City may seek help for water troubles

by Matt McCarty
Staff Writer

Martin City Council is continuing its efforts to clear up the city's water problems and is considering assistance from the Water Resources Assistance Corporation (WRAC), a division of the Big Sandy Area Development District. It is also considering raising the city's water rates.

Eric Ratliff, a representative from WRAC, was on hand for the meeting and discussed with council a contract which would allow the two to work together.

The council tabled the issue until its next regular meeting, which is August 24, in order to review the contract.

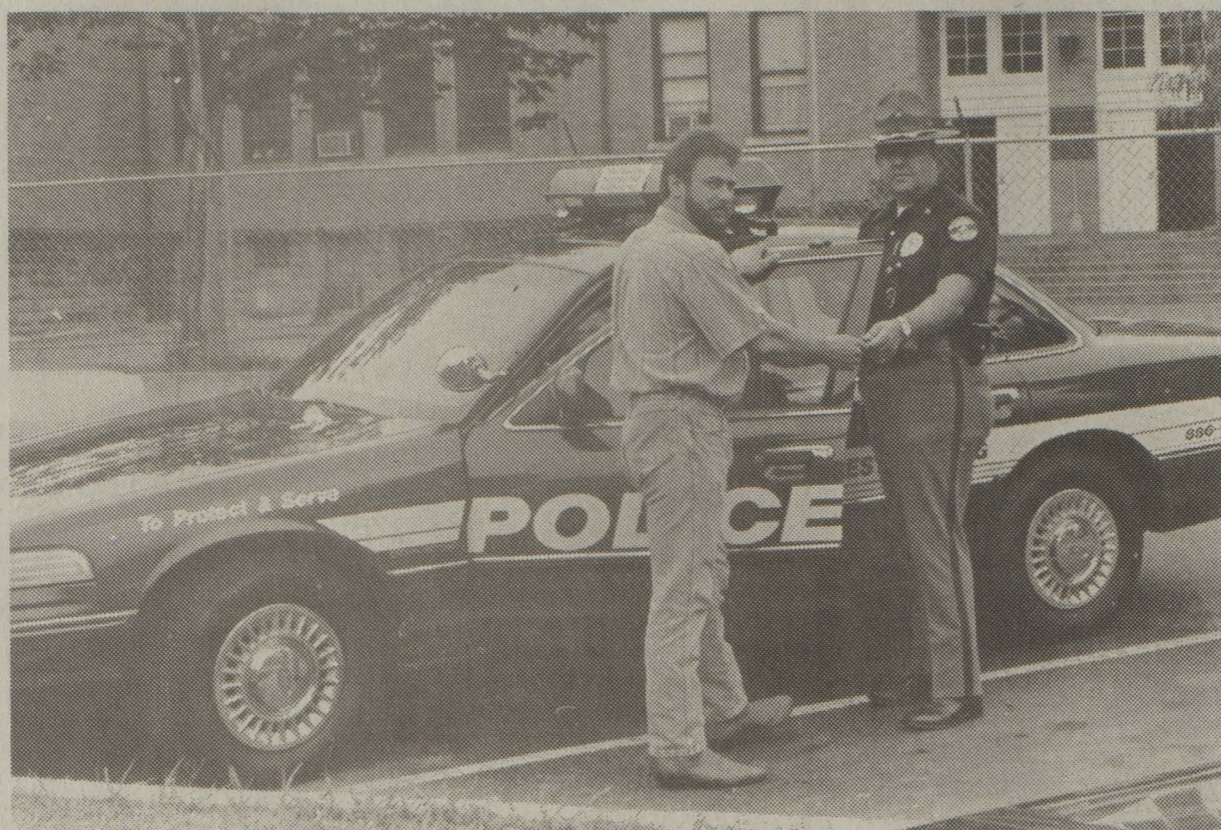

If the council and WRAC come into agreement, WRAC would, among other things, be responsible for operating the city's water system, making routine and emergency system repairs, and billing.

City clerk Johnnie B. Stephens said it was her understanding that this was necessary because the city was losing money on its water system, and has been since 1988.

Stephens said that in 1988 Prestonsburg Utilities increased the cost of servicing water to Martin, but Martin never made an adjustment in the rates to its customers.

The city is now considering mak-

Teen-age pregnancy is target of peer educator program trainees

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

"When you're young, your reputation is all you have," Kim Hughes, with the Floyd County Health Department, told teen-age representatives of Floyd County high schools Wednesday at the Floyd County Library.

When Hughes delivered that message, she was training area high school students to become peer educators. This upcoming school year, teens will periodically lecture seventh and eighth grade students in the county about the importance of abstaining from sex.

The training session is part of the health department's Postponing Sex Involvement (PSI) program. The program, which is in 54 counties in the state, got underway in the county about two years ago after a study by the health department revealed a high rate of pregnancy among seventh, eighth grade, and ninth grade girls.

"It was staggering," Hughes said about the rate after the training session.

Judge to have final word in school dispute

by Scott Perry
Times Editor

Testimony concluded Thursday afternoon in a day-long civil trial involving a dispute between a former Adams Middle School principal and the Floyd County Board of Education. It could take a month, though, before a verdict is issued in the case.

At issue is a complaint filed by former AMS principal Thomas Tackett, who was demoted in 1992 by interim, state-appointed superintendent Eldon Smith to the job of homebound instructor.

Tackett claims in his suit that his demotion was not made according to procedures set out in state law and he has asked Floyd Circuit Judge Paul Burchett to void the action and reinstate him to the AMS principalship.

On Thursday, Tackett testified that he was officially notified of the demotion on May 16, 1992, one day after the legal deadline for assigning school personnel for the upcoming school year.

Tackett said that in two meetings he had with Smith on May 11 and 12, Smith had never mentioned a decision to remove him as AMS principal.

Smith took the stand later, testifying that he and Tackett had "very clearly gotten into a discussion" of Tackett's retirement during the May 12, 1992 meeting but the decision to demote the principal had not been made until May 14. A letter notifying Tackett and board members of that decision was mailed by Smith on May 14, but Tackett did not receive the notification until May 16, when he returned from a fishing trip.

The letter of notification appears to be a key to the outcome of the case.

Tackett's attorney, Alva Hollon Jr., directed most of his attention Thursday to the fact that the letter made no specific charges against Tackett as cause for his demotion. State law requires that specific reasons be cited for the demotion of teachers, but not administrators, and the conclusion of Tackett's suit could hinge on how his position as a principal is classified and whether or not the reasons cited for the demotion are sufficient.

Smith said in his May 14 letter to Tackett that the demotion was based on Smith's determination that "your effectiveness in managing the school is detrimental to the system."

Deputy superintendent Gary

Frazier confirmed that contention Thursday under direct examination by board attorney Cliff Latta, testifying that Tackett was in a "totally untenable situation" at Adams and it would be "difficult for (Tackett) to continue as principal."

Frazier expressed reservations at the process by which Tackett was removed, noting that "not all the problems" at AMS "were created by Mr. Tackett."

Flood study gets funded by Congress

The Army Corps of Engineers will soon be looking at the ups and downs of flood control along the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River.

Funding for a study of the Levisa Fork Basin in Floyd, Pike and Johnson counties was included in the 1995 Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act passed by the House of Representatives this week. The bill appropriated $880,000 for the study, which will be conducted by the U.S. Army Huntington Corps of Engineers.

The House of Representatives sent the Appropriations Act to President Clinton's desk for his signature by overwhelmingly passing the House-Senate Conference Report. The bill provides funding for the Army Corps of Engineers, Appalachian Regional Commission, Tennessee Valley Authority, and other similar government agencies dealing with energy development and water projects.

While helping to write the legislation, Congressman Hal Rogers added more than $40 million to the original bill to fund additional flood control projects, Appalachian Regional Commission road funds and other work in southern and Eastern Kentucky.

The legislation includes more than $41 million to fund flood projects located in Floyd, Bell, Breathitt, Harlan, Johnson, Leslie, Magoffin, Martin, Perry, Pike and Whitley counties, Rogers said.

Festival details are ironed out by group

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

Members of the Jenny Wiley Festival Committee, the Prestonsburg tourism director and the press waited for almost an hour Wednesday morning for a meeting of the Prestonsburg Tourism Commission to get underway. The meeting, scheduled to begin at 8:15 a.m., started around 9 a.m. after a quorum was present.

Jenny Wiley Festival Committee members Carole Sparks and Donna Blackburn gave the commission an update on the festival. Both expressed concern about a construction trailer and construction equipment located in the Prestonsburg Municipal parking lot and asked if it was feasible to block Court Street from the traffic light to the former Sundry Store building, and allow vendors to set up their booths on the street.

Freddy James, tourism director, advised the pair to draft a letter asking businesses to agree to block off that section of the street and also to ask the fire department if closing the street would pose a potential hazard.

Sparks, who is heading the festival committee, said she had received positive responses from area businesses agreeing to participate in the festival. Businesses and organizations that participate in the festival parade, in window decorating, and by having their employees dress in costumes depicting the era of Jenny Wiley, will receive an Official Village Settler recognition.

Sparks said she had also received confirmation of parade participation from four or five school bands.

The festival committee also plans to have a gospel concert featuring the Spencers and the Cookes, but the groups have yet to confirm the commitment.

A Jenny Wiley Bowl between Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne High Schools will kick off the festival week, James said.

Other festival events in the planning stage are a youth gospel night, street decoration contests by the youth, demonstrations such as wall-paper hanging, and a special night of entertainment. The Jenny Wiley Festival Committee will meet Thursday, August 18, at 4:30 p.m. in the Floyd County Library.

Another festival discussed at the tourism meeting was the Highland

A crusade for baby Terri

Six-month-old Terri LaShae Jarvis of Allen needs both an intestinal and liver transplant. Today (Friday) roadblocks have been set up throughout the county to raise $2,000 needed for transporting the infant and her mother to a Pittsburgh hospital for a donor match and to cover other expenses.

Crusade to aid family in need

by Polly Ward
Times FeatureWriter

A countywide crusade to raise donations for a Floyd County infant in need of two life-saving transplants will get underway today at 9 a.m.

Crusade volunteers, who will be wearing purple arm bands and/or purple clothing, will be manning roadblocks at strategic locations in Prestonsburg, Martin, Allen, Mud Creek and Garrett, and asking for donations for baby Terri LaShae Jarvis, according to crusade organizer Susan Stumbo. Drivers are also asked to tie a purple ribbon on their car antennas today to raise public awareness of the cause.

Terri, who turns six months old tomorrow, has spent all but three days of her life in hospitals. The infant daughter of Terry and Tammy Hicks of Daniels Creek near Allen, must have both an intestinal and a liver transplant if she is to stay alive.

Terri was born with non-functioning lower intestines, which had to be removed a few days after her birth. Since that time, the baby has been hooked up to a feeding tube and a bowel tube.

Last Friday, for the first time in her young life, Terri came home from the Cabell Huntington Hospital only to be rushed to Pikeville Methodist Hospital Sunday night when her blood sugar dropped and she developed a fever. Her liver had stopped functioning and doctors determined that she needed a liver transplant.

On Thursday afternoon, Terri was reported in stable condition at Pikeville Methodist Hospital where she is on standby to be transported to a hospital in Pittsburgh for a donor match.

According to family members, Terri's medical expenses are covered by a state medical card; but her parents, who also have two other children, have no funds left to cover other expenses.

"They just don't have the money," said paternal grandmother Betty Jarvis.

An estimated $2,000 is needed to pay for the cost of transporting the infant and her mother to Pittsburgh. Included in that figure are expenses for the mother's stay.

This morning, in addition to the roadblocks, an account will be set up for baby Terri at First Guaranty National Bank in Martin and Prestonsburg for those who want to make donations.

Escape case waived to Floyd grand jury

by Matt McCarty
Staff Writer

Preliminary hearings were held in Floyd District Court Wednesday afternoon and included a hearing for a Floyd man who escaped from custody earlier this month.

Rodney Blackburn had been brought downstairs from the Floyd County jail to District Court for arraignment on August 2 along with 12 other prisoners and fled when the group was filing into the courtroom, Floyd County Deputy Sheriff Homer Neeley testified Wednesday.

At the hearing where Blackburn was charged with second degree escape, Trial Commissioner Jack Hyden ruled that probable cause was present and the case was sent on to the grand jury.

The grand jury heard the case last week, but their decision has not been released.

Blackburn was also scheduled for a preliminary hearing on charges of third degree arson and first degree criminal mischief.

However, the complaining party, his ex-wife, was not present for the hearing and the charges were dismissed.

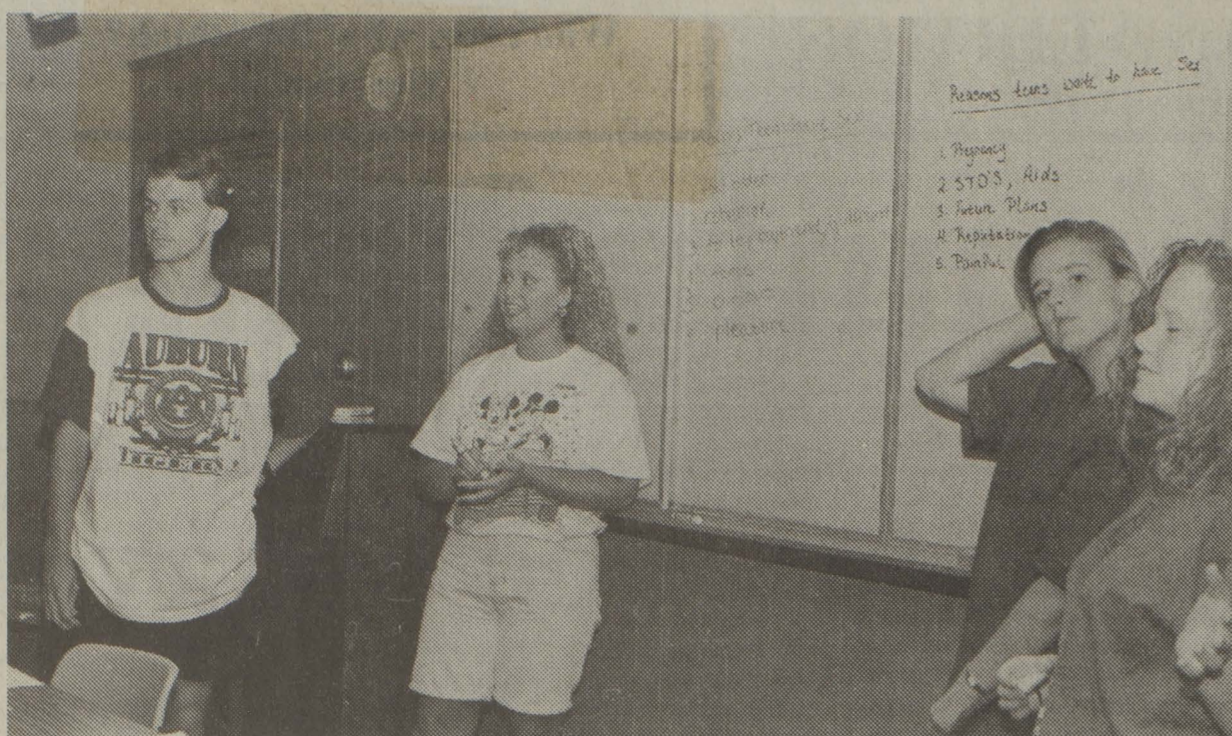

Public defender John Delaney, who represented Blackburn at the hearing, requested that Blackburn's bond be reduced.

The bond is currently $10,000.

Examining health careers

Just say no

During a training session Wednesday, Floyd County High School students, from left, Stewart Robinson, Nanna Allen, Crystal Jones, and Jamie Short discussed reasons why students should abstain from sex. age children in the county found that 13 percent of the youngsters were already sexually active and that the average age for loss of virginity was between the ages of 11 and 14 years. A survey on high school students showed that 75 percent of them were sexually active.

"From these statistics and surveys, we have been assured that our teenagers are indeed sexually active and that we need to work on ways to reduce the teen birth rate and to teach teenagers that they do not have to be sexually active," health department officials wrote in a grant application for funding of the PSI program.

Statistics gathered in 1993 revealed that the youngest mother was 14, and the youngest father was 16. One hundred nineteen teenage mothers gave birth. Twenty-seven percent of the mothers had a twelfth grade education or higher; 40 percent of the fathers had a twelfth grade education or higher.

The PSI program preaches abstinence, Hughes said. "We tell them (students) that even though they may feel that they are ready to have sex, that at their age, they are not ready to handle all the baggage that comes along with being sexually active, such as pregnancy, STDs (sexually transmitted diseases) and AIDS," she explained.

Jamie Short, a 17-year-old South Floyd High School student, said in an interview after the training session that she had known "of cases of pregnancy in the fifth grade."

"I've seen pregnancies happen all too often with young kids," the teenager said. "I don't want to see young kids not emotionally ready to handle this get STDs, AIDS, or become pregnant."

The solution, Short said, is education.

"Education is the key to stopping it," she explained. "Parents can't lock them up in a room. Educate them so they'll know how to help themselves."

The education program is not about teaching students the mechanics of sex, said Hughes, but about teaching them the consequences of having sex.

During the training session Wednesday, the peer educators went to the blackboard and wrote down reasons why students should not have sex. In addition to pregnancy, STDs and AIDS, students listed other reasons, including the destruction of their reputation and their future plans. It can wipe out your future plans, one student said, "and ruin your life."

"At that age, your reputation is the only thing you have that's yours," said another.

The students had to attend five training sessions, each an hour long, to participate in the program. They are paid $4.65 per hour for attending the sessions and monthly meetings.

When the peer educators visit their high school's feeder schools, Hughes or Floyd County Health Department health educator Jane Bond will also be in the classroom to answer questions. Parents are encouraged to attend.

Most of the high schools and elementary schools in the county are participating, Hughes said. Principals at John M., Allen and Harold elementaries would not allow the program in their schools last year, Hughes said. But the schools have new principals this year, and she plans to ask the new school leaders to allow the education program in their schools.

"The program is great," Hughes said. "Teen pregnancies dropped in 1993. We're doing something right."

The health department also has an education program, Reducing The Risk (RTR), in high schools. Hughes and Stella Preece teach students in home economics and health classes about abstinence. The health department also plans to begin a media campaign to reinforce the teachings of the PSI and RTR curriculum, Hughes said.

Peer educators with the PSI program are as follows:

- Allen Central High School: Nicole Clark, Jaime Webb, Amy Adams, Marthann Ritchie and Sheila Scarberry.

- Betsy Layne High School: Ashley Bartley, Becky Rogers, Darrell Newsome and Glenn Spradlin II.

- South Floyd High School: Crystal Jones, Tina Compton, Kelli Kidd and Jamie Short.

- Prestonsburg High School: Stewart Robertson, Nanna Allen, Heather Pack, Leslie Blackburn, Paul Edward Collins and Jason Spurlock.

Asked if he would have removed Tackett from the post, though, Frazier said, "I doubt it."

Other witnesses testified Thursday that Tackett's relationship with teachers at the middle school had been strained since a teacher's strike that greeted the opening of the 1990-91 school year and emotions reached a boiling point in May, 1991, in a confrontation between Tackett and middle school teacher Gwen Hammonds.

Tackett was subsequently convicted of a misdemeanor charge of abuse of a teacher in relation to that incident, and interim superintendent Eldon Smith testified Thursday that the conviction played a part in his decision to demote Tackett.

Tackett's attorney noted, however, that Smith had made no mention of the conviction or any other specific problems in his meetings with Tackett prior to the demotion.

In a final word from the witness stand, Tackett disputed Gary Frazier's testimony that the situation at AMS was "untenable," suggesting that "things were getting better and test scores were rising" under his leadership at the school.

Thursday's case was argued as a bench trial, with no jury present, and Circuit Judge Paul Burchett will issue a decision after reviewing briefs submitted by the litigants. Burchett gave attorneys 15 days to summarize their cases, an additional five days for rebuttal, and then he will issue a ruling.

Funding

Specifically, the bill includes $20 million for Harlan, over $15.5 million for projects in Pike County, $3 million for Williamsburg and $1.2 million for a project in Middlesboro, as well as funds for the cities of Jackson, Salyersville and Hazard.

The bill also includes $22 million for Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) road projects in Kentucky, including U.S. 119 in Pike County at Bent Mountain and Coburn Mountain and U.S. 119 in Letcher County.

Pikeville College to raise funds for college scholarships

The second annual Pikeville College yard sale is scheduled for Friday, September 2, at the college gym. This year, the college is accepting merchandise donations from local businesses, as well as items from individuals.

Any items, new or used, can be donated. Clean clothing, appliances, office equipment, kitchenware, furniture, whatever you have that you want to bring will be gladly accepted. Donations can be dropped off at the gym Monday-Friday, 9-4, or Saturday, August 20, 3-6.

Folk Festival. This year, the festival will be held under the auspices of the Kentucky Opry.

"Twenty entertainers will be on the stage at Jenny Wiley Theatre with the help of the Opry," said James.

The folk festival had "no lights, no sound — nothing," because Jenny Wiley Theatre is winterizing their equipment, James said. The Opry and Prestonsburg Tourism agreed to loan equipment to the festival so that it can be held this year.

Workshops, dancing, and storytelling will be held in the Wilkinson/Stumbo Convention center. Craft displays will be set up on the parking lot, James said.

Blake Burchett, a member of the tourism commission, said that although it "had not been a big volume festival," he wanted to "give it another chance with the Kentucky Opry working with it."

The commission also agreed to fund the festival's budget.

In other business at the meeting, the commission discussed:

- The building of a stage to be completed this week on the riverbank.
- The possibility of building a large gazebo in downtown Prestonsburg that would serve as a stage.

- An information table at the Kentucky State Fair that would display tourism events in the county.

- Forming committees to discuss tourism projects.

- Allowing Freddy James to apply for a grant for ad rack rental.

James also announced that the Eastern Highlands North Tourism group will meet at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn Friday at 4 p.m.

Tourism Commission members Roy Ramey, Jim Sparks and Perry Summers were not present at the meeting.

ing an adjustment in the rates of its customers, an increase that would cost residents an average of $5-$6 more each month.

Currently, residents pay $10.25 for the first 2,000 gallons and $2.90 for every 1,000 gallons after, an average of $23 a month.

The city is considering two proposals which would earn the city around $30,000 more a year in water rates.

One proposal would raise water rates to $11.50 for the first 2,000 gallons and to $3.90 for each additional 1,000 gallons for a monthly average of $28.65. The second proposal would raise rates to $13.00 and $3.65, respectively, for an average of $29.05.

Any agreement with WRAC would be temporary, until the city water system is back to par.

The council also decided to incorporate a road which extends from the city of Martin to the city's new sewage treatment plant.

Councilman Denzil Halbert and Everett Akers Jr., were absent.

Giving adolescents a stake in the future will curb teen violence

What once was shocking has become an all too familiar weekly report in newspapers across the United States. Adolescent violence seems to be erupting in cities, small towns and rural areas with increasing frequency.

"Poverty, stress, hate, racism have always been around, but something is different now," said Philip Diaz, a social worker and former assistant deputy director for Prevention within the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy.

"People have always made it against impossible odds. So that's not what is causing the violence."

Diaz was teaching a session at the recent Kentucky School of Alcohol and Other Drug Studies conference at Northern Kentucky University. The school dealt with the effect of substance abuse on society and how to prevent and treat it. It was sponsored by the Kentucky Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services and the Prevention Research Institute Inc.

Diaz said society has broken down on several fronts and that has led to an increase in adolescent violence. In addition, adults no longer draw the line with children on inappropriate behavior. Once that line is moved, he said, the boundaries of permissible behavior are expanded in all areas—family, school and society.

Whether or not the child grows up in a healthy or unhealthy family system impacts the behavior of the child. "We are what we have learned in our families," he said.

"The post natal environment is at least as important, if not more important, than the prenatal environment."

The social worker said it is important for a child to learn resiliency and responsibility. "The worst thing we've done is not made kids responsible for their behavior," he said.

Diaz outlined the root causes of adolescent violence as the following:

- * Too many young people do not have a stake in society;
- * Our society is allowing inappropriate behavior to escalate and not intervening early when that behavior begins. We are no longer teaching children to be respectful of other people, especially adults;
- * Adults are not giving a clear message to adolescents that a behavior is inappropriate;
- * Dysfunctional families where there is not proper nurturing;
- * Breakdowns in traditional cultural influences such as family, school and church;
- * Early attachment problems, because children have not been parented properly and the community and extended families are not as involved in helping to raise children;
- * Violence in the drug trade drives adolescent violence; and
- * Substance abuse stimulates violence, especially in families.
- * An adolescent may have a biological problem underlying the violence.

Diaz said to deter youth violence it must be confronted from all sides.

"We can't have a single one-shot solution to violence," he said. "We have to tie spirituality, work, counseling, support groups, and positive on-going mentoring to setting limits and sanctions for children and making them aware of the consequences for their behavior."

He suggested that adults:

- * First get control and set limits on children. If the child does a violent act, then the adult should firmly tell the child that it is wrong and tell him an acceptable way to be nonviolent. "You've got to intervene and get control at the same time," he said.
- * Teach conflict resolution in elementary and middle school.
- * Stop sending conflicting messages to children about violence through movies, television and other media. Parents should control the messages their children receive.
- * Tie adolescents to the community through church, youth groups, and businesses, so that they have a part in society.
- * Link job training with student assistance for adolescents who are in trouble.
- * Return to the idea that the whole community is responsible for teaching children. It is important for a child to have a relationship with at least one caring adult role model.

"The needier the child is because of deprivation in early childhood, the more likely the kid is to be violent," Diaz said. "The child is also less likely to be future oriented. The deeper the emptiness, the harder it is to help the child."

"I Can Cope" is a series of educational seminars and support for people dealing with cancer. The group meets the second Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Our Lady of Bellefonte Hospital Education Classroom, below the offices of Dr. Love and Dr. Ehrie. The sessions are free and open to patients, family members, caregivers and friends of those dealing with cancer.

Health care professionals specifically trained in caring for oncology patients will address various facets of the disease and living with the diagnosis of cancer:

- * August 11—Community resources for cancer survivors. A social worker will address legal issues, resources and available support groups.
- * September 8—What works and what doesn't. Open discussion with question and answer period for sharing ideas with other patients, nurses and social workers.

Registration is limited. Call the Bellefonte Cancer Center at (606) 836-0202 or 1-800-LIFESAV (543-3728) to reserve your place.

Host families sought for International students

American Host families are being sought for high school students from Western and Eastern Europe, Asia, South America, Australia, and the former Soviet Union for the 1994-95 school year in a program sponsored by the American Intercultural Student Exchange (AISE).

These exceptional students, ages 15 through 18, will arrive in the United States at the end of August, attend a local high school, and return to their home countries in June of 1995. The students, all fluent in English, have been carefully screened by the local representatives in their home countries, and have their own medical insurance and spending money.

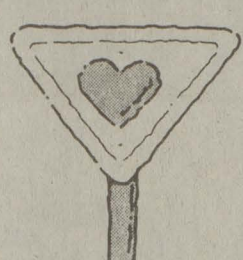

AISE's main focus is teaching young people about the importance of the acceptance of other cultures. Cultural exchange is necessary to the continued betterment of civilization as we know it.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Who cares what they think?

by Scott Perry

Now that state lawmakers have had their turn at evaluating the progress of education reform in Kentucky, what do you say we take a shot at evaluating the progress of our legislators.

Perhaps it's just a coincidence that the results of a poll of legislators-- which showed that they were most impressed by the success of nepotism laws enacted by KERA-- were published alongside a story from Johnson County, where a new superintendent just hired the son and daughter-in-law of a retiring board member and his nephew, the son of the retiring superintendent.

Our evaluation of legislators suggests most of them still don't have a clue about what's in the Kentucky Education Reform Act because most of them didn't vote for education reform, they voted for the goodies they got for supporting the act.

Oh, you'd be hard pressed to find a legislator who doesn't publicly endorse good education, but it wouldn't be hard to run down the General Assembly roster and ask where they were five, ten or fifteen years ago, before they were forced by the state Supreme Court to fix up our decaying educational system.

Come to think of it, we don't really give a big rat's rear end what the legislature thinks of education reform.

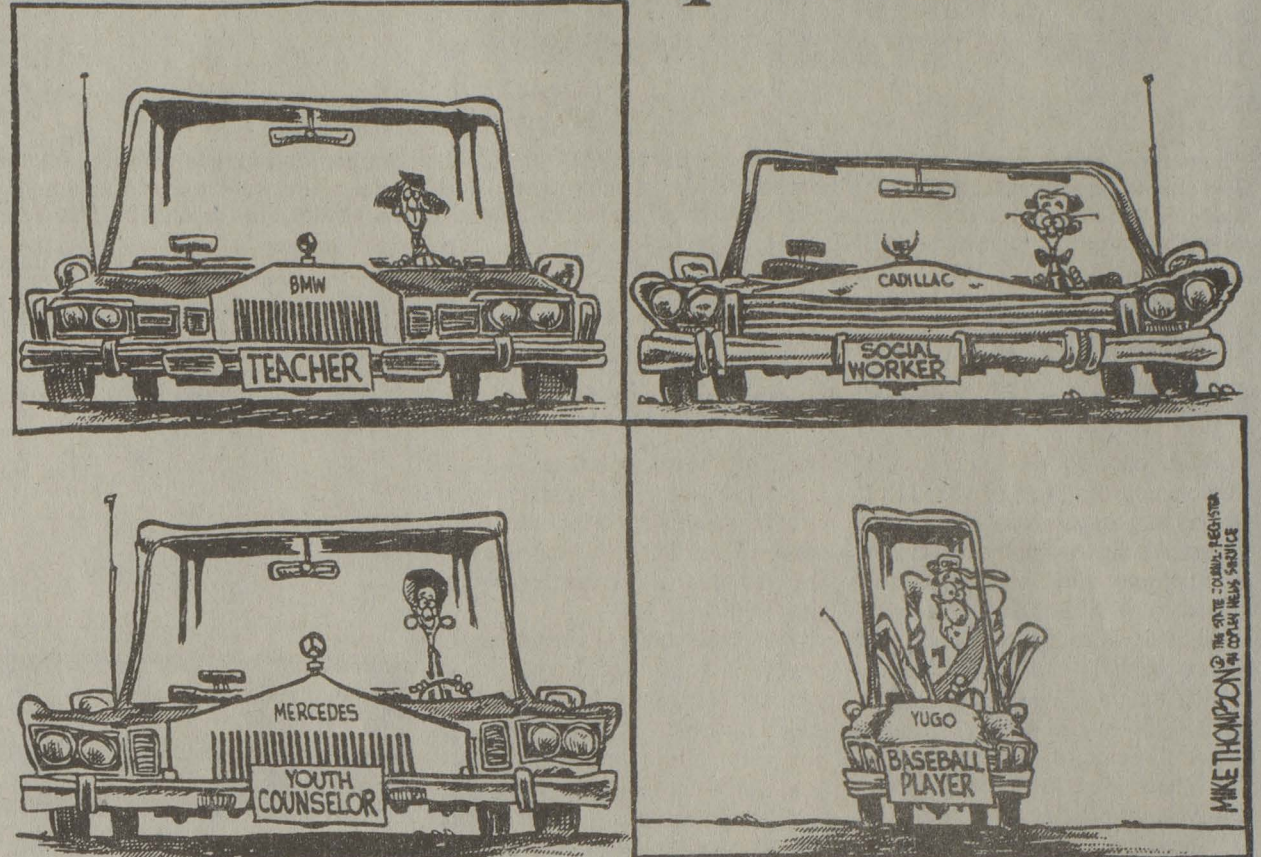

Most of those mice are going to think whatever they're told to think by a small band of legislative leaders, anyway.

Education reform in Kentucky will last as long as it is fashionable, not as long as it is successful.

Unfortunately, our state leaders don't have a solid history of giving a hoot about quality education...unless it comes with a care package or two for the folks back home.

That's politics.
And that sucks.

DEFINE A NEW ROLE

by Kenneth Eskey

Scripps Howard News Service

Those of us who grew up in industrial towns during the 1930s can attest to the power of labor unions. For many families, the union was a sacred institution. You got a job, you joined the union. If necessary, you went on strike for better pay and benefits.

More often than not, in cities like Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago and Detroit, you had a photograph of Franklin D. Roosevelt, a great friend of labor, hanging over your mantelpiece.

To say that the power of organized labor has diminished in recent years would be to state the obvious. Only 11 percent of workers in private industry now belong to unions.

Thousands of jobs have been lost in the steel and auto industries. Some of the strongest unions now tend to be in the public sector—schoolteachers, for example.

The decline of unionism has many explanations, but the illegal 1981 strike against the federal government by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization may have been the most damaging blow.

President Reagan fired more than 11,000 air-traffic controllers, an act that encouraged private companies to take a hard line against unions, in some cases replacing workers who went on strike.

Whatever the reason, the balance of power clearly has shifted from labor to management. Partly, this is because blue-collar jobs are disappearing, and white-collar workers are reluctant to join unions.

But the differences in labor relations and workplace economics between the 1960s and the 1990s run much deeper than that. A report issued this month by a 10-member presidential commission points out that:

—Many jobs now require education beyond high school. Going to work at the plant is no longer a fallback option for poor students.

—The pay gap between the skilled and unskilled is growing.

—Compensation in many jobs has not kept pace with inflation.

—There is less collective bargaining.

—Worker grievances, once settled informally, often result in lawsuits or complaints to regulatory agencies.

Worst of all, said the commission, worker-management relations still are governed by the labor laws of the 1930s, when workers and managers were considered natural adversaries, and the folk wisdom was to do your job and keep your mouth shut.

The commission, headed by John Dunlop, a former U.S. secretary of labor, will make no recommendations until late this year, but on-the-job cooperation is sure to be high on the list.

That means companies should be able to set up quality circles and other forms of worker-manager cooperation without being accused of bypassing the union or undermining a union organizing drive.

"We have self-directed work teams," says Bill Green, who heads the United Auto Workers local at Miller Brewing in Trenton, Ohio. "We respect each other. We try to solve problems quickly. We try to listen to each other."

Hard-liners on both sides may not think much of conciliation. Unions are pushing for legislation making it impossible to replace strikers, no matter how long the strike. Some companies are determined to avoid unions by any means, legal or illegal.

Such attitudes are hard to justify in a global economy that demands teamwork and productivity. Us-against-them may have been acceptable labor relations in the 1930s. It makes no sense in 1994.

Judge Hood sends a needed message on mine safety

Coal operators who shrug off mine safety violations as no big deal should think twice.

For them, the signal from the court should be as easy to read as the space on a Monopoly board: "Go to Jail."

U.S. District Judge Joseph Hood issued such an order in the case of coal operator James W. Blackburn this week. Blackburn pleaded guilty to a host of violations: not following his mine's roof or ventilation plans, submitting false coal-dust samples, and illegally detonating explosives.

The safety violations led to the December 4, 1991, roof fall at the Miller Branch Enterprises No. 1 Mine at Gulnare. Miner Timmy Ratliff died when Blackburn sent him in to clean up a previous roof fall without shoring up the mine ceiling.

Last month, Hood threatened to send more violators to jail to show how serious he is about mine safety. Blackburn got the message. Hood sentenced the Pike County coal operator to 10 months in prison for the roof fall that killed the miner. He also fined him $3,000 and sentenced him to one year supervised release for the violations that led to the fall.

Hood told him, "Coal is important to our community, but we're not going to continue to sacrifice our young people to that god without accountability."

That's just the message mine operators need to hear. Mining regulations are not something for coal operators to get around, nor is miners' safety something to disregard.

Those who would shrug them off are jail bait.—Lexington Herald-Leader

The value of education

School begins this month in both the city and county districts. We beg the youth of Pike County to GO TO and STAY IN school.

There are many reasons why education is important: self-esteem, knowledge, getting into the college of choice, etc. But, if this is the only thing that drives the point home, for money.

According to figures from the U.S. Census Bureau, education plays a big role in how much men and women earn.

In 1992, the average income for men, 25 years old or older, with less than a ninth-grade education was $12,206, while the average income for men with a high school diploma was $22,765. Compare that to the average income for men with a bachelor's degree: $36,691.

The average income for women, 25 years old or older, with less than a ninth-grade education was $7,942 in 1992, while the average income for women with a high school diploma was $13,266. In comparison, the average income for women with a bachelor's degree was $24,126.

It is obvious the difference an education can make. It is even more obvious, however, the difference gender makes.

How can we change that? By ensuring that women graduate from high school and receive college degrees. Then by giving them equal opportunities in the work place.

It has long been common knowledge that women make less than their male counterparts. Just because it has been that way for a long time, however, doesn't mean things can't change.

Education can be the key to that change.—Appalachian News-Express

Fancy Farm and the governor's race

The 1995 Kentucky governor's race got off to an unofficial start at the annual Fancy Farm picnic last Saturday.

Lt. Gov. Paul Patton, who has been running for governor ever since he was elected to statewide office in 1991, threw a few verbal punches at the likely Republican nominee, attorney Larry Forgy of Lexington. "He's got a slick tongue, a pretty face and a blank record," Patton told the crowd. "He's never gotten down in the trenches with real people and tried to solve their problems. He's an amateur, and Kentucky doesn't want an amateur."

Patton, of all people, should know something about amateur politicians. He's definitely not one, having used taxpayers' money the last few years running for governor.

Forgy, meanwhile, says Kentuckians are sick of the Democrats in Frankfort and the recent BOPTR0T investigation that resulted in the conviction of numerous state officials, most of them Democrats.

"Our people are tired of this," Forgy told a group of Republicans. "They demand change. And we as a party must provide the vehicle for that change."

Democratic Party Chairman Grady Stumbo, meanwhile, made an interesting statement at Fancy Farm. He said Republicans are overconfident about their chances in next year's governor's race.

"It's just like a drunk," Stumbo said. "They think they're 10-foot tall and bulletproof."

I don't think the GOP is too confident, Dr. Stumbo. After all, the last time a Republican was elected governor was in 1967.—Paintsville Herald

Smoke screen on tobacco 'addiction'
by Leonard Larsen

Scripps Howard News Service

The federal government has a strong case against cigarette-smoking and tobacco companies: There's the proven threat to life, and company owners and executives who act like nothing's wrong with smoking. It's too bad the case has been turned over to elected and appointed self-promoting zealots. Instead of working to get Americans to quit smoking, the zealots instead grab for the TV cameras and the headlines.

They denounce tobacco executives for the wrong reasons. They fabricate plots and wave industry conspiracies. And they damage what ought to be the top federal priority: to encourage more Americans to break the smoking habit, to quit smoking.

Instead, these officials, led by a senior congressional Democrat, Rep. Robert Waxman of California, and Commissioner David Kessler of the Food and Drug Administration, are making it harder for Americans—including teen-agers—to quit smoking.

Kessler and Waxman, in regular televised rantings during sessions of Waxman's congressional subcommittee, keep hammering smokers with the message that they can't quit.

The word from the Kessler-Waxman show on Capitol Hill is that cigarette smokers are "addicted," probably hopelessly addicted, victims of tobacco company conspiracies to keep them "hooked."

Whoever follows these outbursts—smokers of all ages, friends and relatives seeking to discourage the habit, any interested American—is bombarded with the Kessler-Waxman view that nicotine is addictive and cigarette smokers are "addicts."

In the most recent show, Dr. Kessler—a nonsmoker who's never smoked cigarettes—unrehearsed his newest expert findings. Tobacco company records, he suggested, showed that a new genetic variety of tobacco had been grown containing higher levels of nicotine. The conclusion, Dr. Kessler implied, was a new offensive in the plot to strengthen nicotine addiction.

In the Waxman committee bear-baiting that followed, tobacco executives got the usual treatment. Denials of a tobacco-industry addiction conspiracy were taken as evidence the plot was proved.

Dr. Kessler and Waxman could be warning Americans that the real danger of cigarette smoking is lung cancer and heart trouble and that long-term smokers run the risk of irreparable damage and a painful death. They might even propose legislation to ban the manufacture of cigarettes. Instead, they talk about conspiracies and imagined "addiction."

Worse, these showboats in public office undercut common-sense efforts to persuade smokers to quit, just quit. By insisting that cigarettes are addictive, they hand smokers the excuse not to quit.

It's the crutch Dr. Kessler and Waxman have fashioned for millions of Americans who smoke, millions who think they ought to quit but now can lean on "addiction" and agree with Dr. Kessler and Waxman that they can't quit.

It's not just adult Americans who'll use Dr. Kessler and Waxman as authorities on cigarette addiction. American teen-agers, impressionable kids parading childish sophistication as worldliness, are now told they really are worldly, "hooked" on cigarettes and unable to quit.

While the officials who pretend to mind public-health issues have been creating cigarette addiction and a tobacco-company conspiracy, they actually seem oblivious to the "addiction" they assert is out there.

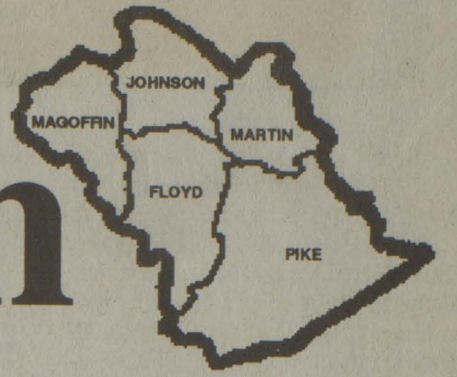

In all the plot-spinning and accusations of planned cigarette addiction there's little mention from Dr. Kessler or Waxman or the other crewmen on the showboat of federal programs to treat and cure "addicted" cigarette victims.

The showboaters, bolstering their claims of cigarette "addiction," claim millions of smokers are as seriously "hooked" as heroin addicts. But they're silent on what they'll do to help them.

There aren't millions of cigarette addicts. There are millions with a smoking habit. There are other millions who've stopped smoking.

First they decided they wanted to stop. They didn't decide they wanted someone else to make them stop. They decided they wanted to stop, and it was their decision. Then they stopped.

Firm that wants to build Magoffin landfill sues

A Florida partnership that for three years has tried to build a large landfill in Magoffin County filed a federal lawsuit Tuesday, challenging a 1991 state law that allows local governments to fend off dump developers.

Eastern Kentucky Resources contends parts of the law unfairly target out-of-state garbage and violate constitutional protection of interstate commerce.

EKR has been trying since late 1991 to open a dump in Magoffin County. A 300-acre landfill to be owned by EKR was quietly included in the county's solid-waste disposal plan, but a citizens group formed to stop it.

Despite vocal opposition, Magoffin Fiscal Court gave EKR a 40-year garbage contract that included the dump. But a circuit judge ruled last year that the contract represented an illegal franchise; EKR has appealed that ruling.

Meanwhile, the state has approved a disposal plan by a new county administration that calls for hauling Magoffin County's garbage to a dump in another county.—Lexington Herald-Leader

Labor department actions result in reimbursed health insurance claims

Secretary of Labor Robert B. Reich yesterday announced that $508,000 has been distributed this week among 932 workers and their families to help cover health insurance claims left unpaid by a fraudulent health care insurance provider.

The workers will receive anywhere from a few dollars to $10,000 as a result of efforts by the Labor Department to prevent the provider from taking advantage of other workers.

More than 100 small coal mining and hauling companies purchased health insurance for their employees through a Raleigh, North Carolina-based multiple employer welfare arrangement (MEWA), Business Insurance Trust (BIT). The BIT plan covered workers in Alabama, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia.

Business Insurance went bankrupt in April 1987 and an executive pleaded guilty to embezzling BIT funds. The Labor Department and officials from eight states coordinated efforts to assure payment of these outstanding claims.

The $508,000 in this case was recovered using federal money laundering and asset forfeiture laws. This case is the first instance in which the departments of labor and justice have used these laws to recover substantial amounts for employee benefit plan fraud victims.

The BIT case has been unfolding since late 1990 with the indictment of Gary Felton, BIT's trustee, by the Department of Justice following a Labor Department investigation. BIT's health plan was fully insured through the California Life Insurance Company until BIT became insolvent in 1986. Felton failed to replace the basic medical insurance coverage California Life provided yet still collected payments from plan participants.

Felton was subsequently charged with 58 counts of embezzlement, mail fraud, money laundering and forfeiture of criminally derived property after claiming BIT health benefits were fully insured when they weren't. Felton pleaded guilty in 1991 and was given a 10-year prison sentence.

While liquidating the insolvent California Life Insurance Company, the California insurance commissioner informed the Labor Department's Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration (PWBA) that he was settling claims filed by Felton. Through the efforts of PWBA, the California Department of Insurance and the U.S. Attorney's Office in Raleigh, assets were seized to pay the outstanding claims.

After meeting with PWBA, the U.S. Attorney and insurance commissioner representatives from the affected states, the North Carolina Department of Insurance volunteered to identify the claimants and disburse the funds.—Staff report

U.S. District jury awards former teacher $68,200

A U.S. District Court jury decided Jennifer Justice's rights of free speech were violated when she wasn't rehired as a teacher in the Lawrence County school system two years ago.

The two-day trial took place last week, in which former Lawrence County Superintendent Ted Kelley was the defendant.

In the suit, Justice, a former eighth grade teacher at Louisa Middle School, said she was not rehired by Kelley because she had complained about grading procedures and the system's failure to comply with state regulations.

The jury, which deliberated for an hour, awarded Justice $68,200 in damages for loss of work, mental and physical anguish and damage to her professional reputation.

Also, Justice said Monday that she would be reinstated to the Lawrence County school system, and she was waiting on her lawyer to call her and tell her where she would be teaching.

"I'm just happy that this is all over and behind us," Justice said. "It will be good to get back to teaching in Lawrence County again."

Kelley declined comment about the case on Monday.

In court, Kelley said Justice wasn't rehired because of enrollment projections which showed a decline in eighth grade enrollment, which in turn required fewer teachers for the upcoming year.

Kelley's attorney, Will Fogle of Mount Sterling, said in the trial that Kelley was faced with a tough decision because he had six teachers and only five positions, and Justice was the only one who didn't have tenure.

According to past articles in (The Big Sandy News), Justice said she was notified of her dismissal in a June 1992 letter which stated she would not be rehired due to the enrollment drop. Justice said that the system hired other teachers with less experience for positions she was required to fill.

Kelley's contract as superintendent was not renewed when it expired last year, and he is now supervisor of district-wide programs for Lawrence County schools.

Since Kelley was sued for his actions while he was in his official capacity, the Lawrence County school system will be responsible for payment of the money.—The Big Sandy News

UMWA HEALTH & RETIREMENT FUNDS BENEFICIARIES

In October of 1993, the UMWA responded to its beneficiaries and rewrote the contract regarding the dispensing of hearing aids. In the past, the beneficiary was eligible only for one of the cheapest hearing instruments that would meet the beneficiary's needs and would only qualify for one new instrument every three years.

The new contract allows the beneficiary to be fitted with top quality hearing aids, and to be fitted with two instruments if a clinical audiologist determines they are appropriate.

DON'T BE MISLED!! The new contract requires that you be tested by a clinical audiologist before any benefits can be considered. There will be absolutely no cost to you for these services. All charges are submitted to and paid by the UMWA. If you qualify for benefits, your only expense in the future will be for batteries to run the instruments.

As a SPECIAL OFFER, all eligible UMWA beneficiaries who respond to this letter within 30 days will receive, absolutely free, a one year supply of batteries with their new hearings aids.

DON'T DELAY!! YOU MUST ACT NOW!! Call today to find out if you qualify for two new hearing aids and free batteries for a year.

A WHOLE NEW LOOK

Aesop's Falables will be performed this weekend

Area children will transform into mice, sheep, tortoises, crows, ants and wolves August 12 and 13 for the production of Aesop's Falables, a rocking musical play based on Aesop's Fables.

Currently, 22 young people are in rehearsal for the production, which is Phase II of the Jenny Wiley Theatre's Educational Outreach Program. Phase I, the Children's Theatre Showcase highlighting the musical talents of area youth, was just completed.

Under the direction of Joe Clark, director of education and the Children's Theatre for Jenny Wiley, students participate in acting classes focusing on vocal projection, stage presence and character development. In addition, the children rehearse scenes, dances and musical numbers in preparation for the final performance.

This year the Children's Theatre Program is being supported by Jenny Wiley Theatre's staff of designers and production personnel, as well as a musical ensemble featuring members of the theatre's orchestra.

With the talents of the children and the added input of the theatre's production staff, Clark has high hopes for the children's production.

"I am so excited to be working with such a talented group of young people," Clark said. "(Aesop's Falables) is going to be one of the best shows at Jenny Wiley this summer."

The play features the following cast: Kevin Thacker (Wilfred Wolf), Sarah Click (Sadie Sheep), Bart Barnette (Thadus Tortoise), Wesley Nelsan (Jack in the Box), Zachary Boswell (Winter), Catlin Boswell (Sun), Ashley Boswell (Hortence Hare), Trent Bradley (Grass Hopper), Nora J. Traum (Clarissa Crow), Katie Olczak (Amelia Eagle), Jennifer Olczak (Shirley Sheep), Ashley Olczak (Sophie Sheep), Amber Spradlin (Mrs. Ant), Ashley Hall (Monique Mouse), Lauren Channell (Cecilia Sheep), Lauren Damron (Ana Ant), Erica Pena (Nurse Stork), Erin Rogers (Mathilda Mouse) and Charlie Beatty (Boy). Three members of the Children's Theatre will serve as assistant stage managers for the production: Leslie Fugate, Wesley Fugate and Chris Reynolds.

Performances are scheduled for Friday and Saturday, August 12 and 13 at 1:30 p.m. in the Wilkinson-Stumbo Convention Center. Proceeds from the show go toward continuing the efforts of the Educational Outreach Program. Tickets are $3 per person and seating is general admission.

Help out the animal shelter, environment

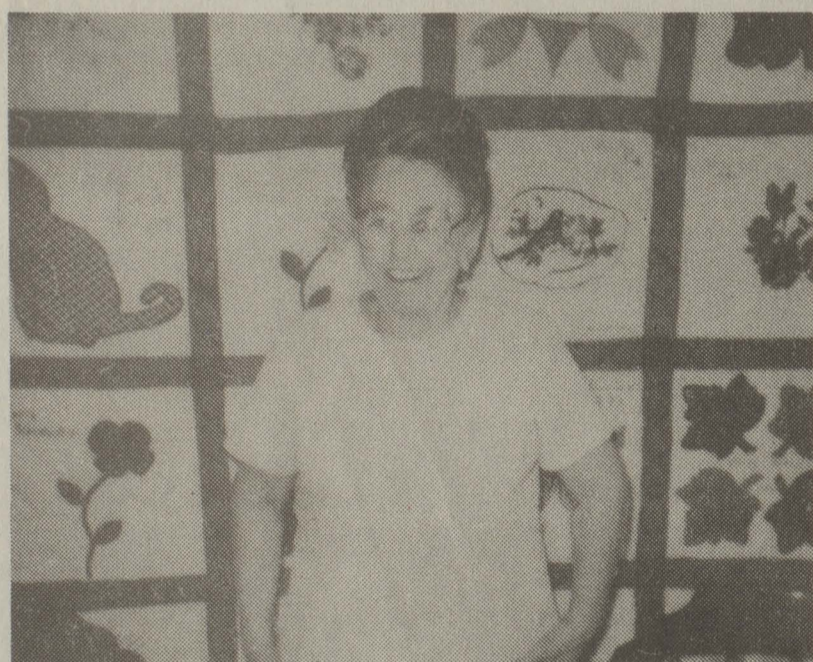

Would you like to help the Johnson County animal shelter and help the environment at the same time? Now you "can." Just save your aluminum cans and drop them in the recycling bin near the Rocky Knob boat ramp at Paintsville Lake. All cans collected will be removed and recycled by the Johnson County animal shelter. Proceeds from their sale will be used to help feed and care for stray dogs, cats, and other animals.

The recycling collection bin was provided by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Paintsville Dam, in cooperation with the Kentucky State Park system and the Paintsville Lake Marina.

"If the public will help us, this recycling effort will go far to alleviate two of the most persistent problems at Paintsville Lake and Johnson County—littering and stray animals" said Robert R. Beverley, Paintsville Lake Resource Manager. Without an organized and well-funded center to care for abandoned pets, these neglected animals must prey on wildlife for food. This reduces the number of available wildlife and, as a result, the quality of the Paintsville Lake project and Johnson County as a natural recreation area.

If you would like to know more about how you can help the animal shelter or the local environment, contact the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Paintsville Lake, 807 KY Rt. 2275, Staffordsville, KY 41256, or call (606) 297-6312.

BABY FACE
If people were judged on appearances alone, only the most beautiful and best dressed people would be running the world. Thankfully, some people can see beyond our outer shells and see our inner beauty. Everyone except pageant judges.

Pageant judges lead a painful existence. They are never invited to after-pageant parties. They are often forced to look at women who wear skimpy bathing suits and walk in four inch stiletto high heels and smile a lot.

And what type of appreciation do they get? Nada.

Nobody loves a pageant judge except the pageant winner. The first runner-up loathes the panel of judges, and the second runner-up despises the judges and their families. The remainder of the pageant contestants end up hating the inhabitants of the world and become neurotics.

This is not secondhand knowledge. My sister and her husband understand the pain of selecting pageant finalists after they stumbled upon the "world of beauty" quite by accident.

Last week they judged a county fair baby contest. It would be difficult enough to judge grown women who know that one of the consequences of entering pageants is losing, but a child doesn't know the rules yet. And everyone knows that an adult can accept defeat more readily than a baby's parents' can.

To the best of my knowledge, the judging criteria was simple. The categories were: cutest, best-dressed, best personality, curliest hair, longest eyelashes, sweetest toes, prettiest smile and best walker.

My sister was stumped on how to judge for best personality. She didn't know the babies personally, and she didn't have time to talk to them over a bottle of formula. She decided that their personality was going to have to come through in the form of a smile or an unprompted hand wave.

As the babies came across the stage, my sister and her husband watched in utter amazement. They didn't know how far baby contest judging had come in 20 years. The contestants danced, tumbled, and bounced right in front of their eyes. From all accounts the babies had been coached in line-dancing and poise.

"You wouldn't have believed it, Sara," my sister gasped. "These kids weren't even out of diapers, and they were reciting the Gettysburg Address."

"Oh, Melinda, you exaggerate," I laughed. "Okay. They just knew the first line, but what difference does it make? They're less than two years old."

"I think it's a good thing. I'm glad they're getting away from judging on looks alone." "This isn't the Miss America contest, Sara," my sister spluttered. "This is a baby contest. A pageant that no one but the families will remember. With my luck, the losers will have flashbacks causing them mental and emotional distress, and 20 years from now they'll sue me for everything I own."

My sister's husband told her not to worry about being held liable in the future. Their problems were in the present. When they left the fairgrounds, their tires had been slashed and a threatening note was taped to the broken windshield.

They would have had better luck if they'd stayed home and picked beans, or even their noses. Anything would have been less dangerous than picking babies.

Pageant judging should be classified as a hazardous occupation.

A preview: Full House reunion to front Ky. Opry

Present

by Kim Frasure
Contributing Writer

Since 1980, the hills of Eastern Kentucky have been alive with the sounds of music produced by the Full House Band. Fourteen years later, older, wiser, and, yes, even better, a reunion is about to take place.

When it all began in 1980, Full House members, Mark Stephens, Kenny Bentley, Mickey Bentley and Keith Caudill could make a soul tap their toes, and definitely rock-n-roll.

In 1982, Keith quit playing with the band to venture into the music business, now known as KC Music in Pikeville. Jody Conley then joined the Full House Band, as well as Tony Stephens as the band's sound engineer.

From '84 to '86, Rick Bentley joined the band as did Randy Caudill and Mary Wright.

From 1989 to the present, the Full House Band continues to produce the awesome melodies they've exhibited from day one.

"Very few bands have worked consistently in Eastern Kentucky and one thing's for sure, these guys have," Keith said.

"We've talked and talked about all of us getting back together and playing," added Mark.

"Then, after the Kentucky Opry asked for us to front for their show next Monday, we thought it would be a perfect time and atmosphere," said Mickey.

Past

And perfect it will be! The Full House Band, past and present, along with the Kentucky Opry under the stars, in one location — The Jenny Wiley Theatre. Don't miss this one for sure.

Speaking of "fronting," let's take a look at some very fascinating bands and artists the Full House Band has had close their opening shows — Exile, Canned Heat, Alabama, Leon Russell, Dwight Yoakam, Edgar Winter, Steppin' Wolf, BTO, Juice Newton, and the list goes on.

Pretty amazing, this talent we have right here in our own back door. The Full House Band performs every Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday nights at Center Stage.

And just in case you've missed the opportunity to hear this group of multi-talented individuals, make it a point to do so Monday night, you won't regret it.

The vocals this group presents will make goose bumps rise. You'll see Mark Stephens on keyboards, vocals and guitar; Mickey Bentley on bass guitar, the harmonica and vocals; Randy Caudill on lead guitar; Julie Goff on drums and vocals; Mary Wright, vocals — and what vocals they are — and Keith, Kenny, Jody and Rick only to add to this bodacious entertainment.

Not an ordinary Monday night ahead. Ex-tra-or-din-ary I'd say, and here's one who can't wait.

We now have undeniable, indisputable proof that music can have a detrimental effect on physical well-being.

In Denmark, zoo officials have confirmed the death of a six-year-old okapi as being caused by an overdose of opera music.

This is a true story.

After performers at the Royal Theatre, which is located about 300 yards from the zoo, began singing selections from Tannhauser on Friday, the okapi, and we quote, "started hyperventilating, went into shock and collapsed."

She died Saturday.

So, there you go.

Katanga the okapi will no doubt become the poster critter for a growing movement in the U.S. that is trying to make the music industry put warning labels...like those on cigarette packs...on albums that contain hazardous materials.

Hey, if opera music can cause a poor jungle animal to keel over and croak, rock 'n roll has to be more lethal than the neutron bomb.

And rap music may be the plague of the 20th century.

You know, if you think about it, it's pretty easy to see the historic connection between music and death.

People have been playing and listening to music since the Stone Age.

Look at all the people who have died between then and now.

Millions. Zillions.

See the pattern?

So, it seems we have two choices here.

Either we quit making music or we're all gonna die.

It's too late for us.

Save yourselves.

We grew up in the 60s, trying to decipher the lyrics to 'Louie, Louie' and 'Inagoddadavida', baby.

We're terminal.

Cline to represent USA at Portugal

Gymnastic coach Henry Young of Prestonsburg and Stephanie Cline, 10 of Pikeville, just returned from Nashville where Cline competed at the ATTA National Tumbling Championships. She received a gold and bronze medal.

She also received the second highest qualifying score which qualified her for the USA team which will compete at Portugal in October of this year.

She has been part of the Kentucky Power Tumbling Team of Allen for the past four years and this will make her the youngest athlete to ever represent the state of Kentucky in world competition.

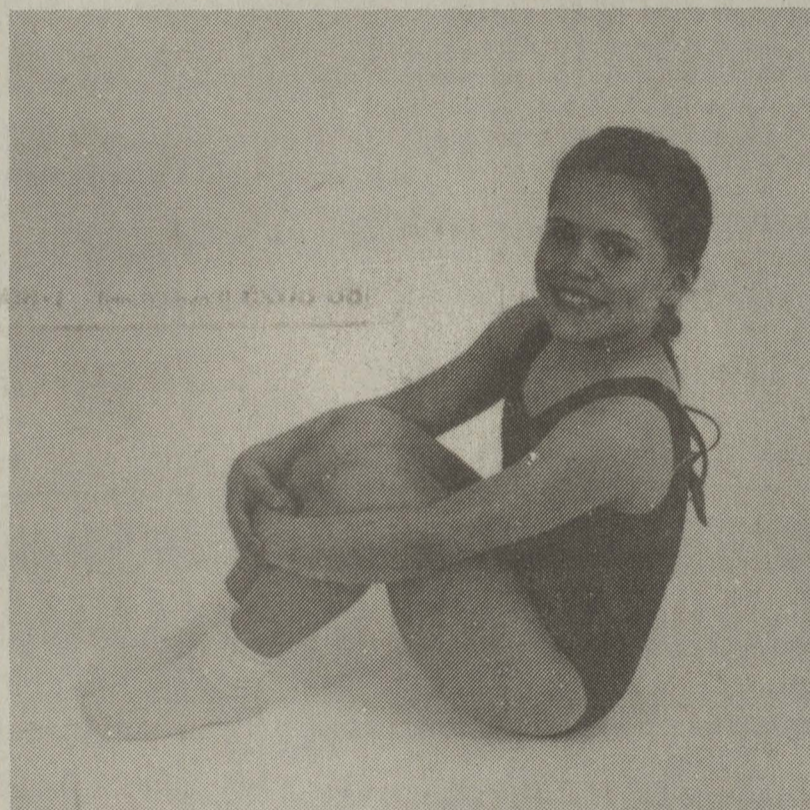

Kentucky Power Tumbling has trained several National Champions in the field of tumbling and trampoline and has been in the forefront of developing competitive athletes from all over Eastern Kentucky. Cline, however, has achieved a level far above any athlete ever coached by Young, who has been coaching for 26 years.

Cline has received over 25 first place national and state titles as well as being nominated for the Outstanding Athlete Award by the AAU of Kentucky and she also performed at the AAU National Convention in 1993.

The trip to Portugal for Cline and Young is being funded by donations from private individuals as well as corporate sponsorship. They are still $2500 short and your support, small or large, to help this athlete represent your state and country in Portugal would be greatly appreciated.

Make donations payable to: The Cline Fund, PO Box 287, Allen, Ky. 41601. For more information call (606) 874-0196.

Stephanie Cline, 10 of Pikeville, will represent the USA at Portugal in Tumbling events. Cline is a part of the Kentucky Power Tumbling Team at Allen.

BASEBALL 1869-1994

Money, greed, and business. At this time these words are synonymous with the game of baseball. It is quite possibly one of the greatest tragedies in sports, the death of our great American pastime. Some of you are saying to yourself that it's no death, it's just a strike, but I believe those of you are overlooking the big picture.

I was watching the news a couple of days ago and in between updates about O.J. Simpson, I caught an interview with a lawyer speaking of the strike.

"The problem with the strike, the problem that it is going to bring about has to do with the fans. Fans are going to begin to question just how reliable baseball is. Three or four strikes from now this is what the effect is going to be."

This statement makes more sense than anything I've heard or read about the strike so far. But the disappointment from fans will go much deeper than just that.

My father and I have very few things we can just sit down and talk about. This is not uncommon for most people, for most boys and their fathers, baseball is a rare link. This is the case with me. There have been times when I felt that the last thing I wanted to do was discuss something with my dad, but then just as I was about to bottle up I'd turn the channel and there would be the Braves playing on TV and I would just open up and could talk for hours. How many fathers and sons are out there who practically rely on baseball as a way of communication?

The solution to the pension problem is simple. If the players and coaches want a pension then let them work for it. Hand them a coal shovel and send them to centerfield. Salary caps should be dealt with fairly but if I couldn't live off 2 million a year and had to strike to get more I'd probably quit baseball and become a bank robber.

The bottom line is that owners and players have taken a child's game and made it into a billion dollar business, it's sad but it's true. And why are the fans so kept out of this? Baseball should realize that if fans didn't come to games and pay their hard-earned money, then the players wouldn't get paid theirs. The fans are the ones paying the players salaries and I think someone, somewhere, should wake up and realize that. I say next, it's the fans turn to strike and see how easy it is for Deion to live off of a measly $250,000 a year.

UK night, 50-lap feature

A big weekend of action is scheduled for Thunder Ridge Friday and Saturday with UK night and a tune-up for the Thunder Ridge 100.

This Friday is UK night at Thunder Ridge with Travis Ford and Cawood Ledford to be on hand to sign autographs.

Thunder Ridge will be giving away basketballs and other prizes Friday.

Victoria Caudill, Thunder Ridge's public relations director, said the night was designed to give something extra to the community.

But the action doesn't stop Friday as Thunder Ridge will hold a tune-up for the Thunder Ridge 100 set for September 3.

Thunder Ridge, who in just four weeks has become one of the top weekly race tracks in the eastern United States, will step into the role of a special event track as it hosts a 50 lap/$6000-to-win feature.

The race is for the Super Late Model Division.

"The $6000 winner's share will attract drivers from throughout the region who want to perfect their set-up before next month's Thunder Ridge 100," Thunder Ridge MotorSports Coordinator Chris Blair said. "This race will give them an advantage when they have to deal with the tremendous turnout of drivers from the Stars and Hav-A-Tampa series that will be here for the 100."

Saturday's Late Model program will include qualifications, four qualifying heat races, and a last chance race to determine the starting field for the feature event. The starting field will expand from the normal 18 cars to 20 for this special event.

"In addition to the big payoff for the Late Models, the UMP Open Wheel Modified Division will be competing for a winner's share of $1000," Blair said. "They have been one of our most competitive divisions and the extra money will add some excitement to their show."

Also on tap will be the debut of the newest Thunder Ridge class, the Thunder and Lightning Division. The new class, which is primarily Modified Street Stock Cars from southern West Virginia, will compete for a winner's share of $400.

Admission prices for Saturday's racing, which gets underway at 7 p.m., will be $15 in the grandstand for adults and $5 for children 6-12.

Class Act qualifies for Class C state softball tournament

The Class Act softball team advanced to the finals of the regional Class C&D women's softball tournament Monday evening before falling to BB&J 10-9.

Class Act trailed 10-3 heading into the top of the sixth inning and scored six times to pull within a run.

Traci Vicars, D.C. Frazier, Kathy Montgomery, Glo Mullins, Trena Hensley, and Tammy Tackett all reached base on hits and scored in the inning.

BB&J were able to hold off the charge as the seven runs they scored in the fifth were enough to keep Class Act at bay.

For Class Act, it was a draining evening at Elkhorn City as they played four games, including three in a row.

The games were scheduled for Sunday, but rain moved them up to Monday.

Winner's bracket final

Class Act was knocked out of the winner's bracket by BB&J 8-5 as Class Act could only manage eight hits.

Class Act trailed 7-1 going into the bottom of the fifth and scored four times to draw within two.

Hensley got the inning started with a leadoff single. Montgomery moved her up with a one-out walk, but Montgomery was forced out at second on Michelle Justice's grounder to short.

April Stephens followed Justice with a hit, scoring Hensley.

Stephens and Denise Justice, who got on with a hit, scored on Cheryl Preston's double.

Loser's bracket finals

Class Act got back on the winning track against the Top Guns with a 16-3 five-inning victory.

The local squad jumped out on top in the top of the first with three runs as Preston, Denise Justice, and Montgomery all crossed homeplate.

After the Top Guns got one of the runs back in the bottom of the first, Class Act took a 7-1 lead.

Tackett and Stephens had doubles and Preston and Denise Justice had singles in the four-run inning. Preston and Justice scored on Frazier's double.

Leading 10-3 after four innings, Class Act exploded for six runs in the fifth and held the Top Guns scoreless in the fifth to record the mercy win.

Championship game one

Despite having loss to BB&J earlier and having just played a contest, Class Act held off BB&J's seventh-inning rally to record the 11-8 win.

Class Act led 11-6 with one inning to play and BB&J refused to throw in the towel despite having two out in the inning.

After the second out of the inning, the heart of the order came up for BB&J, but they could only manage two runs on three hits as Class Act forced a second championship game.

The big inning for Class Act was the fourth where they extended their 5-2 lead to 10-2.

Both Class Act and BB&J will now advance on to the state Class C tournament in Elizabethtown the weekend of August 19-21.

Local bodybuilders place in tournaments

Three local bodybuilders recently traveled to national bodybuilding competitions where they captured some coveted titles.

John R. McKinney, 26, competed July 30 at Louisville's National Physique Committee Bodybuilding Championship where he placed second in the men's Heavyweight Division.

First place winner in this division, Jeff Fraley, went on to win the overall contest.

McKinney, the owner and operator of J.R.'s Top Dog Gym in Prestonsburg, traveled the following day to Kingsport, Tennessee where he competed in the Kingsport Fun Fest bodybuilding contest.

At Kingsport he won first place in the men's Heavyweight Division and captured the overall championship title. There were 30 competitors at the event.

Last Saturday McKinney competed, and again won first place in the men's Heavyweight Division, at the Thoroughbred Classic Bodybuilding Competition in Lexington.

McKinney, who is new to the bodybuilding circuit, has only two year's experience. He said that he has appreciated strict adherence to a most disciplined regimen of diet, exercise and weight lifting in order to attain this level.

Another local who competed was Cledith Howard, 29 of Hueysville. Howard won the Middleweight Division Championship in both the Louisville and Lexington contests.

A key to his success was his superior condition, which was clearly noted by all competitors, and it enhanced his stage presence and confidence.

Howard has been weight lifting for 12 years and has competed during the past seven years during which time he captured three titles.

Randy Burruss of Prestonsburg placed third in the 35 and over Masters Division in the Louisville Meet. He also placed fifth in the men's Light Heavyweight Division.

The following week at Lexington he placed second in the Masters Division and a second to McKinney in the men's Heavyweight Division.

During the past months, these three have worked closely as a team in order to bring these abilities to Eastern Kentucky.

All three men train locally at J.R.'s Top Dog Gym.

J.R.'s will sponsor the second annual Mountain Muscle Madness which will be held at Jenny Wiley's Wilkinson/Stumbo Convention Center in Prestonsburg on Saturday, September 3, at 7 p.m.

Everyone is encouraged to attend and support Eastern Kentucky's active bodybuilders.

Hunting reminder on Paintsville Lake wildlife management area

The Corps of Engineers at Paintsville Lake, in conjunction with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife, has designated a few areas on the Paintsville Lake wildlife management area as "No Hunting Zones."

The Corps has posted a map and description of these areas along with a list of appropriate hunting dates for the wildlife management area on outdoor bulletin boards located at the Corps of Engineers Office/Visitor Center, Paintsville Lake Marina, overlook, downstream area, and Big Mine Fork and Open Fork boat launch ramps.

Those hunters wishing to hunt in Morgan County section of the wildlife management area can do so without any hunting zone restrictions.

Those hunters wishing to hunt in the Johnson County section are urged to check maps since a few areas close to the dam have been designated as "No Hunting Zones."

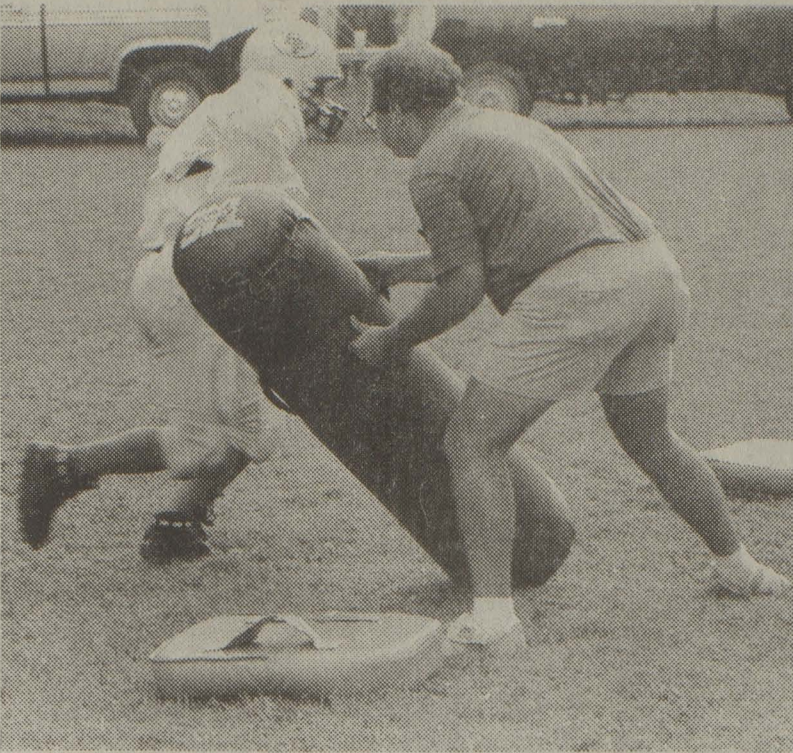

The 1994 small game hunting season dates for the Paintsville Lake wildlife management area have been set and are as follows:

Table with columns: OPENS, CLOSED, AFTER, and species: Squirrel, Rabbit, Quail, Grouse, Furbearer.

Shakeout season closed. Unleashed dogs prohibited from March 1 until September 31.

The Corps reminds all hunters that they are responsible for knowing the proper hunting zones and hunting restrictions before hunting on the wildlife management area.

The Corps also posts these bulletin boards with park regulations and general hunting and fishing information. For additional information, contact the resource manager at Paintsville Lake, Monday through Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at (606) 297-6312 or write to Resource Manager, Paintsville Lake, 807 Ky. Bassin' with the Pros

LURE COLOR CAN BE IMPORTANT IN BASS FISHING

Just how important is the color of the lure you use when bass fishing? "Extremely important — if you believe it is," says well-known tournament pro Denny Brauer, a three-time winner on the Bassmaster Tournament Trail* this past season and a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff.

"I definitely believe there are times when bass react better to one particular color than another, but I also believe there may be several reasons why they do. Certain lure colors do work better for me, but water clarity has a lot to do with it.

"At other times, I also believe bass become accustomed to seeing a certain color too much and actually begin shying away from it."

Not surprisingly, Brauer's favorite color choices are limited to several basic hues. When he's fishing bottom-bumping lures like plastic worms or jigs, he prefers a black/blue combination. When using fast-moving lures like spinnerbaits, he prefers white or chartreuse.

"These have worked for me for years," says Brauer, "so naturally I've developed a lot of confidence in them. I believe having confidence in a particular color is critical to your success with a lure."

"If you're fishing actively feeding schooling bass," Brauer explains, "you may need to try to match the color of the baitfish the bass are feeding on as closely as possible. I don't believe bass see a differently colored lure and specifically think that it's a fake, but I do know they won't hit it nearly as well, if at all.

Does that mean an angler should use only natural colors that appear in nature?

"Not at all," says the Missouri pro. "Chartreuse doesn't appear naturally in nature to my knowledge, but it certainly ranks as one of the best spinnerbait skirt colors of all time.

"Water clarity is important, and so are cloud cover and wind in determining how well fish may see a lure. In murky water you don't want to use a dark lure because I honestly don't believe the bass will see it as well.

"At the same time, we don't use really bright colors in extremely clear water, either, because bass can see the lure well and may spook from it."

Brauer also notes that when bass receive a lot of fishing pressure during which they see one particular lure color often, they may become conditioned against striking that color.

"If you fish long enough, you'll experience this," says Brauer, "and it's really hard to explain. Is it truly the color, or the lure itself, or the fact the bass are just spooked and don't want to strike anything?"

"I guess that's why most bass fishermen carry tackle boxes stuffed full of lures of every shape, size, and color."

Two players on Kentucky Rifle team move on to higher teams

In keeping with the Frontier League's singular mission, two Kentucky Rifles have moved on to higher teams in professional baseball. Jay Hogue was sold to the Odgen Raptors in the affiliated Pioneer League, and Scott Patrick was traded to the Winnipeg Golden Eyes in the independent Northern League.

The Ogden Raptors are an independent team playing against affiliated minor league teams. Hogue should get a lot of exposure playing against those clubs, and will ultimately hope to be picked up by one of the other teams in the league.

The Winnipeg Golden Eyes are in the wholly independent Northern League, which operates in the same way as the Frontier League, but with a higher level of competition. Restrictions on eligibility are few, so that there are a number of former Major Leaguers in the Northern League, including Pedro Guerrero, Leon Durham, and Oil Can Boyd. Patrick will open a lot of eyes if he can pitch well against this competition.

Eagle's sports take to the air

Area Morehead State fans will have an opportunity to listen to all the action of Eagle football, basketball and baseball.

SportsNet, Inc., a partnership effort of WMOR-Radio in Ashland, has been awarded radio broadcast rights for Morehead State football, men's and women's basketball, and baseball.

The partnership has secured rights for the next two years and has two one-year renewal options.

"We're very pleased to be working with Morehead State in this capacity," said WMOR General Manager Jim Forrest. "Dicky Martin of WCMI and I have long been associated with the University, and we hope to provide the best possible outlet for Eagle and Lady Eagle athletic events. We're working hard to reach as many markets as possible and are pleased with the response we have received to this point."

Markets already confirmed are Paintsville, Ashland, Grayson, Maysville, Morehead and West Liberty. Stations interested in network affiliation can contact Forrest at (606) 784-4141.
