Schedule conflicts :

Hearing reset for principal

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

An August 12 appeal hearing for fired Wheelwright High School principal Lewis "Spike" Berkheimer has been rescheduled for September 21. Berkheimer's attorney, John Caudill, said Monday that the hearing was reset because he was not notified until Saturday of Wednesday's hearing and that scheduling conflicts required the hearing to be held in September.

Berkheimer was fired last month for allegedly improperly touching a female student and for allegedly falsifying his employment application.

Caudill asked for a hearing on Berkheimer's firing before three-member tribunal picked by the attorney general's office.

Under Kentucky's Education Reform Act, Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen appoints the tribunal but, since Berkheimer was fired on Boysen's recommendation, the panel was named by the attorney general's office.

Volunteer is injured while fighting fire

A Garrett volunteer fireman was injured Saturday while responding to a fire at the old Garrett school at 3:55 p.m.

Fireman Byron Scott was taken to Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin to be treated for a cut on his foot that required five stitches. Scott was injured when a piece of metal or glass cut through the top of his boot.

Fireman Terry Triplett said Monday that arson is suspected in the fire which damaged two rooms in the school. Triplett said the state fire marshal's office has been called in because of Scott's injury. Triplett said the fire marshal's office is contacted anytime a firefighter is injured while responding to a fire.

Triplett added that the department has been trying for some time to encourage the Floyd County Board of Education to make the condemned building more secure to keep people from entering the building. Several homeless people in the Garrett area have been living inside the old school, Triplett said.

The school was closed in 1990 when Duff Elementary opened.

The department responded to the school with 12 men and one truck. Triplett said the fire was brought under control in 15 minutes. Firefighters remained on the scene for two hours.

The fire is under investigation by Kentucky State Police arson investigator Barry McKenzie and trooper Byron Hansford.

An exhaustive weekend hunt to find illegal crops of marijuana by the Floyd County Sheriff's Department turned up over 300 plants in three separate locations.

Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson and a nine-man team hit the hills Sunday morning in the Ivy Creek area finding 92 plants located above a high-wall and over 60 in a thicket just below an open field.

The men divided up into two teams to conduct a concurrent search of the two locations.

Deputy Randy Davis said depu-

"Wet," by a meager margin

Johnson County resident Wanda Couch breathed a welcome sigh of relief Saturday as voters in McDowell's John Ant #22 precinct declared by a narrow eight-vote margin that the sale of alcoholic beverages will continue to be permitted.

Fewer than half of the precinct's 546 registered voters cast their ballots in Saturday's election, keeping the precinct wet by a vote of 130-122.

Couch, of Sitka, in June submitted to Floyd County Judge/Executive John M. Stumbo an application for a permit to operate the Hillbilly Lounge, a place of entertainment which would contain pool tables, pin ball machines and a juke box and serve beer by the drink.

The local option "wet/dry" election, which 137 precinct residents requested in a signed petition delivered to Floyd County Clerk Carla "Robinson" Boyd on June 27, was reportedly organized to prevent Couch from locating the proposed establishment at McDowell.

Similar efforts to prevent the construction of a proposed nightclub were successful in the Allen/Dwale

#44 voting precinct, as precinct residents voted the area dry on July 11 by a resounding margin of 174-68.

Boyd said Friday that the further requests for local option votes could spell severe financial difficulties for the county. Each local option vote costs Floyd County between $2,500 and $3,000, which has not been allowed for in the county's operating budget she said.

Both the 22nd and 44th precincts have been wet since the June, 1982 election which legalized the sale of beer, wine and liquor in Floyd County.

Stumbo will conduct a hearing at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, August 20, at the Floyd County Courthouse Annex to determine whether or not Couch will be granted the permit to operate the nightclub.

Anyone wishing to oppose the permit must file their opposition in writing with Boyd no later than August 17. All filings must be signed, dated and contain a current address.

Inmate's suicide attempt thwarted by jail deputy

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Quick thinking and quicker action narrowly averted tragedy Tuesday afternoon as a prisoner in the Floyd County Jail hanged himself in his cell.

Deputy Jailer Duran Jarrell said Tuesday that John Fletcher, 27, attempted to take his own life by tying one end of a bedsheet around the top bar in his cell and the other around his neck.

Jarrell and a Kentucky state trooper, responding to cries of alarm from Fletcher's fellow prisoners, quickly cut Fletcher down.

"He was starting to turn blue... and his tongue was hanging out... when we went back there," Jarrell said.

Opposing sides spar in landfill spat

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Allegations of misrepresentation and comparisons to Adolph Hitler's charge through Europe were among the charges and insults aimed at Costain Coal Incorporated Thursday evening at the fourth meeting of the Ivel and Big Sandy Citizens Against Pollution, the latest installment in the continuing saga of a citizens group's opposition to the proposed placement at Ivel of a residual landfill that will contain coal refuse.

The citizens group is protesting Costain's proposal to contain at Stratton Branch fly and bottom ash from coal sold to and incinerated by A E S Cedar Bay, Incorporated, a Jacksonville, Florida-based cogenerating power plant. A cogenerating power plant is one which generates both steam and electricity, selling the electricity to subscribers and the steam to another industrial company.

Group members feel that the facility will create an environmental disaster; endanger the health of their children and grandchildren; and will make Eastern Kentucky a dumping ground for the rest of the nation.

Several members of the group said that the proposed site was too near the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River, the main water supply for the entire region. They urged Costain representatives to renegotiate the contract with A E S Cedar Bay to keep

City, county pact is inked

by Geoff Belcher

The proposed agreement that would enter the city of Prestonsburg and Floyd County into a limited partnership is now official.

The Prestonsburg City Council Monday evening voted unanimously to accept city ordinance #13-92, which declares that Prestonsburg and Floyd County will enter an interlocal cooperation agreement. Under that agreement, the municipal and fiscal governments will occasionally work together to propose, acquire, construct and equip certain public projects. Both the Prestonsburg City Council and the Floyd County Fiscal Court have voted to approve the alliance.

Latta said that the agreement will allow greater latitude in the development of such projects as the proposed harness racing track, Mountain Arts Convention Center and future home of the Kentucky Opry.

In order to facilitate any joint efforts between the municipal and fiscal government, the council and fiscal court have formed a separate administrative entity known as the Eastern Kentucky Convention Commission, which will oversee the Public Properties Corporation.

The Convention Commission will consist of a five-member board of commissioners, two of whom are appointed by the sitting county judge/executive, two appointed by the mayor and one appointed jointly by both officials.

Prestonsburg Mayor Ann Latta said Monday that her appointments to the board included herself, so that the city might have a greater voice in the commission's activities, and Estill Lee Carter.

Latta said that the jointly-chosen commissioner would be Sam Blankenship. Latta also said that she wasn't sure whom Judge/Executive John M. Stumbo would appoint to the board, but was reasonably certain that he would appoint himself.

The council also enacted city ordinance #12-92 at Monday's meeting, which declares the city council's intention to expand Prestonsburg city limits to incorporate property beginning at the present city limit at Glyn View Plaza, located north of and adjacent to Kentucky Route 114, approximately one-half mile west of its intersection with U.S. 23 at Middle its intersection with U.S. 23 at Middle Creek.

Persons wishing to protest the ordinance have 60 days to register their complaints.

Included in that territory is property which the Floyd County Development Authority has offered to buy from the Lowe's Investment Corporation for use as the Kentucky Opry site and for possible commercial and

Barbara Heinze

Services held for former Times editor

Funeral services were held Monday, August 10, for Barbara Allen Heinze, 64, former business manager, editor and publisher of the Floyd County Times.

Mrs. Heinze was born February 3, 1928 in Prestonsburg, nearly a year after her father, the late Norman Allen, founded the Times. She became editor and publisher of the state's most widely circulated non-daily newspaper upon her father's death in 1986.

Joining the family newspaper business shortly after her graduation from Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Missouri, she remained closely associated with its operation until her retirement in 1988, when the newspaper was sold to Floyd County Newspapers, Inc.

Following her retirement, Mrs. Heinze moved to Little Switzerland, in the mountains of North Carolina, where she died August 7 after a lengthy battle with illness.

Survivors include her mother, Alka Dingus Allen; her husband, John G. Heinze; a son, John G. Heinze Jr., all of Prestonsburg; and two daughters, Gretchen Moyer, of Lebanon, Pennsylvania, and Lisa Ward of Morehead.

Also surviving are three brothers, Quentin Allen, of Ft. Mitchell; David Allen, of Prestonsburg; and Paul Neil Allen, of Lexington; a sister, Sharon Belding, of Lexington; and three grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at 11 a.m. Monday at the First Presbyterian Church in Prestonsburg with burial following in the Allen family Cemetery at Hueysville.

Services held Monday for "Lee Bug" Boyd :

4-year-old warrior loses fight

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A four-year-old Corn Fork boy lost his battle with cancer Friday at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

James Lee "Lee Bug" Boyd was diagnosed with neuroblastoma, a deadly form of cancer, just two days after his third birthday in January 1991.

Lee Bug's story was told last June when Bill Fair, an employee of Equitable Resources, heard about Lee's condition and went to work to arrange one of the biggest days in the young boy's life.

Fair, with the help of his company, the Prestonsburg fire and police departments, and the McDonald's corporation, planned a dream day for Lee Bug that included a helicopter ride and a "celebration of living" party at McDonald's in Prestonsburg.

The party was held last June just before Lee Bug went to California to undergo an experimental bone marrow treatment to stop the spread of the deadly disease.

Fair included the helicopter ride in the event to help Lee Bug get used to the idea of flying because he would soon be going to California. Lee Bug also told Fair his favorite food and his

Friends and family gathered at McDonald's to await Lee Bug's arrival from an aerial tour of Dewey Lake, his home at Corn Fork and Prestonsburg.

Upon landing, Lee Bug was the constant companion of Ronald McDonald who assisted him in riding his new bicycle, a gift from the employees at Equitable Resources.

After feasting on his favorite fast food, Lee Bug was the V.I.P. passenger in police and fire truck rides.

Lee Bug is survived by his par-

"That statement is totally inaccurate and totally unfounded," Mike Francisco, chief engineer for Costain, said Monday.

Francisco said that the company's intention in sending the samples was to present authorities an example of the material similar to that which would be stored in the landfill prior to the availability of the actual material.

Francisco said that Costain officials had nothing at all to hide from the public and that they did not address many of DeBourbon's and Layne's allegations at any of the forums conducted so far because they did not want to enter any confrontations either with or in front of the public.

After actual samples were available, Francisco said, they were promptly sent to the proper authorities for testing and consideration.

Ivel and Big Sandy Citizens president Malcom Layne reiterated to Costain manager Jack McNichol that the citizens group had no desire to harm Costain's business.

"We're your neighbors and we're your friends, Jack," Layne said, "and we'll be your friends to the end.... We want you to move coal."

However, Layne said, the placement of the landfill in Eastern Kentucky would set a dangerous precedent and allow the proliferation of similar facilities in the area. In the end, Layne said, either through human error or flooding, the water supply would ultimately be damaged either by Costain or one of the other companies.

"And once the water's gone, what else do we have?" Layne asked.

Layne also took offense at Costain's advertisements in support of the landfill which say that the company must have the contract with Florida-based A E S Cedar Bay, a cogenerating power plant, in order to remain competitive and ensure that Costain employees keep their jobs.

Commonwealth Attorney Jerry Patton said that although he hesitated to compare Costain to such a reviled individual as Adolph Hitler, Hitler was allowed to run amok because the public did not speak out against him. Costain, he said, would be successful if people did not make their fears known.

McNichol acknowledged that the group had every right to express their concerns and understood their fears and would do everything in his power to make certain those fears would be put to rest.

In answer to DeBourbon's charge that Costain was a capable, reputable coal producer, but was not an experienced waste management and disposal company, McNichol said that is why Costain hired Florida-based International Technologies, an engineering firm that specializes in preventing and cleaning up potential environmental hazards.

DeBourbon asked whether Costain had directed I.T. Corp. to find the best possible location for the facility or to find the best possible means to store the ash at the Ivel site.

McNichol said that I.T. Corp. had been directed to study the Ivel site in particular, but that if it were learned that the community or the environment could be better served by locating the facility at a different site, Costain would take that into consideration before any construction began.

McNichol said that he had no desire to harm the environment in any way and would not be a part of any project that would do so. He also said that he felt the facility designed by I.T. Corp. was environmentally sound.

McNichol added that, in the past, coal companies merely dumped fly ash back into the ground it originally came from without considering the environment at all.

Several members of the citizens group, including vice-president Tommy Westfall, said they would rather have Costain continue that practice rather than contain all the waste in one site.

McNichol said that it would be safer to contain the waste in one site so that if, however unlikely, there were leaching of heavy metal constituents, Costain officials could clean up the area much more quickly, halting the leachate before it reached the water table.

McNichol said that he was confident that all the groups fears would be put to rest when I.T. Corp. project manager Craig Tumbo made his public presentation of the facility's design and specifics.

Tumbo will make that presentation Monday, August 24 in the Floyd County Circuit Courtroom.

There will also be a public hearing with officials from the Cabinet for Natural Resources Division of Waste Management on Friday, August 28.

industrial development.

Among other issues discussed at the city council meeting:

- John Berkholder, an insurance agent from Campbellsville, offered four insurance plan proposals to the council for consideration. The insurance plan currently covering all city employees recently underwent a substantial rate hike.
- The council's personnel committee will meet Tuesday, August 18 at 6 p.m. to discuss numerous insurance proposals before making a recommendation to the full council.
- Following the temporary closure of the Floyd County Landfill site, the city has been forced to transport all waste to West Virginia at a much greater cost.
- The council is currently considering a further increase in commercial trash removal rates in order to offset those costs. In the meantime, the city will be taking all trash to the Apple Valley Transfer Station at Hager Hill, which will then transport the trash to W.Va.
- The council wishes it known that any unauthorized dumping in city waste containers is illegal and carries a $25 fine and court costs of $47.50.
- The council is currently investigating means to insure Prestonsburg Volunteer Firefighters against injury. Under the city's current policy, volunteer firefighters and police are only insured during training activities and actual field work.
- Chief of Police Greg Hall is currently studying the specifics and cost estimates of locating a police impound lot at city-owned property at Cliff.
- The council is studying ways to improve the city's parking problem by enforcing parking tickets and either installing new parking meters or allotting a certain amount of space for permit-only parking.
- The council voted unanimously to contact the University of Kentucky department that evaluates and/or replaces all municipal traffic signs and speed control devices free of charge.
- The first reading of city ordinance #15-92 was conducted. The ordinance, if passed at the next regularly scheduled council meeting, will declare the council's intention to annex property located on Kentucky 114.

- Council member Lida Howard was named official co-signer on all city checks.
- The Prestonsburg Fire Department received a special certificate of recognition from the state fire marshal on August 3.

The council ended Monday's meeting to discuss property acquisition, personnel positions and impending litigation in a closed executive session.

The next regularly scheduled meeting of the Prestonsburg City Council will be conducted Monday, August 24. The public is welcome to attend.

Labor hotlines available for local workers

Residents in Floyd County who are looking for part-time work as field hands in tobacco can locate farmers who need help by calling one of two labor hotline numbers. The numbers are located in Fleming and Bath Counties but serve any neighboring areas where workers are looking for part-time labor or farmers are looking for workers.

The Fleming County Hotline number is 267-3227 and is open from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. In Bath County the number is 247-2204, open from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. When called, the hotline operators match up farmers needing help with workers who want jobs.

The hotlines, started by local chapters of the Community Farm Alliance, are a free service to local residents.

Student registration

Any new students who will be attending Betsy Layne High School and have not pre-registered need to contact the school during the month of August, Monday-Wednesday, between the hours of 9 a.m. and noon.

ties found an apparent campsite near the highwall area that contained empty cups, hot dog and potato chip wrappers.

Sheriff Thompson and deputies found 13 marijuana plants in the 64-plant plot that had apparently been harvested a short time before their arrival.

The team then joined forces to conduct a mountaintop sweep several miles from the first two sites and found approximately 150 plants being grown on a secluded hillside.

Acting on citizen's tips, a five-man team searched an extensive area in Frazier's Creek near McDowell and a location in Salt Lick Saturday but came up empty handed.

The plants were burned Sunday evening behind the Floyd County Courthouse.

Sheriff Thompson wants to remind citizens to give specific directions when informing the department where to find patches of marijuana.

"This is a big county and some hollows run for miles," Thompson said. "That's why it is extremely important that we have specific directions when we search an area."

Sergeant Lloyd Powers, deputies Randy Davis, Greg Davis, Bobby Hamilton, Johnny Layne, Brian Ratliff, Dennis Hutchinson, Roland Howell, Bill Howell and Denver Woods participated in the two-day search.

Anyone with information concerning the cultivation of marijuana is asked to contact the sheriff's department at 886-6711 or 1-800-834-5430.

Fletcher was rushed to the Highlands Regional Medical Center, where he remains under armed guard in stable condition.

Fletcher, who has been charged with first degree robbery and first degree kidnapping in the forcible detention and armed robbery of the family of Frank Adams, has been lodged in the Floyd County Jail since June 7.

Jarrell said Fletcher's attempted suicide is puzzling.

"He's never acted strange or tried anything (out of the ordinary)," Jarrell said. "He's been a good prisoner."

When Fletcher is returned to the jail, Jarrell said, he will be placed in isolation for the first three to four days.

"And," Jarrell said, "we won't be giving him any more bedsheets."

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Editorials:

Reduce the deficit, anyone?

by Scott Perry

There is some discussion, outside of political circles, naturally, of a device that would eliminate the federal budget deficit by 1998.

The proposal is dubbed the "Four Percent Solution" by virtue of its call for a four percent cap on federal spending growth.

Proponents of the plan say it can succeed without strangling or even reducing important federal programs while also providing for tax cuts for American families.

Certainly, the deficit reduction proposal is much more specific, and we can offer only limited details in this limited space.

The idea, however, seems much more worthy of attention in this election year than who is for or against gun control; who is for or against abortion; or whether or not children ought to have the right to sue their parents for malpractice.

The more absurd the political agendas, the less likely we are to improve on our declining quality of life.

Wimpy, wimpy, wimpy . . .

A letter writer who somehow deciphered our Friday editorial, which questioned the disparity of justice in two traffic fatality cases, as a defense for reckless coal truck drivers, called the Times "the wimpiest rag I ever read."

In the next sentence, the writer said he or she would not sign the letter with his or her real name for fear of retribution.

"Praying it don't cave in"

Editor:

Back when the Indians owned this land and the white people took it away, how they fought to keep it and lost.

I don't know about the rest of the people, but I feel like I am being robbed when I get my car insurance in the mail.

Our car insurance is so high I didn't have enough money to pay it when here comes a cancellation notice in the mail—when I did get enough money gathered up to pay it I was already canceled—when I renewed it but you know what they said, we have to put you on high risk. That means more money.

Well I guess we're high risk for not having enough money, for their high cost of insurance, why is it we never hear anything from our great Governor about the high cost of groceries, car insurance, utility bills and clothing.

We heard what Rockefeller is doing for his peoples' county. Why isn't our Governor helping us.

Jobs are very few, prices are very high.

Take the magistrate for instance, around election time they're out and willing to do all kinds of things, patching side roads, bringing gravel and so forth, but when they get elected you can't get anything out of them.

Life is a gamble, just like buying a new car, while leaning up against the fender and praying it don't cave in.

Coffee Break

Okay, they won the gold without working up a sweat.

With one notable exception.

In an interview with network commentator Bob Costas, Olympic bad boy Charles Barkley said he wasn't playing in the Olympics to represent his country. He was there for the once-in-a-lifetime chance to play with the world of basketball's greatest players.

It's ironic that Barkley once played for the NBA's Philadelphia 76ers, which just happens to be located in Philadelphia, which just happens to be the city where the foundation was laid for the formation of this country, which just happens to be one of the few countries on the planet where bums like Barkley can be paid zillions of dollars to play a game.

Barkley not representing his country in the Olympics?

Thank God for that.

Did you know that American taxpayers have forked over 225 million bucks during the past two years to maintain the National Helium Reserves program?

That's right, helium.

The federal helium program was started in 1929 to insure a constant supply for blimps. The Helium Act Amendments of 1960 authorized activities necessary to meet the current and future helium demands of federal agencies for defense and space activities. Helium is used in various manufacturing, construction and research processes, including welding, leak detection and cooling. According to professional estimates, though, there are enough helium reserves in Wyoming alone to supply domestic and foreign markets well into the next century.

Selling the federal helium production facilities to the private sector could save taxpayers up to $700 million over five years.

The Kentucky State Fair kicks off August 19 in Louisville and two of the most entertaining events on the 11-day line-up promise to be an Armadillo Derby and the Kentucky Pork Producers' Racing Pigs.

We've also caught wind of tentative plans to initiate a new, audience participation game at this year's fair.

Pin the Bribe on the Legislator.
Participants to be named later.

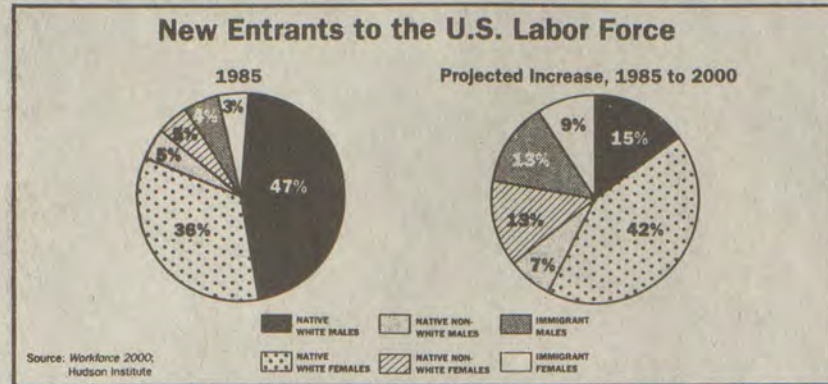

We bid farewell this week to one of our own...former Floyd County Times editor and publisher Barbara Allen Heinze, who died Friday after a lengthy illness.

A colleague for much of the past two decades, we shared a common perspective with Barbara on the role of community journalism that arises first and foremost from having grown up in the business, with ink on our hands and ultimately in our veins.

Such a relationship with community newspapering can only be described by those who have lived it. With Barbara's departure, there will be one less hand to write the story.

The Changing Face of America's Work Force

Take a look around your office. Chances are that a number—maybe even a majority—of your fellow employees are women, minorities and, increasingly, physically challenged individuals.

Yes, America is still the great melting pot, and as we move toward the year 2000, nowhere will this be more evident than in the changing face of America's work force.

What's driving this growing diversity? It's a combination of an increasing recognition of what diversity brings to a business' capabilities and the economic reality of the changing demographic profile of America's labor force.

A slowing population growth, an aging work force and a shrinking pool of well-educated young workers require the development of a new source of productive workers, according to Workforce 2000, a landmark study prepared by the Hudson Institute, an Indianapolis-based think tank.

For more and more businesses, that source is women, minorities and immigrants. Says Mary E. Herbert, director of work force diversity at Philip Morris Companies Inc., "Talented, skillful people of different races, religions, genders, cultures and physical abilities working toward common goals is not only good for any business, it's essential to survival."

Barry Rand, marketing president of Xerox, puts it this way, "The issue is skill, ingenuity and bringing an underutilized population into the work force."

Although work force diversity is already a reality, between now and the year 2000, 85 percent of new entrants into the work force will be minorities, women and immigrants—groups that currently hold half of America's jobs. For example, Workforce 2000 found:

- African-Americans, Hispanics and other non-whites made up 13 percent of the work force in 1985; by 2000, they will comprise nearly 16 percent.
 - Women are expected to comprise nearly 48 percent of the work force by 2000, with 61 percent of all women participating in the work force in some capacity.
 - Immigrants will make up more than 20 percent of the work force's new entrants by 2000, many of whom will be from Asia, representing a broad array of languages and cultures.
- America's new labor pool brings with it special needs and problems, and America's companies are struggling with the new sensitivities and programs required to nurture the evolving work force.

For example, with the advent of working mothers, many of whom are the primary care-givers in their families, companies are recognizing the need to create a more flexible work environment. According to Workforce 2000: "What is needed is a [thorough] reform of the institutions and policies that govern the workplace.... Flexible hours, the use of sick leave to care for children, more part-time work, pregnancy leaves for mothers and fathers, and other innovations are expensive, but ultimately necessary changes." Another problem that needs attention is the "glass ceiling" many women continue to encounter between them and significant promotions and pay increases.

Also, for the first time in history, a majority of all new jobs will require some sort of post-secondary education. Skills gaps increasingly are being tackled through specially designed training and literacy programs, such as Inroads, a nationwide minority development program. Inroads places promising African-American, Hispanic and American Indian college students in supervised corporate internships, while providing counseling and training. The program helps prepare them for corporate careers.

But such programs are not enough. Warns Workforce 2000, "If American companies are to reassert their world leadership, the educational standards that have been established in the nation's schools must be raised dramatically."

Much more needs to be done before the principle behind work force diversity—differences in people making a difference to America's economic future—becomes an everyday reality.

Work force diversity is being enthusiastically embraced up and down the chain of command, and everyone from the executive suite to the factory floor agrees that it's off to an encouraging start. That may be the result of a growing realization that differences can be a competitive strength. Or as one Louisville, factory worker put it, "Diversity is understanding that we all bring something to the table."

Indictments returned against two Johnson County residents

A Federal Grand Jury has returned a three-count indictment charging two Johnson County residents with extortion and using firearms.

James Robert Ferguson, 38, and Robin Ferguson, 32, both of Paintsville, were charged in the indictment with one count of conspiracy to extort money under threats of economic loss and violence and one count of extortion.

James Robert Ferguson was also charged with one count of using and carrying a firearm during the offense.

If convicted on all counts, James Robert Ferguson could face a maximum penalty of 25 years incarceration, a $500,000 fine, or both, and Robin Ferguson could face a maximum penalty of 20 years incarceration, a $500,000 fine or both — staff report.

Proposed Mountain Trail will originate in Pike County

Ben Ross, executive director of East Kentucky Corporation at Hazard, has been asked to testify before a congressional subcommittee in support of a proposed Cumberland Mountain Trail and National Recreation Area that could support hundreds of jobs in southeastern Kentucky.

The trail is proposed to follow the ridgeline of Pine Mountain in southeastern Kentucky. The trail would originate in Pike County and cut across Letcher, Harlan and Bell counties and adjacent counties in Virginia creating jobs and economic activity — staff report.

Johnson man killed near funeral home

Ralph Mullett, 39, of Wittensville died just after midnight Monday when his car collided with another car pulling out of a funeral home parking lot. Mullett was pronounced dead at the scene.

Mullett was driving north on U.S. 23 at the time Dianna Blevins pulled out of the Jones-Preston Funeral Home's parking lot. Blevins looked down the road, but did not see Mullett's 1982 Chevrolet Chevette, which had only one headlight working, said Paintsville police officer Kevin Pelphrey.

Blevins, 30, of Staffordsville, was treated for minor injuries at Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center and released — Lexington Herald-Leader.

Something fishy is going on at Fishtrap, Hurricane Creek

There's something fishy on the banks of Hurricane Creek at Fishtrap in Pike County and the residents there aren't happy about it.

A population study last week conducted by biologists with Kentucky's Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources left about 800 pounds of dead fish on the banks of Hurricane Creek.

Dan Wilson, assistant biologist for the Eastern District, said the study was necessary to determine the need for a "fertilizer program" under consideration by the state.

A net was spread across the creek and a natural product called Rotenone was dumped into the water. Rotenone takes the oxygen out of the water, thereby killing the fish, said Wilson. Rotenone poses no threat to humans, according to Wilson.

The biologists worked Tuesday and Wednesday collecting, measuring and weighing the dead fish — Linda H. Breed, News Express.

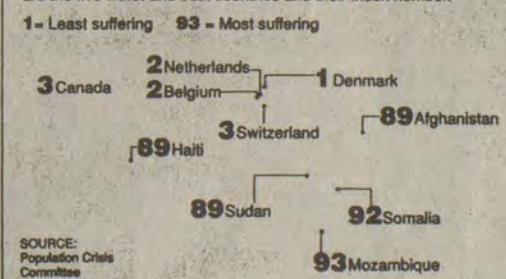

Two indicted in fiscal court brawl

A grand jury Monday indicted two men in a brawl that broke out during a Magoffin County Fiscal Court meeting in June.

Tommy Gullett, son of Magistrate Hassell Gullett, and Gary "J.J." Risner were each charged with one count of fourth-degree assault in an attack June 19 on Dr. Charles Hardin, county Democratic Party chairman. — Lexington Herald-Leader.

Report from Russia

by Thomas D. Matijasich
Associate Professor
Prestonsburg Community College

Boris Yeltsin successfully charmed President Bush, Congress, and the American people during his June visit. His courage and direct manner have gained him respect and foreign aid from countries on both sides of the Atlantic. While he remains personally popular with his people, many Russians are beginning to question the reform policies of Prime Minister Yegor Gaidar. The transition from a command economy to a market economy has been painful for many Russians.

Associated Press correspondent Vladimir N. Glazunov notes that the rapid rise in prices has been particularly hard on retired workers. "When Gaidar began his reforms, he didn't think over the protection of the population, especially those on pensions. They lost what they had in the banks." In St. Petersburg alone, there are 1.5 million pensioners. In mid-June they waited in long lines in front of post offices for pension checks that never arrived.

Unemployment is also becoming a serious problem as inefficient industries are forced to close. As the Russian military-industrial complex shrinks in size, additional jobs will be lost. In St. Petersburg, 30% of all industrial production is related to the military.

If the economic reforms initiated by Yeltsin and Gaidar do not produce prosperity within a reasonable period of time, committed Communists are prepared to act. A.S. Kalinichenko, a writer for the magazine SOVIET RUSSIA, notes that some changes are more apparent than real. "Many of the old Party people remain in power. Soviet power made a special type of people who can live and survive in all circumstances. The Communist Party is outlawed but the same people function in the bureaucracy."

Communists are still influential in the field of education. The Rector of the St. Petersburg Gornyi Institute refers to "perestroika" as the "slow destruction of higher education in this country." Prior to the rule of Gorbachev, every Soviet student was required to take courses in Marxist philosophy and the history of the Communist Party. Courses in Marxism have now been purged from the curriculum. However, G.V. Javakhov of the Committee of Russian High Schools reports that 20,000 teachers, who once taught Marxism, are now being retrained to teach other subjects. Many will undoubtedly retain their Marxist convictions while instructing Russian youth in history, philosophy, and political science. Journalist Kalinichenko was moved to comment that "people can not change their souls."

On June 12, members of two Communist groups began an extended siege of the Ostankino television station in Moscow. The demonstrators demanded that they be allowed to express their opinions on the government-controlled station. Ten days later, demonstrators clashed with riot police who were attempting to disrupt the protest. The Itar-Tass News Agency acknowledged that 14 people were arrested.

THE MOSCOW TIMES reported on June 23 that the pro-Communist Russian National Assembly "is setting up branches in the Russian provinces to encourage resistance to Yeltsin's reforms." In essence, the RNA is attempting to act as a shadow government. The assembly is calling for Yeltsin's impeachment and the creation of a new government.

The U.S. Congress must decide whether or not to send $12 billion in aid to the Yeltsin government. Even Yeltsin admits that the money will play only a small role in the transformation of the Russian economy. Yet without these funds, his Marxist opponents will have a much easier time undermining the reform process.

Appalachia

by Phyllis Hornbaker
Prestonsburg

The Appalachian Mountains sweep the Eastern section of the United States from Maine to Alabama. Time and the elements have smoothed and rounded the hills which present magnificent scenery throughout the year. Leafless trees in winter seem barren and dead, but with the warmth of spring, life surges anew into the outstretched branches. Rock-strewn brooks and broad rivers take the line of least resistance, meandering around the hills and through the valleys, their banks flecked with a myriad of wildflowers basking in or shrinking from the sun. Wild animals roam the wooded hills and valleys, fish swim the streams, and birds of every hue flit from tree to tree across the mountains. Gentle breezes moving slowly through the pine boughs, waft a melody to listening ears. This is Appalachia.

Yet too, the barren hills lie naked in the sun, ravaged by man's machines. Streams struggle past the choking devastation of coal mine debris and the rusting hulks of discarded automobiles. Fish die from the residue of mines seeping into the creeks. Rocks are stripped of their blanket of soil to create roadways for travel. Uprooted trees and cleared fields provide for man's needs. Carelessly tossed matches burn forests, leaving only the stubs of once-beautiful trees. Litter lines the highways, thrown there by thoughtless man. Even the sun's rays seem to struggle through the atmosphere of smoke and dust to reach and warm the earth. This too is Appalachia!

Man struggles against the angry river threatening destruction to his home. He labors in the soil depleted of life-giving elements, striving to raise food. He toils in the depths of the earth for a living. He wants for his children an education to enhance their future. He knows the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," yet holds his head up proudly as he walks the fields and pathways through the forest. And aware of both the beauty and the beast apparent in his land, he says, "This is my Appalachia!"

Obituaries

Barbara Allen Heinze

Barbara Allen Heinze, 64, of Spruce Pine, North Carolina, formerly of Prestonsburg, died Friday, August 7, at Spruce Pine Community Hospital.

Born February 3, 1928 in Prestonsburg, she was the daughter of Alka Dingus Allen of Prestonsburg and the late Norman Allen. She was a graduate of Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Missouri, receiving degrees in English and history. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, Prestonsburg. She grew up in the newspaper business after her father founded the Floyd County Times in 1927. Shortly after, the Allen family bought out the interests of the competing newspaper, The Prestonsburg Post.

Though she worked briefly for an advertising agency, she eventually returned to help her father with the family business. She worked in the editorial and advertising departments of the Floyd County Times for a number of years before becoming editor and publisher after her father's death in 1986.

Her news articles made an impact on the Floyd County community. Her stories often hit hard, but she was always straightforward. She continued the tradition of her father in reporting both sides of an issue, and she often told of her father's motto: "If both sides are mad at you, then you've treated each side fairly."

Her commitment to honesty and her sense of fair play live in the pages of the Floyd County Times.

In addition to her mother, she is survived by her husband, John G. Heinze; one son, John G. Heinze Jr., of Prestonsburg; two daughters, Gretchen H. Moyer of Lebanon, Pennsylvania, and Lisa A. Ward of Morehead; three brothers, Quentin Allen of Fort Mitchell, David W. Allen of Prestonsburg, and Paul N. Allen of Lexington; one sister, Sharon Belding of Lexington; and three grandchildren.

Funeral services were Monday, August 10, at 11 a.m., at the First Presbyterian Church, Prestonsburg, with the Rev. Timothy Jessen officiating.

Burial was in the Allen Family Cemetery at Hueysville, under the direction of Hall Funeral Home.

Serving as pallbearers were Willie Conley, Mike Burke, Johnny Heinze, David Moyer, B.J. Ward, Paul Neil Allen and Richard Belding.

Edgar Adams

Edgar Adams, 76, of Gaffney, South Carolina, died Saturday, August 8, at Carolina Medical Center, Charlotte, North Carolina following a sudden illness.

Born August 3, 1916 in Magoffin County, he was the son of the late Wilson and Ida Cheek Adams. He was a retired coal miner. He served in the U.S. Army from 1942 till 1946. He was a member of the Corner Stone Church, Gaffney, South Carolina.

Survivors include his wife, Judy Moore Adams; one son, Allen Darrell Adams of Norwalk, Ohio; one daughter, Ida Dempsey of Ashland; one sister, Clara Adams of Jenkins; and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be Wednesday, August 12, at 2 p.m., at the Hall Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Bruce Kanipe and Harold Lawter officiating.

Burial will be in the Richmond Cemetery at Prestonsburg under the direction of Hall Funeral Home.

Ralph Mullett

Ralph Mullett, 39, of Wittensville and a native of Floyd County, died Monday, August 10 from injuries received in an automobile accident on Route 23 in Paintsville.

Born March 19, 1953 in Prestonsburg, he was the son of Rhoda Holbrook Mullett of Wittensville and the late Roy B. Mullett. He was a mechanic with Fraziers Trucking Company.

In addition to his mother, he is survived by one son, Ralph Mullett Jr. of Auxier; three brothers, Milton Prater, Floyd Prater, and Austin Prater, all of Indiana; six sisters, Phillis Blevins of Wittensville, Kathy Howell of Auxier, Thelma Laney of Paintsville, Betty Baker and Virginia Wood, both of Indiana, and Wanda York of Bonanza.

Funeral services will be Thursday, August 13, at the home of his mother in Wittensville with Rev. Ricky O'Bryan and Rev. Lowell King officiating.

Burial will be in the Holbrook Cemetery on Abbott Creek, at Bonanza under the direction of Floyd Funeral Home.

Lola Thornsbeary

Lola Thornsbeary, 67, of Mousie, died Sunday, August 9, at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Lexington, following a long illness.

Born February 20, 1925 in Mousie, she was the daughter of Mary Click Cox of Hazard and the late Ech Cox. She was a member of the Little Country Church, Mill Creek at Wayland. She was preceded in death by her husband, Edgar Thornsbeary.

In addition to her mother, she is survived by two sons, Charles Thornsbeary Jr. and Jim Thornsbeary, both of Hindman; one daughter, Janet Collett of Mousie; two sisters, Hattie Moore of Chicago, Illinois, and Delle Polloch of Oregon; and seven grandchildren.

Funeral services will be Wednesday, August 12, at 11 a.m., at the Little Country Church with the Clergymen Ernest Keene and Irvin Allen officiating.

Burial will be in the Martin Branch Cemetery at Mousie under the direction of Hall Funeral Home.

Franklin Delano Salisbury

Franklin Delano Salisbury, 60, of Hunter, died Sunday, August 9, at McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital following a short illness.

Born March 31, 1932 in Hunter, he was the son of the late J.D. and Pearl M. Cox Salisbury. He was a geologist for Columbia Gas Resources and served in the U.S. Marines during the Korean War. He was a member of the John W. Hall Masonic Lodge No. 950 and a lifetime member of the D.A.V. Chapter 128, Monroe Vanderpool Memorial at Garrett.

Survivors include two brothers, Al Salisbury of Orlando, Florida, and Smith Salisbury of Hunter; two sisters, Fern Martin of McDowell and Gloria Jean Salisbury of Hunter.

Funeral services will be Wednesday, August 12, at 11 a.m., at the Hall Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Ken LeMaster officiating.

Burial will be in the Hunter Family Cemetery at Hunter under the direction of Hall Funeral Home.

Serving as pallbearers will be Greg Banks, Scott Salisbury, Shawn Martin, Chris Salisbury, Carlos Spurlock, and Dickie Skeens.

Crawford Cline Jr.

Crawford Cline Jr., 73, of Blaine, died Sunday, August 9, at Humana Hospital, Louisville.

Born May 27, 1919 in Edgar, he was the son of the late William McKinley and Exer Mae Wells Cline. He was a retired farmer and an Army veteran of World War II. He was preceded in death by his wife, Georgia Spears Cline in 1963.

Survivors include five sons, William Kenny Cline of Columbus, Ohio, Crawford Cline of Douglasville, Georgia, James Howard Cline and John Paul Cline, both of Blaine, and Mickey Cline of Van Lear; four daughters, Nadine Thompson and Diane Meese, both of Sandusky, Ohio, Jacqueline Sparks of Columbus, Ohio, and Gail West of Blaine; two brothers, Vadis Cline of Obetz, Ohio, and Howard Cline of Canal Winchester, Ohio; 15 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be Wednesday, August 12, at 2 p.m., at the Cordell Free Will Baptist Church with the Rev. Mike Cordle officiating.

Burial will be in the Cline Cemetery at Brushy Fork under the direction of Young Funeral Home, Louisville.

It's good to know it's all taken care of...

When a death occurs, many decisions have to be made for a funeral and burial. And they're all part of a seemingly endless number of things that need attention. Rather than leaving these decisions to your family, you can take care of them ahead of time with Forethought funeral planning.

Then, when the time comes, a single call to the funeral home should be all that's needed to put the process in motion.

A proud tradition

Our funeral home has been responding to the needs of the community for many years. To continue this proud tradition of helping families in their time of need, we now offer the Sunset Security™ Plan.

Sunset Security™ offered by us as a member of the Kentucky Funeral Directors Burial Association, is a plan that lets you reduce the stress your loved ones will experience at the time of a funeral.

Through Sunset Security™, you can pre-arrange a funeral now. The plan offers an inflation-proof feature that lets you save money by freezing the cost of a funeral at today's prices. And it provides special tax-saving advantages. We'd like to give you a "Personal Record Guide" and tell you about the Sunset Security™ Plan. Just complete the coupon below and send it to us.

Judy Bennett

Bennett called to children's ministry

Calvary Baptist Church of Erwin recently called Judy Bennett, effective June 1, to serve as director of children's ministry. Bennett is a native of Prestonsburg. She is the daughter of Charles and Sue Hale of Prestonsburg. She is the granddaughter of the late Arthur (Aut) Campbell and Emma Jane Campbell and the late Walter (Watt) and Wilma Hale. Bennett holds degrees in business management from Prestonsburg Community College and in business administration from Pikeville College and a MA degree in Christian education from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville.

Bennett is married to Tim Bennett, associate pastor of Calvary Baptist Church. They serve together as assistant directors in the youth department of the Holston Baptist Association. For the past five years she has served as a volunteer in the youth and children's departments of Calvary Baptist. She serves as a youth specialist for the discipleship training department, youth section, of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board of Nashville. She is also currently employed with the Unicoi County Board of Education as a substitute teacher for all grades.

Regarding ministry to children, Bennett says: "The purpose of children's ministry at Calvary is to provide a complete ministry to the children of the community in order that they may come to know the Lord and mature in their Christian faith, as well as to give them opportunities for the Christian fellowship and fun."

Wayland center undergoes changes

The Wayland Area Senior Citizens Center has undergone some changes. We encourage everyone to drop in and visit.

The center has a new director Mrs. Sharon Smith and a new bus driver, through Sandy Valley Transportation, Mrs. Susan Bailey.

Seniors enjoyed a shopping trip to Pikeville on Tuesday, August 4th and also breakfast at Shoneys. Those in attendance were: Earnestine Hall, Maddie Gibson, Julie Martin, Jean Lafferty, Wanda Layne, Maxie Patton, Alma Chapman, Lucille Chaffins, Vina Slone, Margaret Conley, and guest Sandy Williams with Big Sandy Area Development.

Recently the center had new items donated for the craft room. Craft activities are underway. Anyone wanting to place an order for a special quilt may do so.

Mondays—will be health awareness day with guest speakers.

Wednesdays—will be shopping days.

Tuesdays and Thursdays will be open for seniors to help plan.

Fridays—2nd Friday of each month will be to celebrate all those birthdays for that month. The 3rd Friday will be for visiting area nursing homes.

Saturday, August 22nd at 6 p.m. the center is sponsoring an old-fashion sidewalk fair and gospel sing. This is open to the public.

Floyd County's fair board to meet

Anyone interested in helping to re-establish the Floyd County Fair Board may do so by contacting Harold Ratliff at 886-2450, or by attending a membership meeting on August 13, beginning at 6 p.m., at the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce building in Prestonsburg.

Prestonsburg Community College to hold two ribbon cutting ceremonies

Prestonsburg Community College will celebrate two monumental successes on Monday, August 17th at 2 p.m. in Prestonsburg and 4 p.m. in Pikeville. The college will hold ribbon cutting ceremonies for the new IBM Networked Computer Lab and the newly leased addition to the Pike County Campus.

The IBM Networked Computer Lab with 24 student stations will officially open that day with a ribbon cutting ceremony at 2 p.m. in Room 202 of the Pike Technology Building. The $84,000 computer lab consists of 24 NEC 386sx/20 4 mg hd and 24 VGA color monitors as well as an HP Laserjet III printer. This state-of-the-art computer lab will allow students access to quality instruction.

The Physical Sciences and Related Technologies Division offers about 35 credit and 8 non-credit computer science classes each semester with 7 full-time computer science faculty. The college is most appreciative of President Floyd for securing the funds in order for this much needed computer lab to become reality. However, in order to complete the lab, additional funds or donations are needed to purchase furniture for the new computer center.

Computer lab furniture which consists of 24 stations and 24 chairs will cost $25,100.

The second ribbon cutting will be held in Pikeville at 4 p.m. The Pike County Campus of Prestonsburg Community College is about to expand its Main Street facilities to accommodate the great increase in enrollment over the past two years. The expansion will be completed in time for the Fall semester and will add desperately needed office and classroom space.

In March, a student committee headed by Mrs. Jorita Addington and Thurman Bumgardner II called on the General Assembly to increase funding for the Pike County Campus and restore budget cuts in the UK system. Students gathered more than 3000 petition signatures and held a rally attended by hundreds of students, community leaders, and concerned citizens. Partly as a result of their efforts, a new building is being leased with funding from the University of Kentucky Community College System.

The college is renting the Bilter Building at 405 Main Street, directly across the street from the current campus. This historic brick building was constructed by J.T. Bilter and is currently owned by the Bilter sisters. According to PCC history professor George Torok, who has been researching Pikeville in the 1930's, the structure was built in 1938 when the city was being modernized with a new telephone system and electric street lighting.

The Bilter Building will house the administrative and clerical offices, two new classrooms, and a library room. The current campus at 408 Main Street will contain new faculty offices, expanded GED facilities, and a first floor computer lab.

The ribbon cutting ceremony for the new facility in Pikeville and the computer lab are open to the public. PCC President Deborah L. Floyd, student and community leaders will be present.

Respiratory Therapy graduates

Danita Hall and Larry "Brother" Stumbo, Jr., both of McDowell, are recent graduates of Rowan State Vocational Technical School's Respiratory Therapy Program. Hall is a 1988 graduate of McDowell High School and is currently enrolled at Morehead State University working toward registry in Respiratory Therapy. She is the daughter of Denzil Ray and Donna Hall of McDowell. Stumbo is a 1987 graduate of McDowell High School and is employed by Ky. River Medical Center in Jackson. He is the son of Larry Foster and Chris Stumbo of McDowell.

Sound Environmental Management

Recently, Costain Coal entered into a contract with an electric cogeneration facility as the exclusive supplier of Kentucky coal for a plant under construction in Jacksonville, Florida. Under the terms of the contract, Costain will return the coal ash to its source in Kentucky for safe disposal in a well-designed, environmentally protective ash landfill.

In the last few weeks, our friends and neighbors have asked many questions about our plans for Stratton Branch. We would like to take this opportunity to answer some of them. Others will be answered in future open letters to the community.

Q: What is coal ash?

A: Coal ash consists of all the materials in coal that cannot burn. The Florida plant will add lime to the coal so it will burn cleaner. The ash placed in Stratton Branch will be similar to the coal ash we have all removed from the ash pans of our coal burning furnaces and heaters. It contains nothing that was not already in the coal before it was mined and burned except limestone and water.

Q: What will be put in the landfill besides ash?

A: Absolutely nothing. Under our operating permit, we are only allowed to store ash from Kentucky coal burned at the Florida plant.

Q: How do we know it's not hazardous?

A: Both Kentucky and federal environmental officials have classified coal ash as non-toxic and non-hazardous. This is not an exotic material—it is simply the ashes from the burning of coal. Ash samples from our coal, properly tested, have confirmed that our landfill will be environmentally sound. Frequent tests will be made on the returning ash to verify that it is safe.

Q: How does this differ from other kinds of landfills our citizens have opposed?

A: Some industrial and medical wastes that are burned leave materials that must be handled very carefully. None of these wastes will ever be allowed in our landfill. We don't want the liability, and we don't want to be in the garbage business. We're only handling ash from our own product—coal.

Costain Coal is proud of its environmental record. To us, good business management includes sound environmental management. If you have additional questions regarding the Stratton Branch facilities, give us a call.

Q: What about dust from handling the coal ash?

A: The ash will undergo a "pelletization" process before being shipped by rail cars for disposal. This is a process that molds the ash with water to form small pellets. Pelletized ash is easier to handle during transportation and greatly reduces the amount of dust.

Q: What does Costain know about operating a landfill?

A: Costain has hired International Technology Corporation, an environmental engineering firm, to design the Stratton Branch facilities to meet environmental regulations. As owner/operator of these facilities, Costain will be responsible for constructing and operating the facilities in strict accordance with permit provisions, design criteria, plans and specifications. Constructing landfills in accordance with engineering plans is not new to Costain. Handling mining refuse and reclaiming mined lands are activities Costain has been conducting successfully for many years. With this extensive experience, there are few companies better prepared to operate a fly ash landfill than Costain Coal.

Q: Why did Costain choose Stratton Branch for the landfill?

A: Although Costain's ownership of the property was a consideration, the most important reasons for choosing Stratton Branch were the site's suitable geology and hydrology and Costain's existing mining operations nearby. Another advantage is the fact that the ash can be moved to the fill area without passing through residential areas.

People, Places and Things

WHAT WOULD MA BELL SAY?

You know, I really love telephones. I guess everyone does. I just can't imagine how people ever lived without them. Lately, though, some aspects of life with telephones really annoy me.

I have nothing against call waiting. I think it's one of the greatest inventions ever. Before we ever got call waiting, no one could get through. Besides that, I was afraid to stay on the phone for long periods of time because I was afraid someone important was trying to call. Now, of course, I don't have to worry about that.

What bothers me, though, is when someone clicks over to the other line... and doesn't come back. I always wonder if I should hang up or not. That is just a bad situation all around. Doesn't that bother you?

I guess ever since there have been phones, there have been prank callers. I remember some older members of my family telling me about callers who would say, "Do you have Prince Albert in a can?"

During those days, people rolled their own cigarettes (this is for younger people to read, so they'll understand. Someone had to explain it to me once, too). Prince Albert was a brand of tobacco and it came in a can.

Anyway, the person who had answered the phone would reply, "yes," and the idiot prankster would say, "Well, you better let him out, he'll suffocate."

Yeah, that's really funny. Not. Or how about that stupid, "Is your refrigerator running?" gag. That's really annoying, too.

I have been exposed to the "90's" telephone prank. Someone with 3-way calls my house and at the same time calls someone else.

So the two unsuspecting answerers try to figure out how this other person got on the line. This has happened to me a couple of times.

I keep asking the other person, "Who do you want? Who were you calling? You called me."

And, of course, the other person is saying the same things to me. It's a real pain. I hope that prankster gets a good kick out of it. People who make prank calls really lead dull lives, I do believe.

By the way, my beloved hang-up caller is still calling me. It's good to know one is loved. I say that because someone cares enough to stay up round-the-clock to call and check on me every 2 or 3 hours.

Ain't that sweet. I think not. Later.

Completes basic

Navy Seaman Recruit Marvin D. Brock, son of Lowell Brock of Prestonsburg, recently completed basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Illinois. During the cycle, recruits are taught general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 occupational fields. Studies include seamanship, close-order drill, naval history and first aid. He joined the Navy in May 1992.

EMERGENCY ROOM

People sometimes ask if I miss my work at the post office and I have to admit, "No, I don't miss the work but I sure do miss the customers who were such an important part of my life."

I treasure the friends and the stories they shared with me. I received special permission to use one of them this week, only with the stipulation that I not use the real names. And so this account really happened, but the names have been changed.

Francie was a regular customer who we were always glad to see. Some people are able to project an image of composure as if the days are all routine, or that no circumstance—good or bad—flusters them.

But Francie is not that way at all.

She is so open and honest you could almost look at her expression and tell whether the wind is blowing from the south or out of the north.

That's why I knew, as soon as I saw her, that she'd had a "wringing out."

"Don't you feel well today?" I asked.

"Yeah, I feel all right now. But I guess you heard what happened to Tommy."

She was talking about her only child, a first grader in school. "What happened to Tommy?" I wanted to know.

"Well, it was last Friday and Billy, his little classmate, invited him to spend the night. They were so excited about playing together that we let him go."

"After he'd gone, Skip and I decided to go to Prestonsburg and visit some relatives. It took a while for the neighbors to find us, but we got a call that we were needed at the Pikeville hospital."

"Those boys had been climbing a tree when Tommy fell and cut his head. Billy's parents got him to the hospital right away but the doctor wanted us there before he'd stitch him up."

"I'm sure it was a scare," I suggested, "and I hope you're over it by now."

"Yes, we're both okay now, but scare is a mild word for what happened to me."

"When I walked into that emergency room and saw blood on Tommy's head, I wet my pants and fainted. Then when I revived, they had me on one of those hospital beds and more of the staff was working with me than with him.

"I'm sure they understood your anxiety," I tried to reassure her.

"Yes," she said, "I think they did, but Skip sure didn't. He's still mad at me."

He said he was humiliated beyond words when they came to mop the floor. Then when he went to pay the bill, there was a double charge—one for Tommy and one for me."

Intercultural exchange students share ideas, dreams and families

by Janice Shepherd
Staff Writer

Joe Bolton, area representative for American Intercultural Student Exchange, is asking families in this region to open their hearts and their homes to three foreign students who would like to learn about the culture of the United States.

Bolton is currently seeking temporary homes for one Italian and two Brazilian students for the 1992-93 school year. If homes are available, the students will arrive in August and leave at the end of June.

Students Edgar Henry Wegner and Marcelo Belassiano are from Brazil. Stefano Nardo is from Italy. The three students are hoping to come to the United States and attend high school for one year.

Each student will bring his own spending money — expenses for school clothes, etc. All that a Kentucky family provides is food, shelter, warmth, and fun, said Bolton.

Bolton tries to place each child in a setting similar to the one he's leaving. Wegner and Belassiano live in a country setting, and Bolton would like to place them in homes in a rural setting. Nardo, though, lives in Milan, Italy, and Bolton wants to place him in an in-town location.

The homes must have adequate space to allow the students to have a room to themselves, a place where the student can study. The home must be close to a high school and accessible by bus.

Though the students will attend one year of high school in the United States, most often that year will be repeated in their own country, Bolton said.

"If they're sophomores when they come here, they may have to start as sophomores again when they return home," said Bolton. He explained that education levels vary from country to country.

Bolton said that even though the students will be going to school longer, they will be living their education. Ninety-nine percent of the students are taught English in their own countries, according to Bolton. "They've been taught about America," he said, "and they want to know what it's like close up."

Bolton also hopes the students learn to avoid some of the mistakes that America made 200 years ago. "In Brazil, the children are experiencing changes in Brazil that are destroying their Rainforest," said Bolton. "The people there are being moved; their culture is so much different, but basically the changes they're experiencing are what we went through 200 years ago."

"We took the land, and changed it," said Bolton. "Maybe they will learn what we are just becoming aware of, 200 years later — that the land is important and worth saving."

Bolton also thinks the exchange of students will improve future relationships between countries. By living with other cultures each group will learn from each other, explained Bolton. He hopes to place the students in homes with children who are about the same age as the exchange student so each will teach the other.

Next summer, he hopes to send Floyd County students for five or six weeks to a foreign country.

"We're all human beings," said Bolton. "It's up to the future generations to make peace on earth."

Anyone who would like more information about hosting an exchange student, or who would like to become a foreign exchange student, can call Bolton at 886-2574.

Exchange of cultures

Joe Bolton recently paid a visit to Magnus Edln, who was a foreign exchange student here. Edln lived with Bolton and his family and attended Allen Central High School during his stay in Floyd County.

ON AUGUST AND DOLLY

Did you know that August is the reason that February is so short? According to tradition, the Roman emperor Augustus, for whom the month was named, lengthened the month from 30 to 31 days by stealing a day from February.

Did you know that U.S. Presidents Hoover, Harrison and LBJ were born in August? It was also August that an American bomber dropped the first atomic bomb used in warfare on Hiroshima, Japan in 1945? Furthermore, in August, 1920, the 19th Amendment was proclaimed, giving women the right to vote.

Yet, despite all the historical significance the month has, as a kid, all August ever meant to me was that it was time to go back to school. It was generally at about this time those bulky canvas mail sacks were tossed from the C & O passenger train near the Thealka post office and my little brother Joe and I toted home those large brown packages from Montgomery Ward. Forty or fifty dollars worth of school clothes (which outfitted both of us and includes shoes, several shirts and two or three pairs of overalls) would be unwrapped and tried on. Nowadays, that same forty or fifty dollars wouldn't make a down payment on a pair of Air-Jordans.

Anyway, since school starts back next week, perhaps August might also be designated "Why is Mommy Smiling?" Month.

And speaking of school, the Sevier County (Tennessee) school system recently received a nice gift. Singer Dolly Parton gave them $500,000.

Parton's interest in helping education in her home county dates back to 1988 when a buddy plan was initiated, pairing seventh and eighth graders, then challenging them to graduate together. If they did, they'd each be awarded $1000. This past May, the first group graduated and received $237,000.

It's pretty nice that Dolly wants to share her success with the folks back home. Of course, the folks back home have long celebrated Dolly, too... even to the point of erecting her statue in the court house square.

Could there be a lesson here for somebody?

And speaking of Dolly Parton, by this time next year, if Cole of California, a swimwear company, has anything to say about it, women will have more in common with Dolly than just working nine to five.

It seem they've come up with an "air" bikini, which features tiny rubber bladders in the top part so those who feel the need to be bigger, can simply pump them up. Sort of like these new-fangled tennis shoes...no, on second thought, it's nothing like these new-fangled tennis shows.

Anyway, according to an article I read in the paper, the new swimsuit will sell for about $75 and be called "Top Secret." The new item probably won't take the fashion world by storm, but at the same time, they ought to float and make swimming a little safer... at least for those who actually go into the water.

Kim's Korner

If you're a parent, I'm sure at one time or another you've experienced your own parents babysitting for you.

With this in mind, I can also bet you've heard these words, "They were perfect little angels," (until you guys got here).

Why do you suppose our children behave like angels when we're not around, and the minute we arrive, they explode with meanness, curiosity, bounce off of walls, and become instantly starved out of their minds?

My children can get up from the supper table and we can go visit mamaw and Alvin (which is probably every bit of a five minute drive) and by the time they open the car door, walk up the steps, onto the porch, and into the kitchen door, they're starved—again—which of course gives their grandmother the impression I rarely feed her grandchildren.

She knows better and knows children, therefore, she offers every single item in her cupboards and refrigerator.

But, this thing with our children's behavior when they're without mom and dad baffles me.

My oldest daughter became somewhat of a class clown in fourth grade. However, I only found this out from friends who spent the night with us.

They would talk about how Ashleigh had the entire class laughing over something and I'd say, "Ashleigh? You sure?"

Then slowly but surely she came out of her quiet little shell in front of her dad and I. Boy, has she ever come out of her shell.

But when I heard she was a comedian at school I was flabbergasted.

My sister-in-law has two beautiful little girls of her own. She's also getting the meaning of "Forget phone conversations."

You guys know it all too well. I phoned Shari the other night. Her two-year-old Rachael wanted to talk to mommie too, except she was right there in the living room with mom playing building towers and mom was on long distance with aunt Kim.

Tiffany can be in another area of the house, hear me on the phone, and have to tell me some kind of story or ask for a drink of water she'd normally get herself.

I know this phone thing starts at age two but when does it end?

Ash doesn't have a problem interrupting me on the phone. She simply thinks she's the only one who has rights to it.

But then again, what preteen doesn't?

STOCK SALES

This past week, Tiffany went to spend a few days with her papaw at the farm.

One of Papaw Ron's favorite things is the stock sales. He took Tiff along and even let her bid.

The catch here—Papaw came home with two cows and two calves. Two little black calves that Tiff thought were adorable.

I heard through the grapevine that Papaw was shaking his head no, no, no, but the auctioneer wasn't listening to the big Frasure, he was listening to the little Frasure.

"Oh well, now Papaw can get chocolate milk too," said Tiff.

Till next week.

Floyd County Homemakers' annual luncheon-meeting

Mrs. Francis Pitts, Floyd County Home Economist, has announced that the annual luncheon-meeting of the Floyd County Homemakers' group will be held on Wednesday, August 26, beginning at 10:45, at the First United Methodist Church.

She adds that the program will be 10 concurrent demonstrations.

Each member should bring a covered dish to serve six persons. Following the luncheon, a short business session will be held and door prizes will be awarded.

Pitts says that cultural arts will be judged and she lists these categories, with the hope that members will bring some of the following to display during that event: basketry, carving and sculpture, China painting, Christmas decorations, counted crossstitch, crochet, drawing, embroidery, Heritate skills, knitting, needlepoint painting, photography, quilted apparel, quilts, rugmaking, soft sculpture, weaving (loom), stenciling (except stenciled quilts), wall hangings, and miscellaneous (items not included in other categories).

All members, members-at-large, and guests will be welcome at this event.

Hereford family spends recent vacation in Bermuda

Dr. John R. Hereford, formerly of Prestonsburg, now of Kingsport, Tennessee, Mrs. Hereford, and their son, John Robert, have returned to their home, following a recent vacation enjoyed in Bermuda.

Mrs. Herald welcomed back to her church

Mrs. Della Herald was among those who attended the First Church of God, where she is a charter member, during services there this past Sunday morning. The church's pastor, the Rev. Kevin Collins, members of the congregation, and other friends and relatives were glad to know that Mrs. Herald, who had been a shut-in at her home here since December of last year, is showing so much improvement.

On Sunday afternoon, she joined a large crowd at the dedication services for the new addition to the church's parsonage. Delicious refreshments were enjoyed following the dedication.

Mrs. Alta Leslie here from Lexington

Mrs. Alta Leslie, formerly of Prestonsburg, presently of Lexington, is here for a visit with members of her family, Drs. Keith, Larry, and Ronald Leslie, their wives and families, and to attend funeral services for Mrs. Barbara (Allen) Heinze. On Sunday morning, she attended the First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial).

Miriam Rebekah Lodge No. 31 holds regular meeting

Members of Miriam Rebekah Lodge No. 31 met in regular session on Tuesday evening, August 4, with the noble grand, Loretta Akers, presiding.

Several members were recorded as being on the sick list and others in need of sympathy due to the loss of a loved one. Cards, to be sent to them, were signed.

A communication from the assembly president, Von Stringer, requesting Miriam Rebekah Lodge to present the Bible at the assembly meeting, to be held in Lexington during the month of October was read and members agreed to do this. A letter notifying the lodge of the death of past sovereign grand master, Harold C. Scott, asking that the altar be draped in his memory, was also read.

The noble grand made a report on the last visit by lodge members to the Mountain Manor Nursing Home, and she thanked all who participated in this program.

Members present for this meeting were Loretta Akers, Hope Whitten, Paulena Owens, Beverly Hackworth, and Mabel Jean LeMaster.

The next regular meeting is scheduled for Tuesday evening, August 18, at 7 p.m., in the I.O.O.F. hall, on First Avenue. All members are urged to attend.

Mesdames Hicks and Keene attend sorority meeting

Mrs. Delphia Hicks of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Susie Keene of Pikeville, were in Williamsburg over the weekend attending the Alpha Gamma State Workshop. The meetings were held at Cumberland College there, with members of Lambda and Alpha Lambda Chapters serving as hostesses.

Prestonsburg native named Distinguished Alumnus

Dr. Jack Allen, a native of Prestonsburg, and professor emeritus of history at Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee, has been named as Peabody's Distinguished Alumnus for 1992. Dr. Allen, who earned two degrees from this college, was a member of the faculty there for thirty-three years. According to the "Peabody Reflector," "he is the author or co-author of more than fifty books and monographs, including textbooks in American history, government, civics and social studies."

Dr. Allen is the son of Anna Mayo Allen, who formally resided here, presently residing in Lexington and the late Atty. Edward Allen. He married the former Cherry Falls. Dr. and Mrs. Allen are the parents of three sons and are referred to by the school bestowing these honors as "truly a Peabody Family."

Horn's Chapel Ladies' Auxiliary hold recent meeting

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Horn's Chapel Methodist Church met on Thursday, August 6, at the church. Maggie Ratliff, president, was in charge of the meeting, which was opened with prayer by Willia Mae Branham.

Ethel Sammons, secretary-treasurer, read the minutes of the last meeting and gave the financial report. During the business meeting, it was decided to conduct a yard sale in the church yard on September 4-5.

Marietta Crager presented an interesting and informative program, entitled "The History of Horn's Chapel Church, from 1902-1992."

Vacationing in Virginia

Lisa and Terry Chaffins of Endicott spent the last week of July visiting his mother Rochella Turner, his grandmother Mary Hicks, his uncle Danny Hicks and his aunt Ruby Bentley, all of Seaford, Virginia. The couple also visited his aunt Darlene Palmer of Williamsburg, Virginia.

While there they toured Colonial Williamsburg, The Pottery and Busch Gardens and enjoyed a ride on the Jamestown Ferry and a stay at Virginia Beach.

Attend craft fair

The sewing circle and others from the First United Methodist Church attended the Arts and Crafts Fair at Berea on July 10.

After visiting the arts and crafts display downtown and lunch at Boone Tavern they toured the Arts and Crafts Fair at Indian Fort Theatre.

Those in attendance were Mary Sue Moore, Dorothy Stover, Mildred Branham, Lee Boswell, Gypsie Jones, Nancy Webb, Carter Sturgill, Edna C. Greenwade, Phyllis Stanley, Phyllis Herrick, Vera Ford, Armita Snavely and Thelma Thomas.

Jenny Wiley Chapter AARP to hold dinner-meeting

Mrs. Gladys Allen, president of the Jenny Wiley Chapter AARP reminds members and those who may be interested in becoming members of the regular monthly dinner-meeting to be held on Friday evening, August 14, at 5:30, at the Highlands Regional Medical Center. A worthwhile program will be presented.

(The name of Mrs. Shirley Callihan was unintentionally omitted from the list of those attending last month's dinner meeting. Mrs. Callihan is secretary of this group.)

Represent local church at National Association

Representing the Highland Avenue Free Will Baptist Church of Prestonsburg at the recent national Association of Free Will Baptists, in Indianapolis, Indiana were Danese Amburgy, Eileen and Denise Campbell, Polly and Julie Campbell, Navajo and Mashaiona Austin, Thelma, Leah, and Chatty Lafferty, Alisha Compton, and Camilla Robinson. Mrs. Danese Amburgy and Mrs. Eileen Campbell were sent from the Kentucky Association of Freewill Baptists as representatives to this event.

Family vacation

Mrs. Eunice Lafferty spent an enjoyable week in Nashville, Tennessee recently. Joining her for this vacation were all of her daughters, including Nell Hebner, Sue Wells and daughter Stephanie, Billie Murdock, and son Joshua, Jewell Bays and daughter Donna Jewell and Donna's sons, Jeremy and Chris.

They all enjoyed the Grand Ole Opry, a live taping of "Nashville Now," a cruise on the show boat, General Jackson, and a day at Opryland.

Revised poverty levels may qualify more Kentuckians for nutrition program

More low-income mothers and children in Kentucky may qualify for a nutrition program because of annual federal government revisions in poverty levels.

On July 1, the revisions brought about a four to five percent increase in the annual income limits for families applying for WIC, formally known as the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children. For example, the annual maximum income for a family of four increased from $24,790 to $25,808.

Approximately 100,000 Kentuckians currently receive WIC benefits monthly.

For more information on WIC eligibility, Kentuckians can contact their local health department.

Two area boy scouts are honored with scouting's highest honor

In a recent ceremony, Prestonsburg Boy Scout Troop # 877 presented two scouts with scouting's highest honor, the Eagle Scout award. Christopher Martin Bailey and Christopher Scott Young, who have a combined scouting tenure of approximately 15 years, both agree that earning the Eagle Scout award is "not an easy task." In addition to the eleven required merit badges, ten others must also be earned. Letters of congratulation were received and read from Governor Brereton Jones, President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle. Special awards were presented to members of the scouts family, including the traditional mother's pin and roses for the mothers, as well as an Eagle Scout tie pin for the fathers. In their Eagle Scout address the boys thanked many who had a hand in getting them to this point, including their parents, teachers, friends, fellow scouts, their scoutmaster and other adult scout leaders. The Eagle Scout Challenge was given by their scoutmaster, Johnnie E. Ross who challenged them "live by the Scout Oath and Law always, even as a man, for in doing so they would not only be better husbands and fathers, but also better citizens."

Both plan to remain active in scouting and in Troop #877. Bailey will serve as district chief for the Tom-time for me to return that favor, volunteering my time to help out whenever I'm needed."

The troop is sponsored by St.

James Episcopal Church in Prestonsburg. The two became the third and fourth Eagle Scouts of Troop #877.

Discipline helps child learn to behave and to respect property of others

She took the hose and pumped water into the gas tank of your new car. He ran into the street and was almost hit. She tried to hide a key in the electrical wall plug. He pulled up all the violets you had just planted. She let the bird out of the cage. He cut his friend's hair and his friend cut his. She ran away from home.

Young children do this sort of thing all the time and parents are faced with a decision as to the best way to handle it. There are several roads to follow: You may feel that a hard wallop, regardless of the offense, is the best and only proper punishment. On the other hand, you may be the type of parent who feels there is never a reason to hit a young child. Again, you may fall somewhere in between these two extremes and feel that other kinds of punishment are often more effective.

Parents usually punish a child to prevent danger or destruction of something that belongs to him or her or others. Sometimes it's just to release their own tensions.

Good discipline should include more than stopping a youngster from doing what you don't want him or her to do. Severe physical punishment, given in anger, may teach a child something you didn't want them to learn — that is that temper tantrums and hitting are acceptable behavior — as long as an adult hands it out!

The purpose of discipline is to help a child learn to behave in a desirable, safe way, and to respect the property and feelings of others. Say what he or she can do, where to ride a bike, dig holes, and pound pots and pans, rather than where not to.

A young child generally wants to please his or her parents. She or he is seldom bad on purpose. You can help your child do the right thing if you expect him or her to, and if you tell your child how well he or she puts things away, gets ready for bed, and brushes his or her teeth. Your smiles, approval and love are very important to your child.

Let's take a moment to discuss some common sense guidelines to discipline. Perhaps they can help prevent problems and useless punishment with your own pre-school child:

Number 1. Discipline and punishment are not the same thing. A well-disciplined child may seldom have to be punished. Learning right from wrong can frequently come as a result of your patient explanations and your own carefulness. When punishing a child, it is important that such patient explanations be included. Some good examples might be crossing streets properly, using tools correctly, and being careful with matches. Also, temporarily taking away something your child really wants.

Number 2. Limits and controls are needed. Young children can't handle total freedom. But, they should have the chance to create, try different things, and make simple decisions.

Number 3. Spankings and yelling may sometimes be avoided if you try preventing things before they happen. Problems with valuable breakables, medicines, and hot soup on the front burner can all be prevented. Besides, they aren't as much fun as washable crayons with a proper place to use them, blocks that fit together, and a colorful book you read to him or her.

Number 4. Children usually behave better when they are busy, and not so well when they are bored or tired.

Number 5. No single set of rules or punishment fits all children. The shy, quiet child needs encouragement to open up to begin to find and express himself or herself. In this situation, an overly strict parent can drive the child deeper into a shell. On the other hand, the secure, outgoing child may need only a few rules and restrictions, carefully developed and clearly understood, to provide the necessary guidance.

Number 6. You can confuse a young child if you offer choices when you should be making the decision yourself. For example: "Do you want to eat?"

or "Do you want to go to bed?" This gives him or her a chance to say, "No!" Then you may get into the "Yes-you-will, no-I-won't" routine.

Number 7. Harsh punishment may be remembered — but not the reason for it. Endless scoldings, the silent treatment and shame and ridicule are not only not very effective with young children but can introduce undesirable emotional problems. Words, looks and brief restrictions from enjoyable activities are often punishment enough.

Number 8. Occasionally there are good reasons for changing the rules. More important than nap-time may be what he or she is doing right at that moment. Respect for your child's interests can help avoid problems between the two of you.

Number 9. Some of the best discipline comes in your child's relationships with others. Learning that being selfish about toys and hitting friends doesn't pay off; they'll just play with others or go home.

Number 10. You should not expect the impossible from your young child. We sometimes forget that it takes more than two to five years to learn all the rules of safety, respect for others, and self-control.

One additional thing is important. With all the pressures you face everyday, perhaps you can't always be as calm as you might like to be. It is good for you children to learn early to adjust to your moods and needs, just as you try to adjust to theirs. That ability is also part of good discipline.

BICENTENNIAL CHRONICLES

BOONE BLAZES FUTURE THROUGH CUMBERLAND GAP

The most famous frontiersman in American history is Daniel Boone. Chivalrous in real life, Boone became a Robin Hood figure in legend, arriving in the nick of time to save fellow pioneers from Indian captivity or violent death.

In fact, Boone was the son of a poor farmer, and spent most of his time in Kentucky searching for wealth. He laid claim to thousands of acres of land, but lost most of it through his own carelessness, and moved to Missouri in 1799, still in search of elusive wealth. Boone worked as a farmer, tavern keeper, legislator, coroner, judge, surveyor, pathfinder, soldier, and most successfully, as a hunter.

He made the first of his celebrated "long hunts" across the Appalachian Mountains into Kentucky in 1767, when he was 33. In 1775, Boone blazed a trail through Kentucky, called the Wilderness Road, which opened the way west for settlers. More than 100,000 pioneers traveled through Cumberland Gap in Bell County, a key point on the Trail.

The Trail ended on the Kentucky River, where Boone built Boonesborough, one of the state's first fortified settlements. Nothing remains today of the community that was suggested as site for the state capital in 1792, and had its own post office from 1828 to 1866. Here, in the early days, Boone led defense of the fort against British and Indian attackers.

Boone also brought the first horses (pack animals), into the state. He survived capture by Indians in 1769 and 1778, and fought in 1782's Battle of Blue Licks, the last major Indian attack in Kentucky.

Boone lived from 1734 to 1820. The famous frontiersman died in Missouri, but was reinterred in Frankfort Cemetery in 1845, along with his wife, Rebecca.

THE NEED FOR CALCIUM IN OUR DIETS

A well-balanced diet along with plenty of calcium can prevent osteoporosis and other serious problems.

"Since childhood we have been told that we need calcium to build strong teeth and bones," said Joe O'Leary, extension dairy technologist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

According to O'Leary, the reason for this is that osteoporosis and bone loss around teeth can result from a lack of calcium.

"The best source of calcium is a well-balanced diet, rich in dairy products," said O'Leary. "Broccoli, beans and salmon are very good secondary sources of calcium."

The recommended average daily allowance of calcium is different between men and women. The average man needs about 800 milligrams (mg) of calcium a day while a woman needs 1000-15000 mg of calcium daily.

Women during pregnancy and adolescents that are growing rapidly demand more calcium than normal people, O'Leary said.

WASTE REDUCTION AND RECYCLING

New state regulations and public support makes recycling and solid waste management one of the largest public issues this year.

"These new state regulations require that every county outline ways on how they will recycle, collect, and reduce waste," said Craig Infanger, extension specialist in development with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The regulations will have a greater potential impact on rural counties, since they have smaller populations and more constrained tax bases. According to Infanger, solid waste planning will have to be cost effective and innovative to be successful in rural counties.

"Each county must show how households and private businesses will reduce waste by 25 percent by 1997," said Infanger.

One way to reduce waste is to concentrate on yard wastes and paper products. Over one-half of all the material in landfills is grass clippings, cardboard, newspapers, and other paper and yard wastes.

"The only problem with recycling is that it is not cost-effective," Infanger said. "The reason for this is that the revenue from the sale of recycled material does not equal the transportation, collection and handling costs in the current market environment."

Also, the low prices for recycled aluminum, glass and paper make recycling not as attractive to some organizations as it once was. One study shows that as little as one-third of the program costs were recovered from the sale of recycled materials.

Expanding market opportunities and revenues from recycled materials and efficiency in program operation are keys to making recycling program more cost-effective, said Infanger.

Cow's milk can become infant formula

by Bruce Kinzel

Cow's milk can be made more like mother's breast milk in a new process being patented by a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist.

John Woychik, a chemist, said the new form of cow's milk is easy for infants to digest without causing an allergy linked to milk protein.

"Cow's milk and human breast milk differ significantly in protein concentration and composition," said Woychik of USDA's Agricultural Research Service. "It's these differences that make human milk more nutritious and more easily digested than cow's milk."

For example, cow's milk contains about 3.5 percent protein, compared with 1.2 percent protein in human milk, he said. His process easily reduces that higher protein content to the level in human milk.

Using cow's milk as an infant formula is an idea that has been around for years. But procedures for changing the protein composition of cow's milk to simulate mother's milk would be too costly on a large commercial scale.

Now, Woychik said, cow's milk can be cooled and microfiltered to separate proteins in one continuous step at a cheese-and-dairy-product facility. That is in contrast to costly separate batch procedures that would be required to produce the desired infant formula composition.

One of the proteins in cow's milk, known as Beta-lactoglobulin, needs to be minimized because it is chiefly responsible for an infant's milk-protein allergy, Woychik said. This protein is not found in human milk.

Woychik said the B-lactoglobulin content can be reduced to levels of 4 percent or less. That is done by adjusting the pH level and adding salt after filtering the milk proteins.

Also, cow's milk has several types of casein proteins. Only one of them—Beta casein—is found in human milk, he said.

Once the Beta-casein is separated and B-lactoglobulin reduced or eliminated, he said, the product becomes "an excellent protein base to produce infant formulas that best simulate human breast milk."

Any type of cow's milk—regardless of breed—can be used in the new process, said Woychik. He worked out the process at the agency's Eastern Regional Research Center in Philadelphia.

"A.I.D.S. training seminar" offered at OLW

Our Lady of the Way Hospital will be offering an "A.I.D.S. Training Seminar" on Thursday, August 20, at the Seton Complex at Our Lady of the Way.

Four (4) contact hours will be awarded after completion of the workshop.

As of July 1, 1991 certain licensed professionals are required to complete an educational course approved by The Cabinet for Human Resources on the transmission, control, treatment, and prevention of Human Immunodeficiency Virus infection.

Presenters for the workshop will be Judy Hamm, RN, CIC, BS, and Leeda Music, RN. Judy and Leeda are both state approved by The Cabinet for Human Resources and are employees at Our Lady of the Way.

After completion of the workshop, participants will be able to:

and HIV infection.

- Understand the prevalence of AIDS and HIV infection within the U.S.A. and the local community.

- Identify modes of transmission associated with high risk behaviors.

- Describe and identify the concept of universal precautions.

- Recognize the importance of and use of barrier devices and universal precautions.

- Identify methods of environmental kill of HIV Virus.

- Identify the needs of AIDS victims, and assist them in obtaining services through the use of national, state, and local resources.

Pre-registration and pre-payment is required. Registration begins at 11:45 a.m. and the program will begin promptly at 12:00 p.m. and end at 4:00 p.m.

For further information or to register for the workshop, please call Pumping Insulin: a better way for a diabetic?

For many years Herschel Cobb was angry and agitated almost every day. He suffered neck pains, was inconvenienced by frequent urination, had to give himself daily injections, and was often so short of breath he could not make it up the stairs of his Lexington home.

These symptoms came when his blood sugar soared too high or fell too low—a constant risk for diabetics. "Diabetes is a tough disease—you are always uncomfortable," says the 48-year-old Cobb, a pastor who has been diabetic since 1981.

In January at Lexington's VA Medical Center, Cobb became one of about 60 Type II diabetics participating in a nationwide study who are having an experimental insulin-releasing pump implanted in their lower abdomen.

His results so far are good. "My mood is much better," he says. "My blood sugar levels have stabilized, I have more energy, and it's great not having to give the injections."

University of Kentucky endocrinologist James W. Anderson will observe Cobb and eight other pump recipients at the VA Center as part of the two-year pilot study. Cobb is the only Lexington patient to receive a pump so far. Researchers at six other VA hospitals will implant insulin pumps in less than a dozen Type II diabetics and track their progress for one year.

Diabetes is a disease in which the pancreas fails to produce the insulin needed to transport sugar from the blood stream to major organs such as the liver and kidneys, where the sugar assists in rebuilding cells. There are two kinds of diabetes: Type I, which occurs in childhood and results in no insulin production, and Type II, which develops in adulthood and involves inefficient production of the vital insulin.

When a diabetic injects himself, insulin is delivered to the intestinal circulation and works its way to the organs, says Anderson, who has been studying diabetes for 20 years. Because not all of the insulin reaches the target organs, diabetics inject rather large doses—which probably contributes to hardening of the arteries, and in turn may lead to heart attacks and strokes, he says.

In contrast, the pump mimics a healthy pancreas by continuously releasing small amounts of insulin into veins and capillaries that go directly to the organs. In this way, it achieves excellent blood sugar control with less insulin, which means fewer symptoms and less risk of disease, says Anderson. It also eliminates the need for daily injections—a big plus for diabetics like Cobb.

measure their blood sugar daily with finger-prick tests in which a drop of blood is placed on a chemical strip that shows sugar content.)

The pump's insulin is replenished every 8-12 weeks by a needle injected through the abdomen into a hole in the pump, where a tiny was developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Johns Hopkins University and a private engineering company, will come within a year. Johns Hopkins holds the patent.

As often happens in research, this development is rapidly opening the door to another. FDA approval of the pump, says Anderson, would put researchers on the threshold of developing an artificial pancreas that would automatically record blood sugar levels and adjust insulin doses. With an artificial pancreas, diabetics would be free from finger-prick tests as well as daily injections.

We are excited by the performance of the pump so far and what it may lead to," says Anderson. "This is really space-age technology."

The VA Medical Center is seeking candidates for this study. Applicants must be male veterans, aged 40-69, who have had Type II diabetes for 15 years or less. For more information, contact Dr. James W. Anderson, Department of Endocrinology, VA Medical Center, Lexington, KY 40511, Phone (606) 281-4954.

Herschel Cobb

At mealtimes, when his body needs extra insulin, Cobb holds a computerized gadget similar to a TV remote controller over the part of his abdomen in which the pump was implanted. He presses a button to release a precise amount of insulin, with doses based on his blood sugar level and the amount of food to be eaten. A high-pitched beep means the pump has followed instructions. (Even with the pump, diabetics still need to measure their blood sugar daily with finger-prick tests in which a drop of blood is placed on a chemical strip that shows sugar content.)

"The question of this study is this: Will the pump, with its excellent blood glucose control, reduce the risk of eye and kidney disease in Type II patients?" says Anderson. "We will have an answer in the near future."

Meanwhile, he predicts FDA approval of the $10,000 pump, which

Maurice, Terry and Durrell

Keeping brothers and sisters together

Keeping brothers and sisters together is so important that financial assistance is often available to families who adopt three or more siblings like Maurice, Terry and Durrell. These three brothers have waited a year to be adopted. Even though they're together in a loving foster home they long to be adopted. Maurice says, "I pray everything will get better."

Maurice (B/11-3-81) will be a fourth grader next fall. Honor roll student Terry (B/5-10-84) will be a third grader and Durrell (B/12-17-85) is headed for first grade. Little League, T-ball, bicycles and summer camp will fill the time before school starts.

All three are very healthy and attractive. Like most children, they have their ups and downs, but each has settled down since being freed for adoption. With love, encouragement and enough patience to let them build trust—you can have three very fine sons.

Please call the Special Needs Adoption Program at 1-800-432-9346 or contact your local Department for Social Services office to learn how to adopt Maurice, Terry and Durrell, call 606-886-8192.

Use of bike helmets could reduce bike-related fatalities and injuries

Every year in America there are approximately 1200 tragic deaths from bicycle accidents. The vast majority of the deaths result from head injuries. Many more children each year may survive a bicycle accident only to suffer from permanent and crippling brain injury.

The general use of the simple bicycle helmet could substantially reduce the number of fatalities and injuries and spare untold devastation to families around our nation.

A 1989 study in the New England Journal of Medicine indicates that the use of bike helmets can reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent. Yet, we know that bike helmets are not in universal use. This is simply because they have not yet become fashionable for either children or adults. This is similar to the use of seat belts in automobiles. The education process for seat belts is still proceeding, and the evidence is that seat belts have been enormously effective in reducing injuries.

The American Academy of Pediatrics has taken a leading role in encouraging the use of bicycle helmets. The Academy has published numerous fact sheets about the importance of bicycle helmets, as well as a coloring book for children entitled HEAD SMART. Also, governmental entities at the municipal, county and state levels are actively considering legislation mandating the use of bicycle helmets. Even the discussion of such legislation is important to the education process necessary to encourage the use of bike helmets.

What about the bicycle manufacturers? The sales of bicycles have increased enormously over the last 15 years. More and more people are using bikes for recreation and transportation. But bicycle helmets are not new, and well designed helmets have been around for more than a decade. Bicycle sellers should advise customers of the obvious benefits of a helmet.

The American National Standards Institute (ANSI) and the Snell Memorial Foundation have developed voluntary performance standards that emphasize impact protection and strap system strength. While everyone agrees that any Snell or ANSI approved helmet is better than no helmet, the voluntary standards have been criticized for only providing a minimal level of protection. Some health and safety groups believe that a mandatory federal standard for bicycle helmets would place a duty on manufacturers to produce safer helmets and encourage greater helmet use.

However, on July 31, 1991, the Consumer Product Safety Commission voted to deny a petition to establish mandatory bicycle helmet standards.

Trial lawyers see the unfortunate consequences of the failure to advise about proper safety precautions. We want to make our society safer and help in the educational process that will bring this about. Bike helmets are for everyone.

When 'no expirations date' forms expire

Dear June— I am usually very pleased with Nuprin refund and premium offers, but I was surprised to receive a notice from Bristol-Myers that an offer I had sent for had expired, especially since the mail-in form was clearly marked "No Expiration Date."

Is there any protection from "self-destructing" refund offers?—Dorothy Mancusi, Clifton Park, N.Y.

Dear Dorothy—It is said that all good things must come to an end. This also applies to refund offers, even if they say "no expiration date."

It has become accepted practice that manufacturers will close their mail-in post-office boxes when a reasonable period of time has elapsed. What is reasonable?

Most people would agree that a year after the offer was last published or distributed is reasonable. Many manufacturers keep their "no expiration date" post-office boxes open for two and even three years after the offer was last made.

Problems with these offers often occur when refunders trade refund forms. They receive a form from a trading partner, and they do not realize that the "no expiration date" form is several years old.

If you do not want to be disappointed, you have to play detective with these forms, and there are several clues you can look for that will help you judge their age.

First, check to see if there is a copyright date on the refund form. You will recognize it when you see a small "c" in a circle followed by the year.

Now that we are halfway through 1992, I would not send for an offer that had a copyright date earlier than 1991. With a 1991 date you can be fairly confident that the offer is still good.

If there is no date, check the freshness of the paper on which the refund is printed. If the paper is yellowed or crinkled, obviously that's a bad sign.

If a picture of the product appears on the mail-in form, and you notice that it shows an entirely different package design than the package you just used, you have another indication that this "no expiration date" offer is too old.

A phone call to the manufacturer can also get you the answer you need.

If the company prints a toll-free consumer-information number on its product, you have nothing to lose by making the call.

This week's Smart Shopper is Mary Greenfield of Melbourne, Fla.: "On a recent shopping trip, I purchased DiGiorno fresh pasta. The price was $3.39 but I had a 40-cent DiGiorno coupon, which the supermarket doubled. On the outside of the package was an offer to refund the full price shown on the register receipt, which was the $3.39. So I got free pasta and made a profit of 80 cents."

Here's a refund form to write for: a $2 refund and automatic entry into the "Springtime in Europe" Sweepstakes. REVLON "Springtime in Europe" Requests, P.O. Box 2250, New York, NY 10272. This offer expires Aug. 30, 1992, but requests for the form must be received by July 31, 1992. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope. While waiting for the form, save the Universal Product Code number and the first three in-redients listed (on back of the bottle or the box) from one of the following Revlon products: Charlie, Jontue, XI' A XI' ANG, Tatiana, Forever Krystle, Unforgettable. Also, save the cash register receipt with the purchase price circled.

Here is this week's list of refund offers. Start looking for the required refund forms, which you can obtain at the supermarket, in newspaper and magazine advertisements and from trading with friends. Meanwhile start collecting the needed proofs of purchase as detailed below. Remember, some offers are not available in all areas of the country.

Today's refund offers have a value of $10.79.

(Cleaning Products, Soaps, Paper Products, Bags, Wraps (File No. 10)) These offers require refund forms: CALGON Rebate Offer. Receive a purchase price rebate (up to $1.69) or two $1 Calgon Bath product coupons. Send the required refund form and one Universal Product Code from the package of any Calgon Adult Bath product, along with the cash-register receipt with the purchase price circled. For liquid products, simply write the Universal Product Code on the register tape. Expires Sept. 30, 1992.

CORONET 1992 U.S. Olympic Team Pin Offer. Receive a free 1992 U.S. Olympic Team Pin. Send the required refund form and five Georgia Pacific Olympic Pin proofs of purchase from Coronet packages. This offer is good until Aug. 31, 1992, or while supplies last.

GLAD-LOCK Sandwich Bag Offer. Receive a coupon good for a free package of 50-count Glad-Lock Sandwich Bags. Send the required refund form and the Universal Product Codes (bar codes) from two 50-count boxes of Glad-Lock Sandwich Bags. Expires Sept. 30, 1992.

GLAD $2.50 Refund Offer. Send the required refund form and the complete Universal Product Codes from two of the following Glad products: 13-gallon Glad Kitchen Garbage Bags (90-count) or Drawstring (56-count); 30-gallon Glad Trash Bags (50-count) or Drawstring (36-count); 33-gallon Glad Large Trash Bags (36-count); 39-gallon Glad Lawn Bags (30-count). Expires Sept. 30, 1992.

1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

1-1/4 cups cherry tomato halves

Cook noodles according to package directions without salt; drain. Toss with remaining ingredients except tomatoes in large bowl. Add tomatoes; toss gently. Cover and refrigerate. Before serving, let stand at room temperature 10 minutes. Makes 6 (1 cup) servings.

Variation: Add 1-1/2 cups cubed lean, low-salt ham.

Nutritive values per serving (without ham): 153 calories; 4 g protein; 27 g carbohydrate; 4 g fat; 2 mg cholesterol; 251 mg sodium; 3.4 g dietary fiber.

PENINSULA CELERY SALAD

1 cup sliced Florida celery

1/3 cup coarsely shredded carrot (1 small)

1/4 cup seedless raisins

2 tablespoons coarsely chopped peanuts

1 teaspoon vegetable oil

1 1/2 teaspoons red wine vinegar

1 1/2 teaspoon salt

Pinch ground black pepper

1/4 cup low-fat plain yogurt

In a medium bowl, combine celery, carrot, raisins and peanuts. Combine oil, vinegar, salt and black pepper; stir in yogurt. Pour over celery mixture; toss lightly. Makes one serving.

MINTY RAISIN CUCUMBER SALAD

1 cup unflavored low-fat yogurt

1 cup golden raisins

1/4 cup chopped walnuts

1/4 cup thinly sliced green onions

1 1/2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint OR 1 teaspoon dried mint

1/2 teaspoon black pepper

3 cups thinly sliced, seedless cucumber

1 cup sliced celery

Salt to taste

In large bowl, combine yogurt, raisins, walnuts, green onion, mint and pepper. Mix to blend. Add cucumber and celery; toss thoroughly. Mix in salt. Cover and chill. Toss again before serving. Makes six servings.

Hot German Potato Salad

11/2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

2 tablespoons sugar

2 tablespoons bacon drippings

1 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

1/2 cup water

1/3 cup cider vinegar

4 teaspoons prepared mustard

3 tablespoons minced green onion

4 cups sliced, cooked potatoes

1/2 teaspoon celery seed

1/4 cup chopped celery

2 tablespoons diced green pepper

2 tablespoons diced pimiento

4 slices crisp bacon, crumbled

Mix flour and sugar together in a skillet. Add bacon drippings, salt, pepper, water, and vinegar. Stir and cook until thickened. Add mustard and onion.

Then add potatoes, celery seed, celery, green pepper, and pimiento; mix well, but lightly. Sprinkle with bacon. Serve hot. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

Three-Bean Salad

2/3 cup vinegar

1 cup sugar

1/3 cup salad oil

1 fresh onion, chopped

1 (16-ounce) can green beans

1 (16-ounce) can yellow wax beans or bean sprouts

1 (16-ounce) can kidney beans

Combine all ingredients. Let sit overnight in refrigerator. Drain well before serving. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Buttermilk Dressing

1/4 cup buttermilk

1/4 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing

1 teaspoon salt

1/8 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Dash paprika

Combine all ingredients and mix well.

Dressing for Fruit Salad

2 (3-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened

1 cup mayonnaise

1 cup cream, whipped

1 1/2 cups chopped nuts

Cream together cream cheese and mayonnaise. Fold in whipped cream and chopped nuts. Use over fruit salad. Yield: 3 cups.

Low-Calorie French Dressing

3 tablespoons salad oil

3/4 teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon sugar

1/8 teaspoon paprika

1/2 teaspoon dry mustard

1/4 teaspoon Tabasco sauce

1 cup grapefruit juice, divided

2 teaspoons cornstarch

Combine salad oil, salt, sugar, paprika, mustard, and Tabasco sauce in mixing bowl. Blend 1/2 cup grapefruit juice and cornstarch in small saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add to salad oil mixture; beat with rotary beater until smooth. Beat in remaining 1/2 cup grapefruit juice. Yield: 1/2 cups

RECYCLING TIP— My elderly father lives alone and gets "Meals on Wheels" which are delivered in foam cartons.

I rinse these cartons, dry them, and cut them into small pieces which I store in a grocery sack and use for packing when I mail a parcel. It works great and can be used again and again. Tina H., Syracuse, N.Y.

SPREAD SOME JOY— I have several suggestions for toys that are no longer used or wanted:

Give them to a thrift shop. Give them to a battered women's or homeless shelter.

Trade with neighborhood children. Sell at a garage sale and use the money to buy new ones.

Toys are so expensive, I hope this will help people with children. Janet G., Dallas, N.C.

Area residents put on the greasepaint to perform at JWT

This year your neighbors and colleagues at work will be doing something a little different during their summer vacations.

In fact, chances are actually quite good that someone you know (no matter where you live in Kentucky) will be performing at Jenny Wiley Theatre this summer.

Kentuckians from across the state will be featured in Jenny Wiley Theatre's 28th season in productions of The Wizard of Oz, Big River, Anything Goes and The Jenny Wiley Story.

Some of the finest local talent available anywhere will be playing roles both onstage and off in these productions.

Members of the acting company include Jenny Wiley Theatre veteran Misty Daniels. Daniels plays Dorothy in The Wizard of Oz, her first lead role in 10 seasons (she made her stage debut at the age of 8). Joining Daniels in The Wizard of Oz is local animal star Jodie Lynn May, an Australian ferrier from Allen who plays Toto (Jodie is an audience favorite).

Also in the cast this summer is Prestonsburg native Joe Bolton who plays the sheriff in Big River (his second season in the role). Also in Big River as The Duke is Hazard native Robert Smith. Smith returns to Jenny Wiley Theatre for this third season. He also plays The Wizard and Professor Marvel in The Wizard of Oz as well as Elisha J. Whitney in Anything Goes.

Returning for another season is Prestonsburg native Jonathan Goble who is a member of the chorus and a dancer in Anything Goes.

Part of the newly-formed apprentice acting company are two area teenagers, Joni Rice from Oil Springs and Tammi Sparks of Prestonsburg. Both are members of the chorus and dancers in all of this season's shows.

On the other side of the stage are members of the technical and office staffs.

On spotlights are Richie Hall from Prestonsburg and Mike Goble from Auxier. Eric Ratcliff is once again a general technician and assistant sound engineer. Scott Bentley is a general technician and scenic painter. Kristen Ormerod from Prestonsburg is a props assistant. Also from Prestonsburg is Johnny Hunt who is a general technician and Chris Griffith who is an assistant stage manager. Dressers include Rose Lange-field from Martin and Tammy Moore from Prestonsburg.

Box office staff includes Christy Preston from Paintsville and Tracy Wells of Van Lear. This year's house manager is Jason Falls from Pikeville.

With locals with so much talent and ability, it's no wonder your neighbors and co-workers continue to be a part of Jenny Wiley Theatre—every summer!

Scholarship recipients

Three PCC students receive John T. Smith scholarships

Three students at Prestonsburg Community College just received notification that they have been awarded John T. Smith scholarships. Susie Redish of Ocala, Florida; Sara Turner of Atlanta, Georgia; and Anthony Siler of Shallotte, North Carolina, will receive $900 each for one academic year. They will receive half of the scholarship at the beginning of the fall semester and half at the beginning of the spring semester.

The John T. Smith Scholarship Program was named for Dr. John T. Smith, former director of Jefferson Community College in Louisville, and retired Vice Chancellor for Minority Affairs at the University of Kentucky.

The purpose of the scholarships is to recognize a select number of African-American Kentucky students who have demonstrated outstanding academic achievement and possess personal qualities which indicate promise for continuing success.

Applicants were judged on high school grade point average or GED score, difficulty of high school subjects, ACT composite score, honors and awards, extracurricular activities and/or work experience and special talents. The difficulty of college classes and grade point average attained were also considered. Recipients must maintain a 2.5 or better grade point average to retain the scholarship.

These student recipients (Susie Redish, Sara Turner, and Anthony Siler) are also members of the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps.

Between 1990 and 2005, the growth of new entrants to the labor force will slow, reflecting lower birth rates in the 1970's and 1980's compared to the 1950's and 1960's, according to the U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. The proportion of the population participating in the labor force will increase at a slower rate than over the 1975-90 period.

New regents sworn in at Morehead

Eight Morehead State University Board of Regents members were sworn in at a special board meeting on Friday, August 7. Rowan County District Judge John Cox issued the oath of office to Chando Mapoma of Zambia, Africa, student representative; William Seaton of Ashland; Helen Pennington of West Liberty; Dr. Charles M. Rhodes of Ashland; Lois Baker of Whitesburg; John M. Rosenberg of Prestonsburg; L.M. "Sonny" Jones of Frankfort and James A. Finch of Maysville. Following the swearing in ceremonies, Seaton was elected as board chairman and Baker as vice chair. Remaining as board secretary and treasurer are Carol Johnson and Porter Dailey, respectively.

AAA offers advice to remedy summer car ailments

With the combination of hot summer temperatures and car-stopping traffic, you may find yourself with an overheated engine. If your car's temperature gauge indicates a potential problem, here are some steps to take:

* Turn off the air conditioner to avoid further strain on the cooling system.

* Turn on the heater to increase coolant flow and dispel engine heat.

* Shift to neutral and race the engine for 30 seconds every two minutes.

* Keep a good distance from the car in front of yours, allowing cooler air to circulate.

Should the engine continue to overheat, pull to the side of the road, turn off the engine and raise the hood. If there is fluid in the coolant recovery tank, wait 20-30 minutes and drive to the nearest garage. If the tank is empty, the car probably overheated due to lack of coolant and will need to be towed.

One other summertime malady is vaporlock. Vaporlock occurs when hot outdoor temperatures combine with high engine temperatures and the fuel boils and vaporizes. This reaction causes a block in the fuel line and the car stalls.

MAKE HAY EVEN WHEN THE SUN DOESN'T SHINE

Farmers know well the old adage "Make hay when the sun shines." But sometimes clear days are few and far between.

What can farmers do? "Make hay when the sun isn't shining," according to David Ditsch, extension agronomist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Our research shows that the stage of growth of the forage is more important than weather in determining the feeding value of the hay," he said.

Hay cut in the late boot to early heading stage, even if it is rained on when it is curing in the field, will provide 10 to 20 percent more digestible nutrients than if it were cut in a later stage and not rained on, Ditsch said.

Research indicates that even when hay cut in the early bud stage is rained on, its digestibility is 68 percent, compared with late-bloom cut hay without rain at 58 percent, Ditsch said.

"The best hay, of course, is made when it is cut in the early boot stage and cured in the field under sunny weather. But if that's not possible, a little rain on it in curing won't cause quality losses as great as waiting too long to cut," Ditsch said.

Farmers also can help assure a better feeding hay by storing it properly.

Farmers who use the big, round bales that have become popular in the last few years need to make sure they store the bales so that quality is preserved as best as possible. Placing those bales on crushed rock or old tires to keep them off the ground can help minimize quality loss, Ditsch said.

Research shows that placing the bales off the ground reduces losses of dry matter and weathering losses by 38 percent, he said.

"When stacking bales in the field, farmers should allow at least three feet of space between bales so that they can dry out quickly when rain falls," the agronomist said.

Plastic wraps are somewhat expensive to use, but do provide additional protection from weathering. Forage producers storing high value hay outside should consider plastic wraps, Ditsch said.

"Research has shown that unwrapped bales will lose some quality due to weather, but most of the losses will be in the bottom of the bales, where they sit on the ground and hold moisture. Placing the bales on crushed rock or old tires can help reduce weathering losses in the bale," he said.

Ditsch also said that farmers should avoid placing the bales close to the eaves of barns or in the shade of trees. Rain travels down the roof and pours into the bales, making them lose quality quickly. Shade increases the time bales are wet following a rain, which also makes them lose

Ribbon cutting ceremonies

Prestonsburg Community College will celebrate two monumental successes on Monday, August 17th at 2 p.m. in Prestonsburg and 4 p.m. in Pikeville. The college will hold ribbon cutting ceremonies for the new IBM Networked Computer Lab and the newly leased addition to the Pike County Campus.

The IBM Networked Computer Lab with 24 student stations will officially open that day with a ribbon cutting ceremony at 2 p.m. in Room 202 of the Pike Technology Building. The $84,000 computer lab consists of 24 NEC 386sx/204mg hd and 24 VGA color monitors as well as an HP Laserjet III printer. This state-of-the-art computer lab will allow students access to quality instruction.

The Physical Sciences and Related Technologies Division offers about 35 credit and 8 non-credit computer science classes each semester with 7 full-time computer science faculty. The college is most appreciative of President Floyd for securing the funds in order for this much needed computer lab to become reality. However, in order to complete the lab, additional funds or donations are needed to purchase furniture for the new computer center.

Computer lab furniture which consists of 24 stations and 24 chairs will cost $25,100.

The second ribbon cutting will be held in Pikeville at 4 p.m. The Pike County Campus of Prestonsburg Community College is about to expand its Main Street facilities to accommodate the great increase in enrollment over the past two years. The expansion will be completed in time for the fall semester and will add desperately needed office and classroom space.

In March, a student committee headed by Mrs. Jorita Addington and Thurman Bumgardner II called on the General Assembly to increase funding for the Pike County Campus and restore budget cuts in the UK system. Students gathered more than 3000 petition signatures and held a rally attended by hundreds of students, community leaders, and concerned citizens. Partly as a result of their efforts, a new building is being leased with funding from the University of Kentucky Community College System.

The college is renting the Bilter Building at 405 Main Street, directly across the street from the current campus. This historic brick building was constructed by J.T. Bilter and is currently owned by the Bilter sisters. According to PCC history professor George Torok, who has been researching Pikeville in the 1930's, the structure was built in 1938 when the city was being modernized with a new telephone system and electric street lighting.

The Bilter Building will house the administrative and clerical offices, two new classrooms, and a library room. The current campus at 408 Main Street will contain new faculty offices, expanded GED facilities, and a first floor computer lab.

The ribbon cutting ceremony for the new facility in Pikeville and the computer lab are open to the public. PCC President Deborah L. Floyd, student and community leaders will be present.

Review dam

The Soil Conservation and Water District recently held their board meeting at the new David School property. The purpose of visiting David was to review an earthen dam project which the district sponsored and had built. The pond provides an area for students of the David School to study nature and the environment first hand. Pictured with Chuck Monnig, resident engineer on the pond project are (L to R) board members Ruby Akers, Jim Carter II, Billy Merritt, and Thelma Merritt. Not pictured, Gary Ratliff, Floyd Allen, Lloyd Wells and Anna Sue Stumbo.

Consumer Clips

Air bags ballooning

As 1992 auto models hit showrooms across the U.S.A., a wide selection will boast driver air bags. In response to consumer demand, auto manufacturers are switching from "automatic" seat belts to manual belts and air bags. According to a spokesman from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, "An air bag used with a safety belt provides the best protection available in all kinds of crashes. It's a 'winning combination' that greatly increases your chance of surviving a crash."

Air bags are proving to be safer and more reliable than automatic seat belts, which are often cumbersome or even dangerous. In a recent crash, a woman passenger was decapitated by her motorized shoulder harness. Like 70% of motorists with that belt design, she had not fastened the lap belt.

However, few models of pickups, minivans, or sport-utility vehicles will include air bags, since those vehicles are exempt from several vital passenger car safety standards. Notable exceptions are the Dodge Caravan and Plymouth Voyager, the 1992 Toyota Previa, and the updated Jeep Cherokee.

Despite the growing popularity of air bags, some myths persist. Even dealers sometimes misinform purchasers. Here are the facts:

Q: Can an air bag trap or suffocate you?

A: No. TV renditions are in slow motion. The actual time elapsed is only thousandths of a second. People saved by air bags say they deflated immediately after the crash.

Q: Is a seat belt alone enough to protect you?

A: No. Air bags are necessary to prevent head and facial injuries in moderate and high speed frontal crashes. Seat belts are also necessary for other crash configurations.

Q: Isn't it more important to have an air bag on the passenger side?

A: We need air bags on both sides, but drivers are actually at the highest risk—70% of fatalities occur among drivers. This is partly because of risk exposure, and also proximity to the steering wheel.

If you want to help make air bags standard equipment both for drivers and for passengers, urge your Congressional Representative to co-sponsor H.B. 3123, the NHTSA Reauthorization Bill.

Veterans Post

by Freddy Groves

TOO MUCH SUDS? A woman who signed herself "Veteran's Wife," sent me a letter in which she complained about the easy availability of alcoholic beverages at the service organization chapter to which her husband belongs. She said her husband had a drinking problem, as did many of the other members, most of whom she said were in their 50s and 60s and not in the best of health. She made the point: "I don't want to deprive them of something they enjoy, (but) for a lot of them, this is poison." She says many of her friends feel the same way she does.

She would like to hear from this column's readers on their reactions to this situation. Write Veterans Post, c/o King Features Weekly Service, 235 East 45th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017.

For Your Eyes Only

by Marcus S. Minix, FNAO

WHEN SHOULD MY CHILD'S EYES BE EXAMINED?

A child's eyes should be examined shortly after birth, again before one year of age, and then before the age of 4 or 5 before starting school. Regular eye exams ensure that both eyes remain healthy and insure proper development of visual skills.

Remember that children may not complain about their eyes. Don't overlook routine examinations.

It is a myth that children have to be able to read to have their eyes examined. The eye doctor is trained to observe the reflection of light he flashes in the child's eye to determine the need for eyeglasses. This test is called retinoscopy. It also may be performed by computer.

There are various ways a child with eye health problems enters the doctor's office from the health care system. At birth, the attending doctor may observe physical defects such as cataracts or irregularities of the eyelids, cornea, or retina. Later the pediatrician or county health department may detect crossed-eyes. Schools may perform screening tests to determine a child's vision.

Proper overall development of your child may vary directly with good vision. Adequate vision at play develops proper eye-hand coordination. Poor vision may produce eye fatigue and interfere with long periods of study. Thereby poor study habits may develop.

Don't take your child's eye health for granted. Although some parents feel inadequate upon learning that their child needs to wear eyeglasses, a second opinion may dispel those parents' fears. If a lazy eye is not detected and vision is not stimulated by eyeglasses early in the child's life, the eye may not properly develop. In such cases vision may not be recovered at maturity and the eye becomes what is known as a 'lazy eye'.

A red eye, pain in the eye, or abnormal pupil size are symptoms which require immediate attention. Those families with a history of vision problems or eye diseases must pay more attention to their children's eye health.

Although home tests are not a substitute for a professional eye examination, squinting is a sign of nearsightedness, holding reading material close may be a sign of farsightedness, and headaches may indicate astigmatism. Routine examinations are necessary where growing children's vision may change rapidly from year to year.

Only an eye examination by an eye doctor can insure proper development of your child and prevent loss of vision upon maturity. Have your child's eyes examined shortly after birth, again before one year old, and at age 4 or 5. Whenever redness appears or unusual habits appear, see your eye doctor immediately.

Coast guard proposes new tanker escort rules

In a move designed to help prevent oil spills, the U.S. Coast Guard is proposing that all single hulled oil tankers over 5,000 gross tons that transport bulk oil in specific U.S. waters be escorted by two towing vessels.

The Coast Guard said that having the towing vessels available would reduce the probability of a grounding or collision if a tanker lost its propulsion or steering system.

A Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, that will be published in the July 7 Federal Register, was mandated by the Oil Pollution Act of 1990, and would require that designated oil tankers be escorted by two towing vessels when operating in all of Prince William Sound, Alaska, and in the northwestern waters of Washington state. The Washington state waters affected are: Puget Sound; Rosario Strait; Haro Strait; and other areas east of Port Angeles.

The Coast Guard is also requesting comments on other geographic areas where it may be feasible to have similar vessel escort rules and related matters such as written escort plans and tanker speed limits.

Rear Adm. William J. Ecker, chief of the Coast Guard's Office of Navigation Safety and Waterway Services, has emphasized the importance of prevention as a measure for reducing maritime pollution. He noted that the marine industry and an environmentally conscious public recognize the significant contribution tug escorts can make in reducing the possibility of a catastrophic oil spill.

Comments should be received on or before Sept. 8, 1992 and addressed to the Executive Secretary, Marine Safety Council, G-LRA-2/3406, U.S. Coast Guard headquarters, 2100 Second St., S.W. Washington, D.C. 20593-0001 or by telephone at 202/267-1477.

For additional information, contact the project counsel, Charles T. Vekert at 202/267-6220. Copies of the Federal Register may be obtained by calling 202/267-6740 or by faxing requests to 202/267-4624. Please include the title of the document when requesting copies.

ON VACATION...

As you read this you will find me on vacation in the Cincinnati area for most of this week. I plan on taking in about three Reds games while there and just enjoying myself.

Saturday, yes Saturday, I took in the American Cancer Society Golf Tournament at Jenny Wiley and saw some good golf. Dick Clark just missed an eagle on the number nine hole as his chip shot rimmed the cup and came off.

Old pros Johnny Ray Turner, Steve Newsome, Wesley Case, Kevin Webb and Jeff Riley were on hand to participate as well as some not so old pros. Steve Ousley and Barry Hall (hole-in-one fame) were mixing with the pros. Rodney Ousley was playing on the wrong course, I told him. Rodney's a good golfer. Dr. Eddie Clark and William O. Goble did a great job of chairing the tournament.

Some very fine prizes were being offered courtesy of Pro-Sport of Lexington. A complete set of golf clubs for a hole-in-one on the number three hole; A $100 driver to the winner of the longest ball contest. A fine putter for the one closest to the hole on the number eight green.

A golfers telephone as well as a gold putter was being raffled off. A great cookout was provided for all the golfers including hot dogs, hamburgers and soft drinks. Everyone seemed to be enjoying themselves.

I enjoy watching and covering such events as golf although I never was much of a golfer. My golfing experience has been limited to the driving ranges or the mini-golf courses. Now there I can play a pretty mean game. One day I will try the big course.

Winners of the local regional tournament will advance on to Hopkinsville for the state meet and the winners there will venture on to Doral, Fla. for the national competition.

WHEELWRIGHT PANORAMA...

Coach Donnie Daniels and the Wheelwright Trojans will be hosting their annual Grid-O-Rama this coming Saturday evening as the Betsy Layne Bobcats will face the Magoffin County Hornets in the 6:30 start. Approximately 30 minutes later Wheelwright will square off against Allen Central.

Each game will consist of two 15 minute halves with no kicking off and starting play on the 30 yard line.

ON THE NATIONAL SCENE...

Why does anyone put up with the antics of Charles Barkley? While the Olympic games are to be used to promote goodwill among nations, people like Barkley and Michael Jordan proceed to give our country some poor representation.

Both are great basketball players, and they certainly have the ego to go with it. Barkley is a head case and I personally don't think too much of the rascal. Jordan has read all the press releases about himself and believed them.

I'm sure the folks in Barcelona, Spain will be glad to see the Dream Team head home. I for one would like to see the Olympic basketball team turned back over to the college players who would love to represent their country in the games. Professional players are a joke and the Dream Team has proven it.

Remarks such as "I'm a black millionaire" by Barkley "and I can stay wherever I want to" don't impress anyone. In fact, they turn heads the other way and even Americans are rooting against him. Furthermore, Barkley has stated that the Dream Team was not there to represent the United States.

I think every NBA team in the country should refuse any relationship with Barkley. He is a poor influence on the youth of today. Ship him and Jordan to Iraq to play

Golf scramble raises funds for cancer society

Eighteen teams competing for prizes, trophies and a trip to the state playoffs helped raise nearly $4,000 for the American Cancer Society Saturday in a benefit golf scramble at Jenny Wiley State Park.

Separated into two divisions, the tournament served as a qualifier for state and national championships. The top two teams from each division in Saturday's tourney will advance to Hopkinsville, where the state title will be decided September 14. State champs will compete later in the nationals at Doral Country Club in Miami, Florida.

First place honors in the local qualifier went, in Division 1, to the four-man team of Rob Tackett, Mark LaLonde, Jeff Wells and Tony Branham, who finished at 14 under par. That was good enough for a one shot win over the Division 1 runners-up, which included Steve Clark, Johnny Ray Turner, Mike Conley and Steve Newsome.

The tourney's Division 2 required a playoff between two teams finishing at 11 under par to decide the champ, with the honors going to a team including Troy Branham, Phillip Green, Leonard Sturgill and John Woods. Second place went to Earl Mulkey, Danny Slone and Jim Goble.

All four local teams advance to Hopkinsville for state competition.

"It was a good tournament, I mean really good," Dr. Eddy Clark, who co-chaired the event with William O. Goebel, said Saturday. "We had a great response and the community really stepped forward to help. When you go out into the community and mention the American Cancer Society, the community is ready to help, even in hard economic times."

Other prize winners Saturday included Rob Tackett, who took home a new driver for winning the long drive contest; and Mike Gibson, who collected a new putter for coming closest to the pin on the 8th hole. Raffle winners were Danny Hamilton (cordless telephone) and Harold Burgess (gold-plated putter).

Clark and Goebel attributed the tourney's success to a host of area businesses and individuals who joined to sponsor the event, including park superintendent Leon Russell, golf course manager Christy Frye, and Pamela Compton, regional representative for the American Cancer Society. Also recognized for volunteering their services to help direct the tourney were Mike Meade, John "Wimpy" Clark, Johnene Newsome, "Little Shag" Branham and Doug Turner.

Tournament sponsors were also singled out for their contributions. They included: Doug Turner, John Chafin, The Floyd County Times, Ky. Crystal water, Dr. Ira Potter, Dr. Rob Herrick, Collins Gulf, Ralph Stevens, Cooley Medical Equipment, Robert Rowe, Ronnie Slone, Tom Smith, and Inacom.

Also sponsoring teams were Jones, Pack and Associates, Floyd Greene, Calhoun's Garage, Pepsi Cola East, First Commonwealth Bank, First Guaranty Bank, Mickey McGuire, Dr. Eddy Clark, Flower's Bakery, Food City and Jerry's Restaurant.

Also, Carter Funeral Home, Prestonsburg Fire Department, Jenny Wiley Golf Course, Greene's Feed and Supply, Pro Golf of Lexington, and Ken's Sport Shop.

Winners of Division A of the American Cancer Society's Golf Scramble were Rob Tackett, Mark LaLonde, Jeff Wells, and Tony Branham. The team finished 14 under par with a 54. The golf scramble raised approximately $4,000 for the American Cancer Society.

Firearm accidents decline to 87-year low

The current focus on firearm accidents and misuse among young people has overshadowed recent statistics from the National Safety Council which show that in 1990 the number of fatal firearms accidents declined 13 percent. Firearm safety experts hope that heightened awareness will lead to a further decline in accidents currently at an 87-year low.

This most recent decline is consistent with a general downward trend. The National Safety Council reports that between 1970 and 1990, accidental firearm deaths declined more than 41 percent, from 2,406 fatalities in 1970 to 1,400 in 1990. The 1990 total is the lowest reported since record keeping on such data began in 1903.

Of the nine categories measured by the National Safety Council, firearm accidents accounted for the fewest fatalities of any category except for specific forms of poisoning.

Firearm accidents accounted for less than two percent of 1990's total accident fatalities. Firearms industry officials say the decline is due, in part, to long-standing firearm safety programs administered by state agencies and private sportsmen's groups.

According to Robert Delfay, vice-chairman of the National Safety Council's Shooting Safety Committee and executive director of the National Shooting Sports Foundation, "the dramatic decline in firearm-related accidents over the last two decades is in large part attributable to nationwide firearms safety training, the increased use of 'hunter orange' safety clothing by hunters and comprehensive industry-sponsored educational programs aimed at veteran firearms users as well as beginners." The shooting sports industry, individually and through the National Shooting Sports Foundation, has distributed well over 100 million firearms safety booklets, filmstrips, videos and posters since 1970. The National Rifle Association also sponsors many safety programs for youngsters and adults.

Since 1978, hunter safety courses have been available in all 50 states.

As of 1990, successful completion of such courses is mandatory to obtain a hunting license in all but six states. "Although the courses emphasize hunting safety, the rules and skills learned, obviously, also carry over and are applicable to firearms safety in the home and elsewhere," Delfay said. Through 1991, nearly 20 million hunters and shooters have received safety instruction through accredited state hunter education programs.

According to Delfay, the National Shooting Sports Foundation also offers firearms safety public service announcements to newspapers, magazines, radio and television stations across the country. They also offer a free firearms safety package to the public comprised of two booklets entitled "Firearms Safety Depends On You," and "Firearms Safety In The Home." These may be obtained by writing to Firearms Safety 1992, NSSF, 555 Danbury Road, Wilton, CT 06897-2217.

Winner of the gold

Squirrel season opens August 15

Opening day of squirrel season is Saturday, August 15 in the western two-thirds of Kentucky. In the Eastern Zone, including 29 counties in the southeast, squirrel season opens Saturday, September 5.

Hunters should remember that hunter education is now a mandatory requirement for persons born after January 1, 1975 and are required to purchase a hunting license. Hunters are required to take the free hunter education course, sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR), and must carry a course completion card while hunting.

Information on hunter education class schedules is available by contacting the KDFWR Information and Education Division at (502) 564-4762. Courses last 10 hours spread over three days, with the last day consisting of live-firing range work and written test.

All hunters should obtain a copy of the 1992-93 Kentucky Hunting & Trapping Guide for complete information on all small game season laws. Contact the number above, or pick up a copy of the guide where licenses are sold.

The statewide dove season also opens on Tuesday, September 1. Shooting hours for doves open at 11 a.m. local time. The daily bag limit of six squirrels and 15 doves remains unchanged for this season. Hunters are reminded to act responsibly and safely while in the field and that alcohol and gunpowder don't mix.

FAY WALKS QUIETLY, SWINGS BIG BAT

Whether you like him or not, Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent is certainly making himself some headlines these days. First, Vincent is the heavy in the George Steinbrenner fiasco, but then again, anything involving Steinbrenner is a true fiasco. Secondly, Vincent made headlines by suspending Yankee pitcher Steve Howe for life from baseball due to his constant drug bouts. And if this isn't all enough, Vincent makes headlines again by realigning the National League in 1993 by moving the Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds east, with the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals going west.

Vincent is a likeable fellow—quiet, cordial, intelligent, but turning out to be very tough. Give Fay Vincent credit though, he is not afraid of baseball's stuffy "powers-that-be"—the owners. I think Vincent is good for baseball, but I can see his days numbered on the horizon. Vincent has made too many enemies along the way, namely Steinbrenner, outgoing National League President Bill White—who for his part has been a bust in that position, and various other owners who are still loyal to Steinbrenner, and there are many, and other owners who are outraged over the National League realignment—namely the Tribune Company who own the Chicago Cubs. And finally, Vincent really messed up the Howe case by calling in Yankee manager Buck Showalter and Yankee boss Gene Michael and tongue-lashed the two for not going along with his decision to ban Howe for life from the game of baseball.

While one can't fault Vincent for his job performance, whether you agree or disagree with his decisions, he has really stepped on the toes of the greedy National League owners, and I admire him for that. It is about time that somebody bossed around the owners. While most owners agree with a new divisional alignment, they did not appreciate the commissioner using his "best interests in baseball" powers to overrule the Cubs' one dissenting vote. The Cubs, obviously, worry about losing money from their WGN-TV flagship super station due to the late west coast games and loss of advertising revenues from lower audience viewing late at night. In fact, the Cubs are considering legal litigation and so are a few other owners over the commissioner's use of his powers in his realignment decision.

Next on the burner is how to schedule the new National League alignment. Of course, I expect everyone involved to make this a big production number. Some favor playing each opponent inside their own division 16 times and playing opponents outside their division nine times. On the other hand, others bark about playing opponents inside their own division 20 times and playing opponents outside their division only six times. Look for much controversy over this dilemma.

Whatever the outcome of all of Vincent's decisions, the fact remains, he has made enemies with some real heavyweights. With George Steinbrenner's return virtually imminent at some point, and a crew of disgruntled owners with greedy pockets and inflated egos, I look for a lynch mob to eventually go after this commish and remove him from office. Obviously, baseball is no longer a game, but more of a courtroom drama!

Bring back those that deserve to be Olympians. WHAT ABOUT THIS DEBT.....

Shaquille O'Neal inks a contract worth $40 million for seven years and he hasn't even donned an NBA uniform yet. Whatever happened to the days when you played and if you had a good season you were rewarded with an increase in pay.

The NBA like all other sports (excluding football), are pricing themselves out of the arenas. Who has to pay those salaries — the fans that frequent the gate. What happens when the fans fail to show up because some owner raised the price of tickets? Out of business. It doesn't make sense because now, a Michael Jordan, Charles Barkley and some of the other stage struck players will demand even more and there is no stopping it. AND AGAIN...

San Francisco Giants owner Bob Lurie finally did what he threatened to do — sold the Giants — and now they are moving to Florida. I think it is a good move from a financial standpoint. The Tampa Bay Giants will draw good in Florida, something they haven't done in the Bay area.

Until I return next week, good sports everyone and be good sports.

Golf tournament to provide dollars for area scholars

Pikeville College and Professional Golf Association players Woody and Mike Blackburn will co-host the 5th Annual Blackburn Memorial Golf Tournament, "Dollars for Scholars," at the Green Meadows Country Club on August 17th.

The Blackburn brothers, both born in Pikeville, organized the tournament with Pikeville College as a form of tribute to their deceased parents. Their father, Clyde Blackburn, was an alumnus of Pikeville College and both he and his wife Kathryn taught at Betsy Layne. Clyde was an excellent golfer in his time and won many Kentucky tournaments including one at Green Meadows.

The entry deadline for this year's tournament is August 7th. The tournament will be played in two sessions, morning and afternoon. Check-in for the first session is at 7:30 a.m. and check-in for the second session is at 1 p.m. A luncheon will be served from 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m., hospitality hour and clinic will be held from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and dinner and awards presentations will begin at 7:30 p.m. A modified Calaway System will be used to determine handicaps. "This system of scoring is beneficial," says Ron Damron, "because it allows the field to be more competitive."

The cost for this year's tournament is a $100 donation to Pikeville College. All gifts are tax deductible and the field is limited to the first 120 golfers. For more information, contact Ron Damron at 432-9319.

FREDDIE JAMES FINALLY REALIZED that he could legally use only one putter in this putt attempt on the number nine hole. James teamed with three other golfers to represent the Floyd County Times in the American Cancer Society tournament Saturday. (photo by Ed Taylor)

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MINE

Pursuant To Application No. 836-0235

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that Coal-Mac, Inc., P.O. Box 3428, Pikeville, KY 41502, has filed an application for a surface coal mining and reclamation operation. The proposed operation will disturb approximately 182.0 surface acres and will underlie an additional 25.4 acres, for a total permit area of 207.4 acres. The operation is located 1.0 miles east of Printer in Floyd County.

The proposed operation is approximately 0.6 miles east from KY 122's junction with Spurlock Creek Road and located 0.5 miles north of Spurlock Creek. The latitude is 37° 32' 33". The longitude is 82° 43' 50".

The proposed operation is located on the Harold U.S.G.S. 7 1/2 minute quadrangle map. The operation will use a combination of mountaintop removal, contour and auger methods of mining. The surface area to be disturbed is owned by: Bill Sammons, et al, Coal-Mac, Inc., Levi Conn, The Elk Horn Coal Corporation, Marion Taylor, Johnnie B. Stevens, George Newsom, Johnnie Akers, Clifford Conn, Allen Kidd Heirs and Gomer Conn Heirs. The operation will underlie property owned by: Maggie Taylor, Marion Taylor and Johnny Stumbo.

The application has been filed for public inspection at the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Prestonsburg Regional Office, 1346 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653. Written comments, objections, or requests for a permit conference must be filed with the Director of the Division of Permits, #2 Hudson Hollow Complex, U.S. 127 South, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

This is the final advertisement of this application; all comments, objections, or requests for a permit conference must be received within thirty (30) days from today's date.

VS: NOTICE OF SALE Dewey Greer and Madeline Greer, his wife, D/B/A Greer Meats; County of Floyd, Kentucky; City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky; Commonwealth of Kentucky, Cabinet for Human Resources; the United States of America; and Commonwealth of Kentucky, Department of Revenue.....Defendants

By virtue of a Judgment and Order of sale of the Floyd Circuit Court rendered at the July 23 term, 1992, in the above-styled cause, I shall proceed to offer for sale at the Courthouse door in Prestonsburg, Kentucky, to the highest and best bidder, at public auction, the following described property, on the 13th day of August, 1992, at 9:30 o'clock a.m., same being a day of the regular term of the Floyd Circuit Court, for cash or 10% of the bid price in cash on the day of sale, and the purchaser shall be required to execute bond for the balance, with surety thereon, due and payable within thirty (30) days from the date of sale, with interest at the rate of 12% per annum from the date of sale. In the event that the successful bidder is a party to this action which has been adjudged to have a lien on the property bid upon, then said party shall not be required to make any cash deposit or bond.

Being Lots Number 10 and 11 in Block No. 2 in the T. H. Dingus and W. H. Layne Addition to the City of Prestonsburg, in the Lancer Addition, as shown by plat filed July 27, 1942, in the offices of the Floyd County Clerk, Plat Number 54.

Being the same property conveyed to Dewey Greer and Madeline Greer, his wife, by Shannon Greer and Opal Greer, his wife, by Deed of Conveyance dated October 31, 1984, and of record in Deed Book 288, at Page 676, records of the Floyd County Clerk's Office.

The purchaser shall be required to assume and pay all ad valorem taxes on the property for the calendar year 1992, and subsequent years.

The amount of money to be raised by this sale shall be in the principal sum of $20,360.19, with interest thereon at 10% annually from the 13th day of April, 1992, until satisfied, the additional sum of $450.00 late charges, and the costs of this action, including costs of advertising of this sale and the fees and commissions for conducting this sale.

For the purchase price the purchaser must execute bond with approved surety or sureties, bearing legal interest from the day of sale until paid and having the force and effect of a judgment with a lien retained upon said property as a further security. Bidders will be prepared to comply with these terms.

Given under my hand, this 27th day of July, 1992.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet, Division of Waste Management, will hold a public hearing on an application for a proposed residual landfill submitted by Costain Coal, Inc. The public hearing will take place on Thursday, August 27, 1992, at 7:00 p.m. in the lodge at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park in Prestonsburg, Floyd County, Kentucky.

The permit applicant proposes to construct a residual solid waste disposal facility located near Ivel, Kentucky, in Floyd County. The proposed facility may be accessed from Prestonsburg by taking US 23 9.3 miles to a suspension bridge across the Levisa Fork. Turn right and cross the suspended bridge at Ivel; bear left, then right and proceed southwest along the road until crossing the railroad tracks (about 800 feet from the bridge). After crossing the railroad tracks, follow the dirt road approximately 1,000 feet south along the tracks. The road enters Stratton Branch, where the landfill will be located. The permit applicant proposes to accept fly ash and bottom ash wastes from AES Cedar Bay, Inc., Jacksonville, Florida, which will be burning coal supplied exclusively by the applicant, Costain Coal, Inc.

The name and address of the permit applicant is:

Costain Coal, Inc.
Box 170, Tollage Creek Pike
Pikeville, Kentucky 41501
Contact Person: Mr. Tom Mattox

The permit application is being processed at the following location:

Division of Waste Management
Solid Waste Branch
14 Reilly Road
Frankfort, Kentucky 40601

Representatives from the Division of Waste Management will be present to answer questions. This hearing is being held in response to recent requests submitted to the Cabinet. Due to the large volume of letters received, the Cabinet is issuing this response rather than respond to each letter. The Division of Waste Management would like to thank all those who submitted comments regarding this application. These letters will be made a part of the official application file and will be considered during the review process.

Anyone having any questions concerning this matter may contact Ms. Linda Nutgrass at (502) 564-6716. This notice is published with State funds pursuant to KRS 224.40-310.

G. Stephen Pack, CPA, a stockholder at the accounting firm of Jones, Pack & Associates, Prestonsburg, was elected to the board of directors of the Kentucky Society of Certified Public Accountants at the KSCPA annual business meeting in July.

Pack, a native of Prestonsburg, is a graduate of Morehead State University and received his CPA certificate in 1984. He is a member of the American Institute of CPAs and the Prestonsburg Jaycees, and serves on the board of directors of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Jackson and the Marie R. Turner Bank Holding Company.

He is also active on the boards of several non-profit organizations, including the Mountain Christian Academy, University Kids, Inc. and the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce.

He lives in Prestonsburg with his wife Vicki, an elementary school teacher and their seven-year-old daughter Allison.

Mountain agency recognized for outstanding leaders

Six field people from the Prestonsburg office of the Kentucky Mountain Agency of Commonwealth Life Insurance Company attended the company's annual Leaders' Conference held July 15-20, in recognition of outstanding performance during the 1991 sales year.

The company's top producers—known as the VIP Club—attended a conference held at Marriott's Harbor Beach Resort in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. It was followed by a three-day cruise on board Carnival's M/S Fantasy, which was also attended by other leaders known as the Commonwealth Club.

Members of the VIP Club were Account Manager David DeRossett; Account Reps Mark Cook and Larry Jones, LUTCF.

Members of the Commonwealth Club were Account Manager Darvene Conn, LUTCF; Account Reps Faye Cecil and Larry Osborne, LUTCF.

Optometrist

He recently graduated with honors from Southern College of Optometry and completed his residency with Dr. Charles Wheeler of Pikeville. He is originally from Austin, Minnesota where his father and grandfather practice optometry.

On The House

Managing Your Biggest Investment

AVOIDING A BAD INVESTMENT IS EASIER THAN YOU MIGHT THINK

by Dorothy Harris

Human nature being what it is, none of us can get serious about the idea of buying a house without experiencing at least a few small twinges of worry. What we fear, of course, is making a mistake. And the mistake we tend to fear most is buying a "lemon"—a house that doesn't simply fail to satisfy our hopes but turns out to have so many flaws that it's a disastrously bad investment.

The good news is that the danger of getting stuck with a lemon of a house is one of the most easily avoided dangers in the whole universe of personal finance. Prospective homebuyers are protected in many ways, and they can further strengthen their defenses by taking a few simple, common-sensical precautionary steps.

The first of your protections is the fact that in many places sellers are required by law to make problems known to potential buyers—and are liable under the law if they fail to make adequate disclosure.

For obvious reasons, however, most of us prefer to steer clear of legal entanglements even when the law is on our side.

In the housing market we do this by identifying problems before closing the deal. And identifying problems isn't necessarily all that difficult. Even a person who's not an electrician or plumber or construction expert often can identify areas of potential concern simply by being alert when visiting a house that's on the market.

It's a simple matter, for example, to turn on faucets and showers to test water pressure. In a bathroom it's a simple matter to turn on the hot water both at the sink and in the shower at the same time and then flush the toilet and watch for drastic drops in pressure or temperature. This is highly likely to produce evidence of whatever problems are lurking in the plumbing system.

Most homes should provide at least 200 amps of electrical power, and it's usually possible to confirm this simply by checking the numbers on the circuit-breaker panel. Check, too, for extra-heavy 220-volt outlets where they're needed for a washer, dryer and other heavy appliances—and for the grounded three-prong outlets needed for computers and power tools.

A house that's been standing for years but still has straight walls and ceilings and remains free of cracks and the stains that indicate leaks is likely to be structurally sound.

Are the basement walls damp—or even wet? Have termites left their calling cards—tubes or tunnels where the walls touch the ground, or wood debris around baseboards?

Wherever you see such things, things that you wonder about because you don't understand them or wouldn't expect to find them in a completely sound structure, you can be confident that it's time for further examination. Keep an open mind about what that further examination might lead to, however. Things that can look like big trouble to the amateur eye sometimes turn out to be quite trivial when an expert checks them out.

The word "expert" is a crucially important one to remember. Ultimately, before closing on the house of your choice, you should have it inspected by a professional—one who has solid credentials and a solid reputation and whose work is guaranteed. Your purchase should be contingent on the results of the inspection. Your realtor can help you make all this happen, thereby reducing your risk to the vanishing point.

THE TAX ADVISER

GEORGE SMITH

Is job-hunting expense deductible?

Q: I just graduated from college. So far I have paid my own way to Denver and Los Angeles looking for a job that did not materialize. Including my resumes I have spent well over $1,000. Now my school adviser says that these costs are deductible only after you get your first job. Is this correct? —J.T., Kalamazoo, Mich.

A: It depends on whose rules you're going by. If you're going by the IRS's rules, the answer is correct. Employment expenses incurred looking for a first job are not deductible even if you land the position.

Q: I prepaid the cost of my dentures last year, but I didn't receive my teeth until this year. The IRS says that I can't take a deduction for my teeth until I file this year's tax return. I have a canceled check to prove it and it's dated last year. In which year do I take my deduction? —K.S., Milwaukee, Wis.

A: You'll need more than your teeth to take a bite out of your last year's tax bill. Medical expenses are generally deductible in the year paid. But, as a rule, prepayment of future bills cannot be deducted until the service is performed.

Q: My father-in-law had a sizable stock loss last year before he died. Can this loss be carried forward to his estate tax return? —R.P., Cincinnati

A: Capital losses cannot be carried over after a taxpayer's death.

Losses are deductible only on the final individual income tax return filed before the person died. These losses cannot be deducted by the decedent's estate.

Q: My wife is going back to school. We will have to get a baby sitter for our child. Is this deductible? —J.R., Ann Arbor, Mich.

A: Yes. To take a child-care credit, both you and your spouse must work. If you work but your spouse does not, your spouse may be treated as working and earning income during any month that she is a full-time student. This must be for at least some part of five months during the tax year.

Q: My refund was supposed to be applied to my estimated income tax payments. Instead they refunded it to me. I still want it to go to my estimate. How should I handle it? —T.O., St. Louis

A: If you receive a check for a refund you are not entitled to, or for an overpayment that should have been credited to your estimated tax, you should not cash the check. You should call the IRS toll-free number listed in your income tax instruction booklet for assistance. They will correct the situation.

Big Sandy Area Labor-Management meeting is slated

The Big Sandy Area Labor-Management Committee will meet at Jenny Wiley State Park, Prestonsburg, on August 17. The meeting will begin with dinner at 6 p.m. lodge restaurant. Business will start at 6:30 p.m.

After dinner, the group will attend the "Kentucky Opry" at the park's amphitheatre at 8 p.m. All interested parties are invited to attend.

Buffet dinners are $9 and tickets to the show are $8. Please call Phyllis Dotson with confirmation at 886-9654.

Letter from Floyd County superintendent

Dear Floyd County residents:

I am pleased and excited about being your new Superintendent of Schools in Floyd County. Since July 15, 1992, I have been serving in this position and the pace of activities has been hectic, to say the least. We plan to have a smooth opening of school on August 31 and a great deal of work remains to be done before that date.

Just a few words about my background. I am a native of Eastern Kentucky having graduated from Boyd County High School that is near Ashland, Kentucky. I have served 25 years in the public schools as a teacher, counselor, administrator, and superintendent. Prior to coming to Floyd County, I served as superintendent in Jenkins, Ashland, and Hardin County, a large county located close to Louisville, Kentucky. I have also taught graduate level college courses for Morehead and Western Universities. I received my doctorate degree in educational administration from the University of Kentucky in 1978.

I believe my background and experience have prepared me to lead Floyd County. I regret the circumstances surrounding my being selected to be the superintendent, but those activities have not dimmed my enthusiasm for this position. I have a great deal to learn about Floyd County, but I also have the confidence that good leadership can make a difference in any situation and Floyd County is no exception.

I also regret the unfortunate history of the Floyd County Schools over the past decade and want to put all of that behind us. We do not need to dwell on any negatives at the past and only concentrate on a positive future.

One person can only do so much and everyone in Floyd County must pull together to make a significant change in this school district. The 1992-93 school year is the third year of a massive change in the public schools called KERA or the Kentucky Educational Reform Act. It is also the first year of a new direction in Floyd County. I solicit your cooperation and look forward to working with you.

Sincerely,
Stephen Towler, Ed. D.
Superintendent

BAD WEATHER: WHEN SCHOOL IS CALLED OFF BY TRANSPORTATION DIRECTOR, BECAUSE OF UNSAFE ROAD CONDITIONS, THIS ACTION APPLIES TO ALL SCHOOLS.

Free or reduced price meals are available to area children

A new school year will soon begin in Floyd County. Among the forms that will be sent home with your child during the first week of school will be an application to see if your child qualifies for the free or reduced price lunches available through the Kentucky Department of Education.

Application forms will be sent to all homes with a letter to parents or guardians. To apply for free or reduced price meals, households should fill out the application and return it to the school.

The Kentucky Department of Education recently announced guidelines for these meals for children unable to pay the full price for meals served in schools participating in the National School Lunch Program and/or School Breakfast Program.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals. Foster children may also be eligible for these meals. Families with foster children should contact the school for information regarding benefits.

Additional forms are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application will be used for the purpose of determining eligibility and may be verified at any time with each school district required to verify a sample annually. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

For school officials to determine eligibility, households receiving food stamps or AFDC must list the child's name, their food stamp or AFDC case number and the signature and name of an adult household member.

Households not receiving food stamps or AFDC must list: child's name, names of all household members, social security number of the parent or guardian who signs the application (or an indication that neither possesses a social security number), the amount of monthly income received by each household member, identified by source, and the signature of an adult household member certifying that the information provided is correct.

The information provided by the household is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility, verifying data, and, if the parent desires, providing other educational benefits.

Households that list a food stamp or AFDC case number must report when the household no longer receives these benefits. Other households approved for benefits are required to report increases in household income of over $50 per month or $600 per year and decreases in household size. Also, if a household member becomes unemployed, or if the household size increases, the household should contact the school. Such changes may make the children of the household eligible for benefits if the household's income falls at or below the levels shown above.

Under the provisions of this policy, a school official will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the determination, he/she may contact the school either orally or in writing.

In the operation of child nutrition programs, no child shall be discriminated against because of race, color, sex, national origin, age, or handicap. If any member of a household believes that he has been discriminated against, he should write to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250

New financial aid program available

New students enrolling at Morehead State University's Big Sandy Extended Campus Center may now apply for a special financial aid program available this fall.

Entitled "Regional Campus Awards," the program is intended to help area students return to the classroom by providing financial assistance, according to Tim Rhodes, director of financial aid.

"This program is primarily designed for students who have some college coursework and who are planning to return to the classroom after an absence," Rhodes said.

The Regional Campus Awards are designed for non-traditional undergraduate students taking classes part-time at the center, but exceptions may be made for graduate students seeking career changes or upgrading their skills to be more competitive in the job market. "There are other financial aid programs that currently enrolled students may be eligible for and financial aid counseling is available for them at the center."

The $300 award will cover tuition for a three-hour course plus books and related expenses.

Applications for the Regional Campus Awards are available by calling Dr. Margaret Lewis, director of the Big Sandy ECC, at 886-2405 or toll free at 1-800-648-5372. Students interested in applying also may stop by the center's office at the Highlands Plaza Shopping Center.

Since there are a limited number of awards available, students are encouraged to apply at once, according to Rhodes.

Immunizations, physicals required before school registration begins

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing writer

Say "ahhh"! Yes, it's that time of year again. It's time for visits to doctors, physical examinations, immunizations — and, on top of that, going back to school!

One of the more confusing aspects of sending a child back to school is sorting out the immunizations and health records necessary for registration. All immunizations and physical examinations must be up to date before registering on August 31st.

To help parents sort through the immunizations and health records they will need to organize, Jane Bond, health educator at the Floyd County Health Department, and Jennifer Martin, school nurse for the Floyd County Board of Education, offered these suggestions.

All Kindergarten and first grade health records will be checked on the first day of school. No one will be admitted without the proper health certificates.

Children entering Kindergarten, preschool or first grade — as well as all children transferring into the Floyd County School system — must have the following vaccinations. The Oral Polio Vaccine (OPV) and the Diphtheria Tetanus and Pertussis (DPT) vaccines must be current. Children at this age must also have proof that they have received the Measles, Mumps and Rubella (MMR), Hib, and Hepatitis B immunizations.

Parents must also show certification that the child has received a full physical examination from a licensed physician. A TB (tuberculosis) skin test is also required, but parents should note the recent change in state law that requires the test to be read by a health professional rather than a parent.

Of course, each parent must bring a full-sized, certified copy of the child's birth certificate.

Students entering the sixth grade must have a physical examination — a new requirement in Kentucky — but it may be completed by EITHER a physician or a health department official.

In anticipation of the new rule, the Floyd County Health Department conducted physical examinations for nearly sixty percent of those students who would be affected by the new requirement. However, some students were not included due to absence or other problems — and they still need to get their physical. So, parents, check those health records carefully.

Sixth graders must also have a second MMR vaccination before entering school. This important immunization is not a "booster" so it should not be overlooked.

Another concern for parents is the tetanus vaccination. Students entering either the ninth or tenth grade are reminded that they are due for a Tetanus/Diphtheria (TD) shot. Although this immunization was received in infancy and elementary school, most adults need a "booster" every ten years — and it's time again for you, freshmen and sophomores! Schools may send a letter reminding parents that their children's immunization is about to expire and needs to be updated before re-entering school, but not all will do so. Parents should be on the safe side and double check health records, or ask their family physician if there are any questions.

These requirements for immunizations and health records are established by the Floyd County Board of Education in accordance with the laws of the State of Kentucky. However, the Floyd County Health Department assists in implementing the Board of Education's health programs. Parents should call the Health Department, 886-2788, if they need assistance or more information.

Prepare now for school days!

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing writer

There comes a day, a day of great silence. A day on which the merry-go-rounds will be stilled. A day when all the slides have been slid and all the swings have been swung. A day when bells will ring and summon our children. Those bells will signal that a school year has begun.

All kidding aside, the beginning of school is, quite literally, right around the corner — the first day is August 31st. Parents can ease the crushing blow by gathering health records, updating immunizations and preparing their children for their first day at school. As in any crisis, a little organization can go a long way.

According to the Floyd County Board of Education, some guidelines have been set for minimum age requirements. To enter the Head Start program, a child who is 3 years old on or before October 1st may enter the program if space and class enrollments allow. Children who are 4 years old on or before October 1st have priority status to allow all children in the area an opportunity to participate in Head Start for at least one year.

Children entering Kindergarten must have reached the age of 5 on or before October 1st. Children who have had their 6th birthday on or before October 1st will be eligible to enter the first grade.

Get those health records updated! All physical examinations and vaccinations must be current before registering for school on August 31st. All Kindergarten and first grade health records will be checked on the first day of school. No one will be admitted without the proper health certificates.

School supplies are one of the great mysteries of the universe. Most schools in this area do not issue a list of supplies to help parents anticipate the cost of getting their students ready for school. Yet, most teachers will issue such a list of supplies on the first day of school. Parents can certainly begin to purchase the basics — notebooks, pencils and pens. This will make shopping for that list less tedious.

Basics are essential to the school wardrobe as well. Parents can purchase socks, underwear, T-shirts without too much fear of a fashion-conscious student suddenly rejecting it as "grody." Most students appreciate parents who save some of the clothes shopping until after the beginning of the school year — so they can see what their friends are wearing.

Why not begin waking your child a little bit earlier each day — until they can awaken at the proper time for school with more enthusiasm than a prehistoric slug.

A large wall or desk calendar will help you and your student keep track of all homework assignments. More importantly, you can also list all of those school holidays! Homework will be easier if you begin to limit television viewing now — something that will be much easier during the summer reruns!

Above all, keep up your hope. Getting children ready for their first day of school seems an insurmountable task. But, it will go far more quickly and far more easily than you expect. Parents have survived this ritual for centuries. After all, your mother did it for you, too!

Ungraded primary system offers unique opportunity for students

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing writer

Who doesn't remember the days when elementary school children sat in silent, straight rows of desks, listening as their teacher led them through the exercises for that day? Most of us were educated in those quiet, rigid classrooms — with the result that most of us think of education as a chore rather than a delight.

Elementary teachers across Floyd County are working to change not only the classroom atmosphere, but also that student attitude. Classrooms are being reorganized, class materials are being restructured, and community resources are being implemented so that our children will discover that education can be fun.

Last year children in first and second grades at Clark, Duff, Harold, Auxier and Prater Elementary Schools participated in a pilot program that will eventually lead to an ungraded primary system in all Floyd County elementary schools. A similar plan was tried several years ago at Clark Elementary, but the program was not required until the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA) was passed. Beginning with the 1992 school year, all elementary schools in Floyd County will carry out either the first or second stage of establishing the ungraded primary program of education — and will eliminate grades K-3.

What is an ungraded primary system? The term seems confusing, if not mysterious. It simply refers to the elimination of primary school grades — Kindergarten through third grade — that were based on a child's age and not the child's ability.

Under the ungraded primary system, children will be assigned to multi-age, multi-ability classrooms. Teachers in those classrooms will have a curriculum of subjects to be accomplished during a given school year. Exercises and learning units will be geared to the specific abilities of each child.

One of the hallmarks of the ungraded primary system is flexibility. When the new programs were initiated last year, each program was implemented locally in its own way. Each school was allowed to develop a curriculum that best suited the needs of its children. Likewise, programs will be revised each year to fit the needs of children new to the program.

This flexibility will carry over into each teacher's planning. In the past, teachers focused on textbooks and manuals for each subject. Now, subjects are interrelated — replacing textbooks with subject units that incorporate all classroom skills. "For example," explained Charlene Nunn of Clark Elementary, "if the children are studying insects, then all projects focus on insects. There will be reading and writing assignments about insects, math activities about insects, and so on; but always focusing on the subject."

"Different units will focus on different subjects," Nunn continued. "We will have units on the weather, the presidential election, or economics. This year we will have a new unit on great artists of the world that we are really excited about."

"We also hope to expose the children to different cultures," she added. "We would like to give them some basis for understanding the world around them while at the same time gaining an appreciation for their own heritage as well. We have units on Washington, DC, the Kentucky Bicentennial, and — next year — a unit on Appalachian culture and history. This system also allows us more flexibility to introduce current events, such as the Olympics, to our students."

Units of study will be developed through team teaching. Teachers will plan subject units together, then each teacher will specialize in one aspect of the subject. Teachers will thus be better prepared for each subject. Then the children will rotate to gain the full benefit of each teacher's preparation.

At the core of the ungraded primary system, teachers are able to focus on the strengths of each individual child. At the same time, children are not competing with each other. Instead, each child is just trying to do their best.

The ungraded primary system of teaching does make progress assessment a little more complicated. In the past, teachers assigned a grade that parents could identify as a measure of their child's progress. Now, however, teachers will no longer administer grades but report their assessment of each child's skills. Parent conferences will be scheduled to discuss each child's progress in skills development, highlighting areas of concern as well as expectations for improvement.

When fully implemented teachers will remain with the same children for three years. This will allow teachers a unique opportunity to become truly acquainted with the children. It will provide an atmosphere of continuity while the teachers identify and assess a child's needs over an extended period of time.

Mom and kids can conquer back-to-school lunch blues

Moms and kids together can help keep the dread out of brown bag lunches. By joining forces, they can create a healthy lunch with sure-fire kid-appeal.

For some, healthy lunches can be a problem. More than half (54 percent) of the moms questioned in a survey conducted by the American Frozen Food Institute said their biggest challenge is providing a well-balanced diet. That is especially difficult at lunchtime, when they aren't around to supervise what their children eat at school.

What turns children off most about brown bag lunches?

"My daughter used to complain that it's always the same old thing—peanut butter and jelly or tuna fish," says Rena Coyle, a cooking instructor renowned for her work with children and the author of "My First Cookbook," "Baby Let's Eat" and "My First Baking Book." "I found I could make her a whole lot happier by involving her in the planning and preparation process."

Frozen Foods Simplify

Coyle says that when preparing meals with children, she likes to include frozen foods because they can simplify a recipe and are a quick and easy way to build a balanced meal. "Frozen foods also have real kid appeal because of the wide variety of choices," she says.

Together, Coyle and her daughter created a lemon-limeade lunch punch for school. They prefer to use frozen juices for the punch because they need no preservatives and taste fresher than shelf-stable, bottled varieties.

"Kids can store the drink in a sturdy, sealable cup in the freezer until it's time to leave for school," says Coyle. "So when lunchtime arrives, the drink is thawed but still chilled."

Lunch is not the only meal that children are willing to help prepare these days. The Institute survey reveals that more than 60 percent of American children, as young as five and six years old, help their parents cook various meals and snacks. And more than 70 percent of contemporary moms feel comfortable having

LEMON-LIMEADE LUNCH PUNCH (MAKES 7 CUPS)

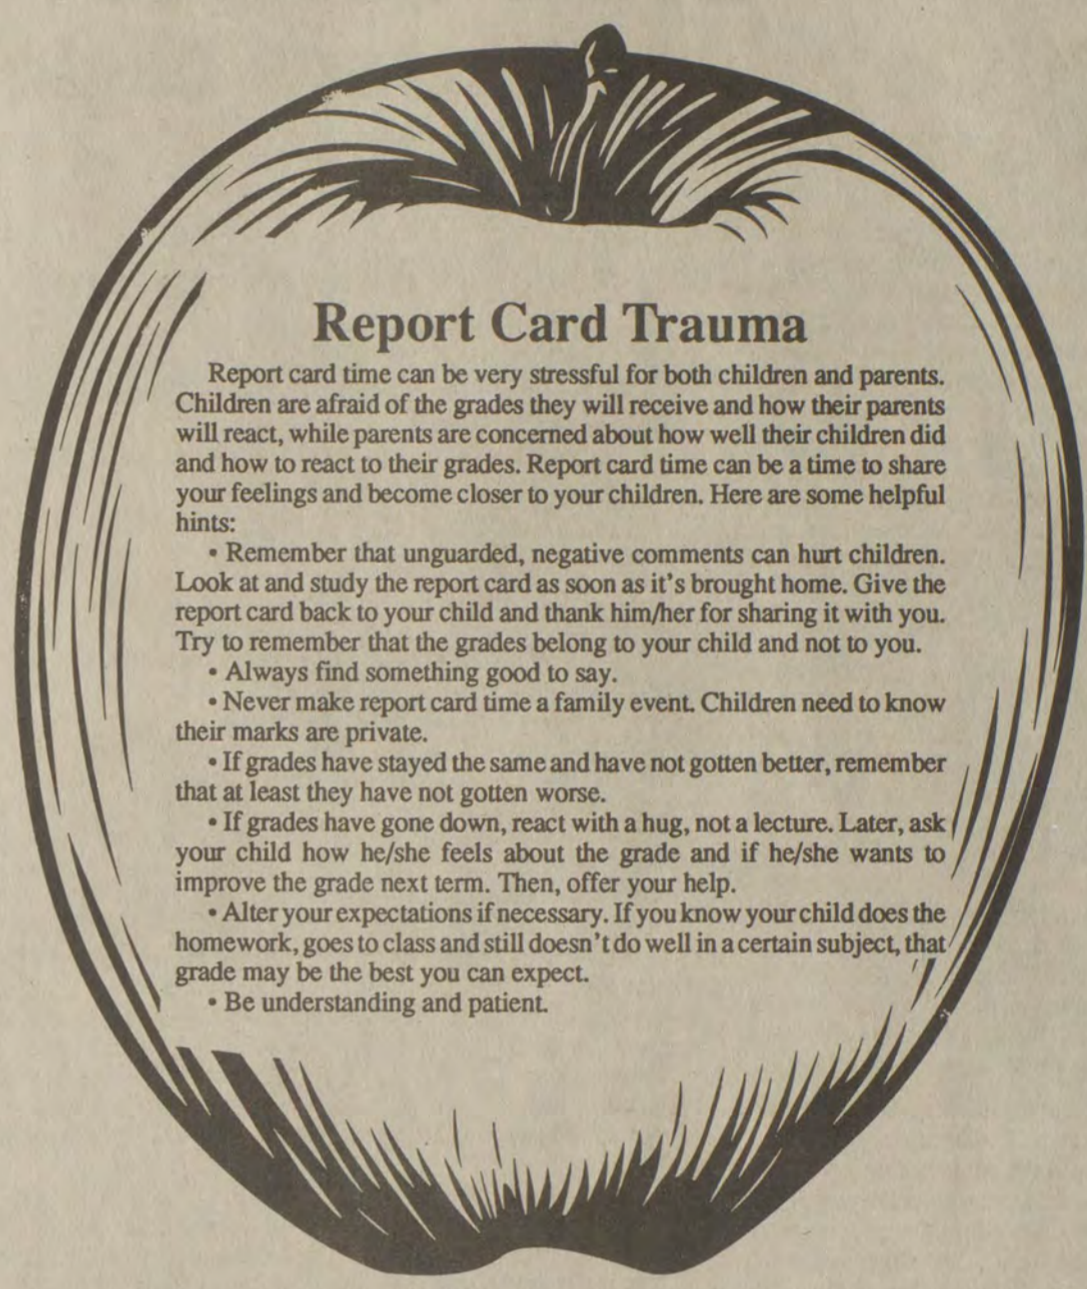

7-1/2-ounce can of frozen lemon juice, defrosted

1 tablespoon frozen grape juice concentrate, defrosted

6-ounce can limeade concentrate, defrosted 4 cups lemon-lime soda 2 cups club soda

Mix the lemon and grape juice together in a large pitcher. Add the limeade concentrate and stir until blended. Pour in the lemon-lime soda and club soda.

Pour the juice from the pitcher into a sturdy, sealable cup, and store in the freezer until time to go to school. Try not to fill the cup to the brim. Leave at least a half-inch free space for the liquid to expand when it freezes.

Report Card Trauma

Report card time can be very stressful for both children and parents. Children are afraid of the grades they will receive and how their parents will react, while parents are concerned about how well their children did and how to react to their grades. Report card time can be a time to share your feelings and become closer to your children. Here are some helpful hints:

- Remember that unguarded, negative comments can hurt children. Look at and study the report card as soon as it's brought home. Give the report card back to your child and thank him/her for sharing it with you. Try to remember that the grades belong to your child and not to you.
- Always find something good to say.
- Never make report card time a family event. Children need to know their marks are private.
- If grades have stayed the same and have not gotten better, remember that at least they have not gotten worse.
- If grades have gone down, react with a hug, not a lecture. Later, ask your child how he/she feels about the grade and if he/she wants to improve the grade next term. Then, offer your help.
- Alter your expectations if necessary. If you know your child does the homework, goes to class and still doesn't do well in a certain subject, that grade may be the best you can expect.
- Be understanding and patient.

Science center

Dedication ceremonies are planned this fall for Prestonsburg Community College's new Henry A. Campbell Jr. Science Building.

PCC plans dedication of new science building

PCC's new science building is a $3.1 million facility with approximately 27,000 square feet of floor space. This addition greatly increased the laboratory facilities at the college. Previously, one biology laboratory served all branches of science, now microbiology, anatomy, and zoology/botany have separate facilities. The chemistry lab is also expanded to include more floor space, storage and preparation room. Advances such as distilled water from the faucets aid students and faculty.

In addition, the nursing department on the second floor has expanded lab facilities including a demonstration room, audio/visual room and additional storage.

To make optimum use of these facilities, the faculty of the Biological Sciences division and the nursing faculty have worked together to create an embryo Big Sandy Natural Science Center which has been extremely popular with the community; so popular that tours and exhibits are already presenting space needs.

Among the most interesting exhibits are the many taxidermed specimens in the zoology lab including a lynx, a huge wild turkey, a mink, several varieties of squirrel, a wild duck, a coyote, and the live animals such as hermit crabs, snakes, and turtles.

If your school or group would like to arrange a tour, contact Dr. Roger Goodwill at the college.

The new building will receive its official name, the Henry A. Campbell Jr. Science Building at dedication ceremonies planned this fall.

Going Back to School With a Message

Bookcovers with practical tips on recycling and conservation may be one of the hottest new items on the school scene today.

Thousands of children, with the help of local businesses, will carry environmental messages to and from school on colorful action-oriented graphics covering their textbooks.

The bookcovers, designed by Environmental Hazards Management Institute, a non-profit educational group in Durham, N.H., were developed to promote ecological partnerships between schools, corporations and municipalities.

Sponsors can distribute the bookcovers, featuring their names and logos, to educate and encourage environmental activism.

At the same time, the covers teach children what they can do to preserve the resources around them. And teachers can use them to stimulate classroom discussion about the environ-

"Although lacking time and money to pursue new environmental curricula, a great number of teachers, we find, are as hungry as their students for stimulating, innovative materials that complement existing lesson plans," said Alan Borner, executive director of EHMI. "Teachers and school administrators want unbiased information in their classroom materials, and EHMI's independently developed products have been well received," he said.

The colorful, sturdy bookcovers, made of recycled paper, present information about recycling, water conservation and environmental action in a variety of formats for different age groups.

For information about sponsoring the bookcovers or other EHMI environmental products, call 1-603-868-1496, or write EHMI, P.O. Box 70-B, Durham, NH 03824.

'New reality' emerges:

Awareness of education reform programs increase

After 12 months, Kentuckians are more knowledgeable about education reform, perceive that reform is here to stay, but also have more polarized opinions, according to recent focus group research on education.

The seven focus groups, commissioned by The Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence and The Partnership for Kentucky School Reform, reiterate the need for more information on education reform, such as the primary program and assessment, and the need for a clearer vision of reform's expected results.

A similar study conducted last year confirmed Kentuckians' skepticism about the quality of their schools, recognition of a need for dramatically better preparation of high school graduates for today's workforce, and, at the same time, hesitancy to believe that reform could survive long enough to create changes.

That is different today. In contrast to a year ago, the study reveals a 'new reality' or belief that reform is "here to stay." Participants now talk in terms of "when" a particular reform program reaches their school, rather than "whether" reform reaches their school.

In addition, most participants support elements of the reform where they have first-hand experience, such as pre-school programs, family resource/youth services centers, and school councils. Some participants, however, express concern or even negative reactions over school reforms where they have little or no experience and where they are unsure of how the program affects their children.

This suggests that gradual, direct experience with specific elements of the reform fosters support.

Other findings include:

- * the lack of a negative reaction to the 1990 tax increase. Yet participants ask where the money is going and want to know that it is being spent wisely.

- * a desire for more participation in schools and decision making. Participants in general do not have a sense of 'ownership' for school reform. Perceptions vary as to who is responsible for improving schools.

Citizens, on the one hand, feel that teachers should motivate students to learn, while teachers emphasize the family's responsibility for preparing children and supporting schools.

On the other hand, business people divide responsibility for education between families and schools. Small business people also voice a strong desire to be more involved with the schools, and express a greater understanding of the benefits of school reform and greater experience and willingness to work with other businesses and organizations that would be helpful to reform.

Overall, the study concludes that Kentucky education reform is "neither in danger nor in prime condition." Findings show that difficulties stem from the complexity of the new ideas. Specifically, it suggests that a gap exists between education experts, teachers and the general public's knowledge about education reform. Teachers also say they need consistent information from school officials.

According to the focus groups, Kentuckians believe that education reform, at the end of the second year, looks reasonable and workable thanks to: (1) growing public confidence in the legislature's long-term commitment to education; and (2) the active advocacy of citizens, teachers, and groups already in strong support of education reform.

The focus groups, held throughout Kentucky, evaluated the attitudes and beliefs of the general public, teachers, and business people. The study was conducted during May by Roberts and Kay, Inc., a research and organizational communications firm based in Lexington.

'Shopkeeper math' not enough new teaching standards released

To help students acquire math power—a key to success in an increasingly complex society—the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics has developed a new, broad-reaching set of teaching standards.

"The nation's teachers of mathematics are gatekeepers to the future because proficiency in mathematics is the ticket to the future," says Iris Carl, president of the 85,000-member council. "Young people must learn more than yesterday's shopkeeper arithmetic if they're going to survive in today's world."

"The national goal of making American students first in the world of mathematics and science by the end of the century is commonly agreed to be a most difficult goal to achieve since American students currently rank so low in international comparisons," says Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., chairman of the U.S. House Education and Labor Committee. "Thousands of teachers worked on this document for years and it truly represents the profession's best views on upgrading the teaching of mathematics."

Math Power Is ...

Math power, as defined in the council's "Professional Standards for Teaching Mathematics," should help students:

- Enjoy a range of career choices. More than 75 percent of all jobs require proficiency in simple algebra and geometry as a prerequisite for training or licensure.
- Earn higher salaries.
- Improve basic living standards by providing the ability to compare loans, calculate risks and understand the various rates of inflation and taxation.
- Develop self-confidence.
- Maintain access to advanced study. Students who progress through a series of mathematics courses enjoy greater success than those who drop math study.

Two years ago, the NCTM introduced the precedent-setting "Curriculum and Evaluation Standards for School Mathematics," which advocated bringing such important topics as data analysis, probability and statistics into the classroom; using technology as a learning tool; and shifting the focus of mathematics away from computation and toward problem solving.

Now, the council is promoting the implementation of 24 teaching standards that outline the support, training and evaluation required for good teaching. They include:

- Learning in cooperative groups instead of only as individuals.
 - Using logic and mathematical evidence to verify results, instead of looking to the teacher as the sole authority for right answers.
 - Developing mathematical reasoning, instead of memorization of formulas.
 - Conjecturing, inventing and problem solving, instead of mechanistic answer finding.
 - Connecting mathematics and its applications, instead of seeing mathematics as a body of isolated concepts and procedures.
- The document is based on the premise that all students can develop the confidence, knowledge and techniques needed to use mathematics effectively.
- The Professional Standards also assumes that teachers are the key to changing the way mathematics is taught and learned, and that teachers must have long-term support and adequate resources.
- For more information, contact the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, Dept. NU, 1906 Association Drive, Reston, Virginia 22091. Phone: 1-703-620-9840.

From kindergarten to college, take water back to school

by James M. Rippe M.D.

This year, parents should add an important—and often overlooked—item to their children's back-to-school supply list: water.

Hydration, or meeting the body's need for water, is vital to everybody's health, along with good nutrition and exercise. But it's especially important for parents to encourage kids to drink water, since a child's thirst mechanism may not be as accurate as an adult's. And studies have shown that establishing good habits during childhood pays off into adult years.

Drinking water helps kids stay healthy all year. But with school doors opening shortly, we should pay extra attention to hydration in these school situations:

- Athletics. Experience tells us that young athletes could die this year from hypothermia and dehydration, suffered while playing football or other competitive sports.
- Studying. Contrary to what many students believe, it's better to drink water than coffee when working late to finish papers or cram for exams.
- Lunch time. Parents should pack small bottles of water, such as Evian natural spring water, instead of sweetened drinks in lunch boxes. Older kids should be encouraged to drink water with meals.

Water is critical

This fall, as students return to school, they also return to scholastic athletics. And unfortunately, every year youngsters die from heat-related illnesses, for the simple reason that they haven't consumed enough water. That's because many people don't understand it's critical for young athletes to drink water while exerting themselves.

Why is drinking water so important? The human body contains more than 50 percent water, which is essential to virtually every bodily function and organ, including the brain. Water also controls body temperature, so a 1 or 2 percent loss of body water—which can happen during an hour of exercise—creates problems controlling body temperature, which can lead to health risks and declines in athletic performance.

Yet studies have shown that children drink back only 60-70 percent of the water they lose while exercising. That's why, wherever teams are playing, there should be a water supply, and players should be instructed to make a conscious decision to drink water. Youngsters should drink before the session, every 15-20 minutes while exercising and after the session has ended.

And students should drink water all the time, not just during exercise. While studying, for example, students are better off drinking water than caffeinated beverages, like coffee. Since the caffeine in coffee is a diuretic, it causes water loss, which leads to body fatigue and a diminished ability to concentrate.

We should encourage good health habits—such as drinking water—in children. They benefit children now and also pay off into adult years, keeping them feeling great and performing at their peak.

Good Luck in 1992-93!

We extend best wishes to our friends in elementary and secondary education as a new school year begins.

We look forward to the opportunity to continue serving you as we have done since 1887.

New programs, facilities and a new president at MSU

In mid-August, Morehead State University students will begin the new semester with a new president, new facilities, and new programs and services.

Registration for the fall term is set for Thursday and Friday, August 20-21, from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. on the main campus. Students who have not registered may complete the process and pre-registered students may pay their fees during this time.

On Thursday, August 21, students planning to take classes at the extended campus centers in Ashland, Prestonsburg and West Liberty as well as the Appalachian Graduate Consortium in Pikeville may register at those locations from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

All MSU classes, including evening and off-campus, begin on Monday, Aug. 24.

While he assumed the leadership role on July 1, President Ronald G. Eaglin will address the University's faculty and staff population collectively for the first time on Wednesday, August 19. The convocation is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. in Button Auditorium.

When students officially begin to arrive on campus on Tuesday, August 18, at 8 a.m., Morehead State, for the third time in as many years, will open a newly renovated residence hall. Formerly Mays Hall, the facility has been renamed Mays Hall Apartments to emphasize its apartment style living quarters.

Featuring one, two and three room units, the apartments are designed for students who need 10- or 12-month accommodations. It is open to those 23 years or older who are considered nontraditional, seniors, graduate students or married couples with no children. The monthly rent includes utilities, telephone and cable television.

A formal dedication and ribbon cutting ceremony for Mays Hall Apartments will be held October 17, at 10 a.m., during the Homecoming weekend.

Effective August 1, students in some areas will see new leadership in their department chairs. The College of Education and Behavioral Sciences has moved Dr. William J. Weikel, a member of the education faculty, to Department of Leadership and Secondary Education Chair. Dr. William J. Mosley, formerly the director of Western Illinois University's Center for the Preparation of Educators of Minority Children, is the new chair of the Department of Elementary, Reading and Special Education.

Also new to the MSU campus is Dr. Ronald L. Mitchelson, previously a professor of geography at the University of Georgia, who has been named chair of the Department of Geography, Government and History.

The Department of Home Economics will implement its four-year degree program—Early Childhood Development—in the fall. The program was designed to meet the personnel needs of the region's school districts as they comply with provisions of the 1990 Kentucky Education Reform Act. Students will have two options of study from which to choose: teacher certification once that becomes available from the state Department of Education and one designed for those working in a privately-franchised early childhood center.

To develop knowledge and understanding of women's roles and contributions, MSU has initiated a minor in Women's Studies Program. Experimentation courses were previously introduced in the Department of Sociology, Social Work and Corrections. The new offering, which requires 21 hours of credit, includes selected courses from various departments with the addition of one new course. It will be administered by Dean of Undergraduate Programs.

The Division of Student Life has begun a peer program aimed at preventing substance abuse thanks to a grant from the U.S. Department of Education. The emphasis will be toward MSU students but youths in the area may benefit as well. The plan is to use student volunteers to work with other students to help them develop self-enhancement skills in such areas as assertiveness, interpersonal relationships and communication. The goal is to decrease the student's need for alcohol and other substances.

Educating and informing will be the emphasis of the Student Government Association (SGA) when it begins an Events Hotline for the first time this fall. A free service, the Renovated, reopened and renamed

Mays Hall Apartments will be ready to accommodate students when Morehead State University opens the fall term. The newly renovated facility features contemporary living apartments with private baths and kitchenettes. The one, two and three room units are designed for students who need 10- or 12-month accommodations. A former residence hall for male students, the building was opened in 1937 as Mens Hall. Its name was changed to Mays Hall in 1968. To better identify the new type of living quarters, "apartments" was added to its name. (photo by Steve Wright)

Hotline will not only publicize entertainment but will include test dates and academic information that are of importance to the student body. Events occurring within a 10-day period are available by calling (606) 783-2567.

SGA will offer several programs during the coming year that will be of interest to students. Among these are the second Sexual Awareness Week program scheduled for mid-January.

Students currently enrolled at MSU will see the results of the efforts to make the campus a safer community. More lighting has been added to those areas that were formerly dimly lit. In addition, exterior telephones have been placed at strategic locations around the campus with 26 of those being dedicated lines to the 911 emergency number.

A variety of ways for student involvement is scheduled for the opening week of school under the "Tying it all Together" theme. A special orientation program to help new students adapt to college life will run from 8:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. in Button Auditorium on Wednesday, August 19. Programs for special interest groups are: minority students, August 18, 1-6 p.m., in the Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center; August 21, non-traditional students, Fields Hall, 9 a.m.-2 p.m., and August 28, international students, Fields Hall seminar room, 6 p.m.

Also planned for Wednesday, August 19, are a number of "fun" activities: a scavenger hunt, activity fair and playfair. Details will be available to students when they arrive on campus.

Hosted by SGA, there will be a cookout on the lawn of Laughlin Health Building on Friday, August 21, from 6 to 9 p.m. A number of yard games—like volleyball, frisbees and badminton—will be available plus "special" competitions scheduled at 15-minute intervals. There is no charge for attending.

Numerous evening entertainment programs have been scheduled. They include: Tom DeLuca will "hypnotize" in Breckinridge Auditorium on Thursday, August 20, and David Naster will "tickle the funnybone" on Saturday, August 22. Both performances, which are free and open to the public, begin at 9:15 p.m.

Culminating the opening week's activities is an ice cream fest and street dance on Sunday, August 23. Festivities begin at 8 p.m. on University Boulevard in front of the president's home.

For those interested in joining a Greek organization, prospective sorority members will return to campus a week early, on Saturday, August 15, to participate in rush activities. Fraternity members may pick up rush cards during registration for rush on August 31. Additional information is available from the Greek adviser at (606) 783-2071.

Throughout the 1992-93 academic year, students will have numerous opportunities for cultural experiences. Theatre students will present several shows including "Look Homeward Angel," "Anything Goes," and "Cinderella." The Arts in Morehead Series, a cooperative effort of MSU and the Morehead/Rowan County Arts Council, will present "Saffire, The Uppity Blues Women," "Aequalis," the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival "Two Gentlemen of Verona" and other productions. These performances are free to MSU students with valid I.D. cards.

MSU will host its annual Parents Weekend, September 11-13. This is a special time to introduce mom and pop to the campus and participate in a number of events planned for the entire family. This year's activity coincides with the Morehead/Rowan County Hardwood Festival, providing additional opportunities for a fun-filled occasion.

Additional information on Morehead State University and its programs are available by calling toll free 1-800-262-7474 (in Kentucky) or 1-800-354-2090 (from other states).

Alone at the top

Attending college and making it a success sooner or later will require a bit of studying. For Morehead State University sophomore Don Burke of Weeksbury, this meant finding a quiet spot, as this one atop his residence hall. MSU students will start returning to the campus on Tuesday, August 18, for the fall semester. Classes begin on Monday, August 24. (photo by Eric Shindelbower)

Back to school

Parents can help their children return to school safely by teaching them a few rules about safety.

Back to school -- safely

With children returning to school, it's important for parents to teach their kids about safety. Going to school or playing in the playground, children run the risk of injury.

"Head injury is one of the most dangerous injuries, especially for kids," said James Wasco, MD, medical director of the New Medico Neurologic Rehabilitation System. "Damage to the brain can significantly impair a child's ability to learn, concentrate or remember information which can have a devastating effect on their development."

Before sending your kids off to school, outfit them with a few safety reminders.

Walking to School

- Be sure to allow enough time for your child to get to school without rushing — kids in a hurry make poor safety decisions.

- Plan your child's walking route to minimize the number of street crossings, particularly busy streets. Children should always cross at crosswalks and look both ways.

- Kids should walk on the sidewalk. Where there are no sidewalks, have your child walk facing traffic so the child can see oncoming cars.

Riding the School Bus

- An estimated 7,000 children are injured and 40 die each year in school bus accidents. Have your child wait for the bus to stop completely, then board carefully, using the handrail.

- Kids should stay seated and never put head, arms or hands out the bus windows.

- Teach your kids to cross at least 10 feet in front of the bus so the driver can see them. Kids should be aware of traffic.

Recreation

- Kids should always wear a protective bicycle helmet when riding a bike. Studies have shown that a bike helmet can reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent.

If you need more information about brain injury or rehabilitation, call New Medico at 1-800-676-6000, ext. 3070.

"Going to school is a sign of a child's independence," said Dr. Wasco, "but independence means that children need to be more aware of safety issues."

Parents equipping their kids with back-to-school supplies face a dizzying array of merchandise and a daunting assault on the family checkbook.

One way shoppers can make their dollars go farther in the stationery department is to seek out products that offer savings—through cents off coupons, buy-one-get-one-free deals, multipackaged merchandise the retailers call "multi-paks" and other promotional offers.

Multi-paks, in which several pens, pencils, markers, highlighters or other supplies are sold together, generally offer better value to the consumer than buying such items separately.

Multi-paks also have the advantage of being kinder and gentler to the environment by reducing packaging. The single package used in a multi-pak means less throw-away material than three or four packages for different items. Green-conscious consumers can also look for products that use recycled materials in their packaging.

Among manufacturers offering multi-paks to help back-to-school consumers and the environment is Pentel. To encourage environmental awareness, the company is giving away a free Econo-Sharp automatic pencil in specially marked packages of Master Lock products.

All Pentel automatic pencils are environmentally friendly because they are refillable, never need sharpening and can replace wooden pencils.

According to reports from the Writing Instruments Manufacturers Association, Inc., automatic pencil sales have increased steadily over the past several years.

for Pre-School, Kindergarten and 6th Grade

ENTRANCE REQUIREMENTS:

Pre-School and Kindergarten (3-year-old special needs, 4-year-old special needs and income eligible)

1. Children attending kindergarten must be 5 years old by October 1, 1992.
2. Must have an official birth certificate. (Must be full size.)
3. Valid Kentucky immunization certificate.
4. Medical examination (KDE approved form 1671-410).
5. Tuberculin Test Certificate (CH-91A).

These items must be completed and the proper certificate for each item submitted to the school principal on the opening day of school.

6th Grade

1. A second dose of MMR (Measles, Mumps and Rubella) immunization.
2. A physical examination.

These services may be provided by your doctor or by the Health Department.

Students who fail to meet these requirements cannot be allowed to enroll in school or begin classes.

Begin saving early for your child's college education

With the cost of college education now running more than $10,000 per year, you should think about how to finance your children's education long before it's time for them to apply to colleges.

According to the Kentucky Society of CPAs, your savings strategy should depend on your age, the ages of your children, and your income, as well as your financial resources.

WHO IS FOOTING THE BILL?

Next to the purchase of a home, college tuition is one of the biggest expenses a family will face. Yet banks don't offer couples 30-year loans to help them pay for their children's education. Although almost half of all undergraduates qualify for some form of financial aid, the major financial demands of a college education still fall squarely on the family. With college costs rising at an average of 6 to 7 percent annually, a family now needs to set aside nearly $4,000 per year, earning an interest rate of 7 to 8 percent per year to cover the full cost of a bachelor's degree for their newborn child.

Of course, the earlier you start saving, the less you need to save each year. Early planning also gives you the opportunity to take greater investment risks — which traditionally pay off in higher yields.

CONSIDER YOUR CHILD'S AGE

Your investment decisions should be guided, in part, by your child's age. If your children are under age 14, you can boost their college savings and minimize your taxes by shifting assets to them — thereby enabling each of them to generate as much as $1,200 in unearned income that will be taxed at a lower rate than your own. Under the "kiddie tax" rules, the first $600 of your child's unearned income — interest, dividends and other investment income — is tax-free. The next $600 is taxed at the child's rate, usually 15 percent. Any unearned income over this amount is taxed at the parents' highest marginal rate. If you kept the same amount of income in your own account, it would be taxed at your highest maximal tax bracket.

If your child is age 14 or over, the "kiddie tax" does not apply. You can transfer cash, property and other money is used for an in-state public or private university education.

OTHER SAVINGS VEHICLES

The College Sure CD offered by the College Savings Bank in Princeton, New Jersey, is another option to consider. A federally insured, variable-interest rate certificate of deposit, the College Sure pays an interest rate indexed at 1.5 percent less than the college tuition inflation rate. Maturities vary from one to 25 years, with stiff penalties imposed for early withdrawals. Interest is taxed annually as it is for other CDs.

In recent years, several states have initiated guaranteed tuition plans in an effort to boost enrollments. To participate in these savings programs, you pay the state a lump sum for four years of future tuition at a public university or college in that state. Although these plans limit your child's options when selecting a college, they help to ensure that you have set aside sufficient funds for your child's education.

CPAs point out that regardless of the savings mechanism you select, it's important to make saving for your child's education an integral part of your personal financial plan.

Parents can give children math power

Every child loves puzzles and games. That's why it's helpful to connect the puzzles and games played at home with the math taught in school.

According to the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics (NCTM), by developing everyday activities into mathematical games, parents can help make the "math connection" that will build youngsters' interest in the subject.

One idea suggested by NCTM is to discuss with your children which grocery store is best for shopping. You can base decisions solely on price, or introduce other factors such as quality, availability of brands and service to make the problem more complex. If you start by just asking the question, your kids may look at newspaper ads to compare prices or check the prices of a few items in the stores themselves.

Energy use is another possibility. Ask your children to make a bar graph plotting your monthly electric bills for the past year. Encourage them to ask why those bills fluctuate from month to month. The same thing can be done with heating bills.

Have your child make a scale drawing of one of the rooms in your house and make scale templates of the furniture in that room to show proper perspective. Together, rearrange the furniture in as many patterns as possible. Discuss whether additional pieces of furniture could fit in the room.

Games Help Too

Standard board and card games are also good for developing math skills and interests, but you can also use simple pencil-and-paper games such as these:

Addition Table

+	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>

Subtraction Table

<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
-	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>

a piece of paper and draws a series of boxes. Then one player picks a playing card and reads the number while each player writes that number in any one of their boxes. The process is repeated until all the boxes are full. Whoever has the largest number is the winner. For variety, the winner could be whoever has the smallest number or the greatest even or odd number.

•Pick-a-problem. Essentially the same as the game above, but here the blank boxes are arranged in addition or subtraction tables. The goal for each is to finish with the largest positive number once the calculation is completed.

Floyd County students received $1,535,976 in state student financial aid from the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA) for the 1991-92 school year.

Of that amount, 535 students shared $432,288 in grants, three students were awarded $14,830 in teacher scholarships, and 527 loans totaling $1,088,858 were guaranteed.

With the ever-increasing cost of college and vocational education, it is more important than ever for families to plan early for higher education. Approximately 62 percent of Floyd County students who graduated from public high school in 1991 pursued a college education.

The average annual total cost of education at both private nonprofit colleges and public institutions continues to rise.

Private school costs rose from $3,854 in 1978 to $10,450 in 1993. That figure is expected to reach $28,622 by 2008.

Costs at public institutions rose from $2,319 in 1978 to $6,056 in 1993 and are projected to reach $15,574 by 2008.

KHEAA is the state government agency that administers several student financial aid programs and provides special services to help students and their families plan and pay for college or vocational training.

KHEAA's financial aid programs include the College Access Program (CAP) Grant, Kentucky Tuition Grant (KTG), KHEAA Teacher Scholarship, Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarship, Stafford Loan, PLUS Loan (for parents), Supplemental Loan for Students (SLS), and KHEAA Work-Study Program (KWSP).

KHEAA also provides free planning materials like "Getting In," a book of admissions, costs, financial aid, and academic program information for Kentucky's postsecondary schools; affording Higher Education, a book listing financial aid programs available from a variety of sources; and Success Through Educational Planning (STEP) packets, which help students in grades 8-12 and their parents prepare for higher education and learn about financial aid.

The Kentucky Educational Savings Plan Trust (KESPT) helps parents, grandparents, or other benefactors save in a planned way for the higher education costs of children under 15 years of age. A Savings Plan Trust account can be opened for as little as $25, and earnings are exempt from Kentucky taxes.
