Ending erosion in Johns Creek watershed will take time, money :

Effort to clear the water still stuck in the mud

by Scott Perry
Times Editor

Nine months after they first came together to discuss water quality problems at Dewey Lake, a collection of federal, state and local officials have arrived at a significant conclusion.

There may be no answer to the problem.

In February, at the urging of State Representative Greg Stumbo, representatives of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and a variety of state agencies met at Jenny Wiley State Park to begin their search for answers to the water quality problems at the lake which have impacted the recreational use of the facility.

Thursday, the group met again at May Lodge with Stumbo and Congressman Hal Rogers to offer their findings.

The consensus of the group suggests that the lake's turbidity—cloudy water—results from erosion in the watershed which supplies the lake. That watershed, which encompasses roughly 200 square miles around Johns Creek, is dotted with mining operations, logging activities and gas and oil explorations—all of which add soil to feeder streams which eventually end up in Dewey Lake.

Finding the cause of the problem was the easy part, but solving it will be difficult, if not fiscally impossible.

Don Hershfield, a biologist with the Corps of Engineers, told the group Thursday that a number of factors contributed to the turbidity of Dewey Lake water, including soil types, land-use patterns in the watershed and the shape and depth of the lake.

Soil type could be the most nagging problem, he added, because of the high levels of clay found in the area. Clay does not settle quickly when mixed with water.

Land use in the watershed is another major contributing factor, Hershfield noted, because of the mining and logging operations in the area. Erosion from those activities and from hastily built and poorly planned roads which service them add great quantities of soil to streams.

Hershfield said Dewey Lake's shape creates problems, too, because the lake has just one main channel, which allows turbidity to spread rapidly from one end to the other.

The lake's cloudiness has been a considerable concern for area fishermen because the turbidity stunts the growth of vegetation on the lake floor, breaking the food-chain cycle necessary to sustain aquatic life.

Hershfield offered three possibilities for controlling turbidity at Dewey.

Murder case verdict nixed by high court

Kentucky's Supreme Court has overturned a wanton murder conviction against a Pike County coal truck driver and ordered a new trial in Floyd Circuit Court.

Fiscal court will hold special meets on special issues

Floyd County's Fiscal Court will meet two times next week in special session to discuss a new courthouse project and a proposed solid waste ordinance.

On Monday, the court will meet at 10 a.m. to hear details concerning a new courthouse facility. The special meeting agenda offered no details on what Monday's talks would include.

The court will meet again at 10 a.m. on Friday to hold second reading of a proposed ordinance for mandatory participation in the county's solid waste program.

Copies of the ordinance may be picked up at the county judge-executive's office at the courthouse annex. Public comment on the ordinance will be accepted at Friday's meeting.

The meetings will be held in the conference room at the courthouse annex.

Governor to visit

Kentucky Governor Brereton Jones will make a stop in Floyd County today (Friday) to announce a grant award.

Governor Jones is scheduled to be at Minnie Park near McDowell at 11:30 a.m. to give details of the grant.

accident that killed Glenda Akers, 40, of Dana.

The accident happened at the intersection of U.S. 23 and KY 979 at Harold on July 2, 1991.

The supreme court decision said that Johnson's actions at the time of the accident did not warrant the wanton murder charge.

"On seeing Ms. Akers' pickup truck, Johnson sounded his horn, slammed on his brakes and veered hard to the left to avoid a collision," the court's decision said. "(State law) allows a conviction for wanton murder by the operation of a motor vehicle under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to human life. The circumstances of this case, even reviewed in a light most favorable to the Commonwealth...do not rise to such a level of wanton conduct."

There was no evidence during the August 1992 trial that Johnson was operating his coal truck under the influence of any drugs or alcohol and no evidence was presented that he was speeding, the court ruled.

The Supreme Court ruled that the court erred by not sustaining the defense's motion for a directed verdict of not guilty on the grounds that the evidence was insufficient to support the wanton murder charge.

The court also ruled that the commonwealth's attorney made a reversible error when Johnson was questioned about the practice of coal truck drivers.

"...The Kentucky Rules of Evidence provide that, 'evidence of other crimes, wrongs or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person...' the ruling said. 'The Commonwealth, however, went far beyond questioning (Johnson) about his habits or his own bad acts by questioning him about the habit of a class of individuals of whom he was a part (i.e., coal truck drivers).'"

Restrictions on incinerators earn county a spot in lawsuit

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

Medisin has asked the Franklin Circuit Court to declare the Floyd County Solid Waste Management plan unconstitutional and to issue a permanent injunction against the fiscal court preventing it from enforcing the waste plan.

Representatives for Medisin Tuesday amended a lawsuit the company had filed against the state Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet last year to include the Floyd County Fiscal Court and Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc.

The lawsuit lists twelve counts against the three government agency defendants, and also seeks a temporary restraining order against the state to keep the state from shutting down Medisin's incinerators.

Medisin had filed suit in Franklin Circuit Court on July 29, 1993 challenging the constitutionality of House Bill 2, which was enacted to regulate the disposal of municipal solid waste.

The original suit contends that Medisin is exempt from applying for a state permit because of the definition of a municipal solid waste facility. Under KRS 224.01-010 (15), the definition of a "municipal solid waste disposal facility" does not include an incinerator which is owned, operated, and located on the property of a hospital which is regulated by the cabinet and used for the purpose of treatment, prior to landfill..."

In a letter dated June 3, 1993, Randall G. McDowell, an attorney for the cabinet, reported to Medisin's attorney that the cabinet thought Medisin was a municipal solid waste disposal facility pursuant to KRS 224.01-010 (15), but that Medisin's application for an air operating permit was not subject to KRS 224.40-315, and that Medisin was required to apply for a registered permit by rule.

Before it would issue a permit by rule, the cabinet gave Medisin 30 days to get its permit request in consistency with the county waste plan.

If the county did not amend the plan, the cabinet would deny Medisin's permit by rule, deputy secretary of the cabinet Greg Higdon said at a public meeting on June 1.

Medisin had held the legal action in abeyance pending a decision by the Floyd Fiscal Court on Medisin's request to increase the amount of incoming medical waste it could burn in its two incinerators. At a meeting of the solid waste board Monday night, board members agreed to keep the 10-ton per year limit. Medisin had asked for the limit to be increased to 561 tons per year.

Medisin claims that it currently receives more than 100 tons of medi-

Council puts off rate hike for water

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Martin City Council is in a quandary about what to do to turn the city's water department in to a self-sufficient operation.

With monthly operating expenses of $17,000 and revenue totaling just $14,000, it is apparent that some type of water rate increase is needed, council said at Wednesday's meeting.

But a majority of the council will not vote for a rate increase until a better system of office management is in place in the water office.

Problems in the water department, financial and managerial, are nothing new to council. For the past 10 months the issue has been discussed extensively.

Last month, council authorized cashing in over $70,000 in certificates of deposit, part of which will be used to pay outstanding debts for the water department and to prevent a shut off of water service by Prestonsburg utility officials.

Councilman Rodney Hutchinson reported Wednesday that the city owes Prestonsburg $36,704.95 for water service. Part of that debt stems from Martin not being billed by Prestonsburg for a rate increase enacted last June. Hutchinson said that Prestonsburg officials said that they discovered a short time ago that the increase had been added to Martin's monthly bill.

Council voted Wednesday to pay off the Prestonsburg debt in full and to pay other debts, which together total $46,238.40, to get the water department out of the red.

Council's next step was to determine what was needed to keep the department afloat.

Big Sandy Area Development District representative Bob Lewandowski had proposed that council raise water rates in order for the department to be self-sufficient.

Ballot question addresses local concerns

It isn't as exotic as the lottery or as politically charged as gubernatorial succession, but a proposed amendment to Kentucky's constitution will make considerable changes in the way government operates if the amendment is approved by voters on November 8.

The essential elements of the proposed amendment have been outlined by the state's Legislative Research Commission.

Here's a look at that summary:

Proposed Local Government Constitutional Amendment

The following question will appear on the ballot November 8, 1994:

Constitutional Amendment #1

Are you in favor of amending the Constitution to require cities, counties, and taxing districts to adopt a balanced budget prior to each fiscal year, and prohibit them from expending any funds in excess of the revenues for that year; allow the General Assembly to classify cities based on factors other than just population; allow the General Assembly to authorize cities to exercise any power or function that furthers a public purpose and does not conflict with any constitutional or statutory provision; and allow the General Assembly to make laws regarding the existence, boundaries, form of government, functions, and officers of cities?

History

Under Kentucky's first three Constitutions, the General Assembly exercised total control over the creation of cities, counties, and other units of local government and could adjust the boundaries of existing ones without limitation. Further, those Constitutions contained no framework for organizing, financing, or managing local government as a whole. Instead, the General Assembly was permitted to enact "special" legislation to meet an individual local government's needs or desires without restriction and without considering whether other local governments could be similarly aided or even harmed by the legislation. This arrangement resulted in favoritism and corruption and is often cited as a major reason for calling the 1890-91 Constitutional Convention to consider changes in the Constitution.

The 1891 Constitution, the state's fourth and current one, contains sweeping reforms in the area of local government when compared to the three previous Constitutions. All local units of government (cities, towns, counties, special districts, and school districts) are now legal subdivisions of the state. They derive their powers from the state and can do only those things permitted by the Constitution and laws passed by the General Assembly. In addition to prohibiting the use of "special" or "local" legislation, the 1891 Constitution established six classes of cities, based on population, so that all laws relating to a particular class of city would apply equally to all cities within the same population class. It provided for the election or appointment of municipal and county officers, established their qualifications, and prohibited them from having conflicts of interest. The General Assembly retained its authority to create new units of local government, but its ability to adjust county boundaries was limited. Also, included in the 1891 revision were limits on local governments' maximum property tax rates and the amount of debt they may incur, other requirements regarding debt capacity and debt payment, and the authority to grant tax exemptions to businesses to encourage them to locate in an area.

In the 1970's and 1980's, the General Assembly enacted laws granting cities and counties "home rule." That is, cities and counties may govern local affairs as they see fit, so long as their actions further a governmental purpose and do not conflict with the Constitution or state law. While courts have upheld this broad grant of power to local governments by the General Assembly, "home rule" is not specifically authorized by current constitutional language.

Current Constitutional Provisions and Proposed Changes

Most of the 28 sections of the Kentucky Constitution relating to local government have remained largely unchanged since they were adopted in 1891. But local governments are called upon today to respond to local and regional problems that are increasingly complex. The proposed amendment is designed to change some of the strict limits and requirements regarding local governments in the Constitution, which is not amended easily or often, and permit the General Assembly to establish them by law, so that they can be adjusted as necessary in response to changing conditions.

City Government and Classification

Section 156 of the Constitution currently divides cities and towns into six classes, based solely on their population, and specifies that all cities or towns of the same class have the same powers and are subject to the same restrictions that are established by law. The classification system permits some distinction in the laws governing different classes of cities and towns without violation of the prohibition against "special" or "local" legislation, which would affect only certain cities or towns within a particular class. Section 156 also requires the General Assembly to specify by law how municipal governments may be organized and governed.

(See Amendment, page two)

Under the proposed amendment, Section 156 would be repealed and replaced with two new subsections. New Subsection 156a would allow the General Assembly to specify by law how cities may be created, altered, consolidated, merged, and dissolved, and how their boundaries may be changed. The General Assembly would also be permitted to pass laws regarding the structure and function of city government and its officers. The General Assembly would also be permitted to create new classifications of cities based not only on population, but also on tax bases, forms of government, geography, or other reasonable characteristics. All laws passed by the General Assembly regarding cities of the same class would still have to apply uniformly to all cities within the same class. The current city classification system and all current laws relating to cities would remain in effect until changed by the General Assembly. In addition, new Subsection 156b would establish a constitutional foundation for the city home rule statutes enacted by the General Assembly in 1980, by authorizing the General Assembly to permit cities to exercise any power and perform any function within their boundaries that is in furtherance of a public purpose of a city, so long as it does not conflict with a constitutional provision or statute.

Limits on Tax Rates and Debt Capacity

Section 157 of the Constitution currently establishes the maximum tax rates that counties, taxing districts, and cities of different populations may impose. It also prohibits a local government from incurring debt in a given fiscal year in an amount which cannot be paid off in that fiscal year, unless two-thirds of its voters agree to let the local government enter into debt for a longer period. In a similar fashion, Section 158 currently establishes the maximum amount of indebtedness which local governments may incur.

The proposed amendment would delete the long-term debt assumption prohibition contained in Section 157. This relaxed rule on incurring bonded debt would permit a local government to finance public projects for more than one year without having voters approve it. Such action should result in lower debt service costs for local governments that choose to finance public projects over time, because interest rates on loans made for a period of years are generally lower than those charged for "annual appropriation" debt, that is, debt incurred on a year-to-year basis.

Section 158 currently sets limits in the amounts of debt that local governments may incur. These debt limits are established as a percentage of the value of the taxable property within the local government area. The debt limits established for cities are based on classification and population. Cities of the first three classes have a debt limit of ten percent of the value of their taxable property, cities of the fourth class have a debt limit of five percent, cities of the fifth and sixth classes have a debt limit of three percent, and counties and other taxing districts have a debt limit of two percent. The current language also contains outdated provisions relating to indebtedness of the local governments that existed when the Constitution of 1891 was drafted.

The proposed amendment would change the language regarding debt limits for cities to base them on population alone, rather than class of city. Current debt limits for other forms of local government would be retained. The obsolete language regarding indebtedness by local governments in existence in 1891 would be deleted. In addition, the General Assembly would be authorized to establish additional limits on debt capacity and conditions by which local governments may incur debt, subject to the limits and conditions already established by the Constitution.

Balanced Budget Requirement

As mentioned earlier, local governments currently may not incur debt in an amount which cannot be paid off in one fiscal year, unless the voters approve a higher debt capacity. This language implies that local governments must adopt a balanced budget unless the voters say otherwise. The proposed amendment would delete that language. Instead, a new section of the Constitution, Section 157b, is proposed to be added to clearly require every city, county and taxing district to adopt a budget prior to each fiscal year that shows the expected revenues and expenditures for the fiscal year and prohibits those local governments from spending any funds in excess of the expected revenues for that fiscal year. "Revenues" means all income received by the local government from any source, including unencumbered budget reserves carried over from the previous year. "Expenditures" means all funds paid out for expenses of the local government during the fiscal year, including any amounts needed to pay the principal and interest due during the fiscal year on any debt incurred. A local government could amend its budget during a fiscal year, but the revised expenditures could not exceed the revised revenues.

Effective Date

If the proposed amendment is approved by the voters of Kentucky on November 8, 1994, it will become effective immediately. However, any existing contract or legally binding obligation of a local government will remain in effect until it is renegotiated or it expires.

License of Prestonsburg surgeon suspended by medical licensure board

A Prestonsburg surgeon can't practice medicine for at least one year after the Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure suspended his license Thursday.

The state licensure board rescinded the medical license of Dr. Syed Ikramuddin for one year for his treatment of two cases, including one where a patient died after a tonsillectomy.

In 1986, Dr. Ikramuddin performed a partial tonsillectomy on a 42-year-old man. The patient died six days after surgery when the surgeon allegedly could not stop the patient's post-operative bleeding.

Dr. Ikramuddin said he operated on the patient to remove lumps in the patient's throat. The surgery was performed at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Five days after the patient was released from the hospital, he returned, complaining of vomiting and some bleeding. The bleeding had stopped, and he was sent to an ear, nose and throat (ENT) specialist at Pikeville Methodist Hospital, Dr. Ikramuddin said.

He was sent back to Highlands where he was admitted for observation. The next day, the patient was bleeding again, Dr. Ikramuddin said. The bleeding would stop and the patient would start bleeding again, he explained, so the patient was again sent to the ENT.

The pack (put in the after surgery) in the patient's throat was in place when he arrived at the hospital and the patient was alert, Ikramuddin said.

A doctor at the hospital removed the pack from the patient in the emergency room, Ikramuddin said. "You're supposed to pull the pack in the main operating room."

In a separate incident, Dr. Ikramuddin removed breast tissue from a 10-year-old girl which he mistakenly thought was abnormal. Ikramuddin said he performed the biopsy because he suspected childhood cancer.

As a result of the tissue removal, the complaint to the medical board claimed, the girl will not be able to develop normally.

That incident happened four years ago, and Dr. Ikramuddin has not examined the girl during that time, he said. He said the medical board did not have current reports on the girl's development and that she should be examined when she is 16.

"The board didn't even bother to have a recent analysis on this report. Without the reports, they punished the doctor," Ikramuddin said.

A general surgeon, Dr. Ikramuddin said that he has performed 32,000 operations in the last 16 years, and that 85 percent of his patients are Medicaid patients.

"This is a total injustice," he said Thursday. "America is a litigation society. That doesn't mean I'm a bad doctor."

Five doctors testified on Ikramuddin's behalf. One of those was the chief of the ENT department at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, who told Ikramuddin that the board was on a witch hunt, Ikramuddin said. He also said that the doctor on the medical board who testified against him had not performed any tonsillectomies.

Ikramuddin has filed an appeal with the medical board.

Also, Johnson was deprived of the right to introduce character evidence to show that he would not commit the crime he was charged with, the court ruled.

Prestonsburg attorney Ned Pillersdorf, who represented Johnson during the trial, said the court's decision was just.

"I'm glad they reversed the worst miscarriage of justice I've ever seen in a courtroom," Pillersdorf said.

One Supreme Court Judge, J. Wintersheimer, disagreed with his fellow members of the court.

"I must respectfully dissent from the majority opinion because I find no valid reason to reverse the conviction, and consequently no necessity for a new trial," Judge Wintersheimer wrote. "Under all the circumstances, I believe the judgment of the conviction should be affirmed."

Park charged with rape of juvenile girl

by Susan Allen

A Johnson County man was arrested Monday and charged with raping a juvenile female in July.

Kentucky State Police trooper Dave Maynard arrested Christopher J. Park, 27, of Hager Hill. Park was lodged in the Floyd County Jail on a first degree rape charge.

Court records show that Park is accused of having sex with a female juvenile under 12 years of age on July 14.

Park was arraigned in Floyd District Court Tuesday morning and was released on a $10,000 partially secured bond.

A preliminary hearing has been set for November 2 at 2:30 p.m., in Floyd District Court.

New facility puts three services under one roof

The foundation has been laid and the walls are going up on a one-story building at Harold that will house three programs designed to help Eastern Kentucky children, families and individuals in crisis.

The construction of the building is an outgrowth of a partnership, called the Cornerstone Project, between the Pike and Enterprise Associations of Southern Baptists, which includes Floyd, Magoffin, Martin, Johnson and Pike counties, and Kentucky Baptist Homes for Children (KBHC), an agency of Kentucky Baptists headquartered in Middletown.

When completed in January, the building will be used by KBHC to offer three programs to residents of the Big Sandy area: individual, family and marital counseling; pregnancy counseling and adoption service; and a foster care program.

Although KBHC provides these three programs in several locations in the state, the project will be the first time the agency has offered all three under one roof.

Since its founding in 1869, KBHC has provided care for children who have been abused, neglected, or whose families are in crisis. KBHC, a private agency licensed by the state Cabinet for Human Resources, and accredited by the national Council on Accreditation of Services for Families and Children, Incorporated, assists more than 1,200 children and adults each year.

For most of its history, the agency has concentrated its services in Central Kentucky. But in the last few years, the KBHC has been extending its programs into other regions of the state.

"Kentucky Baptist Homes for Children has been around for 125 years," said Robert Reeves, KBHC associate director of public relations. "In recent years the goal of our board has been to provide services for children where they are and where they live. Our goal is to strengthen families and build them up...in providing services in the parts of the state where they live... (The facility at Harold) is just a continuing part of it."

Reeves said that the increase in reports of child abuse indicate that families are "hurting." He cited statistics from the state's Cabinet for Human Resources that recorded 57,702 reports of child abuse from July 1, 1992 through June 30, 1993. Of that number, 24,121 cases were substantiated for an average of 66 cases per day.

Reeves also noted an alarming trend that has shown a 26 percent increase in the number of documented cases of child abuse in just the last five years.

Statistics for the 1993-94 fiscal year from the Cabinet for Human Resources show that Floyd County had 447 reports child abuse or neglect, involving 764 children. One hundred and six of those reports, involving 166 children, were substantiated.

"Pastors and social workers have said we need more services," Reeves said. "Anytime we can add services to an area, it's a real plus."

The three programs that will establish offices in Harold are in fast-growing areas of ministry for the agency.

Cornerstone Counseling is designed to help individuals and families who need professional counseling to help solve problems. Offices are already open in Ashland, Bowling Green, Erlanger, Frankfort, London, Madisonville, and Pineville.

The family foster care program will recruit, train, and provide ongoing support to Eastern Kentucky families willing to provide homes for children in need. Foster care offices are already established in Middletown and Madisonville.

The First Step Pregnancy Counseling and Adoption Service helps birth parents who are facing unplanned pregnancies whether their choice is to parent or to place the child for adoption. First Step, which also has an office in Middletown, also provides services to prospective adoptive parents.

Once the Cornerstone Project is in place "it will mean that Eastern Kentucky will have access to services not available to them before, and from an organization that has a really good track record," Reeves added.

The staff of the center will consist of a full-time foster care worker, and initially, a part-time counselor, a part-time First Step counselor, and a secretary, Reeves said.

Tom Westfall Sr. of Ivel, who is coordinating the construction project, said that the one-story 28' by 40' building will have four offices. The completion date of the project has been set for January 1.

"The need is great here for counseling," Westfall said, "And (completion of the building is) an opportunity for us to get it underway."

"We are so excited to be able to actually see this building going up," said Rev. Carl Boyd, director of missions for the Pike Association. "It has long been a dream of ours to be able to provide these kinds of desperately-needed services for the children and families of Eastern Kentucky."

The building is being constructed largely through donations, Boyd said. A group of interested citizens has given time, money and talents to make the office space available.

Boyd added that a non-profit corporation has been formed to construct and furnish the building. The corporation will then lease the building to the Pike and Enterprise Associations for $1 per year. The associations will in turn make the space available to Kentucky Baptist Homes for Children which will operate the programs.

Arnold Turner of Prestonsburg, one of several area businessmen working on the project, said the partnership aspect of the project has been a key to its success.

"This is a very special partnership," Turner said. "Kentucky Baptist Homes for Children has the know-how and the willingness to help, but the leadership for a project like this must come from the local area. This is truly an example of Eastern Kentuckians reaching out to help each other and I am proud to be a part of it."

Rev. Jim Smith, who lives at Banner and who is the director of missions for Enterprise Association, said additional donations of talent, materials and resources are needed.

"Qualified work on electrical, heating and cooling, and plumbing systems is still needed, as well as donations of good quality construction materials," Smith said. "Tax deductible monetary donations can also be made to help cover the costs of construction and furnishings or to help pay for the actual services that are provided."

Those interested in making donations to the construction project may do so by making checks payable to the Allen First Baptist Church, Cornerstone Construction Project, P.O. Box 541, Allen, KY 41601. All gifts to this special fund go to the construction project.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Katie bar the door?

by Scott Perry

Floyd County's Fiscal Court has the right idea, but they're going about it the wrong way.

You can't throw people in jail in this country for not paying their bills.

You can, however, lock up litterbugs and others who dispose of garbage in illegal fashions.

When they consider final approval of a new ordinance governing the county's mandatory solid waste program, the court should put more teeth in enforcing the prohibitions against illegal dumping.

Let it be known by making examples of the guilty that such practices won't be tolerated.

Such an approach, we suspect, would open some eyes in a real hurry.

It isn't fair for paying customers to shoulder the financial burden of the solid waste program.

When so many don't pay, those who do pay always end up paying more.

There will always be those, too, who can't afford to pay.

Even if the law allowed you to toss them in jail, it wouldn't be right and it wouldn't be fair.

Still, nobody ought to get a free ride.

Perhaps those who can't pay the price for garbage collection could provide some in-kind service to the county in exchange.

A couple of hours a month of community service isn't all that much to ask of the able-bodied.

Those who can pay, but won't, are horses of a different color.

Their services should be cut off first, and then they should be held accountable to the laws governing garbage disposal.

Those who do use the service and who do pay for it should not be penalized for those who don't.

Those who create very little waste should have to pay less, too.

What better way is there to encourage recycling or waste reduction than by offering incentives that strike directly at the pocketbook?

With a little imagination and a lot of careful consideration Floyd County could develop a solid waste program that is efficient and cost-effective.

To accomplish that feat, we need to open doors of communication, not slam the doors at the jail.

Yeeeessss! We're proud

Editor:
The K.I.R.I.S. results from the 1993-94 school year are in (with exception of the performance events exams, which are due out in January) and students, teachers and parents deserve the highest of praises for a job well done!

Accolades to students who applied the skills learned; to the teachers who spent hundreds of hours in professional development activities, in planning with colleagues, and the implementation of new strategies necessary for students to meet KERA's academic expectations; to parents who've supported their children and school in so many ways; to professional providers, especially Dr. Jack Foster, who guided us as we established our curriculum focus, and to Dr. Charles Whitaker, who helped us develop our Writing/Reading-Across the Curriculum program, and many others too numerous to mention.

We're proud of our school's accomplishments and ask for continued support as we pursue the endeavors which will prepare our students for the 21st century.

Hats off to all!

B.L. middle school site is undesirable

Editor:
I am writing in regard to the proposed site for the Betsy Layne Middle School. To be very honest, I have not been screaming and yelling about this site because I thought that there was no way the state would come here and approve that site.

As we have seen though, from past experiences, they have approved other undesirable sites for schools. A person needs only to go look at the site to know that it is terrible.

First, you have a small, crowded area, with no room to expand.

Second, you have traffic on three sides.

Third, this is a sludge pond. The material that they filled that bottom in with is sludge.

Fourth, This area gets flooded.

Fifth, the cost to just prepare this site for building is enormous. Money that could go into a building will instead, go for preparing the site.

And, fifth, but definitely not least this will be a congested traffic area that will be dangerous for school traffic and buses trying to get on and off the road.

This does not affect only the Betsy Layne children. It also affects Harold, Prater, and J.M. Stumbo. As Earl Pitts would say "Wake up America." This can still be stopped, the property has not been bought yet.

It will take a joint effort from Betsy Layne, Prater, Harold, and Stumbo to stop this disaster. Speak up now, or all your children will suffer. Since only Betsy Layne parents have been objecting to this at the board meetings, I believe the school board feels that we are the only ones opposed to this site.

Whatever school you are from, if you object to this site, call as many school board members as you can and let them know how you feel.

At present, the state has put a hold on this site because it is going to cost too much to prepare the site. If site preparation costs get "readjusted" this site could be approved at any time. The time to act is now or don't complain later!

Searching, puzzled and sounding off in Prestonsburg

Editor:
Every week, twice a week, since September 6, I have searched the Floyd County Times for an article and a picture of Adams Middle School fifth and sixth grade football team and Adams seventh and eighth grade football team.

I have not found anything about the fifth and sixth grade team and I have found only one article and one picture of the Adams seventh and eighth grade football team.

These two teams have been doing real well. The sixth and fifth grade team has lost only two games and they were at the first of their season.

The seventh and eighth grade team is undefeated in their season. They have played nine games in their regular schedule. They have played in two bowl games, which does not count for or against them. They played in the Jenny Wiley Bowl at Prestonsburg and won it. They played in the Coleman Oil Bowl at Pikeville and they lost that game 20-12. This is the game Kim of Kim's Korner wrote about in her column. Bless you, Kim. Kim, at that game, I heard one of the men on Prestonsburg's side say there was a penalty on a play after the dirt throwing, but it was not called for throwing the dirt, but for some other reason.

I must say, in searching for something about Adams seventh and eighth grade football team, I noticed that Allen Central and South Floyd have had full coverage of their games. They take up most of the sports section, twice a week, with long articles and a lot of pictures. Good for them.

Allen Grade School football team has had some good articles and pictures. Betsy Layne High School and Prestonsburg High School football teams have had some coverage. The Blackcats have had more coverage lately.

Getting back to Adams seventh and eighth grade football Blackcats, I have listed their schedule below.

September 6: Magoffin County (away) won 22-0; September 13: Paintsville (home) won 36-10; September 20: Allen Grade School (away) won 36-12; September 28: Warfield at Inez, won 46-14.

October 1: Knott County (home) won 46-18; October 4: Inez (home) won 53-14; October 11: Betsy Layne (away) won 36-12; October 18: South Floyd (away) won 38-22; October 25: Allen Central (home) won 30-14; and October 29, play-offs at Allen Central.

They finished with an undefeated season and I think it is a shame that they didn't have more coverage. Only one article and one picture. I think they deserved more. Ed, one week in the paper, one of your fans wrote about how you had traveled to Paintsville, Ashland, Lexington, Louisville and even out of the state to Tennessee, but you could not cover any of this team's games here, right in your own backyard.

Who is responsible for their news coverage? Is it you, Ed? Or, Adams Middle School? Or, Adams Middle School publicity committee? Or, the coaches? Who? I would like to know.

I am very puzzled about this, Whoever it is, I feel they have really let this undefeated team down. Am I the only fan they have that feels this way, that they were left out?

The Adams seventh and eighth grade football team has one more game, October 29, at Allen Central. This is a play-off game. I don't know the time. As you are always saying,

There is a possibility that Ky. 80 will join US 23 at or near Water Gap when it is redesigned and rebuilt. Vandalism against strike-bound Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company's property and equipment continued last Thursday night as an explosion ripped out a portion of a 20-inch pipeline on the Turner farm hill, near Maytown. Last Saturday was not merely "pretty," it was just about perfect and the fifth annual Red, White and Blue Day went almost perfectly. Residents of several Floyd communities will be affected by the rate increase allowed Monday by the Public Service Commission on natural gas supplied by the Columbia Gas Company. The increase is 11 cents per 1000 cubic feet and will average $1.72 a month for residential customers. (Oh, for the good, old days!) Construction bids will be asked next month on the physical education-luncheon complex to be built at McDowell for the school there. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development announced today that effective October 15, 1974, the City of Wheelwright has been accepted into the National Flood Insurance Program. There died: Mrs. Florence Hall, 79, at her home at Allen, Monday; Lawna Huff Francisco, 78, of Pikeville, October 20 at a nursing home there; William W. Cooley, 77, former Floyd County Circuit Clerk, of Lexington, in a hospital here, Thursday; Naomi Ruth Blair, 25, last Saturday at a Pikeville hospital; George Branham, 56, of St. Cloud, Fla., formerly of Allen, Saturday at a St. Cloud hospital; Keith Bradley Boyd, 29, of Sandusky, O., formerly of Garrett, was killed October 12 in an auto crash; Ben Martin, 66, former State Representative, of Pikeville, Wednesday in a Lexington hospital; Phillip A. Today (Thursday) has been declared a day of mourning in Prestonsburg as last rites are being held for Donald Gene Reatherford, 16, and Woodrow Salyers, 17, two of Prestonsburg High School's most popular students and athletes who were found dead Monday evening, victims of carbon monoxide poisoning. Clifford E. Murphy, 25, of Allen, died last Saturday afternoon shortly after his truck collided with the auto in which his wife and two children were driving at West Garrett. Two former Floyd Countians, both residents of Auxier, were arrested at Hillsboro, Ohio, Monday, as suspects in the nine-month-old Pike County mystery-death of Hermit Dameron at Regina. Donald Lowe, 16-year-old member of the Maytown 4-H Club, has been named a state champion on a labor service project in club work and will go to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago in December. The Prestonsburg Blackcats last Thursday downed Belfry, 39 to 0, at Williamson, W. Va., to chalk up their eighth consecutive win of the season and remain in the state's undefeated ranks. There died: James A. (Uncle Jimmy) May, 85, last Thursday at his home at Langley; John Garrett, 69, of Garrett, last Thursday at St. Joseph Hospital, Lexington.

Charges of spreading "false and scandalous reports" made in Floyd county court against Donald Broden, son of the president of Transylvania College, were dismissed on motion of County Attorney Forrest D. Short. Commonwealth Attorney O. C. Hall is conducting an investigation into the alleged poisoning death of Edgar Copeland, July 19, at the Valley Inn. W. B. Letters to the editor

Ed, be a good sport and write this game up. Pictures would be nice, too. Thank you.

I closing I would like to say that this Adams seventh and eighth grade team has a great football team. They have been playing good ball all season and they are a fine group of boys, the best, and they play hard and fair. In fact, I would safely say that they are the best grade school football team to ever come out of Floyd County.

They remind me of the high school Blackcats last year. They have been scoring about the same. The high school Blackcats will have some real good talent coming up and Allen Grade School will have a bunch of good boys who will join the Blackcats next year, also.

You know that old saying, "It's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game." That is the way this team plays and they win. When their score goes up the coaches put in the seventh graders, usually in the third quarter.

I have seen all the games, and know for a fact that the coaches send in substitutes all through the game. Some of the players are very small in size and I have heard some spectators say they could get hurt playing against big boys weighting 250 pounds. Seven of the teams have very large boys on their team.

This Adams seventh and eighth grade football team has a great bunch of coaches and a great bunch of players. I know most of them, and love them all dearly.

I am looking forward to basketball. I hope they will get more coverage in basketball. I know they will have a winning team because a lot of them were All-Stars last year and they won their season and at least two tournaments. Some of the same boys were All-Star baseball players. They played for the state championship without their regular pitcher and Jeffersontown in Louisville beat them in the final game, but being state runners-up is something. They are a bunch of very talented boys. They are good in all sports they play.

Finally, I will say we, as Americans, are born and bred to win, whether it's playing checkers, pitching horseshoes, playing cards, bass fishing, archery, fighting a war or playing any and all sports. It's just in our nature to want to win, to be the best we can be, and to be a good loser if we have to lose.

Let's all go out and support our teams, whatever they play and wherever they play.

The amount of the rate increase was not discussed Wednesday.

Councilman Denzil "Hoss" Halbert said that Lewandowski's proposed rate increase would generate approximately $226,000 a year for the department, which needs $216,000 to operate.

Halbert commented that water rates in Martin have not been adjusted in 12 years and an increase seemed reasonable to him.

Council members Everett Akers Jr., Hazel Robinson, Alan Whicker and Steve Jenkins said they would not vote in favor of any increase.

Akers, who has been pushing for fiscal and managerial responsibility in that department for months, said he would consider an increase in water rates if the department was better managed. He also criticized Mayor Raymond Griffith's apparent refusal to abide by council's wishes.

"The mayor runs the city; he's the head honcho," Akers said. "It's up to him to make sure the clerks employed do their jobs. We get reports from the mayor and it's up to the mayor to make sure our wishes are carried out."

"This is the first time, in a long time, that this council is trying to do something about the water system," Akers continued. "I wouldn't care to vote for a water raise but I've got to see (better) management. We all have our backs against the wall again and in order to cure one problem, we're going to have to cure two problems."

Several residents in the audience told council that something needed to be done to get things running smoothly in the city.

Kathy Isaac told council that everybody needs to work together.

"All this...bickering is not getting us anywhere," Isaac said. "If you don't think someone is doing their job, put the heat on them. Somebody needs to take responsibility."

Harold Case suggested that people living outside the corporate limits be charged a higher rate for water service since they did not have to pay city taxes.

Glen Patton asked about sewer and water hookups for several structures in the city, which cannot get service.

After about two hours of discussion, the meeting was adjourned without any resolution on city water rates or management of that department.

Council was to discuss a code of ethics, but councilman Whicker said there was not enough time to do so Wednesday.

"We've beat a dead horse again all night," Whicker said.

The meeting ended at 9:10 p.m.

Dewey Lake

including the development of cattail marshes where tributaries emptied into the lake; development of submerged aquatic vegetation; and the increased use of no-wake zones for boating in shallow areas.

None of those ideas will solve the problem, though, Hershfield said, because the primary source of murky water is storm runoff.

"Even if the lake was totally cleared up by these measures," he said, "one large storm (would muddy the entire lake again)."

The most effective way to eliminate turbidity is the most difficult, the experts agreed. It would require erosion control throughout the Johns Creek watershed area.

A second problem, one that concerns siltation in the lake's headwaters, may be addressed more easily.

Corps spokesman David Deeds told Stumbo and Rogers that his agency would explore two options concerning the build-up of silt and report back to the group in March.

Those options, Deeds said, would be to raise the lake's summer pool level by about three feet to allow boating in areas now restricted by silt, or dredging those areas.

Raising the lake's level could create more problems than it solves, Deeds noted, particularly in areas like the boat dock and campgrounds that might be affected by higher water levels.

Dredging, the Corps representative added, would be expensive and could cost as much as $4 million per acre.

The least costly route toward solving the lake's problems, participants agreed, would be to initiate a public relations and educational campaign with property owners in the watershed area, explaining to them the side effects of erosion on the lake.

Stumbo agreed to spearhead that effort and he will ask fish and game clubs from Floyd and Pike County to assist in the project.

Words of life

The focus of God's church

by Wayne Burch
Minister of Little Paint First
Church of God

Mary and Ruth arrived at the church early for a meeting of the board. They sat and chatted casually while waiting for others to arrive. Mary, a thirty five year old mother of two children, is a leader in a children's group on Sunday morning. Ruth, in her early twenties, is a children's teacher assistant.

As they waited, Mary remarked, "Did you notice all the children playing in the church parking lot out back? It seems that every time I come to a meeting, there are more kids playing there. Wouldn't it be great if we could come up with a program that would touch the lives of those children with the good news in some way? We've just got to talk about that opportunity tonight!"

Ruth responded: "Yes, I saw them. At times it's a problem getting into the parking lot with so many kids scattered around. They won't pay any attention to you if you're coming into the church. Their parents ought to be sending them to our Sunday School, after all, it's not more than a block or two from any of them. Why, I remember when every child within three or four blocks of this church came to our Sunday school, and we didn't have to do anything special to get them here, either! We had full classes in every department. But I don't suppose we'll ever see days like that again!"

HOW CLOSE DID YOU LISTEN TO MY LITTLE INTRODUCTORY STORY? Both Mary, with her vision of ministry possibilities, and Ruth with her warm, glowing memories of the "good-old-days" are the church! The church of Jesus Christ also has a glorious future which must be realized. In between, the church has its todays in which it must live and work, rooted in a past while building for the future.

As some folk grow older they lose their dreams and hopes. The same is true of many church congregations as they grow older. It does not have to be that way for either people or congregations. There is a direct relationship between hopes, dreams, and the possibilities for growth, however defined.

The aging of a congregation, the pastor, the lay leadership, and even the community itself, may often produce an effect known as "orientation to the past." Fresh or new ideas are in short supply, as is the energy with which to implement them. Even a congregation and its beliefs about God begin to change. Instead of God being the "strong leader" and the "spirit who guides" the church into an unknown future, God becomes the "protector of the faithful remnant" or survivors.

Think about life itself. On the one hand, life consists of dreams and visions, and on the other hand are memories and history, but sandwiched in between is the reality of today!

A YESTERDAY CHURCH . . . has a strong orientation to its history and its past. The building is usually very important and much of its limited budget is spent on building maintenance.

The emphasis of its programs is on repeating history and the past. In most cases, "YESTERDAY" congregations are not eager for new personalities to find their place in the fellowship. Let us not get bent over backward quoting that text which states, ". . . know them that labor among you." In many places this attitude results in struggling to stay alive and hard-put to keep the doors open. It is certainly not a sin to cherish one's history and up-bringing. Remembering "pot-bellied" stoves, and having four or five classes in the sanctuary at the same time was great! However, in looking back we must not allow the dwindling and the dissipating of our zeal for the things of God in the present. I have come to one conclusion, memories only have one benefit. There is only one merit to "precious" memories, and that is to spur one on to greater goals!

A TODAY CHURCH . . . Likes what it is doing and wishes to continue its present ministry. This does not mean that it is merely repeating the past, or that it will never change. There is no need to look for other issues, problems, or opportunities in the community, since the church is doing what it wants to do, and is happy doing it. Tomorrow will be the same as today. When this happens for a period of time, the "today" congregation soon becomes a "yesterday" church, doing no more than repeating the past.

A TOMORROW CHURCH . . . is not satisfied with either numbers or quality. A "tomorrow" church consistently has serious questions about its community and what it ought to be doing. It is always conscious of the need to rehearse the "great commission."

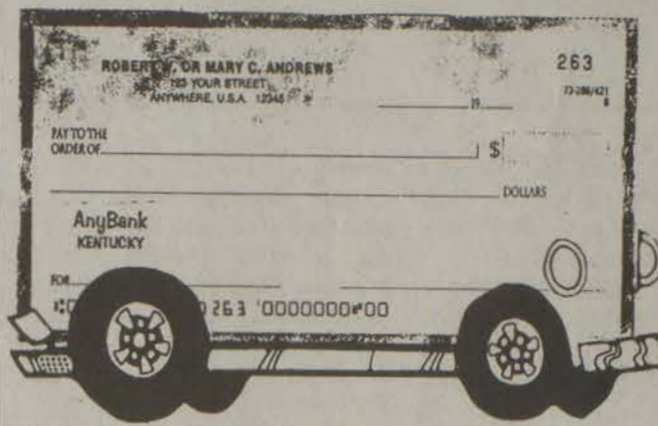

This church believes in the energizing of the Holy Spirit. The future is there for those who are willing to take it, thus, a longer look into the future is taken regularly. There is much enthusiasm about the future. The church "work" is gladly accepted and viewed as opportunities for God's people to accomplish the mission of God! God's church must always be optimistic about the future! We never know what miracle God may wish to bring about in our midst.

Tomorrow is a new day; tomorrow is another opportunity, tomorrow is God's reserve; tomorrow brings twenty-four more hours which may bring another wave of long awaited revival among us. Tomorrow may be the very bend in the road that will see again faith swallowed up in sight for some dear saint. Tomorrow always holds great, unlimited, untold potential for those who work faithfully in the Kingdom! Never be fearful of committing an unknown future to a known God! Whatever the past, we have a spotless future. It is hats off to the past and gloves on for the future. If we do not care about the future, the future will not care about us. Where are you in the focus of God's church?

In 1792 an advertisement appeared in newspapers in the United States announcing a prize of $500 or a gold medal of the same value for the best design for a President's House. James Hoban, born and educated in Ireland, received the award for his Georgian style building plans. During the eight years of construction Hoban also served as the building superintendent.

Home energy assistance program to open November 7

Low-income Kentuckians who need help with winter heating bills can apply for the Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP) November 7-December 12, depending on the last name of the head of household.

HEAP subsidies for coal, electricity, fuel oil, gas and bottled gas or wood will be available for all eligible residents who apply through the state's 23 local community action agencies.

John Clayton, commissioner of the Department for Social Insurance, which oversees the federally funded HEAP program, said applications are taken on an alphabetical schedule to avoid people having to stand in long lines.

Residents should watch for announcements in their local news media to find out where applications will be taken in their community.

Clayton says that the department has earmarked $8.4 million for the subsidy phase that begins November 7. Approximately $6.4 million has been set aside for the crisis phase, which begins January 9.

Payments are expected to average $70 per household.

Those applying for heating help should bring their most recent heating bill, social security numbers of everyone in the household, and proof of family income. Proof may be in the form of paycheck stub, benefit checks, award letters or direct deposit slips.

Payments are not made to recipients. The community action agency will make direct payment to a fuel vendor or issue a voucher to the household for the purchase of fuel.

For more information, call the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program Inc., Joyce Preston, 789-3641 (Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin, Pike); or the Kentucky Association for Community Action at 1-800-456-3452.

The presenters discussed a variety of topics including child development, parenting, addictions, domestic violence and child abuse. The presentation was coordinated by Mazola L. Salmons, an associate professor of business at PCC, and Kimberly L. Crisp, Family Service Worker/Coordinator.

Harvest hope

Matthew Skeans displayed the harvest at Mason's Pumpkin Farm at Davisburg. His parents, Johnny and Dawn Skeans, are natives of Floyd County and are part of the senior class at Clear Creek Baptist Bible College, Pineville. The college is collecting Campbell's labels to acquire a new van.

College continues Campbell's label drive

by Michael R. York
Campus Writer, Clear Creek Baptist Bible College

Remember the television commercial depicting a small child rushing indoors on a blustery day asking, "Is it soup yet?" Warming up with a hot cup of soup sure brings a sense of contentment. As the cooler weather beckons more people to enjoy this steamy treat, the preschoolers at Clear Creek Baptist Bible College are anticipating the good use that soup labels can have. They are asking, "Do we have enough for our new van yet?" The answer is, "No, but we are getting there."

Clear Creek's Child Development Center currently has 37 preschoolers, most of whom are children of the college's students, faculty and staff. The school's one used van and a station wagon does not meet the transportation needs that arise. A recent field trip to Mason's Pumpkin Farm in Davisburg, had to be spread out over two days because of the shortage of school vehicles. "A new van would add to the safety and logistic of planning field trips," explains Rebecca Whittaker, Child Development Center Director. "We could enhance their learning experiences if we could visit more sites," she added.

Clear Creek Baptist Bible College, founded in 1926 as a theological training center for adults, is an ideal setting for learning. With an additional van they hope to spread out over the Southeastern Kentucky region with both ministry and educational experiences.

The drive to collect 1,000,000 labels from soup cans and packaged food containers began over a year ago. The project is part of Campbell's Labels for Education Program, an innovative way for schools to secure new transportation vehicles. Friends of Clear Creek are trying to beat the March 1, 1995 collection deadline. To date there have been over 250,000 labels counted toward the goal.

Supporters are being sought to collect and trim labels from a wide assortment of products, including: Campbell's, Swanson, V8, Open Pit, Franco-American, Pepperidge Farm, Vlasic, and Prego. Clear Creek is also accepting award certificates from grocery stores participating in the Campbell's label program. Interested persons may ask their grocers to donate their certificates to Clear Creek. These are available in denominations from 100 to 5,000. Certificates add up quickly and save a lot of time and energy.

"As people enjoy their hot soup, we want them to remember to save the labels and send them to us," said Shelby Castlen, secretary to the president. For a complete list of usable products and clipping information call (606) 337-9792 or write to Clear Creek Baptist Bible College, 300 Clear Creek Road, Pineville, KY, 40977.

PCC contributes to national publications

The National Council on Student Development (NCSDD) of the American Association of Community Colleges recently published two summary reports of its national Leadership Development colloquiums.

Both publications featured work by Prestonsburg Community College personnel.

The first publication, "From Vision to Reality: Student Affairs Agenda for the '90s," was developed and edited by PCC President Deborah L. Floyd.

Dr. Floyd also wrote the Acknowledgments, Foreword and Chapter 1 of the publication. Chapter 1 was entitled, "The National Agenda for Community College Student Affairs: Addressing Priorities for the '90s."

The second publication was entitled "Student Development: Leadership for a New Century."

The cover design on both national publications featured computer-generated art work by Tim Cooley, office assistant in technology and development at PCC.

The tooth fairy visits

Students in Headstart through third grade were all smiles on September 30th when they were visited by the "Tooth Fairy." The Southeast Kentucky Area Health Education Center presented a fun Dental Hygiene Program to approximately 200 students. The resource center provided toothpaste and toothbrushes to all students.

Pikeville Methodist switches to personal switchboard service

In an effort to better serve their community, Pikeville Methodist Hospital will discontinue its Automated Answering Service. Instead, all calls to the hospital will be answered personally by a Switchboard Operator.

The automated answering service was installed three years ago in hope that it would be more convenient to use and provide quicker access to hospital departments. At that time, the hospital was receiving nearly 6,000 calls per day.

Many have felt, however, that a personal response is better. Therefore, Wednesday, October 26, the change took place.

When you call Pikeville Methodist Hospital on 437-3500 or on the Floyd County number of 886-1884, your call will be answered by an operator saying, "Good Day, Pikeville Methodist Hospital. May I help you?"

PCC professor participated in The DC Experience

Deborah L. Floyd

Prestonsburg Community College President Deborah L. Floyd traveled to Washington, D.C. the last week of September to participate in The DC Experience, a four-day professional development seminar which allowed a contingent of two-dozen community college presidents a chance to learn how our national government operates.

The following is an article written by Michael Bourque for the American Association of Community Colleges. It will be carried in the October 18 release of Community College Times, a bi-weekly, national publication and is reprinted here with permission.

Washington, D.C.—Late last month, more than two-dozen community college presidents got an inside look—literally—at the Clinton White House.

With Teddy Roosevelt's Nobel Peace Prize sitting prominently on the mantle and the grandfatherly gaze of Franklin Delano Roosevelt cast upon the room, the presidents met with White House staff to discuss the direction of Clinton administration's reforms.

The meeting in the Roosevelt Room in the West Wing of the White House was part of The DC Experience, a four-day professional development seminar that allows the presidents a special window on the workings of Washington. The presidents spent a half hour each with representatives of the Office of Management and Budget, the White House Office of Public Liaison, the National Corporation for Community Service and Special Assistant to the President for Economic Policy, Paul Dimond.

Pat Smith and Cynthia Brown, both of OMB's education branch, told the presidents to look for much discussion in the next year about the reauthorization of the Perkins Act, Phase II of Title IV reform and workforce training program consolidation. But the two told the presidents that their message as community and technical college leaders was being heard at the highest levels of government. The two said they know that community colleges are important educational access points for special populations, including minorities, underprepared students and economically disadvantaged students. They said community colleges are important pieces of the administration's overarching employment and training philosophy.

"There might be some people who are worried," Smith said, "but (community colleges) are the last people who should be worried (about program reforms)."

Still, the presidents made sure their voices were heard.

"Perkins is important to us," Prestonsburg Community College President Deborah L. Floyd said. "If not for local Perkins money, there is absolutely no way we could provide the services we do."

Floyd urged caution in tying that money too closely to student outcomes because national standards are likely to be unfair. "If we're not careful, we'll become little ol' Harvards on the hill," Floyd said. "Just be cautious in this outcomes thing because the pendulum can swing the wrong way."

Doris Matsui, who helps stage events and facilitate policy meetings through her job at the White House's office of Public Liaison, said Clinton has a clear idea about the importance of community colleges. She said the nation's community colleges are likely to be "at the forefront of almost every issue."

"Your time has come," Matsui said. "For a long time, community colleges were the stepchild of higher education. That is no longer the case. You are on the cutting edge. You're in the right place at the right time to be involved (in issues). And I have to tell you, you have to be involved."

Next up was Richard Allen, who spoke about one of the initiatives that Matsui had referred to. Allen updated the leaders on the National Corporation for Community Service, a pet project of President Clinton. In September, the President kicked off the program, introducing AmeriCorps. Under the program, people perform community service for up to two years and earn tuition money for college. Allen also spoke of the grants available for colleges that develop approved service-learning programs. Allen noted that the American Association of Community Colleges won a "Learn and Service America" grant that it will parcel out to eight grant-winning colleges.

Encouraging input and collaboration, Allen provided the presidents with a phone number and an address to offer any suggestions for the corporation.

"We want to encourage your involvement," he said.

Twass The Night Before Halloween

Twass the night before Halloween and all through the cemetery,
 Not a creature was stirring, except for Old Mary.
 The jack-o'-lantern's faces all glowed with delight,
 When they thought of Old Mary stealing Halloween night.
 Old Mary walked up and down the street,
 Stealing the candy so there'd be no trick-or-treat.
 She thought of the kids, their faces all bright,
 And how they'd look when there was no trick-or-treat.
 With that in her mind she hurried faster still,
 As she thought of all the dreams that she'd killed.
 Skeletons and goblins joined in the crusade,
 They were all dying to join Old Mary's parade.
 They went around destroying Halloween spirit,
 They did it quietly so no one could hear it.
 The parade grew larger, as more monsters came,
 Old Mary cackled loudly "Oh, what a shame!"
 Suddenly the joyous parade disappeared with a poof,
 They'd never get caught because no one had proof.
 The kids awoke bright and cheery the next morning,
 They had no idea Halloween disappeared without a warning.
 With a satisfied look upon her pale, ghostly face,
 She climbed back into her grave, disappearing without a trace.
 The costumes were red, yellow and green,
 They were the prettiest things the kids had ever seen.
 The kids grabbed their bags and ran out the door,
 Not knowing what kind of night was in store.
 The kids ran from door to door, yelling trick-or-treat,
 But the people said, "Sorry, there's no candy left to eat."
 "Our candy has been stolen, by whom we do not know."
 The kids were speechless and their heads were hung low.
 They walked past the graveyard and looked at the unmarked stones,
 And they saw lying there dry skeleton bones.
 They walked a little closer and to their surprise,
 Up rose Old Mary with a twinkle in her eyes.
 "I took your candy, I'm the one,
 And I'm happy to say I'm proud of what I've done."
 She threw back her head and a scream pierced the night,
 For she had succeeded in stealing Halloween night.
 The kids were scared to death of what they'd seen,
 How could anyone be so mean?
 And they heard her exclaim as they ran out of sight,
 "I'll be back for more candy next Halloween night!"

Twass' the night before Halloween and all through the graveyard,
 Every spirit was stirring from the ground that was hard,
 The branches were knocking on the sides of the graves,
 Telling the ghost it is midnight time to stop being slaves.
 The spirits were awakening from the eternal rest,
 To visions of being free to see the moon at its crest.
 Slowly, they opened the casket to begin their night,
 Ready to give all the children a Halloween fright.
 When what to my wondering eyes should appear,
 But the fear of ghostly spirits coming near.
 They pushed through the soil- old and hard,
 And slowly they crept out of the mysterious graveyard.
 They roamed up and down the winding streets,
 To watch all the little children as they trick-or-treat.
 The flapping and soaring of each little soul,
 As they crept around every nook, cranny, and hole.
 So up the doorstep the spirits they flew,
 They knocked on the door and yelled an ear piercing "BOO!"
 As the people turned their heads, from the shock of seeing the dead,
 They turned grabbed their children and down the street they fled.
 The ghosts were all covered in flapping white,
 Scaring the children on that cold Halloween night.
 They had dark sunken eyes that seemed to stare you right through,
 And sly, little grins the way most spirits do.
 Their bony, white fingers were clinched into fists,
 As they roamed down the streets covered with thick foggy mist.
 They were so ugly, when people saw them, they stared,
 The ghost flew away quickly as if saying, "Catch us if you dare."
 The one little boy walked up to them and said,
 "Hey!, why are you here? I thought you were dead."
 The head spirit stepped up, and pushed him aside,
 And down the street they continued to fly with a glide.
 They spoke not a word as they turned onto Main,
 But they suddenly froze, when they heard a distinctive clang.
 It was the ringing of the bell in the Baptist Church Tower,
 The ghost realized it was midnight, time to give up their power.
 They turned away and let out a deep, heavy sigh,
 As they flew back to the grave yard, waving silent goodbyes.
 And the towns folk heard them exclaim as they flew out of sight,
 You had better beware! We'll be back next Halloween night!"

Twass' the night before Halloween,
 And all through the house.
 Something went thump,
 And it wasn't a mouse.
 It was something I heard,
 And it was under the house.
 It was coming for me, it was coming for all,
 It was coming up the stairs and into the hall.
 With monsters and demons and everything dead,
 Swirling and twirling above my sleeping head.
 I knew it was coming, it was coming so soon,
 I could hear it's heart beating from across the room.
 I looked down at the foot of my bed,
 Then I saw a green, gruesome head.
 With its big bulging eyes and sharp yellow teeth,
 I knew in a minute that I was going to be beef.
 Slowly he came crawling across my warm bed,
 I reached for my covers and jerked them over my head.
 He raised me up high by the hair of my head,
 I knew any minute I was going to be dead.
 As I turned my head around, I stared into his eyes,
 I think I began to become hypnotized.
 He was covered in slime,
 From his head to his feet.
 His face was blotched and covered in mush,
 And on his huge hands there was tons of green stuff.
 His breath, it stunk like something dead,
 As he opened his mouth to bite off my head.
 As my mother pulled into our long driveway,
 The light hit his face and he vanished away.
 I'll never forget that monster I saw running away.
 My mother walked in and gave a warm, welcoming smile,
 Which only lasted for a short while.
 With a wink in her eye and a turn of her head,
 She was off to her room and her warm cozy bed.
 The monster came to try to eat me again,
 He wanted to pull and rip at my skin.
 I let out a scream that could wake the dead,
 My mother came in to find me under my bed.
 With a smirk on his face he turned with a dash,
 And out the window he flew and hit the ground with a crash.
 Right away he was dead,
 Cause I saw the blood oozing out of his head.
 He lay there dead as a door-nail,
 When I saw the fork in his long, scary tail.
 He might be a devil,
 I'm not for sure, but next Halloween, I'll be sure to lock the front door.

Twass' the night before Halloween,
 When all through the park,
 All the ghosts were menacing
 Throughout the night that was dark.
 The ghosts would inspire years of fear,
 In hopes that children would soon wonder near.
 The children were fearful in their Halloween disguise,
 With bald heads, masks, and putrid-looking eyes.
 The lights from the houses with their mysterious glow,
 Seemed to dance from the window to the park below.
 More dreadful than Jason, they came one by one,
 Waiting deep in the park to have some fun.
 So they flew through the night, those dreadful old souls,
 Waiting to fulfill their evil toll.
 And then in a moment I heard outside,
 Moaning and groaning and mournful cries.
 I walked to my window and peered around,
 And saw the ghosts and goblins rising from the ground.
 They were dressed in white from head to toe,
 You could hear their heavy burdens in their sorrowful woes.
 A witch fluttered by on her broken old broom,
 In her black eyes there was a look of certain doom.
 The yellow moon shined brightly over head,
 As I stared at the scene wishing I was dead.
 The skeletons rose from their creepy, cold graves,
 And danced under the pale moon's soft gaze.
 They had crackly old bones and sunken in eyes,
 They didn't try to hide they had no disguise.
 The jack-o-lanterns grin was something to fear,
 With their toothless grin spread from ear to ear.
 Although they never really spoke,
 You could hear their warnings with the slightest provoke
 And then with a blink it all disappeared,
 I sat up with a jerk and thought, "How weird!"
 I sprang out of bed and rushed to the window,
 To take a look at my yard below.
 But all I saw, I could not believe,
 Were the glimmering costumes parading the street.
 The doorbell rang and I went to meet,
 A scary ghost whispering, "Trick-or-Treat."

We've always made car loans.

Now we'll help you get a new parking space.

We're making a few changes at First Guaranty National Bank, not the least of which is our name. Now we have a new one. It's Trans Financial Bank. And along with that new name is coming a greatly expanded mortgage portfolio consisting of both fixed and adjustable rate mortgages.

What hasn't changed are the friendly people and the nice little personal touches you're used to. It's just that now, those same friendly people will have more to offer - not only more mortgage money, but many new products and services not usually found in a bank, like a full range of investment vehicles and complete travel services.

So please stop by. We can look at a loan for a new garage - many with an attached house.

THE TRIP
(Prologue)

While you read this my mother, three sisters, and I hopefully will have returned from our five-day jaunt to Myrtle Beach. What is already amusing about the trip is that I already know what is going to happen when all five of us get into the car and start down the highway.

Not unlike many families, my family has a resident know-it-all, a thinks they know-it-all, a true knows-it-all but doesn't flaunt it, a I don't have a clue-at-all, and the one who tells everyone else what to do.

Jenny is the "true-knows-it-all but doesn't flaunt it," particularly when it comes to family trips because she's a geography major. Unfortunately there isn't a large demand for geography majors, but there should be because of all of us Jenny is the only who can read a road map and understand it. (I can read maps. I just don't understand the distance from one place to another because the travel time doesn't look as far on a map as it does when you actually travel the route). I can understand why she's a counselor in a drug rehab/hospital program because she can tell her patients where they'll end up if they don't straighten up.

Amanda is the "know-it-all." She works for a large metropolitan bank, can leap tall buildings in a single bound, is faster than a speeding bullet and enjoys throwing her weight around. A supervisor over the roving tellers, Amanda believes that by ordering us to arrive at a certain destination when she thinks we should, we will. (Just by this thought pattern it's easy to understand that Amanda doesn't have children. If she did she would know that this goal is almost impossible to achieve.)

As bad as I hate to admit it, I'm the don't have a clue-at-all. I get lost changing clothes. It goes without saying that I don't have an ounce of Indian blood in my body because if I did I would have been disowned the first time I got the hunting party lost.

Mother is the "thinks she knows-it-all," and dutiful children that we are, we allow her to think it because she deserves it for putting up with us all these years. Also because she's footing the bill for the trip.

The last one is the first, and she's Melinda. The one who tells the rest of us what to do whether we want to or not. It's easier if we agree with her because nobody wants the argument and she's bigger than the rest of us by at least 6 inches. If we wind up in Albuquerque, New Mexico we'll all tell each how scenic the trip was and how we hope we'll go back by the same route. She was just elected president of the National Pretrial Association, but you'd think it was President of the United States the way she'll veto our travel suggestions.

Just so you don't think I'm crazy, I've exaggerated some of this (the part about nobody knowing how to read a road map). The rest is true. What is also true is what Melinda has told all of us about packing. If you had heard her, you would have thought she was booking a flight for a major airline instead of for her car. We are not allowed to take over two pairs of pants, a pair of shoes, and toiletries. Just to annoy her, I might not take any toiletries either. Can you believe it? I'm going to fool her and take my panties in a coffee mug if she'll let us take drinks with us. Stay tuned next week when Melinda says, "Shut up! Who's racking this jenny anyway? If you wanted comfort you should have taken a Greyhound."

THE TIMES' WEEKEND

Black cats should lay low around Halloween

by Mike Capuzzo

Many Americans are proud of our history as an enlightened people who have shed ancient backward European superstitions, such as the belief that if a cat jumped over a corpse the deceased would become a vampire. The dreaded Undead, of course, could be prevented from rising if the funeral were delayed and the cat were caught and killed.

Ha! Ha! Those backward, superstitious Europeans!

Alas, we bring you the sad spectacle of Halloween in the 1990s, when many Americans revert to black-cat hysteria reminiscent of the Middle Ages, or even younger.

The black-cat craze gets so bad that most humane societies ban the adoption of black cats before and during the Halloween celebration. This is done to protect innocent animals from Possible Teen-age Devil Worshipers, garden-variety sickos and other unenlightened (read, "nonpet-loving") Americans, who tend to call up and say, "Hey, we need to rent 20 black cats for our party." Herewith, a guide to proper black-cat behavior and protection during this national holiday:

KEEP YOUR BLACK CAT IN-DOORS. We frankly don't know whether to believe the many reports of Possible Teen-age Devil Worshipers in our society, but humane society directors take them seriously. A few years ago, there were widespread reports in Georgia of Satanic cults disemboweling black cats on Halloween and newspaper accounts of decapitated black cats. In the Phoenix area two years ago, more than 20 pure-black and pure-white cats and dogs were kidnapped before Halloween for use, police suspected, in cult sacrifices. In California, pranksters spray-painted black cats with white stripes to make them look like skunks. Keep your cat indoors and out of the tabloid headlines.

DON'T PLAN ON BLACK-CAT PARTY FAVORS. Calls inquiring about renting black cats have been steadily increasing during the past few Octobers, says Beth Lockwood, a humane-society official in St. Petersburg, Florida. "It has to be black, and they seem to think if they call early enough they can reserve one." Many non-devil-worshippers adopt black cats for use in Halloween jokes, pranks or parties, then abandon the animals come November 1.

DON'T PLAN ON ADOPTING A BLACK CAT RIGHT NOW. Several young men appeared at an Atlanta shelter one recent Halloween wearing crossbones and chains and inquiring politely about adopting a black cat. They were turned away. If you have your heart set on adopting one of these fine creatures, the prohibition is lifted after Halloween. And don't worry—most shelters give black cats bonus time on the adoption lists during Halloween.

GIVE BLACK CATS A BETTER SPIN. By this we don't mean the black cat that was found in a laundromat dryer on Halloween in Canada; we mean the kind of spin Roger Ailes specialized in. The dreadful abuse of black cats is rooted in 14th century Europe, when folks thought cats turned beer sour, wrecked ships and spread disease before embracing the even more exciting belief that witches, demons and Satan himself appeared in the shape of a black cat. Across Europe cats were crucified, sacrificed and tortured in religious ceremonies. With so few cats in Europe, rats overran the continent, followed by fleas, followed by your basic BLACK DEATH, which killed three out of every four Europeans. That'll teach you to be nice to cats! (Ultimately, both church and state realized that cats, those prized rat-killers, could do them a favor, namely SAVE HUMANKIND FROM DESTRUCTION, and welcomed cats back into European homes.)

BRING YOURSELF GOOD LUCK. In ancient China and Korea, black cats were considered good-luck cats and were often taken on fishing voyages to ensure a good catch. Wild Things believes also the black cat is a good-luck charm and urges you to go right out and adopt one. After a five-day post-Halloween superstition cooling off period.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

The Associated Press reported in September on Ray Barnes's new Baltimore enterprise—a service to clean up bloodstained death scenes after police investigators have finished their work. Barnes and his wife use a variety of sponges, mops and air fresheners, including an enzyme that digests blood, but sometimes they have to tear out carpeting and wallpaper if they can't clean them. Barnes says business is good, even at fees of $200 and up: "I don't know too many people who would want to go in and clean up the remains of their loved ones."

THE DEMOCRATIC PROCESS

—Missouri state Rep. Beth Long pleaded guilty in June to the theft of four pairs of salt-and-pepper shakers taken from a Rocheport, Mo., restaurant during a legislative dinner the month before. She said she doesn't know how they got into her purse.

—High points in recent references to underwear in the Taiwan parliament: In May one legislator waved a pair of women's underpants symbolically to complain about the low state of Taiwan's national flag, and in June, a female legislator charged the podium and slapped another female legislator who had remarked that the first woman's underwear was showing.

—Bill Frist, a Republican challenging U.S. Sen. Jim Sasser in Tennessee this fall, revealed in a 1989 book that, while a Harvard medical student in the 1970s, he procured cats for experiments by claiming at animal shelters that he wanted them merely as pets. A woman who worked for the Tennessee Humane Association during that time said Frist violated at least three state and federal laws with his scheme.

—After voting earlier this year to disband their police force, residents of Osage, W.Va., voted in June to disband the whole town government. A major reason was dissatisfaction with the large number of traffic tickets being issued.

—In June, Kansas state Rep. Richard Alldritt accused his colleague Melvin Neufeld of attempting to extort a vote from him on a budget bill by threatening to tell Alldritt's wife that Alldritt was fooling around with women. Alldritt failed to change his vote, and according to the district attorney, Neufeld squealed on him.

—Minnesota state Sen. Steve Dille offered an amendment to a welfare-reform bill in March intended to reduce the number of single parents receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The amendment would have required the government to study the possibility of establishing a dating service among single parents, thus potentially getting them married to each other and off the rolls. (It was defeated, 44-2.)

—In St. Joseph, Mich., Harry Caldwell III won the Democratic primary race for county commissioner despite being jailed three weeks before the August voting day because he had paid up only $5 of the $34,980 he owed in child support. In San Jose, Calif., George Shirakawa was re-elected to the city council in June, a month after he died, but in nearby

Well, let's see. What's going on?

Down in Lexington, UK is catching all sorts of heck over the school's Wildcat logo, which some critics say has that lean and pornographic look.

The rhubarb has overshadowed the news that the UK football team has already adopted a new team mascot.

A 'possum.
Why?

Because the football team plays dead at home, and gets killed on the road.

Okay, okay, that's unfair.

To 'possums.

You know, 'possums are probably the most misunderstood creatures around.

Few people, in fact, have ever encountered a living 'possum for any longer than it takes to say "what was that thump?"

The critters, see, have this problem crossing roads.

That's why you never see young children dressed up as 'possums on Halloween.

Too risky.

Halloween, by the way, is an annual event which revolves around the latest TV fad.

This year there'll be thousands of little Mighty Morphin Power Rangers on the loose, demanding treats from anyone too old to wear a mask.

Halloween is sponsored by companies who make dental equipment and supplies.

About a week after Halloween, the adult version of trick or treat occurs.

Some people refer to that event as Election Day.

Instead of hitting folks up for candy, though, candidates go door-to-door looking for votes, promising all sorts of treats in return.

Most times we just get tricked, though.

The only real difference between the election and Halloween is candidates don't get all dressed up in costumes when they make their rounds.

Say, suppose we made them dress up like 'possums?

Sure would make it interesting around nightfall, now wouldn't it?

She has served faithfully and well in this capacity and has gained experience that will be valuable to her during her next term. She has demonstrated her knowledge of the law and developed a sincere interest in the administration of justice in Eastern Kentucky and the welfare of its people due to her association with Bert Combs, her late husband.

Although, this may appear to be an unimportant office and not much interest is shown in this election, the life, liberty and property of every citizen and the direction of the progress of our area is dependent upon the judicial system. High school football's regular season closes for county teams

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Wow! Where has the high school football season gone?

Week 10 begins tonight and that will end the season for many of the state's football teams.

The playoffs are scheduled to start around the state next Friday night.

Only one Floyd County school will be taking part in the playoffs this season, and that is Prestonsburg.

The Blackcats have fond memories of last season when they advanced all the way to the state 2A championship before losing to Mayfield 13-12.

The Blackcats have second place in their district locked up and will face either East Carter or Lawrence County at home next Friday night.

Prestonsburg (6-3, 4-1) will travel to M.C. Napier tonight to close out their regular season. The Navajos are in a down year (3-6, 2-3) but are not to be taken lightly.

A playoff berth still looms for the Navajos, but a win over Prestonsburg is a must if Napier is to make the big dance.

A loss would tie the Navajos with Shelby Valley (4-5, 2-4) for fourth place with the berth going to the Wildcats by virtue of Shelby Valley's 15-12 overtime win three weeks ago.

The Prestonsburg defense will key on senior running back Mark Dixon (5'9", 175). Thomas Neace (6'2", 202) will quarterback the Navajos. Also in the backfield will be Joey Williams (5'8", 150) and Jason Chappell (5'10", 190).

The Blackcats are coming off a 41-28 win over Morgan County, a win that wasn't all that pretty last Friday night.

However, it must be noted that the score could have been much worse had Prestonsburg coach Bill Letton elected to play his varsity the whole game.

Napier will have to figure out some way to stop the attack of the Blackcats and especially the running of sophomore Jon Morris, senior Mike Shepherd, senior Blake Leslie and a host of others that Coach Letton can run in.

Thomas Ratliff will continue to lead the Blackcats at quarterback. The senior signal caller has been consistent all season.

Larry Morris, Tim Lewis, Waylon Bevins, Paul Collins, Jason Spencer, Tim Layne will head the Blackcats' defense.

South Floyd at Elkhorn City
The Raiders of South Floyd would love to close out the season this Friday night with a win on the road against the Cougars.

The Raiders posted win number one last week over McCreary Central while the Cougars dropped their game at Betsy Layne.

Freshman quarterback Nick Compton is expected to get playing time, but senior Justin Ray will get the start tonight at quarterback after throwing for 146 yards last week.

"It's possible that we will get Nick in for a few revs," said Daniels.

Adam Wright just keeps running, running, and running. "He's done a good job for us this year," said coach Donnie Daniels.

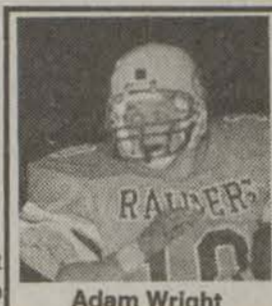

Both he and Chad have had good years.

Wright could go over the 1,000 yard mark tonight. He needs 133 yards to accomplish the feat.

Jarrold Compton and Kevin Johnson just get better with each game. Both have been solid on defense this season for the Raiders. Look for a good game to close out their high school careers.

Halfback Chad Stone will be able to play in his last game tonight. Stone missed the McCreary Central game with an injury.

Scouting report...

Raiders need to make big plays tonight at Elkhorn

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The South Floyd Raiders will travel to Elkhorn City tonight to conclude their 1994 football season. Coach Donnie Daniels would like his team to finish with a two game winning streak.

"It would be a good win to take into the weight room this winter," he said. "After the end of the season, we're going to take a couple of weeks off and then get into the weight room."

Tonight's contest has no significance as far as district play goes for the Raiders, but it is a big game for Elkhorn City, who still has slim chance for the fourth district playoff berth.

In scouting the Cougars, Daniels' says they are not a flashy team.

"They're a good offensive team," he said. "They will run basic wishbone plays. They will run a 5-2 on defense with a 4-3. They're just not flashy."

"They make few mistakes when they play and they do play hard. They have a good back in (Isaac) Swiney. He runs the football hard."

"They have a freshman, (Kenny) O'Quinn who is going to be a real good football player," he said.

Keys for a Raider win...

"We can't make any mistakes against them," said the Raiders' mentor. "We can't allow them to have good field position. We have to make the big plays and if we do, things will go our way."

Coach Daniels was happy with his team's performance as far as turnovers went against McCreary Central.

"We were on the positive side in turnovers for the first time this year," he said. "They had two turnovers and we had two."

"Big plays win games for you and we made the big plays last week. I hope our defense plays strong this week," he said.

Injured list...

Defensive lineman Shawn Curry (6' 5", 345) is hurt but will see action.

"He has a bad shin," said Coach Daniels. "It swelled up on him in practice. So, we'll probably just let him go one way tonight."

Junior Varsity...

The South Floyd junior varsity squad completed a winning season with a 5-3 record.

"That gives us something to build on for next year," said Daniels.

From the middle!

Allen Central, Prestonsburg to challenge for district title; season begins November 28

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It was a different sound, although not a strange sound.

The sound of a basketball bouncing against the court as the Allen Central Lady Rebels went through their practice drills last Monday evening.

Coach Bonita Compton was sending her squad through fast-break drills. The Lady Rebels appear to be already adapted to the rigors of practice since it began October 15.

Today, teams work through the summer at summer camps and there isn't much conditioning needed as each player spends time working out on their own, waiting for practice to begin.

For Coach Compton and her Lady Rebs, falling in the finals of the district tournament last year was a big disappointment.

Then senior, Marsha Brown had her three-point attempt rim off the goal in a desperation shot that would have, had she made it, given Allen Central an unprecedented fifth straight district title. Instead a good Betsy Layne ballclub was crowned the new champions of the 58th District.

"It hurt to lose last year," said Compton of the loss. "That is why we are working hard for this coming season."

Allen Central will pin their hopes on returning players Amanda Samons, Veronica McKinney, Lisa Stumbo, Dreama Isaac and Jennifer Mullins.

Samons, who has shed some weight over the summer, has been billed as a dominating inside player. Watching her move up and down the floor, you could see that she is ready for basketball.

Isaac, the other inside threat, will be a big plus to the rebounding attack of the Lady Rebels.

McKinney maintains the soft touch that she has had since her grade school days. When she is hitting, she can take over a game.

Mullins has a blown-out knee and has to wear a brace. Her availability

Blackcats, Rebels to play in Russell Williamson Classic

Prestonsburg faces Lawrence County; Rebels take on Catholic

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

High school basketball fans will get a sneak preview of some of the top state and local teams when the Russell Williamson Tip-off Classic is held at the Sheldon Clark gym November 24.

Seven games are on tap for the prestigious classic which has always been a basketball fan's delight.

Two Floyd County teams return to the classic this year after missing last season. Prestonsburg and Allen Central, both considered two of the top regional teams, will take part in the festivities.

Prestonsburg squares off against Lawrence County in a game scheduled to tip-off at noon. The Blackcats may be small this season, but they know all about shooting the treys.

Toby Robinson, Brent James, Jambo Jarrell, Ryan Ortega, Martin Newberry and Bennett Allen are just a few that will return this season for coach Gordon Parido.

Belfry, another team that is expected to rank high in the 15th Region this year, will face Bath County in game two which starts around 1:30 p.m. Coach Raymond Justice will return some veteran players and the Pirates will be strong.

Randy Ward, former Wheelwright assistant, brings his Greenup County team to Sheldon Clark to take on, what is expected to be, a good South Laurel team. Greenup County has been one of the 16th Region's top teams the past five seasons. The game will tip-off at 3 p.m.

At 4:30 p.m. Boyd County will face Anderson County.

Allen Central takes on a good Lexington Catholic team in the 6 p.m. game. Coach Johnny Martin lost a lot of his middle depth from last year's state tournament team, but will return one of the top players in the state in point guard Jeremy Hall.

Sophomore Thomas Jenkins, named to the All-Star state tournament team last year, is high on the list of opposing coaches around the area.

Kevin Stumbo will join both Hall and Jenkins on the court. Jason Bevins will provide post play for the Rebels and Matt Crawford is expected to take up some slack around the perimeter.

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

Dedication planned...Wright nears 1,000-yard mark

TRACK DEDICATION SOON...

I understand the track and field facility at Allen Central will be dedicated before long.

The new facility is certainly going to be a plus for the county with local meets being held. A county meet will draw a lot of attention.

A plaque will be erected in honor of the moment. The plaque will display the names of three people that touched the hearts of many -- Sid Bailey, Billy Wells and Brandon Holbrook.

I think the decision to include those three names is a great choice. All three are special people.

This is will truly be a Floyd County facility.

WRESTLING SATURDAY NIGHT...

While on the subject of the facility, a wrestling match featuring stars from the American Wrestling Federation will be held on Saturday, November 5 at the Allen Central gym.

Proceeds from the match will help to purchase equipment for the new track facility.

Plan on coming out and taking in the wrestling card while sending help toward the new equipment. The doors open at 7 p.m.

ALICE LLOYD RANKED

FOURTH IN NATION..

Alice Lloyd coach Jim Stepp is expected to have yet another strong team this season. The NAIA preseason rankings have the Eagles flying high at number four nationally.

Alice Lloyd has been one of the premier teams in the NAIA as Stepp continues to build a strong program.

The Eagles finished 27-7 last year and return most of last year's players.

BIG GAME AT EAST CARTER TONIGHT..

In a showdown for second place in District 1, Lawrence County will host East Carter tonight in what is one of the top football games in the area.

What makes it so big is that the winner gets second place and a home field advantage in the first round of the playoffs. The other has to go on the road and play Prestonsburg.

Both ballclubs are 5-1 on the season in district play. The winner will host the Sheldon Clark Cardinals in their first round game.

WRIGHT NEAR 1,000 MARK...

South Floyd's Adam Wright has a chance to become the second player in the county to go over the 1,000 yard rushing mark when the Raiders travel to Elkhorn City.

Wright, one of the area's top runners, needs only 133 yards to get to the 1,000-yard mark.

You can bet that the ball will be in his hands at Elkhorn City.

Betsy Layne's Rocky Hamilton went over the coveted mark last week against -- you guessed it -- Elkhorn City.

0-2 AND IN PLAYOFFS..

Flash! Bullitt Central is sporting a robust 1-8 overall record and are currently 0-2 in district play but are assured of a playoff berth next week.

Central is in a four-team district and it doesn't matter how the season goes, they are guaranteed that 11th game.

I think it should be the top two teams from each district advancing. Make the teams earn the bid.

Class AAAA, Region 1, District 2 is the only district with just four teams. District 1 of the same region has six..

Only nine teams in the state do not compete for a district title. Next year that number will be eight or less. Betsy Layne enters district play after a three year absence.

Beechwood and Williamsburg are the only undefeated Class A teams.

Mayfield, who defeated Prestonsburg in the championship game last year, is currently 7-2 and 4-0 in their district.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone. Be good sports. Take the kids to church.

Title

will not be known until later, even though she is practicing with the team. Stumbo, a hard worker inside, is a solid ball player that has one problem -- hesitating to shoot the basketball. Newcomers' Crystal Martin and Misty Scott, both freshmen, are expected to make an immediate impact this year. Both are forecasted as franchise players. But they may have to grow up earlier than expected for the upcoming season. Martin is the type of player that could very well be a division one prospect by the time she finishes her four years. She is a solid outside shooter with excellent speed. Scott plays hard and goes to the basketball well. She also is a good shooter from short range. Allen Central will have good depth this year and that depth will be needed if the Lady Rebs run the court with their pressing style of defense.

But as Coach Compton told her team at this practice, the days of three-pointers are gone. "Now it's time to pound the ball inside." Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats The Lady Blackcats will have a new coach this season as Harold Tackett takes control of the team. As I attended part of his practice last Tuesday evening, I was impressed with the number of girls going out for this year's team. Coach Tackett has 21 girls trying out and the team features some pretty good talent. This will be a very up tempo ballclub that will have no problem in putting it up from the outside. But the Lady Cats will have that inside presence as well. Heather Collins, just a sophomore, is going to be a dominating inside player for Prestonsburg. She is a strong rebounder and gets the garbage baskets for her team. Jamie Ratcliff returns for her final year and plays good hard-nose defense. Ratcliff will find though that she will have to send the ball toward the basket more this year. She is a good outside shooter, but is hesitant in shooting the basketball. She is a team player and likes to make the other players look good.

April Newsome will have a full year of varsity experience when she returns. While she may appear a step slow, Newsome is a definite outside threat. Sophomore Crystal Layne will return for her second year after making the All-Conference team in her first season. Speed, speed and more speed describes this sophomore point guard. One problem though, she likes to dribble the basketball with her head down. She needs to see the court better. She is going to be a good one. The Lady Blackcats will have a long bench this season led by Jenna Fannin. Fannin can play the one, two or three position for Coach Tackett. She is a gutsy player who mixes it up well on defense. Camille Robinson will give Prestonsburg strong inside play and help on the boards. Robinson, like Collins, is a garbage basket player who plays very hard. The season is still just over a month away but basketball fever is running high. The only cure for the illness is to get the season underway. The afflicted will have to wait for the cure. Next week, a look at South Floyd and Betsy Layne girls.

Classic

(Continued from page B3) Coach Martin will get a chance to put some of his new faces under fire before the regular season begins. Pleasure Ridge Park, who many feel will be a top state team, will face Mason County in a 7:30 p.m. start. Mason County advanced to the final four of the Sweet Sixteen last year and is ranked among the top five in preseason polls. The home standing Cardinals will host Lexington Dunbar, who is expected to be among the top 10 in the state. Tip-off time is set for 9 p.m. Games will consist of two 16 minute halves. Halftime will run seven minutes long with regular high school rules concerning fouls and time-outs followed. Each team will be allowed 15 minutes for pregame warm-ups. It should be a great afternoon of high school basketball. Sam Sparks is the head coach at Sheldon Clark.

Season

(Continued from page B3) ded the Elkhorn City frontline with power moves that carried defenders with him. Brent Akers, wish he had another year, is equally tough. Although he doesn't carry the football as often, he is quick and gets to the hole fast. Craig Hamilton, sophomore quarterback, just improves with each outing. He is a solid runner as well. Good hands describe the play of Timmy Nunnemaker and Willie Meade. Both are solid receivers and they will be back. Bubba Combs is one of the top college prospects in the state of Kentucky and his presence is always felt. Jason Hamilton has been in on some key tackles as well and is beginning to draw the opponents attention. This should be a good one. A special football wrap up section will be coming out in the near future to take a look back at the past season.

PIGSKIN PICKS: WEEK TEN

This Week's Picks

- Prestonsburg @ M.C. Napier
- Phelps @ Allen Central
- Betsy Layne @ Knott County Central
- South Floyd @ Elkhorn City
- Lawrence County @ East Carter
- Magoffin County @ Whitesburg
- Mississippi State @ Kentucky
- Colorado @ Nebraska
- Wisconsin @ Michigan
- Cleveland @ Denver
- Kansas City @ Buffalo
- Miami @ New England

This Week's Consensus

- Prestonsburg
- Phelps
- Knott County Central
- Elkhorn City
- Lawrence County
- Whitesburg
- Mississippi State
- Nebraska
- Michigan
- Cleveland
- Kansas City/Bufalo (tie)
- Miami

Two weeks remain in the pigskin picks and Scott looks to have a safe lead. Second place is a different story as six will try to finish behind our publisher. Prestonsburg is favored over Napier this week. Knott County Central will win over Betsy Layne and Elkhorn gets the nod over South Floyd. The consensus says that Nebraska will win over the Buffaloes of Colorado (?). Kentucky will keep up their losing ways by falling to Mississippi State. Michigan will ambush Wisconsin. On the pro level, the Cleveland Browns will make it seven wins with a victory over Denver and Elway. No one could decide on Kansas or Buffalo.

Playoff bound Phelps visits Allen Central tonight

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Coach Bill McKinney's Phelps Hornets are on their way to another berth in the playoffs, but before that takes place next week, the Hornets must take care of the Allen Central Rebels this week.

The Hornets will face an improved Allen Central team that has played their best football in the second half of the season.

Tonight the Rebels will say goodbye to the seniors and they would like to dedicate this game to them.

The only other Floyd County team the Hornets faced this season was South Floyd in the third week of the season. It took a 27-yard field goal by Donald Ferrell in the second overtime to give the Hornets a 3-0 win.

Allen Central won handily over the Raiders on their home field two weeks ago.

But when these two teams get together, anything can happen. The two battled into overtime last year with the Hornets pulling out the win on a field goal.

Junior Ryan Dotson will quarterback the Hornets after Coach McKinney moved last year's quarterback Steve Smith back into the backfield.

Senior Daniel Lester will join Smith at a running back slot and both are very talented and capable ball carriers.

The Rebels' defense will have to stay home because Coach McKinney likes to run a lot of misdirection plays. The Hornets are a running club but Dotson will throw the football occasionally.

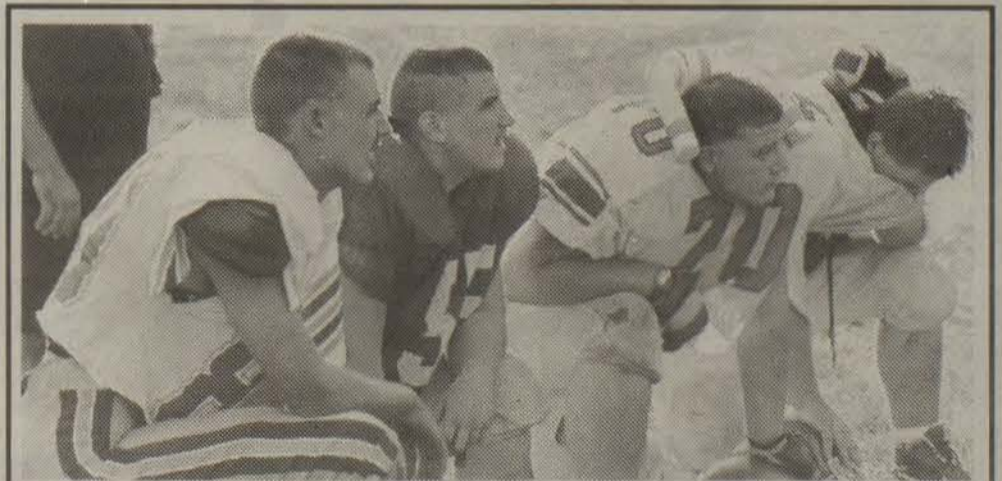

Phelps, with a 3-2 district record and 4-5 record overall, is coming off a thrilling 17-16 win over Fleming-Neon last Friday.

Allen Central is a young football team with mostly sophomores and freshmen. But the group has matured over the past four weeks and could make things interesting for the Hornets.

The excitement of the evening, saying goodbye to the seniors, could be a motivational factor and a large crowd is expected at the Don Daniels Athletic Complex.

Senior night will get started at 6:15 p.m. but game time is set to kickoff at 7:30 p.m.

Allen Central closes season with Senior Night

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The 1994 high school football's regular season comes to an end tonight with regional playoffs scheduled to start next Friday night.

The Allen Central Rebels will be holding senior night and will be the only county school playing at home.

The Rebels will host the Phelps Hornets in their final district game.

Memories still linger from last year's matchup at Phelps in a game that cost the Rebels a playoff berth. The Hornets kicked a field goal in overtime that beat coach Glenn Reeves' ballclub.

While the playoff hopes for Allen

Central will be absent this year, the Hornets will be heading to a berth as the third seed team in their district.

Allen Central has shown much improvement during the second half of the season, winning two of their last three games. The Rebs fell to Magoffin County 23-20 last Friday night in a game that still is being talked about among the Rebel faithful.

The improvement for the Rebels in the second half has been twofold:

- The way the Rebels have performed on defense.

- Allen Central has combined their running game with the pass.

Defensively, the opposition wants to shy away from senior defensive end Shawn Robinson. Robinson will close out a stellar football career at Allen Central.

Jy Shepherd at nose guard has been a strong lineman on the defensive side of the football, but the play of Eric Moore and Bubba Osborne has been almost unreal.

However, tonight Osborne will have to watch from the sidelines. He will have to sit out his final game after being ejected last week against Magoffin County.

Both Moore and Osborne have been the leading tacklers for the Rebels the second half of the season.

Josh Reeves and Paul Varney, along with Matt Varney, had shown some improvement defensively.

On the offensive side of the football, Adam Coleman has been a consistent caller all season at quarterback. This has been a strong year for the junior quarterback, who has thrown for almost 900 yards this season.

Coach Reeves moved James Osborne back into the backfield and he has given the Rebels some strong running yards, as well as his play at line-backer.

Beau Tackett has been the featured ball carrier in the second half of the season. He has rushed for almost 400 yards in his last four games. Add the move of Matt Varney returning to the backfield and the Rebels are even stronger. Josh Reeves, Mr. Consistent all season, is still there and is a solid third-down runner.

Game time is 7:30 p.m.
