to start the third for Floyd County and he scored on a wild pitch for a 7-0 game. The final run scored on a lead-off walk to Holbrook, who later scored on a fielder's choice play.

Collins collected two hits and drove in two runs for the winners.

Floyd County could identify with the song "Achy Breaky Heart" in the first game of the tournament. Floyd scored eight runs in the first three innings to jump out to an 8-0 lead only to see Bourbon County come back and mercy them in five innings.

"It was a heartbreaker," said Holbrook of the loss. "We just fell apart."

Floyd County scored four runs in the first inning and plated three in the second behind the pitching of Castle. Castle was helping his own cause from the plate with doubles in both the first and second innings to drive in three of the seven runs. Doug Keathley had a two-run double in the first inning as he continued to sting the ball.

However, Bourbon County sent 13 batters to the plate in the fourth inning to tack on nine runs to three they had scored earlier in the third inning, to take a 12-8 lead. Six runs scored for Bourbon County in the sixth inning for the mercy win of 18-8.

Castle lost the game and left in the fourth inning failing to get anyone out. Castle had eight strike outs in the game and fanned the side in the first inning with two runners on base. Castle collected two hits, both doubles, and had three RBIs in a good outing at the plate.

Keathley had two runs batted in and Wesley Collins scored three times with one hit. Floyd County managed only four hits in the game.

"This was a first year deal for all of us," said Coach Holbrook. "We all learned some things. The way I look at it is that none of them were losers but all were winners by just being there."

Local golf tourney to benefit American Cancer Society

Get out your golf clubs and sharpen up your putting. A four man scramble golf tournament will be held this Saturday, August 8, at the Jenny Wiley Golf Course. The tournament will benefit the American Cancer Society.

Tea-off time is scheduled for 8 a.m. and the tournament will run until 2 p.m., according to tournament director Dr. Eddie Clark.

Besides the chance to help the American Cancer Society and play some good golf, entrants will also have an opportunity to win some valuable prizes also.

"We're going to give away a graphite driver to the one who wins our Long Drive Contest," said Clark. "Then for the one who gets a hole-in-one on the number three hole, we have a complete set of golf clubs, woods, irons and bag, for the lucky golfer. On the number eight hole will be our Closest to the Hole Contest. The one who comes the closest wins a new putter."

Clark also stated that water and Pepsi will be available to all golfers as well as a cook out later in the day. The long drive contest will be held after the scramble tournament.

Plaques will be awarded to the first and second place teams in flights A and B. Clark says that a few openings still exist for the tournament and that sign-up time will be held on the day of the tournament.

"You always have teams that show up on the day of the tournament that want to play," he said.

SUNSENSOR LENSES

Lenses that are almost clear indoors and darken to almost sunglasses outdoors are known as Sunsensor lenses. These lenses are made from glass and are manufactured by Corning Glass of Corning, New York. They are available for prescription eyeglasses from your eye doctor.

The photochromic glass is an invention patented by Corning. The glass lens contains small crystals of the chemical known as silver halide. Silver halide is the chemical crystal which also is in the film to make black and white photographs. However, in glass lenses the darkening process which is activated by the ultraviolet light in sunlight automatically reverses to a lighter tint when worn indoors or not in the presence of sunlight.

The Sunsensor tints are available in two colors: gray and brown. All Sunsensor lenses also block out a high degree of ultraviolet ray (UV) light which is harmful to the retina. There are four types of Sunsensor lenses known as PhotoGray Extra, PhotoBrown Extra, PhotoSun II, and PhotoGray II. Most are available in bifocal, trifocal, progressive, and no-line bifocals.

PhotoGray Extra is lightly tinted gray indoors and darkens to a gray sunglasses outdoors in less than 60 seconds. This Sunsensor tint is preferred if much time is spent outdoors during work or recreation.

PhotoBrown Extra is very light brown indoors and darkens to a brown sunglasses outdoors in 60 seconds. It is particularly effective under fluorescent light.

PhotoSun II lenses are sunglasses under all lighting conditions. Indoors they are a medium gray tint and in bright sunlight become very dark gray. They are preferred if a very dark tint is desired.

PhotoGray II is the clearest lens indoors. It darkens to a medium tint outdoors. It is useful for those who already use prescription sunglasses outdoors or have no use for a dark tint. All of the Sunsensor lenses are temperature sensitive. They get darker in colder weather and lighter in warmer weather. When worn while driving an automobile, they do not get as dark because the windshield reflects some of the sun's ultraviolet light. Thicker lens prescriptions also get darker than thin lens prescriptions due to greater density of silver halide crystals.

Ask your eyecare professional if the performance characteristics of Sunsensor lenses would be right for you.

WE APPRECIATE YOUR BUSINESS!

For top boat performance, choose full instrumentation

"Boats are just like cars. You don't simply put the throttle down and hold on to the steering wheel," says Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member Guido Hibdon. "You really drive them by constantly monitoring the gauges on the instrument panel because they tell you how the engine is performing."

"The helm in my boat looks almost like an airplane's cockpit because of all the gauges I have," Hibdon says, "but all I have to do is glance at them to know if everything is working the way it should."

Hibdon, 1988 Bass Master Classic champion and two-time winner of the B.A.S.S. Angler of the Year* title, has spent more than 30 years earning a living from his boat. A former guide on Lake of the Ozarks in Missouri, Hibdon often spends as many as 300 days per year on the water.

Hibdon says OMC SystemMatched™ Parts and Accessories offers a full complement of instrumentation for any marine application. The OMC Tech Series® or Acculine Series™ instrumentation are designed to allow the operator to easily monitor the operating characteristics of his rig.

"The next time you're at your local OMC dealer, or even at a national bass tournament," says Hibdon, "look at one of the bass boats on display and take note of the gauges it has."

"The two largest are typically the tachometer and speedometer. The tachometer, or tach, is probably the most important instrument on the boat because it measures the engine revolutions per minute, or RPMs, and tells you if your engine is running within its proper operating range."

Operating the engine at RPM levels that exceed the manufacturer's recommended operating range at wide-open throttle may result in serious internal damage to the engine. Operating at RPM levels below the recommended range means you aren't getting maximum performance, Hibdon adds.

"The first thing you notice when operating the engine below its recommended RPM range is poor gas mileage," says Hibdon. "If you continually operate at speeds too low, you'll also begin to foul plugs, which can result in starting problems."

"It doesn't cure itself, either. You'll be forced to have an expensive tune-up or other repairs," he says.

To get the engine operating in the proper RPM range, you may find you need a different propeller, or need to readjust the engine height. These are questions your local OMC dealer can answer for you with a quick test run in the water.

"Another important gauge is the speedometer," adds Hibdon. "Bass fishermen are just like anyone else. We like to know how fast we're going, and the speedometer tells us that in miles per hour.

"The speedometer can tell you something else, too. If it changes, it can mean a damaged propeller or an improper trim angle on the engine."

For example, says Hibdon, speedometer and tachometer readings climb steadily as you advance the throttle and trim out for speed. But when speed begins to drop and engine RPM remains steady or increases, it's a good bet you've passed the point of maximum out-trim for the conditions in which you're running.

"Another gauge we use a lot is the trim/tilt indicator," the Johnson pro continues. "When you want to get out of the hole quickly and cleanly to move to another fishing spot, the last thing you want to do is hit the throttle with the engine trimmed-out instead of trimmed-in."

"The trim/tilt gauge tells you exactly where the engine is at all times, eliminating the need to look back and visually check it."

Depending on how fast you run or how far you need to run to catch fish, the fuel gauge is important for managing on-board supplies. For top fishing competitors like Hibdon, it's essential for them to know how much fuel they have so they know they can make a long dash back to the weigh-in.

Voltmeters help fishermen track electrical system capacity and charging functions. Tournament pros require two separate electrical systems — one that supplies electricity to the propulsion system, navigation and interior lights, livewell and bilge pumps, and depthfinder electronics; the other powers the electric positioning motor. Separate voltmeters are standard equipment on most sophisticated rigs.

"Another really important gauge we rely on is a water pressure gauge," says Hibdon. "It measures the water flowing through the engine to cool it. A loss of water pressure can be caused by several problems, such as grass, mud, or even a plastic bag, blocking the water pickup located on the lower unit, but all of them can inevitably lead to higher engine temperatures and possible engine damage."

"The water pressure gauge allows us to spot a drop in water pressure quickly, so we can stop and correct the problem before the engine temperature gets too high."

Regular engine maintenance is vital for proper performance. Lack of routine service at manufacturer-specified intervals can result in reduced output and accelerated wear that could leave a fisherman stranded. An engine hour meter is designed to clock the actual running time on your engine, and can help to insure that you'll never overlook an important preventive maintenance deadline.

OMC's Tech Series and Acculine Series instruments allow the operator to easily monitor all functions of his boat. They feature large, crisp numbers that are easily read at a glance.

They also feature red, back-lit or perimeter-lit dials for better low-light vision, and illuminated dial needles that easily stand out in the dark.

For low maintenance and long life, OMC's instruments feature waterproof gaskets, scratch-resistant glass lenses and bezel designs that rapidly shed water. Threaded bolt-on wiring harness connectors help to minimize loose connections and maintain accurate readings.

Tech Series and Acculine Series instrumentation are products of Outboard Marine Corporation.

Shooting Report

Bob Knopf

Most of us who call ourselves old timers in the shooting game started shotgun shooting using paper shells. These worked well, but we were happy when ammo-makers made the change to plastic shotshells.

The introduction of steel shot over the last few years was another story. We all loved and understood the lead shot we had used since childhood. We had become reasonably good shots, and took pride in our shooting prowess.

Then we began hearing that our time-proven lead shot, when ingested, was killing ducks and geese ... and even the predators that preyed on them, including our national symbol the bald eagle.

But, when most of us made the switch to steel shot, knowing it was the right thing to do, we came face to face with a difference in our shooting. The key to shooting steel shot is realizing how steel and lead shoot from your shotgun. Here's the facts.

Steel pellets are lighter than lead. Pushed by the same amount of powder, they leave the gun barrel faster. But since steel is lighter, it slows down more quickly than lead. This means that unless you match your steel shells carefully to the velocity and energy of the lead you used, your shooting performance with steel will change.

You must shoot steel more precisely because it is a harder pellet with less deformity. This results in a denser, more tightly held shot pattern than lead which causes some shooters to miss more when using steel. To solve this, practice with steel at your local trap or skeet range to become more familiar with shooting steel shot. When hunting, if you aren't dead on, pass on the shot.

When steel and lead loads are properly matched, they hit about the same, and the lead on game is the same.

To properly select your steel ammo, determine the muzzle velocity (given in most ammunition catalogs) of the steel and match it with the velocity of the lead you commonly use. Then, increase the size of the steel pellet (smaller number) by two sizes. For example, if you used lead #6 shot, go to steel #4's. At normal shooting distances, your lead on game and the shells performance will be similar, so you can forget about the difference. Shoot only at distances at which you're comfortable.

If you're unsure of the velocity of your steel load or how it compares, here's some "seat of the pants" guidelines.

At close distances, 0 - 25 yards, slightly reduce your lead with steel over your lead. When shooting steel at medium distances, 25-35 yards, use the same lead. At long distances, greater than 40 yards, increase your lead. At distances beyond 45 yards (which is not typically recommended), you may need to as much as double your lead.

Another important factor to note is that a shotgun will pattern differently with steel than with lead. It is very important to pattern your shotgun with the steel shot and choke you will use. Experiment with choke and shot size to obtain the best pattern for your shotgun. Test patterning your gun to determine the best shooting load is probably the surest way to assure success afield.

Steel holds a much tighter pattern than lead. The full choke you used with lead may disrupt the pattern of large steel shot giving erratic pellet distribution. If you're unsure of which choke to use, pick improved cylinder or modified for all steel shooting. Use of a full choke, even when it doesn't disrupt the pattern, keeps the pattern tighter, requiring greater care when shooting. At close range you don't have much room for error.

Anyone can shoot steel shot effectively. But spend a few hours practicing before the season, and be sure to pattern your shotgun. Greater success afield will make your efforts well move back into that direction. It may not all come in the first year and, yes, there are going to be some drawbacks, but over a period of time it can all be ironed out and improved upon. But one thing is certain — we all have to work together toward a positive goal in this. It is all for the kids.

PRACTICE OFFICIALLY UNDERWAY...

This past Saturday the high school football season officially got underway, although most schools were conditioning anyway, and now it will be time to don the pads and take part in the two-a-day workouts.

Prestonsburg High School, and what a squad they should field this year, will be heading to camp today as they travel to Georgetown College. Allen Central will be hitting the field with two workouts a day. Wheelwright has their grid-o-rama lined up and Betsy Layne has been working hard all along.

Should be a great season!

FESTIVITIES SPEAKER...

I'm looking forward to the Martin High School Reunion that will take place on September 3-4. A large crowd always find their way back to Martin on this special occasion.

My brother, Bob, will be this year's guest speaker and he will do a great job even though he may be a little nervous about it. Bob played for Halbert's Purple Flash back in the late '40s and early '50s. He recently retired as superintendent of schools in Georgetown, Ohio and is just enjoying his new boat and everyday vacationing.

Until Friday, good sports everyone and be good sports — it suits you!

diet and/or exercise that works for someone else could be totally wrong for you. How do you know what is right?

There are many different sports and fitness activities to choose from, depending on your preference, availability and other factors.

Playing your favorite sport on weekends is great fun, but keep in mind that weekend activity does not constitute an overall fitness program. It can often cause injuries due to the infrequent stress.

A good fitness program will consist of exercises that can be performed at regular intervals. A good idea is to perform some form of exercise every day, alternating different activities.

The perfect fitness routine should be a combination of exercises designed to increase your cardiovascular capacity, flexibility, muscular strength and endurance. The end result being better health, appearance and a happier you.

I am aware of only one form of exercise that will do all of the above, can be performed indoors or out and is not limited by your age, sex or current physical condition.

Resistance training or weight lifting, in it's many forms, is considered the single most beneficial type of exercise you can do. This is evidenced by the fact that most professional as well as Olympic athletes use weight training to enhance their abilities. I cannot think of a sport where an athlete would not benefit by being stronger, faster and more flexible.

If athletes can use resistance training to improve, why can't you?

Keep in mind there are many different forms of resistance training using different types of equipment for different results. For general health and conditioning, weight lifting can and should be very simple. Your program may be similar to someone else's but never the same.

Moderation with proper technique is the key to success for all forms of weight lifting exercises. Too much too soon will lead to overtraining and injury. Limit your initial workouts to only a few basic, compound movements with light weights and few repetitions. No more than 10 or 20 minutes is necessary to complete a beginner's routine.

It takes time to build a healthy, fit body. Be patient, be consistent and remember there are no shortcuts, no miracles diets and no magic machines that will make it easier than it already is.

Eat right and exercise smart.

SPORTSMEN PAY FOR CONSERVATION

Ready for a test question? Here goes: What group of Kentuckians have spent more money toward the conservation of all kinds of wildlife resources than anyone else, including taxpayers? If you answered "sportsmen", you go to the head of the class.

A relatively unknown fact that many state residents don't realize is that paying state income tax does not include helping finance wildlife conservation efforts conducted by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR). Most people believe that when they pay their share of state income tax, that part of that money goes to support all state agencies. That's a pretty logical assumption, but not true in this case.

Sportsmen, who through the years have spent millions and millions of dollars on licenses to enjoy hunting and fishing, foot the entire bill that funds the work of the KDFWR to provide and maintain recreational opportunities for all Kentuckians, not just hunters and fishers.

The purchase of a hunting or fishing license supports many various wildlife conservation programs such as restoring river otters and ospreys, endangered species research, and wildlife law enforcement work. One other major benefit sportsmen's dollars mean to all Kentuckians is the purchase, preservation and management of over 50 public wildlife areas throughout the state. The KDFWR is the largest public landowner among state resource conservation agencies, all due to those who buy licenses to hunt and fish.

Surveys conducted by the KDFWR show that public use of agency-owned wildlife management areas is 10 times greater by those that do not hunt or fish than those who do. Many more visitors take advantage of these public lands to observe or photograph wildlife, picnic, camp and hike. Yet these opportunities would not be available if sportsmen hadn't paid the bill.

Kentucky has about 1 million sportsmen, close to one-third of the population who enjoy hunting, fishing or both. But while this sounds like a large number, the truth is that half-again this many of Kentucky residents enjoy wildlife-associated recreation that doesn't include hunting or fishing. Almost one out of every two Kentuckians engage in some form of recreation associated with wildlife that DON'T contribute to KDFWR programs monetarily.

Certainly it's no secret that the cost of supplying and maintaining wildlife-related recreation continues to grow very rapidly. Sooner or later, all those who enjoy wildlife and partake of what wildlife adds to life will be called upon to help share the cost. Sportsmen have done the overwhelming majority of it alone for decades, and it seems only fair that the rest of the resource users, themselves the majority in numbers, be willing to do their part, too.

NOT TO BE SETTLED IN BARCELONA

Before actually starting this article, I want everyone to know that I'm not poking fun at our area. I'm simply playing up the stereotypes and adding a little truth in order to make an amusing story. I feel I must add this "disclaimer" after various media crucifixions of our area. I really don't want to be on the Sally Jesse Raphael Show, anyway. Now that I've made my point, on with the article.

After watching the Olympics these past few days, I've noticed there aren't many athletes representing our area. There are a couple of Kentuckians participating, but there is no "true" Eastern Kentuckian in the games. I've thought long and hard about this. Our area has produced many great athletes, so why shouldn't we have some in the games? I think Richie Farmer and John Pelphrey belong on the Dream Team, don't you?

Anyway, I think part of the reason for our mountain athletes non-participation is that they don't have any sports to compete in. I believe rooster-fighting should be an Olympic sport. Floyd County would be the training capital of the world.

What about horseshoes in the next Olympic games? Again, there are many talented horseshoe pitchers in the hills of Eastern Kentucky. I'm sure we'd bring home all the gold medals.

I do believe spitting could be a legitimate competition, too. Not just plain ole "spittin'" mind you, but two specific events, "watermelon seed and tobacco spitting." What could be more exciting? No, wait, I left out one—paw paw seed spitting would surely be an emotion-filled event, too. I love it.

I think championship bean picking would be a dandy event. Just imagine. It could be divided into different quantities, sorta like the 100, 200, or 400-meter competitions in swimming. In bean picking the contestant would be timed in one of the following categories: "mess" picking, peck picking, or the bushel picking relay.

Bless my little brother's heart, he just came up with another event. Corn shucking. That would be a nail-biter, too. I'm excited just writing about it.

I could go on and on about my mountain events, but I guess you get the picture by now. We really have loads of talent here, we're just not able to show it off much. And just for the record, no, I don't think wedding-day shoplifting can be considered a sport. I'm leaving on that note.

Later.

SUGAR AND SPICE

Rachel Gray is the daughter of Amy and Todd Gray and the older sister of Rebecca and Steven. The family has moved from Allen to Lexington and next month Rachel will be a grown up seven-year-old.

She will be in second grade when school starts again, but school is old hat to her now for she attended pre-school classes at Mountain Christian Academy in Martin before she was three. Every day she was learning new things to tell her family about.

Besides being taught to button her coat and tie her shoes, she could recite the pledge to the flag and say grace before a meal. She would close her eyes and say, "God is great, God is good, and we thank Him for our food."

Then one day grandparents Kay and Jimmy Gray invited Rachel to go eat at a Prestonsburg restaurant. The little girl was anxious for them to see some of her new talents, and it seemed she was remembering them all at once. Anyway, they were pleased when she asked if she might say grace before eating.

She closed her eyes, placed her hand over her heart and began, "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America..." She recited the pledge all the way through then asked, "Didn't I do good?"

I'd say it was better than good—it was excellent. It's the kind of thing that makes a grandparent's heart swell and helps writers describe what little girls are made of.

SCENIC VIEW

Maybe I am out and about more than the average housewife, and something my husband said a few days ago made me aware that he'd noticed.

We were on a trip through North Carolina and seeing some gorgeous scenery on the drive.

"Look what a beautiful mountain stream!" I said to him. "I wish I had a view like that from my kitchen window."

"If you're going to wish for something like that," he answered, "why not wish for it beside your driveway? That way you'd get to see it more often."

A SHARED DILEMMA

Beaver Creek tells about the pilot of a small plane whose engine failed.

The man wasn't an experienced sky diver but he was forced to jump from the plane. He pulled every cord he could find on his gear, but the parachute failed to open.

As he plunged closer and closer to the earth, he encountered another man shooting straight up so he called out, "Hey, do you know anything about a parachute?"

"No," the man called back. "Would you know anything about a cook stove?"

Golden anniversary bells ring for Akers

Elder Walter L. and Minnie Akers of Honaker will celebrate their Golden Wedding anniversary by exchanging wedding vows on August 8 at the Betsy Layne Senior Citizens Center.

The couple were married August 8, 1942. Walter graduated from Betsy Layne High School in 1941 and moved to Ohio seeking employment. There he met his future wife, Minnie. Minnie, at 16, quit school and married Walter.

Walter first worked at New York Central Railroad, but after a months there, he found employment in a tile yard of the B&O Railroad in Sandusky, Ohio. He worked on the section gang at .50 cents an hour.

After six months, he changed jobs again and worked in a factory making motor cranes for the same wage. During World War II, he also trained boys to run machinery, and received the Navy award.

Off duty, he worked for Meyers Milk Dairy Company in Vermilion as extra income. He also repaired watches and clocks for Lorrain and Weddington, Ohio jewelry stores.

Also, to earn extra money, the couple opened their home to young men from Kentucky who were in the area seeking employment. The $18 per week boarding fee meant that Minnie would cook, clean, wash and iron for them.

The couple bought their first home in Oberlin, Ohio, (home of Oberlin College). The home had ten rooms: "We always had room for everyone," said Walter. "Our home said Welcome."

The couple was deeply religious — Walter has been a Regular Baptist minister for 40 years — and on Sundays, their home became a gathering place for young men from the south. Good food and fellowship were always available at the table in the Akers' home.

The husband and wife were both active in the lives of the young people in their neighborhood. Their children were active in the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scout organizations, and Walter became a leader of the scout troop.

In 1956, the couple moved to Kentucky where Walter was employed with Kentucky HydroCarbon Gas Company at Maytown. He retired after 15 years when he became disabled with a back injury in 1972.

As Minnie's children grew up and graduated, the promise she had made to her mother that one day she would graduate haunted her. When her son Daniel was a senior, she made up her mind to finish high school. With the support of her family and friends, Minnie received her GED and graduated with her son Daniel. In 1974, after 33 years of being out of school, she was handed her diploma at Betsy Layne High School by Congressman Carl D. Perkins.

The couple have four children: Marie Conn and Daniel Akers of Honaker, Patricia Hunter of Prater and Vance Akers of Prestonsburg. They have 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The couple have been active in their Honaker community. They have been instrumental in helping to establish the Betsy Layne Senior Citizens Organization; to organize a school PTA, Mud Creek Water District, and the Little Mud Community Club.

Their life has been a life filled with love for their family, friends and God.

"It's been 50 years of love, through sickness and trials of life, always looking to Jesus to bring us closer together," said Walter.

Fay Hall is honored at Ohio health care facility

A Floyd County native was recently honored by a health care facility in Salem, Indiana.

Fay Hall, 91, is a resident of Meadow View Health Care Center in Salem. She was honored by the facility for her devotion to her country, community, friends and families.

She was nominated for possible inclusion in the "Memories Are Made For Sharing" booklet. The booklet will be presented at the Unicare Health Facilities annual conference in Milwaukee later this year.

The health care facility is among the 150 health care facilities in the Unicare group.

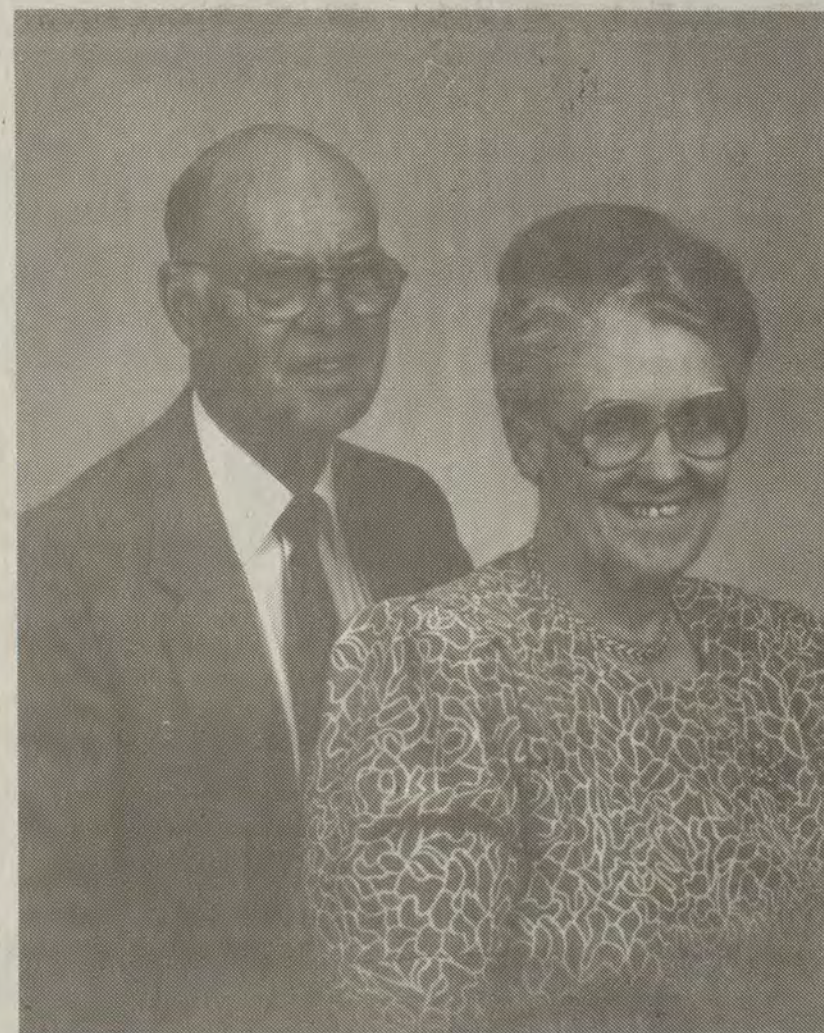

If selected, Mrs. Hall could be one of the guests of honor at the banquet in Milwaukee.

Mrs. Hall is a descendant of William Anderson (Devil Anse) Hatfield, leader of the Hatfields in the famous Hatfield-McCoy feud of the late 1800s. The fighting among the Hatfield-McCoy families mainly occurred in the Pike County area and became legendary.

Fay Hall was selected as "Mother of the Year" in 1984. The competition was based on the number of living descendants of contestants. At that time, 137 men, women, and children could directly trace their bloodline to her. The number included 32 great-great-grandchildren.

THE KENTUCKY OPRY... AND SOME MORE STUFF

There's an old saying that the three best ways to pass news along is television, telephone and tell a woman.

Perhaps the latter is why Eastern Kentucky's best-kept secret is not a secret anymore. In a newspaper article published at about this time last year, celebrated columnist Sara Hopson blabbed it all over the place.

Now, judging from the size of the crowds, everybody knows about the Kentucky Opry which plays every Monday night (through August) at the Jenny Wiley Amphitheatre in Prestonsburg.

Anyway, all last season Sara kept after me to see this show. "It's great," she'd say. "You'll love it," she'd say. "You won't believe how good it is," she'd say. However, after reading her "Smile Awhile" column since I was a mere lad growing up in Muddy Branch, I've long since learned to take whatever she says with a grain...make that a block...of salt.

But finally, and admittedly, due mostly to her insistence, earlier this season, Wilma and I attended the Kentucky Opry.

Last week we went again. Before the summer's over, I'd like to go again.

The Kentucky Opry is as slick a production as I've seen (and I've even been to the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville).

All the talent is local...or almost, anyway...and what an assemblage of talent it is. Great singing. Great music. Great lighting. Great sound. And great Scot! It's Munroe!

I'm glad I listened to Sara, but one thing really concerns me: if she was really telling the truth about the Kentucky Opry, do you suppose that all this time she'd been telling the truth about J.R., Jimmie and...whatever that dog's name is?

And speaking of arithmetic (which no one was, but I had to get into this next bit some how) numbers fascinate me...especially those that defy logic.

No, I'm not talking about Wilma's checkbook. I'm referring to problems like the one where the answer is always 1089. You try it. See if you can figure it out.

What you do is write down any three digit number with the first digit larger than the third. Like 721. Reverse it (in this case making it 127). Now, subtract the smaller number from the larger. (The answer here being 594.) Remember, we're working with three digits, so if this answer happens to be less than 100, put a zero in front, like 099.

Now reverse this number (from 594 to 495) and add them (594 + 495).

Regardless of the three digits you start with, the final answer will always be 1089.

Now, go figure.

And speaking of politics (ey, it worked the last time) I overheard an interesting comment at the stockyard Saturday.

Two old gentlemen were discussing all the recent indictments taking place in Frankfort.

One commented, "Like I always say, Kentucky has the best politicians that money can buy."

Allergic reactions

I never realized how allergies can affect a human body so differently.

Hey, I figured as long as I wasn't sneezing at nothin' I had no problems.

Then a couple, well more like five or so years ago, my left eye began to get red—fire engine red.

After putting up with this aggravating symptom, I finally gave in to an allergy test.

Now, allergy tests aren't really that bad as far as actually hurting. It's the waiting. Try five hours. First I was poked 77 times with these little tiny needle-like things with every kind of food, tree, grass, and dust known to man.

But that test did not work. I had a reaction to the medicine used to rub your arms with which made the 77 pricks non-readable.

Therefore, they brought out the good ol' needles—33 of those babies. Wow, I could hardly wait. Shots have never bothered me. I'd much rather have one than to have to swallow a pill of any kind. ONE, you hear me, one.

But 33 at one time, same arm. I don't know.

Whether I cared or not, it had to be done.

So, I got my 33 needles in my arm and found out there's not a tree or type of grass my system cares for.

Dust and mold were tops, too. Along with, now get this, tobacco. Yes, you've read correctly.

I'm allergic to tobacco. No foods showed positive—Yeah, I can eat anything.

But the weird one was glycerin. No more mascara with glycerol or glycerin connected ingredients.

Do you have any idea how hard those are to find?

Even the hypo-allergenic ones have glycerol.

I can just see me now. Eye shadow with no mascara—I don't think so. I found one. Wasn't easy but I did it.

I never realized how many different brands, colors, and ingredients were out there in mascaras.

We women sure go through a lot, I'll tell you.

Allergies aren't fun at all and dealing with them is the pits.

My regular allergy shots begin next week and I'm actually looking forward to getting some relief.

It's kind of ironic, you know. I never had a cold, never got sick, nothing until the thirty-something syndrome hit. And boy did it hit.

As Tiffany says, "Life begins at 40, mommie. You ain't living yet!"

Forty's lookin' awfully good as long as it takes my allergies, arthritis, and wrinkles away. Very doubtful, wouldn't you say?

Oh well, till next week, wishing you a wonderful summer—free of allergies.

Renew vows

Eugene Wells of Prestonsburg and Oille Wells, also of Prestonsburg, announce the marriage of their daughter Linda to Richard L. Clements Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Clements of Lexington. The couple were wed on January 20 in Las Vegas, Nevada, but renewed their vows in a private ceremony on March 14 so that their family and friends could attend. They now reside in Lexington.

Hall

Mrs. Hall was born February 24, 1901 in the mountain town of Honaker. She was married by the age of 14 to Lilburn Hall, who worked in the coal mines to support the nine daughters and two sons he and Fay brought into the world.

Times were tough, and raising 11 children on the pay of a coal miner has never been an easy task. But the Halls never let adversity wear down their faith in God or themselves.

Mrs. Hall cared for the children, and went to work managing a small country store to help provide for the family. The town post office was established in her store, and she chose to name it the Blue Moon, Kentucky, Post Office. She served as the first postmaster for the office and stayed in that position for 13 years.

Lilburn Hall developed Black Lung from working in the mines, so the family moved to Pekin in 1947, where Fay's knowledge was applied to the small grocery store and gas station they opened.

The Halls were active in the community and their church. Fay enjoys serving God and doing things to help others in the community in need.

She is a representative of the type of people making up the senior citizens of today. People who worked hard and sacrificed much to make a safe and secure future for themselves and their families are being recognized through the "Memories Are Made for Sharing" booklet.

BROWNIE ICE CREAM PIE WITH CARAMEL SAUCE
 2/3 cup (4 ounces) semisweet chocolate morsels
 2 tablespoons water
 4 eggs, separated
 1/4 cup granulated sugar
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 1/8 teaspoon salt
 1 pint vanilla ice cream
 1 pint strawberry ice cream
 1 pint mint ice cream
 1 cup bite-sized assorted fresh fruits

Quick Creamy Caramel Sauce*
 Preheat oven to 350°. Butter a nine-inch pie plate; set aside. In a small saucepan over very low heat, heat chocolate and water until melted, about two minutes, stirring constantly; set aside. In the small bowl of an electric mixer, beat egg yolks and sugar on high speed until thick and lemon colored, about five minutes. Reduce speed to low; gradually beat in the reserved chocolate mixture; beat in vanilla. Using clean beaters, in the large bowl of an electric mixer, beat egg whites and salt until stiff peaks form. Gently fold in chocolate mixture just until blended; spread over bottom and sides of prepared pie plate forming a crust. Bake until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean, about 20 minutes. Place on a wire rack to cool, about one hour (crust will sink as it cools). Fill crust with scoops of vanilla, strawberry and mint ice cream; cover and place in freezer until ready to serve. To serve: Remove pie from freezer; garnish with fruit; serve with Quick Creamy Caramel Sauce (recipe follows). Makes eight to 10 portions.

QUICK CREAMY CARAMEL SAUCE
 1/2 cup heavy (whipping) cream
 1/4 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
 1 tablespoon butter
 In a two-cup glass measuring cup, combine heavy cream and brown sugar; cover with vented plastic wrap. Microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) until smooth and caramel colored, about five minutes, stirring once. Add butter; stir until melted. Serve warm, or refrigerate to serve cold. Makes about 1/2 cup.

Note: Recipe tested in a 625 watt microwave.

CONVENTIONAL METHOD:
 In small saucepan, combine cream, brown sugar and butter. Heat to boiling, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat; cook and stir until mixture thickens slightly, about two minutes. Serve warm or cold.

STRAWBERRY ALMOND TALL CAKE
 Almond Meringue Layers*
 2 pint baskets fresh California strawberries
 2 cups whipping cream
 1/4 cup Amaretto (almond-flavored liqueur)
 1 tablespoon powdered sugar
 Prepare meringue layers (recipe follows). Stem and slice strawberries, reserving eight whole strawberries for garnish. Whip cream to form soft peaks; gradually heat in Amaretto and sugar to form stiff peaks; reserve one cup. Fold sliced berries into remaining whipped cream. Place one Almond Meringue Layer on serving plate. Cover with half of the strawberry mixture. Repeat with another meringue layer and remaining strawberry mixture. Place third meringue layer on top. Dollop or pie reserved whipped cream on top layer. Quarter reserved strawberries and use for garnish. Chill one to two hours. To serve, cut in wedges with sharp knife. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

ALMOND MERINGUE LAYERS
 6 egg whites
 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
 1/4 teaspoon almond extract
 Dash salt
 1 1/2 cups sugar
 1/2 cup cornstarch
 1/2 cup ground toasted almonds
 In large bowl, beat egg whites, cream of tartar, almond extract and salt to form soft peaks. Add 1/2 cup sugar, one tablespoon at a time, beating constantly to form stiff peaks. Combine remaining sugar, cornstarch and almonds. Fold into egg white mixture to blend thoroughly. Generously butter and flour three baking sheets; mark three seven-inch circles. Spread with spatula or pipe 1/3 of egg white mixture on each circle to cover evenly. Bake in 250° F oven 1 1/2 hours. Turn off heat and leave layers in oven one hour longer. Remove from oven, lift layers from baking sheets, and cool completely. (Layers may be securely wrapped and stored up to two days before assembling cake.) Makes three seven-inch layers.

Farm & Family

Store food properly for safety

Your family from getting sick from eating tainted food is to store food properly.

Maruyama gave these tips on how to store food to keep it safe longer:

- * Keep the refrigerator temperature between 34 and 40° F.

This range allows the maximum storage time for most foods. Meat, fish, poultry, eggs and milk should be stored in the coldest area of the refrigerator. Fruits and vegetables can be stored in the higher temperature zones. Use a thermometer to check the temperature at various locations.

- * Keep the refrigerator clean.
- Discard foods that have outlasted their usefulness. Clean shelves and other surfaces with warm, soapy water every week or two and wipe up any spills immediately. Throw out any foods that show signs of spoilage or that have been kept too long.
- * Wrap raw meat and poultry securely and place it on a tray so that they can not leak and contaminate other foods or surfaces.

Be sure not to store raw meats along with ready-to-eat meat in the meat drawer unless you have a leakproof package or container.

- * Refrigerate processed meat products, even though they have been processed for a longer shelf life.

Hot dogs and lunch meats will keep in the original vacuum-sealed pouch unopened until the "sell by" date. Freeze them if you cannot use them within that time. Once opened, use the products within a week. Lunch meat should be used three to five days after opening. If there is any cloudy liquid in the package around hot dogs, throw them away.

- * Refrigerate all products marked "keep refrigerated" or "refrigerate after opening."

Some newer food products require careful refrigeration. New packaging techniques make it possible to offer a wide variety of fully or partially processed foods in refrigerated forms. These carry a "use by" or "sell by" date on the label, but the dates assume that the product is refrigerated under 40° F.

- * Refrigerate fresh eggs until you are ready to cook them.

Raw eggs should not be allowed to warm to room temperature and egg-rich products should not be kept out of the refrigerator for more than two hours.

- * Arrange foods in the refrigerator so that there is plenty of room for air circulation.
- * Leftover cooked foods should be refrigerated immediately after a meal. Debone large pieces of meat or poultry and divide into smaller portions to refrigerate or freeze within two hours of cooking. Date leftover foods so you can use them in a day or two.
- * When you cook ahead for later reheating, always quick chill the food immediately after cooking, by placing the container in an ice-water bath, then refrigerate.

THE OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC
AUGUST 3-9, 1992
NATIONAL MUSTARD DAY, AUGUST 5

MUSTARD IN YOUR HAIR?
 Mustard, according to Baron Colepeper (1635-1689), is good for snake bites, and if mixed with honey and taken in the morning will clear your voice. Mustard has also been known to cure headaches, thinning hair, rheumatism, pneumonia and "the crick in the neck." The ancient Greek physicians made mustard poultices, and the Romans pounded and steeped the seed in wine. Mustard gets its name from mustum (fermented grape juice), and ardens (burning). Already in the sixteenth century, mustard was used in the kitchen and Shakespeare mentions it in Henry IV: "His Wit is as thick as Tweskesburie Mustard."
 The world's largest collection of mustards and memorabilia can be found in the Mount Horeb Mustard Museum in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin.

If corn husks are thicker than usual, a cold winter is ahead.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Plant native plants in your garden. They need less water, less fertilizer and take less of your time.

BEETS IN SOUR CREAM
 5 large beets, cooked and skinned
 1 carrot, scraped and thinly sliced
 1 celery stalk, sliced
 2 tablespoons melted butter
 1 tablespoon flour
 1 teaspoon sugar
 1/4 cups sour cream
 1 teaspoon vinegar

Dice the beets. Sauté carrot and celery slices in butter until soft. Blend in flour. Add sugar, sour cream, and vinegar and stir until well mixed. Add beets and cook (don't boil) until heated through.

Serves 4.

EARTHWISE
 Did you know that a healthy lawn is 2" to 3" high, not like the golf courses you see? Longer grass encourages healthier roots, and gives natural shade for the ground around each grass plant. This in turn will keep your lawn moist and conserve water. So, set your mower blades high and keep them sharp. If your blades are dull they'll tear the grass and make it more susceptible to disease. During dry spells, leave your grass cuttings on the ground. The cuttings will keep the moisture in and will also work as a natural fertilizer.

THE OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST:
 Cloudy and cooler with showers north; then rainy and seasonal.

SOUTHEAST:
 Showers, heavy rain Florida and coast, seasonable; then sunny with light rain north.

MIDWEST:
 Mild with showers east; then turning clear and seasonable, some showers east.

NORTHWEST:
 Clear, turning hot; then showers, heavy east, continuing hot east and mountains.

SOUTHWEST:
 Showers, clear in mountains, turning hot; rain and cooler east, sunny and hot mountains and California.

Check Your Home
 by Ray E. Cawood

Q: I have a 55-year-old home with what look like hairline cracks running across the concrete basement floor. Should this concern me?

A: Doesn't sound like this is something you need to lose any sleep over. Most concrete floors develop tiny cracks as a normal part of aging. Sort of like our faces.

When to worry:
 • If the floor is higher or lower (at least 1/8th inch) on one side of a crack than another. (Use same standard for a wall crack, checking to see that the two sides are flush.)
 • If the crack widens between the floor and wall.
 • If a diagonal crack of more than 1/8th inch develops off the corners of the windows and doors.
 • Any diagonal wall crack that keeps growing.

Rule of thumb: If the cracks are more than 1/8th inch, consider having them checked out by an engineer.

TIPS ON FRESH-CUT FLOWERS FROM THE GARDEN
 by Francis H. Pitts
 County Extension Agent

Gardeners who successfully raised those prized flowers in garden plots or flower beds may want to bring some of that beauty inside, and a University of Kentucky horticulturist offers some tips on how to keep them fresher, longer.

"Many plants can be used for fresh-cut flowers," said Bob Anderson, extension horticulture specialist for the UK College of Agriculture. "If they are carefully conditioned, fresh-cut flowers generally can last six to eight days indoors."

First, gardeners should be sure the vase has been washed with soap and water. This cuts down on bacteria in the water which eventually wilt the flowers.

Anderson suggested flowers be cut in the morning, with sharp scissors or garden shears. Afterward, remove leaves from the lower part of the stem and place cut ends in warm water that has a commercial cut flower food or preservative added to it.

"The food is a mixture of sugar, a mild acidifier and a mild disinfectant and is commonly found in small packets," he said. "This substance also helps keep the water clean."

Anderson also recommended gardeners cut a small portion off the stems in water every couple of days, so the flowers can take up new water and preservative to keep them fresh. The stems should be cut while they are still under water, to prevent air bubbles from hindering their water uptake.

"Another way to keep flowers looking better, longer, is to be sure they sit out of direct sunlight and away from air conditioning or heating vents," the horticulturist said.

Mysterious holes in clothing could mean a hidden insect problem

People who suddenly discover small holes in clothing should know that they may have to look for other insects, too, besides the clothes moth.

Actually, there are two species of clothes moths and four species of carpet beetles commonly found in the home which like to feed on fabric, according to Linda Heaton, extension textiles and clothing specialists for the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"It isn't the adult insect, but the larvae of the clothes moths and carpet beetles that eat fabric," Heaton said. "Feeding starts as the eggs hatch and larvae like to feed on wool, mohair, hair, fur, feathers and down. But they have been known to attack just about anything from curtains to mattresses."

Other insects which can attack fabric include silverfish, crickets, beetles and roaches. But in many cases, spilled food or perspiration or starch attracted the insects to the clothing.

"One of the most effective methods of avoiding this kind of damage is to make sure clothing is clean, especially before storage," Heaton said. "The article should be stored in an airtight container. The addition of mothballs will discourage insects but not kill them."

So where did the moths come from and what can one do about them?

Sometimes moths carried into the home on wool or animal fibers or are brought in on articles bought from second-hand stores or even on upholstered furniture, the specialist said.

"Once they are in, they can travel from one home to another," Heaton said. "Adult clothes moths usually like dark places, but carpet beetles are attracted to sunlight and may be found in windowsills."

She suggested all items in a closet, drawer or other container be washed or dry cleaned if an insect infestation is suspected. That way, all eggs or larvae will be killed. Every crack and corner of the container or closet also needs a thorough cleaning.

"The use of a cedar chest is another good method of protecting clean garments," Heaton said. "Be sure it is airtight and moth repellent (crystals, flakes or balls) also will help repel insects."

They rode the ferry to Vancouver Island and spent two nights in the heart of Victoria, B.C. They visited Butchart Gardens' world famous Multnomah Falls, Teton Mountains and Park, Yellowstone National Park, and Buffalo Bill Historical Center.

They visited Mt. Rushmore and admired the presidential faces carved into the rock. Other areas toured included Wall Drug, Badlands, and Trumon's Library and Museum. They enjoyed travelling along the "Sun Highway."

Mrs. Harris, a retired Prestonsburg Elementary teacher who taught in the Floyd system for 21 years, has been traveling since her retirement in 1979. She has visited several foreign countries, including Egypt, Israel, England, France, Germany, Holland, Switzerland and Mexico. IRAs are still sound investments

THE TAX ADVISER

GEORGE SMITH

Q: Is an IRA still a good investment vehicle? Should I make a contribution now even though I am not eligible for an IRA deduction? —L.E., Johnstown, Pa.

A: Absolutely! Even if you do not qualify for the IRA deduction, the income earned on that investment is tax-free until you begin withdrawing funds from the IRA somewhere down the road. Earnings from your savings account or with a stockbroker are, of course, being taxed each year.

If you have the money, don't hesitate to look into the virtues of adding to your IRA fund. Talk to your banker and broker to see what they have to offer.

Q: I file a very simple income tax return. I have one W-2, no kids and no other income and I usually receive a tax refund each year. Because I was in the hospital this year, I did not file my tax return on time. I sent the IRS an extension. I mailed my EZ tax form in May, and the IRS returned it recently saying I used the wrong form. I've always used this form in the past. Should I mail it back to them with an explanation? —J.O., Spokane, Wash.

A: Whoops, you're stuck. Even if you filed for an extension of time to file your income tax return, you cannot use the short Form 1040EZ after April 15 nor will the IRS figure your tax. Your only options are to file all encompassing Form 1040 or the shorter version, Form 1040A. The IRS won't take anything less after April 15.

Q: Did the business mileage rate increase this year? I guess I wasn't paying attention. —B.C., Charleston W.Va.

A: Yes, indeed. The optional standard mileage rate for cars used in business during 1992 increased to 28 cents per mile for all business miles. The special standard mileage rate for business use of a car by rural mail carriers is 42 cents a mile. The mileage rate for charitable purposes remains at 12 cents a mile, and the medical and moving expense rate continues to ride along at 9 cents a mile.

Q: I'm going to start receiving part of my pension during the latter part of this year. My employer paid the whole shot. How much of this pension is taxable to me? I will be over 65 years of age. —H.A., Salt Lake City

A: Generally, if you did not pay any part of the cost of your employee pension or annuity, and your employer did not withhold part of the cost of the contract while you worked, the amount you receive each year is fully taxable and will have to be reported as income on your tax return. You will receive a form indicating how much is taxable. It is probably 100 percent taxable as ordinary income.

Q: I am employed, divorced and don't have any children. Previously, when I filed my tax return, I could itemize my deductions. This year I won't be able to. Can I file the 1040EZ

for 1992?—H.W., Akron, Ohio

A: Probably yes, but there are a few ground rules that go along with filing the spiffy, one-page EZ form. In addition to taking no dependents you cannot itemize. Your earnings must be from wages, salaries and tips and cannot exceed $50,000. The only other income that you can report on this form is interest income and that cannot exceed $400.

If you want the IRS to figure your tax, they will even do that. The whole idea is to keep it simple with very few inclusions and not much formality. And you can use this form only through April 15.

On The House
Managing Your Biggest Investment

by Dorothy Harris

The first thing most of us think about when the time comes to take out a mortgage on a new home is the interest rate.

That's both perfectly natural and very sensible. The rate of interest we pay can make an immense difference—a difference amounting to tens of thousands of dollars—in what the actual cost of our house ultimately turns out to be.

Still, interest rates are far from the only thing worth thinking about where mortgages are concerned. Other important variables need to be considered too. One is the question of whether to take a fixed interest rate or choose from among the many kinds of variable-rate mortgages that have been created over the years to meet the differing needs of different buyers.

Another—and a very important one—is the rather basic question of how long you want your mortgage to run. Even with fixed-rate mortgages, a broad spectrum of time spans is commonly available. In most cases the extremes are 15 years on the short side, 30 years on the long.

Some years ago, when a famous scientist was asked to name the most powerful force in the universe, he answered "the power of compound interest." This reply suggests that he was knowledgeable not only about the laws of nature but the principles of finance—about what happens to even a modest sum of money when it continues to accumulate interest year after year after year.

Even at a modest rate of interest, money in a savings account can double within ten years or less. The amount actually paid for a house with a $100,000 mortgage can turn out to be several hundred thousand dollars if the mortgage runs for 30 years.

When you opt for a mortgage of only 15 or 20 years, on the other hand, you chop off much of the growth in your total obligation. But to do that without reducing the initial size of your mortgage, you have to make a bigger payment every month. As in most of life's major decisions, the stakes are high and the trade-offs require careful consideration. Above all, they require a careful examination of your resources, your aspirations, and your personal priorities.

Someone who's willing to make near-term lifestyle sacrifices for the sake of long-term gains probably will prefer a shorter mortgage. If your motto is "eat, drink and be merry," on the other hand, the idea of squeezing extra money out of your budget for the sake of a bigger house payment won't have much appeal.

If you're attracted by a shorter, faster mortgage and think you might be able to handle one, ask your real estate agent to show you just how much long-term savings such an approach can make possible. Chances are you'll be astonished by the size of the number.

Remember, though, that a 15-year or 20-year mortgage, by increasing your monthly obligations now and for years to come, can sharply reduce your flexibility.

One good approach is to take a 30-year mortgage but try to discipline yourself to make one extra monthly payment each year. If you can stick to such a regimen, ultimately it will yield the benefits of a 15-year mortgage. Meanwhile, you'll be less strapped if changing circumstances reduce your ability to make monthly payments.

What's really important is making yourself aware of how many different options you have and gathering detailed information about the ones that interest you most. A good real estate broker can be your key to all the information you could possibly need.

FREE BROCHURES GIVE SAFETY TIPS ON TIRES AND WHEELS
Unsung Heroes: Our Service Station Workers
Service station workers add about $102 billion to America's economy every year. They also help save lives.

When it comes to truck tire repairs, most smart drivers turn to service stations across the country. Only trained mechanics who have read and follow the Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations in Section 1910.177 and wheel manufacturer's literature should service truck tires. They must be protected by barriers and restraining devices around potentially explosive wheels and tires while they inflate them.

Free brochures on proper tire mounting procedures are available from The Budd Co., 1-800-521-7770.
