Board approves first step of state mandate

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

The Floyd County Board of Education unanimously adopted a short-term plan Monday aimed at addressing findings of a state investigation into the school system.

Employing a certified public accountant to evaluate and oversee the system's finances will be one of the first issues addressed with the recommendation to be placed on the board's October agenda.

For over two hours Monday, board members listened as superintendent Steve Towler outlined the plan, the bulk of which deals with developing a considerable amount of administrative policies.

The plan basically agrees to implement all the state's recommendations in the areas of governance and leadership; instructional management; planning, maintenance; school construction; fiscal management; federal programs; and student transportation.

One recommendation that board members agreed would assist them in making decisions is to hold bi-monthly work sessions for board members. The sessions would involve discussion on concerns and issues plus learning about the district's instructional programs.

In order to determine how to implement recommendations in the short term plan and proposals to be included in the long term plan, board member Eddie Billips asked that a CPA be employed immediately to develop a five-year financial plan for the district.

Billips' request came when discussions centered on providing adequate funding to the schools to provide basic services, such as telephone service, maintenance supplies and cable television fees.

"Isn't this all the more reason that this CPA has to be on board immediately to get a handle on a five-year forecast and income stream of cash into this system to set up an operating budget per school per system?" Billips asked. "Well, there's no way you can get a handle on the financial situation of a school system without a person of that nature. And you can't do it year to year or semester to semester. It has to be set up on a long range, minimum three-year, more likely five-year projected income."

Superintendent Towler said he "totally supported" Billips' recommendation.

Billips also recommended that the board arrange an agreement with Prestonsburg Community College to teach site based decision making councils basic accounting principles in order to assist the councils in developing their school budgets.

All in all, board members were impressed with recommendations in the short-term plan, but one concern is providing the funding to implement the improvements in the plan.

After Monday's meeting, board member Tommy Boyd said funding for the recommendations would most likely come from a tax hike.

"How are we going to pay for all this?" Boyd asked. "We'll probably have to raise... taxes."

Before discussing the short-term plan Monday, Towler announced to

Grigsby says charge not true

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A Floyd County school official who has been accused of trying to intimidate a school employee into hiring an individual as an office manager for a Youth Service Center vehemently denied that allegation Monday.

Assistant superintendent Pete Grigsby Jr. said Monday that the allegations "shocked" him and as far as he was concerned the incident was "over with."

Betsy Layne High School principal Allan Osborne and members of the school's site based council filed a complaint against Grigsby with Floyd superintendent Steve Towler last week claiming Grigsby had tried to interfere with the hiring of an office manager for the school's Youth Service Center. The complaint said that Grigsby had directed Lola Brashear, a central office employee, to discuss the issue with a teacher at the school.

Teacher Meredith Tackett submitted a letter dated September 3 to Osborne which said that Brashear told her Grigsby was "unhappy" about the interview and hiring process for the position of office manager of the Youth Service Center for the school. The letter added that Grigsby told Brashear to tell Tackett "doesn't that girl know politics, doesn't she know how politics work" and that if Tack-

Hands link to create life chain

by Geoff Belcher

Hundreds are expected to join hands and hold signs at Boldman near the Pike-Floyd County line in a silent "prayerful, peaceful" protest of abortion this Sunday.

The "Life Chain" was organized by Alternatives, a volunteer crisis pregnancy center founded by Arnold Turner in 1983, which counsels hundreds of unwed mothers-to-be each year about options other than abortion to deal with an unwanted pregnancy.

Dorothy Stewardson, an Alternatives volunteer, said Tuesday that members of the group and parishioners of churches all across Pike and Floyd counties will hold signs saying "Abortion Kills Children!"

Stewardson stressed that the "Life Chain" will not be a radical protest rally, but a peaceful gathering of pro-life forces.

"Life Chain" will form at Boldman, near Harold, from 2-3 p.m. this Sunday, October 4. The public is urged to attend.

For further information, please call Pam Hall, Alternatives director, at 886-2025, or 1-800-633-9155.

Loafers hurting business

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

The Prestonsburg City Council responded to criticism concerning its recent hike of commercial solid waste removal hikes Monday evening, and heard complaints from a local restaurant manager who says that teens loitering in his parking lot are costing his business over $40,000 per year.

Tom Slack, manager of the Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers restaurant on U.S. 23 in Prestonsburg, told council members at their regularly scheduled meeting Monday evening that teenagers congregating at the restaurant at night were driving paying customers away and were creating a public nuisance.

The teens drink alcoholic beverages, use foul language, act "rowdy" and drive recklessly through the Wendy's parking lot, Slack said, not only costing the restaurant a conservatively estimated $40,000 annually but also costing the city over $800 per year in tourism taxes and $3,200 per year in income taxes. Slack added that the situation was having a similar effect on the neighboring Pizza Hut restaurant.

Slack said that Prestonsburg Police officers had begun issuing citations to the loiterers two weeks ago, improving the situation somewhat. However, Slack said, some teens had threatened vandalism and violence after receiving the citations. Also, Slack said, many of the parents of the teens cited refused to believe that their children were causing a nuisance and had complained that the police were acting unfairly.

Prestonsburg Chief of Police Greg Hall agreed with Slack's assessment, but added that even though many of the teens causing the problem were from out of town and would probably quit coming to Prestonsburg to avoid problems with the police, the parents of the Prestonsburg teens were likely to attempt to pressure the city council to instruct the police to stop issuing the citations.

Slack urged the city council to authorize increased police patrol of the sector and to possibly set up road checks in the parking lot in order to

Racing verdict stalled again

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Plans for Eastern Kentucky Racing, Incorporated's proposed Kentucky Downs Harness track trotted back to the drawing table Tuesday when the Kentucky Racing Commission tabled until late October discussion on whether or not the track would be allowed live racing dates.

The racing commission received an avalanche of criticism when at its September 1 meeting it approved live racing dates for every thoroughbred track in the state, but denied dates to Riverside Downs in Henderson and Kentucky Downs in Prestonsburg, two of only three harness racing tracks seeking approval.

In order to stem the onslaught of negative public opinion aroused by those actions, Governor Brereton Jones last week urged the commissioners to reconsider their decision.

Despite protests and threats of legal action by representatives of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association and Ellis Park, a thoroughbred track in Henderson, a committee of racing commissioners Monday reconsidered the applications for live racing of every thoroughbred and harness track in the state.

Although the committee granted Riverside Downs live dates, committee members felt Kentucky Downs' application should be brought before the entire commission on Tuesday for further consideration.

Former governor Julian Carroll, representing Eastern Kentucky Racing, opened Tuesday's meeting by submitting revised plans for the proposed track and asked that his client's application be reviewed on the same basis as every other track in Kentucky.

Commissioner Wayne Shumate, formerly the chairman of the now-defunct Harness Racing Commission, requested that the new commission accept Eastern Kentucky Racing's proposal.

"If we don't issue them (racing) dates today," Shumate said, "we may as well tell Eastern Kentucky Racing to forget about it."

Fiscal court eyeing Costain property

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Despite the Floyd County Fiscal Court's continued public opposition to a residual landfill proposed by Costain Coal, Incorporated, it is continuing negotiations with Costain to secure property to be used as an industrial site.

Floyd County Attorney Jim Hammond announced those intentions Thursday at a public Division of Waste Management hearing to determine whether or not Costain would be allowed to construct a residual landfill that will contain fly and bottom ash produced by the burning of Costain-mined coal.

Hammond said Tuesday that he, County Judge/Executive John M. Stumbo and the fiscal court had been negotiating with Costain officials to convince them to donate to the county over 500 acres of strip-mined property at Ivel's Stratton Branch located by the company's mining projects.

The property is ideal for an industrial development site, Hammond said, because it is out of the flood plain, has rail access, is close to both Pikeville and Prestonsburg, is less than eight miles away from the east/west highway systems of Route 80

Hays joins landfill opposition :

Moratorium proposed

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

The Ivel and Big Sandy Citizens Against Pollution received powerful support from a number of sources in their opposition to Costain Coal Incorporated's proposed residual landfill Thursday evening, including Fifth District Democratic candidate for the office of U.S. Representative John Doug Hays.

Hays was on hand Thursday evening for the second Kentucky Cabinet for Natural Resources Division of Waste Management public hearing to determine whether or not to approve Costain's permit application to construct the landfill.

Opponents of the landfill, which will contain fly and bottom ash produced by the burning of coal which Costain will supply to an out-of-state co-generating power plant, say that the proposed site is far too close to the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River, which supplies drinking water to much of Eastern Kentucky.

They feel that concentrations of heavy metals such as lead and arsenic in the ash could, either through flooding or drainage pond overflow, contaminate the river, thus causing tremendous environmental and health-related damage.

Those in favor of the landfill feel that such facilities are necessary in order for Kentucky to remain competitive with other coal-producing states and to boost Eastern Kentucky's coal-centered economy.

Hays said that although he had a great deal of respect for Costain and its officials and had no desire to endanger the coal industry, he felt the proposed landfill would begin the process of turning the region into a dumping ground for the rest of the

Trammell returns to work

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Carl D. Perkins Job Corps counselor Clarence Trammell Jr. said he was "ecstatic" Tuesday when he returned to work at the center which he sued last week after he opposed employment restrictions imposed by the company.

Trammell seeks reinstatement in a position as a counselor at the Prestonsburg center and immediate payment of back pay and benefits for the time he was suspended from his job after being charged with soliciting an assault on a student.

Charges of criminal solicitation against Trammell in January by David Garcia, a 17-year-old student at the center. Garcia alleged that he was the victim of an assault ordered by Trammell.

Those charges against Trammell were conditionally dismissed September 15 in Floyd District Court in an agreement that said the state would have a difficult time obtaining a conviction and Trammell did not want to risk a jury trial. The dismissal said that Trammell was to obey the laws of the commonwealth for six months.

Keith Bartley, an attorney representing Trammell, filed suit last week when Trammell received a letter from center director Edna Higgenbotham which said Trammell would be placed on probation as a new employee, that he would not receive back pay and benefits for six months and that he would be terminated if he was involved in any incident that would reflect negatively on the center.

Bartley received a faxed letter Friday from Carl R. Krasue, an attorney representing Career Systems Development Corporation, a company that operates the Prestonsburg Center, which said Trammell may return to work without any probationary period and at his current rate of pay.

The letter also said the issues of back pay and reinstatement in a counselor's position would be decided by the court.

"It's like the old maxim 'having your cake and eating it, too,'" Bartley said Monday. "It's usually that you have a lawsuit and no job or a job and no lawsuit. We feel like we've won two battle; now we just have to win the war."

In the meantime, Trammell says he enjoys being back at the center with the students.

"The staff's main purpose is to teach students social etiquette and social skills," Trammell said Tuesday. "We encourage the students to get their GED and skill so they can be productive in society. We teach students respect for themselves and others. We teach them pride because they are somebody. I'm happy to be back."

Trammell said students, old and new, "greeted him with open arms" when he reported for work Tuesday.

Drug raid results in arrest at Little Mud

A Sunday morning raid at a residence at Little Mud Creek by Kentucky State Police netted a large quantity of marijuana, drug paraphernalia and a cache of weapons.

State police executed a search warrant at a residence in Honaker and discovered 108 marijuana plants ranging from five feet to approximately 12 feet in height.

Officers also found and confiscated three to four pounds of processed marijuana and seized 10 weapons found in the residence.

KSP troopers Bobby Day, Tim Mullins, David Maynard and Bobby Johnson participated in the search. The case is under investigation by KSP detective Les Stapleton and arrests are expected.

curtail the teen's drinking of alcoholic beverages.

Mayor Ann Latta and council members sympathized with Slack's problem and offered as much support as the city could afford, but said that the city's resources were limited. Councilman Gorman Collins suggested that Slack also contact the Floyd County Sheriff's department and request additional patrols.

Also at Monday's meeting, Latta and council members responded to claims that the city's recent increase of commercial waste removal rates was unfair.

Prior to the state's temporary closure of the Floyd County landfill, Latta said, the city had to pay $2,700 per month to dispose of waste. Now, Latta said, the city is paying $2,500 per week. Latta said that the current rate, $3 per cubic yard, is still much less than businesses in other Eastern Kentucky cities pay. She added that this is the first hike in commercial garbage removal rates in over 15 years.

Latta suggested that businesses flatten cardboard boxes placed in dumpsters in order to lessen space used, and added that the council had formed a solid waste committee including council members Lida Howard, Jerry Fannin and Mike Vance to study the waste problem and ways to cope with it.

Among other items discussed at Monday's Prestonsburg City Council meeting:

- the council approved the placement of sobriety check points in the city, funded by a state grant, in order to detect and deter persons driving under the influence of intoxicating substances. The project was proposed by Prestonsburg police officer Sue Blackburn. Blackburn said that the check points were the best and safest way to stop drunk drivers. Blackburn also urged that minors caught with alcoholic beverages be taken to city hall and their parents called to pick them up. This practice would help discourage underage drinking, Blackburn said.

- The council agreed to cash in an $89,000 certificate of deposit in order to meet the payroll and pay off some bills. The city also has a $71,000 certificate of deposit in reserve.

- Council members approved the finance committee's recommendation that no items be purchased outside the purchase order system except on an emergency basis in order to curtail unnecessary spending.

- The council authorized city administrator Mark Wells to begin advertising for bids for liability and property insurance.

- The city of Prestonsburg was recently inducted into the Hall of Fame of Certified Cities. Kentucky's Chamber of Commerce will conduct a ceremony at 2 p.m. Friday, October 2 to present the city with a new sign commemorating the induction.

- Latta said that the Prestonsburg Police Department was not responsible for directing traffic at the intersection of U.S. 23 and Ky. 114, not only because police do not normally direct traffic at construction sites but also because the area is a bottleneck and there is nowhere to direct traffic to right now. The situation should ease up within the next two weeks, Latta said.

- The city voted to accept the Administration/Personnel committee's recommendation of 12 new volunteer fire fighters.

- Council members are investigating the possibility of installing a recycling center.

Monday's Prestonsburg City Council meeting ended with a closed executive session to discuss pending litigation. No action was reported.

Only Councilman Charles Hale was absent from Monday's meeting.

The Prestonsburg City Council meets at 6 p.m. on the second and fourth Monday of every month. The public is urged to attend.

Joint sheriff's operation nabs Knott County man

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A joint operation between the Floyd and Knott County sheriff's departments Sunday resulted in the arrest of a Knott County man on drug charges.

The simultaneous raids were also a maneuver to prove the effectiveness of forming a six-county Drug Task Force in Eastern Kentucky.

Charles Hicks of Hufftown Road in Mousie, was charged with possession of marijuana, over eight ounces and cultivation of marijuana after officers found processed marijuana and suspected marijuana seeds in two residences owned by Hicks.

Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson and Knott County Sheriff Jim Amburgey coordinated their efforts to raid Hicks' residences in Knott and Floyd counties.

At Hicks' Floyd County residence, sheriff's deputies seized what appeared to be a substantial amount of marijuana seeds and three weapons.

At the Knott County residence, officers seized processed marijuana and seized three motorized vehicles.

Hicks was lodged in the Knott County Jail and will be transported to Floyd County to face charges at a later date.

Thompson, Amburgey and four other Eastern Kentucky sheriffs have applied for a federal grant to form an undercover drug task force in Eastern Kentucky to deal with street level drug pushers.

"This is excellent training for deputies from another department," Thompson said. "It forms a closer working relationship by working together and we can accomplish a great deal more than what we have in the past. Drug dealing and crime does not stop at county lines."

Knott County sheriff Jim Amburgey said that the last step in forming the task force is approval for the grant by the Justice Cabinet.

"I hope that after this cooperative effort by the Knott and Floyd County sheriff's departments the Justice Cabinet will view our application with favor," Amburgey said. "We have a serious drug problem in Eastern Kentucky by being the primary grower of marijuana in the state and the nation. It's not getting any better. We welcome all the help we can get, especially from the federal government."

Amburgey added that similar task forces have already been formed around the state.

Property

and Route 3 and already has working water, sewage, gas and electric systems.

Hammond said that Eastern Kentucky's mountainous topography, not geographic location, limits prospective businesses from locating in the region. In fact, Hammond said, Eastern Kentucky is the center of a 13-state area with more than 68 percent of the nation's population and a great deal of the nation's fossil fuel resources.

Floyd Fiscal Court is also negotiating with Costain to build a bridge to the Stratton Branch property, Hammond said, utilizing a 1978 change in laws that allows the federal government to provide counties 80 percent of the cost to build bridges. Costain has donated $180,000 toward the county's 20 percent share of construction costs.

Hammond said the project was mutually beneficial to both the county and the company, because it would allow two access points to that side of the river, one at Tram and one at Ivel. The plan has been on the table since 1978, Hammond said, kept alive mainly due to Stumbo's efforts, and has been incorporated into the state's six-year highway plan.

The project is to begin immediately, Hammond said, with the state highway department to perform core drilling tests October 5 to determine whether or not the bridge would have an adequate, stable foundation.

Hammond said that although the fiscal court is at odds with Costain concerning the residual landfill, Costain's management team, particularly vice president Jack McNichol, were men of good character and extreme integrity.

"We just see things in a different light," Hammond said. "I think there's a position that would benefit both sides."

Footing the bill

by Scott Perry

Have to admit that the city was most apologetic in its letter this week announcing that our rate for trash disposal would increase immediately by 900 percent.

We can't deny that our costs for garbage disposal have been a bargain for quite awhile, so we have no complaint about being assessed for our fair share of the ever-increasing expenses for solid waste disposal.

Unfortunately, our business and every other commercial customer in Prestonsburg isn't being asked to pay their fair shares of the higher costs. They're being required to foot the entire bill.

Residential customers have seen no increase in their costs for trash pick up, while commercial rates like ours have jumped nine and tenfold.

That, no matter how you look at it, isn't a fair share, it's a subsidy. The pockets for most in the Prestonsburg business community certainly aren't deep enough to stand much more.

Truth shall set you free

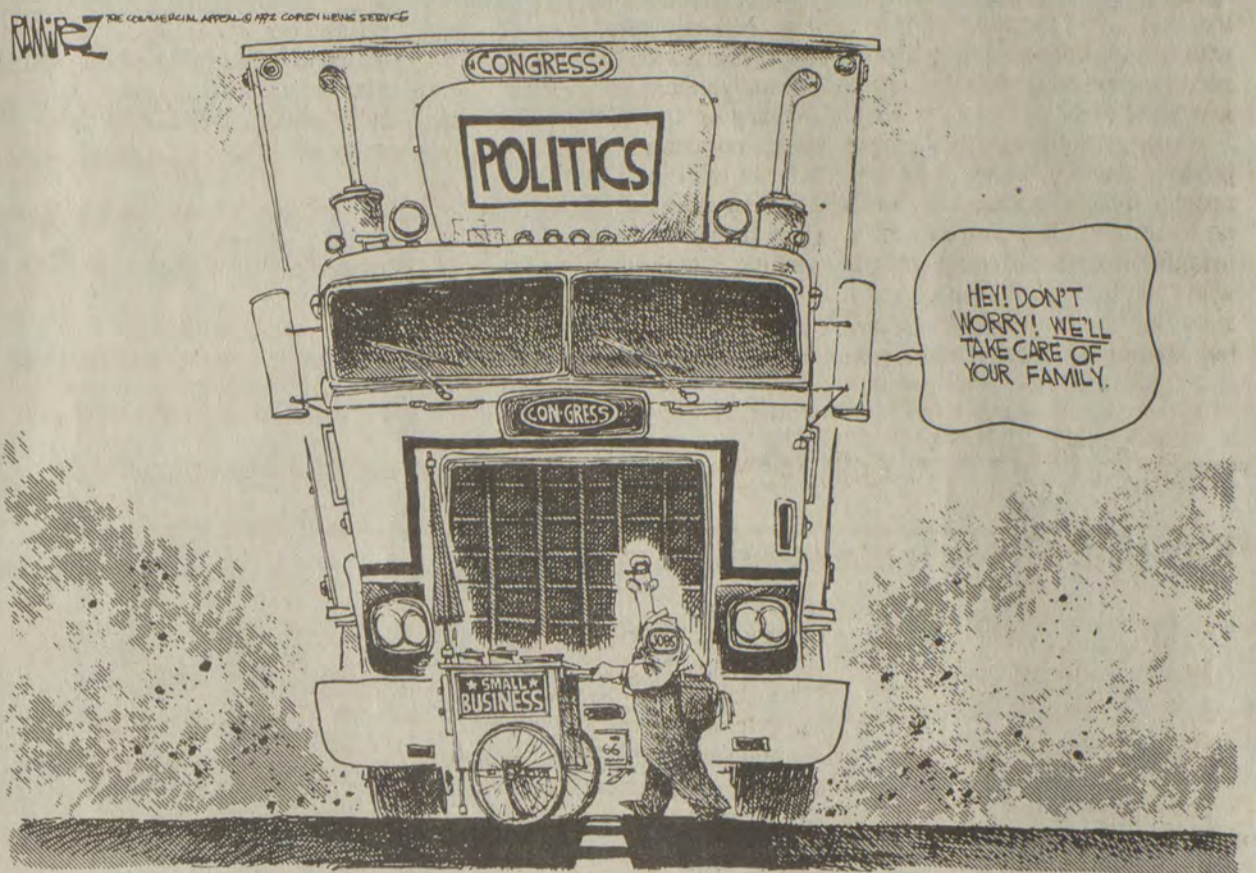

If you haven't seen it, an article by Herald-Leader columnist Merelene Davis in Tuesday's edition took an unusual turn on the old road to Eastern Kentucky.

It said something nice.

Davis, who admitted she was not looking forward to a trip to Prestonsburg, "a supposedly backward" small town in the mountains, confessed her surprise at how this city "acts like the center of a new and progressive world."

There's nothing like a visit to the mountains to make even our most severe critics converts to the truth.

Y'all come back now, Y'hear.

Looking for information

Editor:
Some of your readers are either former students, staff, or friends of Hazel Green Academy in Wolfe County. I appeal to them to help me in finding any information about HGA sports teams, especially basketball. Prior to basketball, it is my understanding that baseball was the primary sport at the Academy.

My goal is to publish a book about HGA sports by next summer before homecoming. I want it to cover the entire life of the Academy from its 1880 founding to its closure in August, 1983. I would welcome any contributions from anyone, such as written memories, schedules and scores (especially needed), team rosters, tournament programs, pictures (please date and identify people), and newspaper clippings. School yearbooks, even from other schools, could have references to HGA, such as scores and where games were played. The names of coaches, players, and cheerleaders are needed for every year and season. Please help, old-timers: there is very little information about teams from 1880 to 1947.

If anyone will mail me original items or photocopies of same, I will pay for postage and copying. I will return items loaned to me, promptly. Any contributions to this book will be properly credited and acknowledged in the book.

This may be the first and only time such a book will ever be printed on this subject: please help soon to allow ample time to turn out a complete and thorough history. Thank you very much.

Editor gives echo to a false report

Editor:
Again, I'm surprised to get Friday's Floyd County Times on Tuesday; Wednesday's issue came 8 days later. Anyway, anytime, they're good Times.

This time I want to respond to the Inez writer's bashing of the Supreme Court. Lamentably, that editor gives echo to a viciously false report of the Court's ruling on the Constitution's Church-State clause. More lamentably, highly placed officials in organized church bodies and in Government are shamelessly waving this spurious flag of religious suppression in order to achieve or advance or retain their positions of power!

The Supreme Court said to Madilyn O'Hare: Your child may not be required by the government (School Board, or other agency) to participate in a prescribed religious prayer service. Politicized distortions and extensions of and from that eminently sound ruling are deplorable indeed!

It is to be hoped that the "meet me at the pole" rallies manifest better and more honest understanding and tolerance than appear in the Martin County editorial. Please know that your loyalty to your religion and church and government, and your right to pray your prayer are not one whit threatened by the Supreme Court of the United States, or by the Constitution under which we live with Freedom, priceless individual freedom.

Carbon tax could kill mining industry

Editor:
I think the people of Kentucky should read Al Gore's book "Earth in the Balance" before November 3. about Gore's suggestion that the federal government start taxing carbon-dioxide emissions.

This carbon tax would add dollars and dollars to the price of Kentucky coal and jeopardize 30,000 mining jobs, this would kill the mining industry.

Coal is such a major part of our energy strength. We cannot afford to let this happen.

Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

Can't say that we were too surprised by the Lexington Herald-Leader's latest expose which suggests a good many Kentuckians (with a usual emphasis on Eastern Kentuckians) are zonked-out pill-popping zombies whose lives are ruled by prescription painkillers.

Abuse of prescription drugs is certainly not a new problem. During a visit to a doctor's office some fifteen years ago, we noted that refills of "red nerve medicine," also known as phenobarbital, were being dispensed from a water cooler.

Nor is the abuse of prescription drugs exclusive to our area. We suspect there are more abusers of "legitimate" drugs in this country than the sum total of all the potheads, crackheads and coke snorters combined.

To be truly successful, any so-called War on Drugs needs to target over-prescribers with the same enthusiasm it uses on drug traffickers.

There is no difference between the two.

The voters in a dozen or more states will decide this November whether or not to apply statutory term limits on their elected officials.

In an area where an elected office quite often becomes a personal fiefdom, it isn't hard to sympathize with such a movement.

On the down side, setting mandatory term limits would tend to absolve the voters of taking responsibility for their government, which is kind of scary.

If we can't trust ourselves to make change when change is needed, what hope is there for the future of democracy?

If we hadn't been in such a hurry to get home, we might have gone door-to-door last week in a scenic section of western Virginia to ask the folks there how they managed to keep their homes and countryside so beautifully litter-free.

Nowhere along a 40-mile stretch of country road between Interstate 77 and Tazawell, Virginia, did we see a single rusting out car shoved over the creekbank or a single home obscured by garbage. Come to think of it, we don't recall seeing a single beer can or fast food wrapper along the roadside, either.

What do they know that we don't know, and how can we find out?

This has got to be the goofiest presidential campaign ever.

First you've got a president who declines to debate his challenger, presumably because all of his debate time is being spent bantering back and forth with fictional TV characters Murphy Brown and Bart Simpson.

Then you've got a challenger whose been about as honest as the average American on tax day, expecting us to believe he smoked marijuana but didn't inhale, didn't attempt to evade the draft, didn't use political influence to not evade the draft, didn't mean to if he did and we should trust him to never lie again unless it's absolutely necessary to protect his own hide.

Top all that off with a third party, mabe-I-will, maybe-I-won't candidate with a bazillion dollars just waiting to be flung at the American public the next time somebody calls him "Shorty," and you've got one doozy of a race.

Sounds more like a Looney Tunes cartoon to us.

Unfortunately, Th, th, th, th, th, that's all, folks.

Hollywood, and Washington, D.C. sway family values

Editor:
Dan Quayle is right. Hollywood does promote an image counter to family values. But so does Washington, D.C. and a federal government with an incomprehensibly irresponsible 4 trillion dollar debt. So, to hell with all of them.
Shame on hollywood for daring to produce material that the American people willingly consume like there's no tomorrow. Shame on television manufacturers for not equipping sets with "off" buttons. Shame on video stores for forcing people to rent and buy movies made by directors who think they invented sex. Why won't Hollywood free us from the bondage of our own stupidity and let us watch C-SPAN?

There are only a few meaningful conclusions that can be drawn from the 1992 campaign for mediocrity. First of all, now that I have removed my cold war hardhat, I can say with a genuine amount of embarrassment that Mikhail Gorbachev makes George Bush look like Woody Allen. Secondly, there are certain fixed, unchanging truths that are neither liberal nor conservative, and are incapable of being enhanced or hindered by politics. Third, there are some people so concerned with remaining in their liberal or conservative stereotypes they forget to be human beings. Fourth, liberals and conservatives share an equality of lunacy which makes them virtually inseparable, and the desire to be a moderate merely reveals a hidden, erroneous belief that either of the two extremes contain a trace of validity. Fifth, as Dr. Gene Scott often says, the price of freedom is association with nuts and the only government that gets rid of nuts is one that's nutty at the top.

Last, but not least, the persons elected to public office are supposed to be servants of the American people, and it's about time they whip their pompous behinds into shape and start acting like servants!
Barring a tragedy, George Bush should have plenty of free time to work on his golf swing.

'Backward' town is actually a step ahead

by Merlene Davis
Herald-Leader columnist

The morning was damp from the night's rain and the air was heavy with moisture. Those conditions are not good for my bones or my hairdo. I knew I wasn't going to have a good day.

To top it off, I was supposed to drive two hours to Prestonsburg to speak to a group of college kids about the future.

I didn't want to go, but I had promised. In situations like that, I usually find something after it's all over that makes the effort well worth it. But it looked like I was going to have to stretch my mind a lot to come up with something good that day.

Prestonsburg, home of Prestonsburg Community College where I was to speak, has a little more than 4,000 residents, but it acts like the center of a new and progressive world. I learned that later.

And that, as it turns out, was the something good that came out of a dreary day. At PCC, I was scheduled to talk about Modern Social Problems: African Americans, A Perspective of the Future, or something like that, which I thought was rather intriguing. There aren't that many black people in Prestonsburg or Floyd County, so why would the students or the college professors even worry about a black perspective?

A couple of days after my appearance, a distinguished panel of educators was scheduled to talk about the same thing, and the president of Kentucky State University was scheduled to speak a week later.

Were the PCC students doing this out of a desire to learn more about the world around them? I was impressed. Prestonsburg is far more progressive than Lexington in many ways. It is home to a Children's Museum of Art, perhaps the future home of the Kentucky Opry and a harness track, site of Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, the college—and three of the most aggressive women any one community should be allowed to have.

One, Deborah Floyd, is the president of PCC. She was my personal tour guide of the area. She pointed out the state park and all its splendor before lunch and the city afterward.

Nestled in between was a casual comment that almost caused me to choke. Floyd said that Prestonsburg has more than a female college president. It also has a female mayor, Ann Latta, and a female president of the chamber of commerce, Tedi Vaughn. In Kentucky? There's a progressive thinking community in this state that thinks women are capable of running things?

Looking around with my mouth open, I realized the park was named for a woman and so was the city's bank, The Bank Josephine.

What kind of men could possibly live in such an area? Could they actually be comfortable with their masculinity, with who they are, without feeling threatened by the obviously powerful presence of women?

I know the wise money is betting Lexington will have a woman mayor after the elections in November.

But I can't help but smile when I think how a small mountain town in supposedly backward Eastern Kentucky did it first. And did it well.

MICKY MOUSE COMICS BANNED

Mickey Mouse, an "anti-Red rebel?"

That's not the first thought that comes to the minds of most people when they think of Walt Disney's familiar character; yet, that's what he was called in East Berlin in 1954 after a school raid by Communists. Mickey Mouse comics were then banned in that part of Germany, according to Anne Lyon Haight's Banned Books 387 B.C. to 1978 A.D.

You might be surprised at some of the books that have been banned or challenged at one time or another. The list of banned books around the world includes the Bible, the American Heritage Dictionary, Gone With the Wind, The Adventures of Tom Sawyer and Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Surprised?

I read banned books every day, I suppose. I've read most of the above titles, although I'll have to admit that I've yet to read the Bible cover to cover, much less the American Heritage Dictionary. I don't think it's done any irreparable damage to me, either. In fact, the reality is that because I was raised to be allowed to select my own reading material, I developed a love of books that led me to become a librarian. I know people who are scared of the library, who tell me that a place with "all those books" makes them nervous, and I can't help but wonder if this isn't a leftover effect from someone telling them that some books were "bad" when they were children.

This is Banned Books Week, 1992. It's a week set aside to help people remember that the freedom to choose what they want to read can be taken away more easily than most people may think. Many people believe that book censorship doesn't happen in America, much less in Kentucky, but it does. Two of Arthur Miller's best-known works, The Crucible and Death of a Salesman, were challenged at Pulaski County High School and referred to as "junk." William Faulkner's As I Lay Dying was banned in both Mayfield and Somerset in the 1980's. The Rolling Stone Illustrated History of Rock and Roll was challenged in Jefferson County on the grounds that it "will cause our children to become immoral and indecent." Tell that to an Elvis fan.

According to Newsweek magazine, the watchdog group People for the American Way reported "that school censorship attempts...rose 50 percent during the 1991-92 academic year. Forty percent succeeded, making it the worst year on record." That scares me. I was told at a conference this past summer that the national book chain, WaldenBooks, has certain books which they have programmed their computers not to order. Now, I may not have any interest in those particular books myself, but I feel anger for the people who may want to order these books and find they can't and I especially resent someone telling me what I can and cannot purchase to read.

Magic Johnson has a book out that's targeted for teenagers, What You Can Do To Avoid Aids. Several major retailers are refusing to order the book, including two in this area. This fact disturbs me, as well. If I had a teenager, possibly one who would listen to a sports hero like Magic Johnson before he or she would listen to me, I would like to think I could easily purchase the book and give it to them. AIDS is an important enough topic that it needs to be presented in whatever format it takes to get the message across to those who need to know the consequences...but that's another story for another day. The point now is that censorship affects not only adults, but children and future adults, as well.

Censorship.
Banned books.
Think about it.

Landfill agreement stirs GROWL conflict

Members of a Greenup County environmental group that worked together for five years to stop the opening of what would have been the largest landfill in Kentucky are growling now among themselves.

Some members of Greenup Residents Opposed to Waste Landfill (GROWL) are angry because the group's leaders signed a compromise agreement last week with Addington Resources Inc., settling a lawsuit that had delayed the landfill's opening for more than three years.

That pact resolves all disputes between Addington's Green Valley Environmental Corp. and GROWL with respect to administrative and judicial challenges filed by GROWL and its complaintiff, Kentuckians for the Commonwealth (KFTC).

Among other stipulations, the agreement limits the size of Green Valley's landfill, near Argillite, to 138 acres. The original application was permitted for 937 acres. — The Daily Independent, Ashland

Teddy bear industry could be good news

Dollars in your garbage can? That could be the case if Randy Osborne has anything to do with it? Randy has been in the recycling business for several years in Michigan and now he is thinking of opening shop in Eastern Kentucky.

Osborne told the Martin County Sun recently that he is looking for locations in Martin, Johnson, Floyd, Lawrence and Magoffin counties that would be suitable for a recycling center. According to Osborne, such a center would employ about 120 local people, provide 4 to 12 jobs for each surrounding county at various pick-up sites, and promote a cleaner environment.

If the recycling center ever becomes a reality, Osborne said, it could open the door to even greater opportunities. Osborne says that most of the stuffed toys are made in foreign countries and imported into the United States by Fortune 500 toy companies. His idea is to use the recycled materials in a local toy factory, thus providing even more jobs for local folk.

Osborne is conducting an informative seminar entitled "How Recycling Can Help Eastern Kentucky" at the Highland House Restaurant in Paintsville on October 9 at 7 p.m. There is no admission and the coffee is free! — The Martin County Sun

Man found dead in Big Sandy Jail

A Breathitt County man who had been incarcerated at the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center, Paintsville, was found dead last Tuesday evening in his jail cell.

Carlos Campbell, 32, was pronounced dead at the facility by Johnson County Coroner J.R. Frisby, who said that Campbell had been dead for approximately 15 minutes before being discovered.

Campbell had been taken to the doctor the day before his death to be treated for an ulcer, said Thurman Tackett, jail administrator. An autopsy was ordered. — Mountain Citizen, Inez

Martin County boy killed in car accident

An 11-year-old Martin County boy was killed Friday when he ran into the path of a car on Old KY 3 at Davella.

Joshua Cook was walking north in the northbound lane shortly before 7 p.m. when Louise Collins of Deborn, who was driving north, swerved into the southbound lane to avoid hitting him. At the same time, Joshua ran into the southbound lane, a state police press release said.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Martin County Deputy Coroner Mitchell Preece. No charges were filed. — The Courier-Journal

New technology sheds light

A long-burning electronic light bulb, known as the E-lamp, is the first of a new generation of lighting technology. A comparison between old and new bulbs:

|------------------------------|-----------------------|
| Standard incandescent | New E-lamp |
| Lasts: 6 months | Lasts: 10 to 20 years |
| Cost: $2 or less | Cost: $10 to $20 |

Technology: A metal filament glows when electricity passes through it.

Technology: A magnetic coil generates a radio signal that mixes with the same gas used in fluorescent lights and forms a plasma. The plasma causes a phosphor coating on the inside of the bulb to glow.

Advantages: Fits most sockets; uses one-quarter the energy; generates less heat.

nation. Hays also said that Eastern Kentucky and Floyd County in particular would suffer great losses in the effort to boost tourism and industrial development if the landfill were allowed.

Hays endorsed a proposal by Floyd County Attorney Jim Hammond to request that Governor Brereton Jones declare a moratorium on such projects until a special committee could be formed to study the situation and submit findings and suggestions to the next legislative session.

Hammond said that although the Floyd Fiscal Court had in the past had discussions with Costain representatives to secure leveled property to be used as an industrial development site, the court had issued a resolution saying it was firmly against any project that would bring out-of-county waste into Floyd County that had the possibility, no matter how small, to endanger the environment and ecology of the region or the health of its people.

Bill Caylor, of the Kentucky Coal Operator's Association, said Thursday that Costain officials such as vice president Jack McNichol and engineers Mike Francisco and Tom Mattox were men of great integrity who had taken great pains to ensure that the facility was environmentally safe. Costain should be applauded, Caylor said, not penalized, for its efforts to construct the landfill site at standards higher even than state regulations required.

Caylor also said that there was a growing trend in the nation to grant long-term contracts to coal producers that were willing to take care of the disposal of fly and bottom ash. With the current slump in the coal market, with prices at their lowest point in years, Caylor said, Eastern Kentucky should jump on the bandwagon and reap the benefits.

Dale McKinney, owner of radio station WMDJ, ridiculed Caylor's remarks, asking the assembled audience "How many believe those lies?"

McKinney said that Costain's attempts to bring the landfill to Floyd County would amount to "cash today, grief tomorrow," and compared the London, England-owned company's actions to England's underestimation of the American people during the Revolutionary War.

McNichol said that all the employees at Costain's Pikeville facility lived in Eastern Kentucky, had a very personal stake in protecting the local environment and would in fact resist the landfill proposal if they felt it was not environmentally sound. Also, McNichol said, there were only minute traces of heavy metals in the ash to be stored at the Ivel landfill. McNichol added that earlier statements that implied coal ash was acidic were false and that fly and bottom ash are actually alkaline, used in some cases to counteract acid run-off.

Hammond said that, according to Costain's own estimates, over 150 million tons of ash per year would be deposited in the landfill, with a concentration of over 1,500 tons of heavy metals. Over the 20 year span of Costain's contract, Hammond said, that would amount to over 30,000 tons of lead, arsenic, cadmium, mercury and other metals lumped in a seven-acre area, less than 500 feet from the river. Hammond added that if 50 other mining companies, just one-twelfth of the over 600 mines in the seven-county region, put in similar operations, there would be over 1,000,500 tons of heavy metals dumped in Eastern Kentucky.

"That old commercial says a little dab will do ya," Hammond said, "but a little dab o' this will do you in."

Hammond also said that in the short-term, no jobs would be lost if Costain were not allowed to construct the landfill because the coal market has been fairly stable even though there are fewer coal producers in the state. However, Hammond said, potential future jobs could be lost if the company were allowed to install the facility because the implication, either real or imaginary, that the site would present an environmental hazard would deter other companies from locating in Floyd County.

On Monday, Mattox responded to charges made by Ivel and Big Sandy Citizens co-vice president Troy Cole, who, referring to the 1990 Pyro Mining disaster in which ten miners were killed in an explosion, said that Costain had the second worst mining safety record in the nation.

Mattox said that Costain had only owned the Pyro mine one month when the disaster occurred, so that even though Costain bore full responsibility, the poor dust and methan conditions that caused the explosion were actually produced by the mine's former owners.

Mattox said that just two months ago, Costain's Eastern Kentucky branch received three safety awards.

Paris Charles, safety director for Costain, said Monday that the company was very safety-conscious and aggressively involved employees in safety training and techniques. Charles said that Costain's Eastern Kentucky branch's accident rate was well below the national average according to Mine Safety and Health Administration figures.

Mattox said that the Cabinet for Natural Resources had found nothing wrong with Costain's application for the site and had asked the company to review only three minor points concerning dust control, the 100-year flood plain and an Ivel resident with a water well.

The application for the proposed site has passed the second, or "administrative," phase of the review process and is currently in the third or "technical" phase of review.

Documents related to the application are available for public review at the Floyd County Judge/Executive's office in Prestonsburg and at the Division of Waste Management's office at 14 Reilly Road in Frankfort.

The Division of Waste Management will publicly announce whether or not to approve Costain's permit application and will allow 30 days for those disagreeing with the decision to appeal.

House approves more funds for veteran's clinic

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

The United States House of Representatives last week approved the grant of $375,000 in additional funds to the Veteran's Administration Outpatient Clinic in Prestonsburg.

The additional funding was included in a compromise spending bill outlining funds to be spent for the 1992-1993 fiscal year by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and several independent government agencies.

In a press release issued Friday, 5th District U.S. Representative Harold Rogers, R-Somerset, said the funds were provided to aid in the clinic's upcoming expansion.

The Veteran's Administration's original plan for the clinic underestimated the needs of Eastern Kentucky veterans, Rogers said, and the clinic has been overcrowded and understaffed.

The $375,000 will be used to expand the waiting room area, build additional examination rooms and to hire an additional doctor, nurse and pharmacist.

"I'm hopeful that the President will sign the measure quickly so that we can move ahead with plans for a desperately needed expansion," Rogers said. "As it stands right now, clinic space and staff are both stretched to the limit, and it has to grow."

Racing

Henry Miller, president of Lexington's Red Mile harness racing facility, told the commissioners that in order for the harness industry in the state to survive, there had to be multiple tracks to provide a harness circuit.

However, racing commissioners still felt that the Prestonsburg track's plans were not specific enough and tabled discussion until the commission's next regularly scheduled meeting to be held Tuesday, October 27.

Commissioner Mike Fulkerson said after the meeting that several details of Eastern Kentucky Racing's proposal, such as the track's location and property owners, were inconsistent.

Fulkerson said that members of the commission would be meeting with Eastern Kentucky Racing officials next week to streamline and finalize all details of the plan for resubmittal.

Eastern Kentucky Racing's president Clyde Woods and attorneys Ched Jennings and Julian Carroll could not be reached for comment.

Board

the board that a hearing to set the tax rate for the coming year will be held 30 minutes prior to the October 13 regular board meeting at Adams Middle School.

Towler added that his recommendation would be a four percent tax increase.

Billips said after Monday's meeting, he would not support any tax increase for the coming year.

"I absolutely, absolutely will not vote for any tax raise in any form or fashion," Billips said. "This board has not demonstrated to the public it has accounted for the tax dollars it has now. For two years I've tried to get this board to hire a CPA to set up a five-year plan to show the public where they're tax money is going. In my opinion we are not accounting for the money we're already receiving from taxes. And after all, we've just gone through the biggest tax increase we've ever seen for education. Let's show some accountability for that tax increase."

The plan also calls for employing additional administrative personnel—a public relations director and an assistant superintendent for facilities management.

A state recommendation to reorganize the central office instructional team and to redefine administrative job duties is not expected to be implemented until the 1993 school year.

Of the 85 recommendations made by the state Department of Education, the short term plan addresses 36 of the issues raised by the state and notes that 15 of the recommendations have been completed. The remaining items were determined to be "long term" items that will be addressed in the district's long-term plan due to be finished in December.

Listed as items completed were:

- appointment of a district treasurer;
- implementation of training programs and coordination of instructional activities;
- implementation of the family resource center concept in each school;
- completion of an investigation into the Left Beaver High School construction project;
- elimination of open-ended contracts with the construction manager and make payments on a percentage of completion basis;
- receipt of monthly reports on the district's investments;
- cessation of further action on a new Prestonsburg High School;
- the appointment of a broad-based committee to review the district's facility plan;
- implementation of individual school accounting procedures;
- reduction of child counts in the Chapter I program; and
- requirement of principals to be responsible for special education student referrals and tracking.

The short term plan is to be given to Education Commissioner Thomas Boyesen for review, Towler said. Towler said the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education would not review the two plans until the January 1993 meeting of the state board.

Boyesen will conduct a public hearing to receive citizens' comments on the plan October 6 at 7 p.m. at the Jenny Wiley Convention Center. The hearing is open to the public.

Grigsby

ett "wanted an enemy" she would get "an enemy."

"It hurts me for them to think I'd try to do something like that," Grigsby said Monday. "That memo (alleges) something that's not true. They're trying to make me the fall guy."

Grigsby explained that the situation came about when the principal and council didn't inform him when interviews were being conducted at the school for the center office manager. Grigsby said that superintendent Towler had directed him to sit in on the interviews to ensure that federal laws were followed during the interviews because a handicapped applicant was applying for the position.

Brashear was asked "to mention" to Tackett that Grigsby was "disappointed" he was left out of the interviews, Grigsby said. Grigsby said Towler discussed the incident with him after the complaint was filed and Towler told him "not to worry about it" and that he believed Grigsby's account of the situation.

Brashear said Monday that it was "a conversation between two friends" and that she "was directed to speak" to Tackett about "bypassing Pete."

Brashear denied that she mentioned anything about politics or about Tackett making an enemy. Brashear added that superintendent Towler was concerned that Grigsby was not informed when the interviews were scheduled.

Betsy Layne principal Allan Osborne declined to discuss specifics of the incident, but said the issue was a concern.

"From our standpoint, the school council had to make a decision and we had several choices," Osborne said. "We decided to send a letter to the superintendent and the board. We made our point."

Towler said Monday that he had only talked with Grigsby about the incident and Grigsby said Tackett's account was incorrect.

"Mr. Grigsby didn't indicate he said anything quoted in the memo," Towler said. "I'm not going to reprimand Mr. Grigsby. The council strongly disapproved of the words between Miss Brashear and Miss Tackett, that point's been made. Mr. Grigsby didn't tell Miss Brashear to go up there. Mr. Grigsby was not directly involved, he was indirectly involved."

Grigsby said that he was worried that Towler thought he wasn't doing his job.

"I felt that I let Dr. Towler down," Grigsby said Monday. "I thought he may have felt that I was being insubordinate because I didn't sit in on the interviews."

"Dr. Towler talked to me about the memo and he told me to forget it," Grigsby said. "I far as I'm concerned it's over with, the allegations are untrue and I'll stand behind that."

Public service groups receive grants from IOLTA

Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of KY, Inc. will get a piece of the IOLTA's (Kentucky Interest on Lawyers' Trust) legal pie. Twenty-six groups will receive grants totaling $250,000 from IOLTA program. Appalachian Research and Defense Fund's (Appalred) Pro Bono legal service program will receive $44,160. The Pro Bono service, which encourages private attorneys to accept low-income clients without charging a fee, is a spin-off of Appalred, said Frank Carlton, Pro Bono coordinator with Appalred.

Appalred currently employs 24 attorneys to service low-income residents in a 37-county area of South-eastern Kentucky. In recent years, that figure was higher — in 1981, Appalred employed 48 attorneys. Appalred is funded by the government, but "the funding has not increased as rapidly as inflation," Carlton said.

The number of low-income families is also increasing. In 1979, census figures estimated that 230,000 families were within poverty level guidelines. In 1989, that figure rose to 245,000 families.

"Attorneys have a professional obligation to see that even folks who don't have an attorney, who can't afford an attorney, get justice in the court system," Carlton said. "The Kentucky Bar Association adopted rules of conduct that encourage attorneys to take on low-income clients and provide them with legal service." Carlton explained that 12 percent of the caseload for each legal service must involve private attorneys.

So, in 1989, the Pro Bono program began. Carlton stressed that private attorney acceptance is voluntary.

In order to assist the needs for the Pro Bono programs in Kentucky, IOLTA has distributed $111,270 in grants to seven Pro Bono programs throughout Kentucky. The grants are based on applications submitted for the funding.

Vanishing act

Pikeville College Assistant Professor of Chemistry, Mark Sund, explains the consequences of the Earth's vanishing ozone layer. The seminar is one of a series offered by the Math-Science center each Tuesday at 3 p.m. in the Armington Building, room 301. Next week the topic will be "Better phone networks and other triumphs of graph theory". All seminars are free to the public and coffee and cookies are served at 2:45 p.m.

Public transportation now available

Through the efforts of those involved with Sandy Valley Transportation, public transportation is now available for Martin, Johnson and Eastern Pike county residents, with plans to expand this service in Floyd and Magoffin counties in the near future.

A non-profit organization, Sandy Valley Transportation services, based in Prestonsburg, operates Monday through Friday in the counties described with service for anyone in need of public transportation.

Sandy Valley Transportation, works under the guidelines established by state and federal Departments of Transportation. They began by offering non-emergency medical transportation to Lexington. This non-emergency service is still available to those in need of transportation to out-of-town doctors.

Schedules for bus services in Martin, Johnson and East Pike county can be obtained at their office located on South Lake Drive in Prestonsburg in the Big Sandy Area Development Building or from any of their bus drivers. For appointments and other information, please call their toll-free number during business hours: 1-800-444-RIDE (7433).

Learns radio repair

Pvt. Rodney E. Woods has completed a multichannel communications equipment systems operator course at Fort Gordon in Augusta, Georgia.

Students learned to install, operate and repair radio relay and multiplexing equipment used in telephone and telegraph communications systems.

Woods is the son of Darwin and Gwendolyn Woods of Bevinville. He is a 1991 graduate of Wheelwright High School.

Appalred's program is expanding. In 1989, the program placed 78 clients with private attorneys; in 1990, 136 cases were placed. Last year 211 cases were placed, and this year, they're shooting for 250, Carlton said.

The funding is recommended by the IOLTA Board of Trustees, but must be approved by the Kentucky Supreme Court.

In the 5 years IOLTA has been operating, Kentucky lawyers have awarded more than $972,000 in grants for law related programs and projects. The success of IOLTA has been attributed to the cooperative effort between Kentucky lawyers and banks. Lawyers in the program have their banks forward interest earned on their escrow accounts to IOLTA. The money is distributed in grants to fund legal services to the poor, proj-

Participated in Sail Boston 92'

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Tony D. Collins, son of Mazie and stepson of Bobby Hamilton of McDowell, recently participated in Sail Boston '92. Collins, who graduated from McDowell High School in 1988 is assigned aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Inchon, homeported in Norfolk, Virginia. He joined the Navy in June 1989.

Collins participated in the celebration of the Quincentennial anniversary of Christopher Columbus' journey to the Americas.

During the celebration, approximately three million spectators viewed more than 150 vessels participating in the anniversary. The event was established to promote greater awareness and appreciation of the maritime heritage of the port of Boston. The event highlights the spectacular tall ships that sail into the port and dock for all to visit.

Light/Compound microscope class is offered at PCC

Continuing Education/Community Services of Prestonsburg Community College will offer a class about how to use and enjoy the light/compound microscope on October 1, from 6-8 p.m. on the PCC campus. The class will be taught by Dr. John Shiber, professor of biology at PCC. The class is free and everyone is welcome to attend. Registration can be completed by calling 886-3863 and asking for CE/CS.

Health Care Reform in Kentucky

Limiting the growth of medical costs is at the heart of a plan to reform Kentucky's health care system.

"We must have the courage to wake up and address rising health care costs or they will smother us in our sleep one night," said Gov. Brereton C. Jones.

"Controlling the cost of health care requires a working partnership of the public and the private sectors. Providers can't do it alone, and neither can insurers, regulators or patients," he said.

Key cost control segments of the plan include establishing a "mega-pool" of insureds, setting standards to measure medical care practices and creating a regulatory panel with numerous cost-limitation responsibilities, including setting rates for health care providers and insurers in special situations.

"The 'mega-pool' would insure public employees, uninsured Kentuckians, Medicaid recipients, potentially Medicare beneficiaries and any individual or business wishing to join," said Cabinet for Human Resources Secretary Leonard E. Heller, who chairs the Governor's Commission on Health Care Reform.

"With a client group of almost half the population of the state, we'd have the necessary financial clout to get the lowest possible insurance rates."

The 'mega-pool' would be insured under a managed care approach to medicine, linking patients with primary care physicians as 'gatekeepers' to eliminate unnecessary care such as an emergency room visit for a stomach ache.

"Our KenPAC Medicaid program, which is a managed care program, saved almost $150 million last year alone in unneeded medical expenses," Heller said.

To combat the effect of expensive medical malpractice insurance on overall health care costs, a set of accepted professional guidelines for medical practice would be developed, along with related treatment standards by which the "expected" medical outcomes would be measured.

"In effect," Heller said, "this would give doctors, nurses, patients and regulators a 'ruler' to gauge whether treatment met accepted standards."

The plan also calls for the appointment of medical liability arbitration panels in an attempt to settle malpractice claims prior to costly court trials.

Another major cost containment component in the governor's plan is the creation of a three-member panel with responsibilities toward medical providers much like those the Public Service Commission has toward utility companies.

The Health Care Authority, appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Senate, would assume some current government functions as well as some new ones.

A paramount task for this panel would be the collection and publication of data on the cost of medical care and insurance.

The authority would track the rise and fall of provider charges and insurance premiums against a common measurement such as the Consumer Price Index or per capita income. If costs increased at an unacceptable level, the authority could establish maximum fees that providers and insurance companies would be permitted to charge.

The authority also would approve or deny reimbursement of health care providers for the cost of new medical technology, and ensure the delivery of medical services through a regionalized system of hospitals, primary care centers and health departments.

Working to prevent strokes in Kentucky

Think of Kentucky and many images pop up—racehorses, bourbon, bluegrass, coal mines, tobacco. But medical experts might add another word to the list—strokes. The alarming truth is that Kentucky ranks 11th among the states in deaths from strokes.

Why? Heredity is a factor, but so is lifestyle. It is hardly surprising that stroke is the third leading cause of death in Kentucky when we consider that Kentucky ranks No. 1 among the states in smoking, No. 2 in uncontrolled high blood pressure, No. 5 in obesity, and No. 8 in sedentary lifestyle.

Between 25,000 and 35,000 Kentuckians suffer strokes each year, and it is not a disease of only the very old. Almost 60 percent of the approximately 62,000 stroke survivors in this state living at home are under age 65. The death rate from stroke in Kentucky is 54.6 deaths per 100,000 people, compared with the national average of 30.3 deaths.

Turning these statistics around is the goal of the stroke program at the University of Kentucky's Sanders-Brown Center on Aging.

In 1989, the center was designated by the state as a Commonwealth Center of Excellence on Stroke with a mission to address this problem. The nation's only state-funded research group studying stroke, UK's program consists of seven researchers, who collaborate with another 15 faculty members doing stroke-related research.

"Our goal is to reduce mortality from strokes in this Commonwealth," says program director Robert J. Dempsey, a UK neurosurgeon and stroke researcher. "Stroke is not only a major cause of death among the elderly, but the major cause of disability; for people looking forward to an enjoyable retirement, a stroke can be devastating."

Drawing from case histories of 4,500 stroke patients treated and discharged from the UK Medical Center, the VA Medical Center and Cardinal Hill Hospital in Lexington, UK researchers are focusing their energies in four areas:

* Screening Researchers are examining some 1,200 healthy elderly volunteers for atherosclerosis—the development of fatty deposits inside the arteries and a major factor in strokes—with a view to developing better detection, treatment and prevention methods.

* Research This program is developing new tools," says Dempsey, in the biochemical analysis of lipoproteins, important components of the fatty deposits that lead to stroke. "We are looking at the differences in the way people handle the digestion of fats—this may be an important aspect of why some people develop deposits and some do not—and at medicines to slow the development of the deposits."

* Treatment As part of its research in ways to lessen the disabling impact of stroke and to prevent subsequent strokes, the UK program is the only facility in the state offering two experimental acute treatments within 12 hours of a stroke, says Luther C. Pettigrew, a UK neurologist and the program's associate director. One is a medication to prevent brain cell damage due to excess calcium; the other is a drug that suppresses electrical activity of damaged cells, thus preventing them from "exciting themselves to death," he says. (In stroke patients, the normal electrical activity of cells increases to the point where the cells can literally destroy themselves.)

* Social well-being of stroke survivors This is the major focus of The Stroke Association of Kentucky, a non-profit group begun in 1991 with the help of the UK program. Its mission is to educate, serve as an information clearinghouse, support research and help set up support groups.

disease program administrator with the state Division of Epidemiology. "The UK program has been very helpful in terms of coordinating information and doing research—and I cannot say enough about the need for more research in this area."

"The area of stroke in Kentucky was very fragmented until the association began putting things together," says Carol Forbes, cardiovascular

David School receives donation

Employees representing all areas of truck equipment manufacturing for R/S Truck Body Company recently presented a gift to Danny Greene, director of David School. The donation was made to provide scholarship funding for students attending the school. The David School offers alternative education at no cost to students in Floyd County who have dropped out of public education or are at risk. If you or your organization would like to learn more about the work being done at David, please contact the David School Development Office (886-8374) for information on programs and videos that are available.

*Who will walk a mile with me along life's weary way?
A friend whose heart has eyes to see
The stars shine out o'er the darkening lea,
And the quiet rest at the end of the day,
A friend who knows, and dares to say,
The brave, sweet words that cheer the way
Where he walks a mile with me.*

*With such a comrade, such a friend,
I fain would walk til journey's end,
Through summer sunshine, winter rain,
And then?—farewell, we shall meet again!*

To the Citizens of Left Beaver

I take this opportunity to ask for your vote and support in the November 3rd School Board Election. I am interested in improving our schools because two of my children are enrolled in the Floyd County School System.

Over the years I have experienced the rivalry between McDowell and Wheelwright High Schools. Now is the time to put this behind us and bring these communities together to achieve a higher goal. We must give our children the best education possible in order to compete for jobs in the twenty-first century. We can do this by working together.

When elected I promise:

- * To work for full implementation of KERA.
- * To complete Left Beaver High School by spring of 1993.
- * To hold our educational leaders accountable for the job they are being paid to do.
- * To be accessible day and night to allow you to express your concerns, phone 377-6869.

Prestonsburg holds early lead in 58th District golf tournament

Under bright and sunny skies, the 58th District Golf Tournament got underway at the Jenny Wiley Golf Course Monday afternoon with the Prestonsburg Blackcats coming away with the early lead after the first nine holes with a 24 over 160.

Betsy Layne held a slim one stroke lead over Allen Central for second place with a 172. Allen Central was third with a 173 and McDowell was four off with a 177.

"Some of the players shot really well in the first round," said Prestonsburg golf coach Gordon Parido whose school is hosting this year's tournament. "It's still close and a lot could change in the second round."

The second round was held yesterday, Tuesday, at the Beaver Valley Golf Course at Stumbo Park.

Mike Marcum and Matt Crum shot a five-over-par 39 to lead the Prestonsburg golfers. Brett James, who earlier had a par 35 at the Paintsville course, finished six over with a 40. Chris Cornette shot a 42 for the Blackcats.

Toby Newsome shot a five over 40 to top the Bobcats while Jamie Hylton fired in a seven-over 41. Chris Potter shot a 43 and Dale Kimbler finished with a 47 in the first nine holes.

The low score went to McDowell's John McKenzie who had a one-over 35. McKenzie birdie on the second and third hole and was two under going to the fourth hole. McKenzie shot a par on the number four hole but bogeyed on the next four holes before getting a birdie on the ninth hole to stay one-under par for the first nine.

Mark Duddleson shot a 45 and Brandon Akers finished with a 47 for the Daredevils as James Stumbo shot a 50.

Jason Martin's six over par 40 led the Rebels golfers. Martin went two over on the number four green and he bogeyed on the seventh hole as well. Nick Halbert and Matt Crawford each came in with a 44 with Ben Moore shooting one stroke higher at 45.

Marcum was running par to the course until the fourth hole when he bogeyed on four and five. Crum bogeyed on the first two holes as well as the number six.

KAREN PELPHREY

Pelphrey, female Athlete-of-the-Decade at Marshall University

In conjunction with the 10th Anniversary of women's athletics sponsored by the Southern Conference, Marshall University has selected former Lady Herd basketball player Karen Pelphrey as the school's Athlete-of-the-Decade.

Pelphrey, a Paintsville native, starred for the Lady Herds from 1982-86, scoring a school record 2,746 points and earning numerous national honors. Pelphrey's 2,746 career points and 26.1 points per game scoring average both rank as the seventh highest ever in Division I women's basketball. Her 2,746 points is a Marshall University record for either men's or women's basketball.

Pelphrey is surprised that they still remembered her after graduating in 1986.

"This means a lot to me being named Female Athlete of the Decade at Marshall," said the former Lady Herd standout. "It has been six years and I am surprised that they still remembered me."

Pelphrey remembers her biggest game of her college career. "It was when we played Kentucky at UK and I scored 36 points in that game. I can't remember if we won or not. They had a girl that stood 6'4" guarding me and was saying things to me to try and get me mad. But it didn't work."

Pelphrey began her interest in basketball when she lived in the country and being an only child really had no brothers or sisters to play with.

"I used to go to my neighbors house (Mark Green), who was a boy, and he liked sports," remembered Pelphrey. "We would play basketball, baseball and football together every day. I got to where I loved the game and loved playing it."

Porter Elementary at the time did not have a girls basketball program so Pelphrey was given permission to go out for the boys team which she made.

"The coach said that in order to find room for me on the boys team he was going to have to cut one of the boys," she explained. "So he did and the kid that was cut, his father got upset about it and complained.

At the end of her career, Pelphrey held 19 school records.

"I was really excited about playing on the boys team at Porter. I asked the coach what I was to do about wearing a boys jersey (they were sleeveless) and he said 'I guess we will just have to order you one'."

After being informed that she could not play on the team and in the midst of the disappointment, Pelphrey's grade school coach headed her down to Johnson Central where eighth graders were allowed to play on the junior varsity team.

In 1985 Pelphrey was selected second team All-American and Northeast Regional Player-of-the-Year by the Women's Sports Federation and third team All-American by Women's Basketball News Service. Pelphrey was voted Southern Conference Player-of-the-Year in 1986.

At the end of her career, Pelphrey held 19 school records. She still holds 13 school records and four Southern Conference scoring records, including a high of 48 points in a single game. Pelphrey currently teaches special education at Prestonsburg Elementary.

There were still some disappointments while she was in college at Marshall.

"We never won the Southern Conference," said Pelphrey of her

Ken's Sport Shop tumbles in nationals

Montgomery, Ala. — Over 90 teams gathered in the Alabama capital city for the 1992 ASA Class B Men's National Softball Tournament as the games got underway Thursday evening following the opening ceremonies at Lagoon Park in Montgomery.

The tournament fielded the largest field (92) that has gathered in recent years for the national championships. While the skies over Montgomery were on the overcast side for the four-day event, still the rains held off and the tournament started on time.

Ken's Sport Shop represented the Mid West Regional in the nationals and found the going tough as they fell to K. K. Machine out of Atlanta, Georgia in a Friday evening contest 16-13. K & K scored seven times in the seventh inning to take a 16-8 lead going into the bottom of the seventh.

Ken's scored five times in the bottom half of the inning but fell short in dropping their second game of the event.

K & K scored in five of the seven innings and in five of those runs crossed home plate after the first two batters had been retired. In the fatal seventh, pitcher Tim Rice got Barry Alford to fly to short field and Ken Hogurtle bounced back to the mound for two outs. Then, just as in other innings, the rally began. Marty Turner collected his first hit with a base hit up the middle and Ronnie Anderson followed with a run scoring double. Kim Cole and Mike Fuller followed with base hits bringing up Robert Light who homered in his first two at bats. Kenny Conley elected to intentionally pass Light and pitch to Glenn Ross. Ross drilled a hard grounder to shortstop that Scott Cornette attempted to short hop and the ball skipped into center field allowing two runs to score. Ricky Norman then delivered a two-run double and he scored on Doug McKuen's base hit to give K & K a 16-8 lead.

Ken's bats came alive in the bottom of the fifth as five runs crossed home plate but the rally was too short and too late.

Jimmy Blankenship drilled a one-out double and scored on Kain Hale's base hit. After Cornette skied out to center for the second out, Greg Shepherd singled up the middle scoring Hale. Mike McQuate kept the rally going with a single and Ronnie Little's fly ball to left field was dropped for an error allowing two runs to score. Bobby Bowersock drove in the fifth run with a base hit before Bud Newsome's fly ball to left ended the game.

K & K took a 1-0 first inning lead, scoring once after the first two men had been retired. Light hit his first home run in the first inning. Ken's came back with four runs in their half of the first as they collected five hits. Little, Bowersock and Newsome each had RBI singles in the inning.

K & K regained the lead, 6-4, in the second with five runs. The first two batters went out on a grounder to second and a roll out to first until four straight hits drove in one run. Light then drilled a Rice pitch high over the Junior Bobcats fourth quarter rally too late in 26-14 loss

The Betsy Layne Bobcats' elementary football team put together a fourth quarter rally but fell short in a 26-14 loss to the Elkhorn City grade school team.

Betsy Layne scored their points in the fourth quarter, trailing 26-0 at the time. Ramey Hunter put the first Bobcat points on the scoreboard in the fourth quarter on a 3-yard run with 2:15 on the clock. Hunter's TD made it a 26-6 game as the two-point conversion attempt failed.

Craig Hamilton then added the final touchdown as he crossed the goal line from 28 yards out with only five seconds left in the game. Hunter ran the two-point conversion for the 26-14 final score.

Elkhorn City scored early in the game when Andy Price scored from 21-yards out and Rob Tostin ran the conversion play for an 8-0 lead with 6:02 left in the first period. In the second period, Kenny Collins ran the ball in from the 3-yard line to make it a 14-0 game as Betsy Layne trailed 14-0 at the half.

Elkhorn City added two TD's in the third period to take the 26-0 advantage. Price scored his second touchdown of the game with 7:39 left in the third, on a 59-yard run. On a pass play from quarterback Jason England to Scott Mullins that covered 52-yards, the Cougars scored their final touchdown.

Betsy Layne ran 32 plays to Elkhorn City's 17. The Bobcats picked up five first downs to the Cougars two.

Elkhorn City totaled 170 offensive yards to Betsy Layne's 109. The Bobcats carried the football 30 times for 119 yards rushing. The Cougars managed 113 yards on 16 carries. In passing, Betsy Layne was a minus 18 and the Cougars threw for 52 yards on one for one in passing.

Betsy Layne did not have any penalties called against them while Elkhorn City was flagged once for 15-yards. One stat that made a difference in the game was in the fumble department where Betsy Layne fumbled the football four times. Elkhorn City coughed up the football three times.

Price had 80 yards on two carries for the winners and he scored two TDs. Ashley Potter rushed for 17-yards on four carries. For Betsy Layne, Cecil carried six times for 32 yards. Hamilton had 60 yards on five carries.

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY WAS GREAT....

This past week I had the opportunity to make my first visit to the state of Alabama and I certainly enjoyed every bit of it. What beautiful country lies south of us and sometimes we miss some of that beauty by traveling other ways. It was the ASA National Class B Men's Softball Tournament that took me to the land of the Crimson Tide and Auburn Tigers as we visited the capital of the great state of former governor George Wallace — Montgomery.

Folks, you should see the facilities they play softball, football and baseball on. It has been stated that Montgomery has the best softball facilities in the United States. I believe it. It would be difficult to describe what they have to play on.

At Lagoon Park, where part of the games were played, and Fain Park both fields were identical. The parks were a complex of five fields in a circular layout with a three-tier building in the middle of the complex. In the lower lever was the concession area; the second was made up of offices and the third was for the scorers with five windows overlooking five fields. It was great! Jerry Fultz and I were talking how great it would be if we had something like this in our area. Said Jerry: "It wouldn't take long to get part of the money back from holding tournaments in the area."

He's right. Over 90 teams flooded the motels in Montgomery as they showed up for the tournament. That meant that all those teams had to have somewhere to stay. So the motels were very busy. Ballplayers have to eat and that meant business for the restaurants. But the old automobile will not run without gas so who else got in on the revenue — the gas stations.

The revenue spent during those four days had to run in the high thousands. The banks, power companies, local government, on and on some way or another got part of the money spent in Montgomery those four days.

Now, we have been wanting to attract tourists to our area and what better way to do it than through some sporting event. If we had the facilities in our county, there are numerous events that could be staged here. The local junior pro basketball tournament held last year brought in some revenue that otherwise would have never made here.

We had to cancel holding the Babe Ruth regional tournament, that would have brought in revenue, because our diamonds at Stumbo Park were not ready. A planned 18-hole golf course has been put on the shelf that could have brought in golfers from all around. A track and field facility — eight lanes — could be used to hold regional and sectional track and field meets also bringing business to our eating establishments and gas stations as well as motels.

But we have perhaps the worst facilities in this part of the country and it seems instead of trying to improve them everyone in the higher-up offices wants to fight it and see that it is never built. Our school and county officials should be doing all they can to see that we have adequate facilities for our athletes.

Sports, no matter how you look at it, is and always will be a big part of tourism and Floyd County.

All Floyd Countians who are interested in seeing a track and field facility built in our county are urged to be at the next school board meeting to show their support. Be there!

BASKETBALL PRACTICE.... Officially, high school basketball practice in Kentucky gets started on October 15 but for schools that do not field a football squad it begins as early as tomorrow (Thursday, November 1). Coach Johnny Ray Turner of McDowell will put his team through the practice schedule beginning tomorrow afternoon, giving his team a two-week head start on the rest of the county. The season officially opens on December 1.

Coach Roger Harless of Sheldon Clark has put together a banner basketball panorama this season that will feature some of Kentucky's and West Virginia's best. The Streak at 15....

Gilliam, Patton missing-in-action as Rebels drop 67-8 loss to Jenkins

by Candy Mathers

A famous coach once said "winning is not everything but the only thing." But, had he witnessed the determination that the Allen Central Rebels exhibited Friday evening he may have changed his mind.

Allen Central dropped their fifth consecutive game of the season as they fell to previously winless Jenkins 67-8 and worst yet ran their consecutive losing streak to 15 straight. It was the second worst defeat of the season for the Rebels—having lost to Pikeville by a large margin earlier in the season.

Despite all of this, the Rebels continue to practice hard and play hard not giving up in spite of being heckled by fans and foes.

"It could be worse," said three-year coach Dewey Jamerson just before the game started. "We could be 0 and 24."

Allen Central was playing without two of their front line players in David Gilliam and Kevin Patton. Gilliam was suspended for one game following last weeks infraction with an official that saw him ejected from the game against Johns Creek. The ejection requires an automatic one game suspension.

"With David out on suspension we had to bring someone else in to snap the ball on punts," explained Coach Jamerson, "and we had three snaps that were bad and Jenkins got the ball on good field position and scored."

Patton was injured in the Johns Creek game and was forced to sit out against Jenkins. What was first thought to be a torn ligament, turned out to be only a bad bruise and both Patton and Gilliam are expected to return to play against Sheldon Clark this Friday night.

Jenkins got off to an early lead scoring their first touchdown with 6:17 remaining in the first period and scored steadily approximately every six minutes.

"Our mistakes put them in a position to score on us," said Jamerson. "We're not playing good football at all. Our blocking is terrible. Our tackling is terrible. We're making the initial hit but we're not following through with it. As long as we play that way we're not going to win."

Glen Floyd scored the lone Allen Central touchdown on an 80-yard jaunt with James Osborne running the conversion play.

Floyd carried the football eight times for 109 yards rushing. James Osborne had 15 carries for 34 yards. It was a rough game for quarterback Brad Blackburn with a total loss of 56 yards. Most of Blackburn's loss came on sacks and being caught while punting.

Blackburn was three for 14 in the passing department for 22 yards. He had one pass intercepted.

On the receiving end of the football, Shane Stumbo had one reception for 12 yards. Dan Stumbo caught one pass for 4 yards and Floyd had a 6-yard reception.

Allen Central collected six first downs to Jenkins five. The Rebels carried the football 44 times for 170 yards. Jenkins had 39 carries for 253 yards on the ground. Jenkins completed two-of-eight attempts for 29 yards passing.

Allen Central took care of the football on offense with no fumbles. Jenkins lost the football on one fumble.

The Rebels had return yardage of 100 to Jenkins five. Allen Central totaled 119 yards on offense to Jenkins 276.

On kickoffs, Gary Webb had two for 60 yards, an average of 30 yards. On kickoff returns, Shane Stumbo carried three times for 52 yards in returns and Dan Stumbo had three carries for 31 yards.

Blackburn had five punts for 130 yards for an average of 26 yards. He had one punt blocked that led to a Jenkins touchdown.

On the defensive side of the ball, Scott Bellemly had a fumble recovery and Kevin Stumbo had one interception. Mike McKinney blocked an extra point attempt.

Bellemly led the defensive line with seven first hits and four assists. Dan Stumbo had five solo hits and one assist and Jason Osborne had four solo hits. Floyd came up with three first hits.

The Rebels will face the Cardinals of Sheldon Clark Friday night at Inez. Allen Central will face the Betsy Layne Bobcats on Monday night (October 5) at Betsy Layne in what could be a battle of two winless teams. Game time at Sheldon Clark is 8 p.m. and at Betsy Layne 7:30 p.m. rama. GRADE SCHOOL FOOTBALL.....

The grade schools are now playing football and you will see some good future players by going out and supporting the kids. Take in a grade school football game and let the kids know that you support them.

We, here at the Times, need the schedules of all the grade school teams so that we may be able to cover your games. We ask all coaches to send us a schedule and also to call in your game results after each game. If you want in print, then call it in!

POP WARNER LEAGUE STARTS THIS WEEK...

Tonight at 5:30 p.m. the Pop Warner tackle football league will get started and the flag football players will be playing their games on Saturday afternoons. Both leagues will play at the Archer Park softball field.

Dr. Don Chaffins and others have worked hard to get the season ready to go. Again, go out and support even the younger players. Three years from now you will notice a remarkable improvement in the football programs in the county. Let's all get behind them.

Until next week, good sports everyone and be good sports!

11th Annual Jenny Wiley Festival

October 8-10, 1992

The Auxier Historical Society was formed in 1986 to help develop the community's future, while at the same time, preserving its past. The Society is a nonprofit organization, and all proceeds from special events, membership drives, donations, etc., are used for the annual Pioneer Folk Festival, which was created to bring young and old together for a weekend of interaction and entertainment.

This year, AHS will be honored as Grand Parade Marshal. In addition, AHS will have an exhibit on display at the Mountain Heritage Arts and Crafts Center on Court Street in Prestonsburg on Friday, October 9th, 1992 and Saturday, October 10th, 1992. Also, a reception will be held by the Auxier Historical Society on Saturday, October 10th, from 12:00-2:00 p.m. Jim Daniels will be the guest speaker.

Jim Daniels is a life-long native of Auxier, Ky. He is a 1952 graduate from the Auxier School. Jim has been active in all past Auxier Homecomings and this past year was chairman and Master of Ceremonies over the 1992 homecoming.

Jim has been engaged in the broadcasting field for the past 35 years. He has also been elected twice to receive the Kentucky Colonel Award.

Let's welcome Jim Daniels, our guest speaker. If you have an opportunity, see the display, visit the Mountain Heritage Arts and Crafts Center, attend the parade, and join in the celebration of Floyd County's Bicentennial and its rich history.

As Prestonsburg Blackcats rolls past Betsy Layne 42-20

Chuck Rowe
Sports Writer

The talk around Prestonsburg this week was not really about the game between Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne, but about the coaches. Bill Letton, head coach of the Prestonsburg Blackcats, and John Derossett, head coach of the Betsy Layne Bobcats, were the head-assistant coach duo that lead the Blackcats to a 1992 District Championship season. Derossett spent the past three years as an assistant coach under Bill Letton's Blackcats until accepting the head coaching job at Betsy Layne.

Will this bother the coaches or players?

"I told the players to play this game for themselves, not for anything about me," said Derossett, head coach of the Bobcats.

"I believe it will be a good game. We had a good, intense week of practice," Blackcat head coach Bill Letton said. "I feel as if the Belfry game was a wake-up call for our boys. The players are up for this ballgame."

The Blackcats were ready for this one. They received the opening kick on their own 32-yard line. The Blackcats picked up a first down on an offside call against the Bobcats and a 12-yard run by Seth Hyden. After a fumbled snap and an incomplete pass, Hyden galloped 45-yards for a touchdown but it was called back for clipping. That set up a fourth down and five. Hyden carried the ball the very next play to pick up a first down as he gained 10 yards. Three plays later, Hyden got the ball and almost matched his jersey number as he sprinted 33-yards for a touchdown with 7:35 left in the first quarter. Marcus Araujo added his first extra point of the night to make the score 7-0.

Prestonsburg's kickoff, from the foot of Matt Porter, goes to the 18-yard line. The catch was mishandled and the Blackcats recovered it on the Bobcats 23-yard line. On the first play, Aaron Tucker found Glenn May on a 23-yard touchdown pass with 7:35 left in the first quarter. Araujo's kick was good which made the score 14-0.

Prestonsburg's defense was looking as good as their offense as they held the Bobcats for only negative yardage on three straight plays. Bryan Combs' punt traveled to the Blackcats' 41-yard line as Dewayne Garza was waiting on it and returned it 17 yards, into Bobcat territory, to the 24-yard line. Three plays later, all runs by Garza, the big fullback plowed into the end zone from one yard out with 4:59 left in the first quarter. Araujo's kick was good to make the score 21-0.

Betsy Layne recovered the kickoff from Prestonsburg's Porter on the goal line and returned it to their own 9-yard line. On the next play, Combs' pass, intended for Gary Arnold, was intercepted by Seth Hyden who ran 25-yards for a touchdown with 4:25 left in the first quarter. Araujo's kick was good and the score was 28-0.

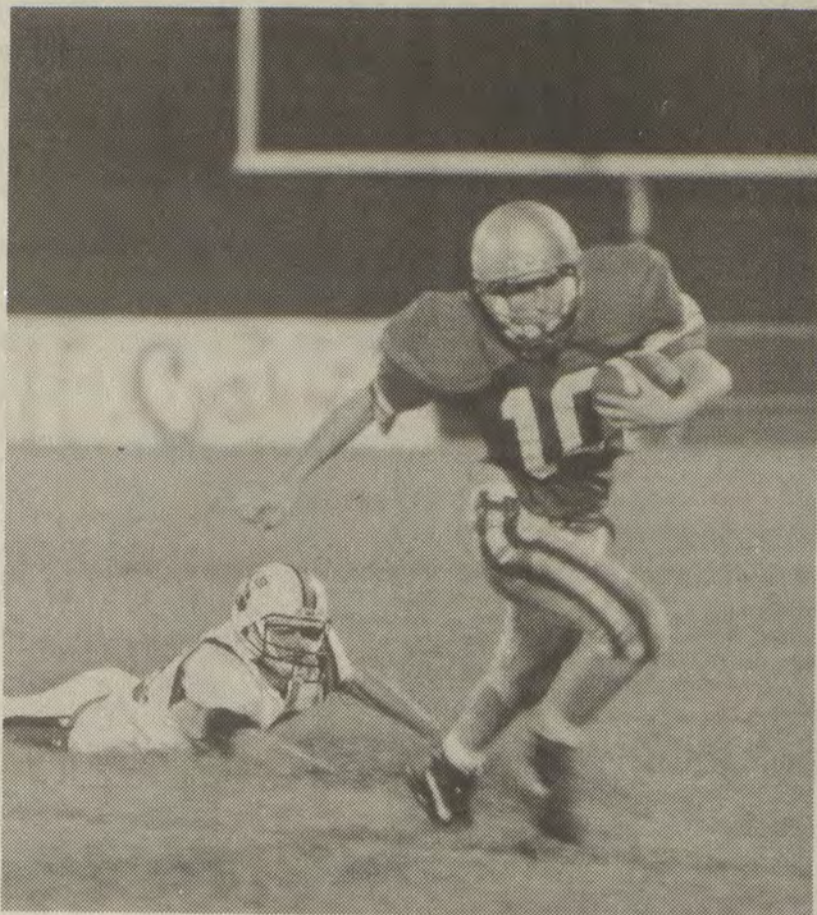

Prestonsburg would score again in the first quarter when they held the Bobcats on three straight plays, bringing up a punting situation for the Bobcats. After picking up a first down, Jody Cornette sprinted 29-yards for the final score of the quarter with 1:37 left. Araujo's kick was good and the score after one quarter was 35-0.

The Bobcat offense seemed to be moving the ball in the second quarter, picking up a first down, until Prestonsburg took over on downs. Betsy Layne would quickly get the ball back, when on third down and eleven Tucker's pass, intended for Thomas Ratliff, was intercepted by Brad McKinny and ran back 15-yards. Two plays later, Combs connected with Arnold for a 15-yard touchdown pass with 9:27 left in the second quarter. Adam Roberts ran the two-point conversion successfully to make the score 35-8.

After the ball changed hands on a couple of good defensive plays, Prestonsburg received the ball after the Bobcats had gained only six yards in four plays. Three plays later, Matt Porter out ran the Bobcat secondary 33-yards for the final touchdown of the first half with 1:15 left in the second quarter. Araujo's kick was good and the halftime score was 42-8. The third quarter was a defensive battle with the only scoring attempt coming on an Araujo 30-yard field goal from the right hash mark that just missed wide right.

Missed tackle!

Betsy Layne's Doug Hammond (10) just missed being tackled by a Prestonsburg defender in last Friday's high school game at Betsy Layne. Prestonsburg won their fourth game of the season with a 42-20 win over the Bobcats. (photo by Estill Robinson) second quarter. Araujo's kick was good and the halftime score was 42-8. The third quarter was a defensive battle with the only scoring attempt coming on an Araujo 30-yard field goal from the right hash mark that just missed wide right.

Betsy Layne had control of the ball almost halfway through the fourth quarter moving the ball slowly down to the Blackcat 3-yard line to set up a first down and goal. The next play, Doug Hammond runs for the touchdown with 8:01 remaining in the fourth quarter. Rocky Hamilton's run for the two-point conversion was no good to leave the score 42-14. Prestonsburg would keep the ball and move the ball pretty well until the Bobcats held them on four straight plays and the Blackcats handed over the ball on the Betsy Layne 40-yard line. The Bobcats set up the final score of the game with a Combs pass to McKinny for 40-yards and a Hammond run of 17-yards that took them to the 3-yard line. On first and goal from the three, the Bobcats were unsuccessful in putting the ball in the end zone. But on third and goal from the 1-yard line, Combs followed his linemen into the end zone with :02 left in the game. The two-point conversion was no good and the final score was 42-20.

Prestonsburg's Seth Hyden had the game's most rushing yards as he tossed in 55 yards on three carries and a touchdown. Dewayne Garza ran five times for 30 yards and a touchdown. Jody Cornette had 35 yards on just two carries and a touchdown. Matt Porter and Blake Leslie both ran for 47 yards. Porter ran five times and Leslie 13 times. Robby Risner carried the ball only two times for 41 yards.

Betsy Layne's Doug Hammond had the most yards rushing for the Bobcats as he tossed in 42 yards on

After Ken's went out without any noise in the third, K & K plated two more runs in the third inning to take an 8-4 lead. Two errors opened the door for the Atlanta team to score on a base hit by Kim Cole.

The local team responded with three runs in the bottom of the third inning with two runs coming on Greg Shepherd's two-run home run. One out later, Ronnie Little drilled a solo home run to make it an 8-7 game.

K & K went on top 9-7 with a single run in the fourth but Ken's was unable to push any runs across in the bottom of the inning.

Rice retired the side in the fifth and sixth innings to keep the game close at 9-8 after Ken's scored on a triple by Cornette and a sacrifice fly off the bat of McQuate in the fifth.

K & K then scored seven times in the seventh to open the game up.

Ken's Sport Shop fell in their first game of the tournament when they dropped a 15-12 decision to Bert's out of New York. The local team was unable to score in the final two innings in a game that they held an 11-8 lead after four innings. However, a fourth-run fifth for the New York team made it a 13-11 game. Ken's scored a run in the bottom of the fifth for their final run of the game.

In the first game, Greg Shepherd drilled two home runs — one in the third and the second in the fourth. He hit a third one over the right center-field fence but Shepherd was called out because his team had hit it's limit of three home runs. (In softball tournaments a team is limited to hitting three home runs. Any other are outs.) The home run would have been a three-run shot with two runners on base. However, it turned out to be the third out of the inning.

Ken's put two runners on base in the bottom of the seventh but Newsome grounded into a game ending double play.

Bowersock, Little, Blankenship and Shepherd each had three hits in the game with Cornette, McQuate and Newsome collecting two.

Golf—(Continued from B1)

Newsome finished the first three with a one-over par but he had trouble with the three and four hole where he was two over on hole seven.

While only the top four from each group is considered other scores were: Allen Central, Eric Cathers, 50, Ephrium O'Quinn 56; Betsy Layne, Brian Pugh, 49, Dale Kimbler 47.

Roberts repeats as winner of two-mile fitness run

The victories keep coming for Rick Roberts of Van Lear as he chalked up yet another win by repeating as champion of the fourth annual Jenkins Two-Mile Run on September 20 at Jenkins.

Roberts posted a time of 11:22 in winning the event for the second time in its four year history. The record for the race is held by Mike Morris of Whitesburg with a time of 10:50 which was set in 1990. The two-mile course is one of the most beautiful and challenging courses in Kentucky or elsewhere.

Roberts time also afforded him first place in his age group of 35-39. He was the overall winner of the run with the trophy winner being Paul Miles with a time of 12:41. Judy Lewis of Baxter took first place in the female division with a time of 13:56. Lewis broke the old course record of 14:48 set by Hilary Swisher of Whitesburg in 1990.

The overall winner in the fitness walk was D. Charles Dixon with a time of 13:46. Dixon just missed the course record of 13:09 set by Ked Sanders in 1989.

The overall female winner was Joan Curry with a time of 18:06 and it was her first win after placing second in 1991. The record for the mile and a half walk is 15:00 flat set by Debra Oden in 1988.

All participants received a T-shirt for their participation in either the fitness walk or two-mile run. Each winner in their division received a trophy. The overall winners receive plaques.

Our Two National Champs

When does one equal two? When it comes to college football's national champion. For the second year in a row, two different teams have been voted the No. 1 team at the season's end, giving us co-champions.

Both the Miami Hurricanes and the Washington Huskies posted perfect seasons, remaining undefeated over the course of 12 games. Both were commanding in their New Year's Day bowl victories. Both deserve the national championship. The Associated Press writers' poll gave Miami the crown by its closest margin ever. The USA Today/CNN coaches' poll gave Washington its No. 1 ranking. The teams themselves agreed that they should share the honor and, for once, actually had nice things to say about each other.

Football fans everywhere now will have something to argue about during the off-season. Who is really the better team? Who is really No. 1 number one? I don't mean to take anything from Washington, but I personally would give it to Miami. Here's why.

Miami's overwhelming team speed is simply too much for anybody to compete against. There's an old saying in football that "speed kills," and just ask any of Miami's opponents if that saying is true.

On top of speed, Miami is an incredibly strong team. They can beat you both in the air and on the ground. Though Washington's defense is considered the strongest in the country by many college-football followers, I'm not sure that Miami doesn't have the edge there too — at least when they play like they did on New Year's Day.

Look at their common opponent, Nebraska. Washington beat Nebraska soundly during the regular season, but the Huskies' defense allowed Nebraska to score 24 points. Miami shut out the Cornhuskers, the country's leading scoring team. The Miami defense also held Nebraska's running attack, which had led the country with an average of 353 yards a game, to just 82 yards. You can't get any tougher than that.

But again, both teams are deserving of the national title, and if they ever played a dream game, picking a winner would be a close call. Over a series of five games (wouldn't that be fun?), I'd take Miami to win three of the five.

With the current system for determining national champions, a dream is the only place those games could take place. I believe that the current bowls could be organized into a playoff system to determine the one true national champion. But, with collegiate athletic conferences trying to solidify their bowl affiliations, that idea is looking like it will remain a dream.

For now, the writers' and the coaches' polls will have to do. Usually, I side with the coaches' poll because I believe coaches have a better idea of the talent throughout college football, as opposed to the many writers who cover only certain regions and conferences.

This year, however, I agree with the writers. I am, after all, just another fan, and the only thing every college football fan can agree on about last year is that it was a heck of a season. ■ biggest disappointment in college. "I never got to cut down a net. We finished second all four years that I played."

She hasn't forgotten her worst game in college. "I scored eight points against Radford in my senior year," she stated. "I was just running up and down the floor and doing nothing while everyone else was having a good game. After the game they were happy and laughing while I just didn't feel good."

While having had a stint coaching in high school at Lawrence County during the 1989-90 season, Pelphrey says that she hasn't ruled out the possibility of returning to the coaching ranks although it is different than playing the game of basketball.

"Coaching requires a lot of hours and weekends," she said. "Right now I am working on my masters and with fall and spring classes it makes coaching difficult to do. But someday I may get back into it."

Pelphrey is always asked the questions that many are probably thinking now. Is she related to former UK great John Pelphrey?

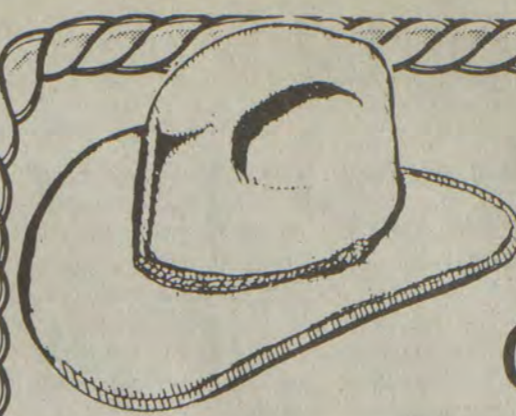

"No, although a lot of people will ask me 'how's your brother John doing?'. Sometimes I will tell them 'he's doing okay' but most of the time I tell them he is not my brother."

The high scoring Pelphrey led the state in scoring in high school at Johnson Central in her senior year in 1982. She averaged 36 points per game as a senior at Central where she played from 1978-82. On November 7, Pelphrey will be inducted into the Marshall University Hall of Fame.

"Leading the state in scoring my senior year was the biggest moment in my high school career," she commented. "But my biggest disappointment came in my freshman year when our coach believed in only playing junior and senior players. I averaged over eight points per game as a freshman and thought I should have gotten to play more. I averaged 20 or better my sophomore, junior and senior seasons."

"Being voted into the Hall of Fame is more of an honor that being named Female Player-of-the-Decade," said Pelphrey.

Pelphrey will represent Marshall University on the ballot in voting for the Southern Conference Woman Athlete-of-the-Decade.

HOW TO IDENTIFY ACTIVE AND INACTIVE BASS

Bass fishermen often use the terms "active" and "inactive" to describe the mood of fish and their willingness to strike lures. Naturally, anglers hope to find the active fish that hit with wild abandon, but more often than not they encounter the inactive ones.

Many of the bass pros have learned to tell the difference between active and inactive bass before they ever cast a lure to them. When they see fish holding on deeper structure, they can often tell what mood the fish are in, depending on how the bass are located on that structure.

"In the winter, bass that are holding on the deeper side of structure, such as an underwater mound, are usually active fish that will bite," says Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler and 1991 world champion Ken Cook.

"On the other hand, if the fish are suspended away from the structure, such as out in the middle of a deep channel, they're usually inactive bass you would have a very difficult time catching."

In the summer months, adds Cook, active bass will normally move to the top of the structure but again hold very close to it, while the inactive fish will keep out away from the structure.

"Of course, the only real way to positively determine what mood the bass are in is to drop a lure down to them," laughs the Evinrude pro, "but normally, active bass hold much tighter to cover and structure than inactive ones do."

The ideal situation, says Cook, is to locate baitfish and bass together on the same structure, because that condition nearly always indicates active, feeding bass.

"This is where learning to use depthfinders properly becomes so important in bass fishing," he points out, "because you can waste a lot of time fishing for fish that aren't the least bit interested in biting."

"You not only need to be able to identify cover, structure, and fish accurately, you need to be able to interpret what you see. This comes with practice and experience."

It's important to periodically check bass that may be located away from structure because they may move to the structure and become active feeders. This can occur at anytime, but frequently happens during late afternoon or early morning.

"Bass will also move up on structure and start feeding if water suddenly starts being released through a dam for power generation, or if the weather turns bad and becomes extremely windy," notes Cook.

"During the warmer months, especially, knowing the power generation schedules on the lake you're fishing can be a big help. At times you can actually watch the bass move from out in the channels to the structure once water starts being released."

Service experts at OMC recommend a frequent check of the gearcase lubricant in your outboard. At the minimum, according to the OMC, check the fluid in the fall and again in the spring, and add fluid if necessary. When draining the fluid, check for water, metal filings, or burned odors. Any of these could signal trouble and you should have the motor checked by a qualified technician as soon as possible.

TRY THESE TRICKS FOR FINDING WINTER BASS

Fishing cold, muddy water this winter is no one's idea of fun, but bass can still be caught, according to former world champion Guido Hibdon.

Naturally, says Hibdon, the first thing to do is look for clear water, but that's not all.

"If you find yourself faced with fishing cold, muddy water, and most of us will this month because of the recent heavy rains, you should narrow your fishing area to the lower end of your impoundment," says the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler.

"Because this water will be deeper, it will also be warmer and it should also attract more baitfish, which will help keep the bass more active."

Next, says Hibdon, who won the prestigious BASS Masters Classic* world championship in 1988 and who for many years was a guide on Lake of the Ozarks in Missouri, an angler should look for the largest tributary or feeder creek flowing into the lower part of the lake.

"Water here, if not completely clear, will at least be moving," explains Hibdon, "and this moving water will attract bass if they are the least bit interested in feeding."

"From here, try to find a spot where the channel flows next to a secondary point within the creek. You'll have your best chance of finding a concentration of bass on a point like this where there is deep water very close to shallow water."

The Johnson pro adds that lure choices can include spoons, light hair/mylar jigs, and even spinnerbaits.

"I have never heard of anyone catching bass deep in muddy water," says Hibdon, "irregardless of how cold it may be. Mud and heavy silt always bring bass close to the surface, so you have to fish shallow."

"I prefer flipping or swimming small jigs through whatever cover I can find, but other lures will also work."

"The main thing to remember is that a large tributary on the lower part of a lake will usually have warmer, slightly clearer, moving water, and that's where you'll find bass."

Hibdon remembers a cold, muddy water tournament on Grand Lake in Oklahoma several years ago during which he endured rain, snow, bitterly cold temperature, and muddy water.

He didn't have a strike in two full days of fishing.

"Cold, muddy water is probably the toughest bass fishing condition I know," he laughs. "In that tournament there wasn't any clear water to be found, and the tournament was won by an angler who caught, or rather, accidentally snagged, one bass with a crankbait. No one caught a fish."

* BASS Masters Classic is a registered trademark of the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society.

If your outboard needs a tune-up, consider scheduling an appointment with your Evinrude or Johnson dealer this winter before the spring rush begins. Service managers are often looking for work to do during the winter, and many offer offseason specials.

THE MAGIC OF SPINNER FISHING

Without question, the most popular lure ever developed for trout anglers is the spinner. Spinners originated in Europe and were introduced to this country after World War II, along with the ever-popular spinning reel.

Spinners, spinning reels and fine monofilament lines did much to popularize sport fishing. Small diameter lines enabled anglers to fool finicky trout even in clear water. Spinning reels were easy to cast, even long distances. And, the sonic vibrations, which spinners emit, prove irresistible to hungry trout and other game fish.

Spinners come in two basic styles: non-weighted models for trolling, and weighted models for casting.

When trolling spinners, attach a weight (split shot sinker) to the line 24-36 inches above the spinner, or rig the spinner 18-30 inches behind an attractor. Varying your trolling speed and direction will often cause more strikes than trolling at a constant speed in a straight line.

When casting, select a spinner with a built-in weight to prevent line twist. Some spinners are designed with a special offset eye to reduce line twist without the use of a swivel.

Spinners can be cast from shore or from a boat. In shallow water, simply cast out and begin a slow-to-medium retrieve. I like to pull back on the rod immediately after the cast to help start the blade spinning, and then begin my retrieve. This is necessary with many models.

One of my favorite spinners that has instant spin right out of the package is a Bang-Tail spinner. It will even spin and flutter on the drop before starting the retrieve, a definite advantage.

In medium to deep water where fish are holding near the bottom, allow the spinner to sink before beginning the retrieve. Most spinners will sink or free fall at a rate of one foot per second, so that you can count your spinner down to near the bottom. For example, if the water is 10' deep, allow the spinner to sink for 8 or 9 seconds, then pull back on the rod tip to start the blade and begin the retrieve. If you are unsure of the depth, cast out and count how long it takes for the spinner to hit bottom, then subtract a foot or two on the next cast. This will keep your spinner in the strike zone, but just above the sometimes snaggy bottom.

In rivers, cast across and slightly upstream, allowing the spinner to sink near bottom. Pull back on the rod tip to start the retrieve. In most situations it is important to work your spinner near the bottom. So, try to maintain a slow to medium retrieve speed.

Spinners come in several metallic finishes: nickel, brass and copper, as well as numerous painted finishes. The general rule with metal finishes is to use nickel in bright sunny conditions and either brass or copper on overcast or dimly lit days. Color painted finishes can produce excellent results. Some of my personal favorites are yellow/black dot and chartreuse/fire scale, along with brown or black paint variations. I've found that spinner color can make a tremendous difference in success, even in the fish-laden waters of Alaska or other exotic places where you wouldn't think it would matter. Spinners provide an easy, fun way to fish. Also, I'm convinced that the sonic vibration spinners give off, which varies with different blade styles, is what makes the magic that causes spinners to get strikes when other lures fail.

How important is the center?

One position on the football team that gets little notice is the center position. He seems to be buried in the middle of both lines. Jason Spencer (61) handles the center position for the Prestonsburg Junior varsity team and does a great job at it. A good center is very important because the snap is so important. Sports Briefs

MIAMI, FLORIDA STATE GAME GEM OF A GAME

After three games on the road to open the 1992 season, Mississippi State finally gets a chance to perform in front of the home folks. Last year's Southeast Conference champion Florida, with a week off after its 31-14 loss to Tennessee, will be the other half of the attraction on Thursday night.

The Gators were undefeated in the league last fall, losing only to Syracuse outside of the conference. The Bulldogs still have high hopes in spite of a surprise 24-3 setback three weeks ago at the hands of L.S.U. Florida whipped State last fall 29-7, and the Gators are favored again this week.

One of the real biggies of the season will take place in Miami Saturday as 1991's undefeated Hurricanes entertain Florida State. The Seminoles lost only two games last fall and both were to intrastate rivals. Miami nipped them 17-16 and they lost to Florida 14-9. Florida State has already beaten last year's Atlantic Coast Conference champion Clemson and Miami whipped Iowa in the season opener. The nod again this year goes to the 'Canes.

Southern California is another team that opens with three straight games on the road. The Trojans were tied by San Diego State (and almost lost it) then surprised Oklahoma two weeks ago — and now they travel to Seattle to take on our 1991 National Champion, Washington.

The Huskies just finished a big tussle of their own as they beat Big Eight champion Nebraska, 29-14. Washington beat Southern Cal last season 14-3. The Huskies are favored.

And Iowa, 10-1 in 1991, gets another tough one, its fourth in five games. This Saturday it's Michigan at Ann Arbor, and it should be the Wolverines all the way.

Others: Texas A & M is favored over Texas Tech...Notre Dame will beat Stanford and LSU will lose to Tennessee.

RECORD ATTENDANCE....

After gaining approval from the University of Louisville to open the bleachers in the end zone, St. X and Trinity filled Cardinal Stadium Friday night with a record crowd. The 35,262 that showed up to witness Trinity's 13-10 victory broke the series record of 32,000 set in 1991. This year's mark is also believed to be the state record as well.

How does it stack up nationally?

Though no national records are kept for attendance, several states have packed major stadiums. Florida had 47,554 show up for a game between Miami Senior and Coral Gables in 1965 for a regular season contest played in the Orange Bowl.

Jack Watford, spokesman for Florida High School Activities, said the state hasn't had those numbers since the late '60s. The emergence of the Miami Dolphins in the NFL and college football across the Sunshine State has hurt high school attendance.

In Texas, the record was set for a playoff game in 1977. A crowd of 49,953 showed up at Texas Stadium. California's record stands at 57,000 for a 1956 contest featuring Anaheim and Downey high schools.

Past state champions from Kentucky and West Virginia that have appeared in the Sheldon Clark Basketball Panorama include such names as Louisville, Ballard and Fairdale from Kentucky. West Virginia champions have included Williamson and Logan.

Three former "Mr. Basketball" players have played in the prestigious tournament. They include John Pelphrey, Allen Houston and Jermaine Brown.

Allen Central Rebels place fourth in cross country meet

It's definitely fall of the year and it has been signaled by the beginning of the cross country racing season.

Four teams gathered at Paintsville this past weekend and competed in the sport that is fast becoming popular with athletes.

Jessica Wade of Allen Central ran off and left the rest of the field to take first place in the women's 4K run. Wade, one of the top track runners for the Rebels track and field team, posted a 18:51 to take the top spot. Team mate Jenny Wiley, another outstanding performer in track, came in a close third with a time of 19:47. Second place went to Paintsville with a 19:28.

"We have a competitive team," said Allen Central cross country coach Anthony Moore. "Our girls squad is real strong and we could be stronger if we could get some of the others out to participate."

In the boys 5K run, Todd Howard, an eighth grader at Maytown, placed fifth overall with a time of 22:27. Howard continues to be a promising runner for the Rebels squad. Kenny Scarberry placed 11th overall with a time of 23:37.

Other's running for the Rebels included Estill Stumbo, 28:10, Kenneth Bradley, 25:36, Mike Elzokori, 25:39, Wade Damron, 31:34 and Neil Hicks, 33:56. Also taking part were Kevin Stumbo, Jason Samons, and Jonathan Scarberry.

Laurel County took first place with 33 points. Paintsville was second at 41 and third place went to Sheldon Clark with 64 points. Allen Central finished with 82 points.

"We have a competitive team," said Allen Central cross country coach Anthony Moore. "Our girls squad is real strong and we could be stronger if we could get some of the others out to participate."

The Allen Central squad will be traveling to Oneida Baptist this Saturday for a meet.

Baseball and Computers

Everywhere you look these days, computers have taken over. And while they have made life easier and more efficient in many ways, we all have had experiences where they created more problems and frustrations than they solved. Baseball's experience with computers is no different — while they certainly make the manager's job easier, they sometimes just end up adding to his frustrations.

As in no other sport, statistics are a vital part of baseball. Long before computers came along, managers used statistics to determine whether a switch hitter's batting average was better from the left or right side, or to size up a batter's ability to deliver a "clutch" hit with runners in scoring position.

Pitchers also make use of statistics. Pitchers scheduled to start the next day often can be found in the dugout charting key information on opposing batters. These statistics, together with scouting reports and personal experience, allow pitchers to develop a fairly good idea of each batter's tendencies. For example, they know which players never swing at a first pitch, as well as those who always try to hit the first pitch.

Today, statistics in baseball have taken on an added dimension. Each team travels with a computer that contains detailed information about everything and anything having to do with an opposing team or player. This gives managers a tremendous boost in information needed to make adjustments in a game.

Managers always have positioned outfielders depending on the batter at the plate. Some managers, like former Pittsburgh Pirates' skipper Chuck Tanner, kept a coach in the press box to signal outfielders where to play. Such a coach was known as the "eye in the sky." Now, computers can tell a manager where specific batters hit the ball in almost any situation.

Of course, all this extra information complicates a manager's decision-making process during a game. Take, for example, a manager who is considering ordering his pitcher to walk a batter intentionally to load the bases and set up the double play. After reviewing his computer-generated statistics, however, he decides against the move because the batter at the plate hasn't been hitting well against the pitcher he is facing or against left-handed pitching in general. If the pitcher gets a strikeout, the manager looks like a genius. Of course, if the batter hits a three-run homer, the manager looks like a fool.

All the computers in the world cannot remove the human element from baseball. No one has invented a computer that can go out on the field and throw the ball. And that's what makes the national pastime a great game. ■

Hank Aaron is the top home-run hitter of all time with 755 homers. A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, Hank is senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves.

DEER BOW SEASON OPENS OCTOBER 1

Kentucky's deer archery season opens October 1 and will continue through January 15, 1993. The season limit is two deer, only one of which may be an antlered deer.

Hunters required to purchase a hunting license must also purchase a deer permit before deer hunting. Deer permits are available from county court clerk offices and numerous other outlets such as bait and tackle shops, sporting goods stores, most Wal-mart and K-mart stores.

This year, resident and nonresident hunters under age 16 are eligible to purchase a junior hunting license ($4) and will also be eligible to purchase either a two-tag deer permit ($17.50) or a one-tag youth deer permit ($11.50). In past years, all nonresident deer hunters were required to purchase the annual nonresident hunting license ($75) and two-tag deer permit. The requirement change was made to encourage more nonresident hunters to bring younger hunters with them to Kentucky to hunt, and to promote the sport of hunting as an enjoyable activity for youngsters.

According to John Phillips, deer program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR), state deer hunters should experience another good season this fall. Kentucky's deer herd stands between 450-500,000 animals, and about half of the state's estimated 200,000 deer hunters will be successful in harvesting a whitetail this year. Of the approximate 95,000 animals that will be taken, bow hunters will account for eight to 10 percent of the harvest.

"We continue to see expansion of deer numbers in the east, particularly the southeastern part of the state where deer populations have traditionally been lower due to poorer habitat," said Phillips.

"In the central and western two-thirds of Kentucky, our season framework is designed to primarily maintain the present herd level, but in some areas we will reduce deer numbers this season," the biologist explained.

In order to effectively keep deer populations from getting too large, antlerless deer must be harvested, which is one reason for the one-buck limit implemented last season for all deer hunters. The one-buck limit also decreases hunting pressure on antlered deer, which results in a higher percentage of quality bucks available," said Phillips.

Also in the month of October, Kentucky deer hunters will have the opportunity to use muzzle-loading firearms for deer. The first segment of the muzzle-loading season is October 17-18. Muzzle-loading rifles must be at least .40 caliber and muzzle-loading handguns at least .44 caliber. Muzzle-loading shotguns must be 10 through 20 gauge and used with single-projectile ammunition only.

During any period when firearms are permitted for deer hunting, wearing hunter orange garments on the head, chest and back is required for all hunters. Those hunting deer during archery-only periods are not required to wear hunter orange. Hunter education is now mandatory for all hunters born on or after January 1, 1975 and required to have a hunting license. Those for whom hunter education is mandatory may purchase a license before completing the course, but may not hunt without a hunter education course completion card in their possession.

Kentucky's modern gun season is November 14-23 in most counties. For more information about deer seasons and hunter education course schedules, contact KDFWR Information & Education Division, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, KY 40601; phone (502) 5644336. Ask for the free brochure Kentucky Deer Hunting Guide. This guide is also available where licenses are sold.

Fly Fishing

Lefty Kreh

THE MOST EFFECTIVE UNDER WATER FLY

Every fly fisherman is looking for that secret weapon. A fly that will work on all fish, under all conditions. Of course, no fly will ever meet those requirements, but there is one fly that when fished underwater comes close to that criteria. It is the Clouser Deep Minnow.

It had a modest beginning. Bob Clouser operates a fly shop along the Susquehanna River, a few miles downstream from Harrisburg, PA. Stopping by one morning, he handed me a fly, which looked very unimpressive. Try this on the smallmouths today. I tied a few yesterday and they worked pretty well," he said.

Later, I cast one and began retrieving it. Immediately, I could see that it had several attributes that would make it a good streamer imitation. Over the next several weeks we began improving the pattern.

When you see a minnow in the water, you really see a "suggestion" of that baitfish. You can't clearly see the fins, small markings on the sides, etc. What you see is a rather dim outline of a baitfish. Often, you will see the eye. The Clouser Deep Minnow imitates what you actually see: a suggestion of a minnow, and a pronounced eye. And, because of the way the fly is tied, it sinks like an anvil in a swamp. When compared to other streamer patterns, this fly fishes two to three times deeper in the current, if you want it to.

The fly is exceptionally easy to tie. And, due to its design characteristics, it is surprisingly easy to cast. Bear in mind that the Clouser Deep Minnow is a method of making a pattern. It is not an exact combination of colors, or a prescribed length. Because color combinations and length can be varied, it can be tied as short as an inch long for trout fishing, or 12 inches long to catch a wahoo or sailfish.

Here's how you tie it. Put the hook size you want to use in the fly vice.

Secure a pair of lead eyes (bead chain can be substituted but won't sink the fly as fast) about 3/16 inch behind the hook eye on the shank. The weight of the lead eyes is dependent upon how deep you want the fly to sink. For trout, I use 1/100 or 1/50 ounce eyes. For bass I usually install 1/32 or 1/24 ounce eyes. For saltwater fishing eye weight can be anything from 1/50 to 1/32, 1/24 to 1/8, or even heavy 1/10 ounce lead eyes.

Once the eyes have been secured to the shank, turn the hook over in the tying vise and just forward of the eyes, tie in a sparse wing of bucktail, calftail or one of the synthetic wing materials. Add a few strands of Mylar (Crystal Flash or Flashabou) and then tie in a top wing, using about the same amount of material as was used on the bottom wing. That's it!

The wing should be dressed very sparse - much thinner than conventional stream fly wings. For example, on a smallmouth bass streamer, tied on a size #2 hook with 1/32 ounce lead eyes, the wing should be no thicker when compressed than an old time barn burner match.

A good trout Clouser Deep Minnow is one dressed on a size #8 hook, with a dark yellow underwing, 2 or 3 strands of copper flashy Mylar, and a dark brown top wing. Total length of fly is about an inch.

An all black Clouser Deep Minnow (with a few strands of black or purple flashy Mylar in the wing) has for me, out-fished the famed woolly bugger fly. It gets deeper in the water column if you use the proper eyes, and casts so much better.

A preferred color combination around the world for me has been to make the bottom wing of white bucktail, some pearl Crystal Flash, topped with a wing of light gray, green or blue. This fly imitates baitfish you will find almost everywhere.

The Clouser Deep Minnow is by far the most effective underwater fly I have ever used in fresh or saltwater. Give it a try. . . I think you'll agree.

Caudill, Gross, big factors as Pirates roll past Trojans, 47-0

by Sheldon Compton
Contributing writer

It wasn't a pretty sight for Trojan fans Friday night at Fleming-Neon. Jack Hall's side-saddle offense proved to be more than Wheelwright could handle as Neon blanked the Trojans 47-0 in a lopsided victory to improve their record to 4-1.

The Trojans (3-2) were looking for a play off berth made visible going into Friday's game seeing it as a big district matchup and an important win, a much needed win coming off a loss at Pikeville which left the team's mental game badly battered.

The Pirates had other plans.

It was apparent it was going to be a productive night for Neon when on Wheelwright's first possession they were forced to punt on 4 and 12 from their own 14-yard line and the Pirates Jeremy Gross returned it for a touchdown which would eventually be called back due to a clipping penalty against Neon.

It wouldn't take long to make up for the mistake when starting from Wheelwright's own 23-yard line Scott Caudill found an opening on the third play from scrimmage and went 16 yards for the score. Gross completed the extra point and made it was 7-0.

Wheelwright's next possession was scattered with penalties bringing up another punting situation.

Neon took the opportunity and ran with it on a six play-drive that covered 106 yards capped by a 23-yard touchdown run by Chris White and Gross' extra point expanding the lead 14-0 with 3:47 left in the first quarter.

On Wheelwright's next series they moved the ball to midfield before Adams fumbled and the ball fell into the hands of Randy Phipps who shot past oncoming tackles to a touchdown for the Pirates defense, Gross added his third extra point and it was a 21-0 game.

At the start of the second quarter Neon's offense looked to be slowing down as their first two plays from scrimmage were penalties—the first a delay of game and the second a holding—but things would change when John Henry Hall connected with Mikey Paul Quillen for a 29-yard touchdown pass and Gross kicked the extra point making it 28-0.

Wheelwright was forced to punt again on their next possession and two plays later Neon converted it into another touchdown as freshman Doug Mullins scored from 2 yards out. Gross' extra point was blocked and it was 34-0.

Wheelwright held the ball 4:50 on their next possession and seemed to be threatening when Steven Shelton threw a floating interception to end the drive.

It took Neon 5:40 into the third quarter to score again as Mullins ran a 1-yard touchdown. Gross' extra point was blocked and Neon rode a 40-0 lead.

"I wish the game would have been over at halftime," Neon's coach Jack Hall commented after the game, "I don't like to beat people bad."

Neon scored once more on their first punt attempt as the punt return was fumbled by Muntu Oden and recovered by the Pirates on Wheelwright's own 3-yard line. Jamie Hall scored from the 1 yard line and Gross added what would be his final extra point giving him 5 for 6 on the night. The score stood 47-0 with 7:22 left in the fourth quarter.

Wheelwright made an impressive last minute drive that went for 14 plays but failed to score giving Neon the clock to run out.

"I wish the game would have been over at halftime," Neon's coach Jack Hall commented after the game, "I don't like to beat people bad."

Wheelwright's coach Donnie Daniels was visibly displeased after the game.

"I promise there will be a different team when we take the field Friday night. We're going to restore Trojan pride."

Neon had a total of 363 total yards while Wheelwright combined a total of 165. Scott Caudill lead the Pirates with 108 yards rushing along with 1 touchdown. Wheelwright was led in rushing by Muntu Oden who had 52 yards on the ground.

Headed for the goal line!

Seth Hyden (32) scored two touchdowns against Betsy Layne Friday night at the Lloyd Hamilton Athletic Complex Friday night to lead the Blackcats to their fourth win of the season. Prestonsburg posted a 42-20 win over the Bobcats. (photo by Estill Robinson)

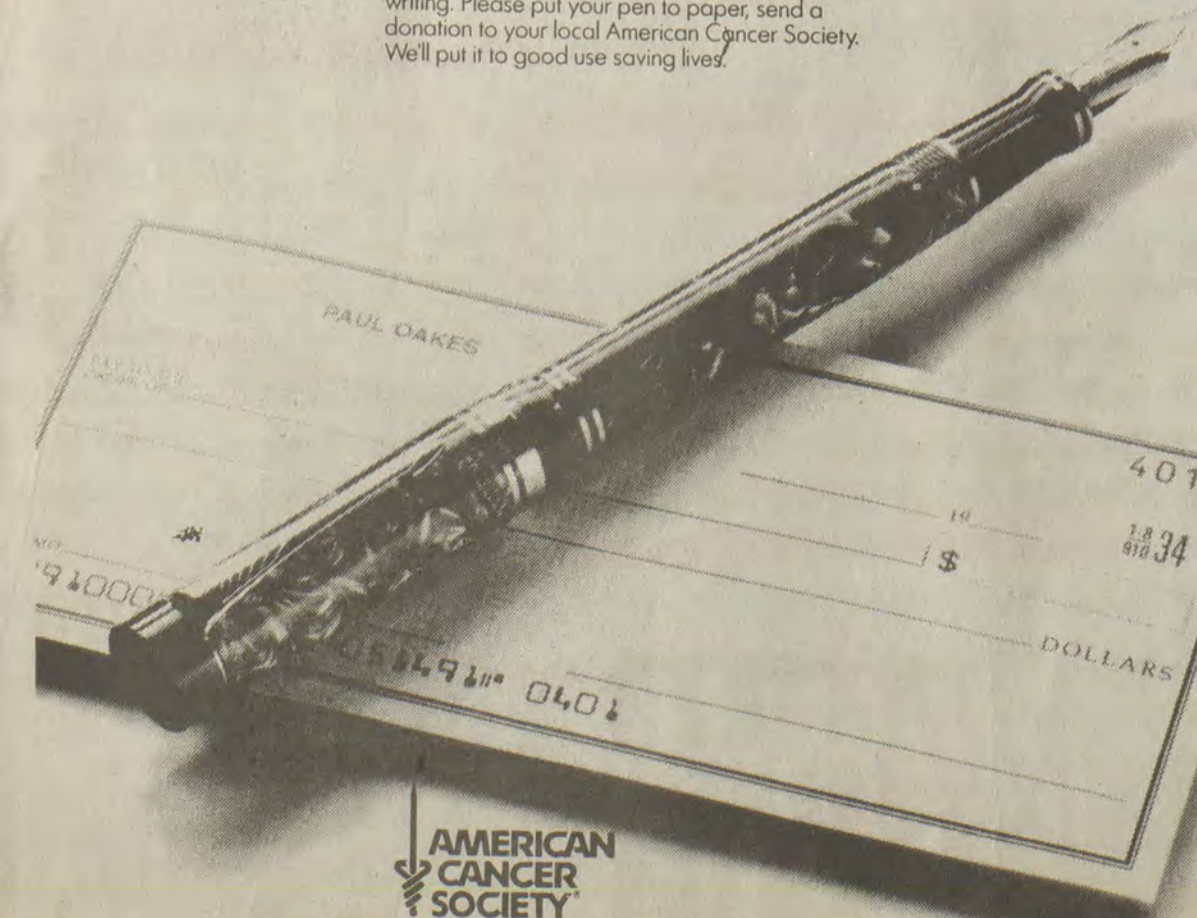

Stumbo looks for running room!

Allen Central's Shane Stumbo took this kickoff and returned it for 30 yards against Jenkins Friday night at Allen Central. Stumbo had to kick off returns for 60 yards in his team's 67-8 loss to Jenkins. (photo by Candy Mathers)

THERE'S NOTHING MIGHTIER THAN THE SWORD. EXCEPT MAYBE, A PEN.

Thirty years ago, we put pen to paper and wrote this slogan, "Fight cancer with a checkup and a check." In that time alone, survival rates for most major cancers have gone from one in three to one in two. Today, the fight continues, and while we're making progress, more needs to be done. Much of this progress we owe to research. Since 1950, the American Cancer Society has invested $1.3 billion in research, results-driven research that includes the lifesaving work of 25 Nobel Prize winners.

Research isn't the only thing we do. Our prevention and early detection activities helped 55 million people last year understand we can beat cancer. The cost of these programs is staggering. We need you to prove once again that it is better to give than to receive and we need it in writing. Please put your pen to paper, send a donation to your local American Cancer Society. We'll put it to good use saving lives.

Take a break, driver 8

I suppose I'm in what I might call the "mental health" stage of my trip.

A week ago, I passed the one-month mark. I don't know how these columns have been run, so you may think I've actually been in the wilds longer. Good, you might have more sympathy.

My time on the road started to show signs—road weariness began to rear its ugly head. I reached the point where I was telling myself that I was supposed to be having fun. Little things made me want to explode—like a cashier in a department store accidentally nuking the magnetic strip on my credit card. At times like these, it's best to call a rest break. I stopped in Salem, Oregon at the home of one of my father's Air Force buddies to rest and recuperate. I guess it did me some good. I feel much better now.

I managed to escape California without witnessing "The Big One." I wouldn't rule it out in the near future. Remember when I was talking about Zion National Park? It was recently closed because of an earthquake. Stay tuned.

Anyway, I left San Francisco (which I discovered is Spanish for "clutch burn") and visited some family friends in Sacramento. I don't know how much significance this will have to the older generation, but I shopped at the original Tower Records Store. I would never have guessed it was in Sacramento.

From there, I got back on I-5, nicknamed the "Hypnosis Highway" for the stunning lack of scenery between L.A. and San Francisco, and headed into Northern California. I drove through the part of the state that was hit with all those terrible fires. In the space of a mile, the hills changed from a beautiful green to jet black. Farther up the highway, I came around a curve over a hill and—bam!—Mount Shasta.

Mount Shasta isn't the highest mountain in America or even the prettiest, but when Abbott Mountain was all I was used to and around a corner is this huge snow-capped peak, all I could say was "Wow." Since then, I've seen other mountains like that—Mount Hood, Mount Washington, and Mount Rainier. I also saw Mount St. Helens, which looked like the others until 1980. Apparently Mount Hood is next in line for eruption. Pesky volcanic peaks.

After passing Shasta, I went to Crater Lake. My father suggested that I see this place because I was thinking of going on by. As usual, he was right. Crater Lake was formed by one of the largest volcanic explosions known. The eruption released 200 times as much ash and rock as the 1980 eruption of Mount St. Helens. The result is a three-mile-wide lake filled to a depth of 2000 feet with the bluest water in the world.

The scale of the place boggles the mind. I was standing at an overlook 1900 feet above the lake's surface looking down at water that looks like it was colored with a giant aquamarine Crayola. There's a volcanic cone sticking up 760 feet above the surface. I didn't appreciate the size until I realized that an ant-sized speck scooting across the water was a 20-person passenger boat. Also about that time, a cloud came rolling over the lip of the crater. I was standing in a cloud on the lip of a volcano filled with water looking straight down almost half a mile. Mindblowing.

After stopping for a night in Roseburg (no relation), Oregon, I skirted the Oregon Coast, which is where countless car commercials are filmed. I went to a state park called Seal Rock and sat on top of a 500-foot crag (with a sign at the base reading "Danger—Do Not Go Past This Point") and watched whales play in the Pacific. Yes, whales—humpback, I think. Every couple of minutes they'd spout and occasionally flip their tails. Oregon has a beautiful coast. Great seafood too—eat at Mo's if you're ever out here.

TRIBUTE

In the book of Ecclesiastics it is written: "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven. A time to be born, and a time to die."

Emmit Eugene Conn was born at Harold, May 23, 1925, the son of the late Mallie Walter and Minta Belle Hamilton Conn. He had one brother, Jack Eddie Conn of Lexington, who survives him.

He died September 22, 1992, and in his sixty-seven plus years, his life was filled with the times spoken of in the Bible.

There was "a time to love" and "a time to embrace." The love of his life was his Bebe, the former Bebe Joy Hayes. They were married December 6, 1947, and were the parents of three children: Stephen Hayes, Deborah Lee and Barbi Jean.

Later there would be four grandchildren: Michael Emmit Conn, Joy Deshay Bush, Shanea Jeanette Bush and Leslie Kyle Bow. There are also a son-and-daughter-in-law: Tom Bow and Patty Conn. Emmit loved his family, his friends, his church and his work.

There was "a time of peace"—a time to accept the great gift of God's love, His forgiveness and His promise that nothing "shall be able to separate us from the love of God." He became a Christian 36 years ago.

There was "a time to plant" and "a time to build up." Emmit worked with his hands, his mind and his energies. He was a coal operator and for a while he would open one mine and then another, only to have them fail.

One day he told Bebe, "I've had a talk with God and I promised Him that if He would give me the ability to succeed, I would always give a portion back to His work." He had great success with his business and, until he died, he gave generously to his church and to needs that were placed on his heart.

For Emmit, there was "a time to weep" and "a time to mourn."

He knew the pain of tragedy when he lost Deborah, his dear baby girl, at the age of three. By rare coincidence, his last hours were spent in the same hospital room where one of his dearest friends, John Porter, also died almost 20 years ago. These and other losses were cause for a time of grief.

There was also "a time to laugh." He had a rare sense of humor and enjoyed doing things differently. There will be no end to the memories or the stories that are told about him.

Emmit would be pleased that so many friends and loved ones came to honor him and he would enjoy being remembered, not for the sadness of parting, but for all the seasons of his life—the laughter, the love, and the grace of God that was so freely extended to him.

He had many friends, but the best friend of all loved him enough to die on an old rugged cross and make a place so beautiful as Heaven. Emmit knew the Shepherd for 36 years, and he was able to say:

The Lord is my Shepherd
Through good days and bad;
He knows of the pleasure
And sadness I've had.

The valleys and shadows
Have been very real,
But so have green pastures
And waters so still.

The past and the future
Are held in His care,
For He is the Shepherd
And why should I fear?

Part I
Progress, pain, and patience

While driving to school last week and listening to the radio, I heard a D.J. explaining the traffic jams Floyd Countians are enduring.

He ended his update on the situation with, "but folks, with progress there's pain." Truer words were never spoken.

Our new highway is progress with a capital "P." And the lines of traffic we find ourselves in is definitely pain with a capital "P."

What is that saying? Patience and perseverance, better things are yet to come. Yes, that's it. And with this in mind, my patience on the middle school traffic back-up is wearing. I don't care what time I leave the house I'm still sitting in front of Ultimate Wave, or even farther back, in front of Jenny Wiley Village.

My 11-year-old in the meantime is blaming this entire situation on me.

Leaving at 6 a.m. would suit her just fine.

The entrances to the middle school have signs for buses and personnel and an other for parents and visitors, which would probably help the back-up providing they were used correctly.

Or maybe we simply need a person directing the traffic.

I've seen crossing guards helping children across streets in our neighboring counties and thought, hey, this is exactly what we need at the middle school.

There's one major difference, though. The crossing guards I've seen are students and with the traffic this stretch of road has, an adult would have to be appointed.

Maybe Wal-Mart has the right idea. We've all seen local senior citizens employed there, greeting us as we enter the store.

So, maybe there's an idea. A senior citizen as a traffic controller at the middle school morning jam.

Oh well, it's a thought.
Till next week, drive carefully.

Part II

The times they are a changin' and here is a prime example.

(Flashback) Library—a room filled with books, where one may go to travel through words to places far and wide. Where as a young student my classmate and I would sit quietly—for talking in the library was absolutely not permitted.

Now forget the 70's for the 90's are here and libraries are not media centers.

Not only can our children travel through words of books, they may now travel through computer from school to school.

They engage in classes such as great books, world travel and video production.

Students work in groups, discuss and contemplate their next project.

They learn from hands-on experience the many, many areas of life they may travel in the years to come.

No folks, things sure ain't what they used to be.

And progress ain't only happening with our highways.
Till next week.

Builder says times, not people change

Russell Anderson learned about hard work in the coal fields of Kentucky where he was born. When he moved to Michigan, he applied that hard work to the construction industry to become one of the largest property owners in Michigan.

After he graduated from McDowell High School in 1950, Anderson became a miner, but coal work was sporadic. "It (coal mining) is good for awhile and then (down) for two or three months at a time," said Anderson. "That's the history of it."

Anderson liked being a miner, but opportunity knocked in Michigan and he when he answered, he opened the door to his future. When friends travelled to Michigan to do some construction work, Anderson went with them.

In Michigan, he learned to finish sheetrock (drywall), and two years later, he established his own construction business. In those days, according to Anderson, there was a demand for housing in Michigan and the construction business was booming.

In 1963, Anderson decided to build ten apartments, pay them off over the years, and then use the rent income as a nest egg for his retirement. The apartments were rented before he finished building them, so he built five more, then 15 and soon he was the owner of 60 apartments.

That was just the beginning. Anderson now owns approximately 430 apartments and homes. He has $5 million worth of condominiums and his personal condo in Hawaii, where he lives from December to April, is valued at $3 million.

Anderson has no plans for retirement and puts in 12 to 14 hour days. He has also tried his hand at other business ventures, including trucking, building supplies, and health food stores.

He also builds churches, so far about 15-20, throughout the world, including two in Korea. He donates these churches to God, whom he gives credit for his success. He gives 50 percent of his income to charity, 40 percent to Uncle Sam and the rest of it goes to his wife to "get her hair done."

Religion plays a major role in Anderson's life. A layman minister, he regularly travels throughout the world—Jamaica, China, and the Philippines—to deliver the message of God's Grace.

Anderson became a born-again Christian on September 13, 1959. The first time he heard the Gospel of salvation through grace was in Sunday School in 1959, and Anderson opened his heart.

He reads the Bible through about three times a year and begins each day by quoting Psalm 32:8, "I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with mine eyes," and says a prayer for God's guidance. He is co-founder of the college, Hyles-Anderson College, in Crown Point, Indiana. Currently, 3,500 students are enrolled and that number is growing, though guidelines for students are strict. Boys are required to wear ties at dinner and must seat girls at the table.

"We're stricter than Alice Lloyd (College) used to be," said Anderson. "We put character in them."

Anderson's Kentucky roots still pull him back to Eastern Kentucky from time to time, and he recently attended his class reunion at McDowell. While here, he donated around $7,000 to the new Left Beaver High School library.

He also employs workers from Kentucky. "You almost have to be from Kentucky to work for me," Anderson said.

At home in Michigan, when he spots a car with a Kentucky license plate, he follows it and strikes up a conversation with the occupants. He's a supporting member of the Kentuckians of Michigan, who meet annually at a park there.

Anderson is proud of his roots, usually wears sweatshirts proclaiming he's a member of the Kentuckians of Michigan. "There isn't any group of people that can come up to Kentuckians," he said.

NOT AFRAID, JUST SUSPICIOUS

For some reason, I don't like to watch movies alone. Not even on TV. Not even John Wayne and Randolph Scott.

I think it all stems from growing up in Muddy Branch where movie going was a group project. In those days in the late 1940s and 1950s, before TV sets began to appear in the community, a bunch of us boys—perhaps a dozen strong—would gather around the pump rock in front of Virgil Greene's house and walk to town for the Saturday matinees. We'd, no doubt, look like a small army as we'd take the railroad tracks up through Greentown, crawl through the fence behind Bill Pigg's, then follow Route 40 on into town. It wasn't more than a mile or two, but on those hot, muggy dog-day Saturday mornings, it seemed longer.

Every once in a while, we'd also walk to the show on Saturday night. Of course, it'd be daylight when we'd go, but by the time the show was over, it'd be good and dark.

On the way out of town, we'd stop at Raymond Brugh's pool room on Main Street and buy us each a big Roi-Tan cigar for a nickel. We'd feel 10 feet tall and bullet proof as we'd walk home and discuss this week's episode of "Undersea Kingdom." It was the general consensus that Crash Corrigan would be okay, but for the life of us, we couldn't see how.

Walking home at night wasn't all that bad as long as we were still in the lights of town. Walking the railroad tracks through Greentown, though, was another matter, especially when someone would declare his bravery by saying that he absolutely did not believe that the stretch of tracks between the Thealka Post Office and the company store was haunted and that there was no way a ghost with no head could really chase anybody. We'd usually run that stretch, but not because we were scared. Somebody'd yell, "Race ya!" and not one of us could resist a challenge.

Looking back, I also think that there was a bit more to our traveling in large numbers than just our desire for companionship, our fear of headless ghosts, and our love for Roy Rogers, Gene Autry and Lash Larue. There was also the dreaded—but seldom spoken of—thought of confrontation with various other groups our age from other places.

Anyway, I suspect that whether we knew it or not, we'd travel in packs (no pun intended) for safety's sake. It must have worked, too, because I can't remember ever having any fights, except among ourselves.

These minor skirmishes would usually start at play, say like a baseball game, with shouts of "You're out!"

"Am not!"
"Are too!"
"Ain't dunner!"

Then we'd light into each other until someone would drag us apart. By the end of the inning, all would be forgotten and life would again be normal.

Anyway, it's not like we were really afraid of those other kids from those other places. I guess we were just kind of suspicious of them. I'll bet if the truth were really known, they also had their doubts about us Muddy Branchers, too.

Prestonsburg Kiwanianes hold luncheon meeting

Members of the Prestonsburg Kiwanianes held their monthly luncheon-meeting at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, Thursday, September 24, at 12:30 p.m., with the president, Mabel Jean LeMaster presiding.

The Kiwanian grace was said in unison. The devotion was given by Mrs. Lucy C. Regan, who read a Bible passage from Mark, and a poem entitled, "In the Morning," and ended her discussion with prayers.

Jane Wallace, program chairman, presented Jane Bond, of the Floyd County Health Department, who spoke to the group on the importance of flu and pneumonia shots, which will be available there after October 15. Bond also said that the Kentucky Cancer Program stresses mammography tests for all women over 18 years of age, and especially for women whose families have histories of cancer. She told of the many and varied programs made available by the Floyd County Health Department, and expressed the hope that people who need these services would make use of them.

Present for this event were Mabel Jean LeMaster, Garnett Fairchild, Jane Bond, Minerva Cooley, Ada Meade, Myrtle Allen, Jane Wallace, Mildred Salisbury, Pearl Robinson, Margaret Collins, Lucy C. Regan, Goldia Williams, and Hope Whitten.

The next luncheon-meeting will be held there on Thursday, October 22, at 12:30 p.m., at which time officers for the year 1992-93 are to be installed. All Kiwanian members are urged to attend.

Burchett, Jarrell to exchange vows

Melissa Jarrell and David Burchett

Mr. and Mrs. Kenny Jarrell, of Prestonsburg, announce the engagement of their daughter, Melissa Jarrell to David Burchett, son of Willie Burchett and the late Annie Burchett of Auxier.

Miss Jarrell is a graduate of Prestonsburg High School.

Mr. Burchett is also a graduate of Prestonsburg High School and is employed by MCL.

The wedding will be held October 10, at 5:30 p.m. at the Cow Creek Free Will Baptist Church. An open wedding will be observed.

I got to Salem and drove around the Columbia River Gorge. I got sort of homesick. This place looks a lot like Red River Gorge, except everything's bigger—the trees are taller, the gorge is bigger, and the river's bigger. I still like Red River better.

Some things never change, though. Everyone reading this column has been driving a winding road behind a coal truck while dodging projectiles falling off the back. I'm glad I've had lots of practice with those coal trucks. The log trucks here throw wood chips something fierce. They're not required to put tarps on logs.

So, I got to take a well-deserved rest in a friendly place in Oregon. I've been very lucky having parents that know people across the country. Between their friends, my friends and my relatives, I've been able to find several places to stay along the way. It's nice to sleep knowing I'm not paying exorbitant prices for a bed. Thanks, parents and everyone who's sheltered me so far.

This stop was for mental health. Next stop is Seattle—Metal health. Later days.

First Baptist Church welcomes Fall Evangelism Conference

The First Baptist Church had the privilege of hosting the 1992 Fall Evangelism Conference, which was sponsored by the Office of Evangelism, Kentucky Baptist Convention, with the Rev. Bill Jagers, former pastor of the host church as director.

One person was saved, as participants shared the gospel and witnessed on the street, during the lunch hour.

The program for this conference, which was held September 25-26, follows:

On Friday, September 25, at 7 p.m., welcome: Bill Jagers; greetings, host pastor, Mike Taylor; special music: "Unity"; reach people—start a mission: D.M. Aldridge; congregational singing: Don Schlosser; special music: Tammy Outlaw; message: Dale Holloway; and benediction: James Smith.

This event was sponsored by the Office for Evangelism, Kentucky Baptist Convention.

Mrs. Alice O. Martin has houseguests

The family of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Wicker of Dayton, Ohio, spent Labor Day weekend at the home of Mrs. Alice O. Martin on Turkey Creek. They were joined there by Reginald Owens of Sandy Hook. All of them attended the Wicker reunion, at Jenny Wiley State Park on September 5.

Flowers at First United Methodist

Flowers on the altar of the First United Methodist Church during services there this past Sunday morning were "in appreciation for the love and prayers for Bob Wallace during his surgery and recovery" from Bob and Jane; "in love and honor" of Chalmer Frazier on his birthday, from the Frazier family; and "in loving memory" of Kenneth Cauthen, from the Cook family.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzpatrick return from vacation in Maine

Mr. and Mrs. H.D. Fitzpatrick have returned to their home here, following a recent vacation of several days spent in Maine.

Welcomed into First Baptist Church

Welcome into the fellowship of the First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial) during services there on Wednesday evening, September 23, were John and Pricillia McAnthosh, who joined by letter from the Pleasant Home Baptist Church.

Lamplighters hold meeting at First Baptist Church

The Lamplighters of the First Baptist Church met in Fellowship Hall there on Tuesday, September 21, with Mrs. Michele Taylor, wife of the church's pastor, in charge of the meeting. She opened the meeting with a Bible reading and prayer. Much of the time was spent preparing packages for hurricane victims—some for adults and some for children, with adults packages holding household items as well as personal gifts, and the children's package containing story books, toothpaste, tooth brushes, and other needed items.

Present were Michele Taylor, Ada Meade, Minerva Cooley, Myrtle Allen, and Lucy C. Regan, all of whom enjoyed the work done there.

These meetings are every-other-Tuesday at 4 p.m. and a cordial invitation is extended to attend.

(Boxes for donations of items such as food, towels, linens, soap, shampoo, etc., for the Kentucky Baptist Children's Home are in the vestibule of the First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial).

In Korea

Pvt. E-2 Samuel A. Johnson, who entered the Army in 1991, has been assigned to Korea for one year. He completed his basic training in South Carolina, and C.I.T. schooling in Fort Gordon, Georgia. He is the son of Willie and JoAnn Tackett Johnson of Hillard, Ohio, and the grandson of John and Virgie Little McCoart and Willie and Garnet Tackett, formerly of Beaver.

You can beat breast cancer. Jackie Newton is living proof.

"My breast cancer was found from my routine mammogram. It was very small, .6 centimeters. And I was very lucky that the mammogram picked it up. A few years ago, because my cancer was so deep, it would have been too late. I would have been dead."

Jackie Newton, of Paintsville, learned she was at risk because of a family history of cancer. She learned to do breast self exams (BSE) and followed a schedule of mammograms at the Breast Center. There, the tiny lump was found.

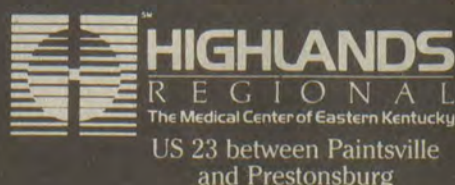

The Breast Center staff was there for Jackie. "Somehow, I just knew it was cancer. Denice (the Nurse Educator) held me and cried with me...she and Connie and the other girls at the Breast Center...they're just a great bunch of people.

Early detection paid off for Jackie "I got rid of it and I'm doing great." Her advice? "BSE's are important. When I came to the Breast Center, Denice did a lot to help me do the right kind of breast exam." And—"there is a little discomfort with the mammogram, but it's well worth the few minutes to save your life."

District 4 Rebekahs meet

The quarterly meeting of District 4 Rebekahs was held in the I.O.O.F. Lodge hall of Prestonsburg with Miriam Rebekah Lodge No. 31 as the host lodge. This meeting was held on Saturday, September 19, at 7:30 p.m., with Beverly Hackworth, district president, presiding.

Prior to the meeting, a covered-dish dinner was served in the dining room to those attending from Pikeville, Paintsville, Inez and Prestonsburg.

The business of the district was conducted by the president. A discussion regarding contribution of the love offering to the Assembly President's Project was held and a monetary gift was allowed.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected and installed as follows: president, Sandra Castle of Paintsville; vice president, Jean Hickman of Prestonsburg; secretary, Mary Zemo of Prestonsburg; and treasurer, Mabel Jean LeMaster of Prestonsburg. Beverly Hackworth was nominated the deputy president.

The attendance banner was won by Paintsville Rebekah Lodge.

The December meeting will be held in Paintsville on the first Saturday in that month.

GFWC/KFWC Prestonsburg Woman's Club reschedules regular meeting

Due to the covered-dish dinner to be held by the membership committee of the GFWC/KFWC Prestonsburg Woman's Club on Tuesday, September 29, at 6:30 p.m., at the clubhouse, at Archer Park, the regular monthly meeting of this organization, which was to have been held October 1, has been postponed until October 8.

Garnet Fairchild, the club's president, asks that the executive board meet there at 7 p.m., with the regular meeting to begin at 7:30 on that date.

Stapleton of Estill; Louise West of Lackey; and Laura Marie Ratliff of Allen formed a group recently for lunch at May Lodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas LeMaster attend family reunion

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas LeMaster spent Saturday, September 26, in Cynthiana, attending a family reunion of the descendants of Andrew Jack Alley and Mahala Hall Alley. Mrs. LeMaster's mother, Mrs. Josephine Alley Conley, was a daughter of Andrew Jack and Mahala Alley.

Attending this reunion were grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren of the Alley family, with some coming from Indiana, Ohio, Arkansas, and Kentucky.

This was the third reunion to be held and plans were made for another to be held next year.

Miracle Day observed at First United Methodist

Miracle Day was observed at the First United Methodist Church, on Sunday, September 27. The Rev. Russ Holland, pastor there, made this announcement in the church's Sunday bulletin: "Miracles come in all shapes and sizes. Most are not as spectacular as parting the Red Sea or raising the physically dead to life. Yet, we live in a world where God is always doing miraculous things. We hope by calling this 'Miracle Day' we can help you to focus on these miracles all around us. So many people focus on the negative and the worst of life. Today, we focus on the glory of God and the miracle of His love and faith. Look around. There's a miracle nearer than you think."

There were 257 in attendance at the church on Miracle Day.

Mrs. Hettie Porter DeLong spends weekend here

Mrs. Hettie Porter DeLong was the overnight guest on Saturday of Mrs. Lucy C. Regan, and on Sunday she attended services with her at the First Baptist Church (Irene Cole Memorial). While here, she also called on Mrs. Carl Woods, her former first grade teacher at the Prestonsburg Grade School. Mrs. DeLong is presently a teacher in the Winchester School System.

Local students honored with prestigious EKU scholarship awards

Six Floyd County students have been honored with Eastern Kentucky University's most prestigious scholarship awards.

The top awards include the Commonwealth Scholar Award, EKU Honor Award, Regents Scholarship, Presidential Scholarship and Out-of-State Scholar Award.

Overall, 577 students received one of the top EKU awards—one Honor Award, four Commonwealth Scholar Awards, 15 Out-of-State Scholar Awards, 326 Regents Scholarships and 231 Presidential Awards.

Students awarded Presidential Scholarships were Kristina E. Bevins of Printer, who's majoring in Mathematics; William Roy Everly of Prestonsburg, Pre-nursing (Baccalaureate) major; Sharon Kay Fugate of Winchester, Occupational Therapy major; Kimberly A. Hamilton of Craynor, Communication Therapy major; Tara Suzanne Slone of Richmond, Pre-Veterinary Medicine major; Kimberly A. Carter of Harold, Pre-Nursing (Baccalaureate) major, received a regent scholarship.

The Regents Scholarships cover the tuition and activity fees. Regents Awards are granted to Kentucky Governor's Scholars, students with ACT composite scores greater than 28, and applicants with a minimum grade point average of 3.75 on a 4.0 scale and an ACT composite of 25.

The Presidential Scholarships total half the tuition and activity fee and are awarded on the basis of rank in a student's high school class, grade point average, and ACT scores.

Information about EKU's scholarship program and application forms are available by writing the Scholarship Committee, Coates Box 85A, EKU, Richmond, Ky., 40475-3101.

Eastern Kentucky University is a comprehensive university serving more than 16,500 students on its 350-acre Richmond campus, throughout its 22-county extended service region, and beyond.

STEAK AU POIVRE WITH DIJON SAUCE

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Cooking time: 36 to 42 minutes
3-pound boneless beef sirloin steak, cut 2 inches thick
1 to 3 tablespoons peppercorns
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon each honey and Dijon-style mustard
Parsley sprigs

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. Trim excess fat from boneless beef sirloin steak. Crush peppercorns slightly in mortar with pestle; press pepper firmly into top surface of steak to coat evenly. Heat oil in cast-iron frying pan over high heat until very hot; sprinkle salt in bottom of pan. (Oil is hot enough when a drop of water "dances" in the pan). Place steak in pan, peppered side down; sear 30 seconds to 1 minute. Turn steak over and sear second side 30 seconds to 1 minute. Cover pan, leaving steak with peppered side up. Place in oven and cook 30 to 35 minutes for medium-rare (150 degrees F) or to desired doneness. Place steak on platter. Add wine, honey and mustard to pan; cook over medium heat 5 minutes or until sauce is slightly thickened. Carve about 1/4 of the steak into thin slices; spoon some sauce over steak. Garnish with parsley. Serve steak with remaining sauce. 12 servings.

Nutrient data per serving of steak and 1 tablespoon of sauce:
180 calories; 6 g fat; 276 mg sodium; 69 mg cholesterol.

FISH AND CHIPS

4 potatoes
Vegetable oil
1 pound cod or other lean fish fillets
2/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 tablespoon vinegar
2/3 cup water
Cut potatoes lengthwise into 1/2-inch strips. Heat oil (2 to 3 inches) in deep fryer or Dutch oven to 375°. Fill basket one-fourth full with potatoes.

Slowly lower basket into hot oil. (If oil bubbles excessively, raise and lower basket several times.) Use long-handled fork to keep potatoes separated. Fry potatoes 5 to 7 minutes or until golden brown; drain on paper towels. Place potatoes in single layer on cookie sheet and keep warm. Repeat with remaining potatoes.

Cut fish fillets into 2x1 1/2-inch pieces. Pat dry with paper towels. Mix flour and salt. Mix baking soda and vinegar. Stir vinegar mixture and water into flour mixture; beat until smooth. Dip fish into batter, allowing excess batter to drip into bowl. Fry 4 or 5 fish pieces at a time (do not use basket) about 3 minutes, turning fish once, until brown. Drain on paper towels.

Set oven control to broil. Broil potatoes 6 inches from heat 2 to 3 minutes or until crisp. 4 servings; 375 calories per serving.

STRAWBERRY-RHUBARB COBBLER

Filling
1 (16 ounce) package frozen sliced strawberries, thawed
1 pound fresh rhubarb, cut into 1-inch pieces*
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup sugar
1/3 cup cornstarch
Cake
3 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup margarine
1 (8 ounce) carton (1 cup) LAND O LAKES® Light Sour Cream
2 eggs
3 tablespoons skim milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Topping
1/3 cup sugar
1/2 cup sliced almonds
Half-and-half or ice cream
In 3-quart saucepan combine strawberries and rhubarb. Cook over medium heat until mixture comes to a full boil (10 to 15 minutes). Reduce heat to low. Cover; continue cooking

5 minutes. Stir in lemon juice. In small bowl combine 1 cup sugar and cornstarch. Stir into fruit mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until mixture thickens and just comes to a boil. Boil 1 minute; cool. Heat oven to 350°. In large bowl combine flour, 1 cup sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Cut in margarine until crumbly. In medium bowl combine all remaining cake ingredients; beat with wire whisk until smooth. Stir Light Sour Cream mixture into flour mixture just until moistened. Spread half of batter on bottom of greased 13x9x2 1/2-inch aluminum baking pan. Spread with cooled fruit mixture. Drop remaining batter by spoonfuls over fruit filling. Sprinkle with 1/3 cup sugar and sliced almonds. Bake for 55 to 70 minutes or until wooden pick inserted into center of cake comes out clean. Serve warm or cool. If desired, serve with half-and-half or ice cream. YIELD: 16 servings.

*1 (16 ounce) package frozen sliced rhubarb, thawed, can be substituted for 1 pound fresh rhubarb, cut into 1-inch pieces.

Tip: 13x9x2 1/2-inch baking pan must be at least 2 1/2 inches deep; do not use 13x9x2 1/2-inch baking pan must be at least 2 1/2 inches deep; do not use 13x9-inch glass pan.

BANANA-DATE BREAD

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup mashed, ripe bananas (2 medium-size)
2 tablespoons skim milk
2 cups Kellogg's SPECIAL K® cereal
1/3 cup margarine
1/3 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup chopped dates
Vegetable cooking spray
Stir together flour, baking powder and soda. Set aside.

In small mixing bowl, stir together mashed bananas, milk and Kellogg's SPECIAL K® cereal. Let stand 5 minutes or until cereal softens.

In large mixing bowl, beat margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs. Beat well. Mix in cereal mixture. Stir in dry ingredients. Add chopped dates. Spread batter evenly in 9 x 5 x 3-inch loaf pan lightly coated with cooking spray.

Bake at 350°F about 50 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Let cool 10 minutes before removing from pan. Cool completely before slicing. Store in airtight container.

HOOT OWL COOKIES

Makes approximately 2 1/2 dozen.
3/4 cup butter or margarine
1 cup packed brown sugar
1 egg
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
2 1/4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup Hershey's Cocoa
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1 tablespoon water
1/4 cup Reese's Peanut Butter Chips
1/2 cup whole cashew nuts
Cream butter or margarine, brown sugar, egg, and vanilla in large bowl. In a separate bowl, combine flour, baking powder, and salt. Blend flour mixture into creamed mixture. Remove two-thirds of the dough to a floured surface. In small bowl combine cocoa and baking soda; add to remaining dough. Blend water into chocolate dough.

Roll half of the vanilla dough into a 10 x 4-inch rectangle. Shape half of chocolate dough into a roll 10 inches long; place in center of rectangle of vanilla dough. Mold sides of vanilla dough around roll of chocolate dough. Repeat shaping steps with remaining dough. Wrap in plastic wrap; chill at least 2 hours or overnight.

Cut dough into 1/8-inch thick slices; lay two slices together side-by-side on a greased cookie sheet. Pinch a corner of each slice to form ears. Place a peanut butter chip in the center of each slice for eyes; press a cashew nut between slices for a beak. Bake at 350° for 8 to 10 minutes or until set. Remove from cookie sheet; cool on rack.

PEANUT BUTTER & JELLY THUMBPRINTS

Makes approximately 5 dozen.
1 cup butter or margarine
1 3/4 cups packed brown sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
3 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups (12-ounce package) Reese's Peanut Butter Chips
1 1/2 cups quick-cooking rolled oats
3/4 cup jelly or preserves (apple, grape, peach, etc.)

Cream butter or margarine and brown sugar in large bowl. Add eggs and vanilla; beat until light and fluffy. In a separate bowl combine flour, baking powder, and salt. Gradually add flour mixture to creamed mixture. Reserve 1/2 cup peanut butter chips. Stir in oats and 1 1/2 cups peanut butter chips. Shape dough into 1-inch balls. Place balls on an ungreased cookie sheet. Press the center of each with your thumb to make a deep depression about 1 inch wide. Bake at 400° for 7 to 9 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from cookie sheet. Cool on a wire rack. Fill center of each cookie with 1/2 teaspoon jelly or preserves; top with several of the reserved peanut butter chips.

NO-BAKE PEANUT BUTTER CHIP COOKIES

Makes approximately 4 dozen.
2 cups (12-ounce package) Reese's Peanut Butter Chips
1 tablespoon shortening
5 cups cornflakes cereal, coarsely crushed
1 cup raisins
Melt peanut butter chips and shortening in top of a double boiler over hot, not boiling water. Stir until smooth and creamy. Combine cereal, melted chips, and raisins; stir until cereal is coated. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto a waxed paper-lined cookie sheet. Cover and chill for 1 hour.

HERSHEY'S CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

Makes approximately 6 dozen.
1 cup butter or margarine, softened
3/4 cup packed brown sugar
3/4 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 1/4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped nuts
2 cups (12-ounce package) Hershey's Semi-Sweet Chocolate Chips
Cream butter or margarine, brown sugar, granulated sugar, eggs, and vanilla in a large bowl. In a separate bowl combine flour, baking soda, and salt. Blend into creamed mixture. Stir in nuts and chocolate chips. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 375° for 8 to 10 minutes or until light brown. Cool slightly on cookie sheet before removing to a wire rack.

Senior Service Line

by Matilda Charles

TRAVEL FRAUD: Complaints continue to come in from seniors who have been defrauded by claims that promise free trips that all too often turn out to be far more expensive than any legitimate travel venture. Although this column has run tips on how to avoid being victimized by these vultures, the subject is so important-especially to older folks on fixed incomes-that it's well worth repeating at this time:

* Any telephone call, postcard, or other form of communication, including faxed transmissions, claiming you've won a free vacation trip, should make you suspect a potential rip off. Chances are the only place these offers can take you is to the cleaners!

* One common scheme requires you to join a so-called travel club to be eligible for the schemers' special "deals." The membership fee can be from 50 to several thousand dollars. The consumer who joins receives a package which includes round-trip airfare for one, and hotel accommodations for two, at a choice of destinations. Sound good? Well, just read on...

The catch is that in order to take advantage of this package, the second person must buy plane tickets from the club-at a price that can be as much as three times the usual airline price.

Another scam involves calls over the phone offering free, or low cost vacations and prizes. Interested? That's the reaction they're hoping for. But again, read on...

The hitch is proving your eligibility to claim these goodies by identifying your bank, giving them your checking account number, and/or your credit card numbers. Then, whether you get the prizes or the trips doesn't matter. These crooks have what they need to make unauthorized withdrawals and charges on your accounts, and they can be out of reach well before you see these discrepancies on your monthly statements.

Remember: If the deal sounds too good to be true, just say NO. You won't be losing an opportunity; you'll be saving yourself a lot of money, and a lot of grief.

Golden Ages

WAYLAND AREA SENIOR CITIZENS

The weekly Bible Study Class at the Wayland Area Senior Citizens Center is growing. On Monday, September 21, there were 30 present for the study and for lunch which followed.

Francis Pitts of Prestonsburg spoke recently on "Low Calorie Diets."

The center members are getting ready for the second Gospel Sing to be held at the center on Saturday, October 3, beginning at 5 p.m. Scheduled to sing are Janie Patton, the Litz family of Prestonsburg, and Sherri Prater of Knott County. There will be crafts, soft drinks, and food for sale, and the music and singing is free; so come out and enjoy an evening of good gospel music and fellowship before the early fall weather is gone.

If you desire any information on any of the above or anything pertaining to the center and what it has to offer you, just call 358-4161 and ask for the director, Sharon Smith.

Good tobacco preparation can lead to big bucks

Using a little common sense now will reap big bucks for burley and dark-tobacco growers come sales day, according to a tobacco specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Remember the basics and use good sense as you get the crop ready for market," said Bill Maksymowicz, Extension specialist at the UK Research and Education Center in Princeton.

Maksymowicz said weather conditions have contributed to a dirty dark tobacco crop.

"Weather conditions during the growing season caused short plants with long leaves, especially on early-set tobacco," he said. "Heavy showers just before cutting moved a lot of soil, resulting in a dirty crop for many growers. It's important to shake off as much dirt as possible, and class tobacco closely when stripping."

Maksymowicz advised growers with a little dirt on lugs and some seconds to make a separate grade for this leaf. If essentially all stalk positions are dirty, consider twisting tails off after tying into hands. It won't look pretty, but growers stand to lose more from a lower selling price of sound leaf with dirt caked on the tail.

"Trying to wash dirt off cured tobacco is a futile exercise," he said. "By the time it's cured, you're dealing with ground in dirt. Water washes finish off fire-cured dark tobacco and increases the chance of mold and spoilage on air-cured leaf."

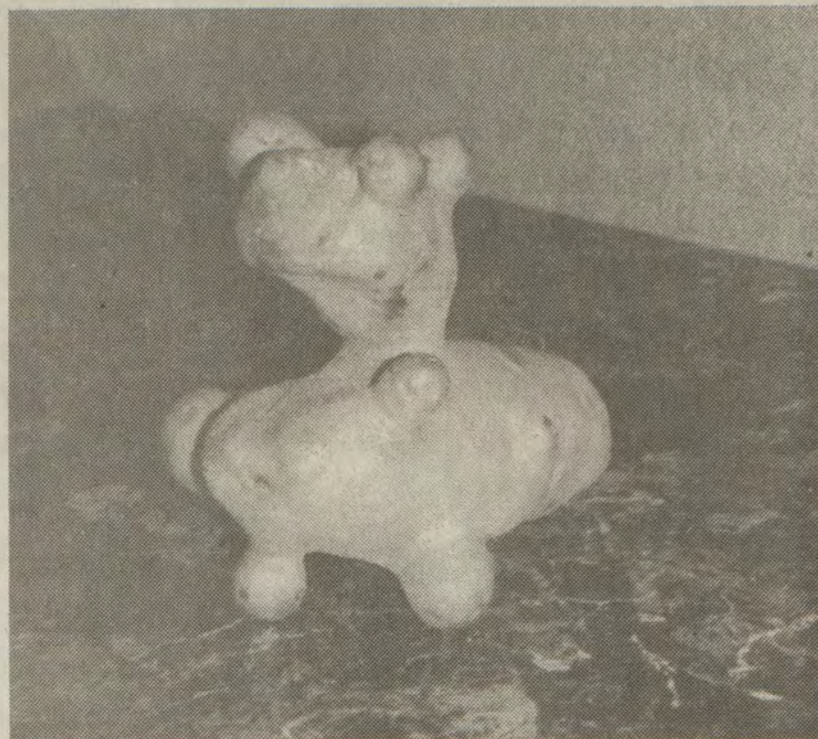

"Trying to hide the dirty leaves with good leaf will lower the quality of a basket and translate into a lower price for good tobacco," Maksymowicz said.

He urged burley growers to "remember what happened last year. The days of a one-grade, one-price market are over."

"Companies want to buy grades and do their own blending," he added. "Strip into enough classes to meet manufacturers' and leaf dealers' needs by classing tobacco according to group, color and quality."

"Continue to manage barn ventilation to minimize houseburn and mold and ensure good curing conditions so when tobacco is taken down it will have a good cure and proper moisture," he said. "Don't take tobacco down when it is too high in order, avoid heavy bales, and store bales properly prior to marketing to prevent quality deterioration. Put a tarp on tobacco when transporting it to the warehouse."

"Your extra effort and common-sense market preparation will be rewarded on sales day."

The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club holds meeting

"Education gives one self-esteem, self-confidence, and the ability to find one's place in society and be a productive citizen", concluded Phyllis Honshell speaking on "Education and Human Relations" Monday evening, September 21, to members of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club in the home of Maxine Martin south of Wayland. Honshell is an English professor at Prestonsburg Community College and is currently a candidate in the 5th District for Floyd County School Board member.

The speaker listed the six learning goals that came out of the recent Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA), and she explained in what way they are different from the "learn by rote" methods of the past. She explained how knowledge now is to be applied for improving one's self, problem solving, making one not only self-sufficient but qualified for work or furthering of education, able to take care of one's family or whatever is necessary and being able to do it better because of having received a good education. She also pointed out that the low test results that are now coming out on the first testing under KERA are only a baseline to measure future test results to see how much improvement has been made. She stressed it is much too early to give up on school reform.

Connecting education to human relations, Honshell urged parents and other citizens to volunteer their time and services to help where possible. She suggested aiding teachers in preparing materials for teaching, being willing to serve on Site-Based Management Councils, scheduling a KERA bus to help spread the word, securing a speaker on KERA, and in general doing everything possible to advance school reform and be a part of it with a positive attitude rather than a negative one until it has had a chance to work.

Marsella Bradley, a club member and a teacher at Allen Central, reported that 12 to 14 extra workshops have been scheduled for teachers to learn more about the new reform act, and also five additional in-service days.

Prior to the program Marsella Bradley conducted devotions on the subject, "How to Handle Burdens." Marie Mullins led the Pledge to the Flag. Club president, Maxine Martin, conducted a business meeting during which she read the calls for the various meetings this fall. There will be four or more going to the 7th District meeting on October 17—the club president and Libby Martin, along with Marie Mullins and Marsella Bradley, who are going as delegates. The sale of pecans was discussed and authorization given the corresponding secretary, Libby Martin, to place an order.

Refreshments were served by the hostess to the speaker and another guest, Georgia Stapleton of Estill, and club members Alma Souleyrette, Vera Allen, Marie Mullins, Loretta Martin, Betty Mullins, Anna Marie Martin, Marsella Bradley, and Libby Martin.

Floyd County backyard birdwatchers sought

Floyd county residents are being asked to participate in a national survey of backyard birds conducted by the Home Habitat Society. Those who participate in the Annual Bird List will be asked to complete a questionnaire concerning the habitat surrounding their home. They will also be provided with a checklist of birds, on which they will record which species visit their yard in each season and the relative frequency of sightings. Richard Van Vleck, the Society's director, says anyone can participate in the survey. All that is required is access to a field guide to bird identification, which can be found in all libraries and book stores, and an interest in birds.

The number of different species of birds using your yard is a useful indicator of the quality of habitat you are providing, according to Van Vleck. Keeping a record of the birds visiting your yard over several years may offer evidence of the value of improvements to the habitat that you have made, such as planting for wildlife or providing a source of water or erecting nest boxes. In contrast, a shrinking bird list may demonstrate the effect of extensive development or changing agricultural practices around your property.

Homeowners from both rural and residential areas are needed to participate in this survey. Property size can vary from the smallest yard to an entire farm. Participants will be sent the 1992 forms to be returned at the end of the year. They will then receive 1993 forms and a summary of the 1992 survey. Recognition of those who have the greatest number of species for various size yards in each state will be included in the summary. The survey results will also be included in the Society's quarterly journal, Home Ground. To take part in the Annual Bird List, send a $3 registration fee to the Home Habitat Society, PO Box 412, Taneytown, MD 21787.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT TAR SPOTS SEEN ON THOSE MAPLE TREES

Those thick, crusty black splotches and spots on the leaves of maple trees may worry some homeowners, but they shouldn't.

In fact, homeowners might worry more if they didn't see them, said John Hartman, extension plant pathologist with University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture.

"The fungus that causes the spot, Rhizoma acerinum, is very sensitive to low levels of sulfur dioxide air pollution," Hartman said.

As a result, maple tar spot is uncommon in certain urban and industrial areas where high levels of air pollution are concentrated, he said. The presence of the spots is an indicator of the absence of such pollution.

Besides, he said, maple tar spot is not very damaging to the tree.

Tar spot begins in early summer as light green or yellow spots on the leaves of red, silver and sugar maple trees, he said. It becomes noticeable in late summer when the tar-like fungal stroma develops on the upper surface of the leaves. A related fungus, R. punctatum, appears as a cluster of tiny black spots.

Infection begins from spores produced on diseased leaves from last season, Hartman said. Normally, they appear too late to affect the health of the tree.

"Raking up and destroying diseased leaves should be all that is needed to manage tar spot for next season," he said.

Better Boating

Facts From The U.S. Coast Guard
Everything Shipshape?

Are you sure everything's shipshape? Or does your boat—or a used boat you're about to buy—have a defect? Find out. Dial 1-800-368-5647—the Coast Guard toll free Boating Safety Hotline.

A Consumer Service Rep can check year, make, and model, to see if your boat is involved in a safety recall campaign. If so, you'll be advised what to do to solve the problem without cost.

Hotline Consumer Service Reps can answer this and many, many more boating safety questions, from where there's a Boating Safety Class near you—to how to get a Recreational Vessel Fee Decal.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO—Call the Coast Guard Boating Safety Hotline: 1-800-368-5647. Monday through Friday 8 AM to 8 PM Eastern time (except Federal holidays).

DROPOUT RATE

Local districts are not required to include dropout data for the 1991-92 Annual Performance Report. This information is not required for this 1991-92 report because the Kentucky Department of Education is redesigning the dropout data collection procedures. The data will be included in the accountability baseline reports.

PART IV - EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Executive Summary
During the 1991-92 school year, the Floyd County Schools made significant progress in the implementation of classroom technology:

- A. Training was provided to all Kindergarten and First Grade teachers on IBM's "Writing to Read" courseware;
- B. Basic skills computer labs were provided for each of the five high schools, two elementary schools, and one middle school;
- C. Word processing labs were provided at two high schools;
- D. All second grade classrooms were provided with IBM's "Teaching and Learning with Computers" courseware.
- E. All second grade teachers were training on how to implement the technology into the classroom;
- F. High school mathematics teachers were provided computers, calculators, large screen monitors and software to assist in the implementation of the new math standards.

Floyd County continues to lead Kentucky in the utilization of distance-learning technology, KET's interactive courses on Star Channels Network was available in all five high schools, two elementary schools, one middle school, and the Floyd County Technical High School. During the 1991-92 school year, the Floyd County Schools invested $175,000.00 to provide the necessary manipulatives, calculators, computers, and software to implement the new math standards. The Kentucky Council of Teachers of Mathematics recognized the district for the efforts made in the adoption of the math standards.
