Board agrees on union contract with bus drivers

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County school bus drivers and the school board agreed during a special meeting Thursday to a three-year contract negotiated by the United Steel Workers Union.

Board members backed off a two-year pact because bus drivers were asking for an additional pay raise which would have amounted to approximately $75,000 per year.

Board member Phyllis Honshell "reluctantly" agreed to the union contract and her yes vote passed the issue 3-1. Board member Dolores Smith voted against the contract and board member Brent Clark was absent.

Prior to the vote, board chairman Ray Brackett said that it was in the best interest of "management" to have a long-term contract.

Smith said that she preferred to deal directly with people and didn't think the board should have to go through a "third party" to resolve problems between the bus drivers and the board.

Union organizer Alan Whicker told the board that the bus drivers could work with them if "the board saw fit" to approve the contract.

Board member Eddie Patton said that he was in favor of the contract because he had seen how "things work with the board of education" during his tenure as transportation director. He added that he felt everybody should be placed under the same rules and same conditions.

"I'll be for it until hell freezes over," Patton said.

Honshell said that she felt that approving the contract would establish some kind of rapport between the bus drivers and the board. She added that she, too, felt the two sides could work together without a third party.

In other action Thursday:

- the board awarded bids for property, general liability and errors and omissions insurance;

- the board agreed to obtain fleet insurance from the Kentucky School Boards Insurance Trust for $79,300 a year with a $25,000 per occurrence deductible, and to continue to seek better quotes for fleet insurance;

- Elliott Contracting was awarded a bid for $623,000 to build a technology lab and two science classrooms at Adams Middle School; and

- Computers Plus in Paintsville was awarded the bid for maintenance on the system's computers, printers, software and CD-ROM.

The board's next meeting will be Monday, July 18 at 6:30 p.m. at McDowell Elementary. The board chose not to hold its first regular monthly meeting which would have been on July 4.

Four-car accident injures six

A car driven by Steve Thacker, 19, of Pikeville, on U.S. 23 in Prestonsburg on Tuesday morning, crossed into the south-bound lane of traffic and struck three cars which sent six people to the hospital. Three of the injured taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center were treated and released. A passenger in Thacker's vehicle was transported to U.K. Medical Center. The two others who were injured were being evaluated at presstime. The accident is under investigation by Prestonsburg police officer Mack Stewart. (photo by Susan Allen)

Chandler probing Floyd's school construction records

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

For the second time in three years the state auditor's office is reviewing school construction records in Floyd and Pike counties.

State Auditor Ben Chandler has requested school construction records from the Kentucky School Facility Construction Commission pertaining to projects in Floyd and Pike counties.

Chandler declined to discuss specifics of the probe, but Robert Tarvin, director of the school facilities construction commission (SFCC), reportedly said that Chandler's office has asked for all of the commission's records for Floyd and Pike counties.

In Floyd County, state officials have been concerned for some time about excessive costs and the large amount of change orders relating to school construction.

On the South Floyd High School project, for example, in 1991, officials from the state's Office of Education Accountability and then State Auditor Bob Babbage conducted an extensive review of that project.

The school was originally estimated to cost $4.4 million to build when construction contracts were signed in 1986, but excessive site costs and construction delays pushed the cost to approximately $13 million.

Although the construction contracts were signed in 1986, site preparation for the school did not begin until 1990. South Floyd High School opened this school year and work continues on a $3 million gymnasium.

In his report to school officials, Babbage said he found no evidence of criminal wrongdoing, but he made several recommendations to school officials concerning the business prac-

Commission approves budget before deadline

by Willie Elliott
Contributing Writer

With the deadline imposed by the arrival of the new fiscal year fast approaching, the Wheelwright City Commission met in special-called session last Thursday to vote on a budget for the coming fiscal year and to consider other matters.

With the absence of Mayor David Sammons and commission member David Hall, the commission selected Charles Harmon as mayor pro tem so business could be done in time to avoid any penalties or reprimands for not having a budget in time to start the fiscal year.

The city will have $59,993 in the general fund and $27,243 in the road fund for the coming year, according to the ordinance that was read and accepted by the commission. All three members present, Allen Taylor, Luther Johnson Jr., and Charles Harmon, voted for the budget.

In other matters, the commission voted:

- to table the 2.6 percent cost-of-living raise for employees and adopt a new policy for personnel;

- to refuse to pay some bills that were made prior to this administration that did not have prior commission's approval (uniforms for Brent Huff and a physical for David Duncan were two bills the commission would not honor).

- not to build sheds around the swimming pool until such time as the pool actually had water in it;

- to reject the idea of putting a fence around the walking track of the municipal building;

- not to install a drain pipe at the property of Jerry Hall but to see the utilities department about correcting the situation; and

- to donate $200 to the senior citizens, but to take the money from the park fund rather than the reddog fund.

Johnson announced that he will resign his position on the commission on August 4 because he no longer lives within the city limits of Wheelwright.

Race track opens on schedule

The wait is over for live harness racing in Floyd County as the Thunder Ridge Racing and Entertainment Complex kicked off its inaugural season Sunday evening.

About 5,000 people attended the first live harness racing ever in Eastern Kentucky with over 3,000 more showing up on Monday for the holiday weekend of racing action.

Victoria Caudill, the public relations director for Thunder Ridge, said that Sunday's crowd "was a very nice crowd (size-wise)" and that "everyone was really pleased" with the way the opening night went.

Caudill also added that the crowd was "pleased with the facilities" and said that several people said they would return.

Over $80,000 in bets were placed during the two days.

Live racing will continue this Friday and will be held every Friday, Saturday, Tuesday and Wednesday until the season ends on Sunday September 11.

Post time is 7 p.m. each racing day, except Saturday, which starts at 1 p.m.

And they're off

Live harness racing got underway Sunday evening at the Thunder Ridge Racing and Entertainment Complex. Domino Hill was victorious in the first ever race in Eastern Kentucky. About 5,000 people were on hand for the opening night of harness racing which will run through September 11. Over $80,000 in bets was placed in the opening two days. (photo by Mike Burke)

Six are hurt in four car mishap

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A four-car traffic accident on U.S. 23 in Prestonsburg sent six people to the hospital Tuesday morning.

Prestonsburg patrolman Mack Stewart said that a vehicle driven by Steve Thacker, 18, of Pikeville, was traveling north on U.S. 23 near Rudd Equipment when his car left the north-bound lane and swerved into the south-bound lane striking several vehicles.

A passenger in Thacker's vehicle, 16-year-old Paul B. Collins, received massive head and leg injuries and was transported to U.K. Medical Center in Lexington.

Thacker's vehicle first struck a car driven by Marshall L. Edwards, 43, a Lexington pharmacist, and then hit a vehicle driven by Keith Caudill, 36, of Stambaugh.

Rita Stumbo, 45, of Dwale, swerved to miss Thacker's vehicle and hit Edwards' car. Mildred McGuire, 63, a passenger in Stumbo's vehicle and Stumbo were taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center, and treated and released.

After coming to a stop, Thacker's vehicle caught fire. A witness at the scene had a fire extinguisher and put out the flames, Stewart said.

Kathy Thacker of Meade Branch in Floyd County, the mother of Steve Thacker, will be cited for no insurance because she is the owner of the vehicle, Stewart said.

Deadline passes to complete revaluations

The state's July 1 deadline for property revaluation in Floyd County has come and gone, but state tax appraisers are not finished with their assessment.

Tax assessors with the state Revenue Cabinet were to have completed the reassessment by July 1 in 25 Kentucky counties declared in a state of emergency in 1990 by the Cabinet because property values varied too widely.

The reassessment was required after the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA) was passed in 1990. KERA required all property be valued at 100 percent of its cash value.

Appraisals have been completed in 21 of the 25 counties.

One of the primary reasons for the task not being completed by deadline is the size of Floyd County, said Lovel Hall, Property Valuation Administrator for the county.

Hall cited lack of adequate funding for the project and said the Cabinet had run out of money for the project.

"They spent too much too quick," he said.

He also said the state's Floyd County assessment was understaffed and that only two assessors had been sent to reevaluate property in Floyd.

James Coffman, commissioner of the Department of Property Taxation, said the Revenue Cabinet's interpretation of the 1990 law meant that the tax assessment must be done in time to apply to 1994 tax bills.

Knott teens arrested at Auxier

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Three Knott County juveniles were arrested last week for allegedly trying to cash in stolen lottery tickets at an Auxier convenience store.

Kentucky State Police trooper Les Stapleton said Tuesday that a 16-year-old and two 17-year-old teens were arrested at the Auxier Autobahn on June 27 after they tried to cash lottery tickets reported stolen from a Knott County store.

During a burglary at Salyer's Convenience Mart in Carrie, lottery tickets, cash, two guns and food stamps were taken. Trooper Dean Craft is investigating the burglary.

The juveniles were trying to cash $33 in scratch tickets, Stapleton said. The three were charged in Floyd County with receiving stolen property.

Local doctors discuss health care options

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

"We need to control our destinies, instead of the insurance companies and, worst of all, the Clinton Administration," Dr. Robert Goodin, president-elect of the Kentucky Medical Association (KMA), told area health care professionals Tuesday night at a meeting of the Floyd County Medical Society.

Dr. Goodin suggested that doctors form a system of managed care.

"What's really changing in health care delivery is managed care," Goodin said.

Managed Care is a system of delivery where there is control and assessment, Goodin said. Some of the benefits of Managed Care are provider discounts, encourage efficient practice habits, enrollment of healthier people, increasing preventive care, Goodin explained.

The Kentucky Medical Association will assist doctors with managed care systems by acting as an information structure, he explained.

"KMA will give an overview of Managed Care, how it is delivered and how you (will) receive it in the year 2000."

KMA, "for a little bit of lawyer's fee and consulting visit," said Goodin, will help doctors form a physician's organization.

Goodin briefly explained several options of managed care, including Preferred Provider Organization (PPO) and Physician Hospital Organization (PHO). In PPOs, physicians agree to accept a discounted fee. Patients do not have to utilize the services of physicians in the PPO, but they are encouraged to use them.

In an interview before the meeting, Goodin recommended PHOs. In PHOs, hospitals and doctors work together to keep costs reasonable

Options

Goodin said. Goodin wants doctors to have a strong voice in health care reform and quotes the American Medical Association's standing on the health measures:

"Voices plus choice equals physician support," he said. "Let physicians and patients have a voice; let the physician and patient play a role." "We're trying to be sure patients won't lose their doctors," he said. "What we're coming to in medicine is accountability, and what we have to agree to is to have assessments."

Most physicians are eager to be accountable, Goodin said, but physicians are "somewhat scared" by the health care reform.

"We don't want to become employees of the government," he explained.

Physicians should look at this as an opportunity, Goodin said.

"This is as big a change as in the 60s when Medicare changed the health care system. Obviously, anytime there's change, you worry, but there is an opportunity to make the system better and we're going to approach that aspect," Goodin said.

For more information about physicians organizations, call Doctors Resource Service at 1-800-AMA-1066 or KMA at 426-6200.

Also at the meeting, Dr. Robert J. Dempsey, director of the stroke program at the University of Kentucky's Division of Neurosurgery, discussed the Stroke Program at the UK hospital.

Because Kentucky has a high incidence of stroke and stroke mortality, the Council on Higher Education helped to create the stroke program at UK's Center on Aging. The goal of the program is to provide the most up to date care in the diagnosis, prevention and treatment of stroke, Dr. Dempsey said.

Stroke is the number three cause of death in the United States, Dr. Dempsey said. It is also the number one cause of disability in the older age group. The cost to society including total care for these patients approaches $65 billion dollars per year in this country, Dempsey said.

The doctor explained several projects at the clinic, including studies on Intracranial hemorrhage, Intra-parenchymal hemorrhage and Thromboembolic stroke.

The most devastating type of stroke is Intracranial hemorrhage, said Dempsey, but it has a high incidence of successful surgical therapy. The Stroke Program includes multiple studies in the early diagnosis and delayed treatment of such hemorrhage patients.

Intra-parenchymal hemorrhage (bleeding into the brain) stroke is often associated with hypertension and may be preventable, Dempsey reported. More recent MRI studies suggest that underlying lesions of a surgical nature, may be more common and that bleeding may continue for 4 to 6 hours, he said. Dempsey recommended neurosurgical evaluation.

Thromboembolic stroke (spreading of blood clots) is particularly prevalent in Kentucky with its high relationship to tobacco use and Hyperlipidemia (high fat), Dempsey said. He explained that significant advances have been made in the early diagnosis with x-ray studies to check blood flow from the heart to the brain in atherosclerotic patients.

He also announced the successful completion of the randomized trial surgery in symptomatic patients with high grade stenosis (narrowing of the blood vessels due to fat deposition leading to a decreased blood supply).

Studies continue on atherosclerotic plaques to examine risk factors which may enhance plaque (fat deposit) buildup on one patient as compared to another, Dempsey said.

For more information about strokes, Dr. Dempsey recommended patients contact their physicians, or for more information about the Stroke Program at UK, call Dr. Robert Moore at (606) 323-5760.

Mishap

Everyone but Thacker and his passenger were wearing seat belts, Stewart added.

Prestonsburg Fire Department members used the Jaws of Life to free Edwards, Thacker and Collins from their vehicles.

Edwards was treated at Highlands and released. Caudill's condition was being evaluated at presstime.

The accident is under investigation by officer Stewart.

Members of the Prestonsburg Police Department, the Prestonsburg Fire Department, Respond Ambulance and P & B Ambulance responded to the scene. Also officers of the Kentucky State Police and members of the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad stopped at the scene to offer assistance.

McConnell announces committee approval of nutrition project for low-income children

U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell announced recently the approval of funds by the Senate Appropriations Committee for a demonstration project he initiated in 1989 as part of the Child and Adult Care Food Program. McConnell's project allows for-profit child care centers in Kentucky to receive federal reimbursement for meals in 25 percent if the children are from low income families.

"In Kentucky, 57 percent of children in these child care centers are from low income families, so this project has been extremely beneficial to these kids and to the centers," said McConnell. "This demonstration project has been very successful in Kentucky and I am pleased that my request for continued funding has been approved."

A U.S. Department of Agriculture study on McConnell's project determined that it had increased the number of Kentucky children and centers participating in the Child and Adult Care Food Program; increased the types of meals available; and improved the quality of meals served.

A recommendation for continued funding of the program was included in the Agriculture and Rural Development Appropriations bill. The Appropriations Committee of which McConnell is a member, approved the bill Thursday.

Tax

Hall expects tax bills to be out by the first of the year, and there will be "a few surprises."

"Probably a few thousand (dollars) worth," Hall said. "People have to pay what the Revenue Cabinet says its worth. People who live in a $100,000 home should expect to pay tax on a $100,000 home."

In neighboring Johnson County, the revaluation project was delayed, in part, due to a dispute with the property valuation administrator. The Revenue Cabinet said Johnson County PVA Custer Picklesimer had refused the state's instructions for the reassessment project, and removed him from office.

Picklesimer took his case to court and was reinstatement, but the Revenue Cabinet has appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

Work is also incomplete in Harlan and Pike counties.

Correction

An article in Friday's edition of The Times incorrectly stated that employees of Rumpke of Kentucky, the company responsible for solid waste pick up, would travel on private property to collect garbage. Employees will not venture onto private property for trash collection.

Host families sought in Prestonsburg area

At some point, while listening to an American history lecture, writing that term paper or watching a movie, every American teenager wonders, if only for a moment, about the rest of the world. What would it be like to live in China, play rugby on a London high school team, or to live in Russia?

What better way to satisfy a curiosity about other cultures than to share your home with a high school student from another country? Suzi Power-Morris, Prestonsburg area Regional Director for the Academic Year in America high school exchange program, is presently interviewing families in this part of Kentucky to host a foreign exchange student.

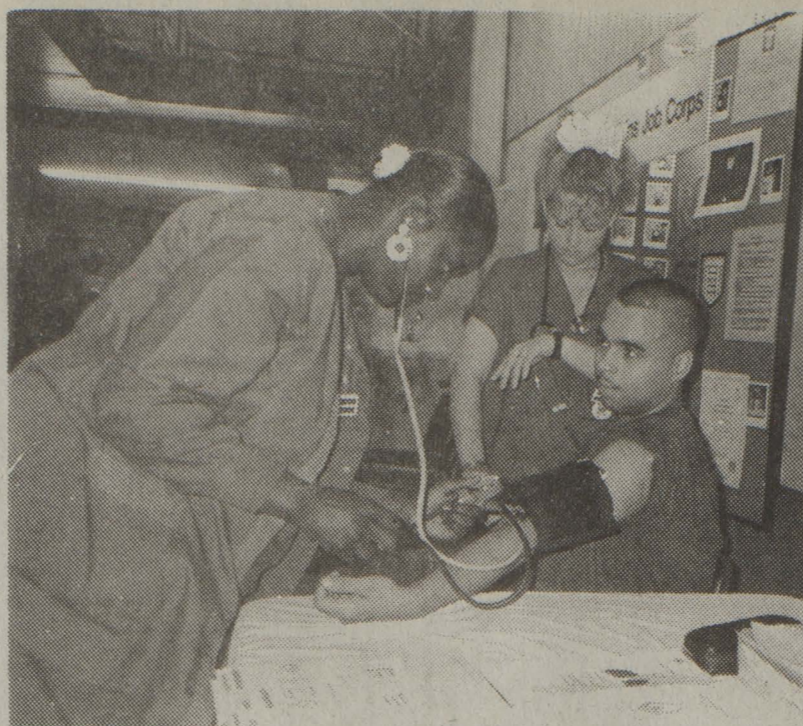

The cross cultural learning program places English-speaking teenagers from more than 20 countries across the globe with American families for a semester or school year. AYA students are well-screened, and arrive with medical insurance, their own spending money, and a sincere desire to study in an American high school and enjoy being a "typical American teenager."

Families who host AYA students have the unique opportunity to share their traditions and values with a foreign student, and in exchange learn the language and customs of another country. Host families receive a travel scholarship, worth up to $800 off the cost of certain AIFS study/travel abroad programs.

Whether you have young children, teenage children or no children, you may qualify as a host family if you can provide a bed, a place to study, two meals a day and an open heart. Interested families are invited to choose the boy or girl who would best fit with their lifestyles and interests, and hosting can be August through December, January through June or August through June.

Make a difference in your community today! Interested host families are encouraged to contact Suzi Power-Morris at 1-800-322-4678 ext. 5417.

Domestic violence

If anything positive comes out of the O.J. Simpson murder case, it may be that society finally will begin to take seriously the problem of domestic violence.

Last year, more than 4 million women were subjected to physical battering by their husbands or lovers. Actually, the toll may be much higher, because law enforcement officials estimate that fewer than 20 percent of assaults are reported.

A victim's reluctance to come forward may stem from a misguided belief that, if she suffers in silence, he will change for the better. Or she may be terrified that her abuser will kill her if she exposes him. Or she may doubt that the criminal justice system can protect her if she does file a complaint.

To begin with, battered women need to understand that wife beaters seldom undergo a peaceful transformation on their own. The data show that, absent outside intervention, a man who slaps his wife or lover around is likely to resort to violence again.

Police records show, for instance, that Nicole Brown Simpson was punched, kicked and beaten so badly on New Year's Day 1989 that she required treatment at a hospital. And the fact that O.J. Simpson pleaded no contest to misdemeanor spousal battery charges is far less instructive than what he shouted to police officers when they responded to a 911 call: "The police have been out here eight times before and now you're going to arrest me for this?" he said. "This is a family matter. Why do you want to make a big deal out of it when we can handle it?"

Had the Los Angeles Police Department and the district's attorney's office taken more seriously O.J. Simpson's wife-beating at the outset, she might be alive today.

Law enforcement agencies must move aggressively against men who abuse their wives or lovers. One of the best ways to break the cycle of domestic violence is to ensure that abusers are held strictly accountable for their actions.

The most powerful message that society can send abusers and their victims is that domestic violence simply will not be tolerated.

Early intervention is the key to deterring men's violent behavior toward their lovers, which accounts for nearly 50 percent of police calls. A far more chilling statistic is that abusive husbands or boyfriends are responsible for approximately 40 percent of all the murders of women. That alone underscores the importance of dealing with this problem instead of hiding it under the carpet.—Copley News Service

—Other Voices

by Hal Hamilton,

"The wedding is arranged. All we need is for the bride and groom to step forward," said a senior House staff member. He was discussing a proposal to earmark a portion of the expected tobacco tax increase to assist growers. Yet tobacco state members of Congress are reluctant to bargain for a share of the pending excise tax increase.

Tobacco politicians may fight the tax, lose and return home with empty-handed bravado. They could return home with a reinvestment trust fund to supplement declining tobacco income with earnings from high-quality food, fiber and wood products. They will have to be willing, however, to step up to the altar along with the health care reform legislators.

Farmers are the pawns in this game played by powerful interests. The health lobby wants to raise taxes and restrict smoking. Because higher tobacco taxes have the approval of about three-quarters of the population, Congress is sure to act. But many representatives and senators realize that small farmers will suffer and are willing to invest a portion of the increases in helping growers.

Most of the tobacco industry, however, is following a different course. Tobacco is still highly profitable for Phillip Morris and RJ Reynolds, but cheaper production and expanded markets are available in other parts of the world. The companies have a clear interest in holding off the tax and smoking restrictions as long as possible while they diversify their operations and move their procurement, manufacturing and marketing overseas.

The interests of tobacco farmers get lost in the shuffle. Growers are not consulted, for example, as Congress develops its economic development schemes to "help tobacco farmers."

Many well-meaning people ask why tobacco farmers don't just switch to other crops. While tobacco isn't subsidized like many other agricultural products, tobacco growers do benefit from one of the few, virtually cost-free, federal farm programs.

Since the 1930s the government has required companies to pay a fair price for tobacco. Early in the spring, farmers know the minimum price and how much tobacco they'll be able to sell. This means a high return on a few acres. Tobacco farms are, on average, about one-third as large as other farms. It also means a greater risk when switching to other crops.

While farmers may get a high return, tobacco companies fare even better. For every ten dollars spent by U.S. consumers on tobacco products, tobacco companies receive $6.85;

$2.89 go to local, state and federal taxes; and farmers earn 26 cents. At least one-fourth of The Department of Agriculture projects that the demand for U.S. grown tobacco will drop by half over the next few years. Economists attribute this to a combination of factors. The proposed increase in federal taxes constitutes about one-third of the reduction. As demand decreases, the government should invest a portion its tobacco earnings in projects that allow the nation's 125,000 tobacco farmers and 135-tobacco dependent counties to shift to other, high-value crops and enterprises.

Earnings from bulk commodities like corn and soybeans will never replace tobacco income. Tobacco farms are too small for large-scale production, and rarely get a good deal from corporate processors.

Tobacco farmers do not want a handout, merely a reinvestment of a small portion of the wealth they have created. This might be the only moment in history when Congress would be willing to invest in tobacco communities. Tobacco-state representatives constitute a key voting bloc in the House for health care reform. A reinvestment fund will not help every farmer.

Hamilton is director of the Community Farm Alliance, a membership organization with county chapters across rural Kentucky. Hamilton was a dairy and tobacco farmer for 15 years and co-chairs the National Sustainable Agriculture Coordinating Council.

Gasoline prices are too high

Editor:

The national gasoline price is $1.12 per gallon.

In Pike County the gasoline is $1.18 to $1.20 per gallon.

I read in the newspaper that Hope, Feed The Children mission, was in Pike county with 38,000 pounds of food to feed the poor.

Hope's president said that about a third of Pike County's families are on some kind of government assistance.

With the price we have to pay for our necessities, you would think everyone is doing just great.

Hillary tells it to the Marines

by Dale McFeatters
Scripps Howard News Service

We here at the Institute for Bizarre Clinton Happenings are still puzzled by Hillary's attempt to enlist in the Marines.

Like so much that involves the Clintons, the first version of events is only a rough draft, subject to extensive revision, modification, amplification and even reversal.

We suspect there is more to this story, much more.

To recap, she recently told a lunch group on Capitol Hill that she had tried to join the Marines in 1975 but the recruiter rejected her saying, according to Mrs. Clinton, "You're too old, you can't see, and you're a woman."

The Marine's part rings true. The recruiter was a noncom, probably from hard-luck, blue-collar background with maybe a tour or two in Vietnam behind him.

Into his office comes a 27-year-old Ivy League lawyer with sandals and thick glasses who announces she wants to be a Marine. Perhaps to help out her case, she was bayoneting imaginary enemies and making machine-gun-like noises. Clearly, our recruiter was not going to make quota this week.

However, being a noncom, the sergeant was accustomed to keeping a straight face while listening to lunatic propositions from officers with college educations and gave a straightforward, if less than diplomatic, answer.

The Hillary part does not ring true. One reason is that she had moved to Arkansas expressly to marry Bill Clinton. Now, that would have been a conversation worth paying admission to hear: "Bill, I've seen Arkansas and I've seen you, and I've decided to ship out with the Marines."

Perhaps—and after tales of her short but spectacular career in the cattle market, this would not be surprising—a story will come out of Little Rock that Hillary Rodham did indeed join the Marines. But, after a meritorious six-week career in which she rose to full colonel and won the Medal of Honor, she retired to spend more time with daughter Chelsea.

Again, even her severest critics on the rabid right, while alleging a tendency to fling the occasional piece of crockery, have never detected in her past a desire to kill people, even unacceptable foreigners.

The first lady's staff and defenders have offered muddled explanations—vaguely suggesting she was exploring options for "public service" or testing the military on its attitudes toward women.

The implication here is that in a fair and just world, the Marines would have signed her up on the spot. One wonders how reassuring it would be to share a foxhole with a Marine who runs the 100 in two days and keeps mistaking T-72 tanks for her oversized brother, Hugh.

But nothing in the annals of Clintoniana is as it first seems, so let us suggest this possible scenario:

What if she signed something that day in the recruiter's office?

The Marines are a wily breed. They've had to be to survive a hostile Army and Navy for 200 years.

Suppose this paper is locked away in a drawer of the Marine commandant's handsome antique mahogany desk.

And suppose that Mrs. Clinton has damp palms every time she sorts her mail for fear of finding a USMC envelope with a Greyhound bus ticket and orders to report to Parris Island.

Suppose, too, that Mrs. Clinton's ultimate political plans come to fruition. We could then be reading the following news item:

"WASHINGTON—As her first order of business, newly sworn-in President Hillary Rodham ordered the Marine Corps budget raised by $300 billion while a beaming Lance Cpl. Chelsea Clinton looked on."

General Assembly passes budget: Education comes out the winner

With the passage of the state's $24 billion budget last month, programs such as agriculture, economic development and education will receive the level of funding that the General Assembly pushed for throughout the regular and special sessions.

Lawmakers gathered in Frankfort for the June special session, which was called by Gov. Brereton Jones after he vetoed the 1994-1996 budget passed by the Legislature in April.

Education was one winner, receiving an increase of $26 million for basic public school financing. This is about 4.5 percent additionally for schools in 1994-1995 and 3 percent in 1995-1996.

Programs funded in the overall education budget, which totals more than $4 billion for two years, includes: Family Resource and Youth Services Centers, vocational education, staff positions and the Support Education Excellence in Kentucky (SEEK) program.

The SEEK program is intended to provide a base guarantee of $2,495 per student for the first fiscal year and $2,570 per student during the second year. These funds will be allotted to school districts that meet state guidelines.

A portion of the funding will go to the Kentucky Education Technology System (KETS) program, which enables local school districts to continue buying computers and other advanced learning tools for students and teachers.

Higher education also saw its funding increased. Colleges and universities received a $12-million increase over the next two years to expand classroom buildings, purchase educational equipment and improve accessibility for the handicapped.

The budget provides the higher education system with $713 million its first fiscal year and more than $735 million the second.

Agriculture got a boost as the result of Legislative action during the session. About $3 million was set aside to hire 50 county extension agents across the state. The agents will help teach and improve agriculture in their agricultural districts, part of the Agriculture 2000 program.

And Kentucky's 12.9 million acres of forestland and its wood products industry were granted funds to expand forester stewardships, formed to help implement long-term economic development goals in this area.

The General Assembly's efforts to assist local governments with their daily operations are reflected in several areas of the budget.

The per diem payment for local jails to house state prisoners will increase from $20.48 to $22. A provision assures that 316 additional jail beds and five probation and parole officers will be added to the jail system. Local jail support totals $14,000,000 each year of the biennium for counties across the state.

The County Road Aid program will continue its assistance to local governments. The first fiscal year $69 million will go into the program; $71 million will go into the program the second. Counties receiving money from the Rural Secondary program will find that the program is funded with $85 million the first fiscal year and $86 million the second. The Municipal Road Aid program will receive $29 million the first fiscal year and $29 million the second.

Widening roads, creating bridges, building rest areas and paving new routes are part of the state's two-year highway construction plan that totals $868 million. Also included is a provision allotting $4 million for student transportation cost for private schools.

In the area of economic development, funds were provided to promote job-creation throughout the state in the form of $5 million in bonds for economic development incentives. The Economic Development Cabinet will administer the funds.

The budget also sets aside $3 million toward job development during the biennium and $5 million is allocated for community development.

Included in economic development is $400,000 each year for the Coal Marketing and Export Council, which educates the public on coal-related issues.

Adult education in the workplace received $2.5 million for each year in the biennium to expand educational programs throughout the state. $1.6 million will be added to the program the second year in order to initiate a Workplace Essential Skills program.

The budget adds about $10 million for human-needs programs such as cancer screening, child immunizations, and sexual and spouse abuse.

State tourism gained support, receiving nearly $70 million in state-park renovations. The money will help renovate and replace facilities at 55 state parks, while 19 state parks will gain new structures, such as conference centers, visitor centers and campgrounds. More than $500,000 will help operate Carr Fork State Park and Nolin Lake State Park.

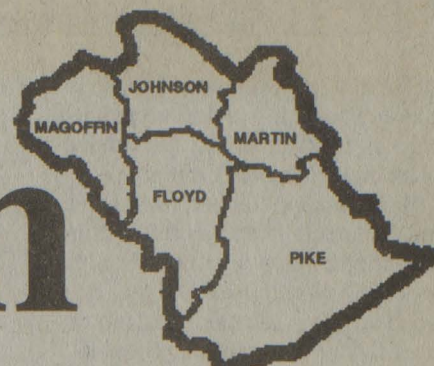

Additional support was also provided for the arts and humanities. The Governor's School for the Arts received funding to increase enrollment; the Kentucky Arts Council's Teacher Incentive Program received funding in the second year of the biennium for its expansion; and the Kentucky Craft Market received funding to relocate within the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center.

Also, the Kentucky Center for the Arts in Louisville will get a $2.4-million cash allotment for repair of the centers' stage lighting system and seats.

State employees will receive 5-percent annual raises over the biennium, and employees working in prisons and mental institutions will receive extra pay increases to bring their salaries in line with similar positions in surrounding states.

The new budget took effect July 1, at the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Pike coal miner injured in coal mine accident

A coal miner from Kimper was injured around 9:10 p.m. Wednesday, June 29, at the Pioneer Coal Mining Company at Rockhouse Fork of Hatfield.

According to Gary Thacker, EMT with the Professional Medical Trip of Belfry, 39-year-old Freddy Varney was injured while underground when a piece of rock fell on his right foot.

Varney was transported to South Williamson's Appalachian Regional Hospital where he was diagnosed with a possible fracture to the right foot.

After refusing to be transported to Logan, West Virginia, to see an orthopedic specialist, Varney was released. Officials said he is to seek treatment at Pikeville Methodist Hospital, which is closer to his home.

Prosecutors in Letcher trial say tape implicates judge-executive

Prosecutors presented a tape recording Friday that purportedly had former Letcher County Judge-Executive Ruben Watts admitting he tampered with a grand jury member.

The grand jury was looking into possible corruption in the county.

The February 11, 1993 recording supposedly has Watts, who is charged with stealing county money, admitting that he talked to grand jury member John Combs Jr.

The recording was played during a hearing in which special judges were asked to throw out indictments against Watts, businessman Ted Amburgey and a group of other defendants. Lawyers on both sides had also asked that the corruption trials, which are scheduled for next month, be moved out of Letcher County because of publicity there.

State police Sgt. Mike Carhart, who has been leading the investigation, said the entire tape would show that Watts and Amburgey claimed to have some of the grand jurors on their side. Former Letcher Circuit Judge Larry Collins, who pleaded guilty last year to accepting bribes, made the recording, Carhart said. — Associated Press

Death penalty consideration OK'd for teen charged in killings at school

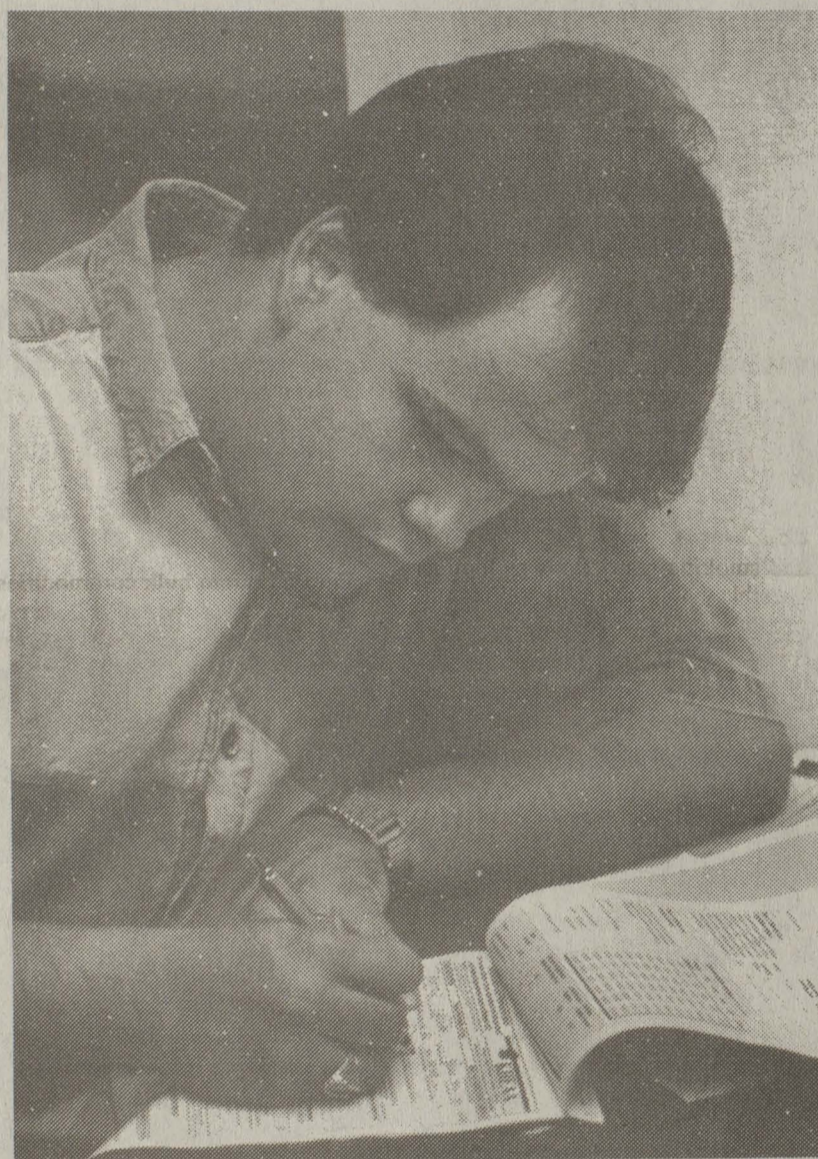

A judge ruled Friday that he will allow a jury to consider the death penalty in the case of a northeastern Kentucky teen-ager charged with fatally shooting a teacher and janitor last year.

Morgan Circuit Judge Samuel Long offered no explanation in his one-page ruling.

Pennington is charged with two counts of murder in the January 18, 1993, shootings of East Carter High School English teacher Deanna McDavid and janitor Marvin Hicks. He is also charged with 22 counts of kidnapping for allegedly holding classmates hostage for a short time after the shootings.

The trial is scheduled for July 18; it was moved from Carter County because of publicity.

Long said jury selection would likely last two to three days and that he would "be lucky to finish it (the trial) in four weeks." — Associated Press

Light

An oven developed to dry computer chips may find its way into home kitchens within two years.

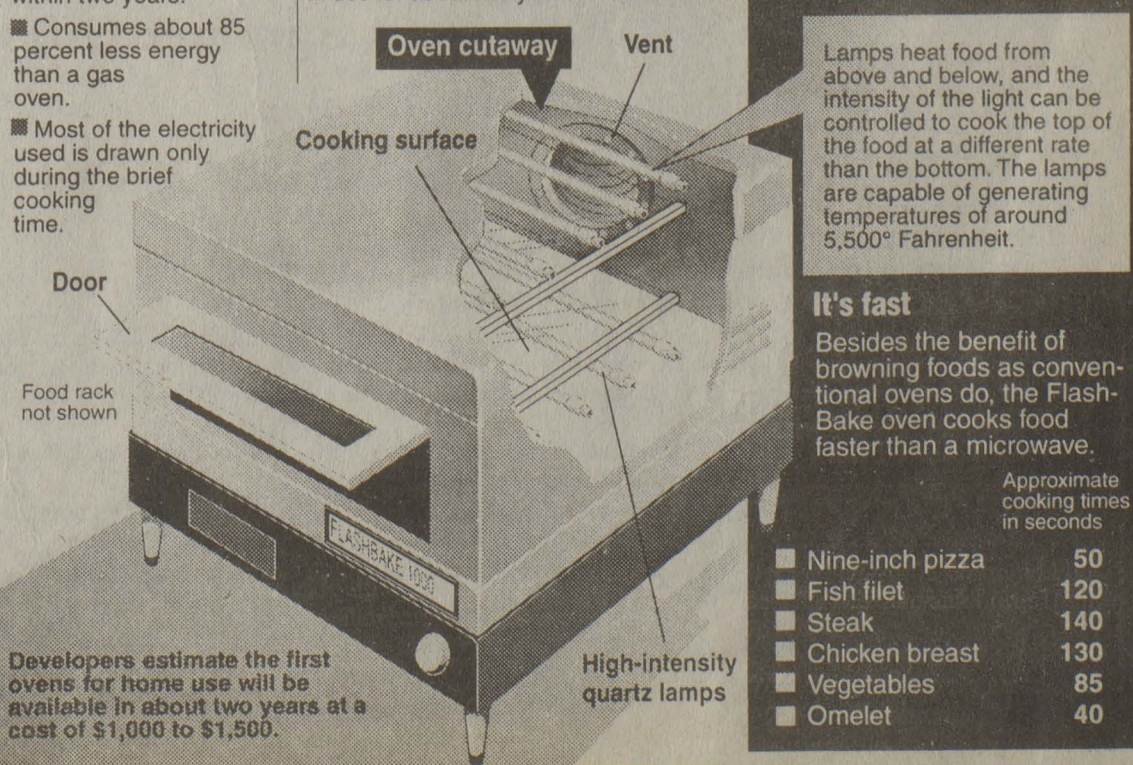

Consumes about 85 percent less energy than a gas oven.

Most of the electricity used is drawn only during the brief cooking time.

The 45-minute pizza

After waiting 45 minutes for a pizza to bake at a restaurant, two computer chip researchers realized an oven they had developed to flash-dry silicon computer chips could be used to "flashbake" pizzas.

About 100 commercial units have been in use for about two years in restaurants.

How it cooks

Unlike a microwave, which uses long-wave electromagnetic radiation to heat moisture in food, the FlashBake oven cooks food from a high-intensity light source using a special quartz lamp.

Lamps heat food from above and below, and the intensity of the light can be controlled to cook the top of the food at a different rate than the bottom. The lamps are capable of generating temperatures of around 5,500° Fahrenheit.

It's fast

Besides the benefit of browning foods as conventional ovens do, the FlashBake oven cooks food faster than a microwave.

Approximate cooking times in seconds

■ Nine-inch pizza	50
■ Fish filet	120
■ Steak	140
■ Chicken breast	130
■ Vegetables	85
■ Omelet	40

Developers estimate the first ovens for home use will be available in about two years at a cost of $1,000 to $1,500.

Local student attends summer program

Franklin Ray Stumbo of Minnie is attending an eight-week summer enrichment program at the University of Kentucky Medical Center.

Thirty-six sophomore, junior and senior students from Kentucky colleges are participating in the Health Careers Opportunity Program, designed to give selected students a better chance in competing for positions and succeeding in health professions schools. The program is funded by the Federal Division of Disadvantaged Assistance of the Public Health Service.

By providing hands-on activities, study skills instruction, problem solving sessions, and enrichment classes in the sciences, the program works to recruit, admit and retain minority and rural students to the health professions.

Program components include meeting and working with UK Medical Center faculty and students as well as taking classes in chemistry, biology and physics.

Gin Game deals its hand of life at Jenny Wiley Theatre this summer

by Tim Mollette

With Jenny Wiley Theatre's second show of the season, The Gin Game, which opened Thursday, spectators were treated to a sneak preview of a New York style production.

The reason for this unique theatrical treat is that the same cast and director who are bringing the Pulitzer Prize winning comedy to Eastern Kentucky will take their version of the play to off-off Broadway after their stint with Jenny Wiley.

Lee Kheel and John Cates, who will be featured in the play's lead roles, and Bob Bogdanoff, who is directing the production, will all make their New York debuts in these same capacities, a fact that should help provide a measure of confidence in the face of the challenge of New York, according to Bogdanoff.

"There is a great deal of competition in New York and everyone there is very protective of their space. Therefore, a new kid on the block is a hard thing to be," said Bogdanoff. "So I'm looking at it from a point of view that if I'm going with people I've worked with before and I'm already comfortable with the project we are presenting, then it will be easier for us to give it our best shot."

Cates, who originally proposed taking their version of The Gin Game to New York, first approached Bogdanoff about the possibilities of the play running on off-off Broadway and the idea meant one thing for all those who would be involved—exposure in New York.

"To start with, this project was John Cates' idea because he wanted the exposure and he asked me if I would take the show and re-direct it for the space up there and of course I said yes, because we are all looking for that kind of exposure," said Bogdanoff, commenting on the significance the project could have for the careers involved.

As New York looms in the future for the theatre team, Jenny Wiley is the present and reservations can now be made for tickets to The Gin Game. Tickets range in price from $13 for adults to $12 for senior and $7 for students under 18 for regular performances in the Wilkinson-Stumbo Convention Center. This bittersweet comedy about two people getting to know each other while in a retirement home will also be presented as both a luncheon matinee and dinner theatre at various times throughout the season. The prices for these special presentations are $21 for the luncheon matinee and $26 for the dinner theatre.

Shepherd performs with All-District Band

Vanessa Shepherd

Exciting things are happening in the music department at Duff Elementary. In March, Vanessa Shepherd auditioned for All-District Band. She rehearsed and performed with that group last weekend in April. The rehearsals took place at the Carriage House Inn, and the concert will be May 1, Sunday afternoon. Vanessa played mallet percussion for All-District band.

April 18, seven Duff music students auditioned for All-County Band. Vanessa Shepherd, Ryan Owens, Stephanie Sexton, Jessica Branham, Sonja Shepherd, Barbie Samons, and Rosanna Slone will be playing in the 1994 Jr. high All-County Band. Rehearsals took place the week of May 16 and the concert was Thursday night, May 19.

Other Duff students are working toward an "End-Of-The-Year Music Celebration." The concert involved the entire student body, and the celebration was held Thursday night, June 2, 7 p.m.

Yet another group of Duff students was held performing. The 6th, 7th, and 8th grade chorus will be presenting the musical "Fabric of Freedom", Friday night, June 3, 7 p.m. The chorus is a select group of students that will be acting and singing this Civil War drama.

Sunshine Lines

by Beverly Carroll

Senior citizens, by the time you read today's article I will have returned from my extended weekend trip.

For the past several weeks your Sunshine Lines column has been filled with a lot of meaty information of benefit to senior citizens. We had the 5-part "Preparing For One's Own Future" series, followed by an article last week encouraging your participation in the forthcoming Demand Side Management Plans program. This meeting is to encourage additional funding for lower utilities, weatherization, and insulation programs for senior citizens and other low-income people. This important meeting will be held at the Floyd County Library, in Prestonsburg, on July 6, at 2:00 p.m. I remind you again that the Commission can best be influenced by you so please attend this meeting. It is open to the public and you, our people who struggle month after month because of high utility bills, are the ones who will sway the Commission. Your input is vital to lowering utilities costs.

Today I want to lighten up on the subject matter a little. I want to share a story with you and bring your attention to some things the Benefits Counseling Program For Senior Citizens have going for you.

As I write, my husband and I are preparing to leave for Ohio. Towing an antique car—and an ugly one at that—about 300 miles is not my idea of a fun-filled holiday, but one's got to do what one's got to do.

We did have a nice time at the lake last weekend, fishing, boating and cooking out with family. I caught two big ones. Well, I thought they were big. They were the size of my hands and I have been told that I have long hands. As the sun was setting, my husband said, "Throw them back. They're not big enough to keep." I hated to part with my prize possessions but I didn't argue with him. What fish lover wants to sit down to only two fish. If you're like me, you like to pan fry a big iron skillet full.

But my husband's supposed logic didn't fool me. Just between you and me, there were two underlying reasons why he encouraged me to remove these fish from my stringer and allow them to remain in their natural habitat. He didn't want to clean them. And, he had nothing substantial to show for his day on the lake. There was one time when he thought he had hooked a big one. He was so excited. But, alas, there was no struggle as he continued to reel in his line. It didn't take him long to realize that what he caught was not a fish. When his catch surfaced we all had a good laugh. He hooked a big, rusty rod and reel. Evidently some fish are smart. The one who nabbed the hook on this line retaliated by running off with the fisherman's wares.

Like the fish in our story, senior citizens can retaliate. We do not have to take everything that's dished out to us without questioning it.

The Benefits Counseling Program is here to protect the rights of senior citizens. We are here to help you get the benefits and services, public and private, that you are rightfully entitled to receive: vision, hearing, dental, medical, medications, food, clothing, home repairs, advocate assistance, legal intervention, etc. The program is structured to try to find ways to help you fill your particular need. We are here for you.

Others are constantly here for you. Because of concerned people in business, we have a growing outreach program to keep you informed. The Sunshine Lines column is brought to you weekly by The Floyd County Times. Senior Citizen Spotlight, your monthly TV program, is filmed by WPRG-TV in Harold, and shown the first Thursday evening of each month and several times throughout the month. The FADA Corporation works with us to inform the caretakers of their residents of our services. Area restaurants are showing more and more interest in setting aside a time and place for senior citizens to meet with one of our Benefits volunteers. (We need more volunteers!) APPALRED in Prestonsburg sponsors and supervises the Benefits Counseling Program for Senior Citizens.

If you have a need, or if you know someone who does, call us at 886-3876 or 1-800-556-3876 and ask for Benefits Counseling or leave a message. We will get back with you. Our services are free.

If you find yourself in a bad situation, like the fish in today's story, make the best of it by letting us help you.

Local student receives student scholarship loan

Chris Potter

The Appalachian Student Fund has selected Christopher Potter as a recipient of a scholarship loan of $1,500 for the academic year 1994-95. Recipients may attend the college or university of their choice, but must repay the loan with interest if they do not return to one of the 40 counties of Appalachian Kentucky. If they do return to one of the 40 counties to live and work, one year of the loan is forgiven for each year they work in Eastern Kentucky.

Potter is the son of Michael and Cathy Potter of Harold. He graduated from Betsy Layne High School this spring. He was a leader in many extracurricular activities, had a very high grade point average, and had high evaluations from references.

Awardees were chosen based on their leadership qualities, anticipated major, character, grade point average, ACT score, references, income, and a personal account of reasons why they deserve the loan. The objective of Appalachian Student Fund is to retain tomorrow's leaders in Eastern Kentucky through loans designed to fund a portion of their education.

ASF, a non-profit group, was organized in 1990. Most of the funds have been solicited from individuals and companies in Eastern Kentucky. During the first three years, ASF has awarded over $110,000 to over 40 Eastern Kentucky student leaders.

ASF, with offices at 635 Whitaker Street, Morehead, Kentucky 40351, accepts tax-deductible donations from businesses and individuals. Its Board of Directors is filled with prominent Eastern Kentuckians who believe that education and leadership are the keys to our region's progress.

A review:

Lion King hype

by Willie Elliott
contributing writer

Let it be known up front that I do not normally like animated movies that have been a staple with the Disney people for so these many years. Oh, there are a few scenes in The Little Mermaid that capture my interest but I haven't watched it all the way through, and I think the Dalmatians are rather cute, but these are not movies I would watch for the story line. So why could I not wait to see The Lion King? The hype did it.

The people at Disney did their job in advertising this movie. One can get everything from toilet paper to swim wear bearing the symbol of the Lion King. I didn't want to be embarrassed when someone asked if I had seen the movie and would have to tell him/her that I had not.

So after a month of hype, the movie was finally in the theaters. I attended the movie with "I'll-go-but-I-won't-like-it attitude."

The opening number "Circle of Life" had the kids bouncing in their seats, and I found myself tapping out the beats to this hypnotic song. So I said, "Sure, anyone can put together a catchy song to introduce the movie, but what will the main fare be like?"

I suppose the magic of watching a movie like The Lion King, has something to do with the children who are in the audience. The children immediately accepted the fact that lions could talk to one another. Once a viewer gets over that obstacle, the whole thing comes together. The father-son relationship is refreshing even if it is between a lion and his cub. The idea of the "circle of life" is an idea we all are aware of but take little time to think about. I suppose to do so would make us face our own mortality and few of us want to do that.

Ten minutes into the movie I knew I was hooked. I was into the story line, and the music was so rousing that a viewer felt he was in the presence of a philharmonic orchestra. The children sang out with uninhibited laughter at the antics of the wart hog and the hyenas, and some even cried at the death of Mafasa, the lion king.

I'm ready to see the movie again. Maybe I will give the other Disney movies another chance. I suppose I wasn't taking to these movies the necessary ingredients for enjoyment. This day, as so often happens, I learned from the children.

Seventh-day Adventists Believe...

The universal church is composed of all who truly believe in Christ, but in the last days, a time of widespread apostasy, a remnant has been called out to keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus. This remnant announces the arrival of the judgment hour, proclaims salvation through Christ, and heralds the approach of His second advent. This proclamation is symbolized by the three angels of Revelation 14; it coincides with the work of judgment in heaven and results in a work of repentance and reform on earth. Every believer is called to have a personal part in this worldwide witness.—Fundamental Beliefs, 12

Quaker Coal Company receives strategic funding solutions from Continental Bank

Quaker Coal Company announced recently that it has successfully completed a refinancing of its capital structure through a $50 million private placement, and a $15 million credit facility led and agented by Continental Bank of Chicago. Quaker Coal, a privately held company, has mining operations in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia.

According to Quaker Coal's chief financial officer, Michael R. Castle, the company had traditionally utilized short-term bank financing to fund its operations. Given the capital-intensive and long-term nature of its assets and the cyclical nature of the coal industry, Continental Bank advised Quaker Coal to shift its debt mix toward long-term debt through a private placement with institutional investors, allowing Quaker Coal to take advantage of historically low long-term interest rates and achieve greater flexibility for capital expenditures and dividends.

"We now have suitable funding that supports our operating and business goals, creates liquidity and effectively funds our operations," said Castle. "Working closely with our team, Continental brought a number of sound solutions to the table to refinance the capital structure that we had clearly outgrown."

"Quaker Coal's low mining costs, excellent reserve base, strong contract base and improving financial profile made the company very attractive to institutional investors," said Stephen Sleight, associate director of private placements at Continental Bank. "Based on our experience in raising capital for coal and other natural resource companies, we were able to assemble a strong investor group for the company."

"Quaker Coal had long-term plans that required flexible funding not available through its existing capital structure," said Mary Kay Sullivan, managing director of the Energy and Minerals group at Continental Bank. "Our relationship team of bankers from energy and minerals, private placements, and trust services offered strategic advice to the company based on our industry expertise as well as financial sophistication."

Quaker Coal Company was founded in 1973. The company produced approximately six million tons of coal from its Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia operations in 1993. The company had approximately $160 million in revenues in 1993.

Continental Bank's corporate trust group is serving as the collateral agent for the institutional investors and bank participants.

Wendy Hueber-Niehaus, director of Hamilton County Pretrial Services, Cincinnati, Ohio; Thomas Muhleman, director of Montgomery County Pretrial Services, Dayton, Ohio; and learning skill instructor Greg Strouse, from the University of Kentucky Counseling and Testing Center, were guest speakers.

The conference was sponsored by the Kentucky Court of Justice and conducted by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

Insurance—What is it good for?

Last year on July 17, my mother-in-law and stepfather-in-law experienced a fire in their downstairs bathroom.

by Kim Frasure

Luckily, they were able to put out the flames before damage spread to other areas of their home.

Naturally, they turned this incident into their homeowners insurance company. The bathroom was badly affected by the fire.

On Saturday, July 2, 1994, my in-laws received a letter from their insurance company which read and I quote, "We are unable to continue the above numbered policy. To comply with the nonrenewal provisions of the contract, the following notice will apply: "All coverages afforded by _____ Insurance Company under the above numbered policy shall hereby terminate as of 12:01 a.m. standard time on September 24, 1994. Excess premium, if any, will be refunded under separate cover."

"The specific reason(s) for our action is: fire loss on 07/17/93."

"To obtain coverage, you should check with other agents. If you experience difficulty, you may contact the following association for assistance: Kentucky Property Insurance Placement Facility, P.O. Box 13188, Lexington, KY 40575."

And the letter ended on so graciously, "We regret this action is necessary."

Well, not half as much as my in-laws regret it, I can tell you.

Why pay for home insurance to cover accidents just like described earlier in this column, to only have your policy cancelled when you actually have to use the darn thing?

Let's face it, if my in-laws were going to set a fire to collect from their insurance, don't you think they would've burnt the entire house, instead of their downstairs bathroom!

All I heard after the accident was, "Thank goodness, we have insurance!"

Now look where they are. They are being cancelled by their insurance company because they had to use it for a service they've paid for.

They now have to seek coverage from another company who will probably have flashing red lights and sirens go off when they hear my in-laws have actually had to turn in a bathroom fire.

And also, another possibility after the accident mentioned is how much more MONEY do you suppose they'll have to pay for coverage. Yep, bunches more!

So my dear readers, what lessons have we learned from today's topic?

1. If a fire destroys any portion of your home:
  - (a) put it out.
  - (b) don't turn it in to your insurance, because
  - (c) You won't have insurance any more, and
  - (d) fix and repair all damages yourself, while
  - (e) you continue to pay for insurance, so
  - (f) you can lay down and sleep peacefully.

Make sense? Of course not. But, it's a fact and a hard lesson to learn.

Till next week, here's wishin' you'll never have to use your insurance!

Floyd Countians register for Bluegrass State Games

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

One of the greatest sporting events in the state is about to happen on July 29, 30 and 31 when the 10th Annual Bluegrass State Games will get underway in Lexington.

Early registrations for the Games are still being tallied but already about 11,566 Kentuckians from 99 counties have signed up for the various sports.

Softball seems to continue to be the major sport as six teams from Floyd County have signed up. To date 354 teams, or 5,664 persons, have registered for softball.

Entrants in chess and track and field have already been sent in by Floyd Countians.

The Games will feature 25 sports this year, including open soccer division (the second largest event) and a new youth three-on-three basketball.

Soccer is the second largest with 232 teams, or 4,176 persons, taking part.

Early registration has tennis the largest in the individual events. Over 400 have registered to take part in the popular event. Tennis is followed by gymnastics with 254 and track and field with 174.

Other sports offered in this year's Games are: volleyball, three-on-three basketball, archery, bowling, canoeing/kayaking, chess, croquet, cycling, darts, diving, equestrian, fencing, golf, horseshoes, karate, racquetball, shooting, swimming, table tennis and wrestling.

This year individuals are allowed to enter more than one sport if the schedules allow. Also new this year, 200 free entries are offered to young people up to age 18 who cannot otherwise afford to enter the Games. These scholarships are for individual sports only. Person interested should contact their local parks and recreation officials or call (606) 269-8633.

The Bluegrass State Games is the largest amateur sporting event in the state. Last year over 18,500 persons from 111 counties participated in the Games.

July 8 is the general deadline for most sports. Some sports allow registration the day of registration and on site.

Entry booklets can be picked up at the Floyd County Times Sport's Department.

Volunteers needed for various events in Bluegrass State Games

Amateur athletes from across the state of Kentucky will meet in Lexington this year to compete in the 10th Annual Bluegrass State Games, July 29-31. In order to make the competition a continued success, the Games need your help.

Clark takes talent to Pikeville College

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Betsy Layne's Barry Clark became the second Bobcat to sign with coach Roy Cutwright's Pikeville Panthers for next season. Earlier Chris Potter inked with the Panthers.

Clark, whose coach Junior Newsome says was a big part of the success the Bobcat program had enjoyed over the past four seasons, batted .423 in his senior year. He had a 9-3 record from the mound for Betsy Layne.

Meeting his needs was a chief reason for inking with the Pike County college.

"It's close to home," said Clark. "The academics at Pikeville College was attractive to me."

Clark is expected to fill the roles for the Panthers as he did with Betsy Layne this past season -- first base and pitching.

Clark is a hard thrower and has good off speed pitches, but by his own admission, he needs to think more on the mound.

"That is where I need to improve," he said. "I need to be smarter with my pitches on the college level."

"I'm very happy for Barry," said his mother Glenda Clark. "He's going from one fine school on the hill (Betsy Layne) to another fine school on the hill (Pikeville). His dad would have loved to have seen him play here."

Clark batted .375 as a freshman and hit .350 as a sophomore before enjoying a stellar junior year with a .440 batting average and clubbing seven home runs. His home total dropped this year, but his average stayed over .400. Clark said that the pitchers on the college level will be different.

"I'll have to be more patient at the plate," he said. "The pitchers are going to be better and I will have to be more selective on the pitches I swing at."

Coach Cutwright said that it would be different.

"A kid in high school will face one or two good pitchers whereas in col-

Newsome signs with Pikeville Panthers

by Ed Taylor

Pikeville College head baseball coach Roy Cutwright went three-for-three when he inked Betsy Layne's Shannon Newsome to a letter-of-intent for next year's baseball season.

Newsome made three Betsy Layne players that have signed with the Panthers and all three are quality players.

The hard hitting former Bobcat was undecided up to the day that he signed with Pikeville.

"While I didn't know if I would sign or not, I'm excited that I have now," said Newsome, who played third base and pitched for Coach Junior Newsome's ball club this past season.

"I'm glad to be coming to Pikeville and still being with Barry (Clark) and Chris (Potter) for four more years," he said. "I want to be able to help the team next year."

Newsome will play third and pitch for the Panthers and will give Pikeville a strong arm for next season.

"Shannon has a strong arm and will definitely help our staff next season," said Coach Cutwright. "I also feel that Shannon can become a good collegiate hitter. I saw Betsy Layne play about eight or ten times this season."

"Shannon is one of those players that we got onto late and who was uncertain what he was going to do. He certainly has the tools to play the college game. He understands the game well."

The Pikeville coach added that Newsome needs to get stronger and that he is excited that he will be coming to Pikeville.

"It's going to be a learning program for me," said the new Panther signee. "I understand that I will be playing mostly third base and pitching."

"I just want to go out and play to the next high level and contribute what I can."

White Sox wins league championship over HAP

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The league championship of the Floyd County Babe Ruth League came down to the final regular season game between the Allen White Sox and Harold-Allen-Prater (HAP) this past Saturday afternoon at the Stumbo Park.

Brandon Castle hurled four strong innings and collected two base hits, both doubles, while Clabe Hall had three hits to send the Sox past HAP 15-7 to give them the league's championship.

Both teams entered the game with identical 11-2 records.

Castle had eight strike outs in the four inning he hurled, giving up two hits. Chris Moore pitched the final three for Allen and allowed seven runs on four hits.

Steven Hamilton tripled in the Allen sixth when they scored four times. Wesley Collins and Moore had two-baggers as did Doug Keathley.

Chad Case and Brad Kidd had the only extra base hits for HAP. Case doubled in the fifth inning and Kidd doubled in the sixth.

Allen took a 1-0 lead in the first inning and extended the lead to 5-0 with four in the second. Collins walked, stole second and scored on Moore's base hit in the first.

Lance Jones, who started on the mound for HAP, ran into some early control problems in the second when

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

CONGRATS.

To avid fisherman Randall Ousley upon winning a new fishing boat, motor and trailer over the past holiday. Now he can fish twice as much.

A LOOK AT THE ALL-STARS...

Tony Gwynn, Hal Morris, Jeff Bagwell. What do they have in common? They are among the leaders in batting for the National League. In fact, they are the top three NL hitters. Another thing? They are not starting for the National League in next week's All-Star game in Pittsburgh.

Another fact! Morris didn't even make the team. He is only batting .351 and he at least should have been on the reserves.

Gwynn is leading the league with a robust .393 and he is sitting while Lenny Dykstra (.296) starts. You have to be kidding.

Look at this. At shortstop, old-timer Ozzie Smith plays short over the Reds' Barry Larkin. True, Larkin was off to a drastically slow start and that hurt him in the balloting early. But Smith hasn't hit for an average in the last four years.

Smithy is a great shortstop. He does the back-flips better than anyone else. But Larkin's .282 batting average is better than Smith's .236.

Now the fans are the ones that decide who starts an all-star game. All it is, is a popularity contest between positions. The fans could care less if a shortstop elsewhere is having a better year than their's, they want their man on the field.

The balloting was taken from the fans back in the late '50s when Reds fans were accused of stuffing the ballot boxes. I believe five or six Reds players started for the National League.

Then it was taken from the fans and given to players to vote on. Now it is back with the fans.

Take second base. Mariano Duncan of the Phillies gets the start at second base with a lofty batting average of .273. Brett Boone is batting over .300 and having a strong season. It doesn't make sense. For the first time in a long time, the Reds have some players that have been overlooked and shouldn't have been.

I would like to say something good about the Reds but I'm afraid if I do, that two and a half game lead will disappear quickly.

We need to make a trade! Kevin Mitchell is expendable. Let's package him with Jacob Brumfield and get us a consistent pitcher. Or take Tony Fernandez and add Thomas Howard for a good left-hander.

Boy, I like the American League lineup for the classic. Sixty home runs between the three in the outfield.

What a season Will Clark is having. Seventy RBIs already. Batting .350 and having a great year. There is life after San Francisco. Matt Williams will find that out next year.

Have you heard the rumor that Ken Griffey Jr. would like to move on to Cincinnati after he becomes a free agent. Marge will sell the auto business in order to sign him.

How about an outfield of Reggie Sanders, Deion Sanders and Griffey? All three young and all three can play the game.

The talk isn't good about the baseball strike. The rest of this season and the start of next season is very much in doubt.

No doubt the rest of the regular season will be over when and if they do strike. The playoffs and World Series would mean a lot of money for the owners and that may be the thing that gets them to come around to the players wants.

I think the whole bunch is greedy and it's almost football time anyway. Let them strike!

RALLY, RALLY, RALLY...

This coming Saturday at the Stumbo Park concerned parents, coaches and players plan to hold a rally and the entire fiscal court gang is personally invited to attend.

The folks want some answers as to why the present baseball facilities are not being kept up.

A personal invitation has been sent to each magistrate as well as the county judge-executive. It will be an interesting rally. According to Margret Holbrook, rally organizer, all parents are urged to come out in support of the kids in Floyd County.

"If they have a kid playing or will be having one to play, we want them to be there Saturday," said Holbrook.

The rally is planned to begin at 5 p.m.

Hope everyone had a good Fourth of July and your next holiday will be Labor Day. Support our Little League All-Star teams that begin play this week.

Until Friday, good sports everyone and be good sports. You'll feel better if you do. Have a great, great day.

past year where he batted close to .400 and finished with a 7-2 record, Newsome also views some areas that he needs to improve.

"I have to improve on my defense," he confessed. "I need to get in better shape. The pitching up here is going to be much better than what I saw in high school. I'll need to get use to that.

"I'll need to correct some mistakes in my hitting. In pitching I need to stay back more and follow through with my pitches."

It was proud parents that looked on when Newsome signed his letter-of-intent with Pikeville.

"I am extremely proud of him," said his mother Donna Newsome. "He has been playing the game of baseball since he was seven years old. Baseball has always been a big part of his life.

"The main thing is for him to get a good education. That's first," she said. "It just seems unreal. The three of them, who have been together since the eighth grade, will now play college ball together."

Newsome's father, Michael, believes that Shannon will be able to contribute to the Panther program but there are other priorities.

"I hope that he comes up and fits in," said Newsome. "His grades have to be first. We want him to get a good education. Then we want him to be able to help the team win. As a freshman you can only do what you can do. You just have to go out and give it a try. I look for him to play some as a freshman.

"He needs to get in better shape and lose some pounds. Baseball is important but he will need to put his head to the books and apply himself."

Coach Junior Newsome said that he feels that Newsome has the ingredients to be a good college player.

"He could be an excellent player in college," said Newsome. "He is a player that is faster than he looks. He has excellent hands at third base and is an excellent hitter. He has good overall skills.

"I don't have to tell you how he has contributed to our program at Betsy Layne. He has meant a lot to it."

Coach Newsome stressed that Newsome would have to "dedicate himself and get in good condition."

"Shannon is going to give us another strong pitching arm," said Coach Cutwright. "He will certainly help our staff. We're excited about having him come to Pikeville College

"I feel that he is an exciting hitter and will become a good college hitter. He just needs more discipline at the plate."

Newsome said that he too was excited and happy to be at Pikeville.

"Chris, Barry and I just want to go to practice and show what we can do. We want to help the team," said Newsome.

Newsome hit six home runs for Betsy Layne this season, second on the ballclub.

He is a very good "glove man" and could be used in the outfield as well. Newsome is very knowledgeable of the game and will be an asset to the Panthers this coming season.

he walked four consecutive batters after Hall singled. Hall and Eric Cook scored on the walks. Kaleb Yates' single with two out added two other runs.

Allen forced a 9-0 lead with four runs in the fifth.

After Castle departed after four innings, Moore was greeted rather rudely in the bottom of the fifth by HAP. Matt Kidd singled and Case doubled to start the fifth. Both runners came in to score on Brad Kidd's two-run single. Shannon Potter reached on an error with two out, and Kidd and Potter scored on Craig Hamilton's base hit. Hamilton later scored the fourth run of the inning.

Allen added four in the sixth on a bases loaded triple by Hamilton.

Jones worked the first three innings for HAP allowing five runs on four hits. He struck out three and walked four.

Potter came in and went two innings allowing four runs on five hits. Potter fanned two and walked one. Matt Kidd and Chad Case pitched an inning each. Kidd gave up four runs in the sixth inning and Case allowed two in the seventh.

Chris Holbrook and Yates finished with two hits for Allen.

Clark

lege it's a good thrower each time out," he said.

Coach Newsome said that Clark had the skills for the college game.

"Barry has been outstanding for us," he said. "He has very good skills and he is a dedicated athlete. He has excellent work habits and that has helped him to improve.

"He has meant a great deal to our program and played outstanding baseball for us. I think he will do well at the college level," he said.

Coach Newsome said that Clark's strength is fine but that he needed to refine his skills and get a better eye for the plate.

"He's always worked hard in working out," he stated. "He's always prepared for being in shape and being strong. He just needs to look closer at the pitches on the college level."

"I'm very excited and glad to be playing for Pikeville next season," said Clark. "Mom and the rest of my family will be able to watch me play."

Clark said that he expected to contribute even in his freshman year.

While at Betsy Layne, Clark helped lead the Bobcats to two district titles and he played in four regional tournaments. This past season, Clark got to play in the Sectional Tournament, losing to Corbin in the finals.

"I just want to do what I can to help the Pikeville program," said Clark. "I really want to contribute early and I want to become better physically. I feel good about the decision that I made and I will just have to adjust leaving Betsy Layne."

Clark had numerous other offers which included Campbellsville, Illinois, Saint Catherines and others.

"We feel that Barry will be a great addition to our pitching staff here at Pikeville," said Coach Cutwright. Coach Cutwright said that Clark would be used at first base as well as on the mound.

"We have some key people returning next year (Pikeville graduated only one senior)," said Cutwright. "There will be adjustments that Barry will have to make and that's just natural progression for any high school student."

Pikeville finished 18-25 last season but Coach Cutwright believes he has some very good talent coming back this fall.

"We need more consistent pitching," he said. "More consistent arms on the staff. We feel that Barry gives us that. I look for this year's team to go far with some good pitching."

"I'm real excited about his going to Pikeville," said Clark's mother. "Of course an education is the primary thing. But he will be close to home and I can enjoy being with him. I expect to be at all the home games."

Clark has been a workhorse on the Betsy Layne staff over the last two seasons sporting a 7-2 record last year and finishing strong this season.

Clark started the season winning his first three games before running into some control problems. After righting himself, Clark finished strong for the Bobcats.

While he hasn't decided on a major as of the signing, Clark said that it would be in the medical field.

The next best thing to knowing something is knowing where to find it.

Hall named to Blue-Chip All-Star squad

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Allen Central's senior point guard, Jeremy Hall, will no doubt be drawing the attention of college coaches from around America this coming basketball season. But the 5' 11" guard has already gotten some prestigious recognition at this summer's Blue-Chip Basketball Camp held at Georgetown College in Scott County.

Over 420 players from 30 states and four foreign countries gathered at the Georgetown gym for one of America's premier camps.

According to camp directors Dave Bones and Rick Bolus, the camp's three sessions were totally sold out, showing the importance of the national exposure that comes from the Super Scouts rating service.

The top 30 players in the camp split into two all-star teams to showcase their talents and Kentucky was well represented on the team. The five Kentuckians named to the squad were: Hall, Louisville Trinity's Tom Goins (5' 9"); Montgomery County's Ryan Steger (6' 4"); Paintsville's Brian Lyons (6' 6"); and Pulaski County's Chris Fitzgerald (6' 0").

Goins was selected as the top ballhandler in the three day camp. Fitzgerald won the free throw competition.

Steger, Lyons and Fitzgerald will play for the Kentucky Junior All-Stars and Goins will be part of the Northern Kentucky Suns in July on the West Coast tour.

Hall was instrumental in helping to lead Allen Central to the quarterfinals of last year's Sweet Sixteen. Hall was injured in the second game and had to leave after the first half.

The hot shooting point guard is expected to be the focus of some heavy recruiting this year as he teams with other returning Rebels for a repeat of a 15th Regional title.

Live catch is safe for consumption says KDW

The Kentucky Division of Water (KDW) was made aware of a massive fish kill in the Tennessee River.

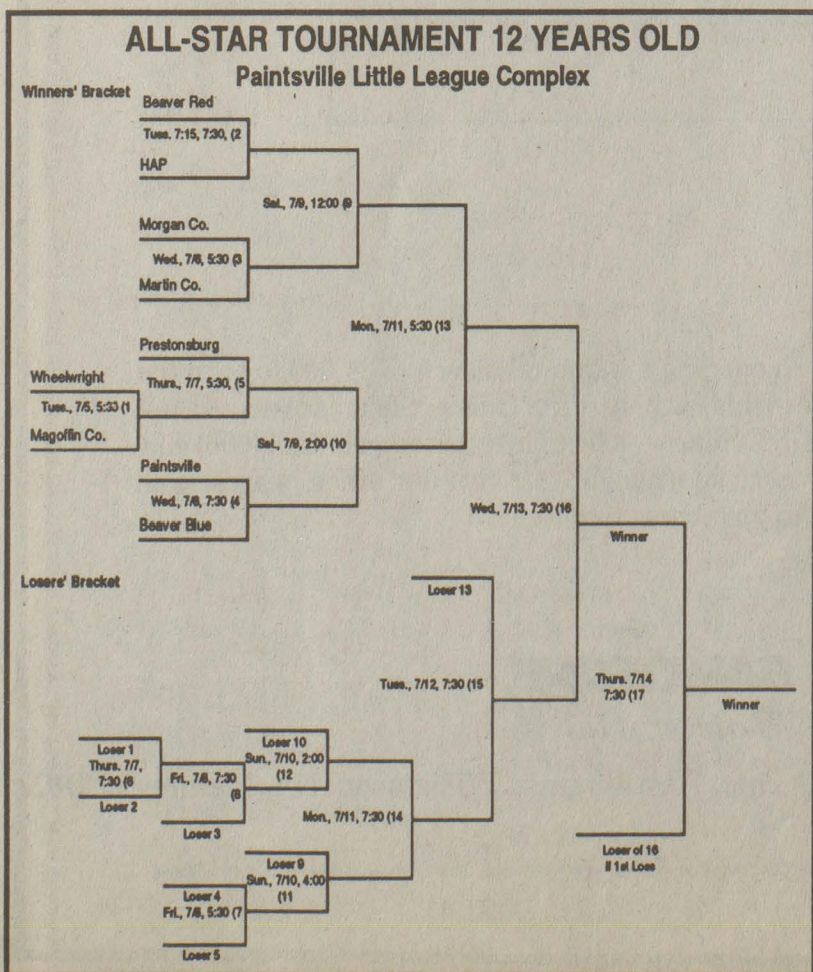

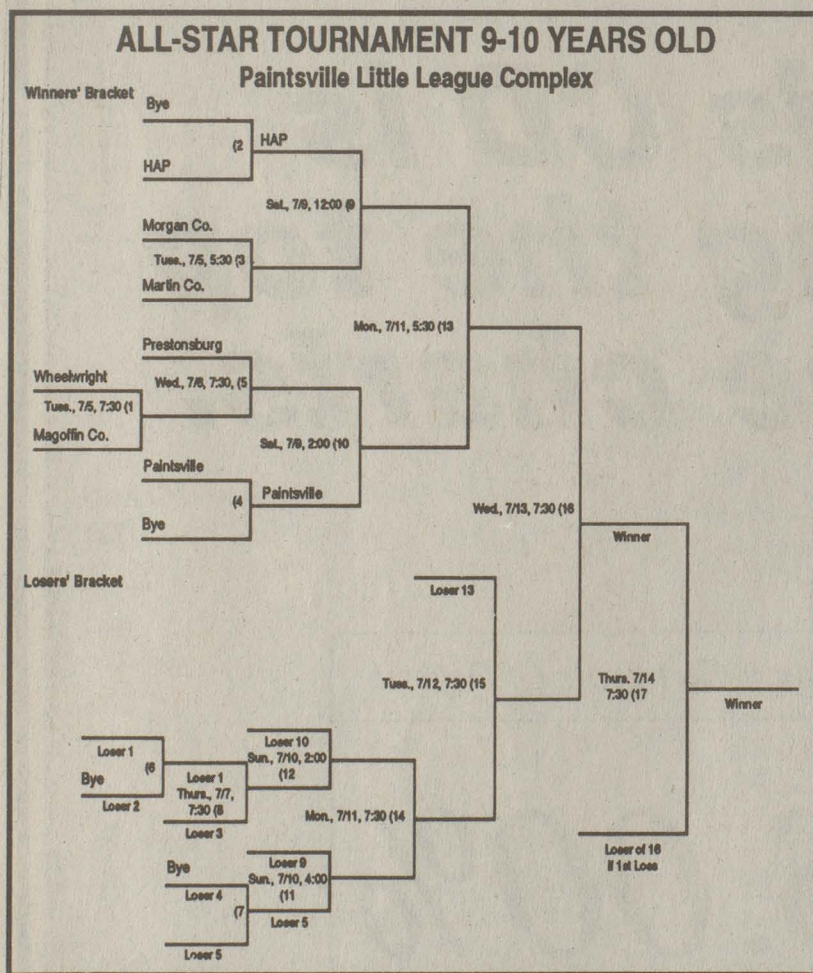

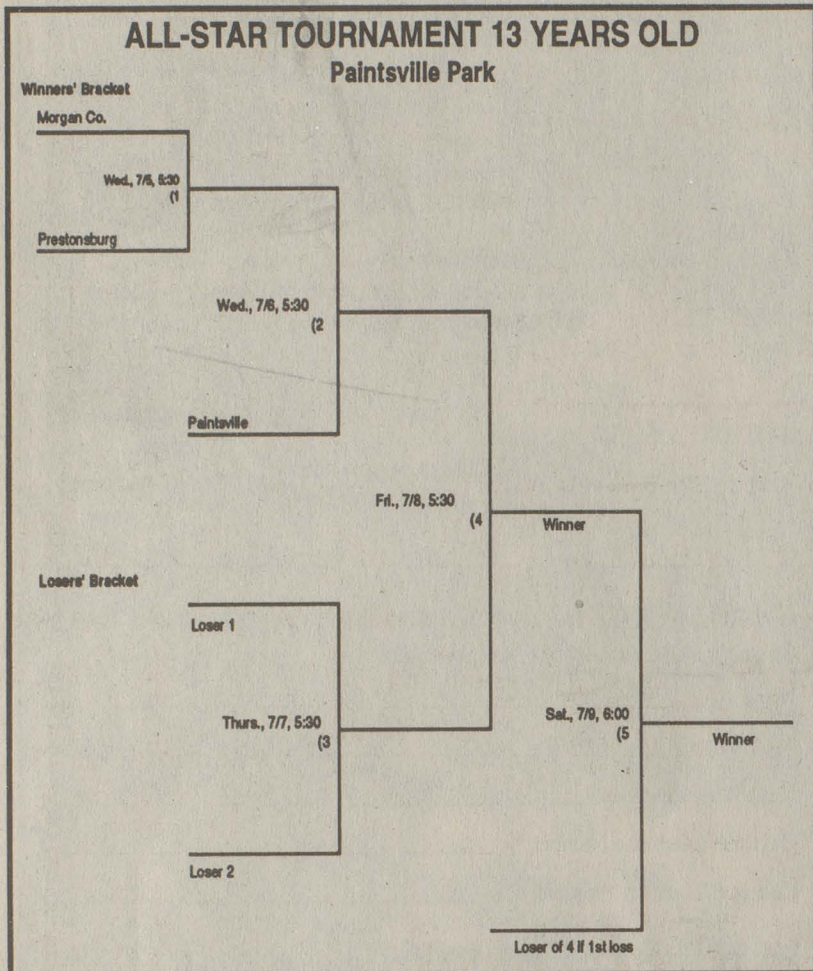

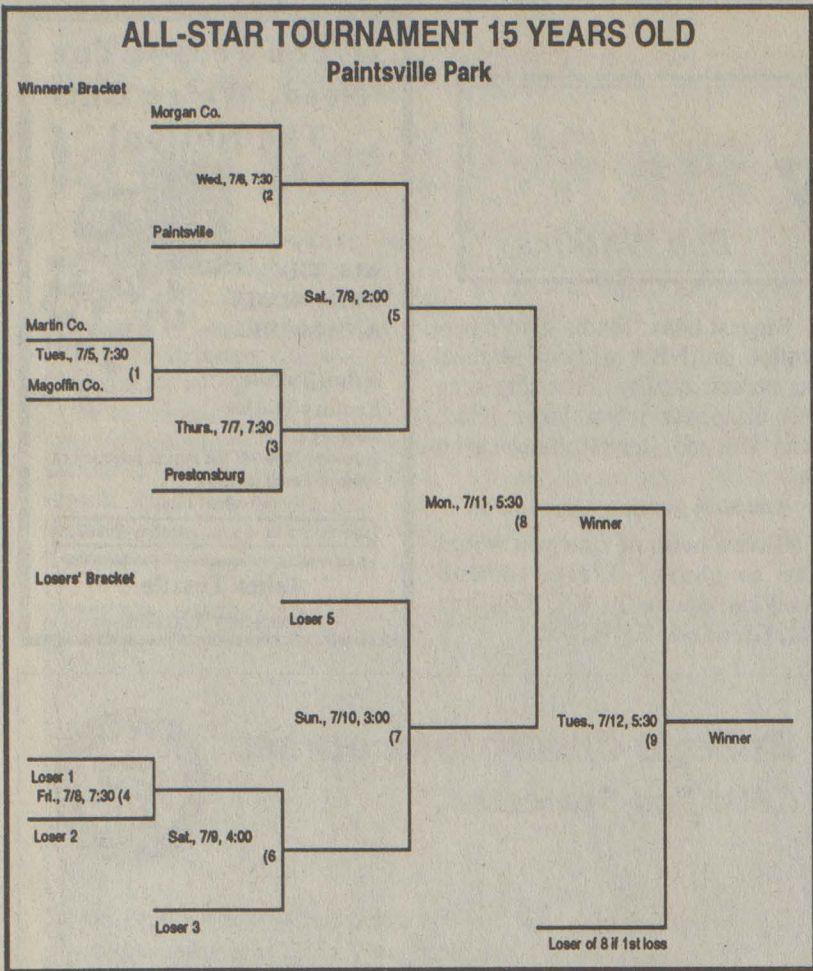

The Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) has been releasing water to lower the pool level in Kentucky Lake. In the past, similar circumstances of hot temperatures and lower water flows have created conditions conducive to fish kills.

The actual cause for the death of the fish is "gas bubble disease," nitrogen bubbles within the fish. The condition is similar to what is known as "the bends" in humans.

Fishermen can feel confident that live catch is safe for human consumption.

Travis Ford's soft-back is no three-e-e-e, but reminds us of UK backcourt legends who should have chronicled 'their' stories

With an around-the-state auto-graph tour behind him, Travis Ford's newest money-making enterprise is an 187 page soft-back book Big Blue Dream.

UK's ex-point guard is making personal appearances to sign copies of his oral history, $14.95. My children scold me for being old fashioned, but I'm going to say it anyway—$14.95 is too much.

Ford is a nice young man whose spunk is admirable, but Big Blue Dream is short on delivering anything UK fans have not read before.

His insights into UK basketball are the renderings of an enterprising young man who wants to make a few dollars and stay on the public stage as long as possible in part because he aspires to a job as a college assistant coach.

Predictably, everyone in Ford's soft-back gets the "wonderful, terrific, marvelous" and "behind me all the way," treatment.

Too bad this is no three-e-e-e because in many ways Ford is the quintessential star-struck 'Go Big Blue' Kentuckian, who bounced or threw a ball from age two and grew up idolizing his father-coach (his mother coached also). All this in the bosom of 'We Love UK' country.

One starry night he heard Cawood Ledford chirp something like, "Kyle Macy wipes his hands on his socks." That did it.

Recounting his life and good times, Ford says he hopes both will be an inspiration to 'little guys' and this is where the project, like so many gone before, blows the wide open lay-up, loses its focus.

Instead of maintaining a 'grow-up and fulfill-your-dream' theme, Big Blue Dream meanders away from poignant incidents and reader identity possibilities, into a mundane chronology. The book falls victim to self-service and name dropping.

For grown-ups there are a few insights—not 15 bucks worth—but you will feel you've seen them before. Some that might stick:

- His first roommate at UK, John Pelphrey may be in the front rank of the next wave of geniuses among college basketball coaches.

- His slant on the Free Throw Switcheroo at Vanderbilt.

- How Rick Pitino handled the Switcheroo and why.

- And, an abbreviated then abandoned day-to-day journal (Oct. 29-Dec. 4, '93). An idea inspired by his fiancée Kim Garvin, that had wonderful possibility, but was too superficial and sputtered out under the weight of schedules and busy things that frequently overwhelm good intentions.

• Warm and fuzzies: "I dreamed of some day wearing the Blue uniform." Being a Kentucky Wildcat is something he will cherish forever.

If you have $14.95 extra, and your Big Blue faithful parent or favorite in-law's birthday is coming up, Big Blue Dream may be a gift idea to consider.

REAL BIOGRAPHIES NOT ON BOOKSTORE SHELF NEAR YOU

In lieu of Ford's soft-back effort, this quiz: What do Ralph Beard, Louie Dampier, Kyle Macy and Frank Ramsey have in common?

—Each was an All-American backcourt player at the University of Kentucky.

—All played before a 3-point line was painted on the floor.

And yes, all the above—plus Ed Davender and Mike Casey—are among UK's Top 20 all-time scorers.

But, despite amazingly interesting story lines, there isn't an autobiography among them that I know about.

—Beard, arguably the best guard ever at UK, smudged by point shaving scandal.

— Ramsey played his No. 23 into the rafters at Boston Garden.

— Macy led UK to its last NCAA title in 1978.

— Casey's auto accident cost him a center space on the marquee with Dan Issel and Mike Pratt (1970 team finished 26-2 without him).

— Davender, perhaps the most underrated guard ever at Kentucky, toiled in the immense Rex shadow.

One more extraordinary common thread—to a man, every one was/is an exemplary role model.

READERS (RIGHT) WRITE (ABOUT O.J.)

David Willmoth of Elizabethtown watched the televised O.J. Simpson freeway 'chase' June 17 and is considering giving up drinking orange juice. Like many others, he is sick of media gymnastics with the Simpson case. And, having read Sports In Ky. last week, "I agree with you and that could be a first.

"We have become a society that puts fame and success on a higher plateau than an individual being happy.

"Professional sports has created an (attitude) that people who get big salaries for playing are better people and should be looked up to."

C.M. NEWTON ON THE MEDIA

Given the O.J. Simpson explosion, has the media's gone crazy?

C.M. Newton: "I really resented all the in-depth television coverage. It was intrusive. I have a hard time with that. To me it's gone past reporting the news. It's making the news. I struggled with it."

Newton tied in the furor when Rick Pitino's name was connected with the LA Lakers two months ago.

"I struggled with the Rick (Pitino) deal too. We came back from Augusta and there were trucks parked all up and down around Memorial Coliseum. It was crazy. And then to go over to his house the way some media did was just mind boggling.

"I don't know where we are with all this. We faced this with Vietnam. We watched it on television every night. I mean how much napalm can you watch?

"It seems we're doing the same thing televising sports. Take the NBA playoffs. We're not content to watch those guys play. We have to take it and talk about what an ugly game it is. I'm tired of hearing how ugly it is. If it's really that ugly then people will stop going to see it."

Dove season same; new fishing laws for 1995 are announced

The traditional September 1 opening of dove hunting season will be observed again this year. The action was taken by the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission at its quarterly meeting June 10.

With one exception, all early migratory bird hunting seasons remain similar to last year's. Dove hunting season dates are September 1-30, October 8-31 and December 3-8. Kentucky River Wildlife Management Area (WMA), Henry County, has been added to the list of WMAs where steel shot is required for hunting doves.

Crow hunters will have the same number of hunting days except that five days of the first segment of the split season will shift to the front of the second segment. Crow hunting season dates are September 1-November 7, 1994, and January 4-February 28, 1995.

Establishing a trophy trout fishery on a 35-mile stretch of the Cumberland River was one of several commission actions affecting anglers. A 12-20 inch slot limit on rainbow and brown trout will apply to the river section running between the Highway 61 bridge and Tennessee state line. The daily creel limit will be four trout less than 12-inches long and one trout exceeding 20-inches.

A 14-inch minimum size limit will apply to sauger caught from Kentucky and Barkley lakes and their tailwaters to the Ohio River.

Five fish per day and a 15-inch minimum size limit will apply to hybrid striped bass and white bass at Dewey Lake.

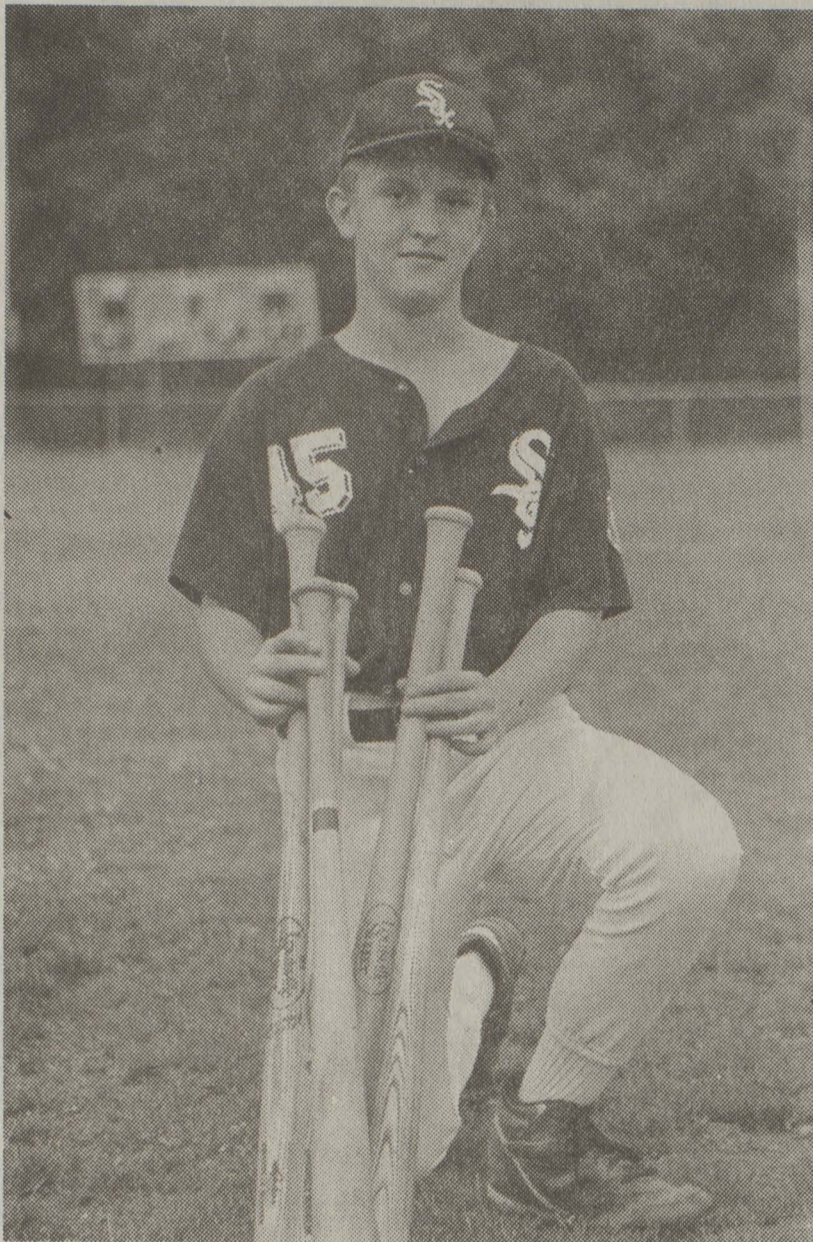

Crappie at Grayson Lake will return to statewide daily creel and possession limits.

The use and possession of shad will be prohibited in several state-owned lakes. The lakes are Bert Combs, Boltz, Briggs, Carpenter, Carter Caves, Cornith, Elmer Davis, Game Farm, Greenbo, Lincoln Holmstead, McNeely, Marion County, Mill Creek, Reba, Shanty Hollow and Spurlington.

The commission removed the 10 hp limit on motor boats at Greenbo Lake and adopted idle speed only for all boats using the lake.

In other action, the commission gave commercial fishermen the privilege of hiring one unlicensed helper.

New fishery regulations will be enforced beginning March 1, 1995.

Wooden bats make comeback..

The Allen Sox are trying to bring back an old tradition — wooden bats. The Babe Ruth team has five in its arsenal and Coach Tom Holbrook says they are finding some hits in the bats. Daniel Laferty holds the bats that they use. (photo by Ed Taylor)

Fishing with Scott Patton

Spring fishing is something we all look forward to. It's also something the fish look forward to. As the water begins to warm up and the bass' metabolism begins to increase, the fisherman can find active fish in his home waters. There are several things that an angler should consider just before going to the lake, launching the boat, and going fishing. One of those things can be the main ingredient to catching fish and that is picking the right location to fish.

In the spring the things that I take into consideration is what type of lake it is. Is the lake a flat land lake, a high land, or a mountain land lake? What is the overall make up of the lake: rock, sand, mud? What is the secondary type of cover: grass, rock, wood? You also have to determine what is the surrounding terrain like. What I mean when I ask what is the terrain like, I mean what is the terrain like several miles away, also. A lot of you may ask what does the terrain that is several miles away have to do with the water you're fishing. This is a very important factor because if it is an area that is farmland, a lot of this land will be freshly plowed. And in the spring we have a lot of rain fall, and when that rain hits the freshly plowed field it is easily turned into mud. It washes of into nearby streams and creeks and then washes right into the lake and this creates muddy water.

In the early spring this muddy water, mixed with cold water temperature, can spell disaster. This condition may lead you to choose to fish the main lake where the water isn't always turned muddy yet, especially if the rains are pretty recent.

One tip has always helped me a lot if the spring rains muddy what seems to be the entire lake. If it has been a few days since any rain has fallen, follow a major creek channel all the way toward the back. You may be surprised at the clean fresh water you will find. The banks of these creeks can really clear up fast while the rest of the lake may still be muddied up. You'll usually find good fishing in these locations.

Try Crankbaits to locate fish

Crankbaits are a great fish locating bait. They can be worked fast slow or in between. The same goes for depth. But the best thing is you can cover a lot of water efficiently and quickly. Crankbaits can be fished in thick cover such as stump fields tree tops and over vegetation.

You'll first want to determine the depth at which you believe the fish will be located. This is done by the seasonal patterns. After choosing this the lake clarity and depth at which you'll be fishing will determine the crankbait that you'll use. You'll also want to determine what type of forage the fish are feeding on. This will help you choose the right color of bait to fish. This is very important to me and is something that I'll work and pay close attention to. I also want to know what the fish are conditioned to. If they are looking for shad then you better be fishing a shad colored bait.

I like to keep a crankbait bumping against something all the time it's in the water. A crankbait triggers a reflex strike so I will try to picture in my mind where this fish will be and target on presenting my bait to trigger this reflex strike. You can determine what position the fish will be in by it's surroundings. A fish always reacts to its environment and this is made up of wind and water current light or cloud cover, high rising water or a lake that has falling water. When a lake is rising fish will rise with it and when a lake is falling fish will fall with it. This is a simple concept but is overlooked a lot. You'll also want to figure out what kind of wobble the fish prefer. Different baits have a different wobble or action to them.

There is something else that goes along with crankbait fishing and that is lipless crankbaits. These baits are great fish locators in shallow grass when a conventional crankbait will foul in the vegetations. This bait will fall to the depth of your retrieve. You can control the depth by your retrieve speed and the position of your rod tip. The rod that you'll use with crankbaits is very important. I use a fiberglass rod all the time with crankbaits. The reason is that a fiberglass rod verses a graphite is a lot more flexible. It is also much slower on the bounce back which will allow the fish to inhale the bait further into its mouth. Graphite rods have a much quicker reflex than glass and when this quicker reflex is produced during the head shaking movements of the fight the fish can actually create slack in the line, whereas glass rods are slower moving and stay with the movements of the fish better.

There may be a lot of you who know this but have never given it a try. Believe me you owe it to yourself to try it. You always need to know the baits you're fishing, the depth that they run on the different line size and the action the baits produce.

Helpful Hint: A clear water lake is a good place to learn these things or if you have pool access, a swimming pool is great.

Keep a positive attitude Keep casting, and KEEP FISHING!!!

Lendell Martin

One problem you might have with pitchin' and flippin' is speed. If the speed of your reel is too slow, you are not going to catch many fish.

Use a high-speed reel like a 6.2 gear ratio or better. This works really well in high water with a lot of shoreline to cover.

The faster the reel, the more pitches you can throw in a day's time.

Cloudy days usually make bass more aggressive

Bright, sunny days may be great for suntanning, but cloudy, overcast days are better for fishing.

"Cloud cover seems to make bass much more aggressive," says Ron Shuffield of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff. "The bass move around a lot more and aren't nearly as spooky. In short, cloud cover makes them easier to catch."

When the sun is bright, says Shuffield, bass stay much tighter to cover and generally hold a little deeper on that cover, making lure presentation critical.

With cloud cover, the fish often suspend above the cover and readily come to the surface to hit lures. Other bass may be roaming and actually chase lures.

"That's why spinner baits and big, noisy topwater lures are such effective lures on cloudy days," Shuffield points out. "These are lures that produce a lot of noise and commotion, and bass respond actively.

"On bright, sunny days, the bass do not respond nearly as well so you have to finesse them with plastic worms and jigs, slowing down your retrieve and usually making several casts to the same target.

"When bass are aggressive, you can fish aggressively, using fast retrieves and simply trying to cover as much water as possible. Because some of the bass are moving, you actually have a much better chance for a strike."

What's really interesting, says the Johnson pro, is how quickly bass change their posture when skies become cloudy.

"Sometimes it's almost like someone flipped a switch," he says. "The bass quickly change positions and become more active.

"I've noticed the difference on days when the sky is filled with big, patchy clouds. When the sun is bright, the action slows, but let some big clouds shade the water a few minutes and the fish start biting."

"You can even see how bright light affects bass behavior in an aquarium," Shuffield continues. "In a large tank where the bass can swim freely in and out of cover, the fish will always be more active when the lights are turned off."

"When you turn the lights on, however, you can watch the fish swim toward the cover and stay there."

"Once you've actually seen this, it's easy to visualize it happening out on the lake when you're fishing. I always hope for cloudy days when I'm fishing."

A fuel filter, like the spin-on cartridge filter offered by OMC SystemMatched Parts and Accessories, can be one of the cheapest insurance policies any boater can purchase. Fuel contaminated with water or dirt can foul or even ruin an outboard. OMC's cartridge filter is much like an automobile filter, with a treated paper element able to catch particles as small as 25 microns and separate water from fuel. The filter kit is available from Johnson and Evinrude outboard dealers and may be adapted for use with almost any brand of outboard motor.

Shelton sharp in Paintsville win at Florida

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The winds were blowing and blowing and blowing in Panama City, Florida and it blew the championship round of the Panama City Southeastern Baseball Tournament out of existence.

Because of the threat of Hurricane Alberto, the Paintsville Big League team returned home earlier than expected, but on a very positive note as they won three straight in the prestigious tournament after dropping the first game.

Paintsville struggled in the first game against Panama City, the host team. The local nine fell to the host city 8-1 despite a strong pitching outing from Johnson Central's J.R. Melvin. Melvin went the distance for Paintsville and allowed eight runs on six hits. He walked four while fanning one.

"Going into the tournament we were inconsistent offensively, but after the first game against Panama City, we were much more consistent offensively," said Coach Paul David Brown.

With their bats out of the bags, Paintsville slipped past Shreveport, Louisiana behind a stellar performance by Jimmy Wayne Frazier. Frazier allowed one run as Paintsville won 3-1. Frazier fanned three batters and was in control, walking one hitter. He allowed eight hits.

Allen Central's Austin Shelton took control in the third game as he hurled Paintsville past Magnolia, Arkansas 6-2. In picking up the win, Shelton struck out four batters while walking five. The Paintsville defense was solid as they played errorless baseball.

Paintsville faced Nashville, Tennessee in its final game and came away with an impressive 10-2 win with Jason Pinson picking up the victory. Pinson fired a one-hitter while striking out five.

The 3-1 tournament record advanced Paintsville into the championship round on Sunday until Alberto interfered. The final round was cancelled. Paintsville was the only non-Florida team to make it to the final round. They were to be joined by Jacksonville, Panama City and Tallahassee in the finals.

Both Coach Brown and Coach Johnnie LeMaster were pleased with the way their team performed.

The first two nights of the trip found the Paintsville team sleeping in tents in a move to save as much money as possible. The team found the accommodations a little uncomfortable with the temperatures hovering in the 98 degree range during the day and 85 degrees at night.

"They responded to the pressure of the tournament and played very well," said Coach Brown. The Paintsville team raised all the money for its trip itself with fund raisers.

After being off Monday, July 4, the Big League team hosted Boyd County yesterday and will travel to Huntington tonight (Wednesday). Friday, Saturday and Sunday, it will return to Huntington for its second tournament in two weeks. The Kentucky Big League State Tournament is scheduled for Paintsville the week of July 23.

League champions!

The Prestonsburg Yankees had a lot to be happy about after they won the league championship in the Prestonsburg Little League. Coach Bobby Shepherd's ball club finished 10-3 in league play. The Prestonsburg Little League All-Stars will be in action Thursday night at the Paintsville Little League complex.

JULY: A MONTH OF PRESIDENTIAL IRONIES

July: The seventh month of the year; the month that in 1776 breathed new life into our nation. Isn't it ironic that it's also the month that seven of its presidents (John Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Van Buren, Taylor, Andrew Johnson and Grant) died? Even more ironical is the fact that Jefferson and Adams died on the Fourth of July, at practically the same minute on the same day.

It's interesting, too, that Calvin Coolidge was born on the Fourth of July, and John Quincy Adams and Gerald Ford were also born in this month.

And speaking of presidents, I read in the paper last week that former president Jimmy Carter is about to publish a book of poetry. The article stated that he'd be the third president to do so, listing Lincoln and John Quincy Adams as also having published poems. Carter's volume, entitled Always a Reckoning, should be reassuring to all of us who have difficulty finding neither rhyme nor reason in some of the things that presidents do.

Whether or not the collection will be a great literacy achievement remains to be seen, but at least it provides us with one more bit of trivia.

By the time President Clinton finishes his term, the trivia books will have, no doubt, quadrupled in size because there's never been a president who's received more press than he has.

I mean, it seems there's absolutely nothing that we don't know about him. Every move he makes—and apparently every move he's ever tried to make—has been documented.

Meantime, while we're waiting for historians to figure out what is or isn't trivial about the Clintons, we still have the other 41 guys to trivialize.

See how you do with these questions. The answers are printed at the end of the column. For goodness sake, though, don't peek. You may someday yourself aspire to public office and there could be a hidden video camera pointed at you right this minute.

(1) Which president's birthday is celebrated as a legal holiday in the Virgin Islands?

(2) Who is the only U.S. president to have been married in the White House?

(3) Who were the only two presidents to have been survived by their fathers?

(4) Who was the heaviest president?

(5) Who was the first president to have been born a U.S. citizen?

(6) Who was the only president never to marry?

(7) George Washington is known as the "father of our country." How many children did he actually have?

(8) The Baby Ruth candy bar was named after the first baby girl to be born in the White House. Who was she?

(9) When John Wilkes Booth leaped onto the stage

Weight program is First Place

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Since her teen-age years, Norma Davis of Banner had sought an effective way to lose weight and keep it off.

"I was overweight as a child," Norma confessed. "I was teased a lot. I have painful memories of this."

The summer before Norma entered high school, she decided she had to lose the extra pounds.

"There was no guidance at that time to help you lose weight," she said. "I devised my own diet. This was the first of many foolish diets that I would be on."

Over the years, with repeated dieting, the weight came off only to return when she resumed eating normally.

But for the last 12 years, Norma, 54, has managed to lose weight and to keep it off by changing her lifestyle and educating herself about healthy weight loss principles.

What she has learned, she has been teaching others. For three years, she directed weight loss centers in Prestonsburg, Paintsville and Pikeville. Still, "I saw a spiritual need there," she said. "But I didn't know how to minister (to the spiritual needs of my clients)."

Then Norma's pastor, French Harmon of Allen First Baptist Church, learned about a Christ-centered health program called First Place which was being taught at a Southern Baptist church in Ashland. The program, which began a few years ago at First Baptist Church in Houston, Texas, combines Bible study and scripture reading with a sensible eating plan to help participants focus on giving Christ "First Place" in their lives.

When Harmon approached Norma with the idea of starting a First Place program at Allen First Baptist, she agreed to take on a leadership role.

"As a result of being overweight as a child," she said, "I have a deep compassion for overweight people and it was, and is, my sincere desire to reach out and help them."

Twice a week since January, Norma and Vicki Ratliff, also a member of Allen First Baptist, have been leading two groups on the road to a slimmer and healthier lifestyle through the First Place program. The first minutes of the hour-long meetings start with a private, confidential weigh-in. Then Norma teaches a 15-minute lesson on nutrition, followed by a half-hour Bible study led by Vicki. A time of sharing and prayer requests follow.

The results have been measurable, to say the least.

Vicki, a young mother of two daughters, has lost 30 pounds and 40 inches over the last five months, and is still losing. She said she wanted to lose weight due to "concern for my health. I had talked to Norma to help me begin a (personal) weight loss program. I knew she had experience in this area. But First Place has turned out to be more than a health program for me. I've grown as a Christian."

Harmon, also a member of First Place, has lost over 25 pounds. "I personally got into it because I wanted to change my lifestyle and improve my nutrition. As a Christian, it is important to set an example for others."

He added, "Most Americans are interested in their health and quality of life. We want to help each individual improve his quality of life physically, nutritionally and spiritually."

FIRST P.L.A.C.E. A CHRIST CENTERED HEALTH PROGRAM

Place: Allen First Baptist Church

Time: Two groups meet at two different times weekly—Sunday at 4:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. on Wednesday.

Cost: $60 which buys the First Place program package. Includes a 330-page cookbook, prayer journal, 13-week personal Bible study, and notebook filled with nutritional tips and handouts. No other costs.

Recipes: Follow the guidelines of the American Heart, Diabetic and Dietetic associations.

Program is nondenominational. Non church-goers are welcome.

Comparing the high with the low

Pastor French Harmon pointed out a wise, low-fat food choice to participants of a recent Wednesday "First Place" class at Allen First Baptist Church. Norma Davis (third from right) set up the food demonstration to show the class how much fat is contained in a double-burger compared to other foods. Vicki Ratliff, who teaches the Bible study, stands second from right. For more information about First Place, call the church at 874-9468, or Davis at 874-2873. (photo by Polly Ward)

Joining the First Place program has literally changed the life of Mary Holbrook, who is an outspoken advocate of the program. A member of another church denomination, Mary joined the program after her piano teacher mentioned it to her. Mary has lost 60 pounds since January and is still losing by changing her eating patterns and exercising according to First Place guidelines.

"I feel a lot healthier," she said. "When I first started the program I was beginning to have physical problems. My knees were bothering me (from carrying extra weight). I don't have any more pain—in my knees or my back. I've gotten more energy."

"I've gone in a totally opposite direction and it's all come from the Lord. It's a process..."

Mary's painful experiences as an overweight child has led her to start a First Place program for overweight children and youth which meets at Allen First Baptist on Tuesdays. During the sessions, which begin at 4:30 and last an hour, Mary and her young charges cook low fat snacks and engage in various recreational activities to encourage the children to adopt a healthy, active lifestyle. Her 11-year-old son, who for over a year has been conscious of his extra weight, has lost 15 pounds, she said.

Patricia Watson also joined the program in January. Although a member of another church, she decided to join the program after seeing an ad in the newspaper. "I didn't like the way I had become," she explained, "and the spiritual, as well as physical aspect, were very appealing...I have learned through the program how to eat healthy and to not diet."

As writing coordinator for the Floyd County school system, Patricia found herself "eating on the run and I ate a lot of fast food and cookies and chocolate."

Over the last few months, twenty-seven pounds and over 40 inches have melted from her petite frame. "I have more energy and I'm much more alert," she said.

She added, "The basic concept of the program is to let God have control of all aspects of life. The Bible study lessons are very direct and give us cause for self-examination."

Close to HOME

by Joe Adams
HE WANTS TO HAVE HIS SECRET AND TELL IT, TOO

The little boy with the big secret couldn't wait to spill it. "Come in my room, dad," the four-year-old said as he intercepted me at the door one night after I worked late. "I've got to tell you something important."

We tiptoed through the jungle of tinker toys, Legos and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles until we reached his bed. No one could hear him now, but he whispered just to make sure.

"Mommy got you a bicycle," he said. "But don't tell her I told you."

"Oh really," I said.

"Yes, she got you a bicycle with big wheels but she doesn't want you to know about it. But I thought you would want to know. Make sure you don't tell her."

"OK pal," I assured him. "I promise."

During the next week, when we were alone in the living room or the kitchen, he would repeat his request:

"Don't tell mommy about the bicycle."

"Don't worry, pal," I said. "The secret is safe with me."

But it wasn't safe with him.

He told his mother that he had told me the secret. Then he asked her for a favor:

"Don't tell daddy I told you," he said.

I haven't exactly figured out his thinking, but I have determined our little boy is really Big Brother in disguise.

If you tug at the turkey dinner early, he'll tell on you.

If you don't wash his hair just right, he's gotta tell the other parent about it. If he sees you fumble a glass and break it, he'll see to it that the news spreads as fast as the fragments do.

Strange how he never says anything when you do something good for him like fix his breakfast or help put on his clothes.

THE "TATTLETALE KID"

Our son's turning into quite a whistleblower. But that isn't all bad.

He's with his mother most of the time, which means I'm the one who benefits most from the spy services.

In fact, he's making me look like a real smart cookie.

One day after work he nabbed me as I was changing clothes. No one else was around.

"Grandmommie put something on her hair to make the gray go away," he said. "Don't tell grandmommie and mommy that I told you."

"Have no fear, pal," I said with a smile. "I won't tell them your told me."

My keen observations later stunned my wife and my mother.

"I really like your hair, mother dear," I said.

"We weren't going to say anything to you," my wife said. "We weren't sure you would notice."

I don't know why she would say such a thing, considering I remember what I'm wearing at least half the time.

"You should know me better than that!" I responded with pride.

Thanks, kid!

My informant paid off again when I discovered my wife had accidentally poked a hole in some dress pants.

As usual, I hardly had time to loosen my tie before I got the full report from my one-man home intelligence bureau.

"Mommy put a hole in your pants today, dad, but she didn't mean to," he said.

That's all I needed to know.

I strolled into the living room, kissed my wife and said, "So, I understand you ripped a big hole in my good pants today."

Her mouth dropped open and she looked like she wanted to smack somebody.

"Why that little tattletale," she said. "After all the things I've done with him and for him today, I can't believe he would pick that to tell you about for our day."

But that's the way it works with a four-year-old snitch in the house.

And I don't get all the breaks.

HE'LL BE THERE

I've been an ice cream fan ever since I was his age. Discovering chocolate chip vanilla ice cream at the supermarket ranked as among the great finds of my adult life.

We've been slacking off the bowl-a-day routine in recent months though because all the fat in the stuff. So that means daddy is more ice cream server than ice cream-eater these days. But that doesn't mean I won't dip into the stash every now and then—when I can get away with it.

"Daddy's eating the ice cream again!" our son says practically every time I try it.

Little snitch.

Perhaps he'll grow out of this soon. You never can tell.

But for now, he can—and does.

Experience production duo putting Peter Pan into flight

by Tim Mollette

To produce high-quality, entertaining theatre, a strong working relationship must exist between all members of the production crew.

At Jenny Wiley Theatre, the summer brings back an experienced production duo whose work speaks for itself.

Director Bob Bogdanoff and associate artistic director Jim Hunter, who are collaborating to bring the power of imagination to the stage in this season's Peter Pan, find themselves in a familiar position: working side by side.

The two men have been distinguished members of the theatre craft for a number of years, both individually and as a team. Hunter, who is in his third year with Jenny Wiley, has had experience in set and lighting design for various respected companies including the Wall Street Dance Works Company, which toured the country in addition to producing shows in studios in New York. Bogdanoff returns for his second year with Jenny Wiley, having had numerous experiences with such distinguished theatrical forums as the Jupiter Theatre and Ocala Civic Theatre, as well as directing shows in Toronto, which is regarded as the Broadway of Canada. As a team, the two men have come together on shows ranging from The Pirates of Penzance to this summer's Peter Pan and in theaters such as Flat Rock Playhouse in North Carolina, as well as collaborating for the Royal Palm Dinner Theater in Boca Raton, Florida over their seven-plus years of working off-and-on as a team.

One aspect that has made the two such a successful team is that both men are open to each other's ideas, along with carrying a lot of mutual respect.

"It is great to know that if I come up with an idea for a set that would be difficult to incorporate, but it is one that we'd like to try, Bob remains open to new ideas and that keeps input circulating," Hunter said, commenting on the team work between the two.

Bogdanoff also realizes that his set designer keeps the show as a whole in mind without losing any quality in the staging.

"The best thing about Jim is that he is actor conscious," said Bogdanoff. "I know that he won't build a set simply because it is pretty. He considers the struggles the actors may have with it and he keeps in mind the staging and blocking to assure a good continuity."

This production tandem will take their talents to New York in the near future as Bogdanoff will direct and Hunter will do set and lighting design for their off-off Broadway production of Dames at Sea. The challenge of taking on New York should be somewhat minimized by the fact that both men have such a strong professional relationship with each other.

"I always tell actors to audition with something they know because they'll be more comfortable," Bogdanoff commented. "So, if I am going to take my chances in New York, I want it to be with a piece I am familiar with and with people like Jim with whom I can work so easily."

No matter what may lie ahead for the two-man production team in New York, Hunter believes that their common goal of producing a quality show will always remain.

"Something that both of us realize is that it is not high-tech toys or flashy set design that make a show," said Hunter. "It is the people that make a show and that is something we both work towards."

Big Sandy Woodland News

by Bob Marsh Service Forester
Kentucky Division of Forestry
Betsy Layne office

Since 1952, the Eastern District of the Kentucky Division of Forestry has served the six counties of the Big Sandy area. Our job is to advance forest resource management by assisting private forest landowners from Pike, Floyd, Magoffin, Lawrence, Martin and Johnson counties in meeting their forest management goals. Providing fire prevention and control, promoting the production and efficient utilization of timber, maintaining and improving fish and wildlife habitat, and protecting water quality are but a few of the goals of the division, designed to ensure the future productivity of your woods.

To increase our effectiveness, this monthly column will focus attention on upcoming forestry related events, services available through KDF, suggestions on increasing the productivity of your woodlands, and other timely "forest facts." Since they are your woods, your comments, suggestions, and questions are welcome by your KDF Service Forester.

Lawrence County is having their Farm Field Day in August. The division hopes to have information regarding Christmas tree production available for this event.

Trees aren't just for the woods anymore. Urban forestry programs are becoming increasingly common. City tree plantings add beauty, reduce pollution, increase property value, and can help save energy by modifying the urban climate. The division can provide technical assistance in helping establish a successful urban forestry program.

This month's timely "forest fact" comes from Virginia Slusher from Madison County and might be a way to beat the summer heat. Growing up in Jackson County, Virginia and her sister would make tea from the roots of sassafras saplings. She suggests a ratio of 3/4 cup shaved sassafras root boiled in one quart of water for about 10 minutes, then chill.

Speaking of heat, be aware of your fireworks. I stopped on Hwy. 460 out of Salyersville to put out a small fire started by a firecracker. If it stays this hot and dry, it wouldn't take much to get a good smoke. Please be careful.

THE STORY OF JENNY WILEY

I want to preface The Story of Jenny Wiley by saying that the 1700's, was a time of violence between the Indians and the pioneers who passed through and settled on the lands in which they lived and hunted.

Jenny Wiley started out the door of their cabin with her four children and 15-year-old brother. It was just after dark and Tom, her husband, left early that morning for a distant trading post with a load of herbs which he collected and dried throughout the year. It was October 1, 1789.

John Borders, her sister's husband, stopped by earlier suggesting that she bring the kids and spend the night as the Indians had been very troublesome of late and there had been hooting from the nearby woods all afternoon.

"Jenny, that ain't owls, that's injuns," Borders said matter of factly. "Aren't you afraid to be here without Tom? I don't think you and the kids should be here alone. Lizzie said for you to come and stay with us, at least until Tom returns."

Jenny guessed that there was still a good half-hour before dark and she looked toward the loom, a loom her mother had used, and she tried to gauge the amount of work she wanted to complete before nightfall. Her father brought the loom from Pennsylvania to Walker's Creek in what would later become Kentucky.

"Johnny, yes, yes," Jenny answered. "We'll come. Tom said he may not return until tomorrow and with this terrible rain, I believe it will be tomorrow. Let me finish with my cloth and we'll be by."

Jenny and the children felt some security in that John and Elizabeth Borders lived in a nearby cabin and the renowned Indian fighter, Mathias Harman, also lived only a short distance away. Although Jenny and Tom were expecting their fifth child it wasn't due for several more weeks.

It rained off and on throughout the day and when Jenny finished her weaving she noticed that nightfall had come early due to the heavy dark clouds.

"Hurry up, we've got to hurry along," she said as she wrapped the baby.

Jenny removed the wooden bar from the door and when she pulled it open she was startled to be looking into the painted face of an Indian. Several warriors rushed into the open cabin yelling as they moved.

Jenny screamed and the children cried out as the Indians methodically used their tomahawks to smash the skulls of her brother and children with crunching blows. Jenny attempted to protect them but some of the warriors pushed her aside, her baby still clutched in her arms.

She had seen the result of Indian raids before and she and Tom had discussed the hazards of living in the borderland. Pioneer families in that era knew that attack from Indians was a serious hazard.

Jenny was horrified to witness the death of her children and brother, followed by their scalping. Soon their scalps were hanging from the sides of the Indians. An old warrior then grabbed for her baby and Jenny instinctively pushed and wrestled to prevent him from getting the bundled tot. Suddenly a chief spoke up causing the old Cherokee to abruptly stop his assault.

Jenny watched as the Indians rummaged through the cabin before engaging in a conversation which she did not understand.

"This cabin, who lives here?" an Indian asked.

"Th-th-thomas Wiley," Jenny barely got out as the cold air from the wide-open cabin, combined with her horror and fear, left her nearly speechless.

The Indians resumed Indian-talk among themselves and then began leaving. A Shawnee chief, whose name was Black Wolf, pulled her along and Jenny knew she must not resist. She was cold and weak from her unexpected experience as the Indians moved along in great haste. Black Wolf urged her to keep up, grabbing her and shoving her along at times.

Jenny had heard of stories of women who were kidnapped and left signals along the trail which could be followed. She had nothing to leave and the Indians were moving from the area of the cabins so swiftly she could do little more than keep pace.

They traveled throughout the night before resting at the break of day under a shelving rock where the Indians ate a common meal of dried venison and parched corn. Jenny was so concerned for her baby, which was deathly ill, that she refused to eat the food that was offered to her. The older Cherokee scowled at her and it made Jenny shudder.

Her only relief was that she sensed Black Wolf had some interest in her welfare. She knew the other Indians would just as soon be rid of her and the baby. Black Wolf went into the woods and returned with herbs which he boiled in a cup before offering it for her baby. The baby drank the dark brew and as the day passed it seemed to have the desired result.

Jenny knew that her best hope of survival was to keep up. She tried as best she could to keep up but periodically the Indians would give her a disgusting look as though she was slowing the travel.

"Harmon, Harmon," a warrior cried, startling Jenny as he rushed to her side later in the day.

The Indians gathered and talked among themselves before the old Cherokee took her baby and bashed it against a nearby tree, killing the 15-month-old. Jenny was devastated but something from within told her she had to remain calm if she wanted to survive.

When I went to him with the thyroidism I explained to him that I had three things that were bothering me: I couldn't concentrate, I was so tired that I couldn't stay awake and I was freezing to death. He said 'Okay, let's run some tests.' And I knew by that afternoon. . . I was on my way to recovery. It's been a year and I feel great. I have known him long enough to know he doesn't just treat me this way. . . He does this with all his patients. He listens, he's compassionate, he cares about you as a person. ### McDonald's given award for sixth consecutive year

For the sixth consecutive year, McDonald's restaurants owned and operated by Bob and Tom Hutchison were named recipients of the prestigious Outstanding Restaurant Award by the Pittsburgh Regional McDonald's Corporate Office.

The award is presented to top-rated McDonald's restaurants that demonstrate consistent, superior customer satisfaction. Honored were the Hutchison's McDonald's restaurants in South Williamson, Paintsville, Prestonsburg, Salyersville, Louisa and Pikeville (Coal Run Village).

The award is based on the restaurant's performance during the last calendar year.

"This award is a tribute to our fine management and staff at the McDonald's in South Williamson, Pikeville, Prestonsburg, Salyersville, Louisa and Pikeville (Coal Run Village)," Tom Hutchison said.

"We appreciate all the support we've received from them and the communities we serve," added Bob Hutchison.

"Our 39-year commitment to the highest standard of quality, service, cleanliness and value is what makes McDonald's successful," said Janice Fields, regional manager. "But it's the dedication and enthusiasm of the operators, managers and crew people that make McDonald's extra special in every community. We're proud of the efforts of the Hutchison's and their McDonald's teams."

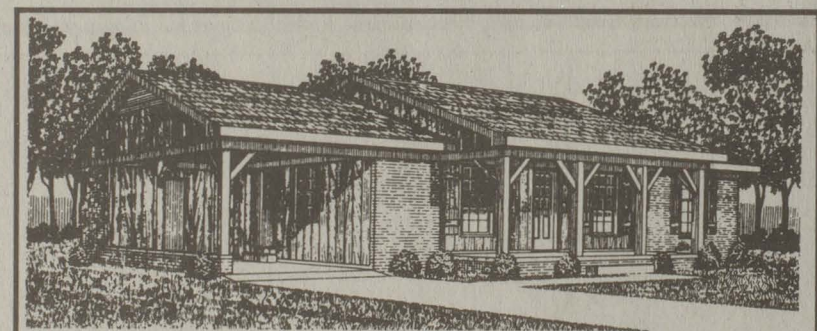

McDonald's is the leading foodservice retailer in the global consumer marketplace, with nearly 14,000 restaurants in 71 countries. About 80 percent of McDonald's restaurant businesses are locally owned and operated by independent entrepreneurs.

Westport

Westport 10-155
Associated Designs-Eugene, Oregon

From the street, the Westport puts the viewer in mind of a Colonial era saltbox-style home. It has traditional clapboard siding and a totally symmetrical front facade. But those angled window bays on both sides of the front door are of more recent vintage.

The interior is even more modern. On the main floor, ceilings are nine feet high, and the entire rear expanse is devoted to informal family living space. A family room is at one end, a nook in the center, and a fully-equipped kitchen at the opposite end. Placement of dining room and living room follows tradition, with the two rooms flanking the entry.

Counters wrap around four sides of the kitchen. There's space enough here for two or three cooks to combine efforts without bumping elbows. A pantry provides additional food storage and an eating bar defines the boundary between kitchen and nook.

If the home is built over a basement, the stairway entrance is in the nook. Sliders on the opposite side of the room open onto a wide deck. And on those bone chilling days when nobody wants to go outside, you can cozy up to the masonry fireplace in the family room.

Utilities are nearby, in a laundry room that's also accessible from the two-car garage. Soiled laundry dropped down a chute on the second floor lands in a basket on the counter.

Bedrooms and a deep bonus room are upstairs. The Westport's master suite is spacious and luxurious, outfitted with a huge walk-in closet, spa tub, dual vanity, oversized shower and a sitting area.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $10 to Associated Designs, 1260 Charmelton St., Suite 2, Eugene, Ore. 97401. Please specify the Westport 10-155 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 150 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

health hints

Sunburn Relief

(NAPS)—Although sunburn can be both a major discomfort and a major health hazard, there are steps you can take to alleviate some of the risks associated with this painful skin condition.

Try to stay out of the sun between the hours of 10 am and 2 pm. That's when the sun's rays are the strongest and you are at greatest risk for sunburn.

When you do venture out into the sun, use a sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of at least 15, preferably. That means the lotion will keep your skin from burning for 15 times as long as it would take your skin to burn normally.

Apply the sunscreen at least 15 minutes before you go outside. That will allow the protective ingredients enough time to uniformly coat your skin.

If your skin does get burned slightly, the best way to soothe it may be to cool it off. Get into a tub of cool water and soak for 15 to 20 minutes with an oatmeal-type product, such as AVEENO® Colloidal Oatmeal Bath.

It makes sense to stock up on sun protection products like suntan lotion and bath treatments now, before you need them. You probably won't want to shop much when you're sunburned.

Pointers On Pets

Dogs Do Get Diabetes—So Do Cats

(NAPS)—Many people may be surprised to learn that a disease that's devastating to humans can also affect their precious pets. It's true, however, animals can develop diabetes, a condition in which the body stores sugar improperly.

What To Watch For
Diabetes in dogs or cats usually occurs toward the tail end of the animal's life. Female dogs and miniature breeds are more likely to develop diabetes than male or large dogs. Many diabetic animals are overweight. Other symptoms include:

- Excessive thirst.
- Excessive hunger.
- Frequent urination.

What Can Happen
If the animal is not treated, diabetes can lead to your pet's death. Diabetes affects the way a body uses food. Normally food is converted into a form of sugar called glucose which the body uses as fuel. Insulin, a hormone produced by the pancreas, helps to regulate glucose levels in the body. In diabetes, the body either doesn't produce enough insulin, or cannot use it properly.

What To Do
If your pet is eating or drinking more, or has accidents though housebroken, see a veterinarian. He or she will look for other signs of diabetes such as cataracts, a swollen liver, obesity or an unhealthy hair coat. Fortunately, there are a number of things you and your veterinarian can do to protect your pet if you are willing to make the commitment to do so. You may be asked to watch the animal's diet, and you may have to administer pills or even insulin injections as well as test your pet's urine. You may also have to watch for adverse insulin reactions. Vomiting, weakness or convulsions are signals to feed corn syrup to the pet right away and take it to the animal hospital.

Your sweet pet may have a sugar problem.

What It Means
Diabetes can be a dangerous condition for all creatures, but care and commitment on your part can help your pet live a longer and happy life even with the disease.

Swimming tips for dogs

By Mike Capuzzo

ACTUAL NEWS ITEM: This summer, a 67-year-old Boca Raton, Fla., man is training to be the first to swim across the English Channel with a dog, from England to France. This is, of course, the same direction the Allies headed on D-Day, and although these events seem unconnected at first, it will certainly be the dog's Longest Day.

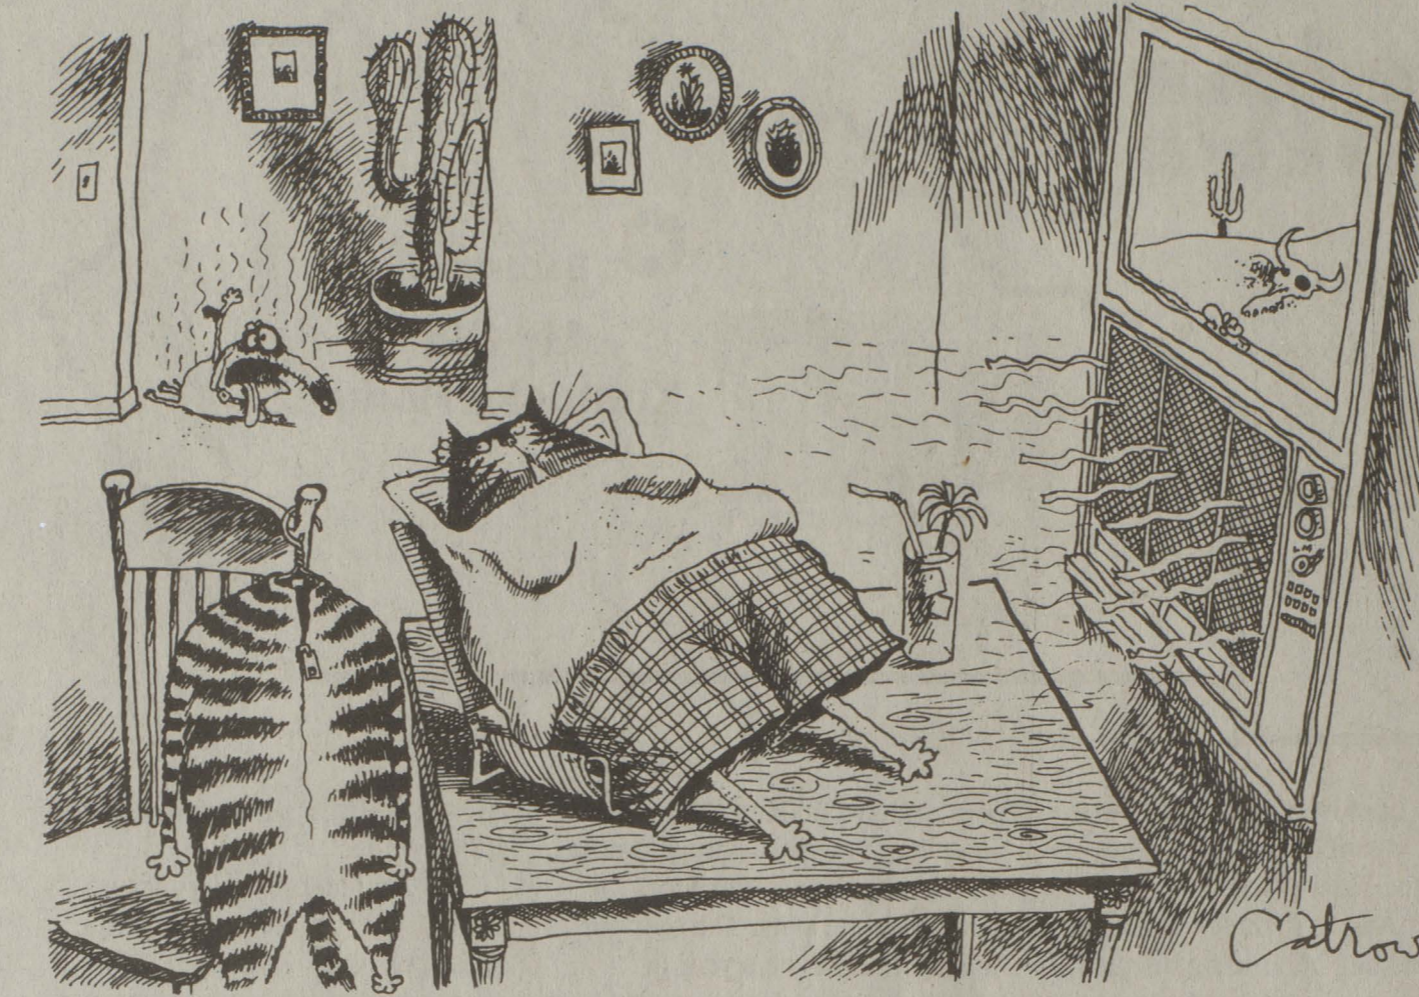

"Wild Things" hates to always be saying NO, NO, NO, since our staff is comprised mostly of humanist-animal lover types who prefer to say YES to almost anything, but it's time to drag out that summer chestnut we hope this mad dog and Florida man realize: NOT ALL DOGS CAN SWIM.

"P-tash," you say. True, MOST dogs can swim and love it. But if you're introducing your canine Chadworth to your backyard pool, lake or ocean, the American Kennel Club advises: (1) Never throw Chadworth into the water. (2) Start in shallow water, and coax the dog with treat or toy to deeper water, starting in Dover and finishing somewhere near Calais. (3) If your dog is not so smart and paddles with front legs only, lift his hind legs to buoy him and say, "doggy paddle" in English or French three times.

Dogs will catch on soon enough—it's the owners we have to worry about, this being summer, "the best and worst time for dogs and cats," as the Humane Society's Rachel Lamb points out.

"Dogs and people love summer because they get out and play together," Lamb notes. "But it requires more planning."

Summer, as you know, is the time for the most dangerous car event of the year—your neighbor's trip to the grocery store with Chadworth in the back seat. True, the Indianapolis 500 seems at first to be more dangerous, but far more dogs die each year while their masters are running in to pick up a quart of two-percent low-fat milk. Exact numbers aren't available, Lamb says, but hot cars are a leading killer of dogs. Cats, too, are in danger, but are less vulnerable because, being highly intelligent creatures, they have better things to do than go to the grocery store to watch you buy milk.

Arfy could only pant in wonder at Cosmo's preternatural cool

"Animals don't regulate heat like we do," Lamb says. "Dogs don't sweat. Panting is the only way they regulate, so they heat up much quicker. And unlike us, if their internal body temperature goes up even one or two degrees, it can be death or brain damage in a matter of minutes."

And your car is like a minioven that can heat up to 160 degrees Fahrenheit in a few minutes, even on a cloudy day."

Grocery stores are starting to cooperate by handing out Humane Society hot-car fliers, but have resisted Humane Society suggestions that they make public-address announcements. ("There's a red Camaro in the parking lot with a dog inside.") For now, they just tell you if your lights are on and your battery is dying.

If you spot a dog locked in a park car, Lamb advises you to diplomatically inform the owner he or she may be unintentionally murdering a precious pet—realizing you may be cursed or punched out. A safer way is to send a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Humane Society of the U.S., 2100 L. St. NW, Washington, DC 20037, for one free copy of the society's hot-car flier, which you can photocopy and slip under windshield wipers with passive-aggressive glee.

Signs of canine heatstroke are panting, drooling, rapid pulse and fever. Immediately immerse the dog in cool water and seek emergency veterinary assistance. Also remember: To jog alongside you, a dog must be young, have distance build up slowly and never run during the day when the sun's heat is most intense. Dogs love ocean swims, but take off the flea collar; it can cause a toxic reaction with salt water.

QUAIL

Colinus virginianus

About 45 varieties of quail roam the world, but only about 20 of those varieties make their homes in North America. Quails inhabit every continent except Antarctica.

One type of quail that lives in Kentucky is the northern bobwhite. Northern bobwhites live in the middle and eastern parts of the continent and in Mexico. In the spring, they build nests to hatch their young. The nests are built on the ground. Step carefully if you're in quail territory because quails hide their nests by covering them with grass.

The female quail lays about 8 to 16 eggs, and baby chicks hatch in about three weeks. The chicks learn to fly soon after their birth.

Quails are small birds; an adult averages from 8 to 12 inches. The largest quail is the mountain quail, which can grow to 11 1/2 inches long and weighs about 8 ounces. The smallest quail is the montezuma quail, which is about 8 inches long.

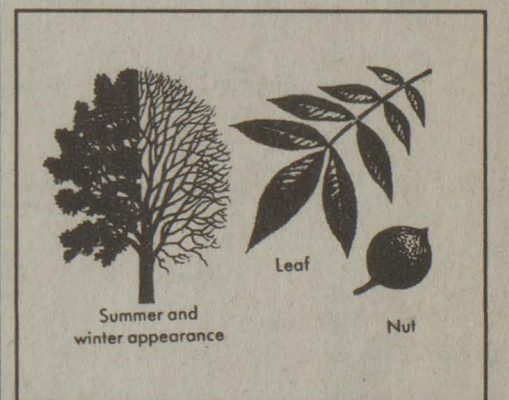

Quails are considered game birds, and are hunted for sport and for food.

They have a pattern of coloring—brown, tan and gray—that helps them to hide in the grass from their predators.

BITTERNUT HICKORY

Carya cordiformis

Some animals eat the plump, white kernel inside the nut of this tree, but people don't. The tree lives up to its name—bitternut.

The nut has a thin shell that splits into four sections. The nut is round and smooth. The tree can be identified by its seven or nine-pointed leaflets.

The bitternut hickory is sometimes called swamp hickory, probably because it grows in low, wet woods. It can, however, be found growing in dry areas. It can be found from New Hampshire to Minnesota and south to Florida and Texas.

Wood from the tree is often used to make furniture.

Natural Bridge

Natural Bridge, which is on the ridge dividing Wolfe and Powell counties, forms an arch with an opening 78 feet in length and 65 feet high. There is more than 15 million pounds of rock suspended over the great opening.

A new future opened for the coal industry of Eastern Kentucky in April 1915, when the first full trainload of coal (33 cars) left a Hazard mine for Milwaukee. Transportation from the area had been the major problem.

Paducah is the only city in Kentucky named for an Indian.

George Rogers Clark's brother, William, of Lewis and Clark fame, founded the city after his brother's death and named it for his Chickasaw friend, Chief Paduke.

Daniel Boone lived in Kentucky for some three years (1769-1771) in a cave in what is now Mercer County.

Robert E. Lee's birthday (January 19) became a Kentucky holiday in 1926, but lost that status in 1968 when the state legislature revoked several state holidays. However, it is still observed by the General Assembly when they are in session.

Reelfoot Lake in the far western part of the state was created by a cave-in during the great earthquake which shook the eastern part of the U.S. in 1811; seven years before the area became part of Kentucky.

Kentucky's first permanent capital was destroyed by fire in 1814. The second, built on the same site, was destroyed by fire in 1824. The third stands on the same site, and is now used as a museum. It is commonly known as the Old Statehouse.

A Frenchman discovered Big Bone Lick in 1739. In 1803 the large bones of the prehistoric mammals were shipped to England.

Kentucky Trivia Tidbits

If you would like to help sponsor in-classroom copies of The Floyd County Times and 'Etc.' call 886-8506.

In the early 1780s, the fertile land in the Virginia territory that would become Kentucky became a magnet to settlers. Land developers began buying parcels of land and selling them in tracts to those early Kentucky settlers.

Two of those developers, David Bard and John C. Owings, through a land lottery, established a town in the northwestern section of that territory that eventually became Bardstown.

Bard had received a grant of 1,000 acres from the Virginia General Assembly and Virginia's Governor Patrick Henry. Bard sent his brother, William, to act as agent. The land was purchased by settlers from Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia who came into the area by way of the Falls of the Ohio.

First called Salem, the development later became known as Baird's Town (a derivative of the Bard's family name). It was designated Bardstown in 1788 when the city was incorporated.

Bairds Town, located 32 miles southeast of Louisville and 26 miles northeast of Elizabethtown, was in Jefferson County until 1784, when Nelson County was formed from a portion of Jefferson County. When Nelson county was established, Bairds Town became its county seat.

The first courthouse, made of hewn logs, was built in 1785. In that year, 150 log houses were built. The success of the town's craftsmen, educators, lawyers and political leaders brought prosperity to the area and the log homes were soon replaced by brick mansions built in the Federal, Greek Revival and Georgian styles.

In 1818, Judge John Rowan Sr.

completed work on his brick mansion, Federal Hill. The house became immortalized in song by Stephen Collins Foster, Rowan's cousin, as "My Old Kentucky Home." The property was given to Rowan as a wedding present by his father-in-law.

over executive and judicial branches.

Rowan fought a duel in 1801 and killed his opponent, Dr. James Chambers. He stood trial, but the case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

The mansion is now the focal Confederate and Union armies.

General Braxton Bragg's army of 28,000 Confederate troops encamped in Bardstown during the Confederate invasion of Kentucky.

The day after the Confederates left the city, on October 8, the Union Army marched through it to home of state senator William Johnson and Nancy Crow Johnson, whose son Ben Johnson was born there. Ben Johnson also became a state senator and a powerful Kentucky Democratic leader. He numbered among his friends the James brothers and the members of Quantrill's raiders.

More than 300 buildings in Bardstown are listed on the National Historic Register. It is the site of the original Kentucky Court of Appeals and center of the distilling industry in Kentucky because of an abundance of lime in its water supply.

Known as the "Bourbon Capital of the World," Bardstown is home to distilleries of the top bourbon makers. Sixty percent of the world's supply of bourbon whiskey is manufactured there, according to Dixie Hibbs in the Kentucky Encyclopedia.

Oscar Getz Museum of Whiskey, a historic whiskey museum in Spalding Hall, showcases the 180-year perspective of the distilling industry.

Spalding Hall, built in 1826, first served as a college and seminary, and then was used as a hospital during the Civil War.

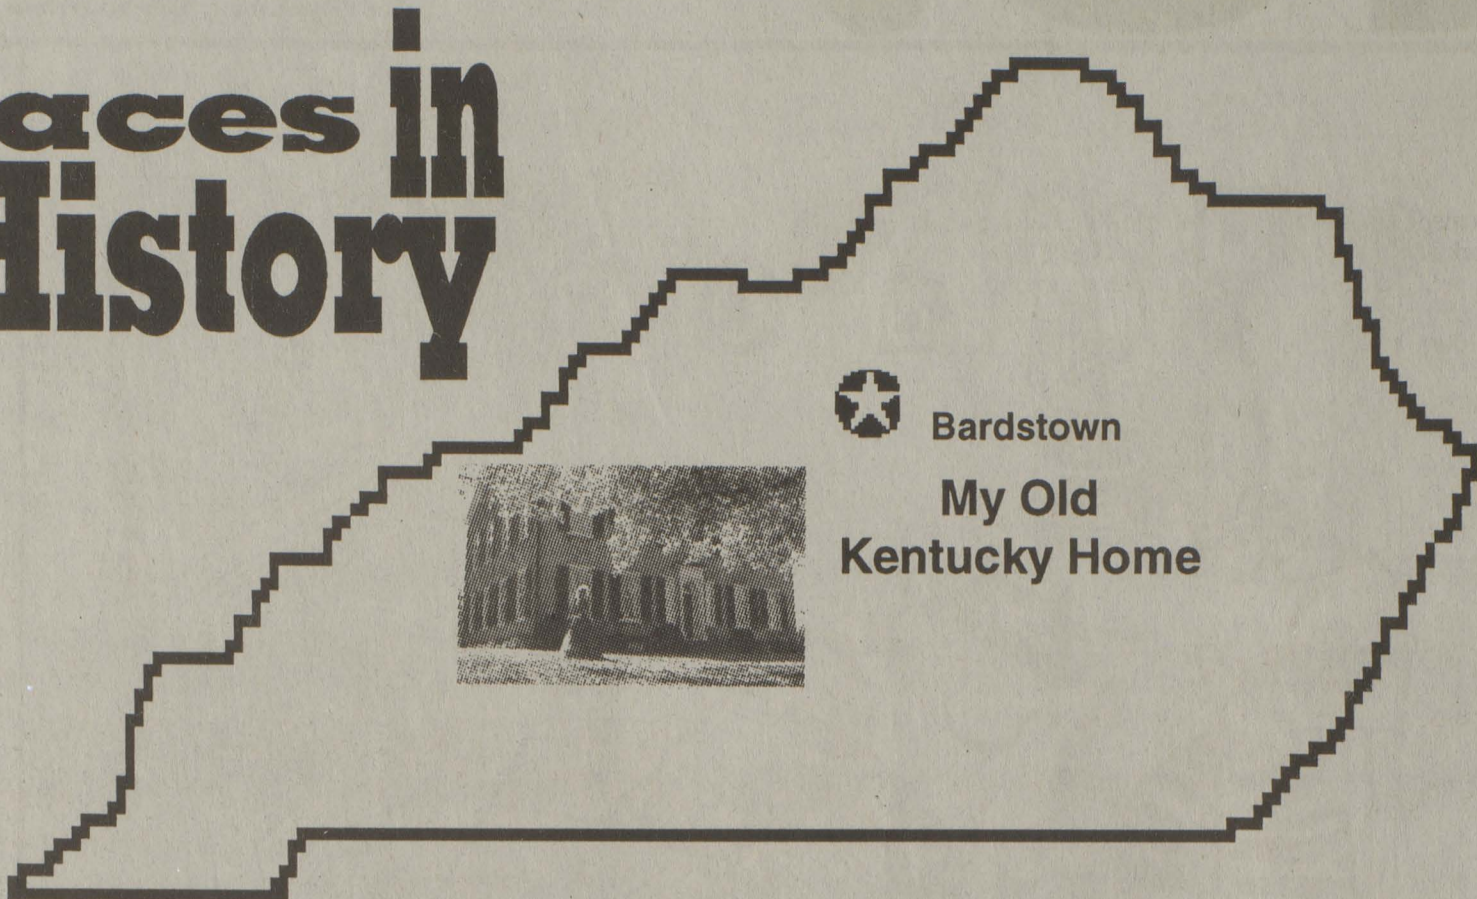

In addition to the whiskey museum, the Hall also houses the Bardstown Historical Museum, the Jim Cantrell Art Gallery and LaTaberna Restaurant.

Another building from Bardstown's past is the Old Talbott Tavern, which was built in the latter part of the 1700s.

The tavern is one of the oldest inns in continuous operation located west of the Alleghenies.

It is mid-America's oldest stage coach stop, and notables such as Louis Phillippe, George Rogers Clark and John J. Audubon rested there during their journeys. Bullet holes made by Jesse James can still be seen at the tavern.

HUEYSVILLE (BOSCO)

On July 13, Hueysville, a rural community located at the junction of Saltlick Creek and the Right Fork of Beaver Creek near the Magoffin County line, will celebrate its 136th anniversary. It was on this date in 1858 that the Hueysville Post Office was established with John Morris as first postmaster.

According to Dr. Richard Howard, head of the Hueysville homecoming committee and a former Hueysville resident who now lives in Winchester, the community will celebrate its anniversary on Labor Day Weekend, September 3, 4, and 5. Anyone who has ever used Hueysville as an address is invited to the homecoming.

The hamlet that became a roaring coal town in the 1920s and 30s, was named for a Mr. Huey. Robert Rennick in his book Kentucky Place Names, speculates that perhaps it was named after Robert S. Huey, a Pennsylvania-born clerk who is listed in the 1850 Census of Floyd County. Rondal Hayes, a life-long resident of Hueysville says that the the former owner of the Floyd County Times, furnished the lumber and others built the building," Hayes recalled.

Following arrival of the railroad in 1914, the coal industry invaded the farming community and transformed it into a rip-roarin' pioneer coal town. The oil industry had already discovered the area's rich oil reserve. "An oil field was started in 1898," Hayes said. "A big tank sat here at Hueysville. Oil came from pipes laid from Hueysville to Wayland and the oil was shipped from Hueysville."

The 1920s through the 1930s was the "heyday of the coal mines," Hayes said.

The mines brought in workers from Pennsylvania and other states. The companies built coal mining camps on the ridges of the hills. "We had 100 camp houses on ridges on 'the Western Front,'" Hayes said. "There was John Huff Hill, Sam Duncan's Hill, and Reed Branch. There was a boarding house and a commissary from 1914 to 1929."

The area was called 'the Western Front' because of its reputation as a 'wild west-like' section of town.

"A pretty rough crowd came from it," Hayes said. "You had to put cotton in your ears to keep from hearing the shooting...I can remember some wild times.

There was a lot of killing and then it began to settle down. As times grew harder, the people grew meeker."

The coal industry transformed the community into a town.

"You wouldn't believe it now, but at one time there were seven country stores here in Hueysville, from the teens into the 1930s," Hayes said.

From 1916 to the early 1920s, the community had a high school and boarding school. The boarding school burned down, and the high school was absorbed by Martin, Garrett and Maytown schools.

Hard times hit beginning in 1929 with the stock market crash and the ensuing Great Depression. "In the 1930s, mines went out. Then a flurry of truck mines opened in the 1940s. Then they began to go down and bigger coal companies came in," Hayes recalled.

"On the right hand of Beaver was Consolidated Coal and on the left hand was Elkhorn Coal Company."

Hayes remembers interesting, and sometimes tragic, events that happened in his lifetime. A smallpox epidemic hit the area when he was a child, and he still has the scar on his arm where he was vaccinated. He recalled his uncles saying that during the epidemic they were afraid to travel the roads, so they traveled the hills to avoid contact with carriers of the disease. "If they happened to see anybody, they dodged them," he said.

"I saw the man who buried the two who brought the smallpox from Cincinnati," he added. "No one would help the man bury them. He went to their house and wrapped them up and took them on a sled to a cemetery on a point. Their graves are still there, unmarked."

The tragic couple were Jack Neal and his wife, who ran a store across the railroad tracks opposite the Hayes home. From their death, a rumor of buried treasure emerged. The rumor persists to this day.

"It was rumored that he (Neal) had money and he buried the money," Hayes said. "One bucketful of gold was found," he added.

One prominent person Hayes recalled was a man named Pittman. "He was a religious person who came here in 1916 or 18. I knew him well. He was still here until the 1940s. He picked up orphan kids and took them out and put them in school. He would get young people who wanted to go to college and would get donations and get them in school. He was from a wealthy family in Danville. He, his sister and brother spent their lives helping others get an education..."

"We had a lot of people who did good. Dr. John A. Patton was born in Hueysville in 1914. He was from a very poor family. He got an education, got a doctor's degree. He was president of Middle Tennessee State College, now a university..."

In 1946, Hayes took over his father's store business which he kept until 1981. In 1951, his wife, Irene, became Hueysville Postmaster, a position she kept for 30 years. Hayes said he served as postal clerk for 27 years.

The present Hueysville bears little resemblance to the coal town it once was. A new coal operation has revitalized the area somewhat. "The Jones Fork operation can handle as much as 900 coal truck loads a day. But the town is slowly going back to the Indians. As the old people die out, the young people are going to other places...Now it's a country hamlet, but an enjoyable place to be around."

HUEYSVILLE

community was named after "an old man named Huey" who received a land grant in the area for his service in the Revolutionary War. None of Huey's descendants remain in Hueysville, but Hayes recalls one of the man's nephews visited the area some time back.

In 1859, according to information submitted by Dr. Howard, Joseph Gearhart became the second postmaster. The post office was closed in 1860, but was re-established eleven years later on September 21, 1871.

"There was a period when the post office was removed to a point about one and a half miles distant to Brush Creek," Howard said. "On June 12, 1894, Captain Mike Staley was named postmaster and the office was operated from his home. The name of the post office was also changed to Mike. Incidentally, Captain Staley's grandson, Mike Staley, served thirty years or more as postmaster at Lackey. The office remained on Brush Creek until 1889 when it was returned to Hueysville where it remained until 1907."

The name was changed back to Hueysville on May 24, 1889 when David Cooley was appointed postmaster.

"It is not known why," Howard continued, "but in 1907, the post office was closed and mail services were handled from Lackey some three miles away and even farther for the outlying residents. The year 1914 saw the post office returning home, never to be removed again."

Willie Hayes was appointed postmaster on May 27, 1914.

"A wide area was served by the post office with the use of postal riders," Howard said. "These 'carriers' were a rugged lot in the years preceding the horseless carriage. Mail was delivered to Quick Sand (in Knott County) and across the hill in Middle Creek and Pyramid."

Howard also gave some insight into the politics of the time. "Many prominent families of Hueysville are identified with the post office...The job of running the post office was usually given to someone who had a large family and could deliver quite a number of votes at election time. When a party lost, that was when a new postmaster would often be appointed."

In 1902, the name Bosco came into prominence. According to Kentucky Place Names, the Bosco Post Office was established a short distance away from Hueysville in 1902. When it was closed in 1916, its papers were transferred to Hueysville. In 1914, the Elkhorn & Beaver Valley (now C & O) Railroad extended its lines and established the Bosco train station near the Hueysville Post Office. Thus, the community is known by both names today.

Hayes, 79, has vivid memories of the Hueysville he knew as a boy. His father Frank owned F.T. Hayes General Merchandise, first located in 1918 by the railroad station. In 1920, his father had a new store building and feed store built about 100 yards away. Hayes' earliest memories are of watching the store buildings being built and "the number of people who came in from Salt Lick Creek and came here to buy feed."

He recalled that since there was no ice or refrigerators to keep meat from spoiling, "Bologna came with rope to string the rolls from the store rafters. In 1926, we got electricity. Then my father bought a walk-in cooler and he could sell beef and pork loins."

In 1909, several leaders in the community provided funds and labor to build a church at the end of the old train station. "D. M. Allen, father of Norman Allen,

Rethinking how we learn and teach

by Alice H. Davis

As Lauren Resnick sees it, school and real life simply don't match anymore.

Resnick, the director of the Learning and Research Development Center at the University of Pittsburgh, is looked upon as an expert by those who want to change schools...although she professes to be more of a learner than a teacher. An educational psychologist and researcher into how people learn, she has become involved in several efforts, including Kentucky's, to rethink the whole process by which we educate our children and ourselves.

"The problem does not seem to be in the kids," Resnick told an audience at Centre College in Danville recently, "but in our assumptions and ways of working in school."

Americans, she says, have for 70 years based their testing and therefore their whole education system on aptitude as opposed to effort. This reliance on aptitude, the amount of ability that each child is born with, has hampered rather than helped the majority of American children as they go through school and when they enter the world of work.

"The tests we've been using don't tell you anything about what students know," she says. "What they do tell you is who knows more and who knows less."

These standardized tests, she maintains, measure the ability to learn more than the amount of learning. But the countries whose economic systems and workplace philosophies are talked about and envied by Americans care less about aptitude and about what will happen to America if schools don't learn to teach each child in more and better ways. In this country today, 20 percent of the students entering high school will go on to finish a four-year degree in college. Resnick talks about the economic future of the 80 percent who don't finish 16 years of school. They become part of an economic underclass that gets trapped in low wage, low skill jobs.

If this continues, Resnick says, America will see wages drop and create for itself the economy of a Third World nation.

This means a country with a small upper class of college graduates whose wages continue to increase and a larger, growing lower class who work at jobs with little pay, few benefits and even fewer prospects for advancement.

Resnick sees education as the way to prevent this trend. She also believes that rethinking education must include accounting for the ways students learn inside and outside of school, and tapping into each child's capacities to learn, regardless of aptitude.

Says Lauren Resnick about the efforts in Kentucky and nationwide: "It's hard to change. But I think we can. The path we've chosen can give us a robust economy and allow us to be humane and caring besides."

Alice H. Davis is the director of communications for The Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence.

ABCs Of Education

more about effort. They simply "believe that trying hard creates ability," Resnick says. And working hard in school is the key to learning at high levels.

All children learn. They learn in different ways, in and out of school regardless of aptitude. The key to changing American schools, say reformers like Resnick, is to identify each child's capacities and to develop teaching methods and measurements based on those capacities.

Resnick gives some dire predictions

Vets bring practice

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Patients of Country Hills Veterinary Clinic in East Point get two doctors for the price of one. That's because the veterinary practice is a family affair.

Husband and wife team Mark and Melanie Greene, graduates of Auburn University College of Veterinary Medicine in Alabama, opened the veterinary clinic in February, and so far their practice is raining cats and dogs — and other creatures not so domestic. And some a little exotic.

The clinic, housed in a new trailer located just off new U.S. 23 on Little Paint Road, has examination rooms, a surgery, a lab, and a holding area (cages) for patients who require more than a routine checkup.

The reception-waiting area, with its country-print wallpaper, wooden shelves decorated with small wooden animals, and prints of cats and dogs hung in wooden frames on the walls, is pleasant and homey, and especially appealing to animal-loving clientele.

Although the Greens treat large and small animals, right now they are focusing primarily on small animal medicine, which doesn't require house or "farm" calls.

"We offer close to what other veterinary clinics offer," Melanie said during an interview at the clinic. "We practice small animal medicine, surgery and dentistry...(However), we do some routine work on live-stock — horses, cows, goats. We go out to the farm if called."

The clinic also offers baths and flea dips cats and dogs. "We don't have professional grooming, but we'll shave dogs," she said.

When Melanie says "we," she literally means Mark and herself. The doctors have a receptionist and a cleaning lady, but they don't have a veterinary assistant.

Mark, 28, is the son of Julian and Beulah Greene of East Point. Melanie, 26, is the daughter of Walter and Colleen Fletcher of Pikeville.

Both doctors decided to become vets because they love animals.

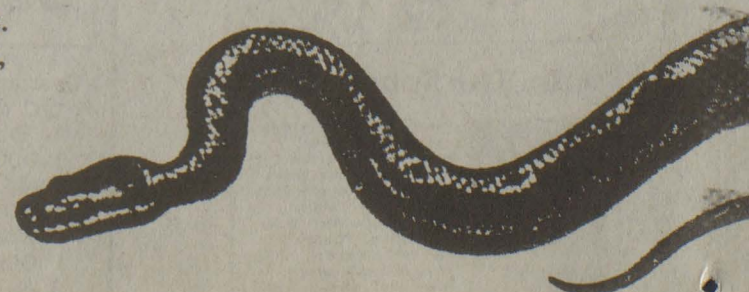

"Both of us have grown up around animals," Melanie explained. "And we always loved animals. Mark had farm animals and I had cats and dogs. We knew from childhood what we wanted to do."

Although the doctors grew up in adjoining counties, and attended the University of Kentucky for one year at the same time, they never met until they attended Auburn University.

"We met at veterinary school at Alabama, but we didn't date," Melanie said. "Mark graduated two years before me. Then he got a job in Pikeville working for a veterinarian."

The two worked at the same veterinary office in Pikeville the summer before her junior year and romance blossomed. "Then I had to go to school at Auburn in the fall while he stayed at Pikeville," Melanie said.

The Greens married at the start of her ...senior year at Auburn.

 "We spent our first year of marriage apart," she sighed.
 During their second year of marriage, after Melanie's graduation, they had to endure separation again. "Mark was working in Pikeville and I was working at Hazard," she said. "It was hard being apart."
 That's when the Greens decided to set up their own clinic in Floyd County where they could be together. The couple live on a small farm on Lick Fork of Jennys Creek which they share with their two cats, two dogs, and a horse. A new addition is expected in a few months. Melanie recently learned that she is expecting their first child.
 So far "the practice is doing really well," Mark said, taking a break to join in the interview. "We have our own clients. The majority will see either one of us."
 Melanie said she and her husband rarely disagree about a diagnosis. "It's nice because you do have someone to discuss cases with."
 The most common problem the vets see is allergies, manifested as skin problems in dogs. "Dogs show allergies, not through the respiratory system, but through their skin," she said.
 The most serious diseases in this area that the vets treat are heartworms and parvo-virus, both which can be deadly if not treated in time.

 "We see our fair share of sick animals," Mark said, adding that in the last twenty years preventive medicine has been a major focus of veterinary work.
 The two have seen their share of unusual cases.
 One of the most unusual the two have tackled so far was the surgical removal of a goose egg-sized tumor from the bladder of a dog. In another case, the doctors had to remove nine inches of a small dog's intestine to retrieve a rubber toy the dog had swallowed.
 They also have some unusual pets as their patients.
 "We do see some exotic pets," Melanie said. "We see reptiles, iguanas, Gila monsters, fish and birds. We have a python we are treating right now."
 The pet snake had to be force-fed by the doctors because its diet was lacking in proper nutrients and it was losing weight.
 "Actually, she is pretty nice," the veterinarian added with a smile. "She's a friendly snake. She only weighs two and a half pounds. She is fairly young."
 The vets have also treated a pot-bellied pig who had an upset stomach.
 "We have two pot-bellied pigs in our practice," Melanie said, "They will root up your yard, but they can be litter-trained as house pets."
 The job of a veterinarian "is definitely interesting," Mark noted, summing up their work. "In one day we might see a snake, a dog, and a horse. You have to like people, too. You have to be a people and an animal person to be a veterinarian."

Sean Lawson

About the author

The Floyd County Times and the Department of Instruction of Floyd County Schools jointly wish to feature the student work of Sean Lawson, a primary YOUNG AUTHORS' winner from Mrs. Traci Tackett's class at Betsy Layne Elementary. Sean is the son of Faye Edward and Charlene Lawson of Honaker. His book, The Runaway Children, printed with permission, was the winner in the primary "Computer Graphics" book competition.

Sean was a room winner in his third grade class, a school winner, and a county-wide winner for the 1992-93 school year for his book. He received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond at a spring awards ceremony. Approximately, 5,000 elementary and middle school students participated in competition throughout the county.

The Runaway Children

Written and illustrated by Sean Lawson

One day, there were two children. They lived beside an old road near the woods.

The children's mother was very mean. Every day she scolded them.

One day the two children decided to run away. That night the children slowly crept out the door.

They went through the woods. They walked for a long time.

Soon they heard a noise. It was a snake!

The kids ran as fast as they could! But soon the snake was gone.

The kids stopped to rest for a minute. One of the kids said "I'm scared."

"Yea Sis, but we've got to keep moving. You don't want to go back home and let Mother gripe at us, do you?"

The kids started again. Soon they heard another noise. It was a bear!

The kids ran as fast as they could!

Soon the bear was gone.

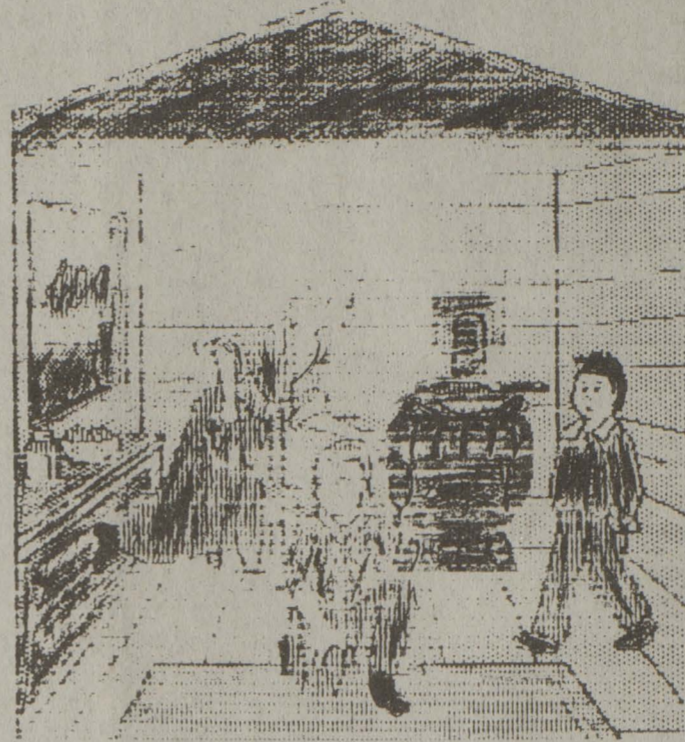

The kids rested again. The girl said, "Let's go home."

The boy said, "OK, let's go!"

Then they rushed home. When they got to the yard they slowed down.

They slowly opened the door and tiptoed through the house and got into bed.

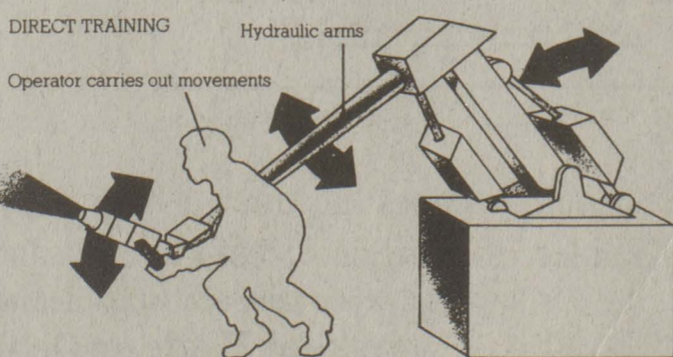

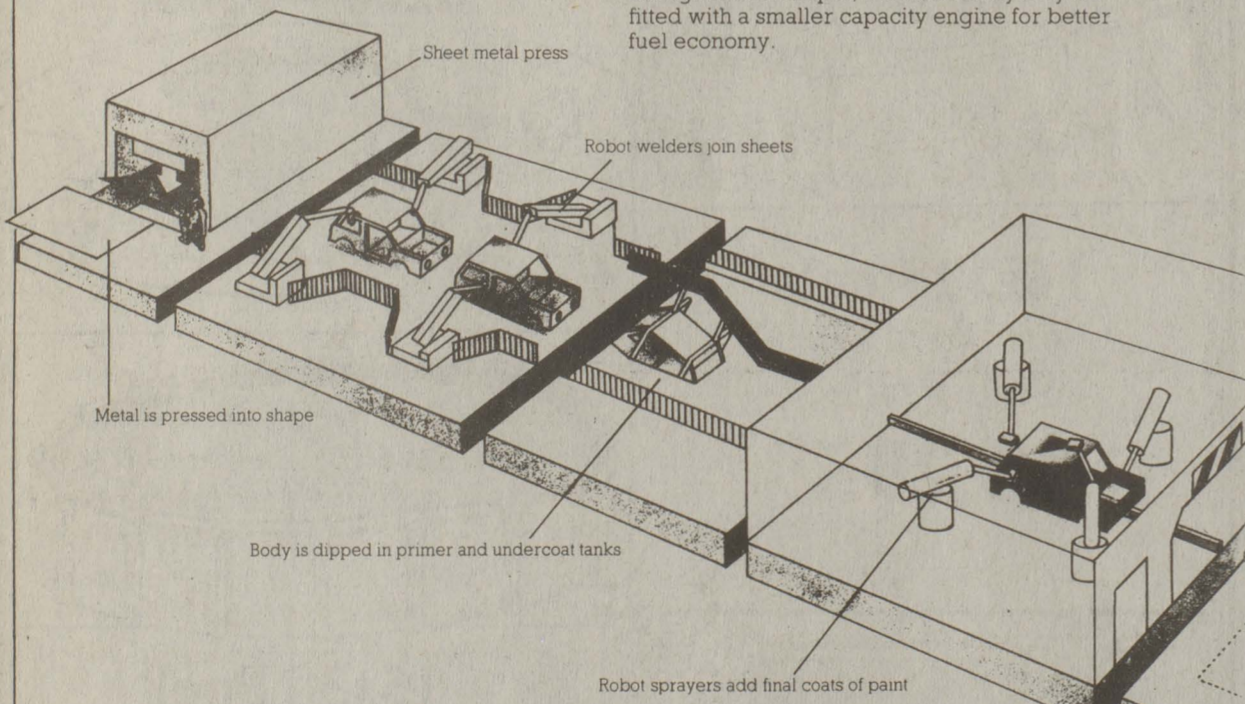

The next morning the mother wasn't grouchy. The two children lived happily ever after.

CAR PRODUCTION

In 1913, Henry Ford began mass-producing his Ford Model T cars using a moving assembly line. His basic process is still used today. The car moves along a track, rails or conveyor and is assembled part by part. A summary of the whole procedure is shown below. In practice, the engines may be made in one factory while the chassis is produced in another and the body is pressed and painted in the body shop at another site. These subassemblies are then transported to the main production line for final assembly. The work is checked at each stage by quality control staff. Every so often the production line is halted and altered to produce a different version of the basic car, depending on what buyers have ordered or how fashions change. For example, the same body may be fitted with a smaller capacity engine for better fuel economy.

The repetitive movements on the production line - fitting the same part time after time - are ideal work for computer-controlled robots. In the direct training method, a skilled worker first "teaches" the computer the correct movements. These are stored in the computer memory, and copied by the hydraulic robot arm at the desired speed.

In the fully automated factory, materials and parts and subassemblies can be transported from place to place by autocarriers. The vehicle follows a guide wire laid in the floor. Signals pass from operator to vehicle along another wire, telling the carrier which route to take. Signals also pass from vehicle to operator along a third wire, letting the operator keep track of the carrier's position. The operator's computer is programmed to send the autocarrier on a standard route.

Navy Seaman Recruit Lance E. Owens, son of Johnny and Bonnie L. Owens of Prestonsburg, recently completed basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the cycle, recruits are taught general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 occupational fields.

Studies include seamanship, close-order drill, naval history and first aid.

Although the Navy is getting smaller, the state-of-the-art ships, aircraft and high tech systems in today's fleet require bright, talented young men and women to operate them. The Navy has over 56,000 job openings this year, most of which include guaranteed training.

He is a 1993 graduate of David High School of David.

Named to dean's list

Ryan Little has been recognized for academic achievement as a United States National Honor Roll Award winner. Little, who attended South Floyd High School will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history.

Certainly United States Achievement Academy award winners should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

The USAA National Honor Roll Awards provide honor roll students with many benefits and services and is a great tribute to a student's dedication, talent and ability.

I Need Help With... What To Do About Drugs and Alcohol.

With all the national attention on drug and alcohol use and abuse by teenagers, it is small wonder that this issue is a major concern for parents. A recent U.S. Department of Health and Human Services study shows that over half of high school seniors have used alcohol in the last thirty days. Other recent studies suggest that illegal drug use among teenagers has been on the decline while alcohol, "the legal drug," has been on the increase. Teenagers have begun to realize that illegal drugs are dangerous. Yet, they are turning to alcohol in ever increasing numbers. Teenagers drink for many reasons—peer pressure, to copy adults, to relieve boredom and for the thrill of getting high.

Another reason for the increase in teenage drinking is that advertising makes it look good. The liquor industry alone spends over $1 billion to convince us and our teenagers that we can become anything we want to be by drinking alcohol. Also, television ads make wine coolers and beer seem less harmful than hard liquor. The recent government survey found that teenagers consumed 35% of all wine coolers sold in the U.S., or 31 million gallons. Yet, one third of the teens did not know that wine coolers contained alcohol.

The following are warning signs that may indicate your teenager is abusing alcohol or other drugs:

1. Sudden slide in school grades.
2. Sudden change in dress, makeup or appearance.
3. Aggressive or extreme hostile behavior.
4. Family members "walking on eggshells" to avoid fights.
5. Changes in friends.
6. Accidents or car wrecks.
7. Increase in illnesses—including frequent colds, vomiting and dizzy spells—due to run-down condition or frequent hangovers.

If you suspect that your young person might be abusing alcohol or drugs, you need to first get support for yourself. Learn all you can about the disease of chemical dependence. Join a support group of parents with troubled teenagers. Try a Families Anonymous or Al-Anon group. You will be able to find the phone number in the white pages of the telephone book. Start gathering data on your teenager's behavior. Find out places you can get information, help and support. Finally, seek professional help. Whatever you do, don't ignore the problem. It will not go away on its own.

Independence Day

One of the most important holidays celebrated in the United States is July 4, the day we Americans observe the birthday of our nation.

The date represents the freedom that we have to choose our ruling officials. On July 4, Americans are reminded that the power of a nation is in the hands of its people.

Although we celebrate July 4 as Independence Day, the bell for freedom tolled on July 8, 1776. The tolling of the Liberty Bell from the steeple of the State House in Philadelphia summoned the people to the town square where an important document was read.

The town square later became known as Independence Square because it is the place where the Declaration of Independence was read, announcing the unification of the American Colonies into a nation and declaring that nation's independence from Great Britain.

News traveled fast. General George Washington, commander of the American soldiers, received a copy of the document. The soldiers cheered, and bonfires were lit. Some soldiers

"It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forever more," said John Adams, a signer of the document and the second president of the United States.

The residents of the new nation must have agreed, because over the years the celebration has grown. People began to celebrate with picnics, sack races and watermelon-eating contests. It became a day for politicians to make speeches. Parades and fireworks also fired their guns, and some pulled down a statue of King George III, who ruled the American colonies before independence was proclaimed. The soldiers said they would melt the lead from the statue to make bullets for the American guns.

In Boston, the American soldiers fired their cannon thirteen times in honor of the 13 American states.

It took two weeks for townspeople in Williamsburg, Virginia, which is only 300 miles away from Philadelphia, to find out that they were part of a new nation. On July 25, the Declaration of Independence was officially declared there.

The Declaration of Independence was adopted on July 4, 1776 by the Continental Congress. The Continental Congress consisted of men from each of the 13 colonies, except the colony of Georgia. The First Continental Congress had met in Philadelphia earlier to ask England's King George II to order his soldiers in the colonies back to England. They told the King that his laws in the colonies were unfair to the colonists and asked him to change them.

The request only made the arrogant king angry and he sent more soldiers to the colonies to control the rebellion.

The colonists realized they had to unite and separate from England to gain their freedom. Five men were appointed to draw up a declaration that declared the 13 colonies as free and independent states. Thomas Jefferson was asked to write the document. Jefferson later became the third president of the United States.

The Declaration of Independence was read to the Second Continental Congress on July 2. Delegates at the Congress declared the colonies as free, but it took them two days to agree on a formal document. They adopted the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776.

The idea of celebrating July 4 as the birthday of the new nation began in Philadelphia, one year after the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The war with England was still going on, but on that day, Philadelphia residents again rang the bells of freedom and lit bonfires. People placed candles in their windows.

The war waged on for four more years, but after it ended, fourth of July celebrations grew. Those involved in the signing of the Declaration considered the day an important time to rejoice.

"I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival.

"It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion of God Almighty.

became an important part of the celebration.

The Fourth of July became a day for special events, such as groundbreaking ceremonies. Ground for the Erie Canal in Rome, New York, was broken on July 4, 1817. The canal was the first waterway to link the east and the west.

Charles Carroll, another signer of the Declaration of Independence, held groundbreaking ceremonies for his new railroad, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The system, which was started in 1828, was the first big railroad in the country. Carroll was 91 when he turned that shovel full of dirt and he was the only man still living who had signed the Declaration.

A cornerstone for the Washington Monument in Washington, D.C., was laid on July 4, 1848. Each year, fireworks blazed around the stone shaft as crowds gathered to celebrate the event.

In 1941, Congress declared July 4 as a national holiday.

To commemorate the 100th birthday of the signing of the Declaration of Independence in their town, Philadelphia residents decided to celebrate by holding a World's Fair. When Ohio artist Archibald Willard heard about the fair, he decided to paint a picture to honor America on her 100th birthday. Willard's painting showed a boy, a father, and a grandfather marching off to fight in the war for freedom.

People called the painting "The Spirit of '76," and when the fair was over, the artwork became the most famous painting in America.

On that 100th birthday in 1876, thousands of people marched to the old State House in Independence Square. At midnight, a bell tolled 13 times to honor the original 13 colonies.

One of the most important gifts America received on her birthday was a statue. On America's birthday in 1884 France gave America the Statue of Liberty, which is today located in the New York harbor. The Statue of Liberty holds in her left arm a book with the date "July 4, 1776" inscribed on its cover. Sculptor Auguste Bartholdi put that date on the book's cover to remind the world of America's love for liberty.

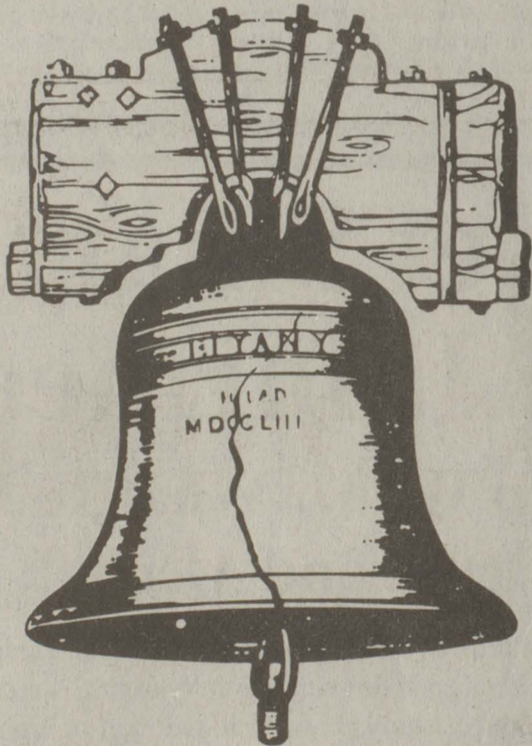

Other countries also celebrate the days they gained their independence. In France, Independence Day is celebrated on July 14. France's Independence Day is called Bastille Day.

Mexico also celebrates its day of freedom, Festival of Independence. The event, which lasts for several days, is held in September.

Denmark, the only country that celebrates our Fourth of July, has named their day of celebrating as the Rebildfest.

On that day, the people of that country listen to songs and speeches about friendship between their country and the United States.

You Can...with Beakman & Jax

by JOK CHURCH
 Dear Jax,
 Why is it when you are wet, you seem to be colder than when you are dry?
 Luke Anderson
 Davenport, Washington

The water on your skin needs heat energy to dry. That energy is going to come from you, from your body heat.

You feel colder because heat moves from you to the water on your skin, which makes it possible for the water to turn into a gas and float away. When it does float away, it takes that heat along for the ride.

experiment #1

WHAT YOU NEED: A grown-up - rubbing alcohol - tissue

WHAT TO DO: Rubbing alcohol can be very dangerous stuff, so get a grown-up to help. Grown-ups like to think they are teaching you something. They enjoy that and will lend a hand. Ask for help working with the alcohol.

Rub an alcohol-soaked tissue onto the back of your hand. Gently blow. Watch the wet spots as you blow, and feel the temperature of your hand.

SO WHAT:

Your hand felt like ice, and evaporation is the reason why. Evaporation is when a liquid turns into a gas. That's what happens when something dries. Cold alcohol will not evaporate (ee-VAP-or-ate). The heat it needed came from your hand. As the alcohol drifted away, it took the heat from your hand with it. Water does the same thing, only slower. Both make you cold.

Hospitals used to use alcohol to cool down people with fevers. It was rubbed on patients' skin, which is why it's called rubbing alcohol.

experiment #2

turning a gas into liquid

WHAT YOU NEED: Warm tea - 2 glasses - ice

WHAT TO DO:

Do this outside on a muggy day. Pour warm tea into 1 of the glasses until it's 1/3 full. Feel the outside of the glass. Next, fill the glass with enough ice to make iced tea. When it's really cold, look at the outside of the glass.

Use the second glass to make a nice glass of iced tea for a friend.

SO WHAT:

This is the opposite of Experiment #1. The warm glass was dry. When you added ice, the cold glass absorbed heat from the air. This chilled the air next to the glass, and cold air cannot hold very much water vapor, a gas. The water vapor had to turn back into a liquid, which formed all those wet drips on the outside of the glass.

by JOK CHURCH
 Dear Beakman,
 Down at the mall there are lots of dazed people with their eyes wide, looking at 3-D posters. How do they work?
 Robert Goldstone
 Bloomington, Indiana

We recognize things like form, color and distance. In the 1960s a psychologist named Bella Julesz made 3-D pictures with random dots - visual noise - to see if people could perceive distance without any clues from form or color. His 3-D dot pictures work because humans get used to patterns: repetitive, regular, predictable, repetitive. The pictures give us a regular pattern that is upset slightly.

Our minds move the upset pattern forward or backward to make it seem like it fits into the pattern again. That's what reveals the hidden images. It also feels very trippy and spacey.

experiment #1

WHAT YOU NEED: Just your sweet self

WHAT TO DO: Look at the flies on the wall. Notice the 4 dots above the flies. Cross your eyes slightly, until you see 5 dots. Let your attention drift back down to the flies. They'll be floating!

Next, put the page right up to your nose. Focus your eyes as though you were looking across the room. Slowly take the page away from your face. If you start focusing on the page, start over again. Eventually, you'll see the flies float again. Only this time the little flies will be closest to you and the big ones will be farthest away. The distances will be reversed.

Beakman
 Beakman Place

WHAT IS GOING ON:
 Both methods work because each of your eyes sees its own separate part of the fly pattern. Each part of the fly pattern is different, so your brain works to put them together by adding the sense of depth. The second method is called averted view and is how most of the 3-D posters work. If you cross your eyes at the posters, you'll reverse the distances and lose the hidden image. You'll see holes where you should be seeing things like whales or dolphins. Practice averted view on this simple version before your next trip to the mall. And give yourself time!
