Proponents of a track and field facility at Allen Central High School may have to look elsewhere for funding if the cost of the project exceeds

With little discussion, the Floyd County Board of Education voted Monday evening to cap the board's contribution to the project at that amount, leaving the responsibility for any cost overruns up in the air.

Project architect Nick Feldman. meanwhile, has estimated a $161,700 price tag for the track project. Some of that cost will be covered by the use of school employees and materials and other expenses are expected to be handled by "in-kind" contributions from school supporters and busi-

School officials did not indicate Monday how much of the difference between the board's $100,000 cap and the estimated total price for the project would be covered by in-kind support nor did the board speculate how any extra costs would be paid.

The track project is under construction now and includes the development of a track and field facility plus the reconstruction of the school's football field. The ACHS baseball facility was razed to make way for the track and school officials are exploring options for relocating the baseball diamond elsewhere. Renovation and repairs to the high school's swimming pool are also un-

But Trivette said there are still some revisions to be made to plans and staff members were "well aware that not everyone will get everything they want.

The board did, however, give architects the green light Monday evening to schedule a meeting with state officials that could lead to a more precise construction cost and bring the project closer to reality.

As currently designed, the PHS renovation will address the top concern of state and local officials and clear the way for funding by the state School Facilities Construction Commission (SFCC).

Using a "wrap-around" approach, new construction will create a natural barrier against flooding, the primary obstacle in the use of SFCC funding. The School Facilities Construction Commission restricts funding for

As designed, though, the renovation at PHS will make the funding restriction a moot point. New construction will completely surround the existing school at a level above the 100-year flood plain. The new area will serve as a "flood wall," Romanowitz told the board, protecting the existing sections of the school from flooding.

Police are quick to respond to escape

by Susan Allen Staff Writer

Within 24 hours of their escape, two prisoners from the Otter Creek Correctional Facility were back in custody after being found about four miles from the prison.

Harold Stewart, 26, of Harlan County, and Christopher L. Gordon, 21, of Barren County, were apprehended at Melvin by sheriff's deputy Bill Howell and Wheelwright police chief David Dotson and patrolman David Gray.

The two prisoners were reported missing after 11 p.m. Saturday night by Wheelwright prison officials.

Stewart's and Gordon's escape is the second walk away from the prison in about a month. Three prisoners walked away from the facility on February 19. Michael Ackerson, 39, and James Cox, 19, were caught several days later. Larry Rigdon, 22, remains at large.

Sunday evening, police received a report that two men were walking along the roadway at Melvin. Officers decided to search along the railroad tracks in the Melvin area using the sheriff's department dog, Dingo.

Deputy Howell gave the dog an article of clothing belonging to one of the suspects and the dog tracked the scent down the railroad tracks where Stewart and Gordon were spotted on the railroad bridge near Melvin Grade School.

Development job is not on city's agenda

by Susan Allen Staff Writer

Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin said Monday that city officials are not looking to hire an economic development director and they will work with the Floyd County Development Authority on any future projects.

Development authority members expressed concern last week about the city's desire to work with their group because of a report in the Times last week that the city council discussed hiring someone to pursue economic development.

Fannin said that the issue was not discussed at the March 14 city council meeting.

"We can't afford what we have now, how can we think about hiring someone else?" Fannin said.

Fannin said that council discussed tourism director Fred James' position at the March 14 meeting and that it was mentioned that James also worked on some economic development projects.

Public defender talks funny, but takes his job seriously

by Susan Allen Staff Writer

One of Floyd County's newest public defenders has been called a dream come true.

Delaney, a tall, slim attorney with a funny accent, began showing up in Floyd District Court almost a year ago and started building his reputation as one of the most hard working, best prepared public advocates to hit this county in a long time.

Being a public defender is not a popular career move for many attorneys. Most lawyers who work for the Department of Public Advocacy are usually underpaid and overworked with heavy caseloads. Attorneys are assigned clients who cannot afford their own legal representation and

It wasn't uncommon for Delaney to defend his clients, charged with prosecutor's worst nightmare, but to misdemeanors in district court, with his clients, John Delaney has to be a all the vigor most attorneys defend those charged with more serious

> Probably what makes Delaney, 35, so good at what he does is simply that he loves his job.

"For people to be really good at their jobs, no matter what is, I think you have to love it; you have to have some kind of passion for it," Delaney said. "I love my job. I love being a public defender, it's the best job I've had. I get to do trials. I get to be in court. I love to do trials. It's the most fun thing about being a lawyer."

Now Delaney has moved to defending cases in Floyd Circuit Court dozens of cases can be assigned by a where persons are charged with more serious crimes.

One of the most pressing needs Delaney and others see for Floyd County is that a full-time public defender's office needs to be established in Floyd County.

"There's not enough of us," Delaney stressed. "I can't practice law as a public defender the way I'd like to practice it or the way it really should be done. Massachusetts' public defender system is funded about five times that of Kentucky.

"More money is one of the answers," Delaney said. "But, more money wisely spent. Prestonsburg doesn't have a public defender's office. We have no office here. We also cover Magoffin County and we have no office in Magoffin County. We

During their arraignment Monday on charges of second degree escape, Gordon asked Floyd District Judge Danny Caudill if he would be released on April 1, if he posted the $5,000 cash bond set by the judge.

Judge Caudill reminded Gordon that he was facing a felony charge and, that since he had escaped from prison, if would be doubtful he would be released.

Gordon persisted with his plea to be released and Judge Caudill orfor reconsideration of his bond. The two remained lodged in the Floyd County Jail under a $5,000 cash bond.

Because of the five prisoners who have walked off, Maguigan said some tighter security measures have been taken and that some changes have been made to make the facility more

A story in the Friday, March 18 edition of the Times incorrectly noted that Martin High School was the only one of the four schools that consolidated to form Allen Central High School that had never made an appearance in the state high school basketball tournament.

Martin, which was misidentified as "Martin County" in the Kentucky High School Athletic Association's Sweet Sixteen Record Book, made it to the state tourney in 1965, losing to Breckinridge County 73 to 55 in the opening round.

Allen Central makes its first appearance in the basketball classic at 7:30 p.m. today, Wednesday, facing Shelby County.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul-Voltaire

Joshua fit the battle of Jericho...

by Scott Perry

If we can get beyond the picks and shovels of outrageous fortunes spent on school construction, there are plenty of reasons to smile about what's going on in the Floyd County School Sys-

Fourteen of nineteen schools in the district have embraced the concept of school-based decision making.

School councils bring teachers, parents and administrators together for the purpose of determining what's right for their school and the councils have generally proven that local control is an educational plus.

Academics are on the rise in Floyd County, too. Kids are competing...and winning...on the state level; most schools are facing the challenges of KERA head-on; and the district's emphasis on technology is a model program.

Even the monster of school construction is showing signs of domestication.

At Prestonsburg High School, every member of the certified staff has participated in some form or fashion in the planning of major renovations at that

Is that a logical approach to determining needs, or what?

An alternative school is blossoming as a real solution to plugging the cracks too many students have fallen through in the

And for crying out loud, teachers and administrators have even opened discussions among themselves that are void of the customary gnashing of teeth.

We won't presume to declare the educational crisis in Floyd County over.

It is still a long way away from

But there are encouraging signs of progress.

After years of struggle against mediocrity, who knows, maybe we're seeing the beginning of the end.

Lauds county teams

Editor:

Well, we may have bad roads, no 911 service and no clean city water in most places, but we do have something to be proud of in Floyd County: The Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats and the Allen Central Running Rebels. We've got two teams in the Sweet 16 and how sweet it is!

If you had the opportunity to attend the girls and boys regional tournaments, you would have seen the great community support these and other Floyd County teams had as well as school spirit that fired up many of us long since out of school.

It's been my pleasure to call sports on radio and more recently on WPRG TV 5. I want to thank all the schools for quality of play and sportsmanship. I've had loads of fun this year covering all of you. Once again, congratulations to the Lady Bobcats and Running Rebels. You have made us all proud!

I have enjoyed reading your Floyd County Times down through the years here in Missouri. Keep up the good work. I remember the years your previous editor published the Times before his death.

The freshness and breath of news and events in your newspaper awakes us to the far off days of war, peace and joys of life as we remember them.

Continue to work for a better community, county and Eastern Kentucky.

WRONG! Ask coach Gene Frasure about Maytown High School Wildcats going to the Sweet Sixteen in 1969. Then, Friday I picked up the paper... "the only school out of the four NEVER to win the 15th Regional was Martin." WRONG AGAIN!

What's wrong with all of you experts? Don't any broadcasters/reporters have to check the facts before reporting in black and white or saying something over the airways? I guess I should be used to it by now.

You definitely owe Coach Denzil "Hoss" Halbert and the 1965 Martin Purple Flash team an apology.

"Stand up and be counted, get house in order"

Editor:

I am a citizen of Floyd County and do wish to do my best to work for the betterment of this county.

I want to ask our officials if they feel good about themselves after the pay raises they got when they know some children have roads unfit to drive school buses over to pick up these children, as well as homes without drinking water, and people striving to pay their taxes, garbage and phone bills.

After we go through this routine each month looking for a better year, all we manage to get are higher taxes, double garbage bills and a 911 services which we may never get.

Each election we hear, "Now is the time to stand up and be counted." Well, Mr. Official we are indeed ready to stand up and be counted. We will ask you one and all to hold yourselves accountable for your actions. We, the public, should not have to police our government and local officials. But indeed time tells us we must keep a watchful eye on each and every one of you.

After attending the last fiscal court meeting, I am well pleased with the fact that Bob Meyer is trying to "get our house in order," as Jim Hammond so bluntly put it for about the 10th time at that meeting.

Now, I read in Wednesday's paper that Mr. Hammond wishes to remove Mr. Meyer from his job at the solid waste.

I suppose we do not like to look ourselves in the eye and see exactly what everyone else sees in us. Therefore, Mr. Hammond, maybe you are the one who should leave your job and let someone else try to get our house in order. You and this fiscal court sure seem to be doing one rotten job so far.

I do realize, however, you do not like someone outside "as you like to call everyone," coming in to tell us how to run our county. Well, wait just one minute. You just said the magic word OUR county. Not your county or Judge Stumbo's county, not the magistrates county, either. There are too many honest Floyd countians to let you control us like a country ruled by Communism. We pay taxes and pay our bills.

I suppose the statement by Jackie Owens-"I don't think we should pay Pike County the garbage bill they say we owe, or anything,"-would not work if we decided not to pay taxes and cut your salaries as well. Would that work?

Relax Jim and let the chips falls where they may as Mr. Meyer tries to get this garbage mess cleaned up.

Put your attention toward getting our 911 money and putting our service in use. You seem more interested in that race track than our house

There will be a meeting for Floyd

County citizens at the Martin Senior Citizens Building, behind the Shop Wise parking lot in Martin, at 7 p.m. on March 24.

Please come and bring a friend with you. We are truly concerned with this garbage problem and feel it is time for some changes in our local government. Time for responsibility.

Health care plan is not a favorite of area seniors

Editor:

As a member of the Seniors Coalition, I want you to know that most Seniors do not favor the Clinton Health Care plan.

Under the Clinton plan, senior citizens will surely face drastic cuts in Medicare coverage, lose their right to choose their own doctors, face long waiting lines, and possibly be denied life-saving medical treatment.

These matters are documented in a report, available at no charge, from the 2-million member Seniors Coalition. I urge you to contact the Coalition today at (703) 273-5449, get a copy of their report.

Citizens solicit help saving Auxier school

Editor:

We, the concerned parents and citizens of the community of Auxier, would appreciate any help and support you can give us in our efforts to save our school. The Floyd County Board of Education has a long-range plan to close our school, bus our children across the county to other schools (Prestonsburg Grade School, Adams Middle School and Clark Elementary School.)

The Floyd County school board has a proposal before them to have the land the Prestonsburg Grade School sits on, filled with fill dirt and raised above the flood state, then build a new school at that location. We would like to see a new school in our community.

Talk about government waste and mismanagement and you're certain to raise a few eyebrows among the populace.

Tell a community that their high school team never made it to the Sweet Sixteen basketball tourney, though, and you'd better take cover. We goofed up last week when we suggested in a story that Martin High School was the only one of four schools that consolidated to form Allen Central that had never won a 15th regional high school

1965. We could pass the buck and blame the error on the state tournament record book-our source for the story—which mistakenly identified Martin High as Martin County, but we'll take full credit for the discredit to the '65 team and its fans.

Contrary to popular call-in theory, we did not make the error on purpose.

Even the most sincere masochist would not welcome the level of abuse we've suffered since our foul up.

So, how about taking that pot of tar off the fire?

We want to say up front that we are not among those unidentified newspaper publishers who have been accused of "threatening" state lawmakers who were considering the establishment of a news council to hear complaints against the media.

The news council proposal apparently died in committee and some legislators said they didn't push the plan because their hometown papers had threatened to make them "look bad" if they supported it.

No state legislator has solicited nor have we offered our opinion on the news council idea.

Had any lawmaker stopped by our office on Friday, (see goof-up comments, above), they would have seen that we already have an active "news council" in place:

What do The Stenholm Plan, The Barton Plan, The Kyl Plan and The Wise Plan have in common? First, they all attempt in one way or another to

The Stenholm Plan, which would have allowed deficit spending only on a 60 percent majority vote by Congress, came closest to getting the two-thirds vote needed for adoption of a proposed constitutional amendment.

The Kyl Plan, which would likely be the most effective deficit reducer because it would have given the president line-item veto power over congressional "pork" projects, fared rather poorly.

Since our leaders can't seem to find a budgetbalancing solution that suits them, we'd recommend they take a look at the Edd Redd Plan, named for the former area businessman whose simple philosophy for success is tried and true... Never spend more than you take in.

A voluntary tax to help resolve an involuntary predicament.

Sounds interesting.

The president has proposed a four percent surcharge on gambling revenue to fund the cost of child care for the working poor.

And why not? Gambling is, after all, something most people do by choice. Taxes on gambling revenues, then, would be paid by people who choose to gamble. If revenues from gambling taxes can allow people to get off welfare by picking up the tab for child care so they can work, then we ought to give it a try. Maybe then more people will have a chance at something better than the hand that was dealt

"It absolutely affects the quality of the representation people get in Floyd County and Magoffin County," Delaney continued. "There's no place for me to meet my clients. My clients can never get a hold of me because, one, I don't have an office here. I'm never in my office, my office is in Pikeville and I'm always here. There's no place for us to sit down and meet. It's always catch me as I'm walking to my car."

If one of his clients wants to set up a meeting with Delaney they have to drive to his Pikeville office, which most of the time isn't possible.

"Most of my clients, one, don't have cars," Delaney said. "Two, a lot of the times they're in trouble because they drove at a time they shouldn't have been driving. So they don't have driver licenses, they don't have insurance. And yet, to meet with me they have to somehow get in a car and drive down to Pikeville. It's not

Delaney is not alone in his bid to get an office in Prestonsburg. Floyd Circuit Judge John David Caudill

"Floyd County definitely needs a public defender's office because of the caseload," Judge Caudill said. "It is desperately needed so that public defenders can provide adequate representation for the people that their office is charged to defend."

There are no plans for an office in Prestonsburg and Delaney stresses that the lack of accessibility to their attorneys does shortchange clients in the system.

"It's hard," Delaney continued. "We work with a very politically unpopular group of people. My clients are poor; they're uneducated; they can't produce votes. Most of them don't vote themselves. They're too disconnected. People don't win elections by saying to Mr. and Mrs. Public, 'if you elect me, I promise I will put more money into making sure that indigent, criminally accused people get fair representation in court.' It's a group of people really easy to ignore. They get what the law says they have to get and not much more."

Perhaps one reason why Delaney, who hails from Massachusetts, has been so well received by people in the mountains, who are usually wary of northern strangers, is that he came to Floyd County because he wanted to, but not with the usual Appalachian stereotypes in mind. His first brush with the stereotyping came from divide his time each week among all the people he met here.

tucky before, Defaney explained. "Believe it or not, I didn't know that Eastern Kentucky was part of Appalachia. I had no preconceived concepts at all, which is kind of funny. I always just thought Kentucky was kind of a cool state with bluegrass and horses, mountains and caves. I came here to help myself. I came here because I wanted to be a public defender. My experience has been that people from Eastern Kentucky put more stereotypes on themselves, than I've ever heard people away from here put on them. Now, I realize that there's a lot of stereotypes out there, I don't see them. People are people wherever you go. There's a very strong sense of family here and that's nice.

"I really like it here," Delaney continued. "I like practicing law here, a lot. You have an opportunity here to do a lot more."

Delaney's effort to go the extra mile to provide a good defense for indigent clients has earned him high marks from Judge John Caudill and District Judge Danny Caudill.

"I've seen in my court, district court, that we have a huge volume of cases and, even considering the caseload that we have, he's always been well prepared and represents his clients well," Judge Danny Caudill

"He's a real prepared attorney," Judge John Caudill said. "He's an excellent guy.'

The young restless teenager who graduated from high school "by the skin of (his) teeth," was not born with the proverbial silver spoon in his mouth and had a rocky time during his adolescent years.

He gradually settled down and went to law school and graduated in 1992 cum laude from his class. He then did pro bono work with a group of other lawyers, funded by federal grant, who represented clients whose lives had been affected by the disease AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome).

There is no doubt about Delaney's love of the law or the passion he feels about the rights afforded citizens under the U.S. Constitution.

'The guarantees that we have under the constitution should never be taken lightly," Delaney said. "And if foresee going home anytime soon.

you don't have committed people who come to places, like Floyd County, Kentucky, and fight, really, to assure that constitutional guarantees, that you don't get convicted unless you're proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt; that illegal searches don't happen; that you get your presumption of innocence. All those people that don't see that as part of their life, well, someday they may find themselves charged with a crime and then they'll thank God that those constitutional guarantees are there. They'll understand how valuable they was applied Monday evening during the regular session of the board at Betsy Layne Elementary School, where new construction has become a regular topic of conversation.

Betsy Layne parents Ann Blackburn, Lance Blackburn and Dan Hall addressed the board on construction plans at the elementary school, asking that a plan to phase in the completion of a new kitchen be reconsidered.

Ann Blackburn, noting that the school's existing kitchen was in a state of disrepair and the subject of several unfavorable inspections by the county health department, asked the board to correct those problems and to fully equip the new kitchen.

Hall and Lance Blackburn repeated those requests and asked the board to allow a "local representative" to be involved in the school's construction process "to see that the school is built as planned."

Board chairman Ed Patton said the requests would be answered in writing at the next session of the board.

The board did respond somewhat to proposals made Monday evening by Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson, agreeing to study his offer of a full-time "floating" security officer for the school system. Thompson said his office would provide a deputy to the schools for added security, adding that the deputy could of the county high schools. The board will respond to the request at the next meeting.

The board listened to a good newsbad news report from Phil Paige, director of the system's student assessment program, who noted that 1993 test scores showed signs of improvement in some schools and decline in Paige said the 1993 scores showed that different schools have different needs and the system is concentrating on "building a network of teachers with expertise" on the state KIRIS assessment process. That network, he added, would be useful in educating other teachers on the assessment process requirements.

The board gave quick approval and a round of applause Monday to requests from South Floyd and Prestonsburg high schools, which allowed those schools to begin imme- vation project.

diate implementation of school-based decision making councils. The schools needed board waivers to begin the site-based process prior to July 1.

Board chairman Patton commended both high schools for joining the system's list of locally managed schools and he noted that 14 of 19 schools in the county now had schoolbased councils.

Also Monday, the board heard a report from alternative school director Jerry Fultz, who noted that the dropout prevention program now has "just about a full house." Fultz said 18 students are enrolled in the alternative school, which has a cap of 21, and monthly attendance was at 89

Superintendent Towler added that development of the alternative school would allow the system to seek state approval for another program aimed at reducing dropouts. State law permits systems with alternative schools to implement a process for denying or revoking driver's licenses for students guilty of chronic absenteeism. Towler said he would ask the state for approval to implement that system next school year in Floyd County.

In a final action before retiring to executive session, the board voted by acclamation Monday to elect Ray Brackett as chairman for the next year and Dolores Smith as vice-chair-

Cash 5 lightning strikes twice for Phelps man

Kentucky Lottery offiicals did a double take when Burbige Prater walked into Lottery corporate Headquarters on March 17.

"Haven't we seen you here before," asked Lottery Customer Service Representative Kristen Karl.

Prater came in with the winning ticket worth $100,000 from the Lottery's December 24 Cash 5 drawing. He knew the exact procedure for claiming such a large prize. That's because it was the second time he'd won a $100,000 prize in Cash 5. The two winning tickets were within a month of each other. The first was from November 26, which Prater claimed right away.

"I didn't come to claim this one until now because I just haven't had time," the self-employed grocery store owner said. "I've been doing a lot of fishing since I won the first time. I wasn't in any rush to get here. I've just been relaxing and taking it easy.'

The Pike Countain says he can continue to relax now that he's landed a second $100,000 prize. Lottery officials asked Prater if he had always been

Other charges are pending. The case is still under investigation. - staff report

Lawrence County animal shelter possible

The Lawrence County Humane Society has secured a $48,000 grant from a California foundation to build an animal shelter for the county.

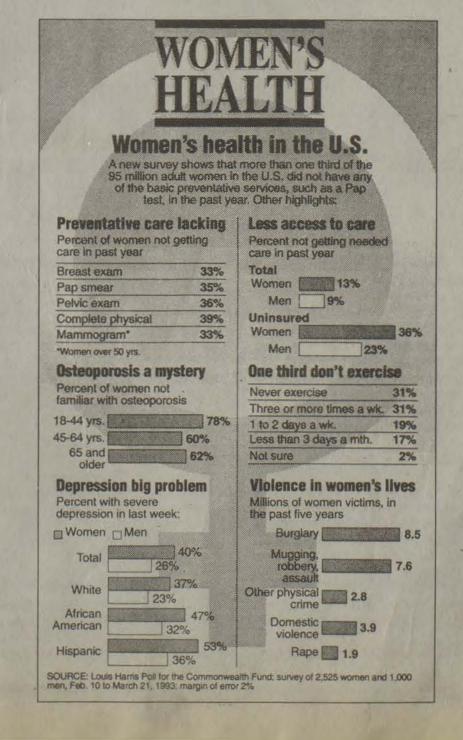

But to take advantage of the grant, the group needs to get a commitment from the county to pay for the continuing operation of the shelter. And it's questionable whether the county can afford to do that, said Judge-Executive Roger Jordan.

"Before obligating the county each year for thousands and thousands of dollars, we've go to look into it," Jordan said. "I don't believe there's anyone on the fiscal court who doesn't want a shelter."

The fiscal court tabled the society's request at a meeting Friday, but promised to take it up again in April.-Louisville Courier Journal

Teen-ager charged with shooting man

A 42-year-old Johnson County man was in the hospital Saturday night and his live-in girlfriend's 15-year-old son was being held in the Johnson County Detention Center on charges of shooting the man in the stomach and face, state police said. While the two were arguing about 6 p.m. Saturday at a home on Hunting Fork Road, Andrew Rose threatened to "whip" the boy, police said. Rose followed the youth next door, where he had gone to get an assault rifle, police said. After Rose entered the house, the teen shot him, police said. ecial Care

The opening of the Special Care Nursery at Pikeville Methodist Hospital on March 1, 1989, made neonatal intensive care easily accessible to the Big Sandy ADD region of Pike, Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Magoffin, and Letcher counties. As we celebrate five years of service, 960 babies from 12 Kentucky counties and nearby counties in Virginia and West Virginia benefited from the special care available in our neonatal unit. A full-time neonatologist (pediatrician specializing in the care of sick newborns); a well-trained staff of nurses, therapists, and volunteers; plus the latest technology and equipment provide the best medical treatment available to newborns anywhere east of Lexington, Kentucky.

Regional Neonatal Transport. The Pikeville Methodist Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) is part of a regional system for neonatal care. The NICU coordinates with local hospitals which do not have neonatal units and with other distant hospitals which have NICUs with subspecialties. This network ensures that each newborn in the region receives needed care as close to home as possible.

With an ambulance used exclusively for neonatal transport and partially purchased with funds donated by local Kiwanis clubs, Pikeville Methodist brings babies from other hospitals weekly to the NICU for treatment. To date, the Pikeville Methodist Hospital Transport Team has brought 180 babies to the hospital.

Caring About the Future

Infant Development: Most parents of a sick baby worry if the illness will affect the baby's development. At the Pikeville NICU, therapists begin working with the baby while still a patient in the neonatal unit and give the family exercise instructions for the baby after discharge. Free developmental testing is available for the first year of life to every infant who has been a patient in the NICU.

Hearing Testing: The Hearing In Newborn Testing (HINT) program at Pikeville Methodist Hospital expanded to test hearing in all newborns at the hospital. Babies born with hearing problems can be identified early and receive help during the critical period of language development. The hearing tests are performed by trained volunteers and are free of charge.

Infant Safety: All babies born at Pikeville Methodist and any baby treated in the NICU receives a free infant car seat to assure safe traveling.

Caring About Family

Family Involvement: The NICU staff encourages parents and grandparents to be a part of baby's care through liberal visitation policies and participation in baby's feeding and care as the infant gets better.

Support for Families: A baby needing special care is stressful for any family. Our staff does their best to answer questions about your baby. Parents are given special instructions on infant CPR, bathing, feeding, and car seat safety.

Our People Make it Special: The special part of the NICU is the people who provide care. The entire staff, from ambulance drivers to doctors and nurses to therapists and volunteers, truly care about each child who comes into the unit. As we continue to grow to meet the special needs of newborn infants in the Big Sandy Region, we will improve the quality of health care because babies deserve the best beginning.

The Labor Department's Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) will hold a one-day public forum on Saturday, April 9 in Beckley, West Virginia, to gather information regarding the increased level of safety and health problems that exist at small coal mining operations in the United States.

"For a number of years small mines have had a rate of fatal accidents that is much higher than larger operations," said J. Davitt McAteer, assistant secretary of labor for mine safety and health. "This small mine summit is an effort to open the dialogue among the mining industry's most talented minds and channel their knowledge and experience toward exploring ways to reduce the safety and health problems that small mines experience."

1992, the latest year available show that small underground coal mines with fewer than 20 employees had a fatal incidence rate of about six times that of larger mines. Small underground mines with more than 20 but fewer than 50 employees had a fatal incidence rate about four times that of larger mines.

During the small mine summit, selected representatives of management, labor, academia, and state and federal government will address a designated panel of mine safety and health specialists. Allotted time for speaking will be limited. The agency also welcomes the input of congressional representatives from states and regions of the country in which mining is prevalent.

The public is welcome to attend. The small mine summit will be held at MSHA's National Mine Health and Safety Academy near Beckley, West Virginia, beginning at 8:30 a.m. For further information on program content, contact Doug Altizer or Keith Gaskill at MSHA on 703-235-1400.

Local Sheriff announces honorary membership program announced that Floyd County citizens who would like to help the underprivileged children of our state are invited to become Honorary Members of the Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch.

The Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch first opened its doors as a summer camp for needy boys in 1976. The sheriffs offered the first session for girls in 1979.

Sheriff Thompson says that many of the underprivileged boys and girls who come to the camp have never before experienced the childhood pleasures of swimming, arts and crafts, summer recreation and fellowship. At camp they also learn about crime prevention and respect for law enforcement.

"Hopefully, our program will leave a favorable impression upon a few young minds and in some way inspire these less fortunate boys and girls to become law-abiding, productive citizens in the future," Sheriff Thompson said.

"We are inviting the public to help us better serve these children," Sheriff Thompson said. Floyd County residents should soon receive membership applications in the mail. "It is eryone who might want to join the Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys & Girls Ranch as an Honorary Member," the Sheriff said. Weight Loss Baffles Scientist!

WASHINGTON-A scientist at National Dietary Research was baffled at how successful a natural food tablet had become in helping overweight people lose weight. Dr. William Morris was baffled because the original chewable tablet formula was developed to help feed the world's undernourished

Why the original food formula helped some people lose weight is still a mystery. However, the formula has since been improved, and the new formula's weight loss potential is not a mystery. The fortified formula, called Food Source II (FS-II), is not a low calorie food but a powerful appetite blocker that can actually decrease calorie consumption while supplying essential nutrients.

So how can people lose weight with FS-II-Lots of weight! According to Dr. Morris it is the revolutionary FS-II diet plan that allows you to lose weight without giving up your favorite foods. With the FS-II Plan there are no forbidden foods and the special appetitie control ingredient is one of the most effective available without a

The Division for Air Quality adopted a new state permitting regulation on November 29, 1993. The state agency is awaiting approval from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to use this regulation as part of the federally mandated operating permit system created under Title V of the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990. In the meantime, sources must comply with all state construction and operating permit requirements.

CHLAMYDIA

By Richard S. Hollis, MD President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Chlamydia is one of the most common sexually transmitted diseases (STDs). Between three and five million people are infected with the disease each year.

Though men are the primary carriers of chlamydia, it is women who suffer most of the serious ill effects of the disease after becoming infected during sex, including oral sex. Unfortunately, women often experience no immediate symptoms of chlamydia and may not even know they were at risk of being infected until their sexual partner begins to show symptoms.

Chlamydia is a germ, which generally infects the cervix and may spread to the uterus and fallopian tubes. The greatest danger women face from chlamydia is developing pelvic inflammatory disease—a major cause of infertility in women due to scarring and damage to the reproductive system. Symptoms of chlamydia often mirror those of gonorrhea, including a yellowish vaginal discharge, pain or burning during urination, frequent urination, burning or itching in the genital area, and pain in the pelvic area during sex. These symptoms can begin to appear anywhere from two days to three weeks after sexual contact with a person who has the disease. The only definite way to determine if someone has chlamydia is for a doctor to do diagnostic tests. Earlier this year, the Food and Drug Administration approved a fast and more accurate test for chlamydia. The test is done using a swab sample from the woman's cervix or urethra. The new test can be completed in four hours, compared to three to seven days for other available types of tests. Most doctors, when testing for chlamydia, will also test for gonorrhea since nearly half of all people diagnosed with one have the other.

Once a diagnosis has been made, patients are treated with antibiotics and they can expect to see the disease clear up within a week. In addition to treating the patient, it is important for that person's sexual partner(s) to be treated, otherwise the disease could be passed back to the patient.

A pregnant woman with chlamydia can transmit the disease to her infant during birth. If you're pregnant and your doctor thinks you have chlamydia, you will be treated with drugs that are safe to take during pregnancy. Using a condom during sexual relations can help prevent infection. It is also important to know-and limityour sexual partners, since having sex with someone exposes you indirectly to his other sexual partners, and any diseases they may have.

Single, free copies of "Gonorrhea and Chlamydial Infections" (APO71) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, businesssize envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 409 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20024.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY WISH

to Bob Taylor, former Martin Purple Flash. Bob turned (?) this past Monday and we just want to let him know that we wish him a belated Happy Birthday. Really, I called him Monday and told him the same thing.

WHAT AN OUTPOURING

I never dreamed that I would receive the response that I have about getting Hoss Halbert in the Kentucky Hall of Fame.

To date, Monday, March 21, I have received1,504 names from people who responded to the notice in the sports section.

We have heard from folks as far away as Kansas. Some came from Lexington, Ashland, Louisville, Paducah, and, of course, from all around the region.

One came from Bobby F. Crager of Flatwoods and he included a note, as did others. The note said:

"Mr. Taylor,

Coach Halbert should be in the Hall of Fame. He should have been there before now.

"It was my pleasure to know Coach Halbert and to have officiated for him. He is an outstanding individual and did an outstanding job of coaching.

"Say hello to Coach for me the first chance you get."

Mr. Crager is part of the Northeastern Kentucky Officials Association.

Folks love "Hoss" Halbert. Even former officials love the man. He has done so much for athletics in this part of the country that he deserves to be in the Hall.

I had a chance to talk with some of the KHSAA officials about getting Hoss in the Hall of Fame. They were very supportive and gave me some advice about what to do.

I will be sending out the nomination form (Wednesday) along with all the names that have been sent to me (hopefully we will have more before I mail them out).

To all of you who sent in your name in support of Hoss, thank you from me and, I'm sure that I can speak for him and say thank you on his part. You haven't forgotten a great individual. We need to get him in the Hall of Fame. He deserves it very much.

Kentucky season ends... I know that it doesn't seem possible, but the sun will continue to rise and set even though our beloved Wildcats fell from the NCAA tournament.

It was a better team that out dueled them in St. Petersburg, Florida. Marquette was a very strong and physical team.

Gone will be some of the players who we have cheered for the past four seasons: Travis Ford, Gimel Martiniez, Jeff Brassow, and Rodney Dent. They will not wear a UK uniform again.

Before next season rolls around (December of this year) let's hope that Rodrick Rhodes has done either one of two things: Quit and leave UK or become determined to be a basketball player next year. If he doesn't shoot free throws, he doesn't score too many points. Andre Riddick might just as well look forward to coming off the bench next season behind Mark Pope. Riddick is not even Division I material, yet he is playing for UK.

I certainly hope that Coach Rick Pitino will look hard and wide for some wide body players who will have some bulk on them. Arkansas and Marquette seem to fair well with those type of play-

With Antoine Walker committing to play for UK next season, look for Jarod Ward to take his talent to the West Coast next year. Kentucky will lose out on this recruitment battle and with it will go Tennessee star Ron Mercer.

I was reading about Mercer while I was in Bowling Green last week. Seems the Goodpasture star was going to Tennessee until the Overview....

Betsy Layne's first-game exit nothing new

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

It has been the same old story for 15th Region girls' basketball teams for the past four years in the Sweet Sixteen State Tournament.

The first game is the only game our region team has the opportunity

Except for Elkhorn City, which advanced to the semi-state in 1990, 15th Regional teams have not fared too well in the first game.

Betsy Layne, which represented the 15th Region this year, found that other state teams play a different brand of basketball. Ohio County used a pressure zone press that was awesome and created many problems for Betsy Layne, who otherwise handles the press well. Why the difference?

In the 15th Region, teams do press but not as effectively as the other state teams. Each player knows her assignment on the press and our region teams fail to read the traps. Picking up the dribble too early is inviting a double or triple team.

Betsy Layne was nervous when they took the floor for their first state tournament appearance. It was evident they wanted to perform so well, and maybe they tried a little too hard.

Ohio County set the tempo for the game from the start, even though they missed their first shot attempt and Betsy Layne rebounded the bas-

The Lady Cats showed some spark in the first period in their first comeback, cutting the lead to two points, 10-8. But it was a disasterous second period that did in Betsy Layne when they failed to score.

The Lady Cats had a great season. They will return some strong players next season and could be a favorite to repeat their trip to the Sweet Sixteen, which will be played in Frankfort next year.

Allen Central AAU wins two in weeks play

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

The Allen Central AAU 13-yearold basketball team improved their seasonal record to 2-1 on the year as they won twice last week.

Coach Johnny Mayo's team defeated Virgie and Feds Creek behind the scoring of Matthew Mayo. Allen Central lost their first game of the season to Mullins.

Mayo tossed in 20 points last Thursday night to lead Allen Central to a 46-33 win over Virgie. Mayo hit three three-pointers in the game and was four of five from the charity Jame Seward added 12 points for the winners while Josh Hall scored eight. Jesse Hall netted four points and Larry Nobilty had two points.

.Chad Newsome led Virgie with 12 points. Josh Tackett and Robert Newsome scored six each. Brad Johnson tossed in five with Josh Sword and David Akers scoring two Allen Central will match up with Shelby County tonight in the first game of the evening session. The Rebels and Rockets will tipoff at 7:30 p.m. in Louisville's Freedom Hall.

The Rebels could be the best state tournament team that the 15th Region has sent in recent years. Belfry made three consecutive trips (1990-1992) and Elkhorn City represented the region last year.

This is a legitimate high school basketball team, a team that has all the credentials to make a good showing in the classic.

Allen Central has size, offense, defense and they are a good rebounding ballclub. If the Rebs have one weakness, it is that the bench is short. Coach Johnny Martin hasn't played that far down the bench and early foul trouble could spell more trouble.

Rebels not worried about first game jinx

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

For a basketball team that has not received the notoriety that most upstate teams have received, the Allen Central Rebels are just looking to arrive in Louisville's Freedom Hall tonight and just do their thing.

The Rebels are focused on the task that lies ahead of them as they make their first appearance in the Sweet Freshman Thomas Jenkins put in perspective the way the Rebels feel. We're not going down there to party," he said. "We're going down to win and not have fun."

Jenkins has been a pleasant surprise for the Rebels this season, averaging just over 11 points a game in his first varsity season. He has pulled down 281 rebounds for an average of just over eight a game.

For the freshman, the trip is to Louisville is a fulfillment of childhood dreams. "It's been a dream come true for me," he said. "I have dreamed of this since I was little kid and heard about 'King" Kelly Coleman playing in the Sweet Sixteen.

"I knew we could do it this year. I figured we'd be down there showing what we've got," he said.

Jenkins thinks that it will take a team effort for the Rebels to advance in the tournament, but he also thinks that there will be some keys to win-

'We have Jeremy (Hall) controlling the basketball," said Jenkins. "We'll need to take the ball to Phillip (Patton) under the goal and me drivsome three's from Steve (Turner).

(Samons) and Kevin (Stumbo) coming off the bench. Ronnie's really going to be a key.'

15th Region girls' records in state tournaments

by Ed Taylor

Sports Editor

State tournament stats don't show much success for 15th Region girls basketball teams that have taken part in the classic since its new beginning in 1975.

The Sheldon Clark Lady Cardinals have made more state tournamentappearances (8) than any other regional team. Johnson Central has been to the "big dance" three times with Phelps, Belfry and Pkeville making two appearances apiece.

Elkhorn City and Allen Central has made the trip once. Elkhorn City and Belfry are the only teams to advance past the first round.

Sheldon Clark has a 0-8 record in eight tournament games. Belfry won three while losing twice. The Lady Pirates advanced to the finals of the 1984 classic under then-coach Delores Dotson. The Lady Pirates fell 55-53 to Marshall County in the cham-

Johnson Central is 0-3 in three state games. The Lady Eagles appeared last year in the state meet, losing to Central Hardin 66-47.

Allen Central made their only appearance in 1982, falling to Marshall County 61-42.

Both Phelps and Pikeville dropped their only two games in the tournament. Phelps made backto-back appearances in 1988 and again in 1989. Pikeville went in both 1979 and 1980.

Marshall County and Oldham County have made the most appearances in the state tournament with 11 each, Marshall County has won it twice and Oldham County once. Clay County has made 10 appearances.

Has bad game!

Betsy Layne's Dee Dee Martin (53) scored her only two points of the game against Ohio County on this shot in the third quarter while teammate Rhonda Conn (25) looked on. Martin was hurt in the game and had to leave. Betsy Layne fell to the Lady Eagles 67-41. (photo by a Floyd County team has had since the early '80s when Betsy Layne and Allen Central won over 20 games. The Lady Cats this year won 21 and lost only eight times.

Betsy Layne posted the best record

The college-size floor may have been a difference in the way the Lady Cats played. The officiating, although good, could also have had an affect.

Here in the 15th Region we see so many close and insignificant calls made while in the state tournament, officials let teams play more. On two occasions, Betsy Layne seemed to stop, anticipating a whistle for a foul but no call came. The result was two steals and two baskets for Ohio County. Fouls not called at the state tournament would have been called here.

Betsy Layne shot a low 31 percent for the game. Hamilton's 17 points led the Lady Cats, Misty Johnson had seven rebounds, two offensive and five defensive, to lead the board work for the Lady Cats. Misty Clark and Heather Gearheart pulled down five each.

Hamilton had two blocked shots for Betsy Layne while Christy Johnson dished off three assists.

Betsy Layne committed 27 turnovers against the Ohio County defense. Ohio County had 21 mistakes. Ohio County shot 43 percent for the game and hit 14 of 22 free throws. Betsy Layne did not shoot a free throw until the third quarter when they hit three of three. The Lady Cats shot 14 in the fourth quarter and connected on 12. They shot 88 percent from the charity stripe for the game.

Hamilton was a perfect five of five. Everyone on the Betsy Layne team got to see action in their first state tournament game.

ALLEN CENTRAL HEADS TO LOUISVILLE...

And we wish Coach Johnny Martin and the Rebels the best as they take part in the Sweet Sixteen. Out of all the schools that started the season, Allen Central is one of the remaining 16.

Coach Martin has done an excellent job of coaching this season. He always has his teams ready for tournament time. He seems to know what to work on and improve on before each tournament.

The regular season is nothing more than a time of getting a team ready for the big shows (district, regional and state). Coach Martin has done just that.

He has some fine young players coming back next year and should be looking for a third straight district.

At Betsy Layne, the search for a new coach may begin with taking applications, but they should throw those away and award the job to Keith Henry next year. Keith did a very good job of getting his team into the regional tournament with the short time that he had to work with them.

He definitely deserves a full year to repeat. He's a very serious-minded coach who did a great Arched multipaned windows give a European flavor to the Beaumont, a one-and-a-half story ranch-style home with a brick accented stucco exterior. A planter provides added street appeal.

Formal (quiet) rooms are to the right of the entry, family living areas to the left, and the two children's bedrooms are upstairs. These bedrooms share a compartmentalized bathroom with two basins in the outer section.

The two-story-high entryway is bright and airy, creating a first impression of spaciousness that carries over throughout the home. A small powder room is just inside the door.

The family room, and dining room have skylights and vaulted ceilings. The ceiling is also vaulted in the library. which could serve as an office or guest room. Here the tall arched front window overlooks the entry and front lawn.

Two, three, even four cooks can work together in this sprawling country kitchen, without bumping elbows. It has about 10 feet of eating bar, a work island with vegetable sink, a walk-in pantry, built-in dishwasher, range and oven. French doors in the family room and nook open onto a deck. Utilities are close by, in a pass-through space with access to the three-car garage.

The dining room has a corner buffet with a built-in warmer and is separated from the living room by an arched entry. Off by itself, the Beaumont's master suite is a secluded adult retreat. Luxury amenities include his and hers walk-in closets and a large, skylit private bathroom with a spa tub, enclosed toilet and shower, and a long vanity with twin basins.

Shelby County not to be taken lightly, says Martin

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

When the basketball season ends, it is always the dream of a basketball team to reach the Sweet Sixteen in state tournament play. Just to be part of the elite is rewarding enough for hard work during a regular season.

But the Allen Central Rebels are not going just to be going, but they plan to come home a winner.

Tonight, Coach Johnny Martin will lead his team onto the Freedom Hall court for their first state tournament game. They will face the Rockets of Shelby County, a team that has been in the tournament the last two seasons.

"Shelby County is a lot better than people think they are," said the Rebel coach. "They played awful well the last month of the regular season.

"In preseason they thought they would be a good basketball team. It took them a long time to come around care of the basketball. They've got a because they had some kids playing football."

Sixteen with a 21-10 record. The only common foe the two teams have them to play that type of game." played this season has been Betsy Layne. Betsy Layne defeated Shelby County earlier in the year and lost four times to Allen Central.

In the Class A Regional Tournament, South Floyd pulled a slowdown game against Coach Martin's ballclub and came to within two points of pulling the upset. Since that time,

Q. Is attic ventilation necessary and if so, how should I go about doing it? A. Yes, it is VERY important for proper adequate attic ventilation and here are some reasons why: 1.) Proper adequate ventilation will reduce your A/C requirement. From a University of Illinois Engineering study it was found that an increase in ventilating rate of 2 CFM per sq. ft. decreased the heat gain through 1,000 sq. ft. of ceiling by 17,100 BTU during an average cooling day. Since there are 12,000 BTU's per ton of cooling, you can readily see the importance of attic ventilation. 2.) In most cases, proper attic ventilation will increase the life of the roof by several years and also remember-most asphalt or fiberglass shingle manufacturers require proper attic ventilation to validate the warranty. 3.) Properattic ventilation during cold weather is very important. During cold weather water vapor invariably comes in contact with a surface cold enough to condense it into water. This water soaks into insulation (decreasing its effectiveness), soaks into structure, causing wood to decay, floors to buckle, plaster to crack or crumble and paint to peel.

A study has shown the most efficient and practical way to properly ventilate an attic is a continuous ridge vent and continuous overhang vents. (Vents should be sized for a minimum of 2 CFM per sq. ft. of attic floor area). Remember - you must have vents low such as in overhang as well as vents high, such as ridge vents so the air comes in at the bottom and out at the top. This system works on the gravity method and is only effective if both applications are used. This type of ventilation has shown to be adequate and is very inexpensive to install and cost no energy for operation or main-

"I don't think the teams in the big cities think we can piay basketball. I feel that we can play with anyone," he said.

Jason Bevins, who comes off the bench for Allen Central and is averaging just over four points per game and 2.8 rebounds, echoes the same sentiments as Hall.

"We don't get any respect," he said. "We've got a good chance to go all the way. We have a lot better team than everybody thinks.

"We've got speed, size, shooting and our defense is stepping up," continued Hall. "We've got the total pack-

"It's real good right now," he said after the Rebels completed practice Monday evening. "I think we'll all play good in Louisville. Any of us are capable of scoring and they can't key their defense on any one person. We'll do all right down there.

Patton said that playing hard pressure defense as well as hitting the boards, will be a must for Allen Cen-

"We need to play a very good defensive game and get on the boards," he said. Patton said that he overcomes the nervousness of his first state tournament game by just focusing on the cause before him.

"I just think about the game."

Senior forward Jason Martin, who ing to be in the first game. will carry a 15-point per game average into the state tournament, is just thankful to be there and views Shelby County as a strong team.

We watched some tapes on them and they're a pretty good team," he said. "They have a point guard in Patton has been one of the bright Jeremy Burchfield who likes to penetrate to the basket. He'll sometimes pull up and take the jumper or go straight to the basket.

'We're going to try and stop him outing. The senior center thinks that as much as we can, especially his penetration."

> Martin said that although the Rockets are an experienced state tournament team, the Rebels are ready.

> 'We've got more size inside than they do," said Martin. "The whole game for Shelby County is built around Burchfield. He controls their whole offense."

The senior Rebel said that overall the team is not nervous about playing Freedom Hall. "No, we're not nervous. We know if we play like we're capable of playing that we're as good as any team down

'We've got a balanced attack that no team in the 15th Region, lately, has sent down there."

Martin said that if the Rebels play good defense, that their offense will come.

Steve Turner leads the Rebels in rebounds with just over 12 a game. He carries also a 10.8 points per game average into the game tonight. But Turner has been a strong three-point shooter for the Rebels and finds a lot of happiness in going to Louisville.

"I'm thilled to death to be going," he said. "It's a once in a lifetime opportunity."

Turner gave a little scouting report on the Rockets.

Walker could be UK's best out of Illinois since Issel...if he qualifies.

Perhaps turning the page for a peek into the next chapter of its illustrious roundball tradition, the University of Kentucky has apparently landed potentially its best prospect out of Illinois since Dan Issel 27

Good news ... 6-8, 220-pound Antoine Walker from Chicago Mt. Carmel verbally committed to UK last week.

Bad news ... Walker has not achieved 700 on the SAT.

Good news ... he rates among America's top five high school prospects and is compared to Magic Johnson for his ball handling skills and power moves to the hoop.

Bad news ... talented as he is, Walker's reputation is 'stylist.' He likes to ham it up, go solo.

Good news ... provided he qualifies, he will be coming to play for the man who can teach him team, make him better.

Bad news ... according to some pundits, if Walker attends UK, the Wildcats will not land 6-8 Jerod Ward and next autumn could lose 6-7 Ron Mercer of Goodpaster, Tenn..

Stay tuned.

21st DERBY CLASSIC

UK fans anxious to see Walker must tune in the McDonald's All-America game and/or Magic Johnson's all-star game in Detroit next month. The Chicago star won't play in the 21st Derby Classic in Louisville Apr. 30.

UK coaches declined to help Classic officials try and persuade Walker to come to Louisville, perhaps because UK coaches did not want to risk being in violation of any NCAA

Commonwealth rebounds from early loss to take league title

The First Commonwealth's independent basketball team overcame an early first round loss and rebounded with four consecutive wins to capture the league title in the Johnson County Men's Independent Basketball League which ended this past Sunday

The only loss for Commonwealth in the league tournament was a 94-93 overtime setback at the hands of Ferrell Gas.

The finals came down to Commonwealth and Mr. Gatti's, a team that was undefeated until they faced the local team. Commonwealth posted consecutive victories over Mr. Gatti's to secure the title.

Marty Adams led with 18 points in the final game that First Commonwealth won 83-72.

First Commonwealth edged Mr. Gatti's 92-89 in the first game to force a second match in the double elimination tournament.

Bassin with the Pros

PROPER SINKER WEIGHT IMPORTANT TO FISHING SUCCESS

Slip sinkers aren't very large physically, but they play a major role in bass fishing success.

That's why it's important to understand how to choose the proper sinker size for the depth of water you're fishing, according to bass tournament angler Cliff Craft.

"The key in using slip sinkers, particularly when you're fishing plastic worms, lizards, or grubs, is to use the lightest sinker possible to get your lure to the bottom," explains the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff mem-

"The lighter the sinker, the more action your lure will have, which of course, makes it more attractive to bass, but you still have to be able to the present Lake Rayburn record, a feel the lure so you know when a fish

The basic rules for choosing slip sinker weight, says Craft, are to use a 1/8 ounce sinker in water to about five feet deep; a 3/16 ounce sinker in water five to 10 feet deep; a 1/4 ounce sinker in water 10 to 15 feet deep; and a 3/8 ounce sinker in water deeper than 15 feet. "One factor that enters in on weight choice is wind or rough water," cautions the Evinrude pro. "Normally in high wind or when you're fishing in waves, a heavier sinker is needed for casting and to make sure the lure does get to the bottom.

"If you put on a slip sinker and make a cast but can't feel your lure at all, you need to change to a slightly heavier weight."

For the first time in many years, notes Craft, manufacturers are changing slip sinker designs. The oncestandard bullet shape is being replaced by much slimmer needle-nose designs that pull through vegetation much easier, and other sinkers actually have different types of noise devices built into them.

"New materials are also being used," he adds, "because the general belief in the fishing industry is that eventually lead will be banned in the use of fishing lures to prevent lead poisoning in waterfowl, as it has been in shotgun shells. Today some manufacturers are already changing to brass, and the designs are completely different from anything we've seen

"One company is designing a slip sinker with holes drilled through it so that each time you move it, the sinker leaves a stream of air bubbles that may help attract a bass."

Adding noise to lures has long been popular, but now several companies are machining brass sinkers with sliding clackers or other noise makers inside the sinker itself, continues Craft.

'Whether you believe noise helps attract bass is largely a matter of personal confidence," he says. "The important thing is not to forget why you're really using a slip sinker at all.

"Its purpose is to take your lure to the bottom and keep it there where most of the bass are located, and you always want to use the lightest sinker weight possible that does that and still lets you feel the lure itself."

To help keep your outboard motor running smoothly all season, OMC recommends the use of OMC Engine Tuner. Available in 13-ounce spray can, OMC Engine Tuner removes gum and varnish build-up and cleans excessive carbon deposits from rings, pistons and ports when sprayed through the carburetor of a running motor. It's available at most Johnson and Evinrude dealers.

PLASTIC CRAWFISH IMITATIONS CATCHING PLENTY OF BASS

Imagine, if you can, the thrill of catching a 12 pound bass, and then following it with dozens of other bass in the five to eight pound range.

Angler David Wharton, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff and a former guide on Lake Sam Rayburn in Texas has done just that, and all have come from one lure, a plastic imitation crawfish, generally called a craw worm.

"It's a very natural looking lure," says Wharton, "and most of the craw worms now on the market are fairly large lures, too, so they have a tendency to get hit by larger bass. In fact, 13 pound, 8 ounce bass, was caught on a craw worm."

The name craw worm comes from the fact the lure is actually a combination of two different lures, a crawfish and a plastic worm. A craw worm has the legs and pinchers of a crawfish, but it also has a long, thin wormtype body.

"The easiest and most popular way to fish the lure is like a plastic worm," says Wharton. "Just rig it with a slip sinker and insert the hook in the worm part of the body.

"When you cast a craw worm, let it sink, then slowly crawl or hop it along the bottom. The natural buoyancy of the plastic will let the pinch-ers float up like a real crawfish, so the lure actually looks alive."

One of the most popular places to fish the craw worm when it's rigged this way, says the Johnson pro, is along the edges of grasslines, especially on points or channels that have a nearby drop into deeper water. That's what Wharton was doing when he caught his largest bass ever, a 12 pound, 10 ounce giant.

Two other methods of fishing craw worms have also become popular among the tournament pros. One method is to fish the lure on a Carolina rig, and the other is as a trailer on

"Right now, using a craw worm as a jig trailer should be very productive because as the water gets colder, the fish become more sluggish," explains

"They also tend to want larger, more bulky lures, too, and a jig and craw worm combination certainly makes for a big bait.

"When you rig this way," he continues, "you can flip or pitch the lure into heavy brush and jug it slowly through the limbs, or you can hop it down channel banks or off the edges of points.

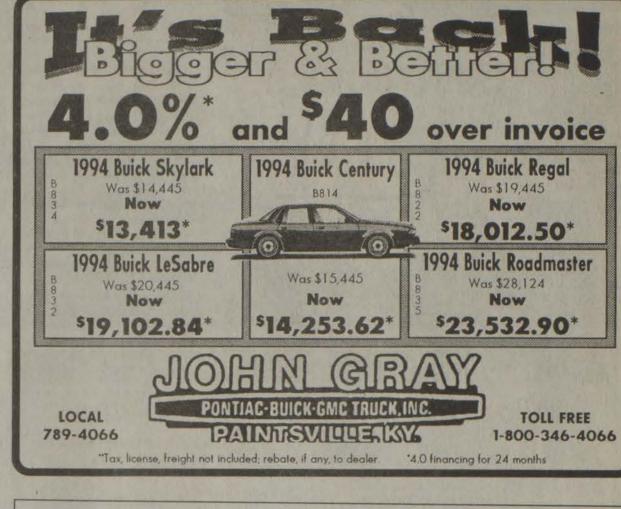

"If you're going to fish a soft plastic lure in the late fall and winter. a craw worm is one of the best to

Craw worms are made by a number of manufacturers, adds Wharton, and are available in several sizes and in a wide variety of colors.

REMEMBERING THE THREE-CENT STAMP

couple of weeks ago the headline in a local A daily paper read: "Post Office Seeks Stamp of Approval for Rate Boost." The story that fol-lowed was about how the U.S. Postal Service wants to raise the price of a first-class stamp from 29 to 32 cents. The story also explained that the increase would only cost the average household about 60 to 75 cents per month, but would add nearly $3 billion a year to the Post Office Department's budget.

Now, a three-cent increase may not seem all that much, but those of us over 50 can remember when three cents is all we had to pay for a first-class stamp. I can remember mom sending me to the post office with a dime and three letters to mail and warning me not to lose the change. (Of course, that was back when a nickel cake only cost a nickel and a penny postcard really did only cost a penny.)

Airmail stamps were really expensive, though.

They sold for six cents, and you put them on letters in special envelopes with red, white and blue stripes around the edges.

When I was about six or seven years old, there were, no doubt, a lot of airmail stamps sold because this was during the war and just about everybody in Thealka had somebody who was in the service.

Of course, the price of the stamp isn't the only change to have occurred in post offices through the years. Nowadays, mailing a letter is a simple business transaction. Back then, especially to a kid, going to the post office was akin to a major social event, and something I looked forward to almost as much as going to a double-feature movie on Saturday morning.

I guess it says a lot about how much there was to do back in the days before TV and video games, but it really was a big deal for me to go to the post office. It was fun just being there with the other dozen or so men, women and children when the C and O passenger train, amid the steam and the smoke and sparks, sped by each weekday morning and the man on the train would throw off the long, thin canvas mail sack. (I often thought how much fun it'd be to be the mail tosser for the C and O.)

We'd get a double-dose of excitement on those days when the train had to stop and the man would have to hand down certain fragile items, like some fruit trees or honey bees or a crate of noisy biddies someone had ordered from Montgomery Ward or Sears and Roebuck. That's when the faces of the train's passengers would become distinct as they peered curiously through the dirty little windows at our tiny gathering who were looking back at them.

children through the four subsidized child care programs it offers. Unfortunately, this is only about 25% of those children in low-income families who have been identified as needy.

The recipients of these programs must have incomes at or below $21,753 for a family of four for fiscal year 1994. Although this could be set at a lower standard, John Sammons, another family service program specialist, said the recipients of these subsidies are those who are almost independent but need that little edge to finally reach it.

Cases are redetermined every six months and recipients' are allowed for their income to go up to 75% of the median income and still receive the child care subsidies, Sammons said.

Day Care costs plague low income working parents

by Heather K. Reister KPA News Bureau

The air is filled with a certain warmth and energy. Laughter and music filter through the doorway. Little voices singing Barney songs can be heard mingling with older voices reciting numbers in Spanish. Eyes filled with curiosity peer over the various gates separating the different age groups to see the stranger who has come to visit.

This is Capitol Ave. Day Care Inc. in Frankfort, a second home to 38 children. About 13 of these children are on a state child care subsidy program while others are on the waiting list. Many of their parents work for the state. Melissa Reed is one of those

After Reed's husband walked out on her, things began getting tough. With three children below age seven at home and an annual income of about $9,000, Reed found it difficult to work, pay child care, pay her bills and eat.

"I did without quite a bit," Reed said. "Things that the children probably needed were purchased by other people, like my mother. I was so far under water, utilities were turned off."

Reed is not alone. Only about 25 percent of the families who have been identified as needy are receiving help through the Department of Social Services' four federal child care subsidy programs. Lack of funds makes it impossible to provide help to all those who need it. About 10,000 children remain on a waiting list to receive child care subsidies in Kentucky. It is estimated that it would take about $20 million more to help these children.

"There is a tremendous need for those working subsidies across the state," said Tom Johnson, family services program specialist with the Child Care Service Branch for the Department of Social Services. "We are serving every family possible that's allowed by allocation of Federal funds."

Because of the lack of funds, no new names have been added to the waiting list since August 1, 1993.

"We're hoping that within the next few months that we can begin to look at the possibility of some new applicants from the waiting list," Johnson said.

The Department of Social Insurance also offers a child care program to anyone on the Job Opportunity Basic Skills Program. This is a program designed to help AFDC recipients increase their job skills. As long as a parent is on the program, the department will pay for child care.

In the fiscal year 1993, about $12.2 million federal and state dollars went to fund this program, Cathy Mobley, senior policy analyst for the department, said. This helped about 11,109 children.

Kentucky also received about $16.3 million in the same year for the Child Care and Development Block

"The majority of these funds are used to subsidize child care expenses for low-income families," Johnson said. Some of the funds go toward grants and contracts aimed at improving child care services in the state.

But it isn't enough. Even though the number of children who receive child care services has tripled in the last couple of years, there are still many more who are waiting. Many parents throughout the state are forced to stay at home and rely on welfare and other federal assistant programs because they can't afford

Reed, who is a seasonal employee for the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority in Frankfort, thinks that the child care program cuts down the number of those receiving welfare checks.

"The state makes it too easy to stay at home versus working, through programs like Medicaid and welfare," Reed said.

Because of the amount of her income, Reed said it would be to her financial benefit if she did not work. When asked why she did, she laughed and said, "I'm just not the housework type.

Although there is currently a waiting list to get into the social services child care subsidy program, Reed has a suggestion for the department about informing the public of the programs.

"They need to make the benefits public in other places other than the social services and welfare office," Reed said. Before Reed got into the subsidy program, she said

be taking sexual harassment a whole lot more seriously than the older generation has in the past.

Surely you've noticed all the sto- Kim Frasure ries concerning sexual harassment, mainly on T.V. and mainly on the daily talk shows.

Recently, I read an article in Good Housekeeping's April edition titled "The Way We Are," by Lois Wyse.

Wyse spoke of how an older generation considered "soft words" or a friendly greeting, today's generation considers "sexual harassment."

She interviewed different age groups of women, and asked what they considered harassment, and of course the outcome to her question varied as much as their ages.

The one answer that struck me as a little too, oh, I don't know, ridiculous, was the word, "Honey." Now before you go your letter to the editor, hear me out. Granted, all of us are not born, bred Eastern Kentuckians. Granted, all of us did not graduate from Wheelwright High School in '78.

But, some of use did, and way back them our favorite word was "Honey."

We used the word to begin almost every sentence we uttered.

Example: Honey, let me tell ya. Now, had this word been considered sexual harassment in those days the courthouse would have indeed been packed.

I do, however, realize there are real slime balls in this world of ours, that can take this little five letter word, add some really gross gestures with it, and voila you do have an insulting situation.

I honestly can't fathom anyone taking a sentence beginning with this word, without the gross gestures, as harassment, and actually taking it to court. But it happens. Wyze, questioned herself in the article, "is a whole generation missing this neighborly niceness because of a kind of media coverage that may be making too much of too little?"

It certainly is something to think

Every single human being has an entirely different concept on what offends them personally.

And with that in mind, saying there's a whole "new" meaning for Freedom of Speech would be quite an understatement.

Yes, these days folks it most certainly does pay to watch your words carefully.

Especially in the workforce, otherwise you could find yourself on a guest spot hosted by Sally; Oprah, or maybe CNN.

To me though, harassment (not sexual) in the workforce would consist of attacks verbally or mentally which are repeated with no effort to correct.

Example: Lies or sabotage that would interfere with my ability to produce work in a manner to which I'm accustomed.

Ummm! Wonder if Benita's

A dear friend of mine called last Monday in a frenzy.

"What am I going to do with this child?" she asked.

After going to pre-school to pickup her child, the teacher asked the mother to "Please Come In" for just a minute. Oh no, the mother thought to herself, what's this child done now! Well, pre-school turns out at 1:30. Around noon the little girl had raised her hand and asked the teacher to call her mommy, she was sick and needed to go home. The teacher asked, "What's wrong honey," and the little girl replied, "I got rabies!" Rabies?" the teacher asked. "How did you get rabies?" "My mommy took me to the country club and sat me down under this big tree. I had a bowl of ice cream and this squirrel came down the tree and wanted a bite. I wouldn't give it a bite so it bit me on my lip and now I get rabies on my teeth and I need to go home. O-

Carroll guest speaker at AARP meeting

Beverly Carroll, benefits counseling coordinator with the Benefits Counseling Project of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of Kentucky, was the guest speaker at the regular monthly dinner meeting of Jenny Wiley Chapter No. 3528, American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) which was held Friday, March 18, in the cafeteria of Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Following the dinner, the meeting was called to order by the president, Burieta Gearhart, and Orville Cooley presented the devotional. All present joined in the Pledge of Allegiance to the American flag. Marie Goble read the minutes of the last meeting and James E. Goble gave the treasurer's Following a discussion, the chapter agreed to renew the chapter's corporation status and also agreed to purchase get-well cards for members of the chapter. Gladys Allen was assigned to head the project.

Next in the business meeting was a presentation by guest speaker Beverly Carroll about the Benefits Counseling Project. Carroll made the group aware of many services available to senior citizens, and offered her assistance in obtaining these services. She serves the five-county area of Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Magoffin and Pike counties.

Committee chairpersons were appointed as follows: Health Care, Margaret Ackerman; Program, Gladys Allen and Sina Blanton; "55-Alive," Margaret Ackerman and Sarah Laven; Publicity, Orville Cooley; Legislative, Ruby Akers and E. H. Stumbo. All past presidents of the chapter were named to the advisory committee.

Several persons who were present at the meeting for the first time were recognized.

Orville Cooley entertained the group with the reading of a humorous poem.

The meeting was adjourned with prayer by E. H. Stumbo.

Present for the AARP meeting were Burieta Gearhart, James E. and Marie Goble, Brad and Carolyn Warrix, Dot Tiner, Orville and Gladys Cooley, Toots Parsley, Flem and Sina Blanton, Russell and Sarah Laven, Nell Montgomery, Gladys S. THE RED FOX OF THE MOUNTAINS, PART 3

"Bad Ira" Mullins, from near Pound, Virginia, 10 miles or so north of Wise, Virginia, was a moonshiner and bootlegger. Mullins became a bitter enemy of the Red Fox, Doc M. B. Taylor.

Ira was a large, gaunt, raw-boned mountaineer who feared no one but was feared by many. He hauled whiskey in the back of a jolt wagon covered with straw. Ira's customers could count on him being in Wise, the county seat of Wise County, Virginia, with his liquor on court days.

A hatred between Old Ira and The Red Fox began when Ira was ambushed while returning from North Carolina with a load of whiskey. The posse hid behind houses, trees and fences, and opened fire on Old Ira and his party as they passed. Ira and one of his men escaped by fleeing around a corner and into someone's home. The third man was killed.

Later in the day, Ira walked undisturbed out of town but he carried a large grudge against the Red Fox with him. Ira had lost his load of whiskey and one of his men had been killed. In a way, he had also lost his freedom because he knew he would have to be forever mindful of the dastardly Red Fox.

"They treated me like a dawg," he would say. "They bushwhacked me right in town and tried to shoot me down like a dawg."

Ira vowed revenge against the Fox and placed a $300 bounty on his head. The Fox had taken potshots at him in the mountains but now he had tried to ambush him right in the county seat of Wise County.

Soon thereafter, the Fox learned that Ira had been seriously wounded in a shoot-out with revenuers in North Carolina, leaving him paralyzed. The Fox breathed a sign of relief, believing that any danger from his old nemesis was past.

A few months later however, the Fox was startled to hear that Ira was again selling moonshine in Wise. The paralyzed mountainman lay in straw with his contraband whiskey in the back of his two-horse wagon. The wagon was driven by his smallish wife and accompanied by his son.

Through paralyzed hand and foot, Ira could move his head and deepsunk dark eyes. His appearance was even more evil than before and struck fear in the hearts of those who saw him. Ira made no attempt to conceal his hatred for the Fox.

The Fox feared for his life and plotted the death of Ira. He sneaked into the night and shot into the bedroom of his enemy. The shots ripped through Ira's bed but he was un-

Iraresponded by renewing his vow to have the Fox killed-if he didn't get him first.

Talton Hall, as mean as Bad Ira, was also an enemy of the Fox. Hall began his career of murder and mayhem at a young age-a career that eventually led to the gallows of Wise,

He was no stranger to the courts in the mountains of Kentucky and Virginia, having been brought to trial for murder and other offenses on several occasions. In each instance he was acquitted and set free after he, or members of his gang, intimidated witnesses, jurors or members of the judicial system.

On July 25, 1891, Hall murdered a policeman by the name of Enos Hylton, in Norton, Virginia, after the officer arrested one of his friends. Hall fled into the hills and eventually stayed at a Middlesboro, Kentucky, hotel before traveling to Memphis, Tennessee, where he was captured. Doc Taylor (the Red Fox), along with Wise County Sheriff Wilson Holbrook, brought Talt Hall back to

The county seat of Wise was put under military law after Hall's confederate, Devil John Wright, along with his gang, vowed to break him out of jail. Each of the gang members took a solemn oath to come to the aid of each other in such circumstances.

The Police Guard, with red stripes of flannel tied to their shoulders and to their Winchester rifles, watched the streets leading into Wise. The jail was continuously patrolled. Officers were stationed at strategic points in and around the courthouse and in the courtroom. Everyone entering the courthouse was searched.

During the trial the courthouse was barricaded and portholes were cut through the brick walls. They were to be used as gun ports in the event trouble should arise. Hall was notorious for causing trouble.

The Fox had a profound dislike for Hall and his lawlessness just as he disliked Bad Ira Mullins. His killing had brought heartache to many families and the Fox found no redeeming value in the man he also feared.

He was a guard during Hall's trial and stood over the prisoner like a conqueror. The Fox often pointed his huge pistols at Hall during the trial prompting Hall to call the Fox a mad-

Anyway, the new rate-increase proposal now goes to the independent Postal Rate Commission which has 10 months to rule on the request. This seems to me kind of like the legislature trying to decide whether or not to give itself a raise, so I expect it'll approve the new rate, and by this Elaine Dandridge, to Dedra Delene time next year, it'll cost almost a dollar for the same service we used to get for less than a dime.

I can't imagine what it'd cost these days to mail fruit trees, honey bees and biddies.

after paying for child care she did not have enough money to live on. But she didn't want to quit her job, so Reed periodically had to turn to food stamps and a medical card for help.

"If I had known about the program, some things could have gone a lot different for me," Reed, reflecting back, said.

Soon after calling the department, she was able to begin receiving help from the At-Risk Child Care program which is set up to assist families who might otherwise be "at risk" of being eligible for AFDC. Reed was one of the lucky ones.

The Department of Social Services gave Reed a list of the day cares in Frankfort that accepted the government subsidies. From that list, Reed chose Capitol Avenue Day Care

"If you feel good about the place, you feel good about the children," Reed said. "The choice is nice."

Mary Smither, director of Capitol Avenue Day Care, said she will refer parents to the department if they need help with child care. Smither said she knows of parents who are struggling now but can't get help because the funds aren't available.

Reed said although the process of getting aid is not quite that simple, the program is definitely a benefit.

"It's quite a bit of paperwork. You have to have a lot of verification, like rent, income, and proof of custody," Reed said. "But if I didn't have the help from them, I wouldn't be able to

Fertilizing and pruning apple trees

Well-managed, home-grown apple trees will yield larger crops and higher quality fruit when they get off to a good start.

"Fruit trees can be fertilized in February and early March," said John Strang, extension horticulture specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

When fertilizer is applied now, tree roots are able to pick up the nitrogen in preparation for spring growth, he said. If nitrogen is applied in mid- to late summer, this may promote winter injury because hardiness development may be delayed.

In most cases, nitrogen in the form of ammonium nitrate is the only fertilizer needed for apple trees, Strang said. The amount of nitrogen that should be applied depends on a tree's age and the amount of growth it made the previous season.

Evaluate three vigor by examining the terminal shots of the apple tree to determine how much growth was made the previous season, Strang explained. The point from which the shoot grew the previous season is marked by bud scale scars that form a small ring in the bark around the shoot. These bud scale scars are left by the bud scales that covered the terminal bud during the previous win-

"On apples, it is best to have an top of the tree and cut branches to the average of 12 to 15 inches of terminal growth," he added. "If a tree has more than this, use a little less fertilizer and if there is less than this, use a little more.'

'For apples, apply a quarter pound of nitrogen per year of age of the tree," Strang said. "For example, a four-year-old tree would get about one pound of ammonium nitrate. The fertilizer should be sprinkled on the ground beneath the drip line of the tree, not at the base of the trunk, so rainfall will push the fertilizer down into the root zone."

"But remember," he added, "if a lawn is fertilized, this may supply all the nitrogen fertilizer needed for an apple tree.'

Fruit trees should be pruned every year to promote annual fruiting, he said. The goal is to open up the tree to allow sunlight to get into its interior. Pruning is best done between mid-February and the tree's full bloom when the worst of winter is over because pruning dehardens trees and makes them more susceptible to win-

Young trees should be pruned last because they are most susceptible to winter injury, Strang said. On older trees, first remove any dead or diseased branches and then start at the desired height. Be sure to make these cuts to an outwardly-growing limb and don't leave branch stubs because it is difficult for the tree to seal off or grow over stubs.

If more than two very large limbs need to be removed, plan to remove them over a two- to three-year period, he added. Next, remove any limbs that cross over each other and eliminate limbs that have narrow or weak crotch angles. Try to avoid having more than one branch arising from the same area of the trunk and remove or cut back limbs that crowd other limbs. Also remove water sprouts and try to divert side branches to grow and fill vacant areas of trees.

Since apples grow more on horizontal than vertical branches, pruners should encourage the development of branches that grow at 45 to 60 degree angles from the trunk, which also promotes development of strong branches, Strang added. Try to remove branches that arise at sharp angles from the trunk. These are often weaker because bark accumulates between the branch and the trunk and they often break off under heavy fruit load.

More information on apple tree pruning and a video tape can be obained from county extension offices.

Meeting consumer demands for fish

Consumers fishing for a good diet produce growth for the aquaculture

"Increased awareness of the importance of consuming a healthy diet helped spur this change," said Sandra Bastin extension nutrition specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"The average consumption of fish and shellfish increased from three pounds per person in 1970 to 15 pounds per person in 1993, so the aquaculture industry is rapidly growing," said Bastin.

Over 20 different species are farmraised in a controlled environment, she said. Catfish account for one-half of the production with other species including shrimp, salmon, shell fish, and crawfish.

"The aquaculture industry in the United States serves as the world's largest seafood exporter and second largest importer," she said. "Current tight restrictions on commercial harvesting will boost the aquaculture industry's expansion."

As with any meat or poultry, seafood should be chosen carefully and cooked properly to avoid foodborne illness, Bastin said. Purchasing fish from reputable markets and cooking it sufficiently will help to avoid bacterial contamination.

If you have long distance numbers within the 606 area code on any programmed services or equipment like Speed Calling, Call Forwarding, modems, or even a FAX machine, now's the time to reprogram them. Effective April 2, 1994, dialing the area code will be necessary to complete long distance calls to telephone numbers within the 606 area.

Dealing with creditors

When consumers do not have amount of finance charges paid. enough money to pay all credit obligations, some difficult financial decisions are necessary.

When income is reduced, changes in spending must be made. The sooner these changes are made, the more likely financial problems can be lessened.

Creditors want consumers' business and encourage those who have trouble paying to contact them early. If consumers have been good at paywere late or did not make regular

"Consumers should frankly discuss future income prospects so creditors can figure out some possible solutions to tide the situation over both parties," said Sue Badenhop, home economist with the University Kentucky College of Agriculture. should be able to come up with a fair payment plan. Consumers should also be sure to keep records and copies of all correspondence with creditors."

Consumers are obligated to pay all creditors and not paying debts will affect credit records and may involve court action, she said. Debt adjustment by prorating available money to all creditors may help reduce the amount paid to creditors or extend the time period for payments. With this method, each creditor would be paid a fair percentage of a consumer's regular monthly payment and the coor eration of all creditors is neces-

Priorities need to be established to determine which creditors should be paid, Badenhop added. Usually, house, utilities, food, transportation and medical insurance creditors take preference. Unsecured debts may have a lower priority than secured debts since the only collateral is the signed guarantee of the borrower.

No Pain: A Major Gain For Your Feet

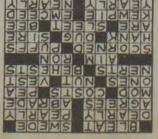

(NAPS)-Here's an idea you may care to run through your head: there's no need to "run through the pain" when it comes to exercise and your feet.

In fact, your feet are not supposed to hurt when you run. These suggestions may help. · It's a good idea for a beginning runner or jogger to visit not only a family physician but a podiatrist as well. He or she will examine your feet and identify any potential problems, discuss conditioning, prescribe an orthotic device that fits into a running shoe (if necessary) and recommend the best style of footwear for your feet.

· Frequent joggers ought to see a podiatrist regularly, to check for any potential stress on the lower extremities.

Answers to King Crossword

During a ten-mile run, your feet hit the ground running 15,000 times, at a force three to four times your body weight.

· Before really running, warm up your feet with a half mile jog and then some stretching exercises. After a run, repeat the stretching process for five to ten minutes to cool down.

· A good pair of running shoes may be your most important piece of equipment. Keep in mind, all shoes have a different shape and sizes are not uniform from shoe to shoe. The shoes fit if the heel is snug and does not slide and there's a thumb's width between the longest toe and the tip of the toe box. You should be able to wiggle your toes.

· Proper foot hygiene can also prevent injuries. Keeping feet powdered and dry is important, especially if you suffer from blisters. Don't neglect serious foot pain, it will not go away by itself and it should be treated professionally. You can obtain further information on foot problems by telephoning 1-800-FOOT-CARE (366-8227).
