State board seeks to remove Boyd

Staff Writer

State Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen brought charges of misconduct against Floyd County Board of Education member Tommy Boyd at the state school board meeting in Gilbertsville Thursday.

Boyd was charged with one count of misconduct in office for statements he made at the September 8 school board meeting in regard to the employment of an office manager at the Youth Service Center at Betsy Layne High School.

The charge against Boyd will not be pursued immediately by the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education because Boyd is hospitalized for treatment of an apparent stroke suffered last month, Steve Swift, spokesman for the Department of Education, said Thursday.

Boyd, who was re-elected as board member in Tuesday's election, was transferred to Cardinal Hill Rehabilitation Center on Wednesday to begin a therapy program.

The written charge said that Boyd "expressed his displeasure that a certain individual was not hired for a specific position in the district." The charge said that Boyd indicated he would see to it that a certain person was hired by the district, an apparent violation of the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA).

Under KERA, a board member Member Board of Education can be removed from office "if he attempts to influence the hiring of any school employee, except the superintendent of schools or the school board attorney."

Boyd allegedly tried to influence the hiring of an individual prior to the September meeting, the charge says, through assistant superintendent Pete Grigsby and Lola Brashear, a central office employee. Floyd County Superintendent Steve Towler said Thursday that he knew several weeks ago that Boyd might be charged in connection with the incident, but that he did not know Murphy, 33; Curt Tufts, 2; Gene until Thursday morning that the charge had been filed.

"It is my understanding that they have not served them (the charges) and will not serve them until and when and if Mr. Boyd is able to answer the charges," Towler said. "They were aware of Mr. Boyd's situation and so I'm not sure why they felt they had to go ahead and do that."

Towler added that he felt that Boyd "was expressing his opinion" during the September meeting about hiring an individual and that he felt Boyd did not intentionally violate state law.

"That night that Mr. Boyd misspoke, he realized after the fact that he shouldn't have done what he did," Towler said. "(Mr. Boyd) also went ahead to say. . . 'I'll raise Cain until she's employed.' He never raised Cain with me personally. I would

Those comments came from Sandy Gubser, director of management assistance for the state Department of Education, to members of the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education at their meeting in Gilbertsville on Wednesday.

Gubser was reporting to the state board on actions taken by the Floyd County Board of Education in response to a scathing report released in August on the management of the school district.

The report was the result of a week-long state investigation into the Boysen ordered the local board in August to develop a short-term and long-term plan for improvement. The short-term plan was submitted to the state before the September 30 deadline. The long-term plan was due by November 15, but that deadline was extended until December 15.

The state board approved the extension Wednesday, but state board member Wade Mountz voiced his displeasure about the extra time and added that no more deadlines should be extended.

"It's either on time or it's not," Mountz said

While the first two jewels have been placed in the Triple Crown effort to bring live horse racing to Eastern Kentucky, the Prestonsburg/ Floyd County Properties Corporation now faces what may be the highest hurdle facing completion of the all the costs. project - actually financing it.

The city-county Public Properties Corporation conducted a special meeting Thursday afternoon to discuss methods of financing the proposed Kentucky Downs Harness Track/Fairgrounds and convention ing Incorporated, the firm seeking to

According to appraisals of the property jointly-owned by Prestonsburg businessmen Jack Absher and Hobart Potter which the corporation has enacted a 90-day option to purchase for the facility, $2.6 million will be needed for property purchase and $2.7 million for site preparation. In order to finance ates, the firm underwriting the bonds, the project, the corporation had expected to seek federally-funded taxfree, interest-bonds.

The only forseeable problem, according to Carl Fust, of the Louisville-based legal bonding firm Ruben, Hays and Foley, is that the tax-free bonds that were expected to handle financing of the facility may not cover

If the project were fully funded by interim tax-free, interest-free federal bonds, no more than ten percent of the bond money could be used to fund any privately-owned portion of the facility. Eastern Kentucky Racoperate the race track portion of the fairgrounds/convention center would then be restricted to only about 36 days of racing, little more than half of its intended usage. Since that is not an acceptable alternative, Fust said, other financing plans need to be studied. However, Fust said, he and Terrell Ross, of Ross-Sinclair & Associwill structure the issuance of shortterm bonds and will later issue the needed long-term bonds.

Although the Properties Corporation could legally avoid being liable for the bond repayments should the facility fail, it would still bear a moral responsibilty to pay the debt and would face great difficulty in securing future loans if it did not.

Floyd County Development Authority Executive Director Darrell Gilliam, however, remained optimistic, citing Fust's assessment as the worst-case scenario. The best-case scenario, Gilliam said, would be that the facility would generate enough revenue immediately to recoup about two-thirds of the investment.

The Properties Corporation board voted to pursue a dual-bond issuance, with part of the money to come from tax-free bonds and part from taxable bonds.

representing Eastern Kentucky Racing, suggested that in order to underwrite debt service on the project, onethird of the project could be underwritten by the Floyd County Fiscal Court and Prestonsburg City Council; one-third by the privately-owned Eastern Kentucky Racing; and onethird by in essence mortgaging the facility and property it will rest on.

Among other items the Properties Corporation discussed:

· Woodford discussed the findings of his preliminary feasibility study, which concluded that the facility would generate about 30 percent more revenue than necessary to retire at least two-thirds of the bond

· Prestonsburg architect Randall Burchett, who designed the harness track/fairgrounds and convention center, advised the board that awarding construction bids on the facility to several different contractors rather than one general contractor would be cheaper. A single general contractor would subcontract much of the construction and mark-up costs considerably. The corporation voted to accept Burchett's proposal, and deemed that his firm would act as project coordinator.

• Burchett also advised the board that the 2.500 seat grandstand for the facility could not be fabricated by the July 2, 1993 opening. At the urging of Governor Carroll, the corporation decided to delay grandstand construction until after the live racing season is open rather than beginning construction during the season and blocking off the best view of the track.

· Chairman Sam Blankenship welcomed the newest addition to the five-member board, former Floyd County Board of Education Superintendent Ray Brackett, who will serve as secretary/treasurer.

· Former Governor Carroll informed the board that intertrack wagering, which is currently conducted at Eastern Kentucky Racing president Clyde Woods' Center Stage nightclub, will cease at the end of the Hammond will serve as the year and will not be able to resume until Kentucky Downs is operable.

· Woodford unveiled a proposal to make the convention area a sports center during the off-season, allowing people to watch sporting events such as untelevised University of Kentucky basketball games, Olympic events and boxing matches on a closed-circuit projection screen, and estimated that if his plan were followed, the facility would make around Everidge's vehicle was knocked into that of Gina D. Ratliff, 18, of Pikeville, and her vehicle was slammed into a vehicle driven by Carl S. Bentley, of Dorton. All three vehicles were stopped by the traffic light at the intersection of U.S. 23 and North Lake Drive.

According to Prestonsburg police officer Anthony Castle's report, neither Everidge, Ratliff nor Bentley were able to avoid the collision.

Ratliff was taken to the Highlands Regional Medical Center, where she was treated and released.

Mr. Rogers' neighborhood

by Scott Perry

The outcome Tuesday of the 5th District Congressional race could, believe it or not, be the best thing that could have happened for Floyd County.

Realignment of the old 5th and 7th districts puts Floyd County square in the middle of Mr. Rogers' new neighborhood and makes the county a key element in Rogers' political future.

Rogers, who has demonstrated his abilities time and again to put his district above partisan politics, is likely to spend the next two years nurturing his relationship with the voters from the old 7th if he is to cement his hold on the congressional seat.

That means he should devote a lot of attention to traditionally Democratic strongholds like Floyd and Pike counties, where opposition to his tenure is likely to be the most persistent burr under Mr. Rogers' saddle.

Attention, in federal government terms, is translated to mean dollars, and Mr. Rogers has access to plenty of those via his seat on the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

Floyd County will always be necessary to Mr. Rogers' job security and that is to our benefit.

Welcome to Mr. Rogers' neighborhood. Can you say "federal projects?" We thought you could.

Promises to keep . . .

There are miles to go before we sleep, and Mr. Clinton has promises to keep.

The way this country is run is headed for some dramatic changes which we look forward to with great excitement.

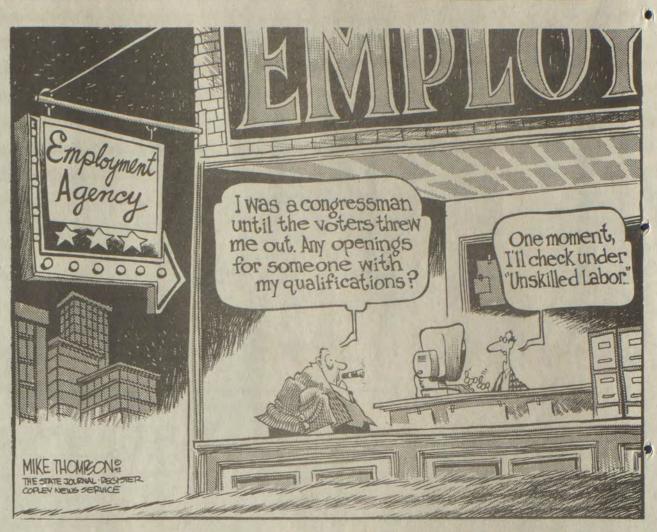

Those of us in the forgotten middle class have high expectations, as well, that Mr. Clinton will put this country back on the economic tracks without shouldering our numbers with the burden.

He promised.

We believed.

Now he must prove it.

In a hurry.

thanks to participants

Editor:

Speaking for the Prestonsburg Rotary Club, we want to express our sincere thanks to all the people who made our Fifth Annual "Safe Trickor-Treat" event a huge success. Over 3,000 children participated in the "Trick-or-Treat" and "Fantasyland" at the Holiday Inn between 5-7 p.m. Sunday, October 25, without incident. Our hopes of a safe and festive Halloween for many children were fulfilled. As those who attended are aware, an event of like this cannot be participation of many individuals, businesses, and organizations. Our club would like to use this forum to publicly thank all of them for their support.

Most importantly, we want to thank our major cosponsor, the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn. They donated their public areas, many guest rooms, the banquet rooms, and parking. In addition, many of the Holiday Trick-or-Treat was safe Inn's staff volunteered to participate in the event without compensation to construct and operate "Fantasyland," and to assist in crowd control. Withand it's employees, the "Safe Trickor-Treat" would not be possible. Our club is proud to hold our regular meetings in the facilities of an outstanding corporate citizens!

We want to thank the Prestonsburg City Police Department and the Floyd County Sheriff's Office for providing traffic control and parking assistance. This was not a minor task when you consider the number of vehicles that had to be parked.

We also want to thank the Jenny held without the sponsorship and. Wiley Theater for the use of their Wizard of Oz costumes, East Equipment for the use of their lot for additional parking, the East Kentucky Radio Network for their live remote broadcast of the event and First Commonwealth Bank, Food City, FoodLyon, Sav-More and Winn-Dixie for donating bags for the Trickor-Treaters.

Finally, I would like to thank all the individuals, businesses and organizations who took upon themselves the challenge of dressing in costumes, decorating and staffing rooms, and providing treats for the out the support of this corporation 3,000 children who participated. As we had numerous participants of this type, space will not allow us to list . each of them here, but we do greatly appreciate your efforts. For some, this was their first year of sponsorship; we sincerely hope you will be with us again next year. For many others, this year was their second, third, fourth or even fifth year of sponsorship. As always, we appreciate the moral and financial support each of you provides for this project.

As a member of Rotary International, one of our Club's goals is to provide services to our community. We are proud to serve the community of Prestonsburg and Floyd County, due in a large part to the broad-based support we receive on this and our many other projects. ### Tighten the DUI standard

The line between intoxication and sobriety admittedly can be arbitrary; but where driving is concerned, the law's tolerance ought to be on the low

Consequently, the U.S. Department of Transportation's recommendation of a stricter blood alcohol standard to define driving under the influence should be taken seriously by the states.

The agency proposed 0.08 percent as the threshold, as opposed to the 0.10 percent observed in most states, including Kentucky. While endless quibbling is possible about the point at which impairment is reached, consumption of any alcohol before operating a vehicle is by definition suspect. So, why not tighten the screws another notch? — The Paducah Sun

In a democracy, we citizens have an onerous responsibility. We elect those who will represent us in governmental units. But we also have the more difficult job of keeping tabs on those elected representatives. That means keeping informed, attending public meetings, writing letters, making phone calls and maintaining our right to be heard.

It also means — and here's the really hard part looking beyond our own individual noses to the bigger picture. We must begin to consider not just what is good for folks ... in Pike County, but also look at what is good for Eastern Kentucky. Likewise, for the whole state of Kentucky and, beyond that, the entire United States.

New friend in the district

Eastern Kentucky voters who still chafe over losing a representative in congressional redistricting emerged winners on Tuesday. In Republican Hal Rogers, they have a representative with a history of helping constituents.

Long before his challenger, John Doug Hays of Pikeville, entered the race, Mr. Rogers was getting to know his would-be constituents and planning ways in which he would be able to strengthen the region economically. Now all of Kentucky will be watching to see how well he follows through. - The Courier-Journal

Legal system requires swift reform

By Kenneth Eskey Scripps Howard News Service

If the polls were a guide, George Bush ran a mostly ineffective campaign against Democrat Bill Clinton. But on one issue Bush is right on target: Lawsuits are draining billions from the economy, discouraging new products and forcing doctors to practice defensive medicine.

Bush and Dan Quayle have made legal reform an issue in the presidential race, accusing Clinton of being a tool of the trial lawyers who earn handsome fees from liability suits and prefer to keep things the way

Clinton has had little to say on the subject-many of his fellow Democrats oppose restrictions on lawsuits arguing that the consumer has no other protection against faulty products and services.

Any effort to impose national standards on product liability litigation is opposed by consumer groups, led by Ralph Nader, who argue that the threat of lawsuits promotes safety in the marketplace.

This is not a simple issue. In some cases, companies should be punished for exposing their customers to risky materials and devices. Some doctors may be careless or incompetent. But the cost of the current liability system, replete with frivolous suits, unpredictable awards and rising insurance premiums, is exorbitant.

Reliable figures are hard to come by. As much as $132 billion may have been spent last year on the awards, legal fees, paperwork and insurance expenses that go with accidents and injuries, according to Robert Sturgis a vice president of Tillinghast, a risk management and actuarial consulting firm.

"These costs not only affect our ability to compete in world markets but are felt by everyone in the form of higher prices for a wide range of products and services," says Sturgis.

Reformers contend that less than half the money awarded by juries winds up in the pockets of victims. The rest is absorbed in legal fees and related expenses of one kind or another.

"Blaming it all on the lawyers is not very reasonable," says Sturgis, who points out that insurance companies may also be at fault.

Whatever the reasons, the system is outrageously expensive. Reformers have been trying for 10 years to impose uniform national standards on product liability suits, so far with-

The latest legislation, the Product Liability Fairness Act, came within one vote of reaching the floor of the Senate in September and is sure to be re-introduced when the new Congress convenes in January. It's a modest bill, imposing restrictions on "pain and suffering" awards and promoting out-of-court settlements, but trial lawyers and their allies regard it as sinister and dangerous.

Many states have passed legislation trying to bring some sense of equity to liability lawsuits, but this patchwork of laws creates an obstacle course for national companies that need to operate under one set of rules, not 50.

Medical malpractice standards are equally quirky. In some states, obstetricians have limited or abandoned their practices rather than face lawsuits every time a less-than-perfect baby is born.

Such distortions have much to do with our tendency to sue each other and little to do with injustice, consumer protection or common sense.

It's an intolerable situation. It needs to be rectified.

Interim judge-executive is Magoffin landfill foe

Beecher Barnett, 51, of Salyersville, an excavation contractor, was appointed by Gov. Brereton Jones to fill the final year of the Charles Allen's term as judge-executive of Magoffin Barnett is the brother of Owen Barnett, a magistrate. Both are opposed to a mega-landfill proposed by Eastern Kentucky Resources, Inc. The appointment creates a 2-2 fiscal court deadlock over the proposed 300-acre dump.

Owen Barnett is also an interim Jones appointee and was scheduled to leave office after the November 3 election. But the two candidates running to replace him are acknowledged landfill opponents. — Paintsville Herald

South East sale considered

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Joe Lee has scheduled a November 12 hearing to consider South East Coal Company's plan to sell its major assets to Golden Oak Mining Company and Westmoreland Coal Company for $10.36 million.

The price is not enough to cover South East's financial obligations, which include more than $18 million in outstanding debt. But Joe Terry, an attorney for South East, said he hoped publicizing the bids before the hearing would attract more potential buyers.

South East, one of Kentucky's oldest familyowned businesses, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in October 1990. The Irvinebased firm cited a 1984 lawsuit by Kentucky Utilities Company over the price of coal under a long-term contract.

Golden Oak, a Lexington-based company, submitted a lone bid of $4.35 million for South East's Linefork mine in Letcher County. - Troublesome Creek Times, Hindman only college in Kentucky to particitargets community college students and adult community members who aspire to or are already in leadership roles. The project addresses one of America's most critical problems: the education and advancement of tomorrow's leaders today. The major aspect of the project includes the offering of a leadership development course. Beginning January, 1993, this course, titled Arts & Sciences 100 (3 credit hours) Phi Theta Kappa/W.K. Kellogg Foundation Leadership Development Project, will be offered at Prestonsburg Community College. The course will initiate the first year of a three-year pilot project designed to result in various leadership programs for students and the community-at-large. The course facilitators are Dr. William J. Loftus, Assistant Professor of Psychology, and Lynn Weddle, Assistant Professor of Nursing. The course is scheduled for Tuesday afternoons from 3:00-5:50 on the P.C.C. Campus. Preregistration for the spring semester is scheduled from November 16-25, with regular registration planned for early January.

The purpose of this course is to help prepare students to assume increasingly responsible leadership roles in their personal, professional, and/or academic lives. As such, the course focuses not only on significant theories of leadership and their applicability to leaders of the past and present, but also includes substantial hands-on experiential, learning opportunities in which students will practice leadership in action. The major objectives of the course are as follows: 1) to establish and understand the student's personal philosophy of leadership; 2) to learn a set of eleven critical leadership skills; and

Each topic is introduced through selected readings from the Phi Theta Kappa Leadership Development Program text which is provided to all students at no cost, and occasionally through films and/ or videos, along with frequent use of techniques such as role plays, class exercises, and simulations to probe more deeply into each area of leadership study. Class discussions and short lectures will also be used to complement the analysis of theoretical concepts, issues, and situations of leadership addressed in the readings and/or viewing. At the beginning of the course, students will be asked to complete an evaluation instrument (LEAD) which will help them assess their current leadership strengths and weaknesses. (The instrument will also be completed at the end of the course to measure the progress students have made in developing the twelve critical leadership skills.)

For further information about the class, please feel free to contact Dr. Loftus or Ms. Weddle at 886-3863, or attend an informal meeting/demonstration on Wednesday, November 18, from 3:00 - 4:30 p.m. in room 102 of the Johnson Building on the P.C.C. Campus.

TOMMY BOYD, BOARD FLOYD COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT

STATEMENT OF CHARGES Comes Dr. Thomas C. Boysen, Chief State School Officer, in person and by counsel, pursuant to the provisions of KRS 156.132, et. seq., and does hereby prefer the following written charge in support of the removal of Floyd County School District Board Member, Tommy Boyd, to the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education.

Dr. Thomas C. Boysen, Chief State School Officer, pursuant to KRS 156.132, does hereby believe that board member Tommy Boyd is guilty of misconduct in office, as specified in KRS 156.132(2) and as specifically enumerated upon herein.

On or about September, 8, 1992, during a regular meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education, occurring in the Floyd County School District, Floyd County, Kentucky, board member Tommy Boyd attempted to influence the hiring of a school employee other than the superintendent of schools or school board

During this meeting, Mr. Boyd, expressed his displeasure that a certain individual was not hired for a specific position in the district. Boyd continued in this vein, indicating that it was his intention to continue his efforts to see to it that this certain person was employed by the school district in the immediate future. (See Exhibits 1, 2, and 3). This conduct violated his eligibility for office under KRS 160.180 (3) for the board members and interfered with the duties of the superintendent of the school district, as set forth in KRS 160.370, .380, and .390. These provisions were enacted by the Kentucky General Assembly and were effective July 13, 1990, and are more commonly known as KERA, which vests exclusive authority for the hiring and dismissal of all personnel in the district in the chief executive agent of the board, the Superintendent.

KRS 160.180(3), specifies that "...if, after the election of any member of the board, he becomes interested in any contract with or claims against the board,...or if he attempts to influence the firing of any school employee, except the superintendent of schools or school board attorney, or if he does anything that would render him ineligible for re-election, he shall be subject to removal from office pursuant to KRS 415.050 and 415.060. Additionally, the above constitutes misconduct in office, as set forth in KRS 156.132, et seq., by interfering with the lawfully designated authority of the superintendent of the local district for the hiring and dismissal of all personnel, as embodied in KRS 160.370, .380, and .390.

tached hereto Exhibit 4 consisting of a letter of complaint directed to Dr. Steven Towler on September 17, 1992, from Allan Osborne, Chairman of the School-Based Decision Making Council (SBDM) at Betsy Layne High School. This letter references a complaint concerning the influence exerted by Mr. Pete Grigsby through Ms. Lola Brashear in attempting to pressure members of the advisory committee and SBDM Council as to the hiring of the specific individual mentioned by Mr. Boyd in Exhibits 1 and 3. Additionally, accompanying Mr. Osborne's letter is an attached statement from Meredith L. Tackett, referencing a telephone conversation and personal visit occurring as to Mr. Grigsby and Ms. Brashear, which further evidences attempts to influence and intimidate Ms. Tackett as to the selection of the specific individual mentioned by Mr. Boyd at the September 8, 1992, meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education (See Exhibit 5).

individual in question there is at-

Mr. Grigsby is an assistant superintendent employed by the Floyd County School District and works in the central office. Mr. Osborne is the principal of the Betsy Layne High School and Chairman of the Betsy Layne High School, School-Based Decision Making Council. Ms. Tackett is a school employee of the Floyd County School District, who was involved in the selection of the office manager for the Betsy Layne High School New Horizons Youth Service Center. Ms. Lola Brashear is also an employee of the Floyd County School District.

Exhibits 4 and 5, accompanied by appropriate witness' testimony, will demonstrate the involvement of board member Tommy Boyd, prior to September 8, 1992, in attempting to influence the hiring of a school employee other than the superintendent of schools or school board attorney. Further evidence of Mr. Boyd's pre-September 8, 1992, involvement can be ascertained by examining Dr.

In further evidence of his effort to Towler's remarks at the September 8 influence the hiring of the specific meeting when Dr. Towler says, "I am aware of Mr. Boyd's concern, Mr. Grigsby, and you are too,..." (See Exhibits 1 and 3).

> WHEREFORE, pursuant to KRS 156.132 et. seq., as well as all other statutory and regulatory authority applicable hereto, it is respectfully requested that the State Board for tion remove Floyd County Board of Education Member Tommy Boyd from office for misconduct in office, as set forth herein.

Respectfully submitted,

Thomas C. Boysen Chief State School Officer

The following is the transcribed exhibit filed with the charge:

Dr. Towler: "We have an item on the agenda for Mr. Grigsby to give you a Family Resource Center update. You know that we have five new centers going this year. This is just an information item and update. Mr. Grigsby."

Mr. Grigsby: "Just a brief summary to update you on the situation in our Family Resource Centers and Youth Service Centers which we have Filed as an exhibit in the case is a six now, Dr. Towler, in operation and the first paragraph refers to that, that they are open in their respective schools and they are staffed and working. Dr. Towler hired the six directors of each of these service centers several weeks ago and they have been meeting with us in central office for orientation and workshop and also direction by the state supervisor. They will be attending. The directors will be attending a meeting in Louisville this week-a state-wide meeting for all directors of these service centers.

"So, we are very delighted to have these services. We are meeting with other agencies in Floyd County and coordinating those efforts and working with these Youth and Family Resource Centers.

"Are there any questions on those, Dr. Towler, or board members?"

Mr. Boyd: "I have a question. I cannot understand how a person who applied for one of these jobs came in second on the head job and sixth on the second job in command."

Mr. Grigsby: Well, all we can tell you. I, I cannot speak for Dr. Towler. I think I can in a sense, is that these recommendations came from the sitebased council at a certain high school. Is that what you're referring to, Mr.

Grief support group meets November 10

A support group for those grieving the death of a loved one will meet Tuesday, November 10, at 7 p.m., in Our Lady of the Way Hospital's Seton Complex on Main Street in Martin.

Group moderators are Sister Margaret Jacobs of the Hospice of Big Sandy and Sister Charlene Young of Our Lady of the Way Hospital.

The grief support group meets the second Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Seton Complex. The meetings are open to the public and new members are welcome.

For more information, contact Sister Charlene Young at 285-5181, Ext. 353.

Bed n' Breakfasts

Bed n' Breakfasts are a rising interest for many people to make extra money. People are converting their property, their home or a portion of their home to gain an additional source of income.

Whether used all year around or just for certain seasons, it's a different option that calls for more creativity than investment.

A Bed n' Breakfast Workshop is being sponsored on November 12, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Big Sandy RECC Building in Paintsville for this area. It costs $25 per person, $40 for a couple. The money goes for a notebook, a meal, a snack and registration. The program was paid for through grant

NUMBER THE STARS by Lois Lowry

"How brave are you, little Annemarie?" Uncle Henrik asks his tenyear-old niece. It is 1943, and to Annemarie Johansen, life in Copenhagen is a complicated mix of ordinary home and school life, food shortages, and the constant presence of Nazi soldiers. Bravery seems a vague virtue—one possessed by dragonslaying knights in the bedtime stories she tells her younger sister, Kirsti. Too soon, she herself is called upon for courage.

As the German troops begin their campaign to "relocate" all the Jews of Denmark, the Johansens take in Annemarie's best friend, Ellen Rosen, and pretend she is part of the family. Ellen and Annemarie must think quickly when three Nazi officers arrive late one night and question why Ellen is not blond, like her sis-

Through Annemarie's eyes, we see the Danish Resistance as they manage to smuggle almost the entire Jewish population, nearly 7000 people, across the sea to Sweden. In this tale of an entire nation's heroism, Lois Lowry reminds us that there is pride and human decency in the world even during a time of terror and war.

This books is a Newberry Medal winner. This story is a good way to get your child interested in history.

THE DAY THE GOOSE GOT LOOSE by Reeve Lindbergh

When the goose got loose She caused a riot. Nobody ever thought she'd tryit!...

Just how much havoc can one goose cause? The whole farmyard's in a flutter when a long-necked mischief maker flies the coop, leaving comic chaos in her wake. Soon the bull has broken right through the pasture fence, the ram has sent an overdressed neighbor sailing through the air, and cows and horses are galloping all over town. The stampede will go on till dawn-and the laughter will last even longer. But amid the merry mayhem, the goose's owners are all asking themselves just what got into that bird. and me. I need the money and the students need the help that I am willing to provide.

I would like to direct the remaining comments to parents who have children in the Floyd County school system. The students who do well in our schools in the coming years must have a good grasp of basic writing skills.

In the past a student wrote in his English, media, or journalism classes, and, for the most part, could go through the rest of the curriculum without doing a great deal of writings. Now students will be asked to write in all subject areas. This writing serves at least two useful purposes: first of all it improves the student's writing skills, and just as important the writing gives the student a way to analyze the subject matter. The Floyd County school system stands to receive a large sum of money to help those students who qualify for extended school services. Let's use some of this money to get our students on the road to writing. Writing is a skill that will determine in great part their success in school, and it is a skill that they will use the rest of their lives.

OF EDUCATION

by Jennifer Little

A new topic to explore with your child is, "What do you like about school?" By finding out that answer, you can find out a lot about how your child thinks. An answer of "friends" may mean that your child feels alone and uncared about. Perhaps, from your viewpoint, the child is cared about, but the child may not feel that

Many times children look to friends to find love and acceptance when they feel their parents are very critical and overly strict. Sometimes they look to friends and their families for the discipline and structure they do not have at home. When a friend must go home for dinner or for the evening, that means a limit has been? set. The child will use that limit in exchange for the one his or her parent(s) did not set. It is not a nice substitute, but it works in the childrearing process.

Another thing children enjoy about school is recess. They enjoy the chance to run, jump, yell, make noise. They need time to be rid of their pentup emotions because most children are not aware of what they feel or that emotions even exist inside of them. How sad it is to find a child who does not know what makes him or her happy. Many can tell an adult what makes them sad or afraid, but they cannot tell an adult about what makes them feel good.

Many times that is because they have had limited chances to experience joys or happiness. Out of meaning well, we discipline our children to "be good" without telling them that they have been good. One of my students (aged 14) came up to me in class, gave me a hug as he told me it was so hard to be good (as he squeezed my ribs to the breaking point) and turned around to punch the next child who entered his field of sight. The child had done nothing, but "Billy needed a tension release. We quickly learned (in that class, anyway) that "Billy" needed regular talks about how well he was doing in his work.

Another child I worked with had become so used to punishment as his only attention that he really did not know what "good" was, much less how to do it! The parent and I worked daily on telling "Luke" what he did that was good. Telling him showed him exactly what "good" was. He rapidly learned how to behave well without needing very much punishment. The parent learned rapidly to tell "Luke" that she was not paying attention to his "bad" behavior, but she would be happy to pay attention to him when he spoke quietly/sat in his chair silently for one minute/put the cat on the floor gently.

These are only examples, but how often we punish children and reward them with our attention without being aware of it! A child does not see "good" attention as any different from "bad" attention. It is still attention.

The greatest help a parent can give teachers is teaching the child what "good" behavior is. Help the teachers by telling the child what he or she does right or helpful. Show your appreciation by saying those words of praise with a smile and eyes directly looking at your child's eyes. Spend a moment or two finding out what you want your child to behave like and then help him or her learn to behave that way. That can be a great "gift" to yourself, your child and the child's teacher.

Cub Scouts tour state police post

The Cub Scouts, Pack No. 851, from J.M.S. School enjoyed their first outing November 2. They were invited to tour the Kentucky State Police Station, Post 9, Pikeville.

They visited the radio control room, the dispatch station, and many offices. They each were finger-printed and received their I.D. card. The troopers answered all questions that the eager scouts asked.

The Pack topped the trip off by stopping by McDonald's and enjoyed ice cream. The trip was a great success and Pack No. 851 can hardly wait for their next adventure.

Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton was elected president in the mock election held at Allen Central High School on Tuesday, October 20. The mock election was held by Patricia Murphy's political science class. The political science class held voter registration over a week before the mock election took place. The results were sent to Channel One, which was taking a nationwide poll of the Presidential Elections. Channel One is the news channel shown every morning to students across the United States over televisions in each of the individual schools. About 100 students registered to vote. Perhaps the results would have been closer or even different if more people had taken the time to vote. (Caption by Kenny Scarberry)

On Friday, October 9, some of the Allen Central High School students went to Camp Shawnee for a Teen Leadership Conference. The times and experiences that they shared will last them a lifetime. I talked to two of the students who went and got some comments from them. They had registration and then opening ceremony. They did skits for the opening ceremony and were introduced to everyone at the conference. They drew warm fuzzies and had a bonfire that everyone went to. They were also assigned to family groups.

On Saturday, October 10, they had family group meetings and played a three-on-three basketball tournament. They also enjoyed Fun Olympics and a dance that lasted from 10:30 p.m. to 3 a.m. They had all kinds of workshops.

LOOK AWAY DIXIE LAND

On more than one occasion, I have confessed that flying is at the bottom of my list of "Favorite modes of transportation." In fact, I have stupidly admitted that if given the choice between flying or hitchhiking a ride with a serial killer, the latter would be preferable.

That is no longer true.

At least the part about the serial killer. I would still rather run-walk than fly the friendly skies when traveling, but a recent trip to Atlanta altered my opinion.

Last Tuesday I arrived in Atlanta (via one of those 1000 ton birds that defy gravity) and hailed a taxi to my destination. Unfortunately, I didn't make my designated stop. It wasn't my fault, the cab driver decided on his own that I didn't need to get to my hotel as quickly as I had planned.

"Where you from, Lady?" the driver said with a foreign dialect.
"I'm from here," I answered.

"What about you?"

"Africa," he said. "I just went back there last week."

"Oh, that's nice," I said warily as I noticed that the sign on the meter read VACANT and the meter wasn't running. At the same time, I noticed that instead of heading towards Atlanta, we were making a turn.

"Oh, the traffic is awful," he lamented after about 25 minutes into the drive. "I'm going this way."

Although I didn't know the neighborhood, I couldn't understand why we had to change directions just because there was heavy traffic. And being the big mouth that I am, I said, "How much longer is this way?"

"Oh, 'bout an hour. Not long," he said as he smiled leerily into the rear view mirror.

At this point in time, I knew beyond a shadow of a doubt that my husband would soon be receiving my ear in an envelop with a note saying, "I've got the match with me."

"You'd better stop and let me call my hotel," I said nervously. "If I don't call, they'll cancel my room. I didn't confirm."

"Oh, they would not do that," the driver said.

"Yes they would. They said they would, and anyway there are several people waiting for me. Big people. My boss and several other big bosses. They'll wonder why I'm late if I don't call," I said half hysterically.

"You could use my cellular phone," the driver said. "But it's expensive."

"Oh, I don't have any money. No money at all. Oh, maybe ten dollars tops, er, twenty maybe. I've been in the hospital, too," I lied nervously. "Couldn't find out what was wrong with me. Something to do with my

It all started back on September Christian in 1958. 30, 1955 when Barbara Lamb married JB Spencer. Both JB and Barbara were from church-going families and as a result, gospel music played a big part in their lives.

Barbara gave her heart to Jesus when she was very young and sang in church most of her life. The couple began singing together in area churches shortly after JB became a

The Spencers' first child, Geniece, was born on October 26, 1956. Wade came along on February 25, 1958 and Kevin was born on March 30, 1961. While very young, the children started singing with their parents and soon after gave their hearts and lives to the

In 1972, the Spencers recorded their first album entitled, "The Unseen Hand." They have written many songs including "Then We'll Be Glad" (JB), "Plan To Meet Me in Heaven" (Barbara), "In My Robe of White" (Geniece), "When I Crossed that River" (Wade) and "Let's Meet by the River" (Kevin and Barbara).

In 1987, Geniece left the group to fulfill her obligation to her husband and three school-age children. She now sings with them (The Ingolds) and just released their first album on the Peaceful Stream label.

In 1992, Kevin started his own group with his wife and brother-inlaw and have released an album on the Some Dawning label.

The Spencers are now a trio and still have God's blessing and that "Spencer Sound" that their fans have grown to love over the years. They will perform at Highland Avenue Free Will Baptist Church in Prestonsburg Sunday, November 8, at 6 p.m. For more information about the performance, call 874-2788.

The Spencer Family has had three number one songs in the Gospel Charts including "Coming Soon," and "It'll be Worth it After All," and "Let's Meet by the River." "Coming Soon" was also No. 1 in the Caribbean for eight months. As a result, the Spencers were invited to the Virgin Islands for several concerts. While they were in Tortola, British Virgin Islands, they recorded a live album and video.

The group just recorded their 20th album marking their 20th year of recording gospel music. Their current single from this album is "We

The Spencers are signed with the booking agency Harper & Associates, one of two agencies that handle ninety percent of the top Southern Gospel artists. That's just one of many indications that the Spencers are still going strong in the field of gospel

ALL MY CHILDREN: Brian rushed Adam Jr. to the hospital after he suffered an allergic reaction. Adam was furious that Dixie didn't tell him about the incident. His verbal attack on Brian and Dixie caused Gloria to end their truce. Trevor went to Corinth with Jeremy to find Carter. Hayley joined Charlie in his P.I. business. Despite their kiss, Erica assured Dimitri she can live without him. Later, Dimitri asked Angelique for a divorce so that he can pursue Erica. Although he didn't think he had a problem, Edmund told Brooke he'll consider getting professional help. Wait To See: Angelique faces a choice that can change her life.

ANOTHER WORLD: Jake dropped a bombshell about Jamie and his role in the sexual discrimination suit. Vicky helped Grant when she sidestepped questions about becoming First Lady. Realizing Kelsey's life may be in danger, Jamie asked her to go away with him. Kevin was impressed when Lorna-who was determined to prove he was innocent of Lucas' murder-gave him a roll of film she used to take pictures of his file. Spencer told Iris flirting with him wouldn't get him to persuade Kelsey to call off the hearing. Wait To See: Concern for Felicia grows as she shows more disturbing

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Iva and the Snyders were happily reunited with Holden who still had no memory of his past. Holden, who had insisted that the hospital is his home now, agreed to return to Oakdale if Marsha went with him. After Carolyn's murderer, and the plot against Darryl, were revealed, Barbara told Darryl he had to relinquish all rights to Jennifer. Margo told Frannie of Darryl's doubts that they would ever trust each other again. Emily learned of Larry and Susan's marriage; Kim and Frannie learned that Andy and Courtney were in love. Wait To See: Lily decides to make

BOLD AND THE BEAUTI-FUL: Ridge called Brooke to tell her to start packing: they were going to Europe to promote the new fabric. To his surprise, she turned him down, saying she didn't want to hurt Taylor. Sheila grabbed her personnel file from Trish's desk before it could be delivered to Stephanie. Using her alias, Sara, Sheila called Molly (her mother) to tell her how much Sheila really loved her. Sheila then wrote a glowing letter of recommendation from a

Guess I'll just have to drink me some o' that there mayor's milk everybody was talkin' about on the radio the other night (and for those of you who didn't listen to Stormin' Norman and Little Gorman on Dubyuh OHY the other night and are confused about this milk thing, so am I, but everybody and his probation officer was calling into the show, offering to send it to the losers of the various elections- just for the record, would someone please tell me: which mayor is giving out this milk; where would I apply for it; and is it anything like Reagan cheese?) (And for all you nit-pickers out there, don't send me any letters saying "Not 'mayor's' milk, you idjit, it was 'mare's milk." I know. It was just a pun, a play on words, a... oh, nevermind.)

Besides. I didn't want the job anyway. Not really. I mean, who wants to live in a mansion, make $200,000 a year with an unlimited expense account and have a private jet, chauf-

Anyways, there's a whole lot of bad stuff that goes with being president too, such as the fact that, the minute you're elected, you can't even break wind without everybody in the country knowing it 30 seconds later. And for some reason or another, no matter how good you are as president, at least one of your trusted advisors, mistresses or close friends will turn out later to be the biggest drunk, crook, liar and/or pervert that ever walked the face of the planet, making you look like a complete goon. Then there's the fact that, as president, people will actually expect you to know what you're talking about, and it has been scientifically proven that having a president who knows what he's talking about is as likely as having a Kentucky Racing commissioner whose parents were actually married.

Besides, county elections are coming up in just a few short months, and I'm already testing the political waters to find out just which office I'd be most suited for. See, my problem last time was that I was simply too young and inexperienced. But I'm older now, I've been through a grueling campaign, and I've spent the last several weeks studying the whole democratic process so that I know exactly what it takes to win.

That's right. I'm diggin' up a whole underdeveloped third world nation's worth of mud right now and strengthening my slingin' arm in preparation for WWF: Election '93, which should make this presidential election bidness look about as exciting as an Embalmers Anonymous convention.

Yes friends, even as you read this, I have the finest affordable scientific minds in the county (which basically means the first joker I can find with an IQ higher than an ice cube who's willing to work for less than I make) digging through the garbage and/or past histories of every incumbent candidate for every election on the May '93 ballot in the hopes of findin' So no, I'm not a bit upset about somethin' really juicy to make 'em

As far as choosing an office goes, I've narrowed the field down to just a few that I think I could win without having to bribe and/or completely destroy too many people.

Maybe I'll run for Mayor of Auxier, just as long as nobody expects me to give any milk (there are just some things even I won't do).

Or maybe I'll run for one of the various and sundry other fine offices which our state constitutionion allows for, like may be constable, which is sort of like the sheriff of a two or three-block area who lists among his duties the right to give speeding tickets, if he can chase down and pull over said speed violator without the benefit of a siren or flashing blue light; and shooting distempered mules. I ain't kiddin'. Look it up.

Or maybe I'll run for county game warden. Since we don't actually have one right now (the closest game warden lives in Johnson County, so if you should happen to have somebody hunting on your property without your permission and they happen to tear up your yard, shoot all your dogs, cats, cows, goats, chickens and children thinking they're deer or burn down your house thinking it's kindling, you're out of luck—this hyere's huntin' country, son) I should be able to win that one.

Hmmmhoohaahaahaaaaaa!!! (That was supposed to be an evil laugh of the Vincent Price/Boris Karloff mad-doctor variety. We apologize for any confusion or inconvenience, but sound-effects are very difficult to reproduce in print.)

At any rate, whichever office I'll be running for, I'll be prepared. I've already got my campaign slogan worked out:

"Vote for me. I ain't half as bad as (insert name here)— I hear he once had an unnatural relationship with his doberman pinscher and stumptrains all his sheep!"

HORMONAL FRENZIES

-In June the World Health Organization, in "the most comprehensive report ever compiled on global reproductive health," reported that humans engage in more than 100 million acts of heterosexual intercourse each day, with a conception rate of 1 percent.

—In June in Tokyo, Hamamatsu City Zoo officials began showing nonstop videos of gorillas mating to a female, Daiko, to stimulate her interest in her mate, Sho. After two weeks, officials reported that the two were having sex occasionally but that Daiko was not yet pregnant. (A zoo in Kyoto once claimed successning a video to get a mother gorilla to breastfeed her young.)

-At the Bowery subway station in New York City in September, Darryl Washington and Maria Ramos were injured when a train plowed into them as they were engaged in sex while lying on a mattress on the tracks. Washington suffered several fractured bones, but Ramos got off with only minor cuts because the quickacting motorman was able to slow

-Goshen, Ind., police Capt. Joe Brown reported in May that he was considering bringing charges against a 65-year-old man who had poured hot coffee onto the head of a 14-yearold boy who was underneath a footbridge in a local park. The man said he did it because he was sure that the boy was looking up women's dresses as they passed by, and he wanted to

-Long Beach, Calif., police arrested Larry Dwayne Mitchell in August on suspicion of burglary. Mitchell (using the name Jerry Jacobs) had for weeks been showing up at burglary scenes as a "witness" who supplied information to the victim and police. Police said fingerprints linked Mitchell to four of the burglaries he had "witnessed," and Mitchell later confessed to more than

-The New Haven (Conn.) Register reported in February that a thief made off with 32 boxes of Monistat-7 suppositories from the Old Saybrook, Conn., Stop & Shop after telling a security guard that he was infected with the HIV virus and threatening to bite the guard.

-Michael A. Dittmer, 28, was arrested in Madison, Wis., in August after police observed him weaving erratically over the road and chased him home. As Dittmer drove into his garage and attempted to lower the door, officer Bart O'Shea drove his cruiser under the door to prevent it from closing. According to O'Shea, Dittmer maintained that he could not be arrested because he had made it home before O'Shea could catch him.

"Wait here," I directed the driver. "I'll be right back."

Twenty minutes later I returned with a waiter and two waitresses to get my bags and told the driver my friends were en route to get me. Aside from being perturbed, he looked bewildered as I went back into the restaurant with my new found friends.

After a second taxi was hailed, I finally made it to the hotel where I registered under an assumed name. When I got to my room, I locked the door and collapsed. Around three o'clock in the morning, my bed started to shake. Panic stricken I jumped up and peeked under the beds. Though nothing was there, I was certain the -Rhode Island state police Detective Brendan Doherty arrested Albert LaBonte in Providence in May and charged him with impersonating a certain state police officer, namely Doherty himself, for the last five years. Police had received complaints that an officer identifying himself as Doherty had been bothering women. In LaBonte's home, Doherty saw a picture of himself that LaBonte had hung on the wall, taken when Doherty and several other troopers modeled their uniforms in 1987 on "Late Night

-A Dunkin' Donuts shop in Waukegan, Ill., was robbed in July, but the thief left with no money. Impatient because his demand for money was not immediately met, the thief grabbed what he thought was the cash register and dashed out the door. However, the register was a modular-type model, with the cash drawer itself built into the counter. The thief fled with only the part that makes receipts.

THE DIMINISHING VALUE OF LIFE

-In Jacksonville, Fla., in April, Marvin Lee Jones was shot in the right leg after escaping death moments earlier when a gun held to his head did not fire. Police said the assailant was Jones' son, 13, who was angry that Dad wouldn't pay him back the $10 he owed him.

. Paying isn't part of mom's plan for daughter's wedding

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old daughter is engaged to be married. She has been living with her fiance since 1986. We live in California and she lives in New Jersey. She asked me to come to Jersey to help her plan her wedding. She wants a traditional church wedding with a wedding gown and tuxedo and reception for 100 people. (The cost is about $20,000.)

She and her fiance make $40,000 a year together. My husband and I make less. However, she knows that I came into an inheritance two years ago when my father died, but she doesn't know how much.

She and her fiance have no money saved up. When I visited her, I noticed they had plenty of money for beer, bingo and cigarettes.

I need your advice, Abby. Should I offer to pay for my daughter's wedding? If you say yes, I will accept that. If you say no, I will quit torturing myself with guilt because I honestly don't think I should, and I really don't want to.

MOM

DEAR MOM: A woman who has been living with her boyfriend for six years should not expect her parents to foot the bill for a traditional church wedding with gown, tuxedo, and a reception for 100 guests.

Your daughter declared her independence at age 19 when she left home to live with her boyfriend. Let her finance her own wedding, and don't feel guilty. And if you cave in and pick up the tab, I suggest you put aside a little extra to get your head examined.

DEAR ABBY: I read with great interest the letter from the woman who, sparked by her upcoming 20th high school reunion, was able to track down her high school sweetheart. Luckily, she ended up getting engaged to him, and now has wedding bells in her future.

Many years ago during World War II, when I was in England, I became friendly with an American airman. We shared not only friendship, but the dangers and uncertainties of war. As fate would have it, we were separated, and for nearly half a century a job, and was too busy to dwell on that romantic interlude. Now that I am alone again, I find myself thinking of him, wondering if he's still alive, if his life has been happy, and wondering if he would like to hear from me. Not being sure of where he is, I have made some halfhearted attempts to locate him.

Abby, do you think I should leave well enough alone, or should I go for it, so I can finally put the past to rest?

I can't sign my name, so I will sign it with the title of our favorite song... "IT'S BEEN A LONG, LONG

Whenever I call one of my local relatives on the phone, her husband shamelessly listens in on the extension. At times, he has even corrected something his wife has said, or added something to it. I find this very irritating. Apparently, his wife doesn't mind because she has never asked him to please get off the phone.

Abby, I do not call this relative to have a three-way conversation with her husband. Furthermore, I think this is a blatant invasion of my privacy. Sometimes I may want to tell her something in confidence.

Any suggestions you can offer will be greatly appreciated. MABLE IN MOBILE

DEAR MABLE: Tell your relative that you are uncomfortable and sometimes inhibited about telephone conversations with her-and tell her why. Be up-front; tell her that while she may have no objections, you have.

GRANDPARENTING

ADVENTURE WITH GRANDFATHER IS A FAVORITE MEMORY

Dear Dee and Tom: In these modern times, children must learn to adapt to so many different problems - from drugs and divorce to TV violence. But there are also many important things they should learn from the "olden times," and that's where grandparenting comes in. Knowing both is necessary for a good

When I was a child in a small country town, my grandparents often took a walk after supper, and would come over and sit with us until bedtime. One winter night my grandfather said, "It's cold tonight. The creek is frozen. Mary, wrap up warmly, bring your sled, and I'll take you ice-

We walked across the fields, pulling the sled behind us until we came to the creek, where he put on his ice skates and I sat on the sled. We went up the creek and around the bend, with him skating and pulling the sled, and me riding.

It was a new experience for me the quiet night, the shining moon, the frozen creek. It taught me about nature, which all children need to know about. - Mrs. Will C. Snapp, Lexington, Ky.

Thank you, Mrs. Snapp, for a very graphic picture of your childhood. We hope you are still sledding by moonlight.

Dear Dee and Tom: I was surprised at your response to the grandmother from Pueblo, Colo., who was concerned about how to help her granddaughter who had such a consuming crush on Elvis. You suggested that she give her the facts on Elvis'

This child's crush on an unattainable celebrity (dead or alive) is not about the object of her adoration as much as sharing with friends and getting excited about a special youthful enthusiasm.

It helps her explore herself and her friends as part of growing up, like any other child's play. It is fantasy and she knows it. The "facts" have nothing to do with it.

The grandmother should not take it too seriously but accept her fantasy in a good-natured way. If it really bugs her, she can tell her granddaughter that it bothers her to hear so much talk about Elvis, and that she should talk about other things when they are Enjoying and affirming the child's lovability is the greatest gift we grandparents can give. Parents are to teach you how to grow up; grandparents are to teach you that you are wonderful! - Carol Youmans, Annapolis,

Well put, Carol! Thank you. But we would still hope for some sort of compromise. There must be some new eligible rock stars that have come along since Elvis' death in 1977.

We have just found a remarkable little book, "Teach Your Child the Value of Money," by Harold and Sandy Moe. We recommend it.

They write: "Most experts agree that children are able to understand the basics of money at the age of 3 or 4, when they are great observers and imitators. For that reason, your example as a role model is very impor-

"At these ages, our children's learning curve is very high but their attention span isn't. It may seem that they are retaining very little. But in fact, they are remembering very

The Moes argue that you should take your children to the bank, and teach them the mechanics of saving at an early age. Give them a weekly allowance, extra jobs at home for pay, plus family duties without pay. Teach them about regular savings, at compound interest. The authors supply graphs and figures.

Mr. and Mrs. Moe have raised two children, and live on a farm in Wisconsin. He has also been a pilot for Northwest Airlines for 24 years. The book is available from Harsand Press, P.O. Box 515, Holmen, Wis. 54636; $7.95 plus $2 for shipping and handling. Or call (800) 321-0643.

GRAND REMARK OF THE WEEK:

"One Halloween my aunt's grandchildren got all dressed up to go to her home for tricks or treats. They went to her front door and rang the bell.

"When she opened the door, they said innocently, 'We bet you don't know who we are, Grandma!'

"I still get a chuckle out of this." - A.C., Danville, Ill.

Flick Picks by Debbie Fletcher

A RIVER RUNS THROUGH IT After viewing this remarkable film, I've decided that Robert

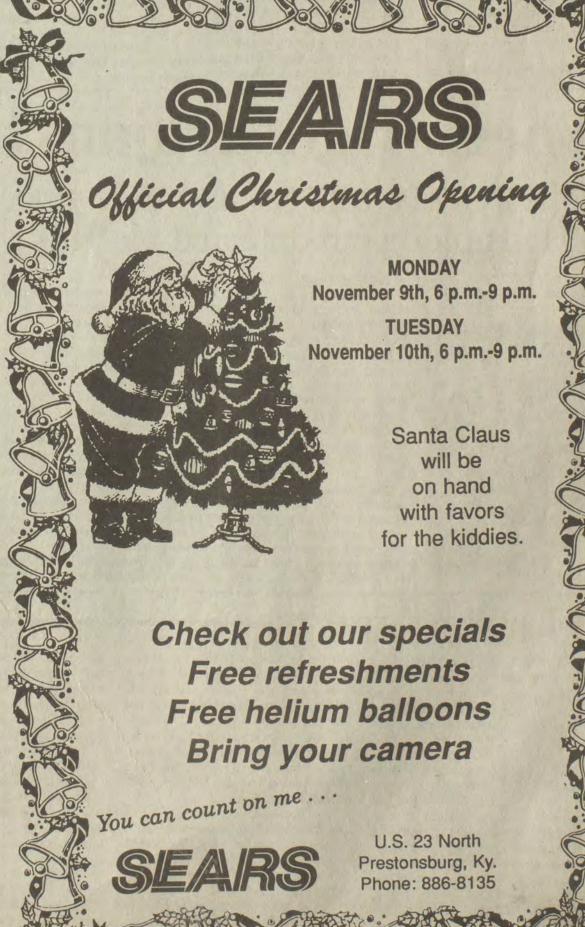

Redford, the director of this work, is my personal hero. Of course, I should tell you I had decided that back in 1973 after "The Way We Were," but I was motivated by pure lust. Now that Bob and I have both gotten older, I can appreciate his other qualities, not the least of which was his ability to turn this family film into a masterpiece. He has proven Hollywood wrong in that you don't need violence, sex and gore to make a movie. You can actually appeal to people's better natures and be successful at the

The movie is based on Norman Maclean's autobiographical novella, and takes place in the early 1900s, a time when nature was still pretty much untouched by pollution. It is about the Maclean family, Scottish-Americans, who live along Montana's Big Blackfoot River, a pristine body of water simmering with beautiful trout. Unfortunately, this is no longer the case, and Redford had to resort to another river for his shots which is in itself a lesson to us.

Tom Skerritt is the patriarch of the family, a Presbyterian minister, who considers fly-fishing to be the real measure of a man, and he instills this value in his two sons, portrayed by Craig Sheffer and Brad Pitt. While the family is pretty close-knit, they are so stoic, they are unable to express their emotions, a real handicap which eventually serves to destroy the younger son, Paul (Pitt), who becomes a compulsive gambler and a boozing newspaperman. Although his older brother, Norman (Sheffer), tries to help him, Paul will have none of it.

Besides the heart-tugging story of an endearing family, the film is breathtakingly beautiful. The fishing scenes on the river, and the surrounding countryside are so artistically filmed, I was moved to tears. You almost want to get up out of your seat and walk into the scenes.

This is sure to be a big contender at the next Academy Awards festivities. Don't miss it. It's the best flick to come along in a very long time.

Second season begins...

Surprise! It's Mason County Again

Blackcats look to avenge last season's 38-30 loss

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

Galen Thomas (6-1, 205) takes a handoff from quarterback Chad McDowell and races 52 yards for a touchdown as the Mason County Royals defeats the Prestonsburg Blackcats 38-30.

Such was the case last year when the two teams met in the playoffs at Prestonsburg Stadium to start the playoffs last season. In that game big Gary Greene rushed for 163 yards and scored four touchdowns. Greene is gone. So is McDowell. Only Thomas and Johnny Marshall, who ran the two-point conversion on the final touchdown, return from last year's team and the Royals also have a new head coach in Tom Malone.

"That bunch that beat Prestonsburg last year is gone," said Malone. "This is a different Mason County team that will show this Friday night."

Malone has been an assistant at Mason County ever since the school adopted a football program. He takes over the Royals after the team finished 7-3 in the regular season last

But this year Mason County will not sport such a record. In fact it is reverse of what it was last season at 3-

The Royals, who looked to be completely out of the playoff picture, won a thriller over West Carter last Friday and that clinched the fourth spot in District 1 behind Lawrence County, Russell and Fleming County.

"After we lost to Lawrence County the week before," explained Malone, "we came back out and had some good practices and good game preparation before we played West Carter.

"We played perhaps our best half of offense in the first of that game that we probably played all year. But our defense couldn't stop them in the first half. In the second half it was different. We played the best defense we played all year, but we couldn't suffer some close losses this season dropping close games to Russell, Rowan County and Montgomery

"We never have let down all year," said Malone of his team's effort. "The kids have put forth a good effort all season long.'

The Mason County mentor said that he hopes the momentum his team gathered against West Carter last Friday night will carry over tonight and his kids will continue to play hard against Prestonsburg.

Thomas will return for his senior year and leads the Royals backfield with 835 yards this season on 137 carries for an average of just over 6 yards a carry. Thomas has scored nine touchdowns this season and has run three conversions.

The leading gainer for the Royals is Caine Hughes, a 5-10, 165 pound half back. While not carrying the football as much as Thomas, Hughes has averaged just over 12 yards per carry, rushing for 747 yards on 60 carries. He has crossed the goal line eight times for TDs. Marshall, the other returning back, is averaging 4 yards per carry after rushing for 429 yards on 107 attempts.

"We have another halfback in Jamie Morton that I run in every once in awhile," said Malone. Morton has carried the football 54 times for 268 yards this season.

"We're not a very deep team," stated the Royals' coach. "We're very young and inexperienced. Last year we were a senior-dominated team but they are all gone.

"Galen (Thomas) didn't play all that much last year because of a car accident," commented Malone. "Toward the end of the season he started to come on strong. Last year was his first ever as a player.'

Mason County returns only two offensive linemen from last year's squad in Eric Fox (6-1, 215) and Andrew Cline (6-0, 290). Wes Mitchell (6-2, 185) will anchor down the Malone said that his team has left end spot while Matt Wallingford

(5-10, 170) will be at the right end.

Chris Ullery, a junior, will call the signals for the Royals against Prestonsburg tonight. Ullery has completed on 11 passes this season in 43 attempts. He has been intercepted five times. Thomas has the most receptions for Mason County with four for 39 yards so it easy to see that Coach Malone doesn't like to throw the ball much.

Malone views the Blackcats as an entirely different team compared to what the Royals faced last year and it will have to be a good effort on the part of his team to stay in the play-

"Prestonsburg is a good running team," said Malone. "I like their fullback (Dwayne Garza) and tailback (Seth Hyden). This is a different team all together.

"We will have to stop them early in the game and then just see what we can do."

Prestonsburg hasn't lost since they fell at Belfry in their fifth game of the season. The Blackcats since have won five in a row with the big one being a win over Sheldon Clark.

Most of this year's Blackcat football team was on the team that was embarassed by the Royals last year on their home field. Prestonsburg had a great season after the first four games which they lost. The Blackcats regrouped and won their final six games to secure the district title. But, the sting of the defeat hasn't been forgotten. Could there be a revenge factor here?

"Oh, yes," said fullback Dwayne Garza. "The team has been looking forward to this game. This probably will be the biggest game of the year for us. They came down here and beat us in our backyard last year. It's revenge time for us this year."

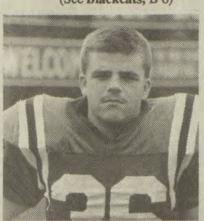

Garza, like many of the other Blackcats, says that this year's edition of Blackcat football is different than what Mason County faced last

"The big thing about this game and last year's is our offensive line. Our offensive line has come a long way this season."

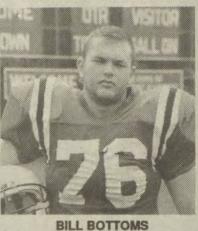

Garza also remembers rushing for only 38 yards last season against

"I hope our running game is better this time," he said. "We didn't have to many yards on the ground against them last year. If Aaron (Tucker) comes through we'll have a good

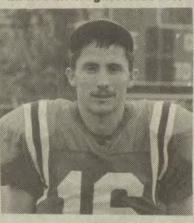

Garza also stated that Mason County is good team and will have Thomas coming back for them in this (See Blackcats, B 6) to Hazard to play the undefeated Hazard Bulldogs in a first-round playoff game this Friday night. The Trojans, in class A, region IV, district II, barely got a playoff berth as they ended the regular season with a record of 5-5 overall and 3-4 in the district tying them with Phelps for the fourth and final spot in the district. The Trojans won the tie breaker as they edged Phelps head-to-head earlier in the season by a score of 16-

The Trojans have a lot of talent and experience in the backfield with Steven (Teter) Shelton, a senior quarterback, calling the plays, and he has some speed and power behind him. Montu Oden, a senior halfback, starts in the backfield and sees a lot of

The Wheelwright Trojans travel action as he is very quick. Shelton also likes to throw to Oden because of Oden's speed and great hands.

> Also in the backfield is senior Arnold Adams running the fullback position and senior Kelly Berger filling the other halfback slot. Freshman Aaron Hall ran in the backfield last week versus Elkhorn City and looked very impressive as he carried the ball nine yards on only three carries.

In the receiving department, Shelton looks for junior tight end Charles Johnson who has looked really good throughout the season.

Anchoring the Trojan defensive line are senior defensive tackle Todd Daniels and junior defensive tackle John Caudill.

Steve Bates is out for the season after he tore a ligament in his knee and is expected to have surgery in the of the Bulldogs. off-season and Rodney Jackson has had the flu and is doubtful for the Friday night game.

The Bulldogs, in class A, region IV, district I, had no problem getting into the playoffs as they ended the season with a 10-0 overall and 6-0 in Friday night 21-13.

'We are a little surprised to go 10-0, but we play very well together," Hazard's head coach, Paul Rains, said.

The offensive backfield for the (5-10, 160) the Bulldog's sophomore quarterback, has thrown for over 1,000 yards as he has a good receiver to go to in senior split end Pat Turner (5-7, 145). The three other backs are three-year starting juniors, Colby Combs (5-9,170) runs halfback, Robert Warren (5-6, 165) runs fullback, and Pete Combs (5-9, 205) runs wing back in the running explosion

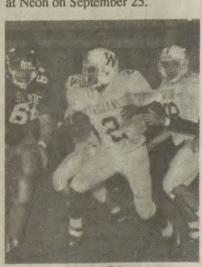

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

The offensive line for Hazard is not all that big but very quick behind senior left guard Tom Statcher (6-0, 175). The offensive line averages about 5-10, 211 and are very quick which helps in running the ball as Hazard does. Joey Kilburn (6-2, 230), the district record to take the district tight end, is an excellent blocker and title by holding off Cumberland last has a great set of hands when the Bulldogs need to throw to him.

The defensive line is anchored by defensive guards Calvin Sharpe (5-6, 230) and Charlie Patterson (5-11, 230). The defensive ends are Tom Bulldogs is made up of three juniors Statcher (6-0, 175) and Chris Corand one sophomore. John Grigsby nette (6-4, 230). Freshman Jason Roberts (5-10, 180) is playing his defensive position exceptionally well recording 13 tackles, two behind the line of scrimmage, last week versus Cumberland.

"We are playing in championship caliber right now and I believe we have the momentum going into the playoffs," Bulldog head coach Rains

The only common opponent that both teams have played is Fleming Neon. The Hazard Bulldogs played Fleming Neon in the first game of their season back on August 28. The Bulldogs came out on top at home against Neon 33-14. The Wheelwright Trojans faced Fleming Neon at Neon on September 25.

REDS LOOK TO BE SERIOUS.... New Cincinnati Reds General Manager

Jim Bowden seems to be bent on making some moves during the off season by dealing Paul O'Neil to the New York Yankees for Roberto Kelly. I must admit that I liked Paul O'Neil as a player. He did have an off year this past season, but he was a great defensive player. I feel that he would have come back and had a good season for Tony Perez. I just think he cared too much for Lou Piniella - and who did? Now, he is going to be a Yankee and wear the pin stripes. It traded him to Seattle where big Lou went.

could have been worse. They could have As for Kelly, he was an All-Star and did play the All-Star game. A very good base runner, he will be a welcome addition to the Reds game. With Larkin, Roberts and Sanders on board, the Reds should run more this year under Perez.

Pitching once again is going to be the big question and big problem for the Cincinnati Reds. Gone is Greg Swindell, who I personally think should have had more wins, but no, thanks to Lou.

Tom Browning will return (?) and he hasn't been a very consistent winner for the Reds, although he has averaged around 14 wins per season. Tim Belcher and Jose Rijo will be back but will they be capable of getting the job done.

The Atlanta Braves are on their way to shoring up their lineup by going after free agent Bobby Bonds and it will cost the Braves some World Series money to land the big fish. While some teams are trying to fight the problem of high salaries, some will not give up. The Braves already have my pick to win their third consecutive Western Division title and a third trip to the big show come next October.

The Reds? A distant fourth. CAN'T BUCK THE SYSTEM...

It doesn't matter who you are or who you coach, you can't break the rules and expect to be overlooked. Sheldon Clark coach Jim Matney found that out when he failed to attend the rules clinic this year. No coach who failed to attend one of the clinics around the state may coach post season games.

Matney is one of the finest football coaches around the area and gets a lot of respect but the up-tempo coach will have to watch these playoffs from the stands and that's being kind to him. Matney will have access to his team before, during halftime and after the game but no contact can be made while the game is being played.

Matney explained his absence from the rules clinic by saying that he was in football camp with his team when the clinic was held. Matney also failed to make the "makeup clinics" as well. So, if the Cardinals make it to the championship game of the state finals, Matney will have to be a spec-

WEST VIRGINIA SAYS WHOA....

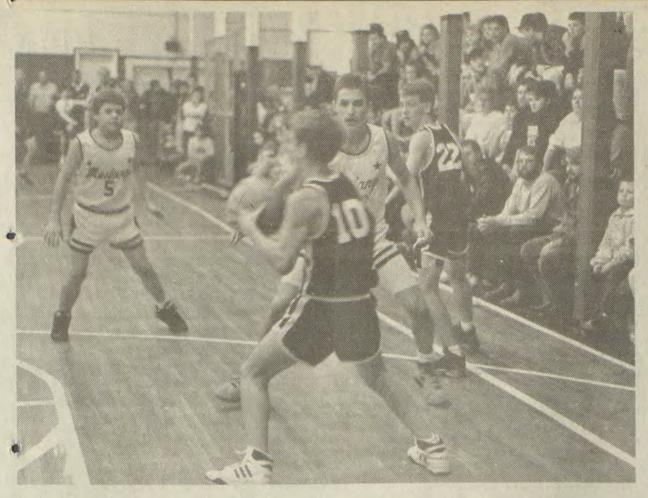

The powers-that-be in West Virginia have thrown a monkey wrench into Kentucky's Number One Panorama. The West Virginia teams have had some restrictions put on them by their state that may hamper their appearance at the Sheldon Clark panorama.

Cardinal coach Roger Harless, one of the region's best, always puts together one of the best and most interesting panoramas around. The schedule is being reworked and more information will be released

WHOLE NEW SEASON BEGINS....

For the Prestonsburg Blackcats and Wheelwright Trojans tonight. Both teams will be starting all over as they enter tournament play. Wheelwright will travel to dangerous Hazard to face the Bulldogs who were a perfect 10-0. Prestonsburg will host Mason County Friday night, not forgetting the ambush of a year ago. Prestonsburg will keep the home field advantage all through the playoffs.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports. Support the Trojans and Blackcats tonight.

Mike Burke is making a run for the top spot. Jason Blanton has opened up a wide margin in our radio personalities race. The high school football playoffs start tonight and Prestonsburg is the choice to knock off Mason County in their opening game. Wheelwright is expected to have a rough outing against an undefeated Hazard team. The University of Kentucky should win over Vanderbilt on the college level as well as Eastern Kentucky. The pro ranks are difficult to pick. Cleveland will fall but Dallas, Pittsburgh and Houston will win.

playoff game. Like Garza, Tucker also is looking forward to his teams rematch with the Royals. "I was looking forward to it when they played West Carter last Friday," said the Blackcat quarterback. "We just keep looking back to what happen last year. They had the big fullback and we just couldn't stop him."

Tucker said that the Blackcats have hit the weight room hard and "our linemen, they've work hard all this week on tackling bigger people.

"If we stop Thomas, we'll have no problem in winning," said the confident quarterback.

There is definitely a vast difference in this years squad compared to last season's team that fell 38-30.

"We have a lot more leaders this year," Tucker explained. "On defense you can look at Kyle (Fitzpatrick) and (Brian) Horne to keep the lineman on their toes. Glenn May has come a long way this year and has been working in the weight room, as well as on his speed and strength. Jay McIntire has stepped up a notch on defense and also filled in for Dicky Johnson at center when Dicky was hurt. Jay's doing a real good job for us right now."

One player in the Blackcat backfield that is having a banner year but who did not see much playing time last year against Mason County is tailback Seth Hyden. But Hyden, like the others, remembers the game well.

Did the Blackcats take Mason County lightly last year?

"We might have taken them a little lightly," he remembered, "because of their record. They just kept running their big fullback up the middle against us and we couldn't stop him."

"It was really disappointing and it Hyden thinks that the defense of was probably the toughest loss I ever

"We're a whole different team They have gotten real good," he this year," echoed Jody Cornett, who plays halfback. "I believe we are a lot stronger and bigger this year. Our running backs are stronger and faster. Aaron's throwing the football real good right now and we have the players that can catch the ball."

> Cornett also says that the big difference in the Prestonsburg team over the past three weeks has been in the improvement in defense. The Cat's defense has not allowed the opposition to score in their last two games.

> 'We have improved so much over the last four games," said Cornett. "The playoffs will start a whole new season for us. I look for us to play good defense and we will probably use more pass plays. I don't think a regional title for this team is an impossibility."

Blackcat receiver Jason Crisp said that while the loss to Mason County last year was hard to handle, fans shouldn't look for a repeat this year.

"I think we will be able to run the football better this Friday night," said Crisp. "Our passing game should be there. If it was there last year, it should be again this time.'

Crisp said that if the Blackcats continue to combine their good running game with their passing game then they should have no problem in coming out on top Friday night.

"I think the coach said that they only throw the ball about four times a game," stated Crisp. "So we're going to play mostly the line with six men on the line and three defensive backs.

"When it comes to the playoff games you take our 9-1 record and throw it out the window," said Crisp. "Past wins and past losses don't mean anything now. It's just who can do the best now. It's the second season."

"Although they lost their big back from last year - I think he went to Morehead - they still have other big backs returning," said defensive player Glenn May. "I think our line is bigger than theirs this year."

something Prestonsburg will have to watch for. "We have to stop their backs," he said. "We have to stop their outside threat. When we take the field Friday night, last year's loss will play a lot on our minds."

The game will start 30 minutes earlier than the traditional 8 p.m. starting time. The game is scheduled for kickoff at 7:30 p.m. All Blackcat fans are urged to be in the stadium in full support of the Prestonsburg team.

Floyd County Courthouse

Prestonsburg, Kentucky

of HOUSE and LOT

This is a nice three-bedroom home. It is well located in a quiet neighborhood. It consists of a living room, kitchen, bedrooms, and one bath. This would be an excellent buy for an investor interested in rental property or for resale after minor repairs.

The deed which contains the legal description to the property may be examined at the Office of the Floyd County Court Clerk in Deed Book 178, Page 454. Farmers Home Administration holds a First Mortgage Lien on this property that will be released after the sale.

Terms: CASH, or 10% of the bid price on the day of sale with good and sufficient bond for the balance, bearing interest at the legal rate as set forth on the Judgment and Order of Sale filed with the U.S. District Court, until paid, due and payable 30 days from the date of sale, and said bond having the effect of a judgment. Upon default by the purchaser, the deposit shall be forfeited. INQUIRIES should be directed to:

Doctors Say Asthma Patients Don't Always Use Spacers as Prescribed

Millions of Americans use metered-dose inhalers (MDIs) to help treat the symptoms of asthma. Many of them also use "spacers' to help improve their therapy. However, patients do not always use their spacers consistently, according to results of a Gallup Poll.

Inhalers are the devices most commonly used to deliver drugs directly to the lungs of patients with asthma or chronic bronchitis. Inhalers are designed to deliver a pre-measured puff of medication, which the patient must inhale at just the right moment using what some experts call 'hand-lung coordination."

Spacers-tubes that connect the inhaler to the patient's mouth-are prescribed to help patients overcome the difficulty of handlung coordination by holding the medication in a chamber until the patient breathes in.

Spacers present their own problems, however. The doctors surveyed said that, on average, one in every six patients has difficulties using spacers correctly. And many physicians surveyed believe that patients do not use them for every dose. They said patients are least likely to use their spacers when away from home or when in public.

When patients do not use their spacers with their inhalers, they are relying on their frequently poor coordi- 800-3M-ANSWERS.

However, the doctors say that they believe only about half of the patients actually use correct technique

The survey, sponsored by 3M Pharmaceuticals, a pioneer in the development of metered-dose inhalers, was conducted with 351 office-based physicians by telephone in March and April of 1991. If you suspect that you-or someone you know-show symptoms of Parkinson's disease, see your doctor.

Education for children should include a drug prevention program.

One way to teach your youngsters about the dangers of drug abuse is to host a party or sponsor an event during Red Ribbon Week, October 24th-November 1st, 1992. This week is to celebrate that drug-free, healthy living makes sense. Parents can inspire their children by encouraging them to wear a red ribbon to symbolize their commitment.

Make it known early-onto your child's teacher and school administrator that you care about drug abuse prevention and education. Ask about the curriculum and plan a face-to-face meeting with your child's teacher. Encourage your child's teacher to access available resources-such as the "G.I. Joe Drug Elimination Force" curriculum workbooks (to be distributed by HASBRO, Inc. October 24-November 1, 1992).

National Safety

and our life expectancy has eliminating waterborne disease. INTS FOR HOMEOWNERS Council TIPS FROM THE NATIONAL SAFETY COUNCIL

The road to safety should start right at your garage door, experts at the National Safety Council agree. An improperly adjusted garage door opener can exert deadly force when the door closes. This could lead to serious injury or death from being hit by a closing garage door or from becoming trapped under the door. Careless operation and allowing children to play with or use garage door opener controls are also dangerous situations that can lead to tragic results. A few simple precautions can protect your family and friends from potential harm: •Do not stand or walk under a moving door. Do not let children play "beat the door." It is very dangerous and can result in serious injury or death.

•Keep transmitters and remote controls out of reach of children. Do not let children play with or use the transmitters or remote controls. ·The pushbutton wall control should be out of reach of children-at least five feet from the floorand away from all moving parts. Mount and use the button where you can clearly see the closing garage door.

·Discuss garage door safety with your children. Explain the danger of being trapped under the door. Teach children to never play under or near an open garage door.

.When using the pushbutton or transmitter, keep the door in sight until it door's path at approximately the center of the door. Push the control button to close the door. The door opener must reverse and open the door when it strikes the wood. If the opener does not reverse, have it repaired or replaced. •Test the force setting of your garage door opener by holding up the bottom of the door as it closes. If the door does not reverse readily, the force is excessive and needs adjusting by a qualified professional.

·Periodically test the balance of your door. Start with your door closed. Disconnect the garage door opener release mechanism so you can operate the door by hand. You should be able to lift the resistance. It should stay open around three to four feet above the floor. If it does not. it is out of balance. Have it adjusted by a professional. ·Consider adding an electric eye or edge sensor as an extra measure of safety to protect against entrapment. •Routine maintenance can prevent tragedies. Look at the garage door springs. cables, rollers, pulleys and other door hardware for signs of wear. Rollers and hinges of a garage door require periodic lubrication with a spray silicone or lightweight household oil.

It takes just a few minutes to inspect and test your garage door system every month-so for your family's sake, make garage door opener safety automatic in your home. For a free brochure on how to test your automatic garage door call toll-free 1-800-727-2338.

DEAR BRUCE: I enrolled in beauty school—it was a two-year program, and I thought I wanted to be a beautician. My boyfriend asked me to marry him four months later. After two more months in school, and getting ready for the wedding, it was just too much, so I dropped out of school.

I had borrowed a lot of money to send myself to beauty school. But I didn't graduate and I got absolutely nothing out of it. Now the people who loaned the money say I have to pay all of it for the entire year, even though I only went six months. Must I pay it all?—READER

DEAR READER: No one asked you to get married, other than your boyfriend. No one asked you to drop out of school. Clearly, the beauty school would have a difficult (if not impossible) time filling your slot midstream.

It occurs to me that perhaps it was not wise of you to drop out of school. It may be that you could get back in again, and at least take advantage of the money that you have to pay whether you're there or not.

ABORTION GI 188UE

PRO-LIFE

by Teena Blackburn

Frederica Mathewes-Green, of Feminists for Life of America, compares abortion to stealing a blanket from a homeless man. She says, "Imagine the fellow who stole a poor man's blanket, as he huddled homeless on the sidewalk. He might defend himself, 'I didn't take anything important—not a house or a car or money—only a silly blanket.' We would respond, 'Yes, but you took all he had.' The fetus may be small and weak, still developing, but when we smash and scatter these growing cells we take away everything he has; we steal the poor man's blanket."

In the public debate over abortion, the operative word for many has become "choice." Those who support legalized abortion present it as simply, "Who makes the choice—the woman or the government?" What is left out is, "What are we choosing?" When a woman aborts, she destroys something human (biologically it can be nothing else), something living, something that from the moment of conception possesses a unique genetic identity. In other words, she destroys not some part of her body, but rather a separate being who is a "tenant" of sort in her body. Indeed the unborn have been compared to astronauts in a space ship-dependent, but not part of, what/who they are in. The unborn tenant, however, did not take up residence on his own. He was called into being by what is almost always a freely chosen human act. In over 97 percent of all pregnancies, the child is not conceived in rape or incest, but in a consentual act that the partners know may result in a child.

In our society, if I cause an accident, I acquire an obligation for the care of the one I have affected. How then can we say we have no obligation for the care of the one I have affected. How then can we say we have no obligation to the unborn when we brought him into being? The choice to have sexual intercourse bears with it responsibility and accountability—to each other, and to any new life that results.

For the 2-3 percent of pregnancies that result from rape or incest, I can only propose some questions. Do we believe that abortion will aid the healing of a woman who had been violated, or rather would we not add injustice to injustice, compounding injury with death, and thus contribute more to the sick violence of our society? Do we want to penalize the unborn because one parent was cruel, selfish, and lacking in conscience? Do we want to base the value of life on whether someone else wants us? (A question that should make all groups historically discriminated against, such as women, gays, blacks, the handicapped, and anyone else who is "different" very nervous.) Can we not find ways to deal with problem pregnancies that do not add to the body count?

Women who abort are also victims. The "choice" to have an abortion is often the result of pressure from husbands, boyfriends, friends, and relatives. Our society lacks sufficient support services for women in crisis pregnancies, and many in panic and desperation think they have no other options. This same society puts a low value on women's ability to give life, and when we seek equality, the chance to develop ourselves as full human beings, we art told in words and deeds that no provision will be made for our role as life-giver. Witness the lack of maternity leave, the absence of creative "in-house" day care in corporations, the seeming inability of the public sector to look on pregnancy as a positive reality, rather than as a disease. A woman is encouraged to see the child as the enemy, standing between her and her genuine human needs.

Abortion victimizes the men who care for their children. They have no voice in the decision. We have spent a lot of time and energy encouraging men to take responsibility for their families, paying attention to the children, being present at their births, paying support and visiting if the marriage breaks up. We contradict ourselves by telling them that the unborn is nothing to them if the mother decides to terminate the pregnancy. For the men who are irresponsible, abortion lets then "off the hook," giving them justification for their lack of commitment, and leading to the further exploitation of women. They can perhaps toss the woman the money, and go away feeling as if they have taken care of the problem.

It is worth noting that the Playboy Foundation is a large contributor to the National Abortion Rights Action League. Any feminist, indeed any woman, should be looking at that and saying, "What do they stand to gain?"

The major questions of any society are, "What kind of people do we want to be? Whose human dignity will we respect? Who will we be responsible for?" Our society has become increasingly sensitive to civil rights, women's rights, human rights in general. We protect violence of all kinds—discrimination, torture, famine, and war, but we have a moral blind spot. How ironic, for instance, that we pass protective legislation for the handicapped, while encouraging the destruction of the imperfect before they are born.

RU-486. At once considered both the ultimate guardian of a woman's personal decision to carry a pregnancy to full term, and the ultimate symbol of society's arrogance of how, exactly, to define and protect life. Hence, it is the current center of the debate over legalized abortions. Once again, the battle lines have been drawn in the neverending womb wars of late Twentieth century America, and truth is the first casualty.

The truth being buried under an avalanche of absolutes and abstractions is that both sides have tended to frame the abortion debate in the most narrow political and ethical terms. Each side has its supporting statistics, its medical experts, its horror stories. The public disagreement about RU-486, like the larger argument about abortion, highlights conflicting attitudes about the roles of sex, childbearing and careers in women's lives. But for women themselves how they feel about child-rearing and childcaring is probably a greater influence.

Although you'd never know from listening to the abortion debate, it is inextricably linked to these complete and fundamental care-giving activities. When contemplating motherhood, most women realize that this is not a decision about a brief moment of ecstasy, nine months of pregnancy and a few hours of delivery-room agony. It is rather about one's ability to engage in the difficult work of helping children grow and develop, to demonstrate the patience and understanding necessary to affirm their strengths and weaknesses, to be loyal to them in spite of anger, sadness, illness, terrible handicaps and even death. It is a decision about taking on a job whose demands literally never end and acquiring an identity that can never entirely be shed.

Few women decide to terminate an unwanted pregnancy casually, because they wish to preserve some abstract right, some absolute prerogative of individual liberty. Most make this decision because somewhere deep inside they understand the immense and unrelenting responsibilities of being a mother. And they know they are not ready for it. For most women the decision is firmly rooted in the belief that they have the absolute right to determine when and if they are prepared to take responsibility for another human being.

Few supporters of either side of the debate understand why that right is so profoundly important. Few of these supporters know from experience that the intense work of parenting does not end after a few exhausting months of round-the-clock feeding and diapering, years of "the terrible twos," sibling rivalry and sullen adolescence. parenting involves far more than teaching children to "go potty," feed themselves, read, write and think, respect other human beings, control hostility and anger, overcome sadness and disappointment, forge close relationships with others and maybe someday find a mate and have children of their own.

Parenting involves the extraordinary capacity to cope with one's own frustration — and sometimes even one's own rage — to balance one's own needs with the often unpredictable needs of another, to tolerate terribly anxiety and even dread about their safety and well-being, to give and give and give when there is no "please" and "thank you," and finally, in a bittersweet finale, to let go.

This is not a job that one can successfully undertake in isolation. It really does take the equivalent of a traditional village to raise a child. That community must include fathers, relatives, friends, neighbors and even perfect strangers. It must help provide money, time and social support.

That is precisely why, as a mother, I am awestruck and sometimes infuriated by the narrow and mean-spirited nature of the abortion debate. I am stunned when I hear rightwing pro-life advocates, in effect, imposing motherhood on women unprepared for or unwilling to assume this role.

How can anyone tell another human being that she must bear the year-in and year-out responsibility of parenting? How can men—

I think here particularly of politicians, ministers and Supreme Court Justices who have spent little or no time caring for children and, in some cases, oppose much-needed economic and social supports for many who do—how can they so cavalierly decree that any woman can adjust to the burdens and demands of child-rearing? Do these "right-to-lifers" really believe that a stream of hormones magically ensures a lifetime supply of love, nurturing, parental wisdom and understanding?

It would be almost laughable, were it not so tragic, that those who claim to be protecting innocent young lives in fact seem to view children not as the objects of care but as punishment for adult misconduct or as penance for sexual misbehavior. Isn't that the meaning of anti-abortion advocates' oftrepeated cliche that a woman trapped in an unwanted or unplanned pregnancy "has made her bed and now must lie in it?"

Many people are disturbed by abortions after the first trimester. Abortions for the

Health Festival

Parkview Manor will hold a health festival on November 7. Seminars begin at 11 a.m. Topics include Healthcare Alternatives Available in Your Community, Alzheimers, How to Live With Arthritis, Understanding the Americans With Disabilities Act, Health And Nutrition, and Health Insurance (Medicare and Medicaid).

Activities include a craft show which will be held from 11 a.m.-5 p.m.; a quilt contest, sponsored by Hylton Homes of Ivel; an art contest, sponsored by the First National Bank; talent contests at 3 p.m. and 5 p.m.; and a car show, Car Cruise, which begins at 4 p.m.

Other events include a Sock-hop/Dance Contest, 50/60's music, at 7:30 p.m.; games and prizes, 6 p.m.-10 p.m.; prize pull, throughout the evening, sponsored by Pikeville National Bank; live entertainment, throughout the afternoon and evening; haunted house, 6:30 p.m.-10 p.m. and an auction at 7 p.m.

PCC Gallery schedule

From October 15-November 6 art teachers from Floyd,

Magoffin, Johnson, Knott, and Pike counties will exhibit their work in the gallery.

November 16-December 3, Images From the Mountains, a traveling exhibit of Appalachian Artists, can be viewed.

For more information concerning their exhibits contact Dr. Carolyn C. Turner at (606) 886-3863, ext. 203.

National Adoption Awareness Month

On Saturday, November 14, at 10 a.m., there will be a monthly meeting of ADOPT, adoptive family support group, at St. Martha's Catholic Church on Watergap Road, Prestonsburg, for families in Pike and Floyd counties. Childcare provided, $1 per child. For more information, call Amy Christensen at 437-6563 or Kristin Layng Szakos at 874-9584

Bed n' Breakfasts

Bed n' Breakfasts are a rising interest for many people to make extra money. People are converting their property, their home or a portion of their home to gain an additional source of income.

Whether used all year around or just for certain seasons it's a different option that calls for more creativity than investment.

A Bed n' Breakfast Workshop is being sponsored on November 12, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Big Sandy RECC Building in Paintsville for this area. It costs $25 per person, $40 for a couple. The money goes for a notebook, a meal, a snack and registration. The program was paid for through grant money.

For more information call 789-8108.

BIRTH CONTROL (Part II) by John G. Shiber

As discussed in the last article, the two most effective birth control measures currently available in this country are the "Pill" and the recently FDA-approved five-year hormonal implant (e.g., the "Norplant System"). Even though they are nearly 100 percent effective when used according to prescribed guidelines, each of these methods chemically changes the hormonal balance in the woman's body in order to prevent pregnancy and, therefore, can cause some health problems in certain individuals.

There are other birth control measures which do not interfere with the woman's natural body functioning and which involve very little or no health risk. The most effective of these are the "barrier" methods, which physically prevent the sperm from entering the uterus by blocking the passage-way leading to it (i.e., the cervix).

The barrier method which offers the best protection against pregnancy is the diaphragm. This is a thin piece of rubber

Pro-Life — (Continued from page three)

Will we value human life simply because it is human life? Will we protect people for what they are, rather than for what they can do? If not, we will have to answer the question posed by Methodist philosopher/theologian Stanley Hauerwas, "How do we tell our children what we are doing and still make them glad they are our children?"

purposes of sex selection are universally reviled, although no one seems to know anyone who has had one. People are statistically uncomfortable with the so-called abortion of convenience. Semantics alone make it sound like a pregnancy ended because a woman wanted a child who was a Leo, not a Capricorn.

Under our current laws we can assess what convenience means in our own lives. A woman expecting her fourth child in five years and whose husband has just left her can decide whether convenience is the right word to describe why she wants an abortion. The parents of a pregnant 14 year-old victim of incest can decide if convenience is the right word for why they think an abortion is the answer. A woman who has been raped and, literally, impregnated against her will can decide if convenience is the right word to describe by feelings when she faces the question of abortion. Convenience is a deceptively simple word, and none of us lead simple lives.

And I find it dismaying that so many feminists defend the right to choose solely on the grounds of privacy and personal liberty. That stance only reinforces the extreme view of an individual in society rather than a society of individuals. Rather, the issue must be framed by one's affirmation of an individual's absolute need of a family and a community of care and nurture.

Today our society debates whether life begins at the moment of conception and whether a promising new drug can be used to terminate unwanted pregnancy. What we really need to question is our society's conception of what it takes to nurture and nourish human life, not in isolation but within a human community.

which is stretched over a flexible metal ring. Shortly before intercourse, the woman covers the diaphragm on both sides with a sperm-killing jelly and then inserts it way up into the vagina, against the cervix. (If a contraceptive foam is also used, the effectiveness is increased). The diaphragm must be kept in place for about six hours after intercourse, then removed, washed with mild soap and water, and stored in a cool, dry place. A woman can get a diaphragm through her physician who can judge what size and shape is best for her to use. She must be "refitted" for one every two years, or after each pregnancy, or after any severe weight gain or loss.

The cervical cap is the second most effective barrier method. It is a small version of the diaphragm and must also be gotten through a physician. It is used in exactly the same way as the diaphragm, only it must stay in place after intercourse for at least eight hours. It is not true that the diaphragm and the cervical cap can slip into the uterus, contrary to what some women may think.

The condom is the only birth control measure, at present, which the man uses. It is a membranous sheath, usually made of very thin rubber or sheep's intestine, and is worn immediately before intercourse. The condom has a space at the tip in which the sperm is deposited. This keeps the sperm from entering the woman's body altogether. Because condoms have been known to leak (or crack if old and/or dry), it is advisable that the woman use a sperm-killing jelly or cream at the same time to further insure protection. When used in this manner, the condom is nearly as effective as the cervical cap in preventing pregnancy. It must be mentioned, however, that a condom should be used only once and should be carefully checked for leaks before use. Furthermore, it should be put on immediately before any intercourse at all, because sperm can and do leave the man's body even before ejaculation, and each sperm is capable of fertilizing an egg and causing a pregnancy. Condoms are said to offer some protection against sexuallytransmitted diseases, but they should not be relied upon as

The vaginal sponge is also a barrier method which is used with a sperm-killing jelly or cream, but it is a relatively new method to American couples, so there are few data which can tell us just how effective it is. As with the diaphragm and cervical cap, the sponge must be completely covered (i.e.,

Arts and Crafts

Historically, natural clay, along with the addition of heat, has been transformed into wonderful works of art. These items can be both asthetically pleasing as well as functional in nature. Now, you can start dabbling in this art form simply by using baker's clay to mold your own Christmas ornaments, baskets, beads, jewelry, etc.

You may enjoy this craft so much that you decide to progress into the area of hand-built ceramics or pottery.

Baker's clay requires only three ordinary household ingredients—flour, salt and water from the tap. Combine four cups of flour and one cup of salt; add 1 1/2 cups of water. Stir the mixture until all of the dry ingredients are moistened. (Each recipe makes enough clay for one dozen ornaments of average size or several beads for jewelry making.)

Knead the dough on a lightly floured table top for at least five minutes. The dough will hold together and have a velvety texture. (At this point dough may be stored in a sealed plastic bag in the refrigerator for several days or use immediately.)

Mold the parts for the desired shape. (Make coils of dough for candy canes; roll dough out about 1/4" thick and use cookie cutters for flat shapes or cut your own original shapes; make designs with a toothpick or form small pieces of dough into the shapes you want and moisten with water to attach to other parts of the ornament. Do the same for jewelry parts as well.)

Use a nail or straw to make a hole at the top of each ornament for hanging. (For jewelry, you may only need a small hole made by using a toothpick. There will be some shrinkage, so allow for that.)

Bake on a cookie sheet at 350° for 30 minutes or longer until the dough appears slightly brown around the edges. (The baking time will vary with the thickness of the dough and the length of time the dough has been exposed to the air before baking. Larger, thicker items such as wreaths, baskets or coiled items can be baked at 200° for a few hours. Otherwise items may crack or split. If this happens, use extra dough you may have as a filler, smooth it out around the crack and let it air dry before sealing and decorating.)

Remove cookie sheet from the oven and let the clay cool. Then, lift the items from the cookie sheet to a wire rack. Spray them with a clear varnish or plastic. This spray will seal out all moisture and preserve your creation for years. Otherwise, the high salt content will absorb moisture and the items will not retain their shape.

After spraying, you can paint or decorate your ornament (or other item) any way you want. If you wish, coat the entire item with a decoupage solution or spray again with varnish or plastic after your decorations are day.

Hang ornaments with a ribbon or cord since the salt will rust metal hangers. Store ornaments in a tightly sealed plastic bag. NOTE: Be sure to wash cookie cutters thoroughly because the salt in this recipe is extremely corrosive.

By George W. Smith

Q: I am getting divorced. I will receive monthly cash payments but I don't want to pay taxes on them. My "ex" says I can, but I don't trust him. Is this possible?—C.M., Augusta,

A: Sure. You and your spouse may designate that otherwise taxable payments are not alimony by including a provision in your divorce or separation instrument that these payments are not deductible by your husband and are excluded from your income. To exclude these payments from income, you must attach a copy of the instrument designating them as not being alimony to your tax return for each year the designation applies.

Q: I just found my deceased aunt's income tax refund check for 1989. The bank won't cash it. Nor will my broker. Will the IRS cash it?-J.W., Santa Fe, N.M.

A: If your son was disabled before he was 22 years of age and meets the medical requirements, he would be entitled to Social Security benefits from your work record. Your son would also be insured for benefits not only in the event of your death, but also when you retire or if you became disabled.

Q: Several years ago I received stock in a new corporation in exchange for my services. For tax purposes, what is my cost in the stock now that I am ready to sell it?-B.H. Portland, IRS. If your check has been canceled, you can apply to the IRS purchase them such as commissions and transfer fees. In your particular situation, the basis of the stock is usually determined by the fair market value of the services rendered which were subject to income tax in the year that the services are performed. Generally, if there was no inclusion of income at that time, your basis probably is zero.

Q: I have recently donated to our church a personal computer and printer I purchased several years ago. What amount can I claim as a deduction?-M.D. Williamsport, Pa.

A: If you donate property to a qualified organization, generally the fair market value of the property at the time of the contribution is the amount of your charitable contribution. However, if the property has increased in value, you may have to make some additional adjustments. Fair market value is the price at which property would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller, neither having to buy or sell, and both having reasonable knowledge of all the relevant facts. Most computers do not increase in value. If this is true, your

REPLACING A WALL SWITCH

If a light fixture fails to work when its wall switch is turned on, the switch may be defective. Before testing the switch, unscrew the fuse or trip the circuit breaker to shut off its power. Remove the switch plate, pull out the switch, and unscrew the wires.

There are two ways to test a switch. You may disconnect at least one of its wires and test it with a volt-ohm meter or you may hook up a new switch to see if it will solve the problem. To test with a new switch, attach its wires on the same positions you found the wire on the old switch.

Restore circuit power and turn the switch on. (Note: you need not completely install the new switch to make the test if you wear insulating gloves and avoid touching the terminals.) If the light works, install the new switch. If it does not, have an electrician check the wiring.

FUSES AND CIRCUIT BREAKERS

If too much current flows in a wire, it can get hot enough to set fire to surrounding materials. Fuses and circuit breakers protect against this possibility by cutting off power to any circuit that is drawing excessive power.

Circuit breakers work like thermostats - when they get too hot, they shut off power. The key element in a fuse is a strip of metal with a low melting point. When too much current flows, the strip melts, or "blows," thereby interrupting power in the circuit. Unlike circuit breakers, which can be reset after they trip, a blown fuse must be replaced. In neither case, however, should the circuit be reactivated until the cause of the problem has been located and fixed.

There are two kinds of fuses: screw-in, for under 30 amperes, and cartridge, for 30 amperes and up. Both are available in slow-blow designs that safely allow temporary overloads. Cartridge fuses often show no sign of having blown. A blown screw-in fuse can generally be spotted by a blackened glass or break in the metal strip. Either type can be checked with a continuity tester or a volt-ohm meter. When using the meter, set it to the RX1 scale and touch its probes to the terminals of the fuse. A reading of zero ohms means the fuse is good.

Fuses and circuit breakers are rated in amperes and are matched to the wiring they protect. Never replace a fuse or breaker with one rated for higher amperage and do not attempt to force a circuit breaker to stay on or to circumvent the operation of a fuse by substituting a penny or a wad of foil.

One day this summer Christine Hunt found herself in the office of Jean Rosenberg, director of the Single Parent and Homemaker program (SPH) at Prestonsburg Community College.

Hunt was at a crisis point in her life. She was going through a divorce and she needed legal advice.

"I came here (to Rosenberg's office) the very day of our separation...to find material on legal rights," she recalled.

She explained her circumstances to a sympathetic Rosenberg. "She (Rosenberg)

Hunt, who lives at Cow Creek, had earned her GED earlier this year.

"I had studied quite a bit on and off (over the years), but I got my diploma May of 1992."

The lack of a high school diploma hadn't hindered her from getting jobs.

bigger and better things in store for me.

"I was dark as a human being, because as Dr. Bill Loftus (psychology professor at PCC) says, 'Learning is active.' And now I am alive with learning!" she declared, her eyes alight with her newfound confidence.

"I was laid off," she continued, "And there were no jobs to be had. From November (1990) to January (1991) I looked for work" without luck.

She joined the Job Training Partnership Act program (JTPA) under the guidance of program director Ann Davis whom DeRossett affectionately calls, "my guardian angel."

The JTPA program
"tries to give people a skill and get them in the workforce," said DeRossett. "I was given two options while in the program (for learning new skills). I could go to college or to a vocational school."

Unsure of the best route, she met with PCC counselor Joe Sutton who helped steer her in the right direction. "I wouldn't have been here (PCC) or stayed if it wasn't for Joe Sutton," she said. "He convinced me that PCC had more to offer than other schools."

Career counseling also aided her in deciding to pursue an associate degree in business technology. She also received financial aid from the college.

The first semester was not all roses, however.

"Two weeks after the semester started I was devastated. I was crying," she recalled. "I studied nine hours a day, but still my homework was not done. Joe (Sutton) gave me the option of dropping some classes."

To a determined person like DeRossett, the idea of dropping classes was unthinkable. The thought of failure spurred her on. "I studied longer and I didn't drop classes," she said.

DeRossett acknowledged that her greatest fear in returning to school was attempting college level work for the first time.

"I was afraid I couldn't learn college courses, period."

She discovered that the keys to success are

"learning how to manage your time, how to take good notes, how to test. Etta Cantrell's Reading Lab (at PCC) teaches you how to read faster, how to manage study time, learn prefixes - a tremendous help to me. The Reading Lab is where everbody should start."

She also discovered "I could actually learn, that I am capable of learning all PCC has to offer. I am amazed!" she laughed.

She added, "I haven't been to school for 100 years. That's what I tell everyone. I never dreamed of going to college ever. I thought it was beyond my capabilities."

Today she serves as vice-president of Phi Theta Kappa, the academic honor fraternity.

Her husband, Ronnie, who works as a dozer operator for Mountain Pipeline Construction Company of Prestonsburg, is extremely supportive, even though sacrifices must be made.

"My husband and animals are neglected because of study time," she confessed. Her two dogs manage to get her attention by pawing at her while she's studying and her two housecats simply "get on top of my books to get attention. My housework goes undone. I don't do it," she said simply. "It's okay. (My pets) know they will reap the benefits (in terms of pet toys) when I begin my new career," she grinned

Her friends outside of school have been neglected, as well. "My quality time with friends has diminished because my head is always in a book."

Her personal goals are "To be the best I can be...; to be successful in whatever field I go into; to have self-satisfaction...If no jobs are to be had (when she finishes her associate degree) I'll take two or three classes a semester. I know I can do it (college work)."

She offered advice for those who are contemplating college for the first time. "Never doubt your abilities because if I can do it, anybody can."

Her husband, Brennan, "works with me in giving me time to study. I need to be isolated."

Her son, William

her free time to study.

Still, "college classes are a lot easier than what I thought they would be," she said.

Presently in her last semester of prebaccalaureate study at PCC, Newsome, an attractive woman with a calm, confident manner, is a member of Phi Theta Kappa. She serves as the honor fraternity's public relations officer and, in the past two years, she has been involved in various campus and community projects sponsored by the fraternity.

Her first college classes were geared toward a K through 4 elementary she realized that eighty to ninety percent of the students she met in the teaching program were also seeking the same type of degree, she decided to pursue another field.

"I care about older people. (As a speech pathologist) I will work with stroke victims and children with cleft palates...I can come back and work in this area. I could work with hospitals, nursing homes, or schools," she said.

Although she plans to finish her college work at Eastern or UK, she feels apprehensive about life at a university. She realizes that the personal touch of a small community college will be missing.

At PCC "the atmosphere is of a personal type," she noted. "(The whole staff) is interested in people. They take time to talk to you about a class. They want you to do well. They encourage you."

She said she has enjoyed learning from the instructors at PCC and she has made a lot of friends of all different ages.

U.S. mail ten years, worked with juvenile delinquents" as matron of the Big Sandy Detention Center. She also drove a bus for the handicapped, worked in food services, and worked with the elderly in a nursing home.

But for Hunt, college seemed beyond the rim of possibilities.

"I was afraid to think on it. I was really leaving it up to the Lord. I prayed, 'Lord, if this is Your will, direct my path." Still, she believed she had too many obstacles blocking her way to contemplate college.

"There is no way I could have done it (started college) on my own. The Lord opened doors for me in so many ways beyond mentioning. Everything opened up - financial aid, transportation."

The staff at PCC was supportive, as well. "Everyone told me I could do it," she said. "Then I got optimistic. I got behind a door and pinched myself and said, 'What are you doing?' But I had too much in it (college preparation) to turn back."

This fall marks her first college semester and she is thriving. As she sat in the SPH meeting room on campus, she talked about college life as a non-traditional student.

"College has given me confidence in myself and has put me on an (educational) level I didn't know I was on. My self-esteem was low," she confided. "College has increased my self-esteem."

She is taking part in campus organizations, such as the Baptist Student Union, the SPH program, and she is enjoying her classes. She has discovered that "College is much better than I expected. You feel like one big family. I feel like...I fit in."

As for college course work, she confessed, "I really didn't think I could remember and concentrate the way I can, and my concentration is growing all along.

"I'm surprised I feel no peer pressure. Before, in school, I was afraid, ashamed, embarrassed (that I would fail). Here I am competing with myself."

She has also discovered "lots of friends," and younger students come to her for advice.

"They ask, 'How can you be so cool about this (the pressures of college)?'

"I tell them that once you take the pressure off, it's okay. Keep reminding yourself that life is not supported by this (doing well in school). We create our own tension and stress."

Yet when Hunt contemplated whether to attempt college, she had one fear of her own - at her age could she physically cope with the demands of college?

Although in good health, "The first month was really a trial. It was physically exhausting," she admitted. "If I had been a quitter I would have quit. But I'm not a quitter. It's a breeze now. I love my classes to death."

As a course of study she said she sought "to find something fulfilling for my own self, my own self-esteem, and to be of benefit to the public system."

She decided on a degree in social work with the goal to work with the elderly. "I would like to motivate the elderly to get them back in school," she said.

Her five grown children are extremely supportive and have "told me all the tips (for studying) and have helped with tutoring me," she smiled.

She has an active life outside of school. She has taken clogging classes for the past two years, and she has added a night dance class; she writes poetry and short stories; and is involved in church work and the Meals-On-Wheels program sponsored by the senior citizens program.

"I live for challenge," she said. "I've been self-educated up to this point. Now other people can teach me. I don't have to learn on my own."

Jackson-

age 47. "My sisters and friends advised me to go ahead."

A younger sister, who is a doctor, "sent me books, money, anything she could to help me," recalls Jackson.

As an artistic person who likes to draw and paint, as well as create dolls, quilts, and other hand-made crafts, Jackson wanted to major in art.

"I had wanted to be an artist. I came to college (Prestonsburg Community College) to take art; but then after looking over the different courses of study the college offered, I decided I wanted to be a social worker so I could work with children and older people."

She is presently in her last semester at PCC. "I'm very proud of myself right now. But after earning my associate degree (in social work) I'd like to go higher.

"A person has got to have a goal. Mine is get the associate degree and try for a Bachelor's and a Master's degree. I want a job - that's what I'd love to have. To help people with problems as a social worker."

When she first started college, taking tests were her biggest concern.

"I was looking forward to school, but test time was my biggest fear. I started out with a very good grade point average and that encouraged me to go on."

Of college life she said, "I like it. It's not as bad as I thought it would be. I thought the pressure might be different. I couldn't face the stress of a larger college. Here you know about everyone. I have friends and I look forward to seeing them every day. It's more like a family."

She added, "I've met many very good instructors. They are always willing to help you when you have a problem. They take time with you." Jackson is active in the Baptist Student Union at PCC, her church at Wheelwright, and she is a volunteer with the Meals-On-Wheels program sponsored by the Wheelwright senior citizens center.

"I deliver meals (to the elderly)," she said.
"Sometimes they (the clients) just need a hug.
They say, 'I'm so glad you came.' I try to give them words of encouragement and they end up encouraging me," she said, smiling.

As she sat in the lobby of the Johnson building between classes, passersby would pause to briefly chat with her before moving on, and she was unfailingly cheerful to each, bubbling over with good-humor, smiles and chuckles. She clearly loves people, and they respond to her friendliness in kind.

She described herself as "a friendly person, a lovable person, a talkative person, cheerful. I'd just like to stand out in all kinds of different ways as a person who helps others."

Jackson's husband, who is a carpenter and electrician, is recovering from a recent heart attack, his second. Jackson realizes she may soon be the sole financial supporter for the family which makes her schooling all the more imperative.

"I look forward to helping myself, my husband and family when I finish school and can get a good job," she said, smiling.

She is now in her full third semester at PCC where she is finishing up prerequisite courses. She plans to complete her physical therapy degree at Hazard Community college.

In her first semester back at college she took 17 hours of advanced classes. "I wanted to quit. I cried every night," she confessed. "But he (Ricky) pushed."

She said her greatest problem has been dealing with the guilt she feels when studying takes her away from their seven-year-old son, Shane. "Ricky has been really, really helpful," she said. "Evenings I had to study he would take care of Shane."

Her attitude toward her education "is really different" compared to nine years ago. "I came to class before and wouldn't ask a question. I didn't want to look stupid," she admitted.

Now she doesn't hesitate to ask a question in class, or to consult with an instructor if she is having trouble comprehending material covered in class.

The reason is simple: "Now I realize I'm paying money for my education."

CAN WIFE GET RELIEF FROM SHINGLES PAIN?

DEAR DR. LAMB: My wife has had a bad case of shingles which started on her head and came down over her right forehead, her right eye and into her upper cheek. This started over a year ago. She has been seeing a dermatologist and the blisters are pretty well gone, but she continues to have persis-soaked) with spermicide and inserted up against the cervix shortly before intercourse. It is supposed to remain effective for 2-4 hours after insertion.

Spermicides are sperm-killing chemicals in the form of jellies, creams and foams, which are inserted by means of an applicator into the vagina immediately before intercourse. If used alone, spermicides are not reliable for preventing pregnancy, but when used with one of the barrier methods mentioned above, they can be effective. Spermicides in the form of vaginal suppositories or foaming tablets are not as effective as jellies and creams.

The condom, the vaginal sponge, and most spermicides may be bought in any drug store or "health aids" section of a department store without a prescription. Prices vary according to brand name, quality, and/or where they are purchased.

tent pain two to three times a day, lasting anywhere from two to five minutes on each occasion. We have visited various doctors, but they don't seem to be able to help her.

We are at our wits' end as to what to do to help her get relief, and needless to say, we would be very grateful if you could tell us what needs to be done to remedy her very bad situation.

DEAR READER: I wish I could help, but your wife has a complication of shingles that is between difficult and impossible to treat. She no longer has an infection with an active virus causing the skin lesions, but rather a pain problem. The infection does something to the nerve fibers that transmit pain that results in this complication.

About three percent of patients with shingles who are in the older age group have this complication, lasting a year or much longer after an acute attack.

I know from some of my letters that people confuse postherpetic neuralgia, which your wife has, with the acute attack of shingles. When it is an uncomplicated acute attack, the illness will run its course in one or two weeks. Regardless of what you take during that time, you will get well. That explains some of the apparent cures with things that have nothing to do with the illness.

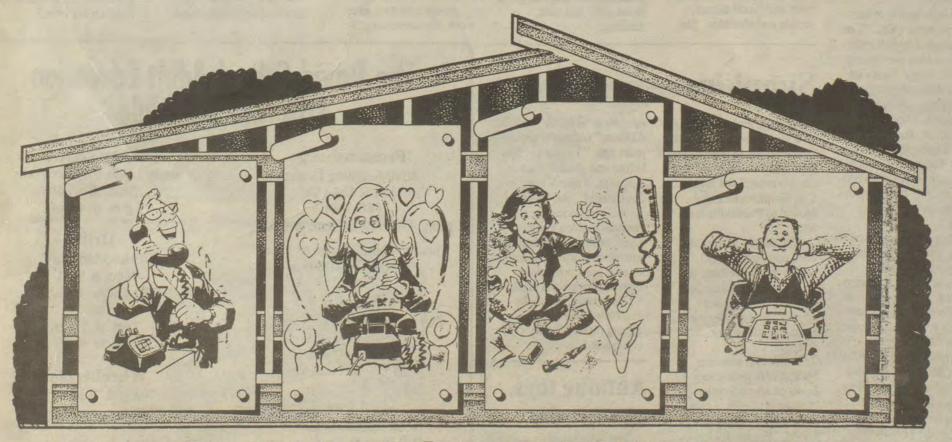

I have discussed the current thinking about treating postherpetic neuralgia in my new Special Report 118-WS, Shingles: The Chickenpox Disease. I'm sending you a free copy. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/118-WS, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, N.J. 08077. Share it with your doctor, as he may want to pursue some of the approaches discussed. If your wife cannot get relief otherwise, it may be useful for her to be referred to a pain clinic.

Athletics no longer for the macho as women expand involvement in sports

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

"You've come a long way baby" was the message of television commercials advertising Virginia Slim cigarettes before cigarette commercials were banned from television.

Now, we don't know if women have "come a long way" because they decided to start smoking Virginia Slims, but we have to admit, they have come a long way in the world of

Many of the sporting events that the female athletes are participating in now weren't considered lady-like in past days. Playing basketball, softball, baseball, running track and taking part in field events was strictly for the men. Oh, being a cheerleader was acceptable for the women to do as far as athletics went. But even cheerleading has become such a vast sport in itself.

But things have definitely changed.

Now, women hold head coaching jobs around the country and are doing a very good job at it. With the revival of girls basketball in 1975 under the Title IX act, the ladies were given a fair shake under the law and the women's sports programs have blossomed.

In 1990 two women coaches came to the rescue of two high school baseball teams that were on the borderline of being curtailed. At McDowell, when no one else was interested in the head coaching job, Cassandra Akers (who was girl's basketball coach at the time) stepped forward and ran the men's baseball team. The same was true at Wheelwright in the same year. Coach Billie Joe Stegall took over the Wheelwright Trojans because no other coach could be found.

Women coaches in Floyd County have been instrumental in building a very competitive women's basketball program in the 15th Region. When women's basketball came into prominence in 1975, Patricia Murphy guided the Allen Central Lady Rebels to their first girls' district title. Judy Eversole came on the scene and won the only girl's regional title at Allen Central and Bonita Compton has carried on the strong tradition at the Right Beaver school by winning three consecutive district championships.

Also in 1975 a sophomore at McDowell High School, under Title IX, was given the opportunity to show what she could do with a basketball. Geri Grigsby only leads the nation with the most total career points, and that includes the men.

Know someone who has made an outstanding contribution to women's sports and want to see their story appear in Woman to Woman?

Call Ed Taylor at 886-8506

And she only played three years.

Most recently on the national scene, Donna Hetman has taken on the responsibility of coaching high school football at Taft High School in California. She is believed to be the only female to coach a boys football program.

But, we are witnessing more and more women being on the scene in the world of sports.

Women have tried desperately to break into major league baseball as umpires. While some of the minor leagues do employ female umpires, the big leagues frown on such a possibility. But, don't be surprised if you are watching a baseball game soon and a female umpire is introduced to the Women have made great strides in athletics and will continue to do so in future years.

There will always be some who do not support women athletes but they are looking from the viewpoint that sports were created for men. Women have had a definite impact on the game and continue to make an impact.

In the 15th Region, more and more females are calling high school basketball games. There are some men's basketball coaches who even frown on that. But, as years go by, women are getting more involved in the game, especially officiating because they have recognized that they can do just as well as

According to Assistant Commissioner Larry Boucher of the KHSAA, the one hope for female officials is the threeperson officiating crews. Boucher explained that if the threeperson crews are used more by high schools, men coaches would be more willing to allow a female official to call their game. Boucher views the possibility as highly probable in the Several reasons have been given on the national, state and local level for the wide acceptance of women in sports. One has been their ability to show the leadership that some male counterparts have failed to demonstrate. Honesty, integrity, the ability to communicate as well as leadership qualities have been a big plus for women coaches.

Other areas that women have made progress in are track and field, tennis, golf, soccer, karate and polo.

The future of women becoming more involved on a wider scale such as general managers, club presidents, field managers or even an owner is not too remote in this day and time. The female athlete has brought a whole new challenge in the sports world and will continue to do so because they truly have "come a long way".

donning whatever the mood — and their closets — offer.
On the campus at Prestonsburg Community College, nontraditional students favor blue jeans. Jackie, 54, who's returning to college to become a social worker, teams her jeans with pullovers. Pauline, 39, likes button-up shirts with her jeans. Pauline, who lost her job after years of employment, has returned to campus to return to the workforce.

Joyce, 49, says she would love to wear jeans during her hours on the campus, but she wears what's in her closets and that's the clothing she wore at her former job. After 26 years working at one company, Joyce found herself unemployed when the company went out of business.

Kim, 25, is most comfortable in jeans, sweatshirts and tennis shoes. Kim is returning to college after a short absence to get a degree in education.

Aileen, 52, also goes for comfortable apparel. Because she suffers from a back ailment and arthritis, Aileen wears sweatsuits instead of jeans. Aileen has returned to school because she wants to write and illustrate children's books.

Debbie, 30, wears sweaters with her jeans to beat the winter chill. Debbie feels that these days, a family needs two incomes just to get by. A mother of two, she's at PCC becasue she wants to teach. Debbie doesn't know it, but by layering her cothing, she's right in style. This year's hotest look on the national scene is layering. Layering begins with the thinnest layers, silk or cotton, close to the skin to allow the skin to breathe. Each layer of apparel added should be a little heavier than the last.

The first layer can be a body suit or a T-shirt. Top it with a sweater dress, a vest or partially opened cotton shirt. A vest can top a cotton shirt, but beware of topping that shirt with a sweater. Shirt collars tucked inside sweaters with crew necks are okay. No collars should take away from the lines of each layer — the layers need to be seen.

The next layer can be a blazer or an unlined coat. For a casual look, body suits look great topped with a vest and blazer teamed with walking shorts. Try adding another layer by tucking a brightly colored scarf inside the neck of the vest.

Want things a bit fancier, try using silk (or cotton with a decorative neckline) as the bottom layer. Top it with a partially opened blouse and pair it with a mid-calf length skirt. Trying using shades of cream and tan for a polished look.

As layers are added, keep in mind that you should be able to peel each layer off easily - from the outside in. Successful in Lexington is using a scarf to loosely tie hair near the nape of the neck. Brightly colored scarves can also be utilized as belts, adding another layer to the finished look.

Be careful. Laying can add pounds and make you look heavy. Use thinner fabrics. Try using fine knits instead of wool, and remember dark colors always have a slimming

Figure Type: Bottom-Heavy...

Goal: Balance hip heaviness by drawing attention to the top half of your figure.

Line: Choose silhouette lines that extend the shoulder area such as cap sleeves, shoulder pads, puff sleeves, or epaulets. Select horizontal design lines in the shoulder area such as wide collars and yokes. Add vertical design lines for the lower half of your figure.

Color: Wear lighter, brighter colors on the top half of your body only. Choose cool, dark or dull colors for the bottom half.

Design: Select designs that have fullness and details in the top such as ruffles, pleats, gathers and pockets. Wear bows, ties, scarfs and collars to draw attention to the face. Wear chains, beads or pins, on or near the bustline. Avoid patch pockets in hip area. Layered clothing will look good on the top of your body. Choose garments with enough wearing ease. Avoid tight skirts and pants that draw attention to the hip area.

Fabrics: Choose simple, smooth, dull-surfaced lightto medium-weight fabrics for skirts and slacks. Large prints or patterns, shiny fabrics, and textured fabrics should only be worn on the top half of your body.
