Nine school administrators file suit :

Job cuts are challenged

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

In two separate lawsuits filed this week in Floyd County Circuit Court, nine Floyd County school administrators are suing the Floyd County Board of Education and two of its superintendents claiming age discrimination and political retaliation.

The administrators claim that 55 days of their extended employment was cut because of their political affiliations and that the move was an effort to force them to retire because they are over 40 years old.

In an October 5 lawsuit brought by pupil personnel directors Brent Allen and Maurice Allen, they claim interim superintendent Eldon Smith's recommendation to the board to cut extended employment in the district was not part of a uniform plan affecting all administrators.

"...Eldon Smith was motivated by a desire to punish plaintiffs because of their political affiliations, associations, activities and beliefs..." the lawsuit alleges. "...Eldon Smith was motivated by a desire to cause each plaintiff to resign or retire from their positions in the Floyd County Schools... because plaintiffs are over forty years of age and are older employees of the Floyd County Schools..."

In a separate lawsuit filed two days later, administrators David Turner, Wayne Ratliff, Sharon Newsome, Anna Lee Rice, Charlotte Collins, Charles Patton and Dan Collins make the same allegations.

The suits also seek to have Floyd County's new superintendent Stephen Towler restore each plaintiff to the position they formerly held.

The Allen's lawsuit also says that Smith restored 40 days of their employment. The second lawsuit claims Smith extended employment for all but Turner, which caused Turner to be removed from the index for administrators.

Smith was named interim superintendent for Floyd County in March when the State Board for Elementary Prestonsburg Community College was one of only 14 colleges in the country to win this year's National Interassociation Awards, and one of only nine organizations and individuals receiving Medallion Awards presented in Chicago, Illinois at a conference attended by over 600 student development professionals and college presidents.

The awards were presented Wednesday by three national student development organizations: the two-year college division of the American College Personnel Association; the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators; and the National Council on Student Development of the American Association of Community Colleges, which joined to form the National Interassociation Group.

The awards, distributed at the Interassociation's "Agenda For the 90's" conference, were presented for exemplary progress and service nationwide. PCC Counseling

Feds indict cohorts of Bank Jo bandit

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

The alleged accomplices of the man accused of robbing the North Lake Drive, Prestonsburg branch of the Bank Josephine were formally indicted for aiding and abetting by a federal grand jury in Lexington Wednesday.

Jeffrey Mullins, formerly of Hi Hat, who was indicted September 15 by a Lexington grand jury for the June 26 and July 8 Bank Josephine robberies and the July 17 robbery of the Westwood Branch of the First American Bank near Ashland, was indicted Tuesday on three more charges of bank robbery.

Darrin C. Dillon, 29, of Ashland, was also indicted Tuesday, charged with aiding and abetting Mullins in the July 8 Bank Josephine heist, in which Mullins allegedly forced a bank teller to give him approximately $4,069. Dillon is accused of driving the vehicle in which Mullins escaped the authorities following the crime.

Also indicted was Roger Allen Clark, 30, of Ashland. Clark is charged with aiding and abetting Mullins in the July 17 Ashland bank

Job Corps advisor sues to get job back

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A Carl D. Perkins Job Corps employee who was fired September 30 filed a lawsuit Tuesday in Floyd County Circuit Court against the center and its director, alleging she was wrongfully discharged.

Mary Davidson, a residential advisor at the Prestonsburg center, was fired September 30 when she did not attend a hearing to discuss charges of sexual harassment made against her by another female employee.

Davidson's attorney, Keith Bartley, said his client did not attend the hearing because she was informed at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday that her hearing was set for 2:30 p.m. the same day.

Center director Edna Higginbotham sent Davidson a letter dated September 30 which said "your lack of cooperation and the lack of cooperation of your attorneys left us with no other alternative." The letter also said that an investigation was conducted into the sexual harassment claims and "it appeared the allegations are true."

Bartley claims that Davidson was not afforded her rights under the center's grievance policy. He said he will ask for an injunction on October 16 to return Davidson to her job.

The suit seeks damages from Career Systems Development Corporation, which operates the Prestonsburg center, and Higginbotham individually. It also asks for attorney fees and a trial by jury.

Strong warning is issued by Boysen

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Kentucky's Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen said Tuesday evening that he "could not believe that the administration of the (Floyd County) school district has been doing the job."

Boysen warned that if changes are not made in the way that the school system is managed the state may make those changes though the power of state law.

"It is my opinion that every administrator in the school district should be very closely scrutinized as to whether that person deserves to be continued in employment in the next year," Boysen said. "I'm putting that out on the table publicly because I think there has to be a good solid understanding of that among the citizenry that this cannot be business as usual."

Boysen's comments Tuesday came before the start of a public hearing at the Jenny Wiley Convention Center to hear Floyd County citizen's comments concerning a short-term plan to put the school system on the right track.

The plan was mandated by Boysen as part of a report released in August concerning an investigation by the Department of Education into the school system last May. When the report was released in August, Boysen called the Floyd County School System a "catastrophe in leadership" and said school officials could be removed from their jobs.

Boysen's stern comments, however, did little to convince some Floyd County citizens that sweeping changes will be made in the Floyd County School System.

"We're proud of our hills and we're proud to be from Floyd County," Dorothy Osborne told Boysen before a crowd of about 100 people. "But, we're not proud of our school system. This is a small turnout and when I asked people why they wouldn't come, the response was, 'Why? Nothing's going to change. It will be just the same as it has been for 15 years.'"

"We are frustrated, disgusted, discouraged and deeply disturbed as to what is going to happen," Osborne added. "In two years, yes we have seen a few slaps on the wrist and some improvement. That's like throwing a pebble in the Pacific Ocean as to what should have happened."

Osborne was one of 16 people to make comments to Boysen at Tuesday's hearing, but few of those commenting addressed issues in the board's short-term plan.

John Rosenberg told Boysen that he felt citizens in Floyd County could not properly comment on the district's short-term plan because the public had not had an opportunity to review the plan.

"As far as I know, this evening is

Board "scene" draws state's eye

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

State education officials are conducting an "active review" of comments made last month by Floyd County school board member Tommy Boyd and others concerning the proposed employment of an individual at the Betsy Layne High School Youth Service Center.

Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen said Tuesday that he had seen "the video" of the September 8 school board meeting where Boyd questioned assistant superintendent Pete Grigsby Jr. about employing a specific individual at the center, an apparent violation of the Kentucky Education Reform Act.

Boysen added that officials are also reviewing comments made by "all the people who participated in the scene."

At the September meeting, Boyd told assistant superintendent Pete Grigsby Jr., director of youth service and family resource centers, he would "raise Cain" until Kim Hall was given a job in the Floyd County School System.

At that meeting, Floyd County superintendent Steve Towler said he was working on a position for Hall in the school district.

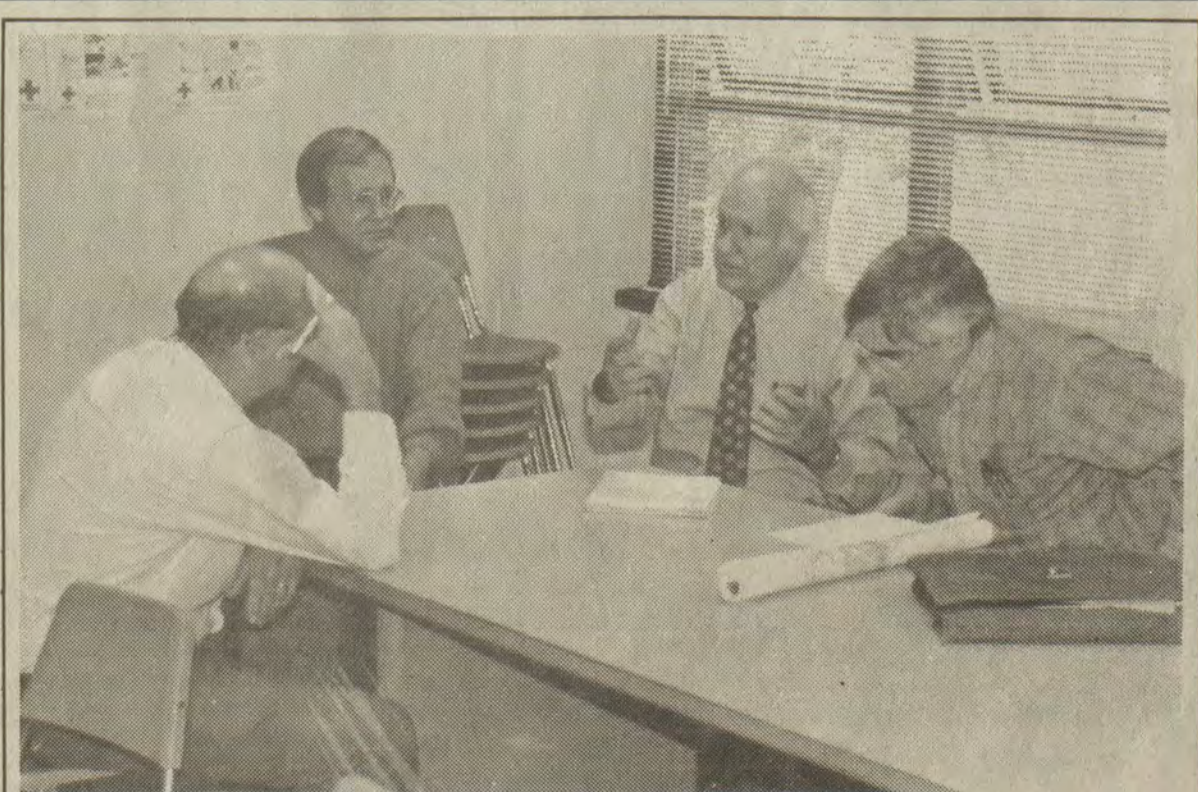

Towler issued a letter dated October 1 to board members saying his statement was "out of line."

"...Mr. Grigsby asked me about the situation and I mistakenly said that we were working on a position for Kim Hall—a statement that would imply that board member Boyd had instructed superintendent Towler on who to employ and superintendent Towler was working on that directive," Towler's letter said. "My statement was also out of line and did not reflect what was actually taking place—but it certainly could have been interpreted that I was in violation of the law by allowing a board member to dictate personnel."

A separate complaint was lodged

Jr. Opry gets big lift from coal company

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

The Martin County Coal Corporation this week made a sizable donation to Floyd County's Kentucky Junior Opry, the Kentucky Opry's youth-oriented sister organization.

Martin County Coal President Larry Jones said Thursday that he had personally presented Junior Pro Opry organizer Billie Jean Osborne with a check for $20,000 Tuesday, and promised to make annual donations.

Jones said that the corporation had donated the funds to the Opry as part of a good-neighbor policy, just as it donated over $10,000 to the Jenny Wiley Amphitheatre annually.

Although the $20,000 had not been budgeted for the fiscal year Jones against Grigsby after the September meeting by Betsy Layne High School principal Allan Osborne and the school's site based council.

The complaint alleged that Grigsby had tried to interfere with the selection of an office manager for the youth center.

Betsy Layne teacher Meredith Tackett said Grigsby had sent Lola Brashear, who works in the central office, to tell her that Grigsby was "unhappy" that he had been left out of the interviewing process.

Tackett also said that Brashear told her Grigsby said "doesn't that girl know politics, doesn't she know how politics work?"

Tackett's complaint said Brashear was told to tell here that "there would be a lawsuit if one particular applicant didn't get hired for the position."

When asked about the complaint, Grigsby said that the incident did involve the individual Boyd wanted hired, but he denied that he tried to intimidate anyone.

Grigsby said he had asked Brashear to tell Tackett "when she saw her" that he was upset he was not informed when candidates were being interviewed for the manager position. He said he did not mention anything about politics.

Grigsby added that he had been directed by Towler to sit in on the interviews to make sure federal laws were not violated. He said he was upset over the issue because he felt like he had "let Dr. Towler down."

Brashear said she had been directed by Grigsby to talk with Tackett about "bypassing" him in the interviewing process.

In reference to the complaint against Grigsby, Towler said that he had talked to Grigsby about the situation and that he believed Grigsby's account of the incident. Towler said he had not talked with anyone else about the issue.

Towler's October 1 letter did not address the complaint made against Grigsby.

A call to Towler on Thursday about the October 1 letter to the board was not returned.

Another comment made at the September meeting came from board member James Duff who suggested that Boyd "move in" with Grigsby until the issue was resolved.

Boysen said the statements were being reviewed "one at a time" and gave no indication if or when any action may be taken.

Software Showcase seminar is set

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

A group of Floyd County teachers and representatives from Lexington's IBM EduQuest will meet Saturday to discuss the rapid growth in computer technology and its immediate impact on the education front.

"Software Showcase," an education technology seminar, will include discussions and demonstrations by teachers of grades K-6 and IBM EduQuest representatives. The presentations will demonstrate how computer technology is affecting such areas of education as the Kentucky Education Reform Act, math for the technology-enriched classroom and literature-based curricula.

The forum will focus specifically on the new state-of-the-art "Columbus" and "Illuminated Books" IBM color multimedia education software programs, which are being demonstrated to display their educational viability and various uses.

Local educators who will be participating in the showcase include Martha Damron, Debbie Dixon, Gina Crisp, Vicky Pack, Betty Shuster, Danette Hayslett, Dianna Turner, Marcella Slone and Donna Collins, all of Prestonsburg Elementary; Doris Robinson, Brenda May and Pat Martin, from Maytown Elementary; Sarah Barker, of Harold Elementary; Kim Reynolds, from Adam's Middle School; Glenna Childers, of Prater Creek Elementary; Stanton and Joyce Watson, of Duff Elementary; and Tammy Francis, of the Floyd County Board of Education.

The Software Showcase, sponsored by IBM EduQuest and INACOMP Computers in downtown Prestonsburg, will take place from 8 a.m. until approximately 4:15 p.m. this Saturday, October 10 at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn on U.S. 23. The Showcase is open to the public on a first come-first serve basis.

said, he felt that the potential benefit to the community made the donation more than worth the price. Also, Jones said, the company would attempt to make a large donation to the Opry every succeeding year.

"We try to help all Eastern Kentucky communities," Jones said, "and the (Junior Pro) Opry is very helpful to the young people, helps them develop talents and skills... and it even helps the potential drop-outs, helps keep them in school because it gives them a way to express themselves."

the first time this (plan) has been distributed to the public in any appreciable way," Rosenberg said.

Those who did direct their comments on recommendations in the plan, criticized a recommendation to create four new positions in the district's central office.

"I feel the citizens of this county have felt for a long time that the central office staff is bloated, unresponsive and is not meeting the needs of the teachers or the students in the schools," Rev. Tim Jessen told Boysen. "It has lost the trust of the people."

Floyd County teacher Bud Reynolds said if four positions were created they would be filled politically.

"I think because of the situation in Floyd County, it is an election year, we have to look at the past history of this district. Those positions will be created and filled with people who have political connections."

Boysen responded to those concerns saying, "I think we should be using all the resources that were already developed in the administration before we decide to add more."

Boysen said after the hearing that "lip service is not going to do it," in reference to correcting Floyd County's problems.

When asked how he is going to make Floyd Countians believe that changes are in the works for the Floyd County School System, Boysen said, "actions will speak louder than words."

Boysen said he was surprised that no members of the Floyd County Board of Education attended Tuesday's hearing.

"The local board should be very interested in the plan and making it work," Boysen said.

Other people making comments included:

- John Sammons who asked Boysen to allow work to proceed on Prestonsburg High School;
- Eddie Patton and Phyllis Honshell, candidates for two seats on the school board in November's election;

- Prestonsburg Mayor Ann Latta and former Prestonsburg Community College president Chalmer Frazier who asked for further investigation into the Prestonsburg High School project; and

- Tallina Rayburn who spoke about the physical condition of Martin Elementary School.

Fifth District Democratic congressional candidate John Doug Hays will be one of the many guest speakers for the Champions Against Drugs Teen Leadership Conference this weekend at Jenny Wiley State Park's Camp Shawnee.

Hays will join former Cincinnati Red baseball player Doug Flynn, executive director of Champions

Co-director Lola Brashear said Thursday that the conference, sponsored by the Mountain Comprehensive Care Center through a $60,000 grant from Champions Against Drugs, was designed to help local teens become better people, thinkers and students and to help them learn about each other and themselves.

More than 90 high school students from Floyd, Johnson, Pike, Martin and Magoffin counties will participate in the three-day event, which will include such activities as workshops on date rape; teen pregnancy; AIDS prevention; and peer pressure as well as a Saturday night dance and the Fun Olympics.

Also participating in the Teen Leadership Conference will be one adult sponsor for each student, who will work with and for the teens.

Mr. Smith: the sequel

by Scott Perry

Perhaps it was just a coincidence that we got home from Tuesday's public hearing on Floyd County's short-term educational improvement plan just in time to catch the classic movie "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" on the tube.

It's a sappy movie, for sure, about a naive U.S. Senator who thinks honesty and integrity are mandatory characteristics for government leaders.

There was one particular scene in the movie which drew an interesting parallel to Tuesday night's educational hearing.

While trying to convince his colleagues that it was wrong to allow a political machine to pull the country's strings, they all got up and walked out. Smith's pleas for reform didn't just fall on deaf ears, they fell on an empty room.

Tuesday night at the Jenny Wiley Convention Center, a parade of "Mr. Smith's" took the floor to press for improvements in Floyd County's educational system, for accountability in leadership, and for putting the educational needs of Floyd County's children above the machinery of politics.

But, like the movie's main character, the pleas went unnoticed by those who could affect the requested changes.

Not a single member of the Floyd County Board of Education bothered to attend the public hearing.

We should remind the board that Mr. Smith didn't give up or go away in the movie, winning his case in the end.

They would do well to realize the Floyd County Mr. Smiths are cut from the same cloth and that a happy ending will be written to the story here, no matter how long the odds or how difficult the obstacles.

On with the show.

Try it, you'll like it

Got our first glimpse of school-based decision making in action this week and came away sorry we hadn't taken time earlier to view the process.

It's refreshing to see teachers, parents and school administrators sitting down together to plot the course of education with specific agendas in mind.

We are convinced from our first encounter with grassroots school management that it will be the most effective tool in reforming our educational system.

Try it on, yourself.

It's a sure fit.

—Letters to the editor—

"Out-of-town" teens angered by treatment

Editor:

We have read and reviewed your recent article about teens "loafing" in the Wendy's area. We understand your concern for business, yet we would like to inform you that over 50 percent of all your business on week-ends comes from out of town teens such as ourselves.

Sure you have a couple of drunks and trouble-makers, but why should the police give citations to those of us who are only visiting your restaurant?

Sobriety checks should only take place when a teen is suspected for a misdemeanor crime. We feel that you should save your citations for real criminals.

Prestonsburg teens are not angels either. We would like to inform the manager and the owner of Wendy's that they will no longer have problems out of "Those" out of town teens. It is our belief that Dairy Cheer will greatly appreciate our business. As a result, we predict that your business will lose "More" than $40,000 annually.

Are you happy, now?

Curtis Hall, and 15 others

What price is the toy of broken truths?

Editor:

During the last twenty months I have been looking at Eastern Kentucky development from a historical research position, taking into account the varied economics of the region: coal and petroleum; timber and agriculture banking and bartering systems. Needless to say, our region is very diversified and creative in keeping afloat economic systems that range from families to major corporations.

Within the midst of these investigations, I could not help but notice the giant hubbub involving the cases of W.E.C. Coal and its owner, William Eric Charles. The media coverage ran between September 1990 and approximately June of this year. That story evolves around partnerships (good and bad), kited and floated checks, unpaid loans, "lost" and "misplaced" coal, and poor banking practices across the state boundaries of Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

The tenor of the printed and aired information would lead an outsider (I am not), and even local folks, to believe this savvy car and coal businessman, with only a high school education, could, in less than a decade, design a ruthless business system based on sheer force of personality, cocktail parties and good-old-boyism. (Shades of Elvis or Earl and Huey Long!)

Major economic tremors in a region's systems, whether reported in a company's annual financial report or various media, do not usually center on one person as the fault. This guy began to look like a modern day Atlas, here toting a magnet that attracted every conceivable form of allegation, innuendo and business hardship.

In the cases' complexities—an intricate web of people and factors thrown atop one another daily evolved into a woodpile reminiscent of pick-up-sticks—I began to wonder who and what still lurked at the woodpile's bottom. Were all aspects questioned thoroughly or summarily?

We must remember that, sometimes, the only difference between kids and adults are the size and price of their toys. Wonder what price is put on the "toy" of broken truths; what price and time lengths, in money and incarceration, are to be paid, and by whom, for that valued trinket? Might make for a good read!

Malfunction junction

Editor:

This letter is in reference to the malfunction junction of U.S. 23 and KY 114.

I feel the designing engineer for this project should be commended.

The federal government could have planned this intersection two years in advance and not screwed it up any worse than this genius evidently had to give it no more than ten minutes thought.

To top this, the city fathers in their lack of wisdom, decided to block the other main exit from town by digging in the same place for two weeks to replace a water line that probably needed taken care of two years ago.

Then comes the state or county to work on Town Branch and all exits south and west of town are incapacitated.

We, who work in Prestonsburg and live south or west of town must rely on a lesson taught by Columbus.

The world is round and if we go far enough in any direction we will eventually reach the other side of the Big Sandy River.

The people responsible for coordinating this mess should be confined to planning three car funerals and Chinese fire drills.

Urges closure of incinerators

Editor:

I am writing to urge the immediate closure of two medical waste incinerators operated by Medisin, Inc. in Floyd County, Kentucky.

In 1991 the soil tests taken by the state from lawns and gardens near the incinerators revealed hazardous concentrations of heavy metals including cadmium, barium, arsenic and chromium. Also, the incinerator ash—at that time dumped in the Floyd County landfill—was declared a hazardous substance. In 1992 Medisin's incinerators failed the state's stack tests for emissions of particulate matter; more recent state samples have also indicated high emissions of hydrogen chloride, even during "controlled burns."

The residents living in the surrounding communities have suffered from serious health problems including skin burns, severe headaches and rare lung diseases known to be caused by environmental factors. They cannot consume the vegetables in their gardens nor open the windows of their homes due to the contamination.

The Medisin facility has failed to comply with the Commonwealth of Kentucky's standards for air quality. I urge the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet to act promptly and shut down the Medisin incinerators.

AFTER THE VOTES ARE CAST: A LOOK AT THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE

©1992, PM Editorial Services
While many Americans may remember something about the Electoral College from their U.S. history classes, chances are good that most of us do not fully understand what this assembly is or what role it plays in electing the president and vice president of the United States.

So here's an Electoral College primer—a brief overview of what the Electoral College is, its origins and the controversial role it plays in modern politics.

• What is the Electoral College? The Electoral College was established by Article II of the U.S. Constitution to provide for the direct election of the president and vice president. The assembly is made up of "electors" from all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

• How many electors does each state get?

Each state is allotted a number of electors equal to the number of members in its congressional delegation, that is, the total of its U.S. House of Representatives members, plus its two U.S. senators. Although the District of Columbia has no vote in Congress, it receives three electors.

• What role do the electors play?

When voters go to the polls on Election Day, they are casting a vote for both a presidential candidate and a slate of electors paired with the candidate. These electors are chosen by the candidate's political party. The winning slate of electors meets on the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December to elect the president and vice president. Customarily, they meet in their state capitals, where each elector casts one vote for a presidential candidate and one vote for a vice-presidential candidate. The results then are sent to the president of the U.S. Senate.

• How are the votes counted and how many are needed to win?

By law, the votes are counted on Jan. 6 before a joint session of Congress. A majority of electoral votes is needed for a candidate to win. This year, if each state appoints the number of electors to which it is entitled, the total of electors will be 538. Therefore, 270 votes are needed to declare a victor. If the Electoral College fails to reach a majority, the House of Representatives elects the president, and the Senate selects the vice president.

• Are the electors required by law to vote for the presidential candidate who headed the slate on which they won?

Twenty-six states have no such requirement. Nineteen states and the District of Columbia state that electors are bound to vote for the candidates who head their slates, but do not have penalties for violators. Five states—New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Washington—have established penalties. Of the more than 16,000 electors who have been chosen since the first election, however, only eight have violated their pledges.

• Has a presidential candidate ever lost the popular vote in November and still won in the Electoral College?

Yes, three times. In 1824, Andrew Jackson received 37,000 more popular votes than his opponent, John Quincy Adams. However, neither candidate won a majority in the Electoral College, so the election was turned over to the House of Representatives, which selected Adams as president. In 1876, Democrat Samuel Tilden received 250,000 more popular votes than Republican Rutherford B. Hayes, but lost by one electoral vote. And in 1888, history repeated itself when Democrat Grover Cleveland lost to Republican Benjamin Harrison, despite having drawn 90,000 more popular votes than Harrison.

The Electoral College was created by the framers of the Constitution out of concern that the general populace of the fledgling nation could not be well-informed about the candidates, as well as to appease states' rights proponents who wanted state legislatures to choose the president.

As its function has evolved over time, the continued usefulness of the Electoral College has come into question. Critics of the system believe it is archaic and could create a crisis in public confidence in government by sending a popular-vote loser to the White House because he or she received the majority of electoral votes.

Over the years, the debate has spawned more than 100 efforts by various members of Congress to revise or abolish the Electoral College. To date, none has passed, so it looks like this unique American institution is here to stay.

Wolf Creek buyer had nation's worst safety record in 1991

The company that has purchased, or will soon purchase, Wolf Creek Collieries, one of Martin County's oldest and most productive coal mining companies, has serious safety problems at many of its other holdings, a recent report revealed.

Zeigler Coal Holding Company of Fairview Heights, Illinois, recorded the worst safety record for 1991 among the 25 largest underground coal producers, according to a report issued by a national coal safety watchdog organization.

The Occupational Safety and Health Law Center, a public interest law firm with offices in Washington and Shepherdstown, West Virginia, reported that Zeigler employees suffer 371 disabling injuries and 147 intermediate injuries for an overall "intermediate injury rate" of 9.3 or more than twice the national average of 4.1 — The Martin County Sun

Family of accident victim files $10 million lawsuit

A $10 million lawsuit was filed Tuesday by the husband of a Magoffin County woman killed in a fiery September 14 collision between an ambulance and a coal truck on U.S. 460 in Johnson County.

The complaint, filed in Johnson Circuit Court by James W. Bailey of Salyersville, named the owner of the ambulance, G & B Ambulance Service, Inc., of Salyersville, and the alleged driver of the vehicle, James E. Lowe, 21, of Oil Springs, who also died in the crash, as defendants.

Bailey's wife, Margaret, 30, was being transported from a doctor's office in Paintsville back to Salyersville when the ambulance collided with a coal truck.

The lawsuit claimed the ambulance was "operated in a negligent manner" that caused it to collide with the loaded 1985 Mack tractor trailer.

The fatality was considered one of the worst in Johnson County's history. — The Paintsville Herald

Parents withdraw students in protest

All is not well concerning the new site based management system in Martin County as several parents removed their children from Venters branch Elementary School Monday in protest.

As many as 25 students have been removed from the county's smallest school by their parents and more are expected to be withdrawn. The controversy apparently started over an election held at the school for two parent members of the school's site based management committee last week.

Parents protesting the election say they do not object to those elected to the committee but they do object to the election process. Gamble Mullins Goble, at the school's PTA president, said that according to a letter she received from state officials that only members of the PTA could legally vote in the election. When members of her group met to have the election, the PTA was not allowed to conduct the election by a school official, who then proceeded to conduct the meeting himself. — The Martin County Sun

Come celebrate with us!

Card Of Thanks
The family of Joyce Weddington wishes to gratefully acknowledge the thoughtfulness and kindness of friends, relatives and neighbors in the loss of our loved one. Thanks to those who sent food, flowers, prayers or spoke comforting words.
We are especially grateful to the employees at Bank Josephine and Overnight Transportation, and our many friends and neighbors from the Lancer Addition.
Again, no matter how big or small the part you played during our time of grief, we thank you all.
MARY and CHARLES "NIG" HALL

In Memory of Danny Lee Blanton on his 44th Birthday
My heart still aches with sadness,
My eyes shed many a tear,
God alone knows how I miss you,
As this ends one year.
Your memory is my keepsake,
And with love, that I'll never part,
God has you in his keeping,
But I still have you in my heart.
A lot of times I have cried,
If love could have saved you,
You never would have died.
Today would have been your birthday,
Oh, the birthdays we have shared,
But, rest on, my dear son, Danny,
For someday I will meet you again.
Sadly missed by your mother, Kathleen, brother, Donnie and nephew Don Kelly Prater

Young Authors

The Beautiful Butterfly
by Jonathan Collins
Kindergarten student

One day there was a caterpillar. The caterpillar turned into a boy butterfly.

Page two

The butterfly flew to a flower. The butterfly wanted some pollen but he heard a buzzing noise. Then he saw the bee. He said, "Oh no, what will I do? I'll think of a plan. Now I know!"

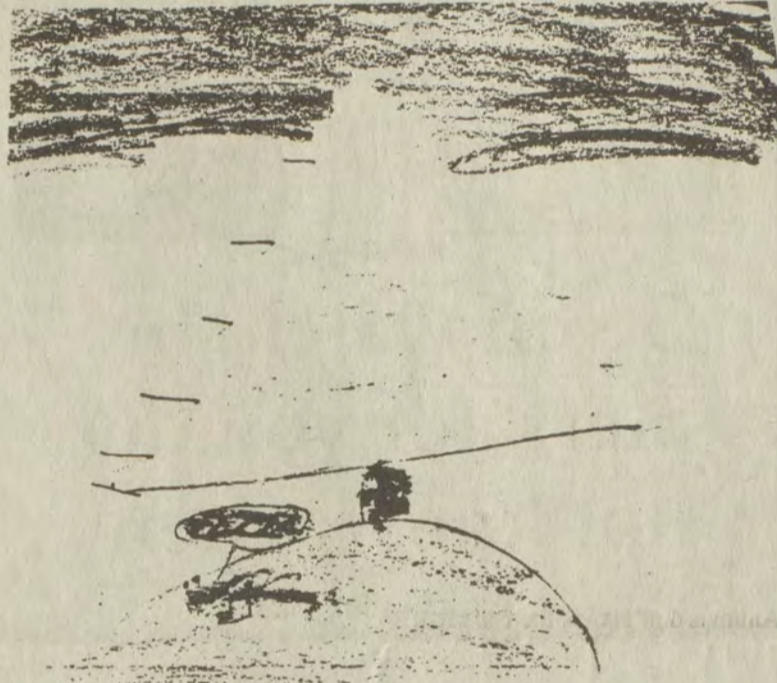

Page three

"I'll hide in the bushes." When he got in the bushes the bee saw him moving around but the bee couldn't get in because it was a thornbush.

The butterfly escaped from the bee. Then he flew up into the air.

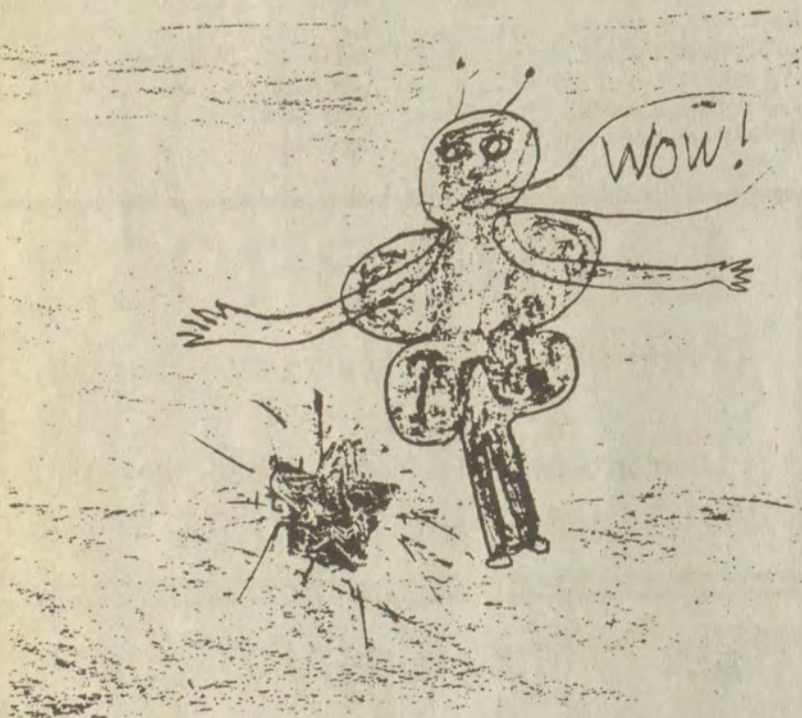

Page five

He saw beautiful sights. He saw the most beautiful tree. He decided to take a nap under it. He took a long nap and when he woke, it was night and he couldn't go back to sleep.

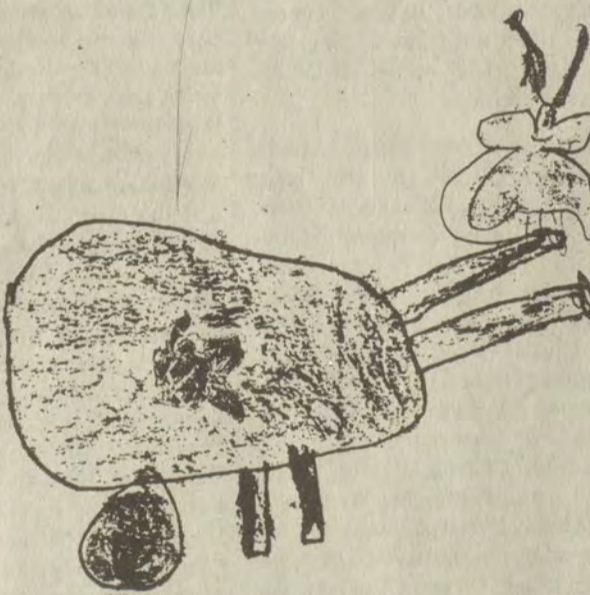

Page six

He decided to look at all the sights. When he looked up at the sky he saw something beautiful.

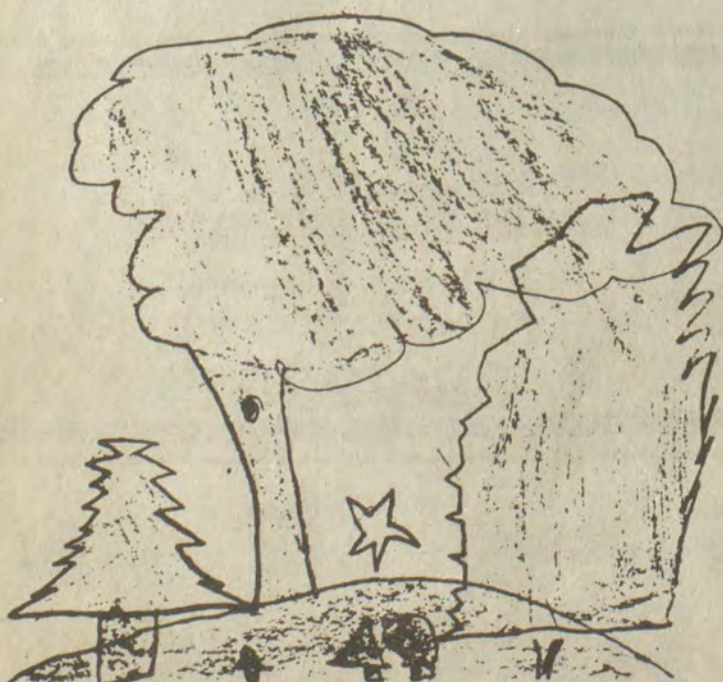

Page seven

It was a shooting star but when it landed he went to see what it was. It was shiny and pretty. He could not believe his eyes.

Page eight

He walked away and when he came back he brought a wheelbarrow to get the star and take it home with him.

Page nine

He found out that it was an ordinary star, so he went to the woods and hid it.

Page ten

Every day he went to check on it to make sure someone didn't steal it.

Collins wins in Young Authors' contest

Jonathan and Kimberlee Collins

Individual writings of Young Authors' of Floyd County Schools will be sponsored regularly in upcoming issues of The Floyd County Times. These students' publications are writings which originate from classroom activities.

Winners were named at the end of May 1992 for the 1991-92 school year, and each winner received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond at a spring awards ceremony. Over 5,000 elementary and middle school students participated in competition throughout the county.

This week, The Floyd County Times and the Department of Instruction of Floyd County Schools jointly wish to feature the individual student work of Jonathan Collins, a kindergarten winner from Mrs. June Stephens class at Prestonsburg Elementary. Jonathan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Collins of Prestonsburg.

ABCs OF EDUCATION

by Jennifer Little

In the last column, we discussed the responsibilities of parents who care about the company their children keep. Most parents do not see that raising others' children is their responsibility, but actually all of us are connected in the community. Those children who destroy public property, who are aggressive to other children or who disrupt the classroom are intruding upon our "cared-for" children's rights. By caring for the children who are neglected or not well enough thought of by their parents, we can eliminate many problems in our society in short order.

Teachers are responsible for children who are not theirs. We work equally well with the "cared-for" children and the "neglected" children. All children are children with equal rights to an education and love in the school system. Our teachers are pledged, informally, to taking those children who need help and giving them what they need to develop and grow into responsible adults.

Adults who were not cared for as children do not have the skills to raise their own children. They care about their children, for every parent wants their children to have and do better than they did. They simply have not had the training, the care-taking, given to them by their parents. We must then model good parenting for those children who will learn from us.

In the classroom we stress fairness and equality. What happens to that ideal when the child enters the "real world"? Many parents are dismayed to find out their children do not understand the "real world", but why does the "real world" need to be aggressive and non-understanding of people and their daily needs? Why can't we, as adults who care about our children, demonstrate that equality and fairness to all others in the community?

There are many things parents can do to demonstrate these qualities for their children and other children to copy. Only by modeling the behavior. (See ABC, A 9)

A new football coach, an expanded Language Arts department, a new student services center and the loss of two teachers to Prestonsburg High School has brought seven new staff members to Betsy Layne High School.

John Derossett, former coach at Adams Middle School, is the new Head Football Coach at BLHS taking over for Gerald Newsome. Derossett is a native Floyd Countian and has coached for three years at Adams.

Dina Schaper is a new member of the language arts department. She is originally from Princeton in western Kentucky and is teaching and developing a drama program for the school. Schaper taught English as a second language in Japan for two years and completed her student teaching in Australia.

Another new addition to the language arts department is Jennifer Little, a former resident of Lexington, Ky. Little is a twenty-year teaching veteran and has taught in seven states of the nation. She is beginning a new English program at BLHS that is normally found only in vocational schools, Applied Communications.

Cassandra Akers, a native of the Betsy Layne area, has replaced Ruth Paterson as one of the special education teachers at BLHS. Akers has taught for five years in special education and physical education. She will be coaching the Girl's Basketball team as well as the softball team at Betsy Layne High.

Replacing Terry Stewart, new assistant principal at Prestonsburg High School, is Solomon Kilburn. Mr. Kilburn is the newest addition to the science department and has been teaching at June Buchanan High School in Knott county for the past three years. He is also a native of Floyd County.

Meredith Tackett, former counselor at Mountain Comprehensive Care, has taken the position of Director of New Horizons Youth Service Center. This is a ground-breaking program for the students of Floyd County designed to provide all and any services to help ease the pressure of being in and succeeding in school. Betsy Layne has one of three units in this program that has been set up in Floyd County.

Kim Tackett, though not a beginning teacher is starting her 2nd semester at BLHS. She is a former Job Corp employee. She is in her 1st year teaching of the Special Ed. Department in a TMD unit. Tackett is a Native of Floyd County.

TITLE: The Christmas Killer
AUTHOR: Windsor, Patricia

Patricia Windsor's "The Christmas Killer" comes highly recommended for older young adult readers who like Sidney Sheldon-styled mysteries. From the first page to the last, readers will find it difficult to lay down this mystery.

The book revolves around the mystery of Nancy Emerson, who disappeared the Wednesday before Thanksgiving. From that day on, Rose Potter's life was not the same. She had dreams. In the first dream, Nancy appeared and brought Rose to a pine-filled forest. Two days later, Nancy's body was found. On it was a poinsettia, the "signature" of someone who would become known as the Christmas Killer.

The small town of Bethoro, Connecticut, is running scared. And neither the police nor Rose's twin brother, Jerram, have any idea who the killer could be.

Rose tries putting the murder out of her mind. But the dead never sleep. And when Rose closes her eyes at night, Nancy's there waiting...

Library hours are Monday, Wednesday and Friday, from 8:30-5 p.m.; Tuesday and Thursday, from 8:30-7:30 p.m.; and Saturday, from 8:30-1 p.m. For more information about this book or for more thrillers like it, call Dianna Harmon, library technician, at 886-2981.)

TITLE: The Year at Maple Hill Farm
AUTHORS: Alice and Martin Provensen

Alice and Martin Provensen have written an entertaining, educational book for the younger generation. It's a book for parents to read to their toddlers and a book for those in school to read and enjoy.

In "The Year at Maple Hill Farm," Alice and Martin Provensen display the changing of the seasons through the eyes of animals. Their book is about a year on the farm and the changes that occur.

Animals don't know there is such a thing as a year, but they do know about seasons. Animals know when the cold will come because they grow heavy overcoats. They know when it is summer. They shed them. When it is hot, they look for shade. And in winter, they look for shelter. People, animals, plants all change through the changing year, and the authors take a close look at the changing seasons.

The illustrations will delight any reader, young or old. Read and look at all the pictures in "The Year at Maple Hill Farm." There are so many things that go on at a farm through the year. The farmers and their families always have something to do. Even the animals are busy. The following activities are family-time fun and are courtesy of the Floyd County Library.

•Pick your favorite month or season listed in the book. Make a list of everything the farmers and the animals do.

•Why is that season your favorite? Make a list of reasons.

•If you went to live on the farm for your favorite season, what would you need to take with you. Make a list.

•What would you leave at home? Make a list.

•Write a short, little story about being on a farm during your favorite season.

Prestonsburg visits winless Magoffin County tonight

When Prestonsburg head football coach Bill Letton gathers his team and heads for Magoffin County this Friday night it will be like a David against Goliath. However, the Hornets will be trying to throw everything but stones in order to win their first game of the year — something that may be difficult to do.

If that sounds too assured, you only need to compare the two teams in size, speed, depth and experience.

Prestonsburg comes into the Hornet's nest with an impressive 5-1 overall record and they currently stand at 2-0 in Class AA, Region 4, District 2. The Hornets are currently holding up the rest of the district with their 0-2 record and Magoffin County is winless in six attempts.

Magoffin County is under their third head coach in the past three years and anyone will tell you that does nothing but confuse the players.

"Anytime you have a coaching change as many times as they have had here at Magoffin County you only tend to confuse the kids," said Hornet head coach Hauns Doderer. "A new coach comes in with first new rules, second a new philosophy and the kids don't like the many changes. They just want 'a coach.'"

Coach Doderer says that his team is basically a junior varsity team that is playing a varsity schedule.

"We really don't have any key players on this team," said the Hornet mentor, "but we consider them all key players. We are a very young team but with some good young talent."

Young is the word here as the Hornets start four freshmen, three sophomores and four seniors.

Freshman Greg Dyer plays the quarterback position for the Hornets and also can be seen at halfback. Neil Harvey and Jamie Hoskins are the ends and both are seniors. Two other seniors who see action for the Hornets are Matt Reed on the line and Tim Slone at guard.

"We have only 23 players this year," said Doderer. "It is a young program in the building stage. We have played good competition this year; we have taken our licks and bruises."

"Prestonsburg is a big, strong team and fairly quick for their size," continued the Magoffin County coach. "They also are a very good defensive team and play it with a lot of authority."

The Magoffin County program in its first year of competition under the guidance of Chuke Williams, had a successful beginning before falling on hard times.

"In its infancy they played a weak schedule," explained Doderer. "They had a lot out for football then. Since then they have jumped coaches from one year to the next."

Doderer said that the Magoffin County program can look on the horizon and see better times coming.

"We have a very good future to look forward to," said Doderer. "What I got this year coming into the program were remnants, leftovers from last year. But we are looking to the future. We have a junior varsity team that is undefeated and some good eighth graders coming up."

"At first we had a lot going against us but we also have a lot going for us," he stated.

Doderer said that his team wasn't getting their hopes up but were being realistic about playing Prestonsburg, and were "going out there to win."

Ask about the type of offense his team runs and Coach Doderer said they just ran what works.

"We're not a passing team because our quarterback is so young and skinny," said Doderer. "But we have been working to develop a passing game and we could throw some against Prestonsburg."

Doderer, who did his student teaching at Prestonsburg and is very familiar with the program, said that Dyer was banged up now but will be able to play. He also had a lasting impression of the Prestonsburg team.

"I really like the way (Seth) Hyden runs the football," he commented. "I like (Dwayne) Garza also. Tucker (quarterback) seems to have gotten things together now. They're just a good ballclub and we are going to have to find a way to keep them off balance."

While the Blackcats will try not to look to next Friday's matchup with Sheldon Clark, Doderer wishes them well against the Cardinals.

"I hope they win it," he said. "I would like to see them go far in the playoffs and when they do, I'll be there watching them play."

But until then, the Blackcats will be taking care of business this week and will try to not get sidetracked with next week's game.

Game time is 8 p.m. and the game can be heard on WQHY-FM and WXXZ-Fm.

Watkins among Top 30 anglers to compete in Red Man Tourney

While many local fishermen are making plans to winterize their fishing boats and putting up the rod and reels, Tee Watkins of East Point still has some serious fishing to do.

Watkins placed 11th overall in the Red Man's Tournament Trail top 30 and qualified for the Region 3 tournament that will be held at West Point Lake, Georgia, beginning October 28 through October 31. Watkins' catch weighed in at 32-pounds and 14-ounces. The first place winner, Keith Penson, had a catch of 61-pounds and seven-ounces.

Three other local anglers will also be active in the tournament. Keith Humble of Salyersville (30-pound, 15-ounces) placed 13th overall and will be joined by another Magoffin County fisherman in Paul D. Whit who placed 20th. Tim McDonald of Hager Hill came in at number 22 (28-pound, four-ounces).

Other divisions that will be competing include Ozark, Mississippi, Buckeye as well as the Mountain and Piedmont division.

Having proven himself as one of the best anglers in his division, Watkins

Pikeville wins 11th Region golf meet; Justice medalist winner

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Pikeville Panther Grover Justice, a leading candidate for Mr. Golf in Kentucky, overcame a terrible start but rebounded strong to capture the medalist award in Monday's 11th Region Golf Meet at the Paintsville Country Club with a par-70 and helped lead the Panther golf team to their first regional title since 1975.

Pikeville will advance on to Pine Grove next Thursday and Friday for the state meet. The Panthers shot a 311 for the meet to take first place.

"It's just a matter of all the hard work these kids have put in this year," said Pikeville coach Lyle Blackburn. "This is the first time Pikeville has won since 1975 although they have had some great individual golfers. In fact, in 1975 was the only time that Pikeville won a regional meet."

Prestonsburg High School placed fifth in the regional meet with a 351 led by Brett James, 80, Mike Marcum shot a 85 with Matt Crum and Chris Cornette finishing with 90 and 96 respectively.

Justice started the meet in trouble when his shot went into the nearby river. He then had a double bogey before righting himself and birding on the 13, 15, 16 and 18th holes. Justice shot a 34 on the back nine and finished with a 36 on the front nine for his medalist winning score of 70.

The future of the Pikeville golf team is bright when you consider that the runner-up in the medalist was also from Pikeville. Eighth grader Patrick Damron fired in a four-over-74.

"We have a freshman in Neil Trimble who shot a 84 for us in his first regional meet," explained Blackburn.

Cody Trimble finished with an 83 but the score could have easily been an 79. Trimble had 40 putts in the meet.

"We played in a match in Winchester this year," stated Blackburn, "where we shot a 316 and finished second to Shelby County. After the meet and on our way home, the kids started talking and set a goal to shoot at least 315 or better in the rest of the meets.

"We shot a 311 to win the regional meet. The kids have worked hard and this is their reward for hard work."

Blackburn said that his squad met after school and practice until dark and that they did it everyday except Sundays.

"Sunday was the only day that we did not practice," said the Panther coach. "We started with nine golfers and we finished with six."

Blackburn said that Grover, a senior, will be missed next year.

"Grover is just a good example to the rest of the golfers," said Blackburn. "He's a hard worker. The first to come to practice and the last to leave. But we also have another kid that is going to be an excellent golfer by the time he is a junior in high school."

Blackburn was referring to Davon Adams who is just a seventh grader that has shown a lot of hard work.

"He has brought his average down nine strokes," said Blackburn of the promising golfer.

McDowell finished with a 399 with John McKenzie shooting a 82. Mark Duddleson finished with a 93, Brandon Akers at 96 and James Stumbo with a 128.

The Betsy Layne golf team shot a combined score of 425 with Chris Potter leading the Bobcats with a 86. Toby Newsome, off on his game, fired in a 95 and Jamie Hylton had a 99 with Dale Kimbler finishing with a 145.

Jason Martin led the Allen Central Rebels with his 88 as the Rebels finished at 436. Matt Crawford shot a 105, Nick Halvrey 111 and Ephraim O'Quinn at 132.

Paintsville was disqualified from the tournament because of a mix up in scoring. However, Matt Ratliff fired in a three-over-73 to become a state individual qualifier.

Boyd County placed second overall in the region meet four strokes behind Pikeville with a 315. Rowan County was third at 334.

Wade places 10th in Oneida Baptist cross-country meet

Eleven cross country teams gathered at Oneida Baptist this past weekend to take part in the Oneida Baptist Invitational Cross-Country meet.

Allen Central, Oneida Baptist, Buckhorn, Whitley County, Bell County, Lee County, Riverside, Knox Central, Owsley County, Jackson County and St. Catherine's represented their respective schools.

Oneida Baptist, traditionally strong in cross country, took first place in the boy's division with 17 points. Bell County was second with 67 and third place went to Buckhorn with 78 points.

For the women, Knox Central nosed out Oneida Baptist and Bell County for first place with 47 points. Oneida placed second with 50 and Bell County scored 51.

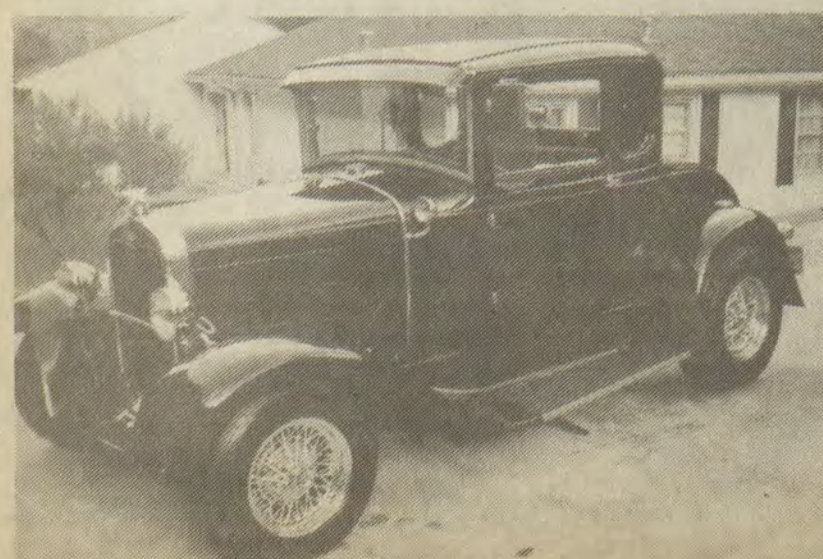

Allen Central's Jessica Wade

placed tenth in the women's division with a time of 17:38 for the 4K course. Bell County's Beth Turpin ran in for first place with a time of 16:06. Sarah Robinson of St. Catherine's was second with a posted time of 16:16. Krystal Floyd, Allen Central, ran a 21:56 to place 29th overall.

For the Allen Central boys, Todd Howard came in the number 33 spot with his time of 20:16. Kenny Scarborough recorded a time of 20:32 for 37th place. Kenneth Bradley was 47th with a 22:18.

Other Rebel runners were: Estill Stumbo, 26:43; Neil Hicks, 25:45; Wade Damron, 25:47; John Scarborough, 27:29.

Oneida Baptist took the first three positions with Micah Hasty, Dennis McDowell and Jeremy Walls placing one, two and three.

350 Chevy engine is among prizes offered in car show

Prizes. Prizes. And more prizes will be offered and given away at Saturday's Red, White and Blue Day Car Show sponsored by the First Guaranty National Bank of Martin.

Among the items to be given away will be a chrome plated 350 Chevy engine or $1,000. Chances will be sold for $1 on the engine and the fortunate winner can either take the engine or the cash prize.

The motor is just one of the many, many prizes that will be given away as car enthusiasts from all over the region converge on the banks parking lot for one of the biggest car shows in Eastern Kentucky.

"People has been calling us from all over," said Tina Mills, director of the show.

The show will get started around noon Saturday and promises to be completed by time the parade starts at 3 p.m. With the expected increase in entrants this year, more judges will be on hand to judge the cars.

Something new this year will be a $200 savings bond plus a trophy going to the winners for the Best Paint, Best Engine and Best Interior. Also new will be a $100 savings bond for the Best Graphics. That will be the car with the best design painted on the car.

The Best of Show, that is everybody's choice of the best car of all entrants, will receive a $500 savings bond.

According to Mills, 15 other savings bonds will be given away as well as other prizes every 30 minutes of the show.

"We have cases of oil, front end alignments and many other door prizes to give away," stated Mills.

Providing entertainment at this year's show will be the Kentucky Junior Opry. Last year the show had the Kentucky Opry but now it will be the junior one doing the entertaining.

First, second and third place trophies will be presented to winners in each class.

Here is a breakdown of classes to be judged:

- Original cars 1931 and below.
- Original cars 1932-1948
- Original cars 1949-1959

Adams rolls over Sandy Valley 26-6

Chuck Rowe
Sports Writer

As the hunt for the Floyd County championship continued, the Adams Middle School Blackcats had yet to play a county competitor facing the Sandy Valley Bobcats at Betsy Layne Wednesday night.

The Bobcats had played a couple of county games but had come up short on the scoreboard, not being able to get a victory.

It did not take the Blackcats long to score as they took the opening kickoff on the Bobcat 44-yard line. Two plays later, from the 50-yard line, Matt Lafferty ran 50 yards for a touchdown with only 6:53 left in the first quarter. The two-point conversion run by Lafferty was no good and the score was 6-0 at the end of the first quarter.

The Bobcats' offense could not get going as they were held on three straight plays, picking up only two yards. On fourth down and eight, a Bobcat punt was blocked and the Blackcats took over on their own 47-yard line. After picking up a first down, the Blackcats were held on four plays when a fourth down pass from Mike Castle to Wesley McGuire was incomplete and they handed the ball over on downs.

After the ball changed hands three times on punts, the Blackcats took over on their own 18-yard line. Two plays later, Jon Morris found the end zone on a 16-yard run with 2:46 left in the second quarter. Morris' run for the two-point conversion failed and the score was 12-0.

Adams scored once more in the first half as Morris sprinted 29 yards for a touchdown with only :29 left in the half. The two-point conversion run by Morris was no good and the halftime score was 18-0.

The Bobcat offense came out of halftime moving the ball into Blackcat territory until Adams held to a punting situation on a fourth and 16, setting up the final score by Adams from their own 27-yard line. After Morris carried for a gain of two, Josh Luster outran the entire Bobcat team 71 yards for a touchdown with 3:21 left in the third quarter. The two-point conversion was good on a pass from Castle to Jason Osborne to make the score 26-0.

In the fourth quarter, the ball changed hands three times and the Bobcats got the ball back for the last scoring drive of the game. The Bobcats picked up three first downs, moving the ball to the Blackcat 35-yard line. The next play, with :05 left in the game, Ramey Hunter found Kevin Howell for a 35-yard touchdown pass to end the game. The two-point conversion run was no good and the final score was 26-6.

The leading rusher of the game was the Bobcat's Craig Hamilton with 84 yards on 14 carries as the team rushed 29 times for 102 yards.

Josh Luster was the leading rusher for the Blackcats carrying just three times for 83 yards. Jon Morris tossed in 58 yards on seven carries.

Osborne surprises Allen Central Little Rebs, wins in over time 16-14

Chuck Rowe
Sports Writer

The Allen Central Little Rebels were a top contender in the quest for the Floyd County championship starting the 1992 football season. The Little Rebs were on their way to a good start by beating two intra-county schools, the Sandy Valley Bobcats and the Allen Eagles.

The Osborne Eagles were also in the hunt for the Floyd County championship as they were 1-0 in the county but were 1-2 overall, beating Allen but losing to Knott Central and Warfield.

Both teams went into the Tuesday night game undefeated against county competitors and needing a win to keep their goals of gaining a county championship alive.

Allen Central received the opening kickoff and only ran three plays as the Eagle defense dropped the Little Rebels for a loss of six yards on the series and the Rebels punted. The Eagle offense was clicking as they picked up a first down and on a third down and 12, Scott Johnson found Brian Triplett on a 28-yard pass completion that took Osborne to the Allen Central eight-yard line. Three plays later, on third down and goal from the two yard line, Chris Isaac found paydirt on a two-yard scamper with :18 left in the first quarter. Johnson connected with Triplett for a successful two-point conversion attempt to make the score after the first quarter 8-0.

It did not take long for the Little Rebels to even the score when on a quarterback keep by Eric (Scooter) Moore, the ball was fumbled, picked up by Levi Wells, and ran to the Osborne one-yard line, a total gain of 46 yards. On the next play from scrimmage, Scooter Moore followed his center for a gain of one yard and a touchdown with 6:38 left in the second quarter. Levi Wells ran the two-point conversion try into the end zone and the score at halftime was 8-8.

The Eagles took the second half kickoff on their own four-yard line and set up an offensive drive that would consist of over eight minutes. Osborne drove from their own four-yard line to Allen Central's 47-yard line before being sacked for a loss and electing to punt on the second play of the fourth quarter.

After the ball changed hands three times, two Allen Central fumbles and an Osborne interception time ran out and the game ended in an 8-8 tie and the game headed for sudden death.

In sudden death, Allen Central got the chance to score first and did on the second play from the 10-yard line on a four yard run by Scooter Moore. The two-point conversion was unsuccessful as the Little Rebels had a 14-8 lead as the Eagles got their chance to score from the 10-yard line.

On their third play from the 7-yard line, Johnson hit Triplett in the end zone to tie the score at 14-14. On the two-point conversion, Johnson looked to pass and dumped it off to Isaac as he found the end zone for the two points and the win as the Eagles beat the Little Rebels 16-14.

In B-team action, the Osborne Eagles defeated the Little Rebels 16-0.

On the strength of the Allen Central win over Betsy Layne last Monday night, Neeley moves into first place for the first time this year. A three-way tie for second place has taken shape as four weeks remain in the regular season. Kentucky is off this week but Prestonsburg and Wheelwright are expected to win. It will be a close one at Stamford but Eastern Kentucky is the clear choice in this one as number three faces number 17.

THE TIMES' WEEKEND

Steve Wariner to perform in the park

Voted one of Nashville's ten sexiest men in a poll of fans by USA Today, country music entertainer Steve Wariner will capture the hearts of those attending WMDJ's 10th Annual Day in the Park.

Wariner's performance begins at 4:30 at Allen Park on Sunday, October 18. The entertainer is one of the most consistent hitmakers of the last 15 years, but during the past two years he has been Nashville's hottest success story. Warner's vocal performance on his latest album "I am Ready," is said to rank among his best.

Warner agrees. "There's a lot more emotion and heart than on any of the other albums I've done, and there are a lot of songs that I think are going to be just right for radio." Recently released from the album is "Leave Him Out of This," a taut little tale of distracted love and soars into the rich harmonies of the chorus.

Wariner is one of the most accomplished instrumentalists in the business, and his peers, the critics, the fans, and the manufacturers have all noticed. After beginning his career in the bands of Dottie West (He performed with West's band when he was 17.) and Bob Luman, Wariner worked with guitar legend Chet Atkins, both on record and on stage. He was part of a project that teamed him with Atkins and Dire Straits' Mark Knopfler, and he played and sang on the recent release by violinist extraordinaire Mark O'Connor.

Talented musician, it is as a singer that Wariner has always shone most brightly for his fans. Hit after hit has seen him complement enviable range, control and dynamics with warmth and believability. The combination placed Wariner chart-toppers like "All Roads Lead To You," "Kansas City Lights," "Don't Your Memory Ever Sleep at Night," "Heart Trouble," "You Can Dream Of Me," and "What I Didn't Do" among the true classics of the 1980s. All told, he has had eleven number one singles and a host of other top ten hits.

Wariner's skills as a songwriter well-known, he has become one of the few major country stars to write the bulk of his recorded material.

Wariner's top-notch performances and his endearing qualities have won him the respect of his fans. He takes as much time as needed to visit with his fans and to sign autographs after shows. It's a sign that, after 26 years in the business, he still enjoys every aspect of it.

Top-notch performer

Country music entertainer Steve Wariner will perform during the 10th annual Day in the Park hosted by WMDJ. Fans should stick around after the show because Wariner respects his fans and is always willing to sign autographs. The day of entertainment will begin at 12:30 at Stumbo Park at Allen.

INTUITION OR DE JA VU?

You can call it intuition or psychic vibrations, but for some unknown reason I'm particularly sensitive when report cards are due.

Forget that the week they are due our son decides he wants to mow the grass and forgets that it doesn't need mowing since we've usually experienced our first frost by that time. What's so strange about his wanting to mow the grass is that he never wants to mow the grass when it needs mowing. Yet when it's high enough to be plowed and baled, he wants the job.

Another dead give away is that he talks to us. Yes, I mean he actually forms complete sentences and answers direct questions. And if you think that's odd, he asks us questions like, "How was your day, Mom?" "How are you feeling, Dad?" "Can I help you do anything?"

Don't get me wrong. I'm not really complaining about how good he acts, I just wish he could continue to conduct himself this way during the entire six weeks. Of course, then we wouldn't have anything to look forward to, would we?

Just this past weekend (bear in mind that this week is report card week) he didn't quarrel with me when I explained to him why I didn't want him to do a certain thing he'd been doing. Even if he agrees with me, he sometimes presents some type of argument for argument's sake; typical teen-age rebellion stuff that I used to be a pro at in my younger days.

Fortunately, our son is unusually well behaved for a 15 year old during the entire six weeks. In fact, the only real problems we experience with him center around his study habits for the five weeks leading up to report card week. We want him to study when he wants to talk on the phone. We want him to study when he wants to have his friends over to the house. We want him to study when he wants to watch sports on TV. He thinks the only time we don't want him to study is when he's taking a shower, but he's wrong. We'd like him to study then, too, if we knew how it could be done.

Seriously, parents are tuned-in to knowing when report cards are due by their children's actions and reactions, but sometimes it's nice. Particularly when our son comes up and hugs us and we like to think its because he really wanted to do it anyway and not just because report cards were due. Once he hugged me halfway between grading periods and it upset my psychic balance so much that I called the school to make sure they weren't issuing the report cards early. Talk about paranoid!

The latest glitch in our son's personality concerning report card grades is his last ditch effort to save his hide by stating that the teacher doesn't like him.

"Mom, I'm not going to do too well in that class because the teacher doesn't like me."

"Now, J.R. Why wouldn't the teacher like you?"

"I don't know," he replies. "Has she ever had to call you down in class?" I asked.

Truth, Justice and the American Way

by Geoff Belcher, staff writer

We are not the same persons this year as last; nor are those we love. It is a happy chance if we, changing, continue to love a changed person.

-W. Somerset Maugham, The Summing Up

If married couples did not live together, happy marriages would be more frequent.

-Nietzsche, Human, All Too Human

Well, kids, yesterday was my fourth month wedding anniversary.

Now, before all you romantic types start thinking I'm one of you, the only reason I keep track of stuff like that is I have a very strong sense of self-preservation.

For some reason or another women, at least the ones I've known, seem to keep track of anniversaries like the IRS keeps track of your income.

There's anniversaries for the first time you met, the first time you went out together, the day you first started going steady, the first time one of you said "I love you," the first time one of you broke wind in front of the other.... Well, you get the point.

Anyway, yesterday was our anniversary and you know how sensitive and sentimental I am, so it got me to looking back over the short time my wife and I have been together and all the illusions about marriage we had and how, when it comes right down to it, we didn't know a @#%$** thing.

Now, even though four months of marriage does not by any stretch of the imagination make me a veteran of wedded bliss, I believe I've logged enough marriage miles to qualify for the frequent whiner plan.

Married life, as any married and/or divorced person knows, is to say the least vastly different from the single life.

For instance, and this is only a minor example, when I was living by myself, a four-pack of Charmin lasted me oh, say, a year or so (and this may come as quite a surprise to all those who tell me on a daily basis that I'm full of it). These days my wife and I buy the industrial family-size hundred-roll pack, and it lasts about thirty seconds. I don't know what she does with it!! I don't know if she stuffs it up in the ceiling for extra insulation, or if she just wads it up and flushes it to see how much will go down at one time.

It's my theory that such situations aren't in fact unique to me, but actually pretty much affect everyone, man or woman, who is newly married. Let me know if any of this marriage-adjustment stuff sounds familiar.

First and foremost, since I got married, I seem to have set the world land speed record for packing on vast quantities of protective arctic blubber. And I wasn't exactly what you'd call skinny before. Nowadays when I look into the mirror, I see the Michelin Man staring back at me.

It's gotten to the point where, if I could afford to, I'd hire somebody to follow me around and slap the porkchops out of my mouth.

Also, my wife and I seem to be turning into our own parents. I walk around behind her turning out all the lights in the house that she turns on and conveniently forgets to turn off and she walks around behind me picking up all the clothing I take off and conveniently forget to put in the hamper.

And since the ice age started some time last month, we've begun fighting daily battles in what I like to call "Operation: Thermostat Storm," where I'll turn the heat up as high as it'll go and five minutes later she goes back and turns it down to minus 100 degrees below a witch's mammary gland.

My wife's point is: 1) I'm basically a wimp and 2) she doesn't want our gas bill shooting so high we have to sell all our worldly belongings just to pay the utility company.

My philosophy is: 1) hey, if the government can operate on a trillion dollar deficit we can too and 2) I'd rather be in debtor's prison for not padding some bureaucrat's pocket than have icicles hanging off delicate portions of my anatomy when I take my morning shower.

And then there's trash day, that one day a week when for a change the government has to take garbage from you.

The difference between married trash day and single trash day is that back in the old days when I was living with my parents, either my dad would take out the trash or would ask me to take it out the night before. Then when I first moved out on my own, I lived in an apartment where, once a month or so, I'd trudge wearily out to the dumpster with my accumulated trash and toss it away. Anytime I wanted. Day or night.

Now I live in a house. No convenient dumpster. If I don't have the trash out when the trash guys come to get it, it gets to stay in the house and fester for another week until all the rats in the neighborhood decide we're throwing a party in their honor (and if you keep it outside, which I tried briefly, all the dogs in the neighborhood think the party's for them and take great pleasure in covering every square inch of your back yard with the trash to show you how much they really, really appreciate it).

So now every Thursday morning my wife wakes me up the minute she hears the tell-tale "beep-beep-there's-a-garbage-truck-backing-up" sound and offers to take the trash out herself when I won't wake up. Still being somewhat of a newlywed, my fragile male ego hasn't yet toughened up to

Dear Abby

Woman afraid her green-eyed monster is all he seems to be

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a man I have gone with for a year and a half. He is 56 and I am 48. I was married (no children) and so was he. He has three grown children (and six grandchildren) whom I have never met because he had a falling out with his family and doesn't see any of them.

Abby, I am having problems with his jealous nature and some of his beliefs. For example: Women should not wear shorts, two-piece bathing suits or tight-fitting dresses. He hates to see a woman in pants or jeans. He thinks a woman should dance only with her fiance or husband. He says all men have dirty minds and all women (except me) are "bitches" and cannot be trusted. He says a married woman should never have a repairman in the house unless her husband is home.

He does not approve of makeup. (I have toned mine down, but he prefers that I wear none.) He does not want me to work because of the close contact I have with men. (I am a physical therapist.)

I am by nature a friendly person, but he has forbidden me to hug even my male relatives. I have told him all about my life, and now I'm sorry I did because he keeps throwing it up to me. He has a terrible temper. He got angry once and put his fist through a wall.

I suppose he sounds like a monster, but at times he can be very sweet and loving. Please help me sort out my feelings. He is begging me to marry him.

SERIOUS PROBLEM

DEAR SERIOUS: It's time to face the facts that are abundantly clear. This man has all the qualities that make for a miserable marriage. He wants to control you totally. Worse yet, he is pathologically jealous, suspicious and possessive. Unless you want to live like a prisoner the rest of your life, say goodbye to this evil man. And the sooner, the better!

DEAR ABBY: I just read your booklet "What Every Teen Should Know." I learned a lot, but there is still a question in my mind about something.

I am 17 and my boyfriend is 19. (I will call him Bob, which is not his real name.) We have been going steady for two years. When we met, I was a virgin but Bob was not. I have never had sex with anybody but Bob, so obviously I do not have any sexually transmitted diseases.

Bob went to a clinic two months ago to be tested for everything—including AIDS. He came up negative for everything. Abby, since Bob does not have any diseases and neither do I, and we do not cheat on each other, do you think we have to use condoms?

ANONYMOUS IN VERMONT

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I recommend using a condom every time you have sex—whether you think you need to or not.

DEAR ABBY: I am ticklish, and my boyfriend thinks it is fun to tickle me. I have told him many times to stop it, because it is aggravating.

Well, he seems to be offended now, and won't touch me at all. I think of this as a "punishment," and I'm hoping if he sees this in print, he'll realize that he's overreacting.

What do you think? TICKLISH

DEAR TICKLISH: Tell him that anything a person does to another without consent is unwelcome and abusive.

Most teenagers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A lot is out of your control this week. Don't worry, though, because even if it doesn't look like it, partners do have matters well in hand. So when you finally DO get the explanations this weekend, you'll feel adored because of how it all went down.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Humor, my dear Bull, helps you deal with all the changes of the week. Your role as the stable, easygoing nurturer is definitely needed. A loved one falls in love with you all over again because of your superb control. Do rest up this weekend—this is only the beginning.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It'll be hard to put a halt to all the wild goings-on this week. Partners change course midstream, and of course, this is supposed to be okay with you. You might as well make it so, because you have little choice. This weekend you discover how much fun lies in this present uproar.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Turbulence and change are part of this week's scenario. Someone pops into your life whom you haven't seen or heard from since April. Be smart—don't be impulsive. Choose to mull everything over this weekend. Then see just how you feel. Hmmm...

LEO (July 23-August 22) Once you get started this week, you're on a roll. Your personality melts barriers. Surprises lurk on the work front, but the big Lion can handle them. You really are master of your destiny, but you do need to express your feelings. Get into loving vibes on the home front this weekend.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22) Count on an unusual week and you won't be surprised. Think over decisions carefully as the week begins, especially when it comes to a creative venture and/or a major flirtation. (Now, what have you been up to?) You can have what you want—just decide.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22) With the sun going into your sign, you shift into high gear this week. You feel good, though ever so slightly surprised, by what goes down. Money comes in more easily, but you may be spending even more easily. You peak this weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21) Venus goes into your sign this week, and there is no resisting you. It would be wise to think before you leap, because you may be unhappy with the end results. Look to the long run. Accept responsibilities, yet make plenty of time for fun and rest.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21) A money matter that's been on the back burner since April pops. Be focused on what you want. Friends are unusually vibrant, as they want you clearly to join them. Don't mope about what you think is a slight. Let it go and be happy. Your weekend is for celebration.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19) You surprise yourself this week, much less all those in your immediate circle. You reverse course and decide, not once, but twice, to go a totally different direction. Talks with partners are important, if you are to keep it together. Share those exquisite dreams, too.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18) Go with those flashes of insight this week. You are very much into significant others, joint assets and the gifts of a relationship. Go away this weekend, in your imagination if not really, with a loved one.

PISCES (February 19-March 20) Work is difficult, but as we all know, a must. By week's end, major distractions fall in your path. Make your choices quickly. Be careful with friends—the 'flaky' become stable and vice versa. Count on an intimate, close weekend.

DEE AND TOM HARDIE

GRANDPARENTING

GRANDPAGRABSEXCLUSIVE BRAGGING RIGHTS

Dear Dee and Tom: My husband and I have just had a new grandson, and we are ecstatically happy! But it's the same old story again. He keeps talking and talking about "his" grandson.

It's "my grandson has gained two pounds ... my grandson this, my grandson that." He does the same thing with our other grandchildren, and our children as well.

I'm getting tired of his peculiar use of possessive pronouns. It might be my grandparental pride, but I, too, would like to get into the act. Am I silly? —Granny, Topeka

A: No! He should take freshman English all over again, to learn how to share his family publicly. Tell him so, bluntly.

Also, take a little time and draw a family tree. Title it "OUR Family." Then present it to him and say, "Buster, it's time you realize that I'm not just another limb on this growing tree. I share the trunk with you, and this is OUR family, our grandson, our joint treasures."

If you make it a joke, he should catch on. Good luck!

Hurricane Andrew, which recently devastated a large part of southern Florida, has reminded us of the strong advice earlier this year from Gov. Lawton Chiles of Florida. We hope that many older Floridians and other American seniors have taken his advice.

He urged Floridians and others over 65 to obtain a pneumococcal pneumonia vaccine, saying: "Pneumonia is one of the leading causes of death in the United States, taking close to 54,000 lives annually. Unfortunately, many of those deaths could have been avoided if proper precautions were taken: most important, the pneumonia vaccine."

Pneumonia can strike anyone at any time, he said. Particularly vulnerable is the over-65 age group and those with chronic conditions, such as heart disease, diabetes, alcoholism and lung disease.

The one-time vaccine, which protects against the most common form of pneumonia, is effective against 90 percent of the bacteria causing the disease. Yet, the vaccine is severely "underutilized."

"Only a stark 10 percent of the target population receive their pneumonia vaccine," Gov. Chiles warned.

We recently ran a column about a 12-year-old granddaughter who loves to read, but according to her grandfather, she reads only "trash" like "pulp love stories."

We told him to be thankful that she is already a dedicated reader, and subtly encourage her to broaden her love of books, especially more serious books, including some of the classics.

We said, "Be thankful that she reads, whatever she reads right now. You should be a friend, not a dictator. Try to be diplomatic about her reading."

We were reminded of this last week by a Chinese "proverb" found in a fortune cookie at our favorite Chinese restaurant, Ming's, in Timonium, Md.

"The road to knowledge begins with the turn of the page." How true! We hope that young granddaughter turns many pages.

GRAND REMARK OF THE WEEK:

"We have five children and eight grandchildren, with many happy and funny memories and stories.

"I'll never forget the winter when my husband, Bailey, and our son Peter went skating on a nearby lake. A grandson, Nathan, then only about 2 1/2, of course wanted to go, but was told he was too young and might fall through the ice and thus had to stay with me, his 'baby sitter.'"

"At first he was very disappointed. But then, with a twinkle in his eyes, he looked right at me and said with all seriousness, 'Now it's just me and you, kid!'"

"He knew it would make me roar with laughter. And it still does!" —Lyell Walten, Baltimore

VOLLEYBALL

BICENTENNIAL

UNIONIZATION OF THE MINES

Dr. Thomas Walker's 1750 expedition party first noted coal's presence in Kentucky. Since then, the abundant mineral has impacted the quality, or lack of quality, of life for hundreds of thousands of Kentuckians.

Kentucky has two major coalfields, one inside the Pennyroyal area, known for its strip mines, and one on the eastern Cumberland Plateau. Although the western field was opened earlier, in 1828, the eastern field is larger, encompassing 37 counties and 10,400 square miles. Harlan, Pike, Letcher, Perry, Floyd, and Bell counties are the major producers here.

The eastern area was found to be coal-rich in the 1880's, but when World War I broke out, the coal boom came overnight. The price of coal soared and miners' wages rose to unbelievable heights. As suddenly as the boom began, it ended with the end of the war. The Great Depression closed in on the area in 1930 and the economy totally collapsed.

Unions, some with Communist influence, sought to organize the mines; miners who joined the unions were fired. Disagreement developed and finally violence flared in Harlan County in May, 1931. Harlan County became a symbol of disorder and labor unrest when newspapers across the country carried lurid accounts of the "Battle of Evarts," a series of violent confrontations between union miners and coal company employees.

John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers brought some order to the coal fields, building hospitals and generally improving the quality of life for mine workers. On September 1, 1938, the Harlan County Coal Operators Association signed a contract with the United Mine Workers. The mines were unionized, but the problems in eastern Kentucky have not ended.

CHUCK SHEPHERD

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

In July, police in India's western state of Maharashtra called an end to a traditional annual event in which women from the adjacent villages of Sukhed and Bor line up on opposite sides of a canal and yell insults at each other. (The event had become a festival, with men playing music to accompany the insults, which supposedly commemorated a feud between two wives who lived in separate villages but were married to the same chief.)

THE ENTREPRENEURIAL SPIRIT

—Clint Lenz, 10, took first place in the Invent America contest in July with a glow-in-the-dark toilet seat for those middle-of-the-night forays. He won $1,000, computers for his class, and a spot in the Smithsonian Institution.

—Third-grader Andrew S. Meredith of Council Bluffs, Iowa, won first place in a national inventors' contest with Toilet Targets, floating doodads to improve males' aim. He said he got the idea because the boys' room at school smelled bad, presumably from all the misfiring.

—Delta Air Lines, coming off a $180 million quarterly loss, reported in July an annual savings of $1.4 million in labor and food costs based on a single decision: eliminating the decorative piece of lettuce under the vegetables served on in-flight meals.

—A Japanese rancher told reporters in Tokyo in July that he herds cattle by outfitting them with pocket pagers (beepers), which he calls from his portable phone. After a week of training, the cows associate the beeping with eating and hustle up for grub.

—For its grand opening in June in Bartlett, Tenn., Dyer's Cafe brought in cooked grease its owners said was 80 years old, transported from Dyer's flagship hamburger restaurant in Memphis by sheriff's deputies on motorcycles. Said owner Jim Marshall, "The grease is our secret, and it's got to be protected."

—Newsweek reported in June that a Japanese firm has sold more than 100,000 "Mews" — toy cats that meow and wag their tails at the first sound of a human voice.

—Jackie Zajac and Sheila Mullan opened Fido's Fast Food in Toledo, Ohio, in June. Pet owners can pick up cheeseburgers, french fries and peanut butter bagels — all dried — and, for dessert, carob drops, catnip and peopleshaped crackers.

JUST CAN'T STOP MYSELF

—The final hours of the now-closed Belk Lindsay store in Tampa, Fla., in July were marked by clothing discounts so deep that women, tired of waiting for a dressing room, changed in and out of clothes in the middle of the store. Said one employee, of a middle-aged woman, "She had most of her clothes off and was trying to pull on a pair of pants when I got there and told her she just couldn't do that."

—In July, Danny Fouts and his wife and her sister, in New York City to appear on the "Sally Jessy Raphael" show to discuss their arrest for shoplifting their wedding supplies on their wedding day in March, were arrested for stealing things from the New York Ramada Hotel the TV show had booked them in for their stay.

—In September, the management of a farm in the former Soviet republic of Kyrgyzstan announced it had cut off electricity in the area in order to tear workers away from television. Too many were skipping work to watch episodes in the 249-part Mexican soap opera "The Rich Also Cry."

THE WEIRDO AMERICAN COMMUNITY

Psychiatrist Richard C. Pillard of Boston University, reporting to a scholarly audience in August on the genetic predisposition to homosexuality, offered the example of two male identical twins who were separated at birth and raised in different families. By the time they were reunited, one twin was gay, and the other was straight, but they were strikingly similar in most other ways, including their preferences for wearing leather garments during sex and using vibrators and other sexual devices.

LEAST COMPETENT PERSON

Kenneth Jeffries, 24, was arrested in West Haven, Conn., in August for robbing a convenience store. Police reported that he had first offered the clerk $1 for a pack of gum as a ruse and then taken $40 in the robbery. However, said police, Jeffries returned a minute later and asked, uncertainly, "Did I pay for the gum?" By that time the clerk had summoned police, and Jeffries was soon apprehended.

THE DIMINISHING VALUE OF LIFE

Joseph Fallat Sr., 61, was charged with killing his wife, Florence, 50, in Harrison City, Pa., in August. Said a patrolman, "[Fallat] said she would stack the refrigerator full of vegetables, hiding the milk, and he wasn't going to take that anymore." Fallat allegedly chased his wife through the house and stabbed her 219 times.

Smile Awhile

"Just once," he answers innocently.

"And what did you do?"
"Nothing. I wasn't doing a thing. I was trying to get somebody to quit talking to me, but they wouldn't so the teacher got mad at me."

"Why didn't you just ignore who was talking to you?"

"I tried to, but they kept talking to me and you always told me it was rude not to answer someone when they were talking to you."

"That's not relative when it comes to talking in class, and I think you're old enough to understand that. That still doesn't explain why the teacher doesn't like you."

"Oh, she doesn't like me because I don't make good grades in her class."

"If you studied you'd make good grades, wouldn't you?"

"If she liked me I would."

Truth, Justice

the point where I can, as any sensible man surely would, say "Thanks, babe, I really appreciate it." So I immediately hop out of bed and announce with both hands on my hips that I, as The Man Of The House, will take out the trash, as if it were some great heroic accomplishment qualifying me for, at the very least, the 1993 Nobel Prize for Weinieness.

I then dash down the stairs faster than a speeding garden slug, struggling to put on my pants as I go down without falling and breaking my fool head, grab the garbage and rush outside with one shoe on, my britches inside-out and my shirt on backwards, at which point Elvira, my faithful German shepherd/General nuisance-mix, thinks I've come out to play, jumps up on my nice clean clothes with her muddy, Lincoln-Continental-size paws and knocks me backwards into one of the tremendous underground caverns she has unearthed in our front yard. Then the truck pulls out, leaving me holding the bags, and the guy standing on the back just laughs and laughs.

Another thing about being married that has changed my life considerably is that my wife and I now directly address each other by our given names. We used to have pet names for each other — she'd call me Spot and I'd call her Fluffy. Now she either calls me "Geoff," or simply "Hey, you," which, to be quite honest, is much less nauseating to our friends. Similarly, my wife, the apple of my eye, the orange of my navel, used to laugh like a madwoman at the corniest, lamest jokes I could tell. Now, I'm lucky to utter a complete sentence without her finishing it for me.

this point: "Geez, Geoff, you're gonna get killed when your wife reads this!"

That would be true if my wife was just any woman. But she is not. She is a visitor from another planet, blessed with strange powers and abilities far beyond those of mortal men.... Yes, she is Superwife, who in her guise as the mild-mannered spouse of an obnoxious reporter for a major rural-political newspaper fights daily for Truth, Justice and the American Way and struggles hourly against the impulse to rip out my intestines and strangle me with them.

For you see, she loves me and I love her, and although love means always having to say you're sorry, it also means caring, compassion, forgiveness and never never ripping out your husband's vital organs even though he usually deserves it. She's the best, most loving, most understanding woman in the whole world and I'm not fit to breathe the same air she does (there, if that don't get me off the hook, nothin' will).

So Happy Anniversary, babe. This column's for you.

Don't worry, I didn't use your name this time.

Please don't hurt me.

Pursuant to Application Number 836-5126, Major Revision #1

In accordance with KRS 350.070, notice is hereby given that Prater Creek Mining, Inc., P.O. A new study shows that automatic toothbrushes such as Teledyne's Water Pic are more than twice as effective against gum disease as are manual brushes.

The new BIC Lighter with Child Guard is made to keep children from starting fires.

Fighting Cancer With Smiles:

Former Miss Texas' Unique Support Group Helps Victims Battle Disease

Born out of a determination to fight back after her own experience with cancer, Miss Texas 1990, Suzanne Lawrence, founded Smiles Against Cancer. A unique cancer support group, Smiles began in 1989 in Suzanne's hometown of Humble, Texas. Suzanne's brainchild not only fills a badly-needed niche for helping fellow cancer victims and their families cope, but, more importantly, provides significant, proven psychological and physical benefits.

According to a 1990 UCLA School of Medicine study, cancer patients who were actively involved with support groups were less tired, less depressed, maintained greater vitality and, over time, coped with the disease more effectively. More encouraging is the study's findings that linked participation in support groups to an increase of "natural killer" cells that suppress tumor growth. Because of these and similar findings, more doctors are now regarding support groups as a routine part of cancer treatment.

Smiles Against Cancer is a new twist on traditional support groups. While others offer counseling and emotional help, Smiles provides tangible services and luxuries to cancer patients and their families that alleviate the escalating stress and financial burdens that occur throughout the course of the disease. Through Smiles, members receive community-donated goods and services, such as complimentary dinners at local restaurants, babysitting and maid services, manicures, haircuts, flowers, movie tickets, transportation and opportunities for social gatherings.

"The lives of cancer patients and their families are greatly affected by the illness. They often need more than just counseling—they need a push back into life," said Lawrence. "Smiles helps instill a positive attitude and enhances their social lives."

For her perseverance and foresight, Suzanne was presented with the Fruit of the Loom Quality of Life Award as part of the 1990 Miss America Pageant. Fruit of the Loom presents the scholarship every year to the Miss America contestant who demonstrates the greatest commitment to improving the quality of life of others. Embodying the true spirit of the award, Suzanne not only continues to dedicate herself to Smiles, but is now expanding it into a national organization.

At this year's pageant in Atlantic City on September 19th, Lawrence will serve as a judge for the 1992 Quality of Life Award. "The pageant has changed dramatically from the bathing beauty contest it was decades ago to a program that is producing outstanding volunteers who are dedicated to making a difference in society," said Lawrence. "This year, contestants are focusing their energies on such pressing issues as AIDS, education, and homelessness. It's going to be tough to pick just one Fruit of the Loom Award winner," she added.

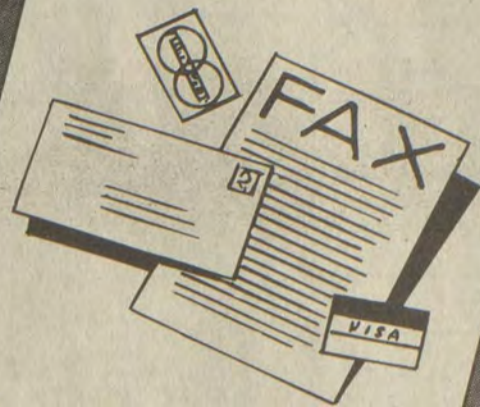

"Suzanne is the epitome of the new volunteer wave happening in the U.S.," said David R. Drescher, Executive Vice President of Marketing for Fruit of the Loom. "The scholarship dollars we award to people such as Suzanne help them launch outstanding volunteer and community service programs. By honoring people who dedicate themselves to a cause, from a corporate standpoint we raise awareness of the need for volunteerism for an improved future," he added.

Suzanne was diagnosed as having cervical cancer in July 1989 as a result of her mother's use of the drug DES while she was pregnant. Through four surgeries and continuous preventive testing and care, Suzanne continues to fight the disease.
