Abandoned mine to be sealed off at Martin

by Scott Perry
Times Editor

More than a half-century after it was mined out and abandoned, an underground coal mine on Stephens Branch near Martin may finally be closed.

Jim Rospo, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Prestonsburg, said Tuesday that bids are being sought this month to seal off three openings at the Stephens Branch site under the federal government's Rural Abandoned Mine Program.

Rospo said the project had been given a "priority two" status, designating the abandoned mine as a "hazard to life and property." That status is one level below the most urgent priority, which designates a project as an "extreme" hazard; and one step above the least urgent, which describes a project as being in need of "aesthetic" repairs.

Funds for priority one and priority two projects come through the federal abandoned mine program and are distributed to states for use on the most hazardous projects first. The Rural Abandoned Mine Program was established in 1977 by the federal Surface Mine Control Act and funds may only be used on mines abandoned prior to 1977. The program is financed through assessments on current mining operations of 35 cents per ton on surface-mined coal and 15 cents per ton on underground coal.

Potential contractors inspected the Stephens Branch site Tuesday, and Rospo said he expected bids for sealing the mine openings to be "somewhere around $25,000." Those bids are to be opened September 16.

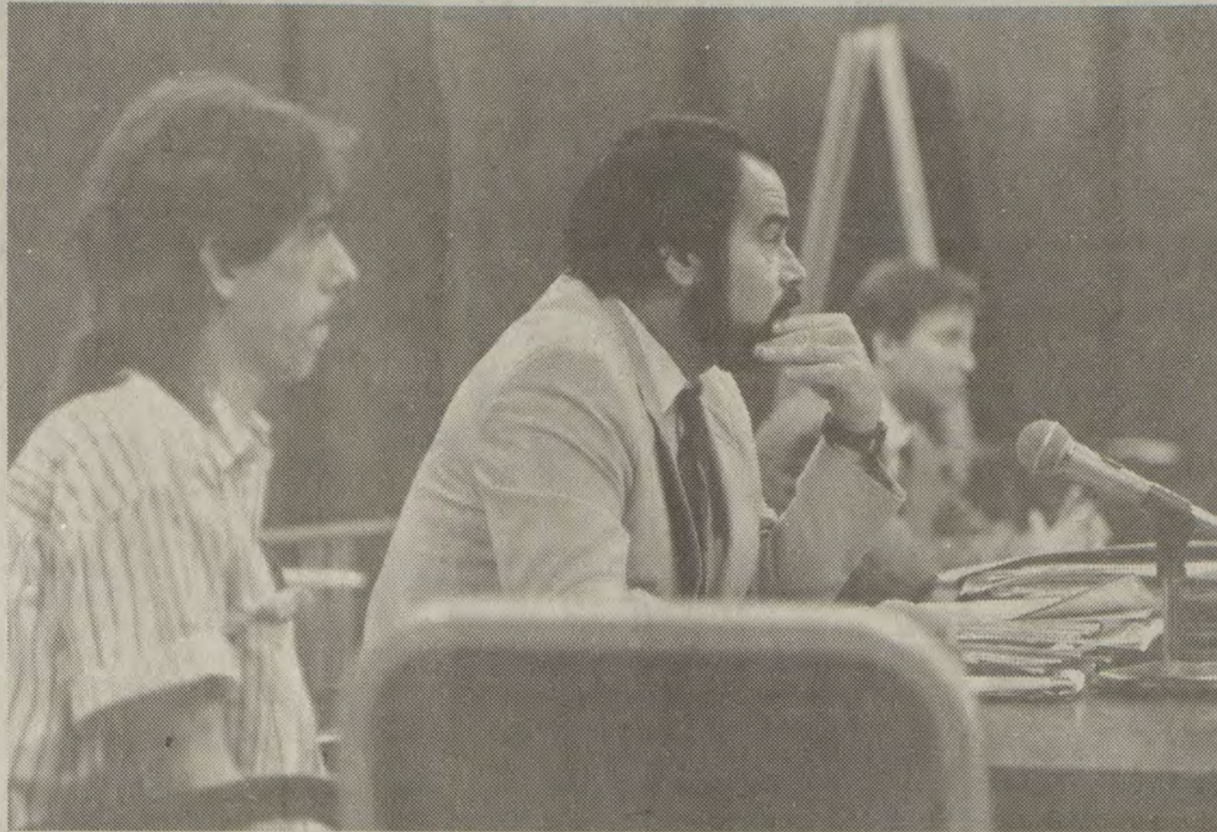

Jeff Speakes, a field representative for Congressman Hal Rogers, joined the tour of the mine site Tuesday. Speakes said Rogers had supported an extension in the Rural Abandoned Mine Program when it was scheduled to expire in 1991.

Allen Council resets meeting

Most everyone is not going to work on the last holiday of the summer, Labor Day, and that includes the Allen City Council.

Mayor Chris Waugh announced that the council has rescheduled its regular monthly meeting from September 7 to September 13.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at city hall and is open to the public.

Adams to be tried in Letcher triple murder case

Steve Adams, far left, the last defendant in charged in the 1987 deaths of Sy Shepherd, Judy Shepherd and Buster Shepherd of Letcher County, will be tried on three counts of murder November 1. Adams appeared before Floyd County Circuit Judge Harold Stumbo Thursday. Two other defendants, Carolyn Smith, 21, and Anthony Smith, 22, pleaded guilty earlier this year. The case has been moved to Floyd County. (photo by Susan Allen)

Parents gather to share concerns and frustrations

"You have the right to demand a free public education for your handicapped child. It does not matter how 'bad' the handicap is. The school cannot place the child on a waiting list. The child must be put in the public school program if this is what you want," from The Protection and Advocacy Division, Department of Public Advocacy note in explaining Public Law 94-142, Education of All Handicapped Children.

Parents of handicapped school children in Floyd County met Tuesday night at the courthouse annex to share their concerns and discuss their frustrations about inadequacies in their children's education.

Concerns about the educational needs of special needs children are not something new, Harmon Leedy, an outspoken parent advocate for handicapped children, told the group Tuesday.

"It's keep them out of sight, out of mind," Leedy said. "Special education is not a priority in the Floyd County school system. They provide babysitters. It is getting better, but it's got a long way to go."

About 30 people, parents and teachers attended Tuesday's meeting with hopes of banding together to make the education of special needs children a higher priority for school officials.

Several central office personnel also attended the meeting to listen to parents' concerns.

Parental rights of handicapped children, mainstreaming special education students and classroom facilities were three main concerns discussed during the meeting.

Several parents commented that they were never informed of their rights and suggested that parents of special needs children be made aware of those rights at the beginning of the school year.

"A lot of people are ignorant of what their rights are," one unidentified parent said. "I've learned the hard way."

Some parents were cautiously optimistic that things would improve for special needs students with a practically brand new school board.

But inequities from educational opportunities lost forever and the fear that speaking out would cause hardships for their children, continues to

Improprieties denied; bids sought for facility

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Although questions about about the legality of some of its actions, The Floyd County Public Properties is moving ahead with the construction of a stadium facility for a harness racing track near Prestonsburg.

The Properties Corporation has published a request for bids to be opened September 16. That cutoff date is about two weeks earlier than the date first announced.

Since its first meeting on August 20, questions concerning the legality of the corporation's actions have been raised, but the corporation's president, Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, has dismissed any claim of impropriety.

Stumbo said Thursday that the corporation's members have acted properly.

"I don't see no problem with it," Stumbo said. "As far as I know, we don't plan on having a meeting of any sort."

In response to questions about two different sets of inaccurate meeting minutes for the corporation's special meeting on August 20 and August 23, Stumbo explained that one set of minutes was a "draft" copy.

Rise in positive TB tests is no cause for panic

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Active cases of tuberculosis apparently are on the rise in Floyd County with the most recent case being reported in the Left Beaver area last month.

Although there are six confirmed cases of tuberculosis (TB) in Floyd County, compared to two at this time last year, Carrie Branham, nursing director for the Floyd County Health Department, said there's no need to panic.

"Just because someone tests positive doesn't mean they have the disease," Branham said Thursday. "A positive reaction to a skin test just means they've been exposed to the disease."

Left Beaver residents are concerned because of the large number of people who have been asked to come in to the health department for TB tests.

Branham said that a high number of people have been contacted because the individual who was confirmed to have TB had attended large church services recently.

"Last month two new cases were reported and close to 140-150 have been tested," Branham said. "Out of that number, we've had 15 people test positive, but have not been diagnosed with the disease."

If a person shows a positive reaction to a TB test, the next step is to check for symptoms of the disease: night sweats, coughing, fatigue, weight loss, hoarseness and chest pain.

If a person has symptoms of the disease, they need to have a chest x-ray and have their sputum tested.

Branham said that if a person is confirmed to have TB, she will go to their home and counsel the person and their family about the disease.

Persons with TB are advised to remain isolated in their homes until tests for the disease come back negative. Branham said there is no average recuperation time, but the infected person must take medication for at least two weeks. Three specimens of sputum are taken monthly and when two sputum samples come back negative, the person can resume

Lottery luck turns to woe for Floyd vet

A Melvin man who hit the jackpot in a Michigan lottery may have to use some of his winnings to pay off the federal government, which sued him this week.

Mack Cantrell, 67, is accused of getting over $3,000 in veteran's benefits that he wasn't entitled to because he won $100,000 in a Michigan lottery.

Cantrell said Thursday that his lottery windfall shouldn't have put him in hot water with the government because of the type of pension he was receiving.

"When you got a service connected disability, nothing bothers it," Cantrell said. "I turned all my federal tax in; I turned all my state tax in; I turned all my taxes in. They might have changed it, but they cannot take my service connected (disability pension) away from me. I know that."

The government is seeking to recover $3,785 and civil penalties of $5,000 to $10,000 per false claim.

Cantrell said he has discussed the lawsuit with an attorney.

Labor Day Schedule

Several Floyd County offices will be closed Monday, September 7, for Labor Day.

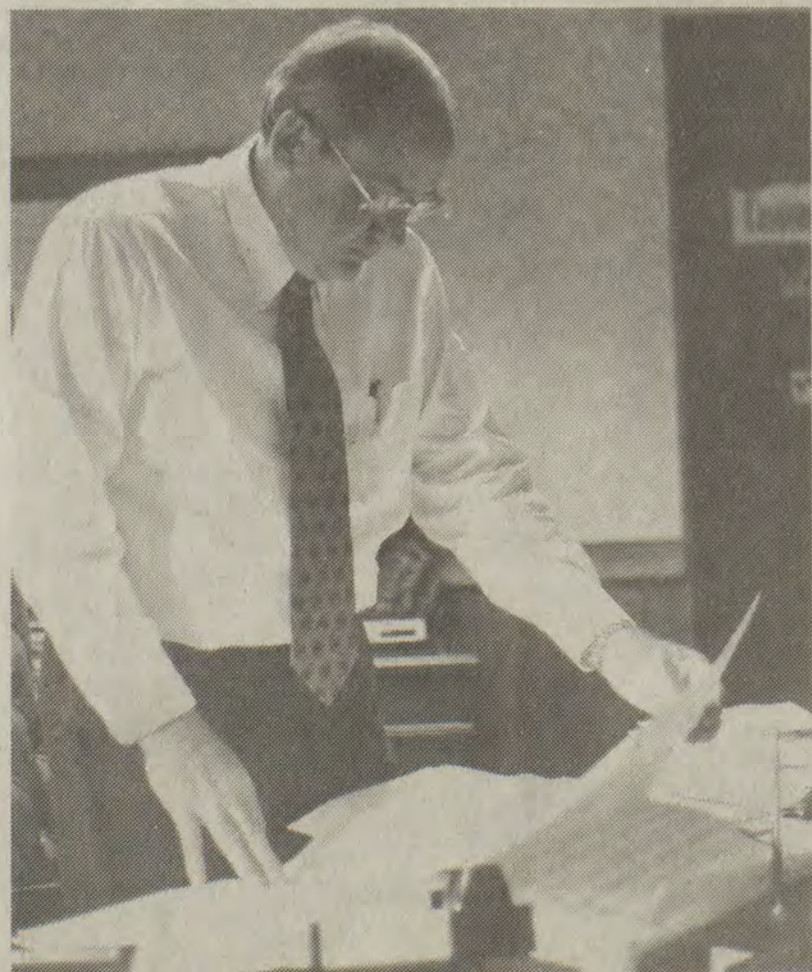

The County Court Clerk's office will close Labor Day, but will keep their regular Friday schedule. The clerk's office will stay open until 7 p.m. Friday.

The holiday closing for the County Attorney's office begins at noon Friday.

The District and the Circuit Court Clerk's offices will also close Monday.

The garbage collection schedule for Prestonsburg will change. No garbage will be picked up Monday. Garbage for Monday's residential customers will be picked up Tuesday, and Tuesday's will be picked up on Wednesday. Commercial pickup will resume Tuesday.

The Floyd County Solid Waste schedule will not change and garbage will be picked up on Monday.

Follow the leader

People put the 'W.E.' in Worldwide and earn company a shot at regional award

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

Worldwide Equipment is a fast growing company with generous pockets. So generous, that this year it will distribute more than $50,000 in cash, goods and time to individuals, to schools, and to charitable organizations.

That generosity and Worldwide's story of success gained the attention of state officials when the Eastern Kentucky Office of Economic Development nominated the company for the Governor's Cup Award. Last week, Worldwide Equipment (W.E.) became Kentucky's nominee for the 1993 Governor's Cup Award in the 100 employees or more category, beating out such major companies as Toyota.

The Kentucky nomination was submitted to the Southern Growth Policies Board, a southeast regional economic development organization with offices in North Carolina. The board will review nominees from the 14 states within its region and will name a Governor's Cup winner on September 21.

Criteria for the competition includes community involvement, the company's emphasis on workforce development, pollution control, expansion and the impact of expansion on the community.

Fred Troutman, Director of Communication Services for the state

That is evidenced by its training program.

Worldwide is headquartered in Floyd County and has stores in Middlesboro, Hazard, Lexington, Lowmansville, and West Virginia and Ohio. In the past two years, Worldwide has added nine operations in five states, and plans are underway to begin five additional locations. It Dotson believes the success of any company depends on hiring "good people," people who want to improve their abilities, and the company should invest in those people.

"We don't hire good employees. We hire good people and make good employees," he said.

In order to keep good people, companies must furnish a place for them to grow, or lose them to another company, Dotson said.

"Train them, expect them to win, reward them, and leave them alone," he said.

Worldwide is strongly involved in the communities where its branches are located, because the company considers themselves "good neighbors," said general manager Ron Hooker.

Worldwide's basic philosophy is to give a portion of its income back to the community.

"We can't take and take and take," said Dotson. "We have to give back to the community."

(See Worldwide, page three)

Economic Development Cabinet and a member of the Kentucky selection committee, was impressed with the success of Worldwide Equipment.

"Worldwide has been able to continue to grow and expand, despite any adverse marketing conditions," Troutman said. "And the company places strong emphasis on its people.

currently employs approximately 500 people, CEO Terry Dotson said, and will probably have around $135 million in sales this year.

Established in 1967 as Eastern Kentucky Mack, Inc., it became employee-owned and the name was changed to Worldwide Equipment in 1969 to reflect its acronym, W.E.

Parents

be the bond that ties together parents of handicapped children.

Delores Dingus, whose son has Down's Syndrome and has been enrolled in the school system 13 years, has recently been speaking up and out against the school system. Although she feels her son has lost his chance to reach his capabilities, she says it's not too late for other children.

"The only way to get anything done is to go to the board," Dingus said. "Nothing's been done for my child, but I'm tired of it. I won't be blackmailed into keeping quiet. It's too late for mine, he's lost 13 years. I've been promised he'll receive job training for the last three years and he's not received it yet."

"It took us 13 years, two months and two days to get a phone in his unit. It only took two trips to the (new) board to get it done. I think they are willing to work with us."

Dingus also expressed disdain that her son's classroom is still housed in a "temporary" mobile unit across the parking lot at Prestonsburg High School.

"It's like Rose Shepherd said at the (August) board meeting: 'Retardation is not contagious,'" Dingus said. "They keep our kids out in a trailer and they don't get a chance to meet other kids. Our kids could learn from normal children. If their whole world is handicapped, that's all they'll know. Why are handicapped children pushed outside? Every handicapped unit in the county is segregated."

"Children can accept our children," Dingus said. "It's the adults that can't accept them. Quit hiding them away. It's time they are mainstreamed. Get our children into the main schoolhouse."

Leedy agreed. "Go to the board and tell them you need a classroom even if it's necessary to shift the whole damn school around so our children can become part of the school," Leedy said.

Larry Jarvis, director of special education for the school system for the past two years, told Dingus that getting children out of trailers would be a "facility" matter that the school board would have to decide. He and other school personnel apologized about the past and vowed that things would improve. Jarvis added that two consultants, Toni Howard and Brenda Fish, have been hired to oversee special education classes in the system.

Jarvis said that there are over 800 special needs children in the Floyd County school system and 60 teachers and 30 aides for those children.

Barbara Burchett, who directs a parents' association for handicapped children, said that the only way to improve education for their children is to join together and fight for the student's rights.

Burchett said some schools did not have hot water in the change area to clean special needs children who must wear diapers.

School officials commented that there appeared to be a low parent turnout at the meeting with 800 special needs students in the school system.

"A lot of parents are afraid and tired," Dingus snapped. "(Administrators) talk to us like we're retarded. We've lived with the discrimination; the abuse; and the neglect for so long, it's destroyed us. Word got out that members of board were coming and my phone rang off the hook. People were telling me to tell them this and that. I tell you they're afraid. They're afraid if they say anything, they'll take it out on their children."

Also speaking Tuesday was Tallina Rayburn who asked school officials why parents have to keep reminding school workers about the law. She also said that her son's medical records were missing from his file in the central office.

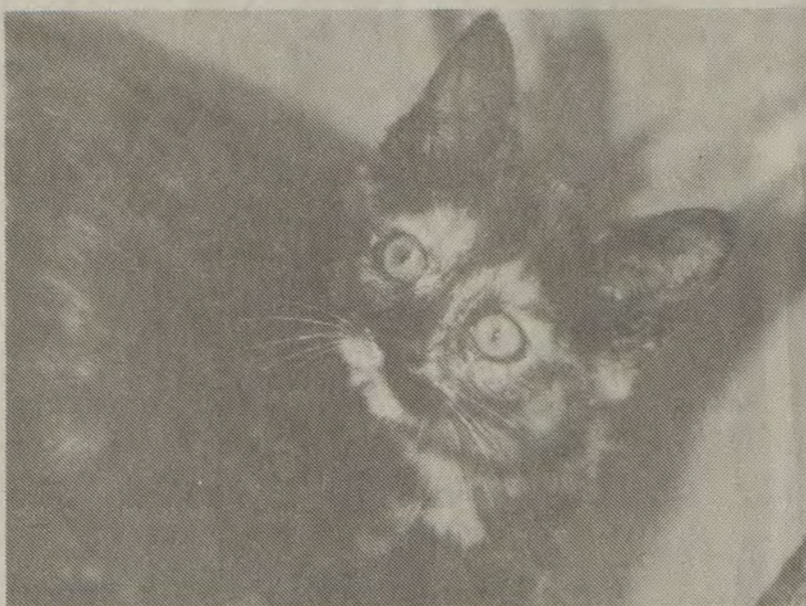

"How can someone just go in there and take my son's records?" Rayburn asked. "I'm tired of this. I can't take much more."

School officials declined to comment on Rayburn's question, citing confidentiality about individual cases.

A teacher who spoke at Tuesday's meeting, told the group she sees students who every day in "regular" classrooms have special needs. The teacher, who has a handicapped child, said that a lot of teachers don't recognize children who have needs because they are not familiar with children with handicaps.

One school employee said after Tuesday's meeting, that some school workers are afraid to tell parents their rights, because they know the services are not being provided.

The group agreed to address the Floyd County School Board with their concerns at the September school board meeting.

Some new, some old faces in leadership positions

In addition to the new teachers, aides, clerks, custodians, cooks, and drivers in the Floyd County School District this year, several new and old faces have assumed key leadership positions.

Jim Osborne was recently named Chief Assistant for Operations. Osborne, a former IRS agent and former employee with the state auditor's office, will oversee the district's "operations," which include food service, transportation, finance and facilities. Osborne is a Floyd County native.

Greg Adams has been named Director of Facilities. Adams, another Floyd County native, had spent several years in Ohio with the defense division of Brunswick Corporation. He will oversee construction, renovation and maintenance of the school system's buildings and grounds.

Terry Stewart took over as principal at the new South Floyd High School in mid-July. Stewart had been assistant principal at Prestonsburg High School.

Paul David Tackett was named principal at Osborne Elementary School in August. Tackett, who worked for the Floyd County School System before, had been serving as assistant principal at Magoffin County High School.

Karen Smith was named principal at Auxier Elementary School in July. Smith has taught in Johnson and Magoffin counties. This is her first job as a principal.

Floyd County also added several art and music teachers in the classroom this year, as well as adding assistant principals and counselors at the elementary level. The board voted to increase the number of teacher aides in the primary block.

social activities.

"We ask that anyone with the disease remain in their homes because it is an air borne disease," Branham said. "Someone is at risk if they are in an enclosed environment breathing the same air space for an extended period with someone with the disease. It can hit any part of the body. It can be passed by someone sneezing or coughing."

People who have a positive skin test, but are not found to have the disease, must take preventive medication for six months, Branham said, to boost their immune system.

For someone who has been exposed to a person who is infected with TB, but tests are negative, a second TB test is administered three months later because of the incubation period for the disease, Branham said.

In a case of drug resistant TB, where medication is not effective, Branham said state health officials will assist with having the person transported to Colorado, where the only remaining hospital exists that treats drug resistant TB patients.

"It's not only on the rise in Floyd County and Kentucky," Branham said, "it's all over the United States. We haven't been told anything definite (as to the cause). TB has been around for years and (we) thought we had it under control, but we're seeing more and more cases."

Branham urges everyone to have a TB skin test because they may have been around someone who is infected, but doesn't realize it. She said that Floyd County's six cases, which involve adults, are "spread out" all over Floyd County.

The Health Department operates a TB clinic but due to budget constraints, chest x-rays and sputum samples can only be taken every other month.

Persons do not have to wait to get further testing at the health department, Branham said, and persons should see their doctor as soon as possible after having a positive reaction to a skin test.

"A chest x-ray is the first step in ruling out that someone has TB," Branham said.

TB skin tests are available every day except Thursday at the Floyd County Health Department. The Mantoux test, in which a needle is placed just under the skin on the forearm and the injection creates a small bubble, is the most frequently used test at the department because it is more accurate, Branham said.

For more information call the health department at 886-2788.

Worldwide Equipment keeps expanding. The company just bought Lexington Mack in August and is negotiating to purchase another dealership in Kentucky. What makes it such a success? It's people, according to Chief Executive Officer Terry Dotson. Worldwide's staff are the major stockholders of the company. Pictured are staff at the Prestonsburg office. "Our employees have big hearts," Hooker said. "Our pocketbooks may not be as big as we want them to be..."

"But our hearts are in the right place," said Ken Wells, truck sales manager.

Worldwide Equipment has sent students to college, helped distribute Christmas baskets to the needy, fed the hungry, and put computers in schools. The company helped Mt.

Christian Academy acquire cabinets for the school's kitchen.

Worldwide contributes to Boy Scouts of America, the Kentucky Opry, Baptists Boys Camp, Jenny Wiley Theatre, the American Cancer Society, Adopt-A-Highway, Hospice, the United Way, the Gideons, ministerial associations and Alternatives, Inc. — just to name a few.

The company's major stockholders — its staff — donate time to raise funds for needy organizations or to do hands-on-labor.

"The best resource we have to share in the community is the actual talent and time of our people," said Vice President of Finance Randy Polk, whose wife Carolyn helped distribute about 350 food baskets at Christmas.

Tom Crider, regional parts salesman, leads a youth group at his church and is a member of the 4-H Council.

Hooker, who left the Prestonsburg office this week to manage the company's Cincinnati office, sits on the board of the Eastern Kentucky Horse Association.

Dotson is involved with Pikeville College, Mt. Christian Academy, the National Federation of Independent Business, the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce, Rockwell Corporation, Allied Signal, and Trans Financial Bank.

The company is also conscious of the role it plays in protecting the environment. Worldwide has been recognized by the EPA for its oil/water separation system, which recycles oil. The staff also keeps about 1,200 feet of riverbank, located at the rear of their building, clear of debris. Every time the Big Sandy raises and deposits garbage along the riverbank, "we clean it up again," Dotson said. "We just care — wherever we live. We just care," said Dotson.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Revolting developments...

by Scott Perry

Two more state legislators are accused of using their positions as public servants to enrich themselves, allegedly accepting $3,000 each for their support of the so-called Humana Bill.

That legislation removed state controls on hospital expansion in Jefferson County, but it was later ruled unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, the husband of a former governor is standing trial on extortion charges for allegedly taking kickbacks for himself and the state Democratic Party from companies seeking to do business with the state.

In Clinton County, another local school board member has been ousted for violating state laws pertaining to school personnel and in Magoffin County the whole board, its superintendent and its interim superintendent have been given the boot for one statutory violation or another.

Back in Frankfort, former members of the state parole board are under investigation; in Letcher County a circuit judge has pleaded guilty to wrongdoing; and in Floyd County local officials are making the rules up as they go while developing a convention center/harness racing facility.

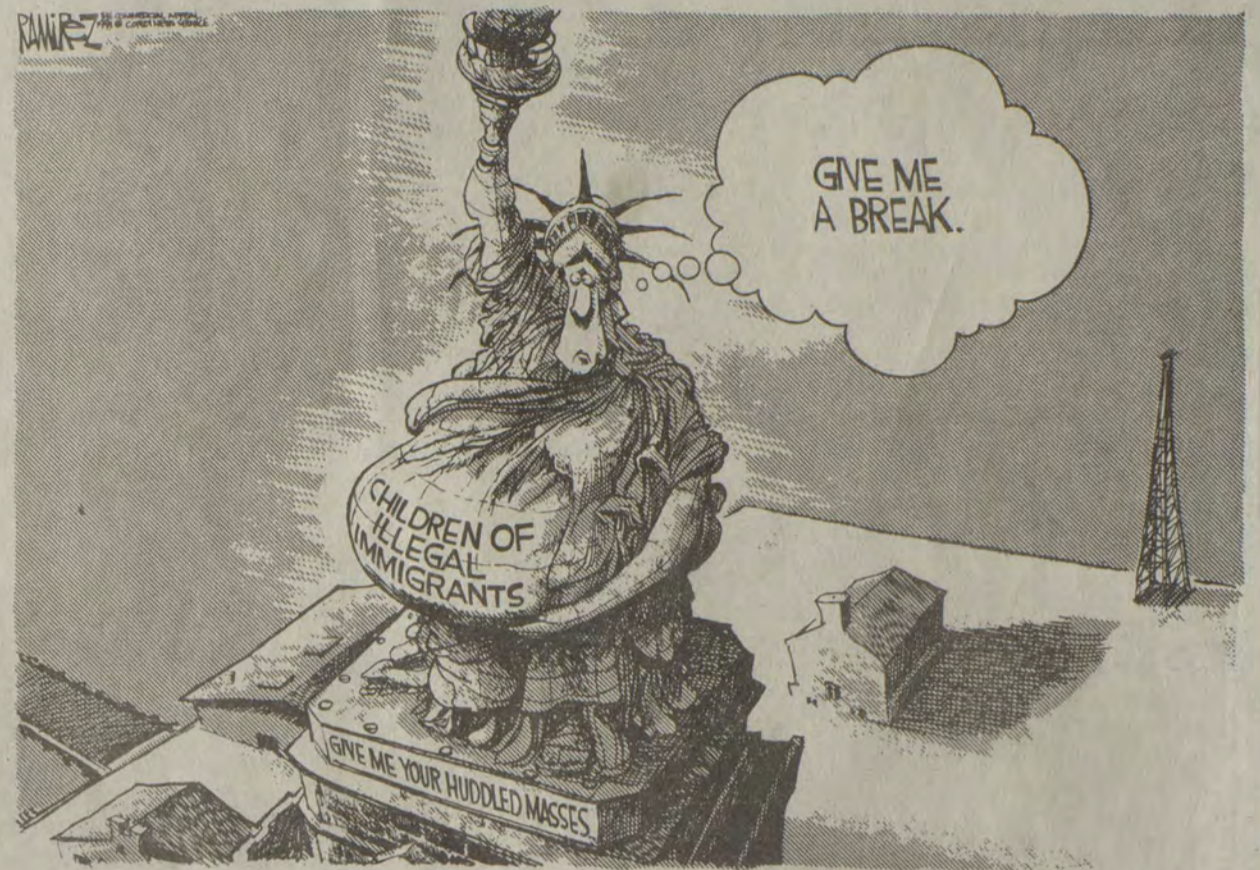

Every day there's something new and depressing from the world of politics to gag on.

Makes you wonder why we ever bother to pass laws in the first place, especially when those who are entrusted with carrying them through are the very ones who aren't to be trusted.

About the best thing you can say about the condition of Kentucky politics these days is that it would have to get better to die.

For that to happen, we'd have to be willing to swallow a spoonful of medicine, ourselves.

We reap what we sow.

Economy Watch :

Cliches about labor no longer work

by Kenneth Eskey

Scripps Howard News Service
WASHINGTON—Labor Secretary Robert Reich has been urging labor and management to stop acting like blood enemies and join forces for the good of the company and the economy.

It's a sound piece of advice, one that seems to work well in Japan and other nations with high-quality products and services.

The problem in this country is that American labor law tends to promote adversarial relationships between workers and managers, making it difficult for the rank and file to commune with their bosses except in a collective bargaining confrontation.

Much of the law was written in the 1930s, when companies and unions often were at each other's throats and the National Labor Relations Board was created to mediate disputes and keep the peace.

Now we have a situation in which companies are trying to compete for customers here and abroad by setting up committees of workers and managers to improve the quality of their products and services. Give the worker on the assembly line a voice in plant policy and she will do a better job, reformers contend.

Trouble is, a strict interpretation of the National Labor Relations Act sometimes prevents companies from dealing directly with workers—either because they might be trying to keep out unions, or because they might be trying to bypass unions already there.

Two recent cases illustrate the point and raise questions about what a company can or cannot do to draw workers into decision-making.

In a 1992 case involving Electromation, an electrical parts company in Elkhart, Ind., the NLRB ruled the company had set up "sham unions" in the form of action committees to discuss such topics as smoking and absenteeism. The ruling didn't outlaw all talks between workers and managers, but it failed to specify what talks might be legal.

This year the board ordered the Du Pont Co. to get rid of safety committees and a fitness committee at its Deepwater, N.J., plant because the committees were dominated by management and dealt with issues that should have been left to the chemical workers' union.

Brainstorming and suggestion boxes were acceptable, said the ruling, but such topics as incentives and awards were union concerns.

Whether the Clinton administration can clear away some of this regulatory debris remains to be seen. As a first step, the president has created a Commission on the Future of Worker/

Management Relations, headed by John Dunlop, a Harvard economist who served as secretary of labor in the Ford administration.

The 10-member commission, which includes two other former labor secretaries, Ray Marshall and W.J. Usery, will report back next year after taking a look at how the various rules and restrictions are observed or ignored in the working world.

Rules or no rules, it makes little sense to operate companies or government agencies as though the workers are an alien force and must be approached through intermediaries who speak their language.

Unions themselves are showing a more cooperative attitude toward resolving workplace issues, and the notion that a quality circle or a work team would be somehow subversive is hard to swallow.

In a competitive economy, the fate of the worker is tied to the fate of the company.

Plug this loophole

If self-appointment is legal, it shouldn't be. The state Office of Education Accountability says it was legal for Ted Kelley to appoint himself to an administrative job right before his contract for Lawrence County superintendent ran out.

OK. But so what? There's a difference between what's legal and what's appropriate. And by any standard, Kelley's slick maneuver was inappropriate. It typifies the kind of self-dealing and abuse of power that the education reform act was intended to stop.

The problem is that, when they passed the reform act, Kentucky legislators didn't take into account just how clever the practitioners of school politics can be.

The laws bar superintendents from hiring close relatives (something that was common practice in many districts before the law). But it never occurred to anyone to outlaw outgoing superintendents from hiring themselves. And in many Kentucky school districts, anything that isn't illegal is sure to occur.

The OEA's director, Penney Sanders, says that, because there's no specific prohibition, Kelley's action was legal. That leaves any decision in Kelley's case to the Lawrence County school board.

Certainly, that board ought to do something about Kelley. To do nothing is to reward his exploitation of a loophole in the law.

But even more certainly, the legislature needs to amend the reform act to prohibit this sort of self-appointment. One instance of this sort of cleverness is more than enough.

A few coal men

The National Resources Cabinet has settled its dispute with Benco Mining, and the $30,000 fine the state got Benco to accept will make an important point. In the familiar rhetoric of eschewal, Benco says it didn't violate the law. But by agreeing to fork over the money, Benco officials have made the situation perfectly clear.

At issue was whether Benco hid the ownership interest of two men who have been barred from coal mining: Perry Judge-Executive Sherman Neace and mountain mogul L.D. Gorman.

Apparently the company has provided enough evidence to satisfy the state that it has "severed the ownership and/or control links" with Judge Neace and Mr. Gorman's Black Gold Sales Inc.

What makes this case so important is not the $30,000.

That's hardly a good run of high grade coal. It's significant because it's a synopsis of what's been wrong with the Appalachian coalfields for generations. The political, economic, legal and social systems of the coal counties are densely interconnected. They are arrayed so as to serve the needs of an industry that has exploited the region, in order to reward the few.

There is a sickening tendency on the part of some to explain poverty and desperation by blaming the victims. Down deep, they harbor the view that Eastern Kentucky's poor actually deserve their plight, because they are too slothful, or too fatalistic, to do anything about it. If you run into somebody like that, give them a clip of the Benco story.

Johnny left some big shoes to fill, but Kelly might be the match

They came from the state capital; they came from every corner of the region; they came from every creek and hollow in Martin County; they came dressed in suits and working clothes—all to pay a final tribute and to say goodbye to a dear friend.

That county judge-executive Johnny Callaham was well loved and respected is a gross understatement. Few can remember anyone else who has played so vital a role in Martin County life. Even those who didn't necessarily agree with Callaham's policies admired the way he could get things accomplished.

The county received much during his tenure as county judge, new bridges, new roads and a philosophy that persistence really does work. Few county judges' records can compare to Callaham's accomplishments and it served as a great testament to see so many come to wish him a fond farewell.

Now that his son Kelly has been appointed to fill the vacancy left by Johnny's death, it is up to the fiscal court to work with Callaham to make sure that Johnny's projects can be accomplished. Kelly Callaham is well qualified for the position, for he has shown, with his work for the Martin County Ambulance Service, a drive for improvement and the tenacity that made his father such a powerful political force.

Johnny might have left some big shoes to fill, but Kelly might prove to be just the match Martin County needs.

What bureaucrats do on the way out

by Dale McFeatters
Scripps Howard News Service
If Bill Clinton and William Sessions weren't such hopeless out-of-towners, Janet Reno would never have had to break the FBI director's arm to get his attention and get him fired.

Washington has well-rehearsed, well-understood ways of firing people, and throwing the poor guy down the front steps is not one of them.

Any capital insider would recognize this scene:

In the morning, the undersecretary and his family gather in the Oval Office Rose Garden for a quick session with the president. A few days later, a photo arrives with the presidential scrawl: "To Elmer: We stood together on the tough ones. Thanks, to a great friend."

Meanwhile, back at the agency, Elmer and his co-workers gather in the conference room, where the table has been set with bottles, plastic glasses and a deli room, for some back-slapping and group photos.

Elmer, you see, has been fired. His co-workers know it, and most of the rest of Washington can make a pretty good guess.

Being out of work in Washington is not considered a disgrace. Administrations change, officeholders retire or are defeated, agencies are reorganized. Politics entails a certain amount of zealotry, and zealots tend to fire people. It goes with the Inside-the-Beltway territory.

As the apologetic hit man said in "The Godfather," "It's nothing personal; it's business."

And, short of the federal marshals leading him off in handcuffs, it really doesn't matter why Elmer was fired: he might have stridently and publicly defended a presidential policy that unbeknownst to him had quietly been reversed the night before; an old law partner of the president's wife might have coveted his corner office; the White House might have needed a live, if temporary, sacrifice to show it was cutting the bureaucracy.

In the interests of efficiency in Washington, resignations are frequently accepted before they are submitted.

Knowing this, a skillful and resourceful player generally keeps drafts of two letters in his middle drawer against the day when he must make a shove look like a leap.

The first is a resignation letter addressed to the president. In the course of thanking the president profusely for the opportunity to serve, Elmer says he has accomplished what he came to do and now it's time for him to seek new challenges.

The other is a letter from the president to Elmer, thanking him for his service, praising a few unspecified accomplishments and relaying best wishes from the first lady. If the letter is not too overweening, the president's chief of staff will see that it is typed up on White House stationery, signed by the president (or the steno who can forge his signature best) and sent back.

The photos and letters will be prominently displayed in Elmer's next office. Elmer may think the president is a hopeless creep and a menace to the republic to boot, but the worst he will say in public of his former boss is that the president is being "badly advised."

Who knows? The call may come again. Elmer knows the truth of the Washington adage: What goes around, comes around, and today's regulator is tomorrow's special pleader.

Besides, a broken elbow can be really painful.

Sentencing hearing for Collins Oct. 22

Sentencing is scheduled for October 22 for former Letcher Circuit Judge Larry Collins, who has pleaded guilty to one of five bribery counts against him.

Prosecutors have recommended that Collins serve five years in prison. Collins could have received a 20-year sentence if convicted on all five counts, but because of the guilty plea he could possibly receive a sentence as lenient as probation.

The recommendation for the five-year prison sentence came after Collins admitted last week in Fayette Circuit Court that he took money and marijuana from a man in exchange for promising to keep him out of jail. Judge John R. Adams allowed Collins to remain free pending sentencing.—The Mountain Eagle

Three arrested on drug charges

According to a police report, Billy J. Mullins, 41, of Pikeville, and Jimmy L. Looney, 19, and Freddie Ray Bowling, 25, both of Bowling Fork, were arrested following an anonymous tip received by the Kentucky State Police, Post 9 in Pikeville, August 25.

Following up on the tip, a large crop of marijuana was located and two subjects were arrested at Bowling Fork, according to a police report.

Officers stayed at the scene overnight and a third subject was arrested near day-break, the report said.

A total of 536 plants of marijuana was well cultivated and an estimated 70-80 pounds of processed marijuana were found, the report said.

The three men were lodged in the Pike County Detention Center and charged with cultivating marijuana (more than five plants) and trafficking in marijuana.

The case is still under investigation by the Kentucky State Police.—staff report

County mourns loss of John B. Callahan

A shocked silence would be the only way to describe the county's reaction to the sudden death of Martin County Judge-Executive John B. Callahan, 56, after a heart attack at Three Rivers Medical Center in Louisa.

Callahan, who served as county judge-executive since 1981, was trying for an unprecedented fourth consecutive term. He was probably one of the most influential judge-executives in recent history, and was well-respected for his ability to sway state leadership into granting Martin County funding for projects.

Governor Brereton Jones has appointed Callahan's son Kelly, 34, to fill the vacancy until a successor is elected in November.

"There is no one better qualified to fill the Judge's shoes than his son," Jones said in a press release Tuesday.

Callahan also announced at a press conference held yesterday that he will run in his father's place in November's general election.

"I will be on the ballot one way or another," he said. "We are looking for ways to challenge the state election laws that prohibit anyone from filing after August 3. If a challenge does not work, then I'll be on the ballot as a write-in candidate. I just want to be able to finish the projects that my father has started." —The Mountain Citizen

Keaton man drowns in farm pond

A Johnson County man drowned Saturday while wading in a private pond.

State police identified the victim as High Denver Goble Jr., 52, of Keaton.

"Witnesses at the scene stated the victim waded into the water and went underwater," a state police report said. "When he did not come back up, subjects at the scene pulled the victim from the water and attempted CPR but were not successful."

Goble was pronounced dead at the scene by Coroner J.R. Frisby.—The Paintsville Herald

KET produced program to air September 8

The Christian Appalachian Project's Little Red School Bus will be highlighted as a successful program that takes GED to the people during the nationally broadcast "GED—Get It!" which will air on KET, Wednesday, September 8, at 10:00 p.m.

The Little Red School Bus program will be one of seven inspiring stories featured during the hour long special that uses inspiration and comedy to encourage the 50 million American adults without a high school diploma to study for and take the GED tests.

The GED (General Educational Development) exam is a battery of five tests designed to measure the general knowledge one would receive from a high school education. Adults who pass the GED tests receive a certificate that is almost universally accepted as equivalent to a high school diploma, enabling them to go on to higher education or qualify for better-paying jobs.

In "GED—Get It!", Edward James Olmos, a Tony- and Emmy-winning actor and an Oscar nominee for his role in the film Stand and Deliver, and Terry Murphy, co-host of the television news series Hard Copy, provide viewers with information on the number of questions and the approximate time it takes to answer them for each of the five sections of the GED tests. Then a diverse group of celebrities perform in comedy sketches which illustrate questions from the test:

- Joe Piscopo, "Saturday Night Live" alumnus and star of the new movie "Sidekicks";

- Dave Thomas, founder of the Wendy's restaurants chain, star of his own commercials, and a new GED graduate;

- Tisha Campbell and Tichina Arnold of the Fox comedy series "Martin";
- Bill Bellamy and Kennedy, MTV Vee Jays; and

- John Michael Montgomery, with ties to central Kentucky, a country music singer with two straight Top 5 hits, "Life's a Dance" and the #1 country hit "I Love How You Love Me," who is also a GED graduate.

In addition to the celebrity skits, the program features a clip from the CBS series "Northern Exposure" and a music video by Reba McEntire.

"GED—Get It!" shows viewers that people from all walks of life have successfully passed the GED tests, including some whose GED diplomas have led to extraordinary achievement.

CAP's Little Red School Bus is one segment of several creative adult education programs across the country. They include corporate site-based GED study programs in California and Tennessee, a court-imposed GED program on prisoners in Florida, a program similar to CAP's in Arizona that reaches both cities and rural areas, and programs in Tacoma, Washington and Philadelphia which work with persons who are hearing—or sight-impaired, have physical or learning disabilities, or English is not their first language.

The Little Red School Bus operates in Magoffin County. It is a used 1980 GMC school bus converted into a traveling classroom. It can be parked in different parts of the county and offer preparation instruction for the GED to residents in the surrounding areas.

The traveling school room was conceived when a community center closed and left the adult-education program without a home, according to Mike Sanders, CAP's regional director. It answered two needs of avoiding the purchase and renovation of another building and of providing services to people in rural areas.

The bus is equipped with chairs and tables that fold down along the walls, a small library, a blackboard, workbooks, and other materials and posters.

Another traveling classroom is being prepared for use in Knott County.

A NOVEL IDEA

I has been my life's ambition to write a book. Not just any book, but a bestseller. A book that people ache to read so badly they can't wait for it to come out in paperbacks and end up buying it in hardback even though they really can't afford it.

Millions of titles have crossed my mind such as:

1. Compulsive, Neurotic, Manic Depressive, Paranoid, but Basically Happy.
2. An Ill Wind Blows: A Novice's Journey Into Flatulence.
3. Cheese...The Brie That Binds.
4. If You Say I Said It, I'll Say You Said It, and You Lied, or I'll Tell You Just Don't Say Who Said It.
5. Daddy Said it Doesn't Get Easier, but I was Hoping He'd Lied.
6. How to Polish Your Car with Ear Wax.
7. Put Your Brain on Auto-Pilot.
8. Use Your Mastercard to Pay Your Visa.
9. I Wanted to Have a Nice Day, but I'd Made Other Plans.
10. Middle-Aged Hair: Where Else Can it Grow?
11. Mag Wheels: Ways to Enhance the Resale Value of Your House Trailer.

Admittedly, some of the titles seem odd, but I don't think the subjects have been adequately broached by other authors. If they have, they certainly haven't been addressed in the way I would like to see them addressed.

For instance, "Use Your Mastercard to Pay Your Visa," is a topic of interest for many underpaid, unemployed people. Whether you know it or not, there is an art to robbing Peter to pay Paul, and as an American citizen you have the right to know who Peter is. Although the book hasn't come out yet I'll give you a clue - Peter's broke, too.

"I Wanted to Have a Nice Day, but I'd Made Other Plans," is another really NOW subject. So relevant to today's fast-paced lifestyles the book addresses how we need to unwind, but can't because we're afraid of being accused of having a good time while the people in Somalia are starving to death.

Title number ten, "Middle-Aged Hair: Where Else Can it Grow?" is my personal favorite. Just when a person thinks hair starts thinning out on the top of the head, it begins growing out of unsightly warts, moles, ears, noses and on the tops of big toes. Chapter Seven will deal specifically with why hair would want to grow on toes and its purpose there.

Obviously, Norman Mailer and other noted scribblers won't feel threatened by my works. All I want is to produce a good down-to-earth book that entertains and delights readers of all ages; a book that makes people think deep thoughts and prods them into probing into the meaning of life. If megabucks follow then all I can say is, "Whoopie!"

While money is not the main motivator, it does take extra cash to live the lifestyle famous authors become accustomed to living. Finding a quiet, secluded spot on the Mediterranean aboard a private yacht, or searching for precious solitude at a ski resort in preparation of your next blockbuster novel is expensive.

All famous authors have to wait for success to find them. Often times, success comes posthumously. If mine comes after I'm laid to rest, let my epitaph be: "I Told You I Was Sick". At least my husband knows that's an appropriate title.

Best of the best

When Prime Country stepped on stage in the finals of WVLK's "battle of the bands" to face an audience that supported another band in the competition, they were resigned to losing. But they were determined, win or lose, to "give 'em a good show."

They did.

The audience could not resist the group. The camaraderie of the group's members was contagious. So was the rhythm.

One woman in the audience began clapping her hands and swaying to the rhythm of the music. Her companion grabbed her arm to stop her, but Prime Country lead vocalist Barry Potter yelled out "Let that woman go!" and the audience was his.

The group took first place honors, competing against bands such as Scott Turner and Two Highways, which had a lead guitar player who performed with the late Keith Whitley, and Silverado from Georgetown.

Bands were judged on tightness of performance, original material, stage presence and audience enthusiasm.

To compete, the band first sent a tape to the radio station. From the 200 tapes received, the station selected twelve.

Then, the 12 bands competed in a live performance on August 24. Three were selected for the final competition.

As the top prize winner, Prime Country will be the opening act for some top name groups appearing in Lexington through WVLK (K93). On October 10, they will open for Dude Mowery, an up and coming country music performer. Mower's song "Hold on Elroy" is in the Top 40.

Other performers include, Doug Supernaw, known for his "Ladies Like Reno," and Confederate Railroad, whose hits include "Queen of Memphis" and "Trashy Women."

The band has also entered the True-Value Country Showdown in the Virginia-West Virginia competition. They won in the area competition and will compete in state competition on September 11. Last year, they won the Kentucky-Tennessee title in the contest.

The band is diversified. Potter is from Prestonsburg. Greg Garrett, the lead guitar player who also sings harmony, is from Calf Creek. James Hall, who plays rhythm guitar, mandolin and sings harmony, is from Johnson County. Bob Wooten, bass guitar player, is from Flat Gap. Vernon Lewis, the drummer, is from West Virginia.

With all that distance between them, how do they get together to practice?

They don't — at least not very often, said Garrett, who works 15 hour days in a coal mine. Their practice sessions are their performances. They perform each Friday night with the Full House Band at Center Stage.

Despite all the competitions the group has won, the members are humbled by the accolades they have received.

"It's important we don't take it for granted," said Garrett. "God gave us our talent. He could give it to someone else."

John Michael Montgomery will perform in Jenkins

John Michael Montgomery, whose single "I Love The Way You Love Me," hit No. 1, will be appearing at Jenkins High School in Jenkins, Sunday, September 19, at 7 p.m. Tickets are $6/$8 and are available at the Mountain Heritage Festival office or by phone at (606)633-8034.

John Michael is an extraordinary performer whose dynamic vocal style and high energy are reflected on his Atlantic Records about CD. John Michael Montgomery is a sometimes mellow, sometimes rowdy collection that showcases his unique mix of classic country sounds and '90s savvy. The debut single, "Life's A Dance," finds him serving up gentle, home-spun wisdom with a voice steeped in tradition and believability.

This is one not to miss.

Well, we did it, and we're proud.

We have boldly gone where no man has gone before...into the final frontier, the unknown, beyond the black hole and into the realm of the fourth dimension.

We switched off the TV.

Yes, for one day a week, my family has chosen to go cold turkey. From dawn to dawn the sets are unplugged, forcing us to live by our wits and to (gasp) spend time together as a family.

One small step for a man, one giant step for a TV junkie.

Two of these no-TV nights have come and gone and, the best I can tell, nobody in the family has noticed but me.

My six-year-old son, who returned from vacation with a tattoo suggesting he was "Born To Play," spends most of his daylight hours attempting to disprove the advertising claims of detergent companies who promise that their product will remove any type of stain.

My thirteen-year-old daughter, meanwhile, has used the no-TV days to further her pursuit of the world record for non-stop conference calling.

Instead of seeing how many people they can cram into a phone booth, my daughter and her friends see how many different phones they can tie up at one time.

At last count, I had lost count.

The original thought behind these TV-less nights was to bring the family closer together by conducting family-style conversations on the momentous occasions in our individual lives.

The first week, that approach was met with a resounding... "geez, do we hafta?...," and I haven't seen any of them since.

So this week I was left to confront the TV addiction alone...probably because I, alone, am addicted to the thing.

Maybe I'll have some company when the days grow shorter and outside play is restricted or when our phone lines melt down.

Until then, I'll fight the good fight with every ounce of willpower I can muster or, at least, until I can find where they hid my remote control.

SOAP UPDATES

ALL MY CHILDREN: Tad walked in as Ted and Dixie were kissing. Laurel fainted when Hayley revealed the "dead man" asked her to search for a woman in Pine Valley. ANOTHER WORLD: Paulina ignored Rachel and Jake's urgings not to become more deeply involved in Ian's life. Hank won custody of Tommy and proposed to Iris, with one condition. Carl admitted to Ian he had arranged for both his bail, and the high-priced lawyer to defend him. Rachel told Paulina she won't allow Ian to spoil her memories of Mac. Amanda, unaware that Rachel was forced to go to the opera with Carl, assumed she was seeing him to learn more about Ian. With Donna on Grant's side, Vicky realized she could only escape by pretending she cut all ties to Ryan. Later, Donna and Grant learned Vicky and Steven were missing. Wait To See: Carl's domination of Rachel grows stronger.

Later, Jack comforted Stephanie, and admitted he loved her more than he had loved any other woman. Kevin was upset when Macy slipped off the wagon. Wait To See: Brooke deals with a new take-over complication.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Bo rescued Billie from Malko by claiming she was his girlfriend. Kate was intrigued to learn Austin's mother had abandoned him as a child. Vivian unsuccessfully tried to get Lawrence to take Carly to Paris before Bo learned she was alive. Wait To See: Victor puzzles over Kate's rejection of his proposal.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Karen confessed her history of sexual abuse to Sonny who used it to draw her closer to him. After learning from Felicia and Mac that Crystal's funeral expenses had been paid by a young man, Jagger wondered if his brother, Mike, might attend the services. Bobbie told Sean that Jessica was pregnant. Jessica then pressured Sean to tell Tiffany the news. Ned left for the Bahamas on business. Scotty dropped in at Katherine's hotel in Montreal, almost catching her with her lover. Steve, Audrey and Felicia waited together as the jury deliberated Ryan's fate on assault charge. Wait To See: Monica may have an unexpected ally.

LOVING: To their chagrin, Stacey and Shana wound up in jail after pulling a fire alarm to interrupt Leo's and Ava's evening together. After Ava realized how much Leo truly cared for Shana, she bailed her out, and then broke off with him. Gwyn's jealousy raged when Stacey called Buck to bail her out. Ally learned that Cooper had taken Tyler to the Alden mansion where Isabelle sternly told her, she (Ally) was most definitely not welcome! Buck was disturbed by a recurring dream of a woman he couldn't identify. Clay planned to learn Tess' true intentions toward Trucker. Wait To See: Clay gets a surprise visitor.

Wait To See: Nora is forced to make a difficult decision.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Victor agreed to give Hope away at her wedding to Cliff. Paul's thoughts about his daughter, Heather, were interrupted by Lauren's report that her wonderful evening with Scott didn't make her happy. Hodgkins told Cricket he planned to see the seniors evicted, and warned her to "expect the unexpected. Jack told Jill, he was sure the judge would name him head of Newman Enterprises. Victoria saw Cole and Nikki at Gina's. At first she assumed they met to talk about her dating him, but later began to ponder what other reasons they had for being together. FLOWER MAGIC—To extend short stems on flowers, insert the stem (freshly cut at an angle) into a plastic straw. Next, cut the straw to the desired length. Make sure that the stem of the flower is below the water line in the vase. Robin N., St. Joseph, Mo.

RUST RINGS—I solved a friend's problem very inexpensively. She complained that her husband's shaving cream can marked up the bathroom vanity. I suggested using a coaster to put under the can. It can even be color-coordinated with the bathroom to add a pretty touch. Maria T., Los Altos, Calif.

CARD TRICK—Why put a card on top of a gift? The card covers part of the beautiful gift wrap.

At a birthday or wedding, it is obvious whom the gift is for, so you don't have to put on an envelope with a name on it. It should be placed on top of the tissue inside the box. This way, it won't be lost when opened. Cards that are taped can come off when lots of boxes are stacked and bounced around. Linda W., Aiken, S.C.

FRANKLY, OUR CANCER CARE UNIT WOULD RATHER NOT TREAT YOUR CANCER. WE'D RATHER PREVENT IT.

We're working very hard at doing just that. Probably the greatest advances in the fight against cancer are being made in learning how to prevent certain types of cancer.

That's why you may have seen our CancerCare staff in the produce section of your grocery store talking about our "Eat Smart" program and helping shoppers choose high-fiber, low-cholesterol foods. Because the American Cancer Society says that diet plays a huge part in preventing many types of cancer, like cancer of the colon.

It's why you'll find us in area high schools teaching students and faculty about the importance of breast self-examination. More than 60 percent of all breast tumors are discovered that way.

It's why you'll find us in area schools teaching children how to lower their risk of cancer through a school-based prevention curriculum called Project CHOICE.

And why you'll find us so involved in stop-smoking classes, participating in the Great American Smokeout, and even "adopting" folks as part of the program, just to give them our support and encouragement.

Reality is, King's Daughters' Medical Center is well prepared to treat cancer. But we'd rather put our energy into preventing it. If you'd like more information on cancer prevention or our services, please call (606) 327-4535.

THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH, OR IT'S MY PARTY AND I'LL CRY IF I WANT TO

Well, kids, I'm about to celebrate yet another birthday, so naturally my every waking moment has been brightened by one overwhelming happy thought:

I'M GOING TO DIE!!!
Oh, sure, I used to look FORWARD to birthdays. I'd wait in breathless anticipation for them, because each one meant I'd passed another milestone and moved one step closer to the wonderful (I thought) world of adulthood.

Driving age. Voting age. Drinking age. Car-insurance-rates-go-down age.

But those days are over. Now I'm just one year closer to becoming an organ donor.

I'm not really depressed about it or anything. I'm just THINKING about it a lot. Questions swarm my brain like call girls at a congressional convention.

HOW will I go? WHEN will I go? WHERE will I go? Will it hurt? Will I know I'm dead? Will I see that bright light like all those people on Geraldo and Rescue 911? Will it be quick, or will I keep fading in and out like John Travolta?

And of course the big one: Will I be able to see my own funeral?

That'd be keen, because not only would I finally have the opportunity to see what people REALLY think about me, but, if you're not all broke up about the person who kicked off, funerals are a great source of free entertainment.

One of the best times I ever had was when my college roommate Jim Bob's maiden great-aunt Lucille died. Aunt Lucille wasn't exactly what you'd call the most popular member of the family.

I had never met her, of course, and Jim Bob hadn't seen her since he was three years old, so we both pretty much just went for the eats and the show. We especially had a good time watching the whole family pretend they weren't really glad the old biddy croaked, and of course the fact that Aunt Lucille only died because she mistook a bottle of Dexamtrix for her nitroglycerin tablets didn't do much to dampen our enthusiasm.

Anyways, it started out pretty tame. First, they threw a wake for her, a time-honored family tradition which I've never really understood, mostly because the LAST thing the guest of honor IS is "awake." But they had the wake for her and all the festivities took place at Aunt Lucille's house and of course they said it was because "she'd want it that way," but Jim Bob said it was because no one in the family wanted their OWN houses wrecked, but it all worked out anyhow because Aunt Lucille had been filthy rich and her house was so big you could fit two or three million people in it, which is about how many showed up because they were all itchy to make sure they were in the will.

Now, all the action was in what they called the "great room," which was all decked out with flowers and wreaths so that it smelled just like the perfume counter at Sears, and there in the middle of the room was Aunt Lucille laid out in her Sunday best and about three coats of Rustoleum right on her own dining room table, and my what a lovely centerpiece she made. And everybody in the place was really boozing it up and lying through their teeth about how much they were gonna miss the old bat until pretty soon, everybody in the family got really toasted and started to go on and on at great length and greater volume about how, depending on which side of the room you were standing on, Aunt Lucille had either been the salt of the Earth or the meanest old #$@*! battle axe who ever lived, and there was much rejoicing until everybody was ready to pass out and be driven and/or carried home.

The next day at the funeral, everybody looked, fittingly, like death warmed over. It promised to be a solemn event, as funerals usually are, but things quickly livened up for me when the singers turned out to sound like a bag of cats in heat and did a fingernails-on-chalkboard rendition of "Precious Memories" that went on for 26 verses. Then of course there was the obligatory weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth by all the people who didn't remember what they're said the night before and the loudest weeper, wailer and gnasher of all was Aunt Agnes, Lucille's estranged sister who hadn't spoken to her in 30 years because they were so much alike they hated each other's guts.

Agnes made a big production of it, and she was crying and screaming and the like, and she went over to the little pedestal where the casket was set and she bent over and kissed Lucille on the forehead and took hold of her hands (me and Jim Bob figured it was because she was trying to steal her rings) and she begged her sister to forgive her for all the years they had been apart. And just as Agnes reached a crescendo of moanin' and groanin'... the casket tipped over. And before anybody knew it, Lucille... cold... dead... rigor-morted Lucille... was lyin' on the floor... on TOP of Aunt Agnes. And the moanin' and the groanin' turned into the GOD-AWFULLEST SCREAMIN' YOU EVER HEARD IN YOUR LIFE!!!

The rest of the proceedings went pretty quiet after that, but I'll always remember that day as the highlight of my young existence.

So yeah, I hope that someday I DO get to see my own funeral. The hearse'll probably have a flat and I'll be late, of course, as everyone had predicted, but I hope I don't miss out on any of the fun.

And yeah, birthdays are pretty depressing, but my friends and family usually cheer me up with a nice little party. Only this time around, now that I think about it, I hope that instead of that party, they throw me a wake. And maybe, just maybe, I can start to look forward to birthdays again because somewhere, someday, somebody else'll have an Aunt Lucille kick off and they'll invite me over for the show.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

Among the births recorded in July: a son, to Mesa, Ariz., teacher Janice Burke, delivered on the floor of her fifth-grade classroom shortly after the beginning of a math test; a daughter, to St. Joseph, Mich., inmate Jennifer Zandarski, delivered in a jail cell in which she was housed after being accused of stabbing her boyfriend; and a son, to a 16-year-old El Paso, Texas, softball player minutes after she left her position at third base during a state tournament in Abilene.

THE CONTINUING CRISIS

The Associated Press reported in July that the prestigious Hughes, Hubbard and Reed law firm pressured its lawyer Allan Gerson to leave the firm prematurely in June so that it could take on as a client Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi. Gerson was a stumbling block because he was representing the family of a victim of Pan Am Flight 103. Because Libya is alleged to have had a role in blowing up the flight, representation of both the family and Gadhafi would have been viewed as a conflict of interest.

In July, the government of Thailand started a hospital program to treat elephants addicted to amphetamines. The elephants were given the drugs to make them work harder and to withstand injury in hauling logs out of jungles.

In a July article on Northern Ireland's aggressive tourist industry, Newsweek reported that despite its long-running, bloody civil war, the country has a crime rate that is one-fourth that of Sweden and a murder rate one-15th that of Washington, D.C.

In the first seven months of the year in New Delhi, India, at least 58 people were killed in bus-related accidents. Officials attribute the problem to increased bus competition following government deregulation: Bus drivers frequently ram buses through crowded intersections to beat competitors to bus stops. The government's only remedial program so far has been a drivers' test that only a few of the several thousand drivers showed up to take and which only one driver passed.

Russian scientists investigating unusually high levels of radiation at a children's camp in Siberia announced in July that they believe the source is bats that feed from Lake Karachai (where a chemical plant dumps its wastes) and then hang out at the camp.

In July, zoning officials in Virginia Beach, Va., began investigating neighbors' complaints against Anthony and Teresita Rodriguez, who have turned their modest home into a church and built an air-conditioned chapel in the backyard, where only a woodshed was authorized. The Rodriguezes said God told them to build the chapel so that Teresita could conduct healing services. As many as 50 people at a time come from as far away as California and Canada to attend, and the Rodriguezes' neighbors complain that noise from the services lasts until 2 a.m. and that all parking places along the street are occupied by worshippers.

The Syracuse Herald-Journal reported in January that its telephone hotline, featuring excerpts of presidential debates last fall, was successful except for one glitch: Ross Perot's voice sometimes hit a pitch that mimicked a certain telephone tone that automatically shut down the system.

MORE BAD TIMES FOR BODY PARTS

In July, Donald Wyman, 37, gained national notoriety when he rescued himself from underneath a fallen tree near Punxsutawney, Pa., by amputating his own leg at the knee with a small pocket knife and then driving for help. A few days earlier, a 31-year-old Tacoma, Wash., man cut off his arm and nose with a bread knife because he was depressed. And the family of a 15-year-old boy in Elkton, Md., is suing the county board of education for $3 million because a dog stepped on the boy's groin before school one day, resulting in the need to amputate a testicle.

THE WEIRDO-AMERICAN COMMUNITY

After reclusive retiree Jack D. Crain passed away at his modest trailer home in Watsonville, Calif., in May, 4,000 model car kits dating back to the 1950s, still in their original unopened packages, were found stacked floor to ceiling in all rooms. Collectors were ecstatic at the prospect of being able to purchase so many discontinued model lines.

I DON'T THINK SO

The chief Vatican spokesman, Joaquin Navarro-Valls, in a June public statement said the "real culprit" in the Catholic-priest sex scandals is a "society" that is so "irresponsibly permissive" that it can induce even priests to commit grave moral acts.

JENNY WILEY GOLF ASSOCIATION TO MEET...

The Jenny Wiley Golf Association will hold its next regular meeting on Tuesday, September 14 at May Lodge. The newly-formed association is looking for perspective members and invites all interested persons to attend the meeting.

"We want to do some things at the golf course," said Teddy Hall, who is a member of the association. "We're looking at several projects that we want to do like fix some of the greens, trim some trees, Marshall the greens."

The association is hoping to hold a late-September tournament. Other items on the agenda are to turn in project lists as well as organize association Marshalls.

So, if you are a avid golfer and want to be part of a local association, then join the others at May Lodge on September 14.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY...

A good friend of mine, Arlen Shepherd (we'll not tell the age) recently celebrated his birthday and I want him to know that I wish him the best.

We get a lot of requests for birthday wishes and we enjoy listing them in this column. If you know a local or out-of-state athlete or sports fan you want us to wish a happy birthday to, call us or write to us.

BAD DREAM...

It seemed so real. I couldn't imagine anything worse. It was just more than I could stand. But, nevertheless, I was convinced it was true. The Los Angeles Dodgers traded Eric Davis back to the Cincinnati Reds. I'm glad that I awoke to find it was only a dream — a bad one.

But the former Red did get shipped to Detroit to play for the "Main Spark." Have you noticed his credentials over the past six years? He was an outstanding baseball player until Marge Schott and he odd-manned over his contract as to whether he would get $3 million or less. Eric won on the toss, but his play has gone done drastically. I wish him success in Detroit because if he is successful, they will keep him.

But there is another fear — Eric becomes a free agent next season and with the crazy things that Reds General Manager Jim Bowden has pulled, he is liable to make my nightmare come true by signing Davis as a free agent. Could it possibly happen? Naaaah! I don't think so.

U OF L VS UK...

The game between the Cardinals and Wildcats has been changed again and this time CBS will get the game on the tube. The game was moved from a December 1 date to November 27. It will be a tough opener for both teams.

CBS will also air the Kentucky versus Indiana game in December. The Cats will play seven of the games that Jefferson-Pilot will carry this season. ESPN will air three Wildcat games.

Should be a great year!

I APPRECIATE...

All the phone calls and comments from fans in the area and even out-of-state that tell me that they read my column all the time and enjoy it. I really appreciate all of you.

I've gotten calls from as far away as California and from the states of Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio. Letters have come from the states of Texas, Louisiana, Ohio, Illinois and New York.

I try to make my column as informative as I can and I do use my opinions a lot, but I also use facts to go with it.

I really enjoy writing my column, but sometimes I am lost for words. Local items are a concern to me and I have voiced my thoughts on different subjects, but only because of our kids here in Floyd County. They're great!

Until Wednesday, have a safe Labor Day weekend and be good sports.

Rebels hope to make others take notice as Neon comes to town

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Allen Central coach Glenn Reeves realizes that his Rebel football team is one game closer to a playoff berth this season after they edged the Elkhorn City Cougars 13-12 on the road. Coach Reeves believes that it is conceivably possible for a team to win four district games and make the playoffs.

"It may be hard, but it is possible," said the first-year coach at Allen Central earlier in the season.

Allen Central will face a team that has developed a new look: Fleming-Neon has abandoned the "side saddle" offense that was the brainchild of Jack Hall who has left the Fleming-Neon program. Instead, the Pirates are sailing under the guiding hand of Steven Holbrook, who runs the wishbone offense most of the time.

"They like to run the wishbone," said Coach Reeves. "They are a quick ballclub. They're a strong ball team as well. They were picked second in the district after Pikeville."

"If we stay healthy and play smart and, if the kids will listen to the coaches and do their techniques right, we'll be in there."

Neon comes into Allen Central as runner-up in last year's district race and the Pirates are considered to be the second-place team again this season. But starting off the season with three conference games doesn't bother Reeves.

"I rather start off with conference games," he confessed. "We're trying to build some team goals here at Allen Central and one of those goals

P'burg Blackcats must guard against emotional letdown against Raiders

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Prestonsburg will host the South Floyd Raiders tonight in high school football and when you look at the game on paper you probably would draw the conclusion that this is "no matchup."

After the way Prestonsburg handled 3A Clay County last Friday night, coupled with South Floyd's opening setback at Betsy Layne, some probably could draw that conclusion.

But Prestonsburg coach Bill Letton guarded against an emotional letdown.

"There better not be one," he said following the Clay County game. "We are going to come out Monday (this past Monday) and work just as hard as we did for Clay County. We control only what we do — not the other team or the heat."

"Awesome" is the word for the way the Blackcats performed against Clay County last Friday night. It was their defense that kept the Tigers on defense for the most part of the evening. And it was their defense that limited All-State, Mr. Football candidate De-Shea Henson to only 16 yards rushing.

The "totally awesome" defense was led by Larry Morris' 11 tackles and Robbie Risner's eight. Morris and Risner teamed together for a safety against Clay County.

Car show gearing up for Red, White and Blue Days at Martin

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

If you are like me and enjoy looking at old cars that have been beautifully restored, then you can look forward to one of the premier car shows in Eastern Kentucky: the First Guaranty National Bank's sixth annual Red, White and Blue Car Show that will be held October 16.

A record-number 110 cars were lined up in the bank's parking lot last October. This year's registration is expected to top that with car owners from around the tri-state area motoring in to display their antique cars.

The owners will arrive early to put the finishing touches on their entrys. During the show, past trophies will be displayed, along with photos of previous shows that the winning cars were entered in. Excitement will fill the air in anticipation as to who will take home the awards.

David Smith's 1934 Chevy Sedan was picked the Best of Show last year. Locally, George Barnett took one first place with his 1931 Coupe and also won a first place with his Hudson Hornet.

Still on the local scene, Gary Frazier, assistant superintendent of schools, placed first with his 1957 modified Chevy and took second place with another 1957 Chevy.

Pam Justice was a first-place winner with her 1990 Mustang and Travis Miller walked away with the Best Interior with his 1965 Mustang.

Even boats win awards. Larry Jones' boat won Best Engine (boat motor) in last year's events.

Besides the enjoyment of looking at some of the finer cars in the area, prizes will be given away during the day at the bank's parking lot. Entertainment also will be provided.

So, for a great time of just strolling the parking lot looking at the fine cars and taking in the entertainment, be sure to mark you calender on October 16. More information will be forthcoming.

McKinney says Betsy Layne is improved ballclub

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

When the Phelps Hornets and Betsy Layne Bobcats take to the football field tonight, it will be a game not only between two teams with similarities, but it will be a game between two coaches who are good friends.

Phelps at Betsy Layne

Hornets - 0-1
Bobcats - 1-0

"John (Derossett) and I are good friends," said Phelps coach Bill McKinney. "He has done an excellent job with the program at Betsy Layne."

Not only are the two good friends but both are currently in their second season at their respective schools.

The Hornets finished 5-5 last year and just missed the playoffs thanks to the Wheelwright Trojans.

"The loss at Wheelwright is what kept us out last season," said the good-natured McKinney. "It was a good game."

Derossett's team will be coming off a first game victory over South Floyd and would love to make it two in a row before the home crowd.

Phelps suffered a big loss to interstate rival Matewan, W. Va. when they dropped a 65-28 loss this past Friday night.

"We sort of got blown out early," McKinney said.

The Hornet's coach said that the way the team is playing made the difference against Matewan.

"We're going with 11 players both ways," said the Hornets' mentor. "We will play 11 on offense and then 11 fresh kids on defense. It has worked well for us."

"We probably have better defensive players on the sidelines than in the game. All our kids can flip-flop and go both ways. It keeps us fresh all the time."

McKinney's Scouting Report...

McKinney said that Betsy Layne is a much-improved ball team from the films he has seen.

"I saw them on film and they have a lot of good points. They have definitely improved from last year. They have some very strong people that we have to key on."

"John has done an excellent job of keeping his team healthy and going," said McKinney. "That can be attributed to the weight room program he had at Betsy Layne this past winter. It will be not cakewalk for either ballclub."

McKinney said that his Hornets will have to do their work and execute well to play with the Bobcats.

"We will keep our eye on their quarterback (Keith Hamilton) and get after him," said McKinney. "Their line will be as big as any we have seen yet."

"We want to be aware and watch for Rocky Hamilton in the backfield. Also, another one that concerns us is (Adam) Roberts. We just need to contain their offense in stopping their passing and running game."

A Look at the Hornets

The Hornets are a young team this season, returning only eight seniors. McKinney said that his front line will be "lined" with sophomores, juniors and one freshman.

"We have 44 players this year and most of those are sophomores and juniors."

The quarterback slot will be shared by a junior and sophomore this season until one proves himself capable of taking charge. The two battling for the signal-calling spot are junior Steve Smith and sophomore Ryan Dotson.

"We usually start the game with Ryan because Steve plays defense for us and is more experienced there. Ryan is a better thrower."

Fon McCoy and Daniel Lester return at the tight end position for McKinney. Shannon Dotson will be the "main player" in the backfield for Phelps, although there are other talented runners on the team.

The Hornets will run a freshman, Derek Gooslin, at tailback

"We'll have a sophomore, junior and freshman in the backfield," said McKinney.

is to be able to contend in the district. If all our games were conference games that would be all right with me."

Allen Central's front defensive line has had its problems in the first game at Elkhorn City; but the secondary play of Glenn Floyd and Brad Blackburn kept the Rebels from losing game one.

Floyd not only led the team in rushing, but in tackles as well as he came out of the free safety position for 11 solo hits. But the number of tackles that Floyd had to make in the free safety slot was not pleasing to Coach Reeves who said that he didn't want Floyd having to make those tackles.

"Neon is going to show with a 43 defense," said Reeves. "We're going to see the option. We're going to see the counter. We've got to be home when they show up."

It was the option that hurt Allen Central when the two teams met in the gridiron in Jenkins just two weeks ago. Neon posted a 16-6 win over the Rebels.

"The option killed us over there," said the Allen Central coach. "We need to concentrate on our corner play and defensive-end play. We need to be ready for the option play and the dive."

Execution on defense has been a sore spot for the Rebels and Coach Reeves is hoping that tonight it will be different.

"Execution — that's the question with us," he said. "Each time out it's different. I feel, tonight, the boys will execute. They want this game. They want to win."

Floyd, James Osborne, along with Shawn Howard, will be running out of the Rebels backfield. Osborne carried for 61 yards against Fleming-Neon in the final scrimmage game three weeks ago. Howard had 21 yards on three carries. Floyd finished with 122.

So the Rebels have proved that they can run against the Pirates defense.

In throwing the ball, freshman Thomas Jenkins had three receptions from quarterback Brad Blackburn for 56 yards against Elkhorn City.

Shawn Robinson will lead the defensive line for Allen Central, along with Howard and Scott Bellemey. Robinson had 11 solo hits against the Cougars as did Bellemey. Howard had eight hits and three assists.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. at the Don Daniels Athletic Complex at Allen Central.

Betsy Layne

Senior Adam Gross returns for his second year at center and is just a sophomore.

"This past Friday night we had 28 players that started somewhere," said McKinney, "and this week we'll have the same or more. It just keeps our team fresh all the time."

McCoy led the Hornets in rushing last Friday against Matewan. Gooslin had a good outing as did Darin Casey.

"We just want to make things happen," said McKinney. "We'll be watching Betsy Layne and hopefully we can bounce back this week."

The Bobcats' Last Game...

Freshman Craig Hamilton and senior Rocky Hamilton each rushed for 49 yards against South Floyd last Friday. Craig Hamilton scored one touchdown and ran a conversion for Betsy Layne in their 16-6 victory.

The Cats totaled 159 yards on offense with 150 coming on the ground.

The defensive line for Betsy Layne is led by junior Brandon (Bubba) Combs and Adam Roberts. Jamie Robinette makes the line more solid.

Penalties have been a problem for the Bobcats in their first game. They were penalized for 125 yards last week.

Kickoff is schedule for 7:30 p.m. at the Hamilton Athletic Complex.

A dolphin catch!

Blackcats

find themselves trying to figure out how to handle an offense like Prestonsburg's which totaled 453 ofensive yards against Clay County.

The "terrible trio" of Seth Hyden, Dwayne Garza and Jody Cornette aren't all the Raiders will have to concentrate on. Matt Porter also was electrifying against Clay County, thus making it the "fearsome foursome."

Quarterback Thomas Ratliff ran a solid offense in his first time out. Look for Ratliff to get only better as the season goes on. While he did not put the ball in the air that much (two-for-five for 47 yards), the secondary of South Floyd will have to be alert because he has a solid receiver in Jason Spurlock.

Kyle Fitzpatrick, Brad Wells,

Kevin Vaughn and Ryan Elliott form a solid defensive line that fullback Arnold Adams hopes his line will open some holes in.

Adams led the rushing game for South Floyd against Betsy Layne last Friday night. Adams rushed for 122 yards and scored his team's only TD.

Turnovers have hurt the Raiders this season and that was evident in last Friday's encounter at Betsy Layne. The Raiders had three turnovers on fumbles.

"We just didn't take care of the football at Betsy Layne," said Raider coach Donnie Daniels. "Playing against Prestonsburg is not going to be any breather. We have to come back and play hard."

Aaron Hall will call the signals for the Raiders against Prestonsburg. Cruse Caudill and Patrick Tackett will join Adams in the backfield.

Hall will find Charles Johnson at split end to throw to and Kevin Johnson will hold down the other end slot.

Burgh needs two; Matewan Phelps rack up points

Paintsville coach Walter Burgh needs just two victories to tie Garnis Martin's record of 271 career wins and become the state's all-time win leader. Burgh's Tigers defeated Shelby Valley 14-12 in the Big Sandy Bowl at Paintsville last Saturday. Burgh has 269 wins and will go for number 270 this Friday night at home against Pineville, one of the smallest Class A schools in the state.

30 Straight...
The Danville Admirals have taken their consecutive game win streak into year three as they demolished Class 3A power Belfry 53-14 Saturday night in the nightcap of the Pike County Bowl.

The Admirals -- who now have 30 consecutive wins -- scored eight touchdowns in the game, four in the first quarter. Kinte Bess did the most damage, returning one punt 59 yards for a score and picking off and interception 1-yard deep in the end zone and returning it 101 yards for another TD.

Danville hasn't lost since its 1991 opener to Steel Valley, Pa. The last Kentucky team to beat the Admirals was Corbin, a 30-7 win during the 1990 state semifinals.

The victory moves the Ads past Highlands and into sole possession of sixth place on the consecutive win list. Danville trails Trinity (50), Paris (38), Pikeville (33) and St. Xavier/Mayfield (31).

Coach Sam Harp has put together an incredible record of 63-9 with three state titles in his five years as head coach.

93 points...
Phelps and Matewan, W. Va., combined to score the most points so far this season. Matewan defeated host Phelps 65-28 as the two squads tallied 93 points. That's a lot of kick-offs.

30 straight II...
The Battle of Futility took place last Friday night at Shawnee High School in Louisville as the host Indians faced Atherton. Shawnee entered the contest with just one win in the '90s -- a 19-6 victory over Central in the 1990 opener. Since then they have lost 29 straight. Atherton hadn't had a win since beating Shawnee 51-8 during the fourth week of the 1990 season, compiling a 23-game losing streak.

Atherton won this showdown 20-12. Shawnee's streak now reached a state-leading 30 games.

Welcome home, Sam...
Henry Clay coach Sam Simpson spoiled his coming home party Friday night in Marion County by defeating his old school 48-28. Simpson, who perfected his Run & Shoot offense for five years at Marion before taking the Blue Devils job this past spring, gave Henry Clay its first victory in 20 tries. The Devils had lost 19 straight. Their last win came against Marion County to open the 1991 season.

Bell County avoids two...
When Bell County took the field Saturday night against Highlands, it was trying to avoid losing its second straight game to the Bluebirds and avoid losing two consecutive games since coach Dudley Hilton took over the Bobcats program 11 years ago.

The Bobcats avoided both measures when quarterback Shawn Woolum engineered a 10-play, 80-yard drive in the fourth quarter and topped it off by scoring on a 1-yard plunge.

Bell County had lost to Highlands in a state semifinal last year, known to all as the infamous Turkey Bowl.

Comeback kid...
Covington Catholic found itself down 21-0 in the second quarter to mighty Boone County on Friday, but that didn't deter junior quarterback Dustin Hicks in his first high school start. Hicks, a 6-0, 170-pounder who had backed up all-stater Adam McCormack last season, led the Colonels' rally and scored the winning touchdown on a 3-yard run with eight seconds left as CovCath won 28-21. Hicks was 12-23 for 220 yards and one TD -- a 31-yard connection to Sean Oliver.

Boone County junior tailback Shaun Alexander led all rushers in that contest with 15 carries for 139 yards and 1 TD.

TD Mania...
Russell County kicked off its 25th season of football Friday night with a 47-6 win over Metcalfe County thanks to a four-touchdown performance by junior tailback Chris Hopper. Hopper, a 5-11, 180-pounder, did all his scoring in the first half -- and had an 80-yard kickoff return for a TD as well.

Bryan Station's Glenn Gardner scored three touchdowns in the Defenders' 32-7 win over Paul Dunbar. Gardner, a 5-10, 150-pound senior, had a 30-yard interception return for a score, a 50-yard punt return for a score and also caught a 16-yard TD pass. He finished with 290 all-purpose yards, thanks to two other punt returns tallying 53 and 46 yards each.

Blazer's 500...
Ashland Paul Blazer needs just two wins to reach 500 all-time victories for that school. Ashland defeated Raceland 35-6 to give the Tomcats 498 all-time wins.

Coach Hockman...
Former University of Kentucky quarterback Ryan Hockman is helping his father coach Waggener this season, his first coaching stint after graduating from the Wildcats program. Hockman's father, Ken, is in his first year as head coach of the Waggener Wildcats. He coached in Ohio last year and left there as the third-winningest active coach with 171-80 record.

In his coaching debut in Kentucky, Hockman's Wildcats fell to Oldham County 29-6.

State Title Schedule...
There's been a lot of confusion since the KHSAA Board of Control voted in January to play all four state championship football games on the same day in '93. The Board, however, found that schedule would not be feasible. It then decided to play the Class 4A title game on Friday night, with the other three on Saturday.

In the meantime, several Louisville schools had scheduled basketball games that Friday night, thinking the Class 4A title game would be Saturday night. Then the final straw came when the University of Louisville scheduled a basketball game on Saturday night, December 4, at Freedom Hall.

Therefore, the state championship football schedule will remain the same. Class A and AA will play on Friday, December 3 beginning at 1 p.m. Class 3A and 4A will play on Saturday, December 4 beginning at 1 p.m.

Attends Prestonsburg as part of new Job Corp program

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Mecal Redmond, William Gwin and Marcus Dennis are part of a new program that permits students at the Carl D. Perkins Job Corp Center to attend a local high school and graduate.

The three are not only enrolled at the local high school but are part of the Prestonsburg football team this season.

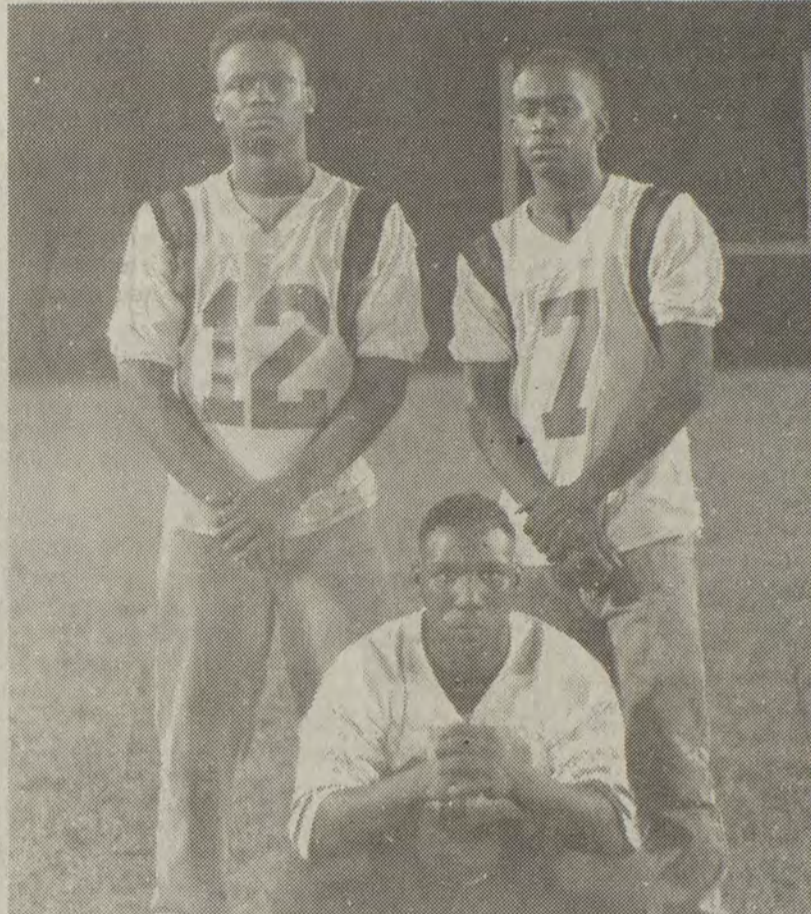

Redmond and Gwin play for the Blackcats and Dennis is the team's mascot (Blackcat).

All three attended the Blackcats game against Clay County last Saturday night and the only one who suited up was Dennis as he put on the BLACKCAT suit.

Redmond and Gwin were waiting for equipment to come in that had to be ordered and should be able to dress soon.

"They ride the bus to school and back," said Bill Blackburn, an counselor at the Job Corp. "It gives them a chance to get an education and graduate."

Prestonsburg will be at home this Friday night when they face the South Floyd Raiders in a 8 p.m. start.

The first week and it should be a good one. Some tough games to pick from on all three levels. Newcomers this year are Polly Ward, Charlotte McFall and Chuck Rowe. Kentucky looks to be a winner as well as Eastern Ky on the college level. On the local scene Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne are picked to win. The professional ranks are the toughest and there will be some good ones this weekend. Cleveland will triumph over in-state rival Cincinnati. Buffalo should begin another drive to the Super Bowl with a win over the Jets.
