911 location could already be done deal

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Although the Floyd County Fiscal Court authorized the appointment of a five-member committee to receive citizen input on what agency would operate the county's E-911 system, it appears that that decision may have already been made.

At the January 20 fiscal court meeting, court members heard various agencies report on the progress of the county's 911 system, but the court did not decide Friday what agency would operate it.

That decision, it appears, was made two years ago.

A resolution the court passed Friday, calls for a five-member blue ribbon committee to "advise the fiscal court on how to properly implement the inter-local agreement with the Kentucky State Police... to operate an E-911 (system) for Floyd County."

Court members presented the idea of forming the committee as a way of gathering citizen input on which agency would operate the emergency service system.

The resolution passed at the January 20 meeting, however, authorizes Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo to enter into an inter-local agreement between Floyd County and the Kentucky State Police... to operate an E-911 (service) for Floyd County with regional participation of other coun-

Lack of lawyer lands man in jail

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County Circuit Judge John David Caudill rescinded the bond of a Floyd County man and ordered him jailed Thursday morning because the defendant was not ready for trial.

Luther Johnson, 57, of Prestonsburg, was to be tried Thursday on a charge of theft by unlawful taking for allegedly snatching a bank deposit from the counter at First Commonwealth Bank last year.

Johnson appeared before Judge Caudill Thursday morning to explain to the judge why he did not have an attorney.

Judge Caudill read from the court record that Johnson's former attorney, Jerry Patton, asked to withdraw from the case last September. At that time, Johnson was given 30 days to find another attorney to represent him

Martin to revamp flag-waving event

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Martin City Council wants to revamp the town's annual Red, White & Blue Day celebration to involve more people and organizations from around the county.

At Wednesday's city council meeting, Mayor Raymond Griffith announced that council needed to appoint 12 members to the Red, White & Blue committee because the terms of board members had expired.

Council has become concerned about the lack of participation in the annual event and officials want to emphasize that it is a county event, not just for the city of Martin.

Council agreed to contact other community leaders and veteran's organizations outside the city in an effort to boost attendance and participation in the event. The celebration is held in October.

ties and cities..."

Kentucky State Police captain Robert Forsythe, who heads the Pikeville post, said Thursday that officials "are close" to signing an agreement to operate the service and that he "expects no problems" with getting the agreement approved.

In February 1993, the fiscal court authorized County Attorney Jim Hammond to negotiate an agreement with the state police to operate the service for Floyd and Martin counties.

Forsythe said in the January 20 court meeting that Martin County no longer wanted to be included in that agreement.

Carlos Cassidy, Martin County's director of Disaster and Emergency Services, said Thursday that Martin County backed out of the agreement for economic reasons.

In the original plan, Cassidy explained, Floyd, Martin and Pike counties were to share the expenses for the service, which was to be operated by the Kentucky State Police. Former Pike County Judge-Executive Wayne Rutherford decided to withdraw from the agreement with the state police.

When that happened, Cassidy said, it was economically devastating to Floyd and Martin counties. After that, the two counties could not come up with "good, workable" cost estimates to operate the system.

Martin County plans to go on line with basic 911 service in mid-February, Cassidy said, and will continue to work toward having an E-911 system if the county can afford it.

Cassidy added that with Floyd County's amount of revenue collected for 911 service—about $750,000—the county should be able to operate the system on its own. He added that the county could make as much as $50,000 a year in interest on the 911 funds that have already been collected.

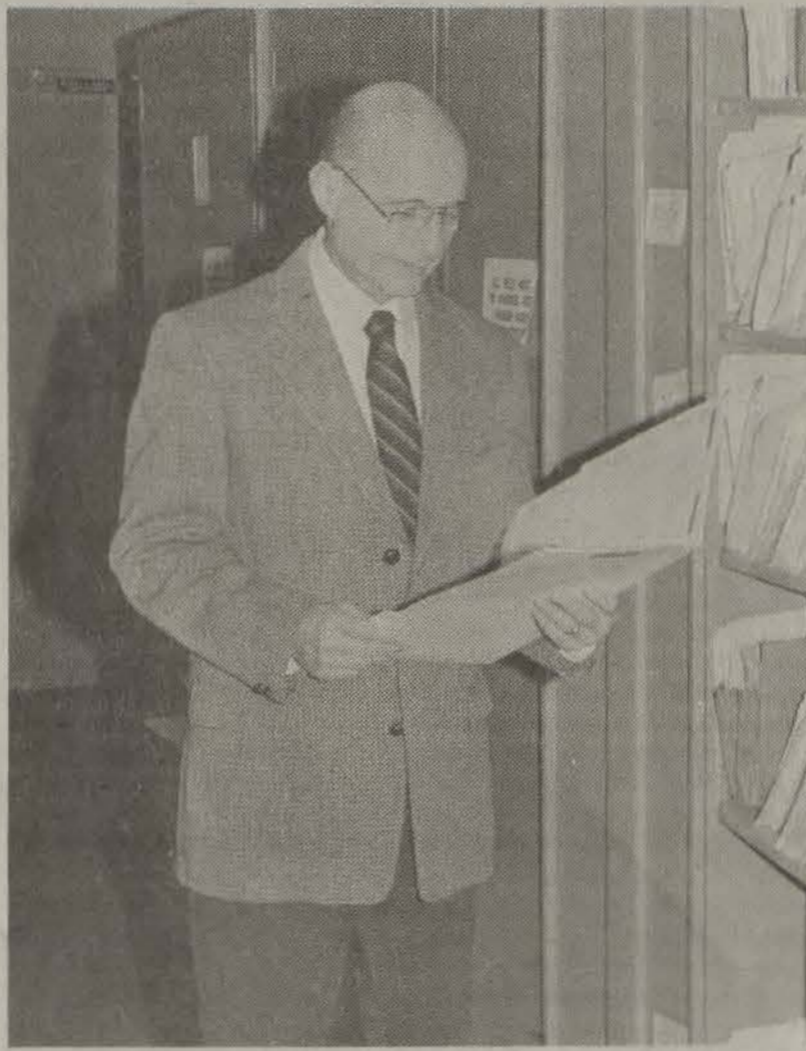

Floyd County's 911 funds are not placed in an interest bearing bank account. That money is deposited into the county's general fund account.

Issues that should be considered when making the decision where to locate the system are the number of jobs which would be created in the county and the amount of control local officials would have over the system, Cassidy said.

"We want to do it ourselves just because of creating jobs in our own county," Cassidy said. "Plus, when you go with the state police, you give up control. You lose something when the magistrates or the county judge doesn't have their hands on it."

Cassidy also said that the only way some of the smaller counties could afford to have the system operational would be to contract with

Residents asked to rely on state police

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

It's too early to tell what effects cutbacks at the Floyd County Sheriff's Office will have on the crime rate in the county, but come this weekend residents are going to rely more on assistance from the Kentucky State Police.

Sheriff's department office manager Chuck Hall said Thursday that there will be minimal patrols throughout the county this weekend and residents are asked to call the state police with their complaints.

With the announcement of the cutbacks on Friday came a slew of offers from volunteers, but the department can only accept free help to answer the office phones and for dispatching.

"Because of the liability issue, only trained deputies are allowed to be out on patrols," Hall said Thursday. "No one without that training can be allowed out on the road to patrol."

At Friday's Floyd Fiscal Court meeting, Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson told the court that because the property tax bills are late, he needed a $115,000 loan in order to pay back the state Finance Department so that he can obtain another loan.

Because the sheriff's department operates as a fee office and operates on a calendar year basis, each January the department must begin the year with a zero bank balance. Every year, the sheriff's department obtains a loan from the finance department for operating expenses until tax collections begin coming in. The loan is paid back with proceeds from tax collections.

Usually, the tax collections begin

One candidate for judge with deadline looming

With the January 31 filing deadline fast approaching, so far only one candidate has shown an interest in Floyd County's one seat on the ballot.

Newly-appointed Floyd District Judge James R. Allen has filed to retain that seat to fill the unexpired term of Danny P. Caudill.

Caudill was elected as Division I

Circuit Judge last November and has four years remaining in that term.

Allen, who was the only one to apply for the post, was appointed as district judge in December.

Since the office of district judge is a state office, candidates must file with the Secretary of State's office in Frankfort. The filing deadline is at 4 p.m. January 31.

Appalred may be hard hit by budget cuts

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

When the U. S. House of Representatives passes a fiscal 1996 budget outline, it could have serious consequences in courtrooms for low-income residents in Floyd County.

The Appropriations Committee had planned to hold hearings this month in Washington, D.C. to consider what programs to eliminate from the budget. One of those programs could be civil legal services, including the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund (Appalred).

In December, Illinois's U. S. House Representative Henry Hyde, who heads the House Judiciary Committee, said he would try to abolish the Legal Services Corporation.

If that happens, 37 Eastern Kentucky counties, including Floyd, could lose the legal services offered by Appalred, a federally funded legal services program, and that means approximately 500 clients served by the agency yearly could be without legal representation.

Attorneys in the area charge between $75-$100 per hour, John Rosenberg, director of Appalred, estimated. In New York, attorneys charge around $500 per hour, he said.

"(Low-income people who need attorneys) would have to do without. They would have to borrow money to hire an attorney," Rosenberg said. "There might be a few attorneys like we have on our panel who would handle the cases... You can't expect members of the private bar to pick up the cases."

"Time is money. If they spent the day (on cases) with people who had no money, they would have no income. They can't do that," he explained.

Rosenberg said that the government "ought to give people the right to representation."

As an example of the help legal aid services offer to low-income people, he discussed the case of an elderly couple Appalred attorneys had represented in court. The couple had

Ouster may be quashed

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

It could be today (Friday) when state lawmakers pass a bill that will prevent the ouster of county officials who have not properly filed performance bonds and that would be good news for two Floyd County officials.

Joe Lilly, press secretary for Governor Brereton Jones, said Thursday that a bill aimed at preventing the ouster of dozens of county officials have been approved by the Senate and is expected to be voted on by the House of Representatives today.

Although there are no major changes expected to be made in the bill, Lilly said that some minor revi-

Judges form divorce clinic for couples

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Parents filing for divorce will soon be attending a court-ordered Parent Education Clinic to help them resolve conflict, especially where their children are concerned.

In about a month the circuit court programs in Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Lawrence counties will be implementing the clinic to help counteract the negative emotional effects divorce can have on children. The clinic will also inform parents about legal and court procedures relating to divorce, and give guidance on handling conflicts concerning child support payments and visitation.

"Anyone filing for divorce will be required to participate," said Mickey McGuire, Floyd County commissioner of domestic relationships.

The centerpiece of the clinic will be an educational video for parents that presents methods of disarming potentially volatile domestic situations. Another vital component will be a moderator who will keep track of the program and guide discussion among participants.

"The video is used to generate discussion to help parents think of alternatives to aggression..." McGuire said. "In some cases this video will have no effect. We sincerely think the program will help some people, a good percentage of them."

The program was devised by Ohio State University. Fayette County adopted the program and developed the video about three years ago.

McGuire and Tom Hardin, domestic commissioner of Martin, Lawrence and Johnson counties, learned about the clinic program at a conference last fall. "Tom and I worked together on the idea (of a clinic in the area)," McGuire said. "We doubted there would be enough participants in one county to finan-purchased storm windows and aluminum siding for their home. The siding company billed the couple for $8,000. They took out a second mortgage on their home.

The couple's total income was $900 per month, Rosenberg said. They got behind in their payments and the company filed a foreclosure on the house.

The couple came to Appalred for help. Appalred lawyers discovered a number of mistakes in the contract the couple had signed and told the company they would file a counterclaim in court. The attorneys also explained to the company that it would wind up paying court costs and legal fees.

The company settled. The company kept $1,800 that the couple had already paid on the project, but Appalred's clients kept their house and the mortgage was dissolved.

"No private attorney would have done that for zero (fees)," Rosenberg said.

He quoted the late Judge Learned Hand, a federal appeals judge: "Thou shalt not ration justice," and the motto of the Supreme Court: "Equal Justice under law."

"We've already rationed justice and we would deprive people of representation," he said.

Most of the cases handled by Appalred are family law cases. Rosenberg estimated that about 40 percent of its cases involve family law and about 35 percent of the work is in disability law.

Appalred attorneys also serve clients in the areas of eviction defenses, consumer law cases and in coal-related areas.

Recently Appalred director Rosenberg won a case that went to the Kentucky Supreme Court on an issue that could have seriously impacted the Broad Form Deed Constitutional Amendment, which Appalred's attorneys had drafted.

Even though the service has expanded since its beginning in 1970 as part of a two-state program which operated out of Charleston, West Virginia, Appalred has often faced financial insecurities under the administrations of various presidents.

During the administration of President Richard M. Nixon, who established legislation to create the Legal Services Corporation which distributes funds from Congress to programs such as Appalred, Appalred was in peril of being abolished through efforts to defund the Legal Services Corporation by Nixon's director of the Office of Economic Opportunity. Legal action threatened by the two-state program stopped the defunding attempt. Due to those actions, the two-state program split and Appalred in Kentucky was incorporated.

In 1981, President Reagan proposed a zero budget for the legal services, but strong support helped the program "weather the storm." Funding for the Legal Services Corporation was reduced by 25 percent, though.

During the next 12 years, funding has remained the same, though costs of defending clients increased. Appalred's attorney staff dwindled from 48 to 23.

In 1994, under the administration of President Bill Clinton, the financial picture changed. Finally, legal services received a major increase in funding, its first since its inception.

Less than a year later, the financial picture is bleak again.

A representative of Congressman Hal Rogers office said Thursday, it's too soon to know if the legal services corporation will receive zero funding again, but that Rogers had supported the legal aid agencies in the past.

"(The problem is) it's not authorized and that makes it a visible target. For years, Congressman Rogers has pushed to have an authorization," Rogers' spokesperson said. "Nobody knows what's going to happen. A lot of things are being looked at. Everything is going to be considered."

Rosenberg said that the funding is the "smallest amount of the budget." Even though he isn't ready to be optimistic, Rosenberg said that "when the smoke clears, (Appalred) is going to be here."

"One way or another, we will be able to pull through," he said.

in November and the sheriff's office repays the loan by the beginning of January. This year, tax bills aren't expected to be mailed until mid-March because of a state mandated reassessment of all properties in the county.

The court told the sheriff the budget would be looked at to see if the funds were available, but magistrates complained about their own financial woes throughout Friday's meeting.

County treasurer David Allen said Thursday that "we are still looking" for funds for the sheriff's department.

The delay in collecting property tax revenues has not only put the sheriff's department in a financial pinch, but it is also affecting county government; the school system; and city coffers.

Sheriff Thompson said Thursday that he is still looking for funding from other areas.

"I'm still looking for money," Thompson said. "I have eliminated my own salary at the present time. I don't know when (the office will be back to full staff)."

On Friday, 10 sheriff department employees were laid off and only enough personnel was retained to perform the mandatory duties, such as courtroom security and to serve court process papers. The department's D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer is continuing to teach the program in the county school system.

With only one deputy on night patrol in the county, it is virtually impossible to answer citizen complaints, Hall said.

"Our night deputy will only answer extreme emergency complaints," Hall said. "With it being the middle of the month, instead of the first of the month, it has really helped. The weather has also helped (keep down the number of complaints)."

Kentucky State Police Post Nine Captain Robert Forsythe said Thursday that there is no noticeable increase in the number of complaints the department has received since the cutback, but he stressed that it has been an "exceptionally quiet month."

The cutback also affects the cities of Martin, Wayland, Allen and Wheelwright, which rely on the sheriff's department for dispatching services.

the state police.

If Floyd County operates their own system, Cassidy said, Martin County officials may be interested in joining in on the operation.

In May 1993, the court authorized the judge-executive to sign a proposed inter-local agreement with the state police to operate the 911 service, but that agreement was never executed.

Stumbo could not be reached Thursday to comment on the issue.

sions could be made and the bill could go back before the Senate for approval by this afternoon.

Floyd County Commonwealth Attorney John Earl Hunt is seeking the ouster of Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo and County Court Clerk Carla Boyd, claiming they failed to properly file performance bonds before taking office.

A February 3 hearing date was set in Boyd's case and Stumbo's hearing is set for February 10. But if state lawmakers pass the bill, the issue would become moot.

If the bill is approved by the Senate and the House, it will become law when signed by Governor Jones.

The governor added the performance bond issue to the special legislative session in order to prevent the ouster of over half of the state's judge-executives.

Lilly said Thursday that the bill before the legislature would not apply to any public officials who have already been ousted.

Breathitt County Judge-Executive Nim Henson and Powell County Court Clerk Sherry Bowen have been removed from office for not properly filing performance bonds.

Sturgill celebrates centennial birthday

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Arthur "Red" Sturgill has a century worth of memories about life in the Big Sandy Valley. For instance, he was seven years old when he witnessed the first passenger train coming through the valley in 1902.

"My mother brought me and my sister to the Middle Creek bottom to see the passenger train," he said. "It had about fifteen coaches...everybody was hollering and screaming" in excitement.

Sturgill can recall the days when barges were a means of transporting goods.

"Men would take a barge 100 feet or larger and push it from alongside the creek banks from Catlettsburg to Elkhorn City," he said. "That's how we got things up here in the 1800s."

He has clear memories of the steamboats that traveled up and down the Big Sandy River at the turn of the century. "There was a steamboat named L.A. Hatcher, named for a merchant, and Little Cricket," he recalled. "I could tell which one was which by their whistle blows."

When Sturgill was a young man, he and some friends saw the first automobile in Prestonsburg. "Old man Vance bought a T Model Ford," he said. "It came along off a hill. We ran after it, Boy, that thing could go fast."

Sturgill, a resident of Mountain Manor Nursing Home in Prestonsburg since 1993, turns a hundred years old tomorrow. Despite being almost blind and deaf, he gets around well, and has no other health problems. He credits his long, healthy life to taking care of himself. "Take care of yourself by clean and holy living, and God will take care of you," he declared during an interview Monday.

Ironically, when the centenarian was in his twenties, he was advised to change professions if he wanted to live a normal life span. "I worked in the mines, at Middle Creek Coal Company, when I was eleven years old," he said. "I stayed there until I was 17."

Sturgill moved on to coal companies at Auxier and Marrowbone where he worked inside the mines cutting coal. "I worked so much that I lost weight—from 175 pounds down to 125," he said.

The coal miner's doctor advised him to get out of the mines if he wanted to live. He heeded his

physician's advice, although "I didn't know what else to do but mining," he explained. "I started digging ditches, anything."

A man named George Salyers recognized the young man's willingness to work and gave him a job painting houses at Trimble Branch in Prestonsburg. His next job was painting the houses of the Van Lear coal camp in Johnson County. Sturgill retired from his profession as a house painter at the age of 66.

Sturgill was born at Jim Hill Branch on Abbott Creek on January 28, 1895. When he was a child, his family moved to Prestonsburg. Favorite childhood pastimes in the first decades of the century were baseball, stickball, and marbles.

"Growing up, marbles was a great game. And we played stick ball. I've got a place on the back of my head where I was hit by a ball," he said, touching the spot on his head.

In 1921, Sturgill married Anna Mae Craft of Prestonsburg. "She was a pretty girl and had a nice personality that I liked," he said. Ann, who died in 1981, and Sturgill had seven children. Five are still living. He has six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Sturgill, known by his nickname "Red" because that was the color of his hair in his younger days, said he had a red-hot temper to match. "I was high tempered," he confessed. "I guess I had more fights than any man in Floyd County."

Over the years, Red's temper mellowed. His favorite activities before he became a resident of the nursing home were going to the Prestonsburg Senior Citizens Center and to Highland Avenue Free Will Baptist Church where he is a member.

Sturgill's children are having a birthday party for him at the nursing home today at 2 p.m. Sturgill's friends and relatives are invited to the centennial celebration.

Public meetings planned to discuss ways to manage and conserve biodiversity

If you're a farmer, landowner, angler, hunter, bird watcher, naturalist or just interested in the plants, wildlife and their habitats in Floyd County, you'll want to plan to participate in a meeting planned February 20 to discuss biological diversity.

The meeting, one of several to be held throughout Kentucky in February and March, will be held at the Big Sandy Area Development District Office in Prestonsburg, beginning at 7 p.m.

The meetings are being held by the Biodiversity Task Force to gather information from Kentuckians on the best ways to manage and conserve the biological diversity in Kentucky. The task force was appointed by Gov. Brereton Jones last year. He asked the 32-member group to look at Kentucky's plants, wildlife and their habitats and report to him about what is affecting the commonwealth's biodiversity and what species are in significant decline or need special attention. He also asked that the task force's report contain recommendations on how government agencies, universities and private organizations can improve coordination of their biodiversity programs and how to better educate the public on biodiversity issues.

The task force is hoping to meet with many Kentuckians and to gather information that will help it develop a strategy for sustaining and protecting local, regional and statewide biodiversity.

Anyone who would like to comment on the areas the Biodiversity Task Force is exploring but will be unable to attend one of the meetings can submit those comments by sending them to the Biodiversity Task Force, Department for Natural Resources, 107 Mero St., Frankfort, KY 40601.

If an interpreter or other auxiliary aid or service is needed, contact Bobbie Benson at 502/564-2184 two days prior to a meeting.

Free mine safety seminars aim to help truck drivers stay safe

The Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) in cooperation with the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals will hold seminars focusing on truck safety at two Eastern Kentucky locations.

Operators of mine trucks—including contract truck drivers—and other mine personnel with responsibilities for haulage safety are strongly encouraged to attend.

The all-day truck safety seminars will take place:

—Saturday, January 28, starting at 9:00 a.m., at Jenny Wiley State Park Convention Center, near Prestonsburg; and —Saturday, February 4, starting at 8:30 a.m., at Pine Mountain State Park, near Pineville.

The seminars will provide information on braking systems, pre-operation checks, haul road design, berms, communication, and other steps to avoid accidents.

Sturgill celebrates centennial birthday

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Arthur "Red" Sturgill has a century worth of memories about life in the Big Sandy Valley. For instance, he was seven years old when he witnessed the first passenger train coming through the valley in 1902.

"My mother brought me and my sister to the Middle Creek bottom to see the passenger train," he said. "It had about fifteen coaches...everybody was hollering and screaming" in excitement.

Sturgill can recall the days when barges were a means of transporting goods.

"Men would take a barge 100 feet or larger and push it from alongside the creek banks from Catlettsburg to Elkhorn City," he said. "That's how we got things up here in the 1800s."

He has clear memories of the steamboats that traveled up and down the Big Sandy River at the turn of the century. "There was a steamboat named L.A. Hatcher, named for a merchant, and Little Cricket," he recalled. "I could tell which one was which by their whistle blows."

When Sturgill was a young man, he and some friends saw the first automobile in Prestonsburg. "Old man Vance bought a T Model Ford," he said. "It came along off a hill. We ran after it, Boy, that thing could go fast."

Sturgill, a resident of Mountain Manor Nursing Home in Prestonsburg since 1993, turns a hundred years old tomorrow. Despite being almost blind and deaf, he gets around well, and has no other health problems. He credits his long, healthy life to taking care of himself. "Take care of yourself by clean and holy living, and God will take care of you," he declared during an interview Monday.

Ironically, when the centenarian was in his twenties, he was advised to change professions if he wanted to live a normal life span. "I worked in the mines, at Middle Creek Coal Company, when I was eleven years old," he said. "I stayed there until I was 17."

Sturgill moved on to coal companies at Auxier and Marrowbone where he worked inside the mines cutting coal. "I worked so much that I lost weight—from 175 pounds down to 125," he said.

The coal miner's doctor advised him to get out of the mines if he wanted to live. He heeded his

physician's advice, although "I didn't know what else to do but mining," he explained. "I started digging ditches, anything."

A man named George Salyers recognized the young man's willingness to work and gave him a job painting houses at Trimble Branch in Prestonsburg. His next job was painting the houses of the Van Lear coal camp in Johnson County. Sturgill retired from his profession as a house painter at the age of 66.

Sturgill was born at Jim Hill Branch on Abbott Creek on January 28, 1895. When he was a child, his family moved to Prestonsburg. Favorite childhood pastimes in the first decades of the century were baseball, stickball, and marbles.

"Growing up, marbles was a great game. And we played stick ball. I've got a place on the back of my head where I was hit by a ball," he said, touching the spot on his head.

In 1921, Sturgill married Anna Mae Craft of Prestonsburg. "She was a pretty girl and had a nice personality that I liked," he said. Ann, who died in 1981, and Sturgill had seven children. Five are still living. He has six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Sturgill, known by his nickname "Red" because that was the color of his hair in his younger days, said he had a red-hot temper to match. "I was high tempered," he confessed. "I guess I had more fights than any man in Floyd County."

Over the years, Red's temper mellowed. His favorite activities before he became a resident of the nursing home were going to the Prestonsburg Senior Citizens Center and to Highland Avenue Free Will Baptist Church where he is a member.

Sturgill's children are having a birthday party for him at the nursing home today at 2 p.m. Sturgill's friends and relatives are invited to the centennial celebration.

Public meetings planned to discuss ways to manage and conserve biodiversity

If you're a farmer, landowner, angler, hunter, bird watcher, naturalist or just interested in the plants, wildlife and their habitats in Floyd County, you'll want to plan to participate in a meeting planned February 20 to discuss biological diversity.

The meeting, one of several to be held throughout Kentucky in February and March, will be held at the Big Sandy Area Development District Office in Prestonsburg, beginning at 7 p.m.

The meetings are being held by the Biodiversity Task Force to gather information from Kentuckians on the best ways to manage and conserve the biological diversity in Kentucky. The task force was appointed by Gov. Brereton Jones last year. He asked the 32-member group to look at Kentucky's plants, wildlife and their habitats and report to him about what is affecting the commonwealth's biodiversity and what species are in significant decline or need special attention. He also asked that the task force's report contain recommendations on how government agencies, universities and private organizations can improve coordination of their biodiversity programs and how to better educate the public on biodiversity issues.

The task force is hoping to meet with many Kentuckians and to gather information that will help it develop a strategy for sustaining and protecting local, regional and statewide biodiversity.

Anyone who would like to comment on the areas the Biodiversity Task Force is exploring but will be unable to attend one of the meetings can submit those comments by sending them to the Biodiversity Task Force, Department for Natural Resources, 107 Mero St., Frankfort, KY 40601.

If an interpreter or other auxiliary aid or service is needed, contact Bobbie Benson at 502/564-2184 two days prior to a meeting.

Searching for the middle

In his State of the Union speech, President Clinton may have sounded "pretty Republican" to New Jersey Gov. Christine Todd Whitman and others in her party.

In fact, he was restating some of the moderate, "New Democrat" positions that helped get him elected—and that might have spared him some painful setbacks if he had not veered off in directions seen by many as a replay of the "liberal," big government past.

But reality is sobering. And it was clearly a chastened President who faced a Congress packed with Republicans committed to dismantle what his party put together over decades.

To say that it's a long way back to the heady days of early 1992—when, as he reminded the lawmakers, he was the revolutionary—is to understate his dilemma. When editors had to debate whether to give greater news prominence to his speech, or to the latest events in O.J.-land, his administration is clearly teetering on the brink of irrelevance.

Still, he managed to articulate a Democratic alternative, one that differs in emphasis if not so much in its objectives from the sterile Republican litany of "cut taxes, shrink government."

Unlike his antagonists, he puts programs in the context of a government role in advancing fairness and in helping families and individuals who make an effort in their own behalf. No politician explains better than he the theoretical basis for reform of social programs—the necessity of a closer balance between the public's obligation to help and its right to expect citizens to make responsible choices. If his critics seem content to abandon the poor, Mr. Clinton conveys a public interest in helping folks move beyond dependency.

Yes, he jumped on the tax-cut bandwagon. But instead of asking that those who already have been allowed to keep more, he links middle-class cuts to education and training opportunities.

His call for a minimum wage increase was equivalent to Ronald Reagan's routine appeal for school prayer: Nobody takes it seriously.

But Mr. Clinton was at his best when, in the face of hostile Republicans, he promised to resist the repeal of a ban on killer guns. And he gave his foes a deserved tweek when he suggested they reject lobbyists' gifts, even if they can't bring themselves to ban them.

Most TV viewers will agree that Mr. Clinton has his critics beat in the personality department. He'll need all the charm he can conjure up to persuade voters he can lead his party toward the middle without becoming a Republican echo.—The Courier-Journal

'Dollars for dummies' program eyed

by Kenneth Eskey

Scripps Howard News Service
Newt Gingrich and his fellow Republicans have been accused of many things—not the least of which is that they don't understand poverty, don't give a hoot for the poor, don't like children and need a refresher course in compassion.

It should come as no surprise, then, that Speaker Gingrich and other House Republicans are determined to make major changes in a federal program that awards $4.4 billion a year to poor families with disabled and retarded children.

The program, Supplemental Security Income for children, is meant to ease the financial burden on parents by providing cash grants of up to $466 a month to children with disabilities of one kind or another.

Trouble is, this program, like most others with altruistic aims, has become a target of opportunity for unscrupulous adults who find ways to work the system, using their children as pawns.

In states such as Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, the percentage of families qualifying for such aid has been running at twice the national average, an indication that some parents may be coaching their children to act retarded in exchange for what critics call "crazy checks" and "dummy dollars."

The Social Security Administration, which oversees the program, says there is "little evidence" that playing dumb is widespread, but some educators are not so sure.

"It's very prevalent here in Perry County," says one Alabama principal. "Some of the children have said it themselves, telling me their parents tell them to act a fool."

The complaints are serious enough that Congress has ordered Donna Shalala, secretary of Health and Human Services, to appoint a commission to study the situation and report back this summer.

As often happens when money is available, the number of children receiving disability benefits has mushroomed from 296,000 in 1989 to 847,000 in 1994. Most of these requests for federal aid are no doubt legitimate, but anecdotes about abuse are so common that Republicans have good reason to seek tighter controls.

One possibility is to convert the cash payment into vouchers that can be used only for specified purposes. Another is to disburse money from trust funds monitored by probate judges.

Politically, this may be seen as an attack on child welfare by cold-blooded conservatives using a few isolated horror stories to discredit an entire effort. But it's the horror stories that destroy public faith in government programs.

Aid to families with dependent children might be more popular if it weren't for the image of poor, unmarried women watching soap operas all day, having one child after another with no visible means of support.

That may be an unfair caricature of welfare moms, but it's a caricature that doesn't sit well with people who go to work every day.

The danger of rewarding families for having children who do poorly in school is that doing poorly will become a reward in itself. Worse yet, it gives teachers an excuse to label every slow or disruptive child as retarded, assigning students to "special education" classes that may be nothing more than dumping grounds for the difficult.

So why not take a look at where the money for disabled children is going and why. You don't have to be a conservative to ask questions when billions of taxpayer dollars are at risk.

What others are saying

The following articles are excerpts of editorials taken from Kentucky newspapers

More battered children

Nearly 25,000 children in Kentucky were abused and neglected last year. Twenty-nine of them died, compared to 20 the previous year.

In the vast majority of cases, parents or stepparents were the abusers.

Life deals some children the miserable fate of living in households with indifferent or depraved brutes.

Often, however, abusive and neglectful parents actually love their children. Their problem is that they can't cope. So they lash out.

Their frustrations often are fueled by the fear, real or imagined, that they're not able to provide their little ones the physical, material or emotional support they need to grow into happy, healthy and sane adults.

Those now screaming for an end to government-funded programs that help troubled children and parents must be awfully careful that their rage against "big government" doesn't end up doing its greatest harm, not to government, but to people already living on the edge.

Winning the war against child abuse and neglect, however, takes more than money.

Victory also requires us as individuals not to ignore the screams next door; not to look past possible signs of abuse, and not to hesitate in reporting reasonable suspicions to appropriate agencies.

It also means finding the strength to encourage potential abusers to seek help. Maybe it means actually staying with the person while he or she makes the call and transporting them to help.

The statistics remind us that child abuse is a persistent problem that we have only begun to confront.—The Courier-Journal

Court orders to protect women poorly enforced in some areas

Emergency protective orders meant to protect women from violence are often poorly enforced in some rural areas of Kentucky, according to statistics presented to a legislative task force.

The group was told that in 26 counties, more than half of the protective orders were never served or were improperly recorded.

Kentucky State Police Capt. Neal Brittain, a task-force member, said the effect is that officers could not quickly determine that they should arrest someone for violating a protective order.

Members of the task force on domestic violence expressed shock Tuesday when presented with a county-by-county breakdown.

In some cases, sheriffs are not serving protective orders issued by judges who have determined that a woman is in danger. In other cases, the orders are being served but that information never makes it into the statewide law-enforcement computer network, known as LINK.

The worst records were reported in Knott, Leslie and Powell counties where more than 90 percent of the orders either were not served or not properly reported to the computer network.

Brittain pointed to Knox County as an example of a place where just one day of training for local officials dramatically improved protection for battered women.

Knox County had been among the worst. Eighty-three percent of protective orders apparently were not served in 1993. Then District Judge John Knox Mills and Barbourville Police Chief Bob Combs arranged for three state experts to come to Barbourville to train all local personnel—court clerks, deputies, social workers—who are responsible for making the system work.

The one-day of training was last May, and recent figures demonstrate the effect. In the first five months of the current fiscal year, which began July 1, the failure rate in Knox County was 18 percent.

(The failure rate for serving emergency protective orders in Floyd County was 70-79 percent.)—The Courier-Journal

An outrage you can fix hold officials accountable for protective orders

In three counties—Knott, Leslie and Powell—the failure rate for serving emergency protective orders was more than 90 percent. In Knott County, at least, this figure seems to represent a failure to record the orders in the state's LINK computer system rather than a failure to serve the orders. But no matter where the system is breaking down, a high failure rate means that women are not getting the full protection of the law. That's an outrage in a civilized society. And things don't have to be that way, as the experience of Knox County shows.

In 1993, Knox County was one of the worst places in the state at serving protective orders. That year, it had a failure rate of 83 percent.

Then District Judge John Knox Mills and Barbourville Police Chief Bob Combs decided to do something about the situation. They brought in state experts last May for a one-day training session for all the local people involved in serving and recording protective orders. Since then, Knox County's failure rate has dropped to 18 percent.

Pick up your phone and call your local sheriff, your district judges, your court clerks, your county judge-executive, your local mayor and your legislators, and tell them you want to see women in your county given the full protection of the law. If they say they don't know what to do, tell them to call state Justice Secretary Paul Isaacs at (502) 564-7554. His office can help them arrange training on serving, recording and enforcing protective orders.

There are laws on the books that can help protect battered women in Kentucky. Your county can do a better job of enforcing those laws. And your county officials will do a better job if they know you're holding them accountable. Pick up the phone today and let them know you're paying attention.—Lexington Herald-Leader on the charge.

On Thursday, Judge Caudill asked Johnson why he had not retained other counsel to defend him on the theft charge.

Johnson told the judge that he had been receiving outpatient care from a hospital and that he was scheduled for surgery Monday at a veteran's hospital in Huntington, West Virginia.

That excuse did not sit well with the judge.

"Mr. Johnson, this is not a joke," Judge Caudill said.

"I'll get an attorney," Johnson told the judge.

Judge Caudill said he would make sure Johnson "had the time" to find someone to represent him and then ordered that Johnson's $5,000 bond be rescinded. Judge Caudill told bailiff Elmo Allen to take Johnson into custody and to deliver him to the Floyd County Jail.

Johnson was removed from the courtroom and lodged in the Floyd County Jail.

Johnson was indicted last year by a Floyd County Grand Jury for theft by unlawful taking for allegedly taking $2,600 from First Commonwealth Bank. Johnson allegedly distracted a teller and took the money from the bank counter in May 1994.

cially support the program. Tom and I devised a program in all four circuit programs in Johnson, Lawrence, Martin and Floyd, that would be held possibly once a month."

Monday night, members of the circuit court programs in the four counties held an organizational meeting at the lodge at Jenny Wiley State Park to discuss the parent clinic program and to view the video. Also present was Jonathan Shontz, director of the Kentucky Bar Foundation, who presented an oversized $1,000 check to the group. The check represented a $1,000 grant from the foundation for the startup costs of the program.

"Three years ago we funded a portion of the Fayette County program," Shontz said. "Being more of a granting organization, we couldn't put the program on ourselves so we decided to give seed money for the video and moderator training.

"This is the first program we've been able to get up and running," he added. "We are excited. We plan to get 10 to 11 clinic programs started this year."

Shontz said that most programs charge $5 for each parent to attend (to cover the cost of material). If a parent can't pay the $5, the fee is usually waived. Contributions from the local bar association could also help cover costs, he said.

Garbage dumpers beware!

Samuel F. Tackett learned the hard way that dumping trash in Johnson County is illegal.

In November, Tackett was caught by a state police trooper dumping trash from the bed of his pickup truck on Lick Creek Road at Whitehouse. He was charged with criminal littering.

Tackett, who lives at Whitehouse, found no mercy in Johnson District Court. According to court records, he pleaded guilty January 4 to the littering charge, was fined $100 and sentenced to 30 days in jail.

County Attorney Scott Preston recommended that the sentence be probated on the condition that Tackett clean up the area he trashed and dispose of the garbage in a legal dumping site.

He is to report back to court February 2 and show proof that he legally dumped the trash.—Paintsville Herald

Pennington trial begins next week

Court officials are preparing for what is expected to be one of the biggest murder cases ever to be tried in Johnson Circuit Court—the double murder trial of 18-year-old Scott Pennington.

The high-profile case, moved to Johnson from Morgan County last August, is scheduled to begin next Wednesday, February 1, with jury selection.

Special Judge Samuel Long was in Johnson County last week as part of his preparations for the trial.

Johnson Circuit Court Clerk Vicki Rice said Long inspected the circuit courtroom and witness room last Thursday to determine how much space will be needed for the trial.

Rice said she did not know how long it would take to select a jury. Fifty jurors will be called each day until a final panel is seated, she said, adding that her office is prepared to call as many as 300 potential jurors if needed.

The trial could last as long as six to eight weeks, depending how many witnesses are called to testify. About 100 witnesses were scheduled to testify for the prosecution and 30 for the defense before the case was moved from Morgan County, Rice said.—Paintsville Herald

Babbage discusses jury selection

"Floyd Countians who wish to avoid being chosen for jury duty should burn their drivers' licenses," Secretary of State Bob Babbage said recently.

Babbage said his remarks were to get the attention of eligible but unregistered voters who were unaware that the General Assembly in 1990 had amended laws for jury selection to include licensed drivers as well as registered voters.

"For years people would say they declined to register to vote because they preferred to avoid jury duty," Babbage said.

Citizens now have the option of registering to vote when they renew or obtain their driver's license, when they do business with public assistance agencies or when they visit military recruiting stations.

Babbage noted that during the first nine days the new voter registration law was operational over 1,000 persons per day registered to vote while doing business with the circuit clerk or public assistance agencies; 17,551 declined to register.

"If people are avoiding registration for concern about serving on jury, they are remembering things as they were, not as they are," Babbage said.

Now jurors are selected from a list of persons over the age of 18 with valid driver's licenses issued in the county and from a list of registered voters.

Words of life

Healthy family relationships by Dr. S. Thomas Valentine
Pastor, First Baptist Church, Prestonsburg

In some sense, we are all part of a family. Whether we are single, married with no children, married with children, or single parents, we are part of a family. The fact that today's family is much different from the family of thirty years ago does not change the fact that we have family connections somewhere. It is also true that all families, at some time, will to a certain extent face problems. No family is immune from the difficulties and the pressures which our society places upon us. The idea families that are portrayed on television and in movies seldom exist in a real world.

Few of us would deny, though, that we wish our family relationships were a more vital part of our lives. It would be wonderful if we could say that we relate well to our husband or wife, our young children or our teenagers. Yet, an honest look at family life today suggests that healthy family relationships are somewhat difficult to maintain. The Bible gives us some very practical suggestions for building healthy family relationships.

The story of Adam and Eve and their children (Genesis 3 and 4) is a story of a family struggling with their relationships to one another and to God. Adam and Eve are the ones, you remember, who were thrown out of the Garden of Eden because of their disobedience. They are the ones whom we blame, justly or unjustly, for the plight of society today. The two had been instructed not to eat the fruit from a certain tree. But being human, they disobeyed this word from God and they ate of the fruit.

Immediately they realized what

THE SAGA OF FLOYD COLLINS

by Jadon Gibson

Floyd Collins had little energy after two days of pain and anguish from being injured and trapped in Sand Cave in 1925.

He complained of feeling numb and Homer Collins, Floyd's brother, noticed that he wasn't looking good at all.

"I'm awful cold, Homer," Floyd muttered. "I've got to warm up. Get me some whiskey. I'm freezing and this pain is unbearable."

Homer slowly crawled from the cave to fetch the whiskey for Floyd. Along the way he thought about the results of his eight hours of strenuous digging. He had freed Floyd's upper torso but his brother was no closer to being rescued. Homer was amazed at the huge crowd as he crawled out of the cave.

Others took the opportunity to enter the cave and exhorted Floyd to pull his foot free. He couldn't and every time he tried, it sent excruciating pain through his body.

"Why doesn't someone come down here and help me instead of just staying up their talking," Floyd said at one point. The narrow passageway prevented them from being able to be of much help however.

The desperation of those who were gathered outside the cave began to cause tension.

Floyd had told Homer to get him "good whiskey"—not moonshine, so Homer obtained a prescription for whiskey from a local druggist. But when he returned to the cave site a magistrate confiscated the bottle.

"You know likker's against the law, Homer," the lawman said. After heated words between the two, Homer reentered the dark cave to his brother's side. He found that nothing had been accomplished since he left and he began digging again in the cramped quarters. Homer stopped four hours later—exhausted.

When word came that Floyd was not any closer to being rescued, his brother Marshall, offered $500 to anyone who would go in and rescue Floyd. The crowd buzzed but no one stepped forward for what seemed like minutes.

Finally Clyde Hester stepped forward sealing the bargain with a handshake before entering the dark hole. He returned a short time later, saying, "Floyd's dead."

Marshall began to cry. Homer couldn't believe it since he had talked to Floyd a short time before. Several in the crowd began to pray as the magistrate asked for a volunteer to "double-check" Floyd's condition. Although the magistrate was the acting coroner, a volunteer was necessary because he couldn't negotiate the narrow passageway himself because of his size.

L.B. Hooper volunteered and as he neared Floyd's location he inquired, "Floyd, are you there?"

After a long hesitation, Floyd replied in a weak voice, "I'm hungry. Bring me something to eat."

Before departing Hooper asked, "Clyde Hester been in here?"

"Now, I ain't seen or heard from Clyde." As Hooper crawled from the cave he thought of Hester who minutes before had notified the growing crowd that Floyd was dead.

"Where's Hester," he yelled after taking a deep breath. "He's a liar. Floyd's still alive." Hester was nowhere to be found.

By Sunday evening many in the crowd openly drank from bottles of moonshine. Occasionally someone entered the cave but would soon exit. Rescue efforts had stalled. It was as if everyone was waiting for Floyd to die.

Floyd, numb and pained from the cold damp 54 degree temperature, also thought his life had come to an end as he began to fade in and out of dreams.

White angels came riding by in white chariots drawn by white horses.

"Take me, take me," he cried. "God, help me, oh God help me."

At this time his brother Homer arrived with liver and onion sandwiches, which was Floyd's favorite, and fresh milk.

"Oh, God, Homer," he cried. "Take me home to my bed."

Editor's note: Jadon will continue with the Floyd Collins Story next week in the Floyd County Times.

The Big Sandy Area Development District (ADD) is searching for the key to keep families secure.

The Big Sandy ADD is seeking community input at a meeting Friday, January 27 at 2 p.m. in Pike Auditorium at Prestonsburg Community College to help develop a five-year plan to provide services to families at risk or in a crisis.

Big Sandy ADD is working with the Kentucky Department of Social Services to ensure that local concerns are voiced about implementing the federal Family Preservation and Family Support Act in Kentucky. Focus groups made up of consumers, services providers, interested families and community leaders have been formed in each of the 15 Kentucky ADDs to discuss the federal act. This meeting will be targeted at local elected officials.

Any service need relating to parenting, child development, housing, money management, education, health, mental health, nutrition, or any other need of families or children is open for discussion.

The federal legislation seeks to help families stay intact, keep children safe in their homes and help families get needed services.

For more information about the meeting, contact Stephanie Marshall at 886-2374.

Appalachian committee to meet Monday

The consortium, a partnership between MSU and Pikeville College, has offered graduate work to students in the region since the mid-1970s. The advisory committee is composed of business and education leaders from the region.

Matt Baker enrolls at Allen Central; Brown at ALC

The 15th Region basketball world is buzzing over the transfer of Shelby Valley standout Matt Baker to Allen Central.

It has been confirmed that Baker, who was the Wildcats' leading scorer, did in fact enroll at Allen Central this past Monday.

While at the Betsy Layne/Prestonsburg game Tuesday night, Betsy Layne coach Keith Henry told me that the KHSAA phones were constantly ringing over the matter.

That's strange!
When someone at another school transfers, there is no dialing the KHSAA. I can think of several incidents that could have been worth a phone call.

If, and when, Baker becomes eligible to play basketball for Allen Central, you can rest assured that the 6'6" Baker will be a great addition to the Rebels.

The good news is that Marsha Brown, a Lady Rebel last year, enrolled at Alice Lloyd College where she received a scholarship after taking the ACT test.

Brown told me that she was working out.

"Coach Mills redshirted me this year and I have been working out with the team," she said. "I'm going start shooting about 300 three-pointers on my own each day and try to get back in shape."

Brown attended PCC while awaiting results of her ACT test.

Being red-shirted, Brown has four years of eligibility left. She will rejoin former teammate Staci Moore, who is burning the nets for the Lady Eagles.

Brown has been helping coach Bonita Compton with the Lady Rebels this year.

I'm hoping that Ashley Bartley is all healed up before the softball season begins. Ashley re-injured an old softball injury while cheering for the Betsy Layne Bobcats.

Ashley is a top-notch softball player and the Lady Cats will need her but this spring. Get better, Ashley.

The playing court at Betsy Layne sure looks good. The whole gym looks good. A lot of work has been put into the cleaning up the place and it definitely needed it.

Mike Adkins, Daryl Preston and the gang did a great job painting the Bobcat emblem on the floor. If only they could do something about the ceiling in the place. It's a mess.

A lot of work went into compiling of the All "A" Classic stats that were handed to the media at the boys' regional in Pikeville Wednesday night.

Jason Blanton, WSIP program director, put a lot of hours and effort in getting all the facts together.

"I enjoyed every bit of it," he told me. "It was a lot of work, but it was fun to do."

No one works as hard as Jason when it comes to preparing for a game.

My good buddy, Rick Bentley, who is Sports Editor at the News-Express in Pikeville, will be heading to Louisville Friday to accept a first-place award from the Kentucky Press Association.

The Floyd County Grade School Basketball Tournament gets underway Monday night at Betsy Layne's D.W. Howard Fieldhouse.

The tournament will be co-hosted this year by Auxier and Betsy Layne grade schools.

The tournament, due to other events at the gym, will run through February 18.

The county tournament is always a big event in Floyd County and I look forward to covering it this year. It should be a good one.

Let's rank them.
There are many good grade school teams in the county this season and some very promising young ball players. It would be fun just to see who are the top boys' teams.

1. Adams - a solid team.
2. Duff - top trio of players.
3. McDowell - strong coaching.
4. Martin - Mayo, Seward, Jones, Hall.
5. Stumbo - Hayes Hamilton is back.

6. Allen - a Jackie Crisp program
7. Osborne - Jarrod, top player
8. Betsy Layne - great coaching.
9. Maytown - Murphy, Owens
10. Harold - Young, promising.

Sheldon Clark will be the site of the boys' 15th Regional Basketball Tournament this season. The girls will play at Shelby Valley.

The folks at Sheldon Clark will do a great job hosting the tournament. Shelby Valley officials always put on a good show.

Jenkins scores 25 as Allen Central handles Raiders 84-63

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Sophomore Thomas Jenkins scored 22 points and senior Kevin Stumbo added 20 as the Allen Central Rebels won over the South Floyd Raiders 84-63 in the opening game of the All "A" Classic regional tournament at Pikeville Wednesday night.

It was the third time the two teams have faced each other this season. Allen Central has won all three meetings.

Ryan Hamilton led the scoring parade for South Floyd with 22 points. T.T. Pack was the other Raider in double figures with 12 points.

While the Rebels were winning over the Raiders, they came up losers when touted guard Jeremy Hall was whistled for two technical fouls in the game.

The two technicals carries an automatic one-game suspension and means that the hot-shooting guard will have to sit out Friday night's semifinal encounter with the Elkhorn City Cougars.

Hall received a technical foul at the start of the second quarter and again in the third period. Referee Sherman Combs called both technicals and coach Johnny Martin removed Hall from the game and he sat on the bench for the rest of the contest.

"I took him out of the game," said

Coach Martin. "He wasn't ejected by the officials."

Allen Central broke out of the gate hurriedly by scoring the first 10 points as South Floyd had problems in solving the full court pressure of the Rebels.

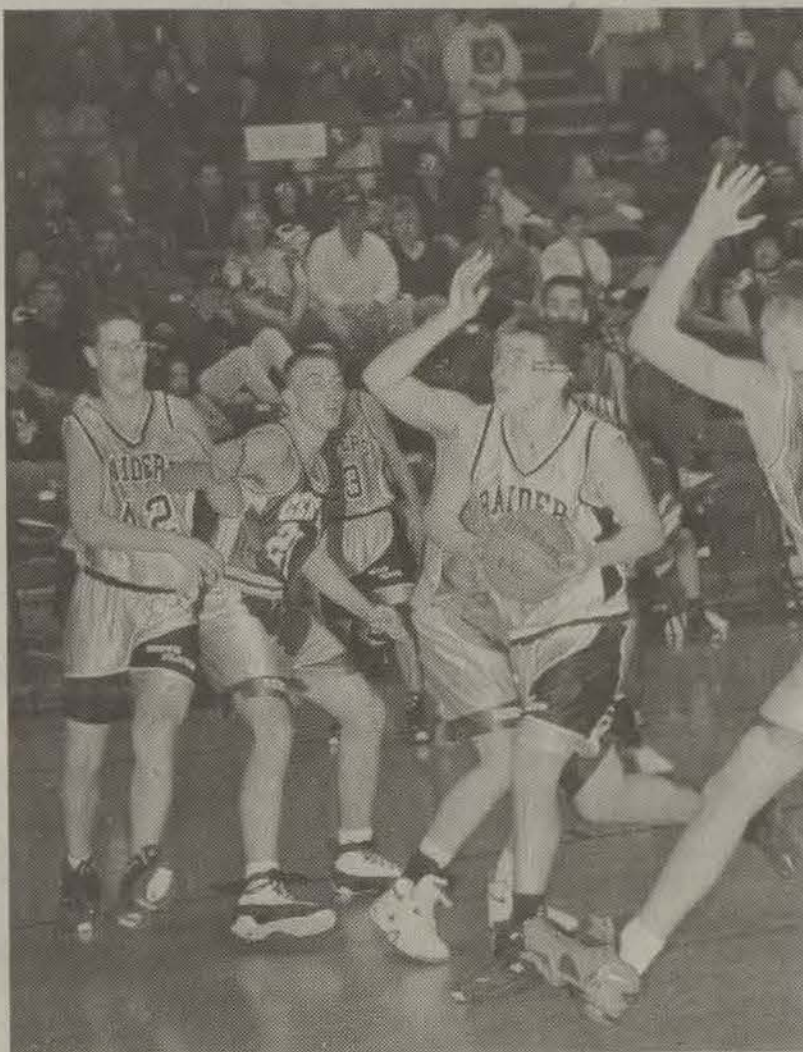

"Our press hurt them early," said Coach Martin. "But, we just made so

Prestonsburg falls at East Carter 52-49 in rag-tag basketball

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It wasn't very pretty and not the least satisfying for the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats when they dropped a close game to East Carter 52-49 last Tuesday night.

The game was very physical and the officials seemed to let the two teams play.

Jamie Ratcliff was the only Prestonsburg player who scored in double figures. She finished with 18 points, but 11 of those came in the fourth period. Ratcliff hit two treys.

April Newsome, who averages close to 20 points per game, had only seven points and no three-pointers. Prestonsburg center Heather Collins netted only four points in a low-scoring affair for her.

Kelli Hansel managed seven points while sophomore guard Crystal Layne totaled six. Jenna Fannin scored three points.

Ratcliff's two free throws late in the fourth quarter brought her team to within two points of the Lady Raiders, 46-44, but a field goal and two free throws by East Carter gave them a 50-44 lead.

Ratcliff hit a three-pointer as the clock ran down to make it 52-49.

The Lady Blackcats led 14-13 after the first quarter and took a 21-20 lead to the locker area at the half.

It was 6-0 at the onset with Ratcliff nailing a three-point basket and then completing a three-point play.

Hansel gave Prestonsburg a 12-6 lead with a basket, but a trey and field goal by Sexton and Perry cut the lead to 12-11.

Collins scored her only two points in the first period for a 14-11 Prestonsburg lead. Sexton kept the Lady Raiders close with a basket for a 14-13 first-quarter score.

The lead exchanged hands four times in the second quarter after being tied at 18. Both teams struggled from the field in the second quarter.

Prestonsburg scored the first six points of the third quarter and went in front 27-20 before the Lady Raiders ran off six unanswered points. The

Blackcats win over Betsy Layne 79-63 behind Robinson's 27

The Prestonsburg Blackcats picked up the tempo in the second half and Ryan Ortega arrived offensively to help lead the Blackcats past the Betsy Layne Bobcats 79-63.

The two teams got together on the hardwood at Betsy Layne Tuesday night for an important conference game.

"It was a big win for us," said Prestonsburg coach Gordon Parido.

Parido knows how unkind the D.W. Howard Fieldhouse has been to his team in past seasons. It isn't one of the easier places Prestonsburg has found to win.

Senior Toby Robinson missed some early shots, but revived in the second period to lead the Blackcats in scoring. Robinson hit his average of 27 points. Robinson missed his first four shots, but came back to score on a 12-foot jumper and layup in the first period.

But the high-scoring Blackcat burned the nets for 11 points in the second quarter, hitting two threes.

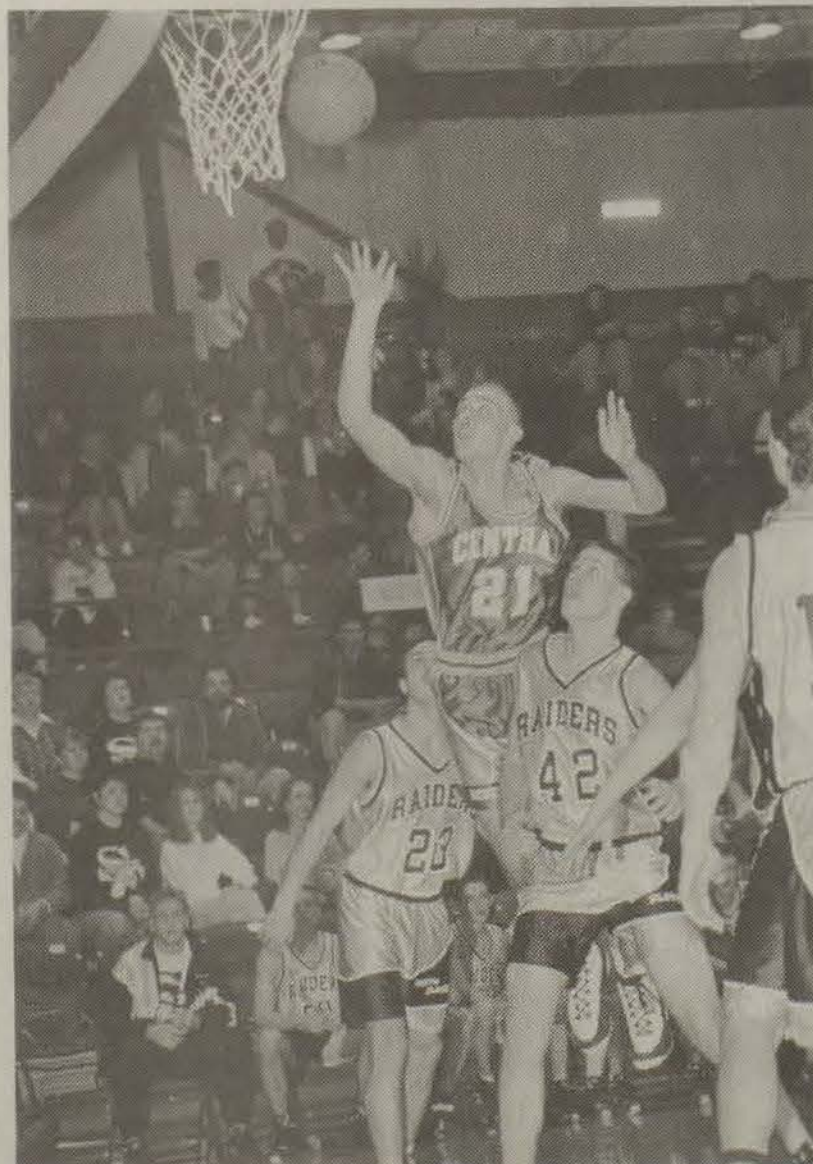

Ortega added 19 points for Prestonsburg. Clint Shuts scored in double figures with 11 and Thomas Ratliff had another good game with 10 points.

Stevie Johnson led Betsy Layne with 19 points. Derrick Newsome scored in double figures with 16. Chris Hamilton added seven and Chris Hicks scored seven.

Betsy Layne, who played played Prestonsburg close the first half, just couldn't take care of the basketball start of the fourth quarter.

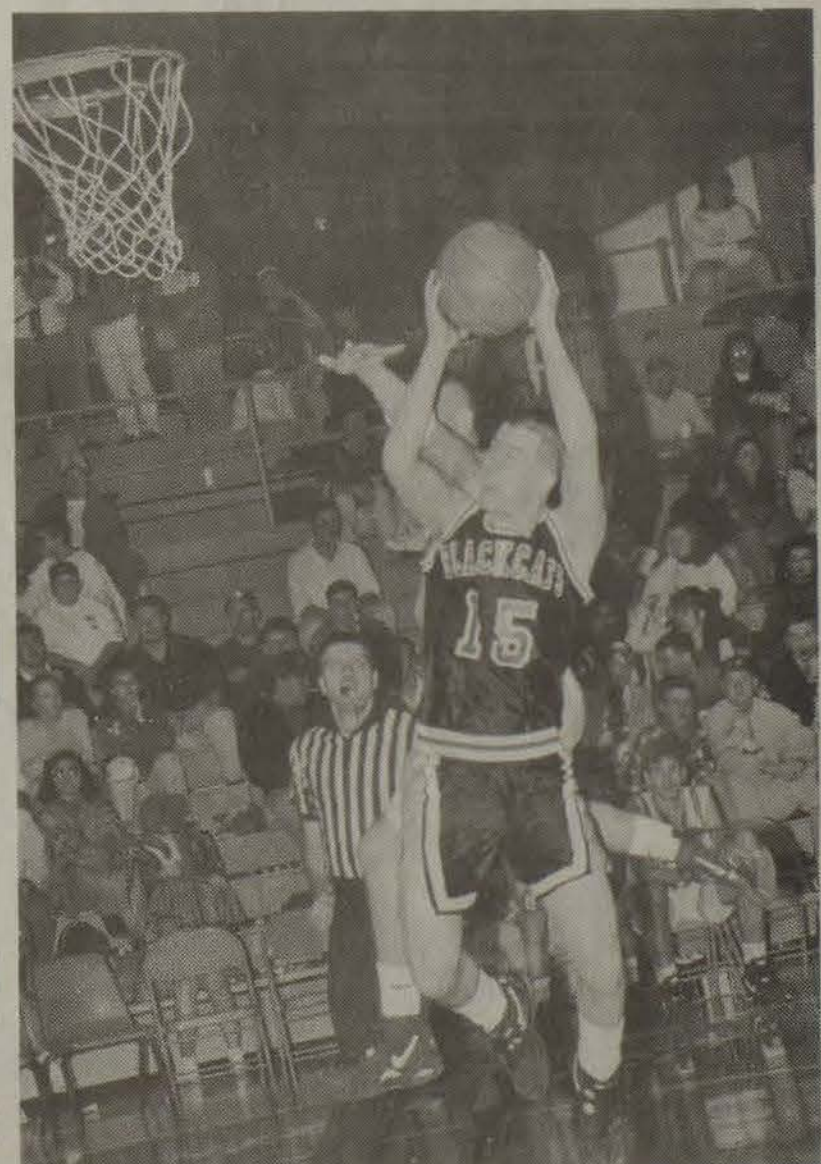

The Bobcats turned the ball over on their first five possessions as Prestonsburg busted out to a 15-point lead, 63-48. Betsy Layne only trailed by six at the half, 54-48.

many mistakes ourselves." Scott Little put the Raiders on the scoreboard at the 5:04 mark when he hit the front end of a two-shot foul. Jason Bevens tipped in a missed shot for a 12-1 game, but South Floyd, a team that never quits, scored the next seven to narrow the margin to four, 12-8. T.T. Pack scored five of the seven points.

South Floyd turned the ball over on their first six possessions and Allen Central capitalized on four of the mistakes.

Allen Central, who led 23-13 after the first period, became their own worst enemy with forced passes and poor shot selection.

The early technical on Hall, plus a personal foul, allowed the Raiders to climb right back into the game as Hamilton connected on three free throws for a 23-16 game. Hamilton, with 6:25 on the clock, hit a trey and it was a four-point game, 23-19.

Coach Martin says his team lacks the killer instinct.

"This team plays in spurts," Coach Martin said. "They can't seem to stand prosperity. Unlike last year's team, they would get it up to 10-0 and it would probably be 20-2 before you knew it."

Newsome took charge for Allen Central in the second period with Hall on the bench. Newsome buried back-to-back three-pointers that turned out to be big ones.

"Rocky hit some key threes for us," said Coach Martin. "He hit them when we were struggling."

Jenkins also showed leadership in the second period, according to Coach Martin.

"I thought in the second period when South Floyd would make runs at us, Thomas played harder. He did a lot better job."

Jenkins drilled a trey and hit four free throws in the period.

South Floyd only trailed by six, 27-21, until the flurry of treys by Newsome that vaulted them to a 13-point lead.

The Rebels' passing in the second quarter bordered on "horrible" as they tried to be a little too fancy. But the Rebels had a 12-point lead at the half, 44-32.

In the third period, Hall drove to the basket and forced an air ball while going to the floor. Feeling a call should have been made, he became disgusted and used unbecoming language. Combs waited, then slapped the technical on Hall.

It turned out to be a four-point trip for the Raiders, who cut the margin to 13 points.

But 13 points was as close as they could come, trailing by 18 after three quarters.

Newsome finished with 14 points for the Rebels. He had four three-point baskets in the game. Hall did score 12 before leaving in the third quarter.

Jason Bevens, who played a strong board game, finished with seven points. Bevens had eight rebounds in the game.

Matt Crawford and freshman Todd Howard each had a three-point basket. John Moore scored two points.

Michael Stephens and Scott Little had nine points apiece for South Floyd. Allen Central held Jason Shannon to only three points. Justin Ray tossed in four, Nick Little had two points as did Justin Holbrook.

Allen Central will face the Elkhorn City Cougars (6-8) in tonight's first game at 7 p.m.

South Floyd (3-12) will travel to Sheldon Clark Tuesday night.

Duff Bulldogs race past MCA 76-33 as Hunter scores 18 points

Corbett Howell, Leslie Stone and Brent Stone scored four points each.

Blackcats

"At the same time, offensively, we weren't hitting the gaps. They were drawing us out real far, but we closed the gap down and got some good baskets inside."

Coach Parido said that the change of defenses in the second half opened up opportunities for his team elsewhere.

"I feel like our defense carried us the second half," he said. "We just get in a bad habit of what we call raising our frustration level higher than our concentration level."

That appeared to be Robinson's hang up in the first quarter. But when the concentration level came up, so did the point production.

Betsy Layne went on a 7-0 run with less than five minutes to play in the first half to take a 34-28 lead. The Bobcats led 36-29 on a long jumper by Willie Meade.

But Prestonsburg hit three of four free throws just before intermission to trail 36-32 at the half.

Robinson's new level of concentration was evident as he opened the third quarter with a three-point basket to pull his team to within one, 36-35. Betsy Layne extended the lead back to five, 40-35.

After a basket by Ratliff, Meade scored on a layup and Chris Hicks followed with a turnaround 10-footer to give the Bobcats a 44-37 lead.

A three-pointer by Ortega at the 5:55 mark and consecutive baskets by Shuts and Ortega tied the game at 44 with 4:14 to play in the third.

Hicks gave the lead back to Betsy Layne with a layup before a shoving match took place between Shuts and Ryan Newsome.

Newsome was called for a personal foul as Shuts went after Newsome. Both players were tagged with technical fouls at the 3:51 mark.

Brett James sank both for Prestonsburg to tie the game at 46, while Stevie Johnson missed at the Betsy Layne end.

Betsy Layne's final lead came at 3:24, 47-46, on a free throw by Derrick Newsome. Prestonsburg scored the next five points to take a 51-47 lead and led 54-48 after three quarters.

Ortega only had three free throws at the half, turning it up a bit in the second half where he scored 16 points.

"We talked to Ryan at the half," said the Prestonsburg coach. "We talked about his penetration and getting in the offense. He did a super job for us tonight and took control."

"It was a good game and several people played some good defense."

Prestonsburg improved to 8-9 overall and goes 2-0 into the Floyd County Conference. Betsy Layne falls to 3-12 and 0-2 in conference play.

Prestonsburg's defense in the second half took the Bobcats out of their offense.

"We talked about that at halftime," said Parido. "We discussed some things we needed to do defensively. We felt like we could challenge them with our man-to-man (defense)."

Duff holds off Martin in double overtime, 59-53

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Martin Purple Flash, making a bid for first place in Section I, saw their fourth period comeback fall short as they fell to the Duff Bulldogs 59-53 this past Sunday at Martin.

The game was important to Martin. A win would have tied them with Duff for first place.

Rodney Bentley scored 20 points with Ryan Owens and Gary Hunter tossing in 11 each to lead the Bulldogs.

Game-scoring honors went to Martin's Matthew Mayo, who finished with 28 points. Mayo hit five three-point baskets in the game. He scored 15 points in the final quarter, hitting three treys.

Jesse Hall added 15 for Martin and James Seward finished with eight. Brian Jones was stopped with just two points.

Shawn Henson, off the bench, added six points in the Duff win, who finished the regular season with a 19-2 record. Nick Samons totaled eight points with Corbett Howell scoring two. Barry Conley had one free throw for one point.

Duff led by 13 points going into third period ended at 27-26.

East Carter went on top 29-27 on a basket by Perry and Wilson's free throw with just over five minutes to play. Ratliff scored six straight points to give Prestonsburg a 33-29, lead but a basket by Perry and Sexton's three-pointer earned East Carter the lead at 34-33.

Prestonsburg's last lead came at 39-36 on a layup by Newsome. East Carter then hit five of six free throws to go in front 41-39.

Layne had a chance to tie the game, but missed two charity tosses and Sexton scored on the other end for a 43-39 game.

Prestonsburg could never catch the Lady Raiders after that. Sexton led all scorers with 23 points. Perry finished with 12.

Homecoming '95

Prestonsburg High School will hold their annual basketball homecoming this Saturday night, January 28 at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse. The Blackcats will host Greenup County in a 8 p.m. start. Homecoming activities will take place between games.

CONGRATULATIONS!

The Southeast Regional Math Bowl, hosted by Prestonsburg Community College, included two Floyd County Schools—Adams Middle School and J. A. Duff Elementary. Adams Middle School, coached by Sheila Ortega, will represent the region Saturday, January 28, at Kentucky State University in state competition. The first place team from Adams Middle School includes Cara Stewart, Julie Stewart, Saleha Badrudduja, Sulma Badrudduja, Sheena Brock and Laura Neeley. Coach Stanton Watson's Duff team includes Ryan Owens, Chris Case, Jesse McKean and John Slone.

Among the numerous academic competitions provided to students, Math Bowl is unique in its alignment with KERA. The competition is sponsored by the Kentucky Council of Teachers of Mathematics. The executive board of the KCTM revised the competition to place a greater emphasis on problem solving rather than the quick recall portion of the competition.

Congratulations to both schools on their success, and good luck to Adams Middle School in state competition.

parent to smack the girl eight times on her clothed bottom. Judge Lee said the parents had planned to spank Adams anyway, and that he supervised them so there would be no question of child abuse.

-- In April, defendant Arthur Hollingsworth decided to waive his constitutional right of silence and to testify on his own behalf in his trial for armed robbery of a Houston convenience store. Despite Hollingsworth's previous recalcitrance, prosecutor Jay Hileman first got him to admit that he was in the store at the time it was robbed and that he was armed. Then Hileman asked, "Mr. Hollingsworth, you're guilty, aren't you?" Hollingsworth replied, "No." Hileman pressed on. "Mr. Hollingsworth, you're guilty, aren't you?" Hollingsworth: "Yeah." Hileman said he had no further questions.

-- In June in Council Bluffs, Iowa, Christine Walker, 23, and Jeremy Buckels, 24, were found by police in a city park after its 10 p.m. closing and, after negotiating with prosecutors, decided to plead guilty and pay a fine. However, Walker feared a "trespassing" conviction on her record. The prosecutor arranged for the conviction to be listed as violation of a 1975 city ordinance making it illegal "to worry" black squirrels, which are the city's mascot.

COMPELLING EXPLANATIONS

-- The U.S. Postal Service rejected the last of a reported 200 complaints filed by Merrifield, Va., employee Bruce Henry and fired him in October. Henry had contended that a female employee's partly unbuttoned blouse was a distraction to other workers and could lead to misoriented mail. -- According to a Durham, N.C., police officer's testimony, Caron Magwood, 23, was insistent when arrested that everybody know he is a seller of cocaine. He was arrested in October and accused of selling fake crack cocaine but wanted to set the record straight because he feared more being killed by a customer who thought Magwood cheated him than being convicted of selling real drugs.

-- Leroy Byrd, 48, was convicted in November in Gloucester, Va., of illegally wiretapping his ex-girlfriend's phone. Byrd's defense was that the wiretap was necessary because he thought that a Richmond, Va., witch doctor, "Mr. Emmanuel," and the ex-girlfriend were preparing a hex against him and that he needed evidence so that police could take action.

-- In Kansas City, Mo., in June, Keith Smith, 26, was convicted of strangling and stabbing to death a minister, in whose house he lived, and his housekeeper. In a videotaped statement to the police at the time of the murders, Smith said the mayhem was caused by "Chucky," the murderous doll in the movie "Child's Play."

-- In Providence, R.I., Anthony S. St. Laurent, who is thought by police to be an organized crime leader, has prevailed in several court hearings to postpone his trial on charges that he ran a $42 million local gambling ring. According to St. Laurent's lawyer, he is far too ill to stand trial, suffering from migraine headaches, high blood pressure, and dysfunctional rectal muscles, which necessitate his taking up to 40 enemas a day.

MISCELLANEOUS ELOQUENCE

Memphis, Tenn., confessed murderer Willie Lee Davidson, 21, apologizing in court in September for his crime and telling everyone he and his accomplice are sorry for beating a woman to death and running over her with a car. "We aren't criminals. If we had gotten away with it, it would never have happened again."

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You may be making changes in a home improvement plan. Pressing career matters could keep you from spending as much time as you'd like with family members. Make up for this over the weekend and lavish some attention on relatives.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're on the same wave length as a business partner and will accomplish much this week. However, you find it hard to get some people to understand your goals. Guard against any quarrels.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll be able to bring a career project to a successful conclusion. However, where money interests are concerned, there's an inclination to quarrel with your significant other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's one of those weeks when if you don't phone on time, a partner will become upset. Be sure to keep others abreast of your comings and goings. Doing so contributes much to peace.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) If a project is slow-going this week, try not to lose your temper. Not everyone is as quick-thinking as you. Later in the week, you feel a bit too busy and will welcome the weekend's chances for enjoyable quiet time.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You'll have a meaningful dialogue with a friend this week which leads to new career opportunities. However, some social plans are subject to last-minute changes. Someone you deal with is temperamental.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Being in two places at once is

CRITIC'S CORNER

SHORT TAKES BULLETS OVER BROADWAY—The latest Woody Allen offering is classic Woody. It is intellectual, self-effacing and funny. It's not knee-slapping funny, but it's intelligently funny, a particularly Woody Allen appeal. John Cusack and Dianne Weist star in the comedy which has as its setting the American theater of the 1920s. My rating: ** 1/2.

DUMB AND DUMBER—Jim Carrey proves in this flick why he's so hot these days. In this one, he teams up with Jeff Daniels (in a departure from his usual fare) for a cross-country trip which is fraught with out-and-out slapstick and bathroom humor. Carrey himself is reminiscent of a young Jerry Lewis, with the same rubber-faced second looks and goofy patter. If you're up for some energetic comedic athletics, don't miss this flick. My rating: ***.

IMMORTAL BELOVED—Gary Oldman does a stint as Ludwig not your forte this week. Though matters pertaining to career will run smoothly, some home concerns may be left unattended. The weekend is a good time to catch up with this.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Though you're certain in your convictions, this week is not the best time for getting your viewpoints across to others. Stay clear of those who love to disagree. Such people are part of the problem, not the solution.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The week brings some positive business and financial developments. However, you could find yourself in a heated discussion about a mutual monetary concern. Family members provide solace.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your desire to do your own thing may not sit well with a close tie who would like to spend some time with you this week. Try to be more accommodating in order to avoid a messy quarrel. Compromise works.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There could be a few false starts on the job this week but a project will get off the ground by week's end. It's possible that you'll be asked to put in extra hours over the weekend as a result. This pays off.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Though it's a busy time for you on the social scene now, the week is not without its dissatisfactions. A friend could prove to be a bit overbearing and opinionated. Avoid this person for now.

Beethoven in this one. Unfortunately, this film is no "Amadeus." Its script is rather predictable and lacks real pizzazz. My rating: ** 1/2.

I.Q.—Walter Matthau, in a brilliant piece of casting, portrays Albert Einstein in a way we never thought we'd see him—as a real human being concerned for his family, not just a super brain. It seems Uncle Albert is desperately trying to match up his comely niece (Meg Ryan with the local car mechanic (Tim Robbins)). The niece is as educated as the mechanic is not, but the chemistry is right, and Uncle Albert sets about to get the two together. It works for me! My rating: ***.

MIXED NUTS—How you could have a movie with Steve Martin, Garry Shandling and Juliette Lewis and fail is beyond me! However, this movie just doesn't work. It's a horrible little comedy (if you can call it that) about suicide hotline workers who are facing eviction (as well as a murder mystery) on Christmas Eve. Bah, humbug! My rating: 1/2*.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: With his brother a prisoner, Rick told Blade he was paying him back for leaving him to drown. He also taunted him with his amorous plans for Blade's wife, Ashley. Paul decided not to tell Chris he might be permanently impotent. Instead, he told her he had reconsidered their plans and decided not to marry her. Later, he suggested Danny go to Chris because she needed a friend. Victor told Hope he wanted their marriage to succeed and would do whatever he could to save it. Sharon told Victor that Matt threatened to harm Nick if she dated him. After breaking up with Mari Jo, Jack rushed to reassure Luan of his love for her. Mari Jo later heard Luan tell Doctor Tanita of her "bad spell." Wait To See: Rick and Mari Jo have a confrontation.
