Who's working in our schools?

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Neither Floyd County school officials nor Floyd County's jailer were aware that a jail work crew, comprised of convicted felons, have been working at Auxier Elementary during school hours.

A prisoner work crew from the county jail was in the Auxier community from September 2-7, according to Jailer Roger Webb, and apparently did work at the school.

Auxier principal Ruth Goble said Thursday that she will discontinue the practice.

"I'm not using them anymore during school time because I don't think it's a good idea to have them around," Goble said. "I intend to use them on the weekends when the kids aren't here. I really don't think it's a good idea to have them (at the school) when the kids are here."

A prison crew also worked at the school during the summer.

"They worked during the summer and sometimes they worked out in the park," Goble said. "Nobody asked for them to come. There was a deputy this summer over in the park and I asked him if the prisoners did work (at schools). I asked him if they go to schools and he said, 'they sure do.' I asked if they could come over here and clean up our park... I had them fix a couple of swings over there. They're good workers."

The prisoners were "going to try to help" make repairs to a mobile classroom on the campus, Goble said. "If they couldn't come (during) the day, I could use them on the weekends."

Goble's husband, Jack Goble, and Steve Martin have gone to the jail and signed out work crews for that community, Ruth Goble said.

"My husband and Steve Martin (has) been with them. They sign them out (of the jail). My husband signs them out and he watches them. Then he takes them back."

When asked if she thought it might be a problem having prisoners working at the school while children are present, Goble said, "Yes I do."

Webb said he doesn't approve of jail crews working at schools during school hours.

"I don't want them (prisoners) down there when school's going (on)," Webb said. "No inmate should be around those children. I'm going to tell everyone from now on that no inmates are to be around any schools what time school is going on, period. I don't condone it and I don't believe in it. I ain't going to have it."

An Auxier woman claims she lost her employment in a state welfare program because the school she worked for used a county inmate work crew.

Tina Mosley, a single mother of three, said Wednesday that she was told she could no longer do custodial work at Auxier Elementary because her presence would prevent inmates from being able to work at the school.

Auxier principal Ruth Goble denied Mosley's claim and said she asked that Mosley be transferred to Prestonsburg Elementary for "personal reasons."

Mosley said she was told inmates could no longer work at the school because of her brother, Arnold Mosley. Arnold Mosley has had several theft-re-

911: Keep on calling

Prestonsburg E-911 coordinator Gary Dotson reported that some people are having trouble getting in touch with E-911 addressing personnel from Network Design Engineering.

Dotson said he has received reports that calls to the temporary office in the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad building have gone unanswered. The number at the office is 886-0084.

There is apparently a problem with the telephone line switch-over, Dotson said.

Persons calling about their addressing information cards should continue to call the office until they get in touch with a representative. The problem is expected to be fixed soon, Dotson said.

The sound of music sends Daniel to CMA ceremony

When the Country Music Association hands out its awards in Nashville next Wednesday night, a Floyd County woman and her husband will be in the audience crossing their fingers that their publishing company will be a winner.

Julie and Brad Daniel, owners of Island Bound Music, located on Music Row in Nashville, plan to attend the ceremony and hope that a song, "One Night At A Time," penned by one of their writers will win in the Single of the Year category. The song is performed by George Strait, who is also nominated for Entertainer of the Year and Vocalist of the Year.

"One Night At A Time," which was at the number one spot for five weeks, was written by Roger Cook, who also wrote "Long Cool Woman In A Black Dress," "I'd Like To Teach The World To Sing," "Talking In Your Sleep," and "I Believe In You."

Cook is also a nominee for induction into the Nashville Songwriters Association's Hall of Fame. He and the Daniels will attend that ceremony on Sunday night.

The Daniels will also be presented an award from the Performance Writers Association on Monday night at the Opryland Hotel in recognition of their numerous hits that have hit the market through their company, Island Bound Music.

The company is on a fast track to success — Diamond Rio's recording of "How Your Love Makes Me Feel" by another of the business's writers hits number one next week — and has made a tremendous impact on the music scene since its formation about four years ago. Julie Daniel, a daughter of Abby Grant and stepdaughter of Lenny Grant of Prestonsburg, leaped from retail sales clerk, typist and then song plugger to form her own company with her husband Brad. She went to Nashville when her first husband was transferred to the city in 1977. Daniel was a college student. She and her husband divorced and Daniel became a single mom.

At first, she worked in retail sales:

Harassment suit filed against police chief

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A sexual harassment lawsuit has been filed against Wheelwright police chief Tommy Engle by the daughter of that city's mayor and the chief said the suit is a personal attack.

Sharlonda Sammons filed the civil lawsuit Monday in Floyd Circuit Court against Engle and also named the city of Wheelwright.

Sammons alleges that Engle has stalked her on numerous occasions and has made unwanted sexual advances toward her.

Engle said the lawsuit is "all building back from some personal stuff" and that he has asked the special investigations unit of the Kentucky State Police to investigate the whole matter.

Also, Engle filed suit against the mayor and Commissioner Luther Johnson Jr. on September 5, asking that the two be prohibited from making any decisions on his employment status as police chief.

Engle claimed he could not get a fair hearing from the two because they have made complaints against him them-

Student injured in fall caused by leaking roof

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Fears that a child might be injured due to a leaking roof on the Betsy Layne gym were realized last week when a student fell and broke his leg.

Eleven-year-old Steve Burchett, a sixth grader at Betsy Layne Elementary, was walking from music class last Tuesday when he slipped in a puddle of water, which was the result of a leak in the roof, principal Karen Allen said.

"It was raining real hard and we had about 25 buckets out on the floor," Allen said. "That was one area that we missed. Water was running down the wall and it ran over the steps on the stairs."

For years, Betsy Layne parents have been lobbying the school board to have the dome roof repaired. At one point, the roof repair was part of the multi-million dollar renovation of the school, but it was later scrapped due to the legality of architect and construction manager contracts for the project.

Burchett's mother, Jennifer Adkins, said her son may have to have surgery on his leg.

"The doctor had to put a splint on it this Tuesday and he's in more pain that he was," Adkins said. "His leg wasn't

Wells: Chamber Hall of Fame recipient dies

Susan Martin Wells, a Floyd County civic leader, died September 16, at Highlands Regional Medical Center from cancer. Wells was 39.

Earlier this year in May, Wells had been inducted into the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce's Hall of Fame for her leadership with the Chamber.

She was responsible for organizing various Chamber functions, including the annual banquet, awards committee, and Business After Hours. She also served on the committee to hire the Chamber's executive director and secretary, according to her fellow Chamber member Deborah Allen.

"(She served on) almost everything in the Chamber," Allen said.

Wells was also actively involved in the

"That was what I knew. I grew up in retail at my mom's store (Abby's Gift Shop in Prestonsburg). I was going to school at night and working during the day," she said Wednesday.

Her next door neighbor who worked with ABC Records knew she was dissatisfied with her job and asked her what type of business she wanted to be in.

"I said, 'Any one that will pay the bills,'" she recalled.

Her friend suggested that Julie apply for a typing position in the publicity department of ABC Records, a company that was later bought by MCA Records. Although she lacked experience, she got the job.

"I had no bad habits. They gave me a shot," she said.

Daniels made up for her lack of experience with hard work.

"I would come in at 6 o'clock in the morning so they wouldn't know I was so slow," she said.

In the company's publicity department, she met writers, who asked her to read their songs. She is a music lover — "I sing in my car. I love the radio. I was the one in chorus that Ms. Carlos said she loved it so much, but could I sing quieter. I sing with such emotion. I feel the emotion so deep inside me. I'm always listening to the radio or tape player."

She can also pinpoint what's wrong with a song and knows how to correct it. "I am an editor, not a writer. Writing — that's what makes me freeze up."

With two children to support and no child support coming in, Julie quit her job at MCA and started her own company, Total Media. The company was in business for four years and Julie had more income in six months than she did in her typing job at MCA.

"I could connect the dots. I knew what a hit song was. I add the average Joe's ears. I'm a good editor. I don't like to change things," Julie said. "I'm good at putting the right song with the right artist."

After four years with Total Media, Julie pitched independently for a year. She then returned to MCA, but in a higher paying position as a song plugger. That's when she met Brad, who also promoted songs. The two fell in love and married.

"We freaked 'em out," Julie recalled. Company executives were concerned that if the couple had a fight and broke up, it would split one of the most successful song-plugging teams in Nashville.

"We told them Wednesday and invited them to the wedding Thursday," she said, laughing in recollection of the event.

Julie and Brad Daniel proved the skeptics wrong. They stayed together and had 100 singles in the three years they stayed with MCA records. "Most of them were hits," Julie said.

The two took a "leap of faith" and bought a 6,000 square foot building for Island Bound Records.

"It's a name with a goal," Daniel said. "We like taking trips."

Julie Daniel received an offer to be song-plugger with Famous Music that paid her three times as much as she had previously made.

"I called Mom. She said, 'You're crazy if you don't take the job.' I said, 'No, I feel we're supposed to do this company. I could trust (my husband Brad). All these other people, I couldn't trust. I turned it down, but (the owner) called back and he committed close to $70,000 with us."

Through the joint venture with Famous Music, Island Bound supplied the company with songs and Famous Music then owned half the copyrights. Famous Music also paid part of Island Bound's overhead.

"We got them four number one records," Julie Daniel said.

When the contract expired with Famous Music, EMI, a top company in the world, according to Daniel, offered Island Bound a deal they couldn't refuse.

"We're giving them top songs," Julie Daniel said.

With Julie Daniel's skills at promotions and her husband's skills at management and investment, Island Bound Music has developed into a million dollar company. The company has nine of the top writers in country music.

Julie Daniel thinks she owes her success, in part, to the skills she learned at her mother Abby's store in Prestonsburg.

"I got my best training by working in my mom's store. After school, I would stop at every store (along Court Street) and say hi. Now, I stop at every record label and say 'Hi, we've got a new song.'"

Under jail policy for community service work crews, inmates are not allowed to be around the general public or family members.

It could not be determined Thursday whether Mosley was part of the work crew at the school. Also, work crews are not allowed to be around women while they're out of jail.

"I have never made a statement about a case against me, but I feel I need to now," Engle said.

"This is just personal and I'm not taking this anymore. For 15 years I've been working the streets and doing my job to make it easier for the old people and the young people."

Sammons' lawsuit claims Engle has a "long history of sexually harassing women" and that the city should have known about his past before hiring him.

Commissioners have "failed to supervise him despite the notice of his sexual predatory tendencies," the lawsuit alleges.

Earlier this year, commissioners voted to pay $5,000 to settle a sexual harassment lawsuit filed against Engle by Tonya Farmer.

As an administrative assistant, Wells coordinated manpower development programs, which included physician recruitment, implemented medical nursing and student scholarship programs, developed educational assistance programs, and directed the development of the hospital's first volunteer department.

She was also instrumental in the development and implementation of a business plan for establishing the Breast Center at HRMC. Martin also established a community-wide insurance claims assistance program to serve the Medicare population.

"She was a very detail-oriented person. She was an asset to any organization. She gave 100 percent," her co-worker, Kathy Rubado, said Wednesday.

HRMC administrator Clarence C. Traum agreed with Rubado.

"It's difficult to imagine Highlands without her — especially her overwhelming thoughtfulness of others and her consistent attention to even the most minute detail of a program or meeting.

Floyd County Jailer Roger Webb denied he said anything about the situation and that he would oppose Tina Mosley losing her placement at the school. Webb said he was not aware jail work crews were at the school while school was in session and that practice would be discontinued.

Mosley was placed at the school as part of the OWEF program

Commissioners said they wanted to make it clear that they were making a settlement because they didn't feel they could afford to pursue the case in court.

In Sammons' suit, she claims Engle has "engaged in outrageous conduct on countless occasions by following, stalking and pursuing" her since February 1996. She claims he has pulled her vehicle over and made sexual overtures to her and has parked in her driveway on numerous occasions.

Engle denies any such conduct and said Sammons is trying to get back at him for having her father's vehicle towed because it had outdated tags and she could not produce verification the car was insured. Sharlonda Sammons was in possession of the vehicle at the time.

Wells was a graduate of the Leadership Kentucky class of 1988. She was a graduate of Prestonsburg High School and Transylvania University, where she received a bachelor's degree in biology.

She was awarded a master's degree in public health administration from the University of South Carolina.

Janet Hoover, spokesperson for Workforce Development, said the program was developed as part of the state's Welfare Reform so that welfare recipients can work to learn new skills and continue to keep their benefits.

Under OWEF, persons who have little or no work experience are placed at non-profit agencies to learn work skills. Persons in the program do not receive a regular pay check, but are allowed to continue receiving benefits, Hoover said.

Schools

We've did thousands of hours of community service and this is the only complaint we've got."

Greg Adams, director of facilities for the school system, said he did not know prisoners were working at the schools.

"They don't go through me," Adams said Thursday. "I have never recruited them. No one has (ever) called and asked me about it. They shouldn't be doing any kind of construction work, in my opinion. I have mixed feelings about it."

Adams said he doesn't necessarily disapprove of prisoners working at schools when children are not on campus, but he added it would be difficult to determine if their work would comply with state building codes. He said prisoners "have done a lot of good things" in the community.

Webb explained that there are persons throughout the county who are trained by jail personnel or officials with the state Corrections Cabinet to be crew supervisors for community work crews.

"It's perfectly right that they can do that, as long as we instruct them on the dos and don'ts," Webb said. "So long as they're responsible people. It's their responsibility to supervise these inmates. They can't have any contact with the general public or with any family members."

Mosley said the school was within walking distance of her home and that she did not have transportation to work in another school. She has been at Auxier since April.

Hoover, without specifically discussing Mosley's case, said someone without transportation could discuss the issue with the local department of Social Insurance.

Goble said Thursday that she would no longer have jail work crews at the school during school hours, but she said it would not affect her decision to transfer Mosley.

Webb said he feels like the jail work crew was used as an excuse to transfer Mosley.

"They've got a problem that the jail shouldn't be involved in," Webb said. "I hope everything works out for that girl. The jail has nothing to do with it."

healing right. Why didn't they fix it?" she said regarding the roof. There are 30-some leaks in the gym ceiling and they say there's no money to fix it. It's silly the way the world is. It's like when you should have a redlight some place, but it takes people getting killed before they put one up. I think they should've done something."

Facilities director Greg Adams said Thursday that he just found out about Burchett's fall and that there are no immediate plans to fix the roof.

"Me and Sammy Martin have been putting together some numbers for some projects at Prestonsburg High School, South Floyd High School, Allen Central High School, May Valley and a complete renovation of the Betsy Layne gym," Adams said. "All together it would be a $9 million dollar package. It's just a dream, but I hope it comes true."

A complete renovation of the gym would cost an estimated $2 million, Adams said, which would include repairing the roof, building bleachers and renovating restrooms.

Allen said no one has contacted her about repairing the roof since Burchett's fall and drastic measures may have to be taken to prevent more children from getting hurt.

"This is one of the most used gyms in this school system," Allen said. "It's used by Betsy Layne Elementary, Betsy Layne High School, Prater Elementary and Harold Elementary. Also, athletic events are held here by three different schools. The way it looks is when it's raining as hard as it was, we'll have to try to have someone monitor all the students to make sure there's no water where they are walking. It may come down to that we have to cancel P.E. classes."

"But, this child was not in a P.E. class," Allen said. "This child was just walking from a class, music class."

Adkins said she hopes her son can return to school soon and she plans to ask the school board to pay her son's medical bills.

"I don't have any kind of insurance," Adkins said. "I'm in the awfulest mess ever was." Allen said the district is leasing a wheelchair for Burchett because he's in a cast "from his toe to his hip."

"We got it yesterday," Allen said about the wheelchair. "This child has to change classes to four different buildings and I feel it's just too much to ask of this child to try to walk on crutches."

Board member B.J. Newsome has been in contact with the school, Allen said, and has voiced his concerns about the leaking roof on several occasions prior to the accident.

"Mr. Newsome, as he as done before, has shown concern about the roof," Allen said. "Other than that, no one else has come by (to look into the situation). I hope the roof will be a top priority."

Bar owner's felony charge changed to misdemeanor

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

A felony charge against a bar owner accused of assaulted a burglar, who allegedly broke into his bar earlier this month, was amended to a misdemeanor charge Wednesday during a preliminary hearing.

The owner — James Hall, 27, of Grethel — was arrested last Monday, two days after he apparently assaulted Charles Hatfield, who was arrested on September 5 for breaking into the Eight Ball Bar.

Hall was originally charged with first degree assault, but the charge was amended to fourth degree assault, a misdemeanor.

Kentucky State Police trooper Jim Baker testified Wednesday that Hall "beat" Hatfield.

"I don't know if out of anger or what...he beat Mr. Hatfield," Baker said, adding that an ambulance was called to the scene, but Hatfield refused treatment.

The trooper said Hatfield sustained a laceration near his eye and cheek, and a cut on his head from the alleged assault.

"Hatfield was laying on the ground," Baker said. "He was there and had been bleeding."

During a preliminary hearing for Hatfield's burglary charge, the trooper said he thought Hatfield had been shot from the amount of blood on him.

Assistant county attorney Lance Daniels requested the felony charge against Hall be amended to a misdemeanor because weapons were not used in the alleged assault and the injuries were not life threatening.

Daniels said Thursday that it was "too early in case" to say if the county attorney's office or the trooper anticipated pursuing the charge against Hall.

In Hatfield's preliminary hearing, Baker testified that Hall tried to hold the door to keep the alleged perpetrator inside the bar until authorities arrived at the scene.

Hatfield is also accused of breaking into the residence of Colleen Little and Jeff Newman, who is also reportedly an owner of the bar.

According to trooper Baker's reports, Hatfield allegedly stole two firearms and other items from Newman's residence.

Hatfield's attorney, Kristi Gray, asked Baker if any weapons or money were taken from her client when he was arrested.

"We could not find any guns in the area," Baker said, adding that he could not remember if any money was taken from Hatfield. "There were quarters and change scattered throughout the parking lot."

Hatfield is accused of breaking into video games at the bar.

Baker said eye witnesses observed Hatfield break into Newman's residence and the bar.

Floyd District Judge James R. Allen found probable cause to refer Hatfield's felony charge to the grand jury.

On a motion by his attorney, Hatfield's bond was lowered from a $7,000 property bond to a $3,500 partially-secured bond.

Public records not opened; county attorney seeks release permission

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

Although Floyd County Attorney Keith Bartley agrees that the county's solid waste commission is a public agency, an open records request has not been honored.

The Floyd County Times requested Wednesday to inspect the terms of a lawsuit agreement, which included an undisclosed settlement.

Under the state's Open Records Law, public documents are to be made available for inspection by the public during normal business hours of the public agency.

During a special meeting last Thursday, the solid waste commission approved for Bartley to enter into an agreement with Preston Collins to have a 1993 lawsuit dismissed, and agreed to withhold the amount of the settlement from the public.

Collins filed a civil suit against the commission in June 1993 for alleged water supply contamination from the old Garth landfill and a depreciation in the value of his property, which is adjacent to the landfill.

The minutes from the solid waste special meeting last week does not indicate the settlement for the lawsuit's dismissal.

The Times' open records request was directed by solid waste director Mike Vance to be sent to either his secretary or Floyd Judge-Executive Ben Hale's office.

Vance, who is "considered" to be the custodian of the commission's public records, was out of town this week.

According to an Attorney General's opinion, someone must be designated as custodian of the records when the official custodian is not available.

Vance's secretary said Tuesday afternoon that she did not have any records which give the amount of the settlement and Hale's office indicated Thursday that they did not have access to the record.

Bartley agreed Thursday that the amount of the settlement is considered public information. The county attorney was attempting to contact solid waste commissioners for permission to publicly release the amount of the settlement but was unable to contact them Thursday. Bartley said he could not officially release the information without their approval.

He added that he thought the Free forest management

As a public service to the landowners of Eastern Kentucky, the Kentucky Division of Forestry offers free management assistance. At no charge, a professional forester can examine woodland and recommend multiple-use forest management techniques applicable to personal goals and objectives, whether those objectives include timber production, wildlife habitat improvement, soil and water conservation, forest recreation, or a combination of these. The forester will then prepare a written management plan.

The Division of Forestry also administers several incentive programs that reimburse the landowners up to 65 percent of their total costs for any management work completed. This money is available for forest improvements, wildlife habitat enhancement, tree planting, and soil and water protection.

Any landowner who would like more information, can contact the Kentucky Division of Forestry's Eastern District office in Betsy Layne at 1-800-866-0048, Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

information will be available to the Floyd County Times Friday.

The county attorney said Tuesday that the agreement was reached to "hopefully avoid further lawsuits in the area." He said Thursday that, after further consideration, he did not think disclosing the amount would prompt future civil suits due to the elapse of time since Collins filed his suit.

Ten free trees

Ten free trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during September. The trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign. The trees are the American Redbud, White Pine, Sugar Maple, White Flowering Dogwood, Pin Oak, Red Maple, Birch, Silver Maple, Red Oak, and Colorado Bruce Spruce.

The trees will be shipped post-paid at the right time for planting between October 1 and December 10, with enclosed planting instructions. Move to require lawyers at closings will help attorneys, not consumers

There's little doubt about who will benefit most from a move afoot in the Kentucky Bar Association to bar non-lawyers from handling real-estate closings: attorneys. However, the benefit for those buying and selling property is questionable.

Those involved in a real estate transaction certainly should have the option of having the services of an attorney, and there are many times when using the expertise of a lawyer would be advisable. However, the decision of whether to use an attorney should be a matter of choice, not a legal requirement.

The proposal before the bar association's board of governors would make it a misdemeanor for lay people to conduct closings by invoking a state law forbidding the practice of law without a license. The 21-member board is researching the proposal and will make a recommendation to the Kentucky Supreme Court.

The bar association approved the use of non-lawyers in closings in 1981, and since then, attorneys have been cut out of much of a once-lucrative legal field. Many banks and real-estate agents now use their own experts to handle less-complicated deals, and title companies are performing complicated title research—all at a fraction of the cost attorneys charge for the same services.

Proponents of the proposed change argue that the non-involvement of lawyers puts the public at risk with bad advice, but they offer no evidence that non-lawyers are more likely to make mistakes in land deals than lawyers.

In order to gain work for the plethora of lawyers that exist in many Kentucky communities, the bar association proposal is attacking a problem that doesn't exist. That's nonsense.

Reader commends Times for editorial on special needs kids

Editor:
I want to commend the Floyd County Times for its Editorial which appeared in the September 10 issue, on behalf of special needs children in the Floyd County Schools. As the editorial indicated, the testimony by the special needs parents at the meeting at the Stumbo-Wilkinson Center was truly heartrending. It is a continuing saga that seems to have no end. Over the years, attorneys from Appalred and the Protection and Advocacy Division of the Department of Public Advocacy have represented numerous parents and children in proceedings seeking to establish the rights of the children to an appropriate education in the Floyd County School system. We will continue to do that and we welcome financially eligible parents to contact these offices as the need arises. Ultimately, however, it is the day-to-day response and cooperation of school officials, teachers, and even classmates that will insure that these children have the education to which they are entitled.

HEALTH CARE REFORM WITHOUT THE MANDATES

Virginia small-business owner Dale Gilliland used to provide health insurance for his employees. But when one employee filed a lot of claims, his health care premiums skyrocketed. Today, Gilliland wants to offer health insurance to his employees, but he cannot afford it. And he's not alone.

No one wants to offer health insurance to their employees more than small-business owners, but they are the group least able to do so. According to the Small Business Administration, two-thirds of the working uninsured are either in firms with fewer than 500 employees or are self-employed. In an NFIB Education Foundation survey, small-business owners listed rising health care costs as their No. 1 problem in 1991 and again in 1996.

Congress did take some small steps toward health care reform last year. A new health care law increased the tax deduction that the self-employed may take for the cost of their health insurance from 30 percent to 80 percent, phased in over 10 years. But it doesn't go far enough. Big businesses can currently deduct 100 percent of their health costs. The self-employed business owner should have that same deduction. This would equalize insurance costs for the two and enable many of the uninsured self-employed to purchase health insurance for themselves and their employees.

The new health insurance law is also a test-run for Medical Savings Accounts (MSAs) which are similar to individual retirement accounts in their design. MSAs will allow employers (with fewer than 50 employees) or the employee to buy traditional type insurance policies with a very high deductible so that the policies cost less. Then, employees or employers can put the money into a tax-free account that can be used to pay for out-of-pocket medical expenses until the deductible is reached and insurance coverage kicks in.

Private, voluntary national purchasing groups for small businesses are another way to make health insurance more accessible and affordable. These groups, which would allow small firms to band together and self-insure, would give small employers the advantages that big businesses currently enjoy; bargaining power in the marketplace, administrative savings from volume buying, and freedom from those costly state mandates that are constantly raising premiums.

For example, when small-business owners buy health insurance, they must pay for benefits mandated by their state (such as acupuncture and fertility treatments). Companies with tens of thousands of employees (such as General Motors) self-insure—pay claims out of company funds—and are exempt from state-mandated-coverage requirements which can add 30 percent to the cost of premiums. U.S. Sen. Tim Hutchinson, R-Ark., and Rep. Harris Fawell, R-Ill., have introduced legislation on purchasing groups.

And small employers are facing another health care threat: incrementalized federal mandates. In the last year, there have been two new federal health care mandates forced on employers—the mental health parity provision and the 48-hour maternity stay provision. It's difficult to argue against the need for accessible, affordable mental health care, or against allowing a mother to stay a safe length of time in the hospital after giving birth. The emotional arguments for these issues have obscured their costs. But mandates defeat the very purpose of health care reform, which is to lower health care costs and to insure more people. According to Blue Cross-Blue Shield, monthly premiums have increased an average of 10 percent in states that have enacted general mental health coverage mandates.

The reforms in last year's law were good first steps toward making health care available and affordable to the small-business community. But new federal mandates on health care run counter to this goal. Small-business owners need reforms that encourage purchasing groups, not new mandates, to help keep down excessive health insurance costs. Small-business owners like Dale Gilliland need health care reform, not only for themselves but for their employees and their families, and they need it soon.

The Political Party

New democratic party leader must meet a changing Kentucky

Off of the interstate as you drive into Frankfort you can see the state's Democratic Party headquarters sitting vain and tall up on the hill. The building is big and modern and overbearing, and out of touch with Kentucky politics of today.

Republican headquarters is an old, run-down house a few blocks from the capitol. With that old house as its symbolic home base, Kentucky Republicans have been slowly and quietly bringing this long-entrenched Democratic state under Republican control.

On the national level the credit for these shifts in power should be given to Senator Mitch McConnell. But on the state level hundreds, maybe thousands, of awards could be handed out to recognize devotion and hard work geared toward making the Republican Party a contender in the Bluegrass State. Whether it's the county chairman or the local businessman, dynamic and innovative Republican leaders are visible and potent.

With the 1998 elections just around the corner, the Democrats are looking and hoping for the same type of leaders to step forward. Facing the possibility of losing control of the state senate and the probability of giving up the Congressional delegation entirely, the Democratic Party is looking more and more like a lame duck as the state organization struggles under debt, disorganization, and lack of vision.

Bob Babbage is the politician who resigned in April as state Democratic Party chair to become lobbyist for a large company which operates private prisons. It was Babbage who released a press statement naming the Democrat Senators from eastern Kentucky betrayers and deserters for ousting "Eck" Rose as Senate President. Now those same Senators are the established leaders of the Senate.

Babbage, rather than working to strengthen the party, helped divide the party and alienated its leaders.

He failed to face the reality of today's day and age—Kentucky Democrats no longer live and die by the party because the party is not as strong as it once was.

As of last week, Ron McCloud, a Greenup County native, succeeded Babbage as chairman of the Democratic Central Committee in Frankfort. To avoid disaster in next year's elections, he must remember key words that regulate successful politics in the '90s: moderation, cooperation, common sense, and humility—concepts which seem strange to important factions of the once dominant party.

Potentially, the Democrat Party could regain its strength in upcoming years. Registered Democrats in the state still outnumber Republicans almost two to one. But the big lever casting a vote for a state of Democrats is not pulled by voters as often as it was in the past. Allegiance fueled by political patronage (bargained for support) is being replaced by more civic-minded voting by those who seek to decrease the size of government and have grown tired of partisan stalemates.

Republican leaders have been cleverly capitalizing on these changes by openly appealing to the public's need for moderation. McCloud, Governor Patton, the county party chairmen and other Democratic leaders should follow suit, or in the not-so-distant future, Kentucky will be a Republican-led state.

Suspended police chief says he'll take Wheelwright City Commission to court

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

While Wheelwright City Commissioners met on September 10 to revamp police department policies and procedures, police chief Tommy Engle said he planned to take commissioners to court.

Engle was suspended without pay from his duties in July until commissioners could hear citizen complaints against the chief.

The hearing was held on September 5 and all but one charge against Engle was dismissed. Commissioners voted to issue Engle a "major reprimand" and not pay him for the time he was suspended.

Engle said last week that he intends to sue the commission in Floyd Circuit Court for his back pay and will also file suit in federal court. He did not indicate on what grounds he intends to sue commissioners in federal court.

The police chief said he is pleased with the community support he has received.

"I want to show my appreciation for the cards and phone calls I have received from the community," he said. "There's more to come."

After the special meeting last week, Commissioner Andy Akers instructed city clerk Mary Ann Slone to prepare a letter to be sent to the state Attorney General's Office asking for an investigation into Engle's situation.

"I want to ask the attorney general to investigate these attacks on our police chief," Akers said.

During the special meeting, city attorney Tim Parker presented a revised policy, which he said conformed more closely to state law and specified the grounds for a minor and major reprimand.

A major reprimand can be issued only if an officer is charged with a class A misdemeanor or felony, and if an officer causes a danger to public safety. Any other violation of policy would be cause for a minor reprimand. After three minor reprimands, an officer may be fired.

Parker referred to incidents when a civilian's car may be rammed by a policeman in an effort to stop the vehicle, which apparently was one of the charges against Engle.

Ethics commissioner David Hall asked Parker about an officer's training which, he said, teaches policemen how to protect themselves in dangerous situations.

With Hall's questions, Commissioner Luther Johnson commented, "They don't teach them to knock the hell out of them and beat them to death."

Johnson did not explain his comment and there has been no indication that Engle has been charged with such an offense.

Commissioner Akers questioned a change which declares that city police officers are classified as "at-will employees," who can be fired by the commission without cause.

"Can we do that under the Policeman's Bill of Rights?" Akers asked Parker.

Parker said the commission could because in a sixth class city, such as Wheelwright, employees are not covered by civil service provisions.

Akers and Commissioner David Boyd disagreed with Parker's explanation.

Commissioners also voted 3-2, to prohibit any random road checks by city officers unless requested to by "the state police captain or high sheriff." Akers and Boyd voted against it.

Commissioners voted 3-2 for all the changes, with Akers and Boyd voting no.

In other business at the September 10 meeting:

Auxiliary police officer David "Boo" Little was relieved of his duties. Commissioners gave no explanation for that action.

Mayor David Marlee Sammons announced that the city is currently without a police officer because Engle injured his back when he returned to work on Monday. Parker suggested that the city hire a temporary policeman until Engle is released by his doctor to return to work. Akers, who oversees the police department, said Engle's injury wasn't very serious and he should be able to return to work soon. Sammons said he wanted to make it clear that he did not call Engle out to answer a complaint when he was injured.

Commissioner Jimmy Little

again asked who authorized Jackie Bartley to do repair work on the city police cruiser. Boyd said it was his understanding Bartley was to do the work for free, but that Johnson later told Bartley he would be paid for the work. Little said he was also upset over a wrecker bill from Bartley who "got mad 'cause we wouldn't pay him and picked up the car." Akers commented that commissioners agreed to pay Bartley "outside of a meeting." Little wanted further explanation on the issue, but Parker said there was no need because the debt had been paid.

All commissioners were present at the meeting.

Day of Prayer

CAP employees, volunteers participate in Day of Prayer

Christian Appalachian Project employees and volunteers from throughout the region gathered for the second annual CAP Day of Prayer on Thursday, September 11. Beginning at 9 a.m., and continuing all day, groups of CAP workers in various locations in the Eastern Kentucky service area convened to ask God's guidance in the work that they do.

In Louisa, CAP's newest location on the West Virginia border, individual groups met to pray in 15 minute intervals, then representatives from each group gathered at the Louisa office.

Outreach and volunteer coordinator Albert Bloomfield, did a ten-minute radio broadcast, telling about the day of prayer, and asked all to participate.

Prayer in Johnson County was led by Rev. George Love, a Prestonsburg Presbyterian Church minister.

A small but fervent group of employees and volunteers met at the CAP Child Development Center in Berea and shared stories about miracles in their lives and enjoyed music selections by volunteer Jill Vogel.

All of the Magoffin County employees and volunteers met at the central office, and shared readings and prayer.

CAP president Mike Sanders attended the service in Lancaster and asked the assembly of over 40 people to not only thank God for the blessings that we have received, but to pray for the people involved in CAP programs that closed in the previous year.

He also asked for prayers for the success of the upcoming capital campaign, and for the donors that make CAP's work possible.

"Let the CAP Day of Prayer inspire us to pray every day," Mike said.

Steven

Looking for a family

This handsome youngster is nine-year-old Steven. His gorgeous smile belies his early years. Steven can credit much of his new attitude to his current foster care placement. He has been in this therapeutic foster home for a year and has made tremendous strides in self esteem and in positive behavior.

Steven has a wide variety of interests. He enjoys reading, coloring, drawing, bike riding, playing on the trampoline, swimming, boating, and fishing. Steven also enjoys quiet activities of watching TV, movies, and observing the Comet—Hale-Bopp. He is in the second grade in a regular ungraded classroom. Since his home life has stabilized, he is doing much better in school; both in behavior and grades. Steven enjoys reading to the younger children in school. He is presently in weekly counseling and is in good health. He loves one-on-one attention. Steven does take medication for hyperactivity disorder.

Steven is a little apprehensive about adoption, but is willing to give it a try. He indicates a preference for a two-parent home. Steve would probably do best if there were no other children in the home. Can you help this child reach his potential?

To be eligible to adopt Steven, you must first complete a preparation and approval process. Please call the Special Needs Adoption Program at 1-800-432-9346 for more information, or 886-8192.

Gone, But You're Never Forgotten

You're Missed!

It's surprising how often I think of you, turn to speak to you, and realize you're not right there as I expect you to be. I guess I hold you so close in thought that it's hard to understand sometimes that you aren't close in person. But I wanted to let you know I'm thinking of you and wishing we could talk and just be together awhile—

David Water District agrees to merger

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

David Water District commissioners verbally agreed Wednesday night for a merger between the water company and Prestonsburg Utilities.

The agreement was reached during a special joint meeting Wednesday of the water companies.

The terms of the merger agreement include "good water pressure...a waiver on the annexation ordinance...payoff of the David water company's debts...and leave rates the way they are until the debt is paid off."

Dan Greene, director of the David School — which is the largest water user in David — opened Wednesday's meeting by commending the commissioners for the work they've put into the system over the last 20 years.

Greene said the town of David bought itself in 1975 and gained "some sense of self direction," and was fortunate enough to get water two years later.

He said the commissioners had become "unsung heroes" for the work they have put into the system.

"I think the system in a sense, now that it's 20 years old, needs more work," Greene said, adding that some water users have taken advantage of the system.

"We run it like a family instead of a business," David water commissioner Jackie Howard said.

"Now that we're moving to a different level, we all agree we can't operate anymore as a family," Greene said. "We need an organization that can be strong, committed and financially secure."

Greene said he was concerned with the David water company because the system's debt had more than doubled in the last year.

The David Water District is approximately $27,000 in the red, according to Howard.

"The indebtedness is overwhelming," Greene said. "I think the timing is right now for looking at a merger. My vote would go with a company that can provide good, clean water every day of the year, and with rates that would be equitable."

Howard asked Prestonsburg Utilities commissioners who would be responsible for the David water company's debt.

"We don't owe anybody," Prestonsburg Utility chairman C. J. McNally said. "If we take (the David system) over, you'll be ours...we're one in the same...We'll take care of the people you owe money to."

Howard also said that a major concern he had with the merger was a possible increase in water rates for David customers.

"No, we don't do business that way," McNally said. "We'll leave your rates exactly the way they are for a period of time until the bills are paid and then we'll drop the rates to our rates. It will never be as high as you're paying now."

David water customers are currently paying $8.25 for the first 2,000 gallons of water, and Prestonsburg Utility customers outside the corporation limits are required to pay $6.97 for the same amount of water.

According to Beaver-Elkhorn Water District's rates, customers pay $14.10 for the first 1,000 gallons of water, half the amount of water compared to David and Prestonsburg Utility rates.

Greene said it would cost the David School and area customers "a lot" if the David water company merged with Beaver-Elkhorn.

Beaver-Elkhorn has been supplying the David Water District with water at a rate of $2 per 1,000 gallons, according to Beaver-Elkhorn commissioner Tommy Hall.

David L. Shepherd, a David resident, questioned Prestonsburg Utilities commissioners about resolving the water pressure problem when Branham and Baker's coal tipples washes its coal.

"Well, when we signed a contract to serve Branham and Baker we stipulated in the contract that our primary objective was to serve domestic water — people with water in houses," John W. Burke, a Prestonsburg Utilities commissioner, said. "We told them that if they interfered with it, they would have to alter their pumping schedule or reduce their pumping rate so it doesn't interfere."

Burke said if the coal company could not alter its system to keep from interfering with domestic customers, Prestonsburg Utilities would install an additional water tank to service the coal company.

"If we take you as our customers — we'll provide you service," Burke said.

"No doubt the majority of the people want to go with Prestonsburg," Howard said. "If the tipples hadn't been on your system, we would have started (with the merger) right here."

Seldon Horne, Prestonsburg Utilities superintendent, told Howard and the other David water commissioners that he would resolve the problem with the coal company.

"Give me an opportunity to work that problem out — if we can't, we'll do what we have to," Horne said. "We will provide you with adequate service."

"Check in our system anywhere and we have taken care of the system," McNally said. "When we take you in our system, you are part of it and we'll provide you the same service as (customers within Prestonsburg)."

Another concern of Howard's was an annexation ordinance which water customers sign, agreeing not to fight annexation.

McNally assured the David water commissioners that the city of Prestonsburg was not interested in annexing the town of David, and David customers would be given a waiver on the ordinance.

The Prestonsburg Utilities commission agreed to all of Howard's and the other commissioners' terms of the merger.

"Jackie, we couldn't ask for more," Greene said.

"Prestonsburg City Utilities has never looked at itself as a utility only for the city — it's an area utility..." McNally said. "We've been here a long time and our track record's behind us and we don't apologize for it...We'll be

This and That

DON'T TAKE IT OUT!!!!

by Bill R. Francis

Have you noticed that every time they remove or take something out to improve the taste, make it work better, run faster, or make things healthier for us it cost us more?

I recall in the 1950s the cost of sugar went up on one of its cycles. The cost of a 5¢ bottle of pop rose in price to 8¢ on the promise that the increase was only temporary. When sugar dropped in price, so would the cost of pop. Well, that's been quite a few years ago. You know the rest of the story. Sugar dropped in price.

It had been inconvenient to make change using all those pennies. This almost caused a copper shortage. Add to that, the new pop machines were set on 5¢. Of course, the next best thing to do was change the machines to 10¢ and the climb has never stopped.

But, wait a minute, I need to back up, sugar substitute came out in 1958. This didn't help lower the cost of a "big Pepsi or small Coke."

Then remember they completely took the sugar out, and a new product hit us called sugar-free. When the sugar-free pop first came out, it was slightly cheaper until they changed the name to "diet pop" and it became more popular. Then they stuck the price to us.

Remember coffee—regular coffee. Then a new coffee product entered the coffee pot called decaffeinated coffee. That meant they took out the caffeine. Then they sell us the decaffeinated coffee and use the caffeine in other products such as sport drinks and pop. Now, you can become addicted to the caffeine in some drinks.

So what happened to the price of coffee when they took something out of coffee? Decaffeinated came on the market slightly cheaper. No one liked the taste and there was no addiction to it. Decaffeinated coffee began to gain in popularity with open heart surgery. The public perception changed and that the decaffeinated coffee became the suspect agent in raising blood pressure, causing nervousness, and sleepless nights. What happened next is that the coffee companies saw a loss of people getting unhooked from the caffeine. The price of regular coffee with all the ingredients of caffeine, then dropped in price. It is now twice as cheap as decaffeinated coffee. They want us to stay addicted.

I hate to get back on sugar. Do you recall when cookie companies took the sugar out and used sugar substitute? There was no demand and diabetics were paying a high price. Then we all got health or fat conscience and so the cost of sugar and fat-free foods go even higher.

Now let's take a look at that "little ol' can of tuna fish." First it came packed in that expensive oil. They switched to vegetable oil. The price remained the same. It now comes packed also in spring water and the price isn't cheaper. I don't know the kind of spring the water comes from (probably river water) but it cost the same or more than tuna with oil. I just don't understand all this. While writing this article, I stopped at the above sentence to go to the grocery store. While there, I noticed a sale sign, "tuna on sale." Well I was curious. I looked over the sale and there was a new kind of tuna in water. The sign display said low sodium tuna. You guessed it, without the sodium, it cost more.

What about the modest little cracker? You recall before they took out the fat? Crackers were cheaper. Now they have taken off the salt, and they are higher.

Recollect when cigarettes were cheaper. Everyone that ever smoked knows how non-addictive they are. You can quit anytime you want. You just don't want to quit a dirty, stinking, unhealthy, cancer and heart disease habit. The point I am coming to is that you would think menthol cigarettes would be more expensive; you know, an added ingredient. Not so, because menthol is also habit forming combined with nicotine. This additional addiction makes them slightly cheaper. Yes, I have heard the tale that this additional addition helps with sinus problems, never mind the heart disease and lung cancer. They probably wouldn't have the sinus problems if they didn't smoke.

Let's look at good wholesome milk. I am not talking about the best, but cow's milk in plastic jugs. The dairies took out the butter-fat and used it in other products. The demand for fat-free milk or skim milk which is just about "flavored water" in taste is higher.

In the beginning reduced calorie bread was for the most part only sliced very thin. This reduced the number of calories per slice. They took out the fat and here again that slim healthy figure got us a price hike.

Now they don't need to cut down as many trees. We now can buy recycled paper. Cheaper? No, just the same price and the name "made from recycled paper." The name must have added to the cost.

The petroleum industry had been using lead in gasoline. They were asked to "get the lead out" and the price went up. Do you remember when you could buy regular leaded gas; it was cheaper until the mandatory switch? We all thought when they began making gasohol or ethanol, that is a little "moonshine" in gasoline, it would have been cheaper.

Bear with me. I only have a couple more. Everyone remembers when automobiles had steel fenders and bumpers. They then changed to tin and the price went up. Even the dash was metal in automobiles. Now we ride in pride with all the lustering plastic and rubber parts. I know some of this makes the autos safer. I am all for it. But the price goes higher not down. Those plastic hub-caps that have a luster instead of a shine. There was once a difference in the price in white and black wall tires. White-walls were about ten dollars more. Now, if you want a black wall tire, they simply turn the white wall inside and the tire is the same price.

I'll end with this one for thought. Food prices are higher we know due to the added cost of chemicals for insect and disease control. Also, the high cost of fertilizer. Now comes the popular organic gardening. The grower swears he doesn't use man-made pesticides and fertilizers. The exception; that which comes from man and beast in the form of manures. Many barn owners gladly give away the manure to get the barn cleaned. I know most of us would give freely of ours. The price of organic raised foods isn't cheaper, it's four to five times higher.

As an old cliché goes. They have used or taken out everything but the squeal. So, I say once it's in, don't take it out. It's too painful on our pocket-book.

RAM technologies to offer Mayo Manor tours benefiting United Way

The Mayo Manor, corporate headquarters of RAM Technologies, will be open to the public for tours during Poage Landing Days. Tours will be offered on Saturday, September 20, from 12 noon to 4 p.m., and on Sunday, September 21, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The cost of the tour is $4.00 with the proceeds benefiting United Way.

The Mayo Manor was built in 1971 by Mary Alice Fetter, widow of Paintsville coal baron, John C. C. Mayo. The mansion is a severely simple, three-story Italian villa constructed of regional gray quarried stone. The interior features numerous stained-glass windows believed to be made by Tiffany, including a depiction of the "Breaks of the Big Sandy." Other features include Italian green marble columns, a cantilevered stairway that crosses a large window on both the second and third floors with a hand-carved banister of walnut and cast bronze spindles.

The Mayo Manor was purchased by RAM Technologies in 1994 and the company's president and CEO, Robert A. Moyer Jr., has overseen the extensive renovations of the building. "We are extremely proud of the Mayo Manor and are pleased to help United Way by offering tours of our facility," said Mr. Moyer. "Although restoration of a building this age is an ongoing process, we are approximately 90 percent complete. This is a much larger endeavor than I had imagined, but it has certainly become a labor of love for the mansion, our community and all of Eastern Kentucky."

For additional information about the tours, contact Beth Taylor at (606) 324-1726, ext. 256.

RAM Technologies is a regional wireless communications company offering paging, answering services and Internet access. RAM Technologies has four Kentucky offices located in Ashland, Lexington, Louisville and Prestonsburg, and two West Virginia locations—Huntington and Charleston.

Kentucky Department for the Blind staffers experience a world without sight or sound

Sandra K. Isaac, independent living specialist and Kenis Mike Hall, vocational rehabilitation counselor with the Kentucky Department for the Blind in Prestonsburg, recently attended a one-week seminar at the Helen Keller National Center's (HKNC) headquarters in Sands Point, New York.

Geared especially for professionals from the state of Kentucky who have worked with people who are either blind or deaf, this seminar provided an opportunity for participants to get to know each other, build a foundation for effective teamwork, and acquire some in-depth information about working with individuals who are deaf and blind.

"My time at HKNC has been rewarding; showing eye-opening opportunities available for people who are Deaf-Blind," said Isaac. "Knowing Usher Syndrome is prevalent in my service area, I feel the information and knowledge I acquired at HKNC will be useful for Kentucky consumers. I am thankful to be a part of the Kentucky Group who will be working from common ground and sharing information with other professionals. A great week!"

According to Sr. Bernadette Wynne, HKNC's National Training Team coordinator, the focus of the week was: learning more about living independently in the community, and recognizing the importance and difficulty of finding appropriate residential placements near employment sites. Other issues addressed included the psychological aspects of deaf-blindness, communication systems used by this population, and the world of technology and adaptive aids and devices.

All participants were keenly interested in "how-to": administer vocational assessments and evaluations, train job coaches to assist a client who is deaf-blind on the job and identify the elements of a good match between the client and the job always keeping in mind the client's interests, preferences and abilities.

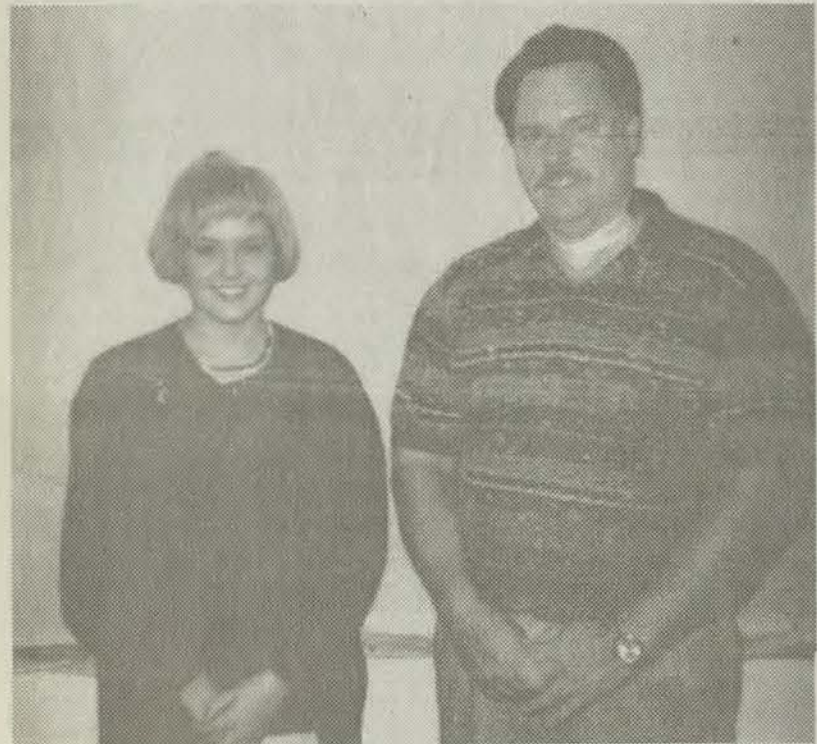

"While in New York City, the group attended a Broadway musical and toured the Statue of Liberty and other areas of historical interest," added Hall.

Participants also had practical experiences like wearing earplugs and blindfolds to simulate deaf-blindness and depending on a sighted guide for traveling about.

The various causes of deaf-blindness were discussed, including Rubella syndrome (mother contracts German measles during her first trimester of pregnancy), Usher syndrome (a genetic condition combining deafness and gradual loss of vision due to Retinitis Pigmentosa), accidents, trauma, disease and more.

HKNC is the only program offering short-term comprehensive vocational rehabilitation training and assistance for job and residential placements for all Americans who are deaf-blind. It also operates a network of services nationwide, including 10 regional offices, some 40 affiliated agencies, a National Training Team and Older Adult Program. HKNC participates in a National Technical Assistance Consortium for Children and Young Adults who are Deaf-Blind (NTAC) and is part of the National Information Clearinghouse on Children who are Deaf-Blind (DB-LINK). The Center partially funds a National Family Association for Deaf-Blind (NFADB).

For further information about specialized training or deaf-blindness, contact Sandra Isaac, (606) 886-2730, or Kenis Hall, (606) 886-2730.

Black Lung clinics program to see $1 million increase

An appropriations bill being considered by the U. S. Senate contains $5 million for the Black Lung Clinics Program, an increase of $1 million over last year's funding, U.S. Senator Wendell Ford (D-KY) announced recently.

Since the $5 million is contained in both the House and Senate versions of the FY 1998 Labor-HHS Appropriations bill, that amount is sure to be agreed upon when the measure is enacted into law, Ford said.

The Black Lung Clinics Program supports 14 grantees in Kentucky and other states which treat current and retired coal miners with respiratory and pulmonary impairments. The clinics offer treatment, education, medication, and rehabilitation for black lung sufferers.

"It's no secret that without these clinics, many coal miners with black lung will either go untreated or be forced to find other treatment that is much more costly," Ford said. "Simply put, these clinics are the only place many of these patients have to turn to. This increased funding means that the clinics' good work will go forward and our miners will have access to needed medical care."

Last year, a House subcommittee had approved $1.9 million for the program, putting its future in doubt. However, the final legislation funded the program at $4 million.

Students hold "mini-protest" over dress code

Eight Sheldon Clark High School students returned to their classrooms Monday morning following a mini-protest outside the high school, ending — at least temporarily — a dispute with administrators and board personnel which centered around black clothing, hard rock music and alleged Satan worship.

"We are not going to tolerate the kind of behavior which is disruptive to other students," said Martin County Superintendent Bill Slone. "It goes beyond just wearing black clothing, white paint on the face and black lipstick. We will not allow a few individuals to detract from the other 850 or so students who are trying to get an education. It's that simple."

Monday's demonstration brought to a head a week of controversy surrounding a group of 40-50 students, called "the corner group" by most in the school, because they tended to congregate in one corner of the school hallways during breaks and lunch. Slone and SC Principal A.J. Haney said the group caught the attention of faculty and administrators when the size of the group became so large that when they met, it literally blocked access to the hallway.

"We basically said they could meet in the gymnasium like everybody else," Slone said.

But tension in the school began escalating when members of the group began showing up at the school with white faces and upside down crosses painted in black on their faces as well. The black apparel and bizarre facial paint were inspired by an obscure musical group called Marilyn Manson, whose lead singer claims to be the "all-American antichrist."

"It's one thing when a group just meets in a certain place every day. It's something different when you have a group of kids who sit in a circle and chant to disturb a prayer group that's meeting at the same time," Slone said. "It's pretty bad that I have a 40-member prayer group that has been meeting without any publicity at all, but when we send home kids who have upside down crosses and participate in cult-related activity, that gets all the press."

Two students were sent home last week because of their dress — and because of several minor altercations involving members of the group and other students.

None of the students who participated in Monday's "walkout" wore black clothing not did they have makeup on their faces.

To some parents, like Tina Sweeney, the dispute has nothing to do with devil worship or rock music. It's about the students' right to meet in groups.

"My son has friends in that group and all they want is their corner back," she said. "My son is no devil worshipper, he just sticks up for his friends."

Others, like Janet Bowen, said one group is being singled out because of the way they dress.

"I've dressed like this (in black) my whole life and I don't see anything wrong with it."

But Haney said he would, as school principal, stop any behavior which would distract other students from learning — and that he would begin contacting parents of students who exhibit destructive behavior.

Slone said Haney had the complete support of the school board.

"We are going to control the school," he said. "We can't let a small group of students run it."—The Martin County Sun

Airport expansion would be economic boon to area

By Michael Sisco
Martin County Sun

Initial work has begun to expand the capabilities of the Big Sandy Regional Airport — in a move closely tied with Martin County's expected economic expansion.

Members of the Big Sandy Regional Airport board have requested the assistance of Sen. Wendall Ford (D-Ky.), who chairs the federal subcommittee on aviation.

According to Ford representative Matt Davis, plans are in the works to expand the airport runway from 5,000 feet to 6,000 feet — enabling it to handle nearly any size air traffic.

"Senator Ford has been in contact with the local airport board and has agreed to help in any way he can," Davis said. "Kentucky airports are high on his priority list and I think that his position on the aviation board will benefit Big Sandy."

Davis said at least two airports in Eastern Kentucky — Hazard and Big Sandy — are on Ford's list of airports which require immediate attention.

The expansion project, when approved, will be the latest in a long line of development projects closely tied to the proposed 450-job federal prison expected to be constructed on the Honey Branch Industrial site, adjacent to airport property. The newly-created Honey Branch Industrial Authority is set to meet, September 22, to discuss its application for millions in state economic funds.

The project will also help the airport recover from a cloud of scandal concerning its past two airport managers, James Mineer Jr. and James Mineer Sr.

Davis said Friday that the runway expansion project, which could cost several hundred thousand dollars, will be primarily funded by the federal government, but a portion would have to come from matching funds.

"It's a lengthy process as far as the application is concerned," he said. "But the senator will be available to help out in a number of ways. The senator is concerned with every airport in Kentucky and will do what he can to make sure they have what they need."

Pike teen killed in car accident

A Pikeville teen-ager was killed in a car accident, Sunday morning, after the driver of the car he was riding in apparently fell asleep on Interstate 64 in Clark County, authorities said.

According to a Clark County Sheriff's Office report, Shane Michael Mullins, 18, of Caney Branch, was a passenger in a 1991 Toyota Camry driven by Joseph R. Williamson, also 18, of Varney.

Williamson apparently fell asleep at the wheel and the car traveled 316 feet before hitting an embankment, traveling airborne 116 feet and coming to rest in a fence, the report said.

The accident occurred about 10 a.m., near Ky. 1678.

Mullins was flown to the University of Kentucky Hospital in Lexington, where he died at 10:54 a.m. Williamson was treated and dismissed from UK Hospital.

Mullins, a student at Northern Kentucky University and a member of the First Baptist Church of Pikeville and the Crossroads Youth Group, was the son of Donna Little Howard of Pikeville and Gary Mullins of Prestonsburg.

Services for Mullins were held Wednesday at the First Baptist Church in Pikeville. From the Appalachian News-Express

Med school will have economic impact

By David Gross
Appalachian News-Express

The recently-opened Pikeville College School of Osteopathic Medicine will have the equivalent of a $40 million annual economic impact on Eastern Kentucky beginning in the year 2001, officials have announced.

The figure, released earlier this week by the college's office external affairs, includes, "very, very conservative" projections of tuition costs, instructional staff salaries and various personal expenses.

"I think (the medical school) is going to help not only Pike County, but all of Eastern Kentucky in many ways," said Gerri Kinder, the college's director of external affairs.

"It's a snowball effect," she said. "Every time a dollar is spent, it's going to be recycled six or seven times. So the school is not only going to improve health care, it will also help the area economically."

The medical school, which opened for classes September 8, is expected to pump an extra $6.2 million into local economies in its first year, a Pike County official said.

The real economic development is expected to come in four years, when the instructional staff doubles in size and student enrollment climbs to four times its current level.

Estimates of the medical school's annual economic impact include:

- $5.3 million in student tuition costs. That money can be used by the college to pay instructional staff salaries and other expenses, Kinder said.

- $2.9 million in housing and living expenses for students and staff.

- About $1.4 million other personal expenses.

The officials' projection of the school's overall economic impact is based on their anticipation that the money will be "recycled" or change hands, at least five times within the region.

"Obviously, we're excited about it," said Pike County Judge-Executive Donna Damron. "This is an example of economic development. For us, it's the equivalent of having industry here."

The initial projections do not account for a future increase in the local tax base, or on

Foreman fired after refusing to get CDL

by Kim Stacy
Appalachian News-Express

A longtime Pike County road supervisor was terminated Monday by the Pike County Fiscal Court for failing to comply with the county's administrative code that requires all employees who may operate certain types of equipment to obtain a commercial driver's license.

Glenn Gibson, supervisor of District One and whose wife, Karen Gibson, is the magistrate for that district, was suspended, September 2, by the Pike County Fiscal Court because he does not have that license.

Gibson has been an employee with the county for about 18 years and foreman for more than 11 years.

The new policy requiring the license took effect the day before Gibson's suspension. That policy was passed by the court in March. When the court passed the policy, Karen Gibson was the only magistrate to vote "no" on the issue.

"There have been a lot of things said about this unfortunate situation which are not accurate and not relevant to the issue," said Pike County Judge-Executive Donna Damron. "For instance, it has been incorrectly stated the fiscal court terminated Mr. Gibson without cause. The court very clearly terminated him for cause — his refusal to comply with a policy of the fiscal court."

Several other employees who also faced termination were granted extension deadlines so they could obtain their CDL, but Damron said no employees had been granted waivers from the policy.

Magistrates called for an executive session to discuss personnel issues, but Gibson asked that he be allowed to discuss his employment in open court.

After other matters were discussed in executive session, Gibson read a letter in open court. However, when one of the magistrates attempted to ask him a question, he refused to answer and said his letter would stand as his statement.

"The fiscal court afforded Mr. Gibson due process and an opportunity to be heard on the issue," said Damron. "He requested

Eight hour power outage planned

Some residents of Johnson and Floyd County will be without power early next month — not because they didn't pay their bills but because the power company will be doing maintenance work.

American Electric Power will be upgrading their system on Saturday, October 11, on the wires high above the Dairy Queen in Prestonsburg — wires which affect a portion of Prestonsburg and several communities of Johnson County.

"We will be undergoing major renovation at a substation," said Chuck Ferguson, Corporate Communications Representative with American Electric Power in Pikeville, "which essentially means that we are upgrading the system to better provide our customers."

Ferguson said that the electric company will be mailing out notices to all of its customers forewarning of the power outage and will be advertising in local papers due to the magnitude of the operation.

The outage should last about eight to ten hours, beginning at eight in the morning, and will affect West Van Lear, Van Lear, Auxier, Hager Hill, and Little Paint in Floyd County. — The Paintsville Herald

District Three commissioner race heats up

The race for District Three commissioner gathered steam over the past week with the entry of two new candidates to the field.

Bob Pelphrey of Stambaugh and Harold Campbell of Sitka, both entered the race for the Republican nomination to the post. The two will be challenging Cecil Tackett of Sitka in the May 26 primary.

The commissioner's seat is currently held by Democrat Nancy Cantrell. — The Paintsville Herald

Wesley Jordan's life brighter following nightmare of abuse

Wesley Jordan, 17, first came to the public's attention when it was discovered that his stepfather and mother had imprisoned and tortured him for approximately 18 months.

Between June, 1994, and November, 1995, the teenager was chained in the bathroom of his family's apartment in Inez.

Jordan has recently been seen on the Montel Williams Show and also participated in an interview on WYMT's Issues and Answers. The talk shows allowed Jordan to discuss his experiences, and also is a platform by which his lawyer and other sponsors hope to publicize the existence of a trust fund set up in Jordan's name through Community Trust Bank in Pikeville. He is also slated to appear on an upcoming episode of Dateline. The youngster has been enrolled in a private school. — The Salyersville Independent

Old bank building again to be considered by Register

The building originally housing the Salyersville National Bank will be considered for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

The State Historic Preservation Review Board was scheduled to decide whether the building meets the criteria at their September 11 meeting in Bowling Green. This is the second time the building will be included on the board's agenda. The building, which features hand-cut stone, was constructed in 1912. — The Salyersville Independent

Clerk says allegations are "simply not true"

Inez City Clerk Sheila Hardin says she has documents which prove that allegations made against her by members of the Inez Town Council were false.

Among the allegations made against Hardin were that she locked Federal Emergency Management Agency funding applications in a filing cabinet drawer, had withheld mail addressed to Inez Mayor Winnie Muncy, and did not forward an estimate for sewer hookup to the state Transportation Cabinet.

She produced documents showing that she had faxed the form to the Transportation Cabinet in August, and that the request for FEMA money had been received within the deadline. — The Martin County Sun

Theft of eight pickup tailgates puzzles cops

According to Martin County sheriff's deputies, someone gave new meaning to the word tailgate party, as eight tailgates were stolen from vehicles Tuesday night.

Thieves hit four different places late Tuesday night, according to F.D. Fitzpatrick, who is the investigating officer. Thieves took four tailgates from Meade's Auto Sales and later took two tailgates from Crum Motor Sales. Tailgates were also stolen from vehicles of area residents.

Kentucky State Police detective Steve Bowman has been placed in charge of one of the incidents. — The Martin County Sun

Police nab six in theft case

Five adults and one juvenile were arrested Monday night in connection with a daring daylight burglary of a prominent Martin County resident's home.

The burglary took place between 5:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. Monday at the residence of Bob Calloway, who was out of town at the time, according to police reports.

Guns and a police scanner were stolen from Calloway's home, reports said.

An anonymous tip received at the Martin County Sheriff's Department led to the arrest of six male suspects, who were taken into custody Monday night.

Arrested were Gary J. Stepp, Henry McCoy, Kenneth Lee Shoptaw, Johnny H. Reed, Bobby Lee Shoptaw, and a juvenile. — The Martin County Sun

According to the citation, Lowe smelled strongly of alcohol and had to be forced into the police car and jail. The citation said Lowe kicked the windows and screen in the cruiser where he also cursed loudly, pulled down his pants and refused to pull them up.

Lowe reportedly said he was a member of the By-Pass Gang and told Gordon he would kill him and another officer at the detention center. The citation said the threats were on videotape at the jail. — Appalachian News-Express

15 Pike 'pacesetter' schools honored by state

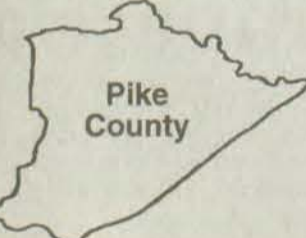

During the 1996-97 school year, 15 Pike County schools were identified and honored by the Kentucky Department of Education as pacesetter schools.

That's the message board members received earlier this week in an annual performance report released by the education department.

The report looks at school districts and how they compare with state averages on test scores, attendance, dropout, teacher-student ratio, teacher salaries, and other factors.

According to the report, 16 schools in the county qualified for KIRIS reward money and 18 schools were recipients of Title I funding.

It also recognized new and innovative programs offered by county schools such as Tech Prep, School-to-Work, High and Middle Schools That Work, Service Learning, Distance Learning Labs, technology, new school facilities, new graduation requirements and an alternative school calendar. — Appalachian News-Express

Coal Run's lone police officer gets a cruiser

The purchase of a police car should make Coal Run's new and only city police officer a more recognizable presence in the town, while providing the former Marine with much-needed police equipment, Coal Run's mayor said.

Mayor Mike Glavaris said on Friday, the city was having the car it purchased through the county from a company in Oklahoma, marked with Coal Run's name, stripes and other special marks so citizens will easily recognize Officer Joel Bowles. The cost of the car with added and updated features is $9,480.50. — Appalachian News-Express

Local girl appears on big screen

by Alicia Carmichael
Appalachian News-Express

About this time a year ago, eight-year-old Charley Epling of Pikeville was rubbing elbows with movie stars and trying to get over her shy spell with actors such as Steven Seagal and country music star Mark Collie.

This year, the Pikeville Elementary School third-grader, and daughter of Brian Ipling and Kelli Wright, has no trouble talking to anybody from anywhere, and she's having the time of her life enjoying the benefits of appearing and speaking in the new Segal movie "Fire Down Below."

"I really like it," Charley said. "I am proud of myself for one thing because I usually don't see myself on TV or anything. But now that I've been on the movie, I've heard myself on the radio and everything."

Not only has Charley been a special guest on WDHR's morning show since "Fire Down Below" came to town, she's also been asked to sign autographs for kids and adults alike.

"It is fun," Charley said. "But Mom thinks I'm overdoing it."

Wright said although she's thrilled with the fact that people recognize Charley from her movie role, she wants to make sure her daughter keeps her feet on the ground.

"She lost some friends because of the movie," Wright said. "Some kids thought she was a snob."

Charley said she lost some friends because other kids thought she was lying about being in a movie while some friends were jealous of her brush with the big time.

Although Charley now has lots of friends, not to mention an 11-year-old boyfriend she met at church, she said fame still sometimes has its price.

"Some kids are jealous," she said. "And some older boys are asking to go out with me, but I say no because I think they just want to get into the movies free."

As for the movie itself, Charles said she loves almost everything about it and has already seen it five times since it came out last Friday.

But there are a couple of things — typical to most little girls — that Charley said she didn't like at all about the movie.

"First, like Mark Collie, I didn't like seeing him as a bad guy," Charles said of the star.

"And second, I didn't like seeing the preacher die," she said. "In other movies the preacher stays alive."

One thing Charley does not have a problem with, is the way the movie portrays her character's poor Eastern Kentucky family.

"I can get dirtier than I was in the movie by playing outside," Charley said.

Wright said she has recently become very aware that many people think the movie downgrades Eastern Kentuckians, but she was quick to point out that she doesn't think the movie is demeaning at all.

"More than half of the people in the movie were locals," Wright said. "There was only two things built for the movie — the church and Sara's house. The rest was real — the homes, the town of Jackson, the bar, the gas station. I think you get the point."

"How can they be downgrading us when it was us and our town?" Wright said she thinks Eastern Kentuckians should be proud of the way the movie portrayed the people of the mountains, and the mountains themselves.

"I think we should be proud of our towns, homes and neighbors," Wright said. "We don't live in New York or Los Angeles — thank God."

"We live in Hometown, USA." Charley said now that the movie is over, she's changed her dream of being a newspaper reporter to a dream of becoming an entertainer.

"I used to want to be a reporter because I like to write," she said. "But now that I've been in the movie, I want to model and sing and act."

Wright said although Charley hasn't had any auditions since "Fire Down Below," she knows her daughter is serious about show business because she works on her talent.

"She wants to sing and act," Wright said smiling. "She was in a talent show and she sang her own songs because she said singing someone else's songs — that wasn't talent."

businesses that might be attracted to the area because of the school.

"It's hard to predict those things at this point," Kinder said. "...But we already know that when you have a four-year college it attracts business, it attracts people."

"The medical school will do the same thing. It will be one of the things considered by factories looking to locate here."

More students might also be attracted to Pikeville College's undergraduate programs because of the medical school's presence here, she said.

The medical school, which is the first of its kind in Kentucky and only the 19th such school in the nation, is ultimately expected to upgrade health care in Eastern Kentucky and Central Appalachia by infusing more doctors into the medically-underserved regions.

the discussion be held in public, but then he refused to answer the fiscal court's questions about his situation when asked to respond to a question from a magistrate.

"The employees had six months' notice of the requirement to obtain a CDL. Out of about 110 employees affected by the policy, we had one administrative employee and one hourly employee who refused to comply with the policy."

The hourly employee, Dennis Pinson, was also terminated for the same reason. A request was made by Doug Fish and granted by the court for an extension of 60 days to obtain his license.

The court voted 4-0 to terminate Gibson.

Gibson read the letter to the court, which in part said that during his employment with the county he had never been required to operate equipment, but yet had carried out the duties of his position in a professional manner.

Gibson said that if the court would reinstate him to his job and provide him with professional training on all types of equipment he would be required to operate, he would then attempt to obtain a CDL.

The Temptations

The Temptations to perform

When five skinny young men walked together onto the rehearsal stage back in the early '60s, history stood in the wings and nodded. These were the anointed. They would become the standard-bearers for breathtaking harmonies, stylish choreography and thrill-making vocal leads. Legends in the making, they felt fire in the soles of their feet, strength in their hearts, and power in the songs their voices would weave into the fabric of pop music's tapestry.

And so today, when four like-dressed men step away from the microphone to execute a synchronized little move of the hips at a right angle, slide that foot up on the toe, both history and mythology are stepping in those footsteps. It's the "Temptations Walk, 1995."

In the 1960's, history was first made by Otis Williams, David Ruffin, Eddie Kendricks, Melvin Franklin and Paul Williams. As the original members of The Temptations, these five men started out their careers together by touring across the country in a bus, hitting approximately 94 cities. Since then, The Temptations have had 43 Top Ten R&B singles, 14 Number 1 R&B singles, 15 Top Ten Pop Singles, 4 Number 1 Pop Singles and a total of 4 Grammy Awards. The Temptations, the world's No. 1 soul group, are mentors still. Everyone has paid tribute to The Temptations and The Temps know their own place in history. They have set the standards by which other vocal groups mold their sound and presentation.

As the hits came rushing out of Detroit and onto the charts, the pace accelerated. The lights grew brighter, the crowds more frenzied as the group sang, "The Way You Do The Things You Do," "My Girl," "Get Ready," "Ain't Too Proud to Beg," "Beauty's Only Skin Deep," "I Know (I'm Losing You)," "You're My Everything,"

"Cloud Nine," "I'm Gonna Make You Love Me," and "I Can't Get Next to You," and the world eased into the '70s.

The group personnel changed with time and tides. Dennis Edwards replaced David Ruffin and led the group through the early '70s with a long string of hits, including "Psychedelic Shack," "Runaway Child," "Running Wild," "Don't Let The Joneses Get You Down," and "Ungena Za Ulimwengu (Unite the World)." Setting another trademark, a long string of hits featured multiple trade-off leads; some like, "Superstar" featured a lead turn by every single group member. "Papa Was A Rolling Stone," "Cloud Nine," "I Can't Get Next To You," and "Ball of Confusion" are among the smashes with lead trades.

Eddie Kendricks crystallized for all time the essence of the first tenor voice on "Just My Imagination," and then departed the group. He was replaced in succession by Damon Harris, Glenn Leonard and ultimately Ron Tyson. "I was supposed to be broken in gradually," Tyson remembers, "but suddenly I found myself in the wings practicing the Temptations walk as we were rehearsing for 'Motown 25: Yesterday, Today, Forever.' There was no chance to make any mistakes. I had to be a Temptation right then and there!"

In the roads traveled from those early days to the international capitols of the world, this group has dazzled everyone from the tiara wearers to the kids who've scraped their lunch money together to buy tickets, with a long succession of hits, including, "Glasshouse," "Shaky Ground," "Standing on the Top," "Treat Her Like A Lady," and "Soul to Soul," sung, as Otis notes, "by several lead voices and each person who has graced our lineup deserves our enduring respect. Each man in his own way helped build the legend."

"For Lovers Only" is the title of the group's latest album release. This is a very special project. This album is Melvin Franklin's last recording session with the group, which becomes especially moving upon hearing him on "Life Is But A Dream," a track that features Stevie Wonder playing the harmonica, hauntingly complimenting Melvin's voice. It is also a loving tribute to the classic love songs from the '40s, '50s, and '60s with customized vocal arrangements by The Temptations. Each song was hand picked because of their timeless lyrics that are perhaps more meaningful today. It also depicts a positive attitude toward females which is sorely needed in today's market. In one special package, the group has paid homage to one of the most celebrated, unique bass voices in the world, re-introduced romance lyrics and appreciation for love songs. "For Lovers Only" is a gift from a classic vocal institution to their fans and music lovers everywhere.

The Temptations are currently on the road touring. Graciously, they are also doing guest appearances in support of the album release.

In-between their performances, the group has also performed for the grand opening of The Motown Cafe, The after party for the MTV Video Music Awards, The Today Show, The Davis Cup Media Party at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, CNN, Regis and Kathy Lee, and a special ABC-TV President's Gala for Bill Clinton and much more.

The Temptations are performing in the Mountain Arts Center October 6, 1997. Tickets in lower section are $28, in upper section $24. For reserved seats in advance, call 1-606-886-2623 or toll free 1-888-622-2787. Show time is 8 p.m.

And they're off

It's my father's fault, but whenever the Keeneland meet opens, I get the urge to get in the car and drive down the Mountain Parkway toward Lexington.

Twice a year, Buzzy, my late father, would take off along with friends Eddie, Teddy, Freddie, and Chick, whose motto was always, "we broke even."

Smile Awhile

Sara Hopson

"Buzzy," Teddy asked one day as they started out, "where are your clothes?"

"I told Jeanne we weren't going to stay,"

"She knows you always stay for the entire meet," Eddie protested.

"It still makes her wonder if I don't take clothes."

"Buzzy," Chick stated, "I think after 30 years, she knows your habits."

"Shut up and read the entries for the first race, Chick," daddy stated.

"I'm not betting the first race," Eddie said flatly. "It's a maiden race. It's hard enough to pick them when you've got a past performance on them, but when they've never run, it's impossible."

"That's why I hate exotic wagering. A man can't even pick one to run first," let alone pick the second one, too," Daddy lamented. "Buzzy," Chick interrupted, "what are you going to do about extra underwear? I'm not going down 64 again with your wet, washed undershorts hanging on the antenna."

"Shut up, Chick, and read the entries for the second race."

"I've got that winner," Teddy said, confidently.

"Then we'll just wheel that horse with all of them in the first race," Freddie said.

"Did you get a hot tip?" Daddy asked.

"Sort of," Teddy replied sheepishly. "I dreamt about it."

"Oh, well then," Freddie sighed. "We'll just put our life savings on your REM sleep."

"I've dreamt about winners before," Daddy said, siding with Teddy. "How much have you won like that?" Eddie asked.

"Well, I bet 20 to win on one and it was going off at 200 to 1."

"Did you win?"

"I could have won a lot, but it came across the line without a jockey."

"Then you lost!" Chick cried.

"Shut up and read the entries for the third race, Chick."

Usually by the time they arrived at the track, they still had trouble making up their minds.

"I like this horse named Rusty Rosie," Freddie said.

"Who's it out of?"

"It's out of luck," Teddy replied. "They just scratched him."

"Just my luck. Something always happens every time I pick a winner," Daddy said.

With one minute to post, the group was usually still undecided. Teddy and Freddie would pour over the form, Chick would run around the dining room hunting for someone to tout him, Eddie would bet them all to show, and Daddy meditated.

"Buzzy, what are you doing?" Teddy asked as he'd watch him close his eyes and run his fingers randomly down the program.

"Mental telepathy. When you can't choose, you have to go to a higher power."

"Buzzy, you don't actually believe He's helping you pick a horse?"

News of the Weird by Chuck Shepherd

—Extreme Political Protest: At the Eugene, Ore., city council meeting on August 6, an unidentified man who had been sitting in the audience walked up to controversial Mayor Jim Torrey, leaned over, and vomited on his shoulder. He then walked out and was not pursued. One council member, who was watching the man during the meeting, said the act clearly was premeditated.

—Philip Wright, 18, was given a suspended sentence by a magistrate in Newquay, Cornwall, England, in July on charges that he assaulted his mother and father. Philip started punching when the parents once again suggested that his long-standing obsession with models Claudia Schiffer and Eva Herzigova was getting out of hand, in view of the fact that he had recently changed his name legally to Phillip Herzegovna-Schiffer.

—The Price of Sex: In Hong Kong in July, former journalist Kwong Yiu-hong, 58, was sentenced to two years in jail for stealing from his employer in order to finance a bad deal he had made in a moment of passion in 1986. The deal itself called for investing about $25,000 with a woman, but in his efforts to finance repayment over the years, the debt grew to about $180,000, all attributable to that one-night stand. And during the Autumn Jackson extortion trial in New York in July, Bill Cosby testified that he had given Jackson and her mother about $100,000 in support over the years, also based on a one-night tryst.

COMPELLING EXPLANATIONS

—Police in Duluth, Minn., arrested Randall Dean Adams, 27, in the early morning of June 6 inside a basement after a neighbor had called 911. As an officer trained his flashlight on Adams' face in the darkness and asked what he was doing, Adams allegedly said, without a missing a beat, that he had been hired for a remodeling job, and that he had come to look things over.

—Speaking to reporters at the Kuala Lumpur (Malaysia) Hospital in April, where he was recuperating after being shot in the leg by a stray bullet during a police-robber shootout, 16-year-old Mohd Zulkhairi Khalid said it was both a shock and a rush to be hit. Although he had seen such things on television, he told The Star newspaper, he felt thrilled to experience for himself the excruciating pain.

—In May, Scripps Howard News Service profiled former lawyer James Kelley of Washington, D.C., one of a small group at his local church who are enthusiastic Episcopalians but who do not believe in God. Said Kelley,

"We all love the incense, the stained glass windows, the organ music, the vestments and all of that. It's drama. It's aesthetics. It's the ritual. That's neat stuff. I don't want to give all that up just because I don't believe in God."

—In January, Prime Minister H. D. Deve Gowda of India told a meeting of government employees in Bangalore that, in contrast with his image of laziness, he is actually a workaholic. The various photographs of him dozing off during official meetings are not accurate, he said. "Most of the time I am in deep thought about various welfare programs for the people."

—Rev. Robert Schuller was accused of roughing up a United Airlines flight attendant during a June trip from Los Angeles to New York and agreed in August to enter a first-offender program to settle the charge. The flight attendant said Schuller grabbed and shook him while demanding a fruit cup without cheese because, said the diet-conscious Schuller later, he was afraid that if the cheese were there, he would eat it. Schuller said that he was merely "trying to share the love of God" with the man and that "I am a hands-on person."

TUNING IN

ABC has three shows debuting this week that you may find worth watching:

"Timecop" with T.W. King, fresh from his stint on "All My Children," plays a police officer who moves through history to make sure the bad guys don't do things that will mess up the smooth flow of time. The show debuts September 22. It will remind you of similar shows you've seen over the years, but it can be fun to get a head-up on what our world will be like in the year 2007.

"C-16" stars Eric Roberts and D.B. Sweeney as members of the FBI's Criminal Division 16th Squad which handles the high stakes assignments such as kidnappings, hostage crises, and terrorist threats. The show bows in on September 27. The acting is uniformly good; ditto the writing. This one could find a loyal audience.

The other show debuting on September 27 is "Total Security" with James Remar and James Belushi. This is an interesting and often humorous look behind the scenes of those high-tech security types who seem to live in a world of their own.

On NBC, the one to watch this week is the new "Tony Danza Show" which debuts September 24. The buzz is this could be a long-lived feather in the Peacock's tail.

On September 30, TLC (The Learning Channel) returns with a second season of "Trauma: Life in the E.R.," one of the highest-rated weekly series on cable. Unlike network series, "E.R.," this program takes viewers into trauma centers around the country and shows how lives are fought for sometimes with only seconds to go before life ends.

TLC introduces a new Fall Sneak Preview of TLC Legends with Mandy Patinkin narrating the kick-off hour, "Evita: The Story of Eva Peron" on September 27. The series originally planned to feature three women, two of whom, Evita and Cleopatra, were historical legends, and one, Princess Diana, was to be the "living legend." Tragically, what happened last month has put Diana forever among the immortals.

(Anne Bancroft) finds a way to help her. The senator is in charge of a test program designed to place a woman into the hardest military training program — the Navy SEALs.

The training consists of arduous physical demands, sleepless nights, and stringent discipline. Fully 60 percent of all applicants fail, and none of those, thus far, has been a woman. Ah, but no one counted on the indomitable will of our heroine, who not only can do a one-armed pushup with the best of them, she is subjected to rampant sexism.

Granted, we have some ace performances here. Moore finally shines in a role clearly made for her. Bancroft is fabulous as the wily senator, wheeling and dealing her way around the Beltway. However, for my money, it is Viggo Mortensen as the almost sadistic drill sergeant, who makes the flick for me. He and Moore are perfect foils for each other.

As for the various plot twists and turns, again, the whole thing is boringly predictable. There's the requisite nude shower scene in which Moore is humiliated by virtue of being observed, but of course, she has to take it "like a man." Moore shaves her head to just be "one of the guys" — surprise, surprise. The men leer and jeer at her — surprise, surprise! The upshot: little, dainty girl proves she's just as good as the big, burly bullies!

In my opinion, this one isn't worth the ticket price. Wait for it to come out on video instead!

MEN BEHAVING BADLY

Police say they recovered a handwritten list of women whose pictures were in local newspapers (some of the names with asterisks), along with two Tuck student photo directories.

—Jeffrey Maurice Young, 19, of Troy, Mich., was arrested in Gastonia, N.C., in July and charged with assault and attempted theft. According to police, Young had hidden beneath a table at the Bloomin' Onion Steakhouse, lying on his back and touching the legs of two women who had set down to eat. When he was discovered, he ran away, but police later found him hiding on a shelf at a nearby Circuit City.

—In August, former Baptist minister Don McCary, 53, was reported to be planning to act as his own lawyer in his four impending retrials on sexual assault charges in Chattanooga, Tenn. "I made a lot of stupid mistakes," he said, "but I did not rape those four boys." He had been convicted of the charges in 1992, but the Tennessee Supreme Court ordered new trials because the district judge had allowed "prejudicial" evidence against him (e.g., McCary's diary, in which he described his yearning for young boys; and pornographic magazines, which he was found clutching while hiding among choir robes as police arrived to arrest him).

THE WEIRDO-AMERICAN COMMUNITY

According to testimony in June in Chicago in a kidnapping trial, Richard Romero, 36, had befriended a local 13-year-old boy in an Internet sex chat and had arranged to whisk him off to St. Petersburg, Fla. An acquaintance of Romero, self-described faith healer Kim Wistey, said Romero told him he was a mutant who was genetically engineered and programmed by the federal government to die at age 30 but that a benevolent alien race called the Vagans had proved that "extracting the energy from pornography" could stop his cells from dying. Romero allegedly said that if Wistey would put him up for a while, he'd work on computer databases to find a cure for Wistey's mother's cancer. Romero was also enthusiastic, said Wistey, about the "Five-Cent Plan," by which the two men would get rich tapping into the IRS fund that contains a nickel from each tax return ever filed. Said Wistey, after the prosecutor asked if he believed all of this: "I didn't want to be closed-minded."

Riverview Go-Kart track

Floyd County will be getting a second racing track but of a smaller horsepower when the Riverview Go-Kart track opens this Saturday at Dwale. Racing is expected to get the green flag at 2 p.m. with the gates opening at noon. (photo by Ed Taylor)

Riverview Go-Kart Track opens Saturday at Dwale

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Henry Setser of Prestonsburg dreamed of the time that Floyd County would have another racing facility, and he set out to set the wheels turning in making the dream become a reality.

But his track is not going to be any threat to Thunder Ridge because his track will be the home of Riverview Go-Kart Track, designed to race go-karts.

Go-kart racing is growing in popularity, and Setser believes his new track, set to open this Saturday, will draw cars from all over the area.

"We used to go to Paintsville and race," said Setser, "but we had some conflicts there, I don't want to go into that, and so we decided to put our own track in."

The track is located in Dwale and the road could be a little rough at first, but fans will be surprised at the facility when they drive to it. There will be plenty of parking space and bleachers to rest upon.

"We designed our track after the one at Clay City," said Setser. "I went up there and looked at their track and I liked what I saw. Now local drivers will not have to go that far to race."

The new track is one-tenth of a mile around with a track, and is 30-feet wide. "It is one of the biggest tracks in the country, with the exception of Clay City," said Setser.

Setser said he tried to rent a place to put the track in, but it was too close to houses in the area.

"I then went to Delano May and told him that I wanted to rent a piece of ground he owned," Setser explained. "He wanted to know what I wanted with it. I told him it was to put my horses on. I had horses that you did not have to feed and did not take up a lot of space. He knew then what I was getting at."

May and Setser viewed the proposed spot and the details were worked out with work beginning on the track immediately. May donated the spot for the track.

"We had a lot of help in putting it in," said Setser. "The mayor came down and worked two partial days for us running the dozer. We had (Anthony) Harpo, city police, to come out and help along with Gene Prater, Ronnie Cantrell and Minnie Moore. We couldn't have done it without them." The gates will open this Saturday at noon with the first race getting underway at 2 p.m.

"We will have the six to nine age group which will be a single pull," said Setser. "The double pull with for age groups nine through 13. We also will have a men's class."

Setser said there will be "no hitting" allowed and drivers will be running for trophies, not money.

"We want to run as long as the weather permits," he said.

The facility will have a pit area and the track has liability insurance on drivers as well as spectators.

"I have five grandsons who have go-karts," said Setser. "I have been in this for a long time and I enjoy them. It is really something to watch a six-year-old drive around the track."

Patrick Setser, Donald Setser, Jason Setser, Seth Setser and Matt Setser make up the grandson lot for Setser but...

"I have two granddaughters who are wanting to get their own go-karts and race," he said.

The legal motor size for a go-kart is five horsepower and it must

Blackcats travel to Cawood; South Floyd hosts Pikeville

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The high school football season enters its fifth week and some important district games are on tap tonight involving county teams.

Coach John DeRossett will take his Prestonsburg Blackcats on a long trip to Cawood to face the 2-1 Trojans. While Betsy Layne will host Lewis County in their annual homecoming, Allen Central entertains Fleming-Neon in district play. South Floyd will host a tough Pikeville Panther team.

PRESTONSBURG AT CAWOOD

Prestonsburg will be coming off an impressive road win against Whitesburg last Friday night and the Blackcats defense seems to be getting better with each game. They stopped the Yellowjackets with just a field goal.

Cawood is coming off a 20-14 setback to Evarts last Friday night. The Trojans are one of the teams expected to compete in the district.

Junior John Ortega rushed for 159 yards last week at Whitesburg and is one of the top runners in the district.

The biggest boost to the Prestonsburg offense the first three games has been the passing of quarterback Adam Hall and play of Brooks Stumbo at the other end. Hall completed three passes for 104 yards last week. The Blackcats seem to have filled the hole left by the injury to linebacker/fullback Jeremy Caudill.

Defensively, Grant Castle, Mark Branham, Bill Willis and Nathan Leslie have been standouts.

It will be a long bus trip to Cawood, but look for a joyful ride home after a Prestonsburg win.

PIKEVILLE AT SOUTH FLOYD

Pikeville (1-2) coach Royce Mayo is hoping for a turnaround with his Panthers as they make their way to South Floyd tonight. The Panthers are coming off a lopsided loss to Hazard (47-13) last week and Pikeville is going to be hungry to get back on the winning track. Pikeville is off to one of their worst starts in several years and it won't be easy against the Raiders. South Floyd pulled off a big win against Phelps last Friday night in a comeback game. The question here is, can the Panthers stop the ground game of Ketrin Mays and, while concentrating there, can the secondary overcome the passing of Nick Compton? Compton is averaging just over 160 yards passing through three games. Timmy Butler, in his first season of football, is learning how to connect with the football and with Justin Holbrook running his routes. Compton could be a problem.

But Mays has been unstoppable in three games. His quickness and ability to bounce off tacklers has been outstanding. He has scored eight touchdowns this season. What makes him more of a threat is his ability to get ahead of the defense and pull in a Compton pass.

FLEMING-NEON AT ALLEN CENTRAL

Allen Central (0-4) is still looking for their first win of the season, but the Rebels even look good while losing. Although they just had a total of 10 yards on offense against Tolsia last week, there were still some good things seen.

The defense performed much better the second half against the other Rebels, led by Rory Patton, Rodney Bentley and Brandon Sizemore.

Fleming-Neon (2-1) did not play last week and lost to Hazard last time out.

Allen Central has had trouble moving the ball on the ground the last three games and must open some holes for Bentley in the backfield. With the one game suspension facing hard runner Mark Dunfee, coach Wes Halbert just might move quarterback Jesse Hall to the backfield and bring in freshman quarterback Brandon Sizemore to call the signals.

Hall played in and out in the backfield against Tolsia last week. Sizemore had a couple of completions but still the offensive line must give their quarterback more time.

Sophomore Mark Howard seems to be the forgotten man in the Rebel backfield and could just be the answer to getting some yardage on the ground.

LEWIS COUNTY AT BETSY LAYNE

It will be homecoming tonight for the Betsy Layne Bobcats as winless Lewis County visit the Bobcat lair. Betsy Layne is 2-1 on the season and coach Ted George would love to see his Bobcats get win number three.

"Lewis County is not as bad as their record would indicate," said the Betsy Layne coach. "They have lost three, but in two of those games, they were in all the time."

Lewis County got blown out last Friday against Bath County, 30-0.

Betsy Layne will put the ball in the hands of Billy Mitchell, who rushed for 215 yards last Friday. Mitchell scored four touchdowns for the Bobcats.

Tyler Puckett completed three passes last week for 52 yards passing. Nick West is still the key here for Betsy Layne. No doubt Lewis County will be concentrating on Mitchell, but look for West to get the call. Eric Cecil is still doubtful for the Bobcats.

Nathan Hayes would love to celebrate early since next Monday is his birthday, and a win would be better than a wrapped gift.

Betsy Layne should be 3-1 after this game tonight.

Hyden, Brown spark Martin past Adams Middle School

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Megan Hyden and Jaclyn Brown combined for 33 points in leading the Martin Middle School Lady Flashes to a 56-43 win over Adams Middle School in the first regular season basketball game of the year for both clubs.

Hyden tossed in 19 points and Brown added 14. Leigh Brown and Jaclyn Martin netted nine points apiece.

Game scoring honors went to Adams' Ashleigh Ousley with 24 points. Ousley hit one three-point basket in the fourth period when she scored nine points.

Hyden had six points of her 19 in the first quarter to lead Martin to a 15-4 lead at the first stop. Martin had five points in the opening period. Tiffany Frasure had two first quarter points for Adams. Ousley and Erin Majakey hit a free throw apiece.

Adams cut the margin to eight points mid-way of the second period on a basket by Cathy Robinson and two free throws from Heather Nelson for a 19-11 game. But Martin went on a 11-0 run for a 19 point deficit, 30-11. Whitney Parson buried a three-point basket but Brown hit a half-court shot just ahead of the buzzer for a 33-14 Martin half time lead.

Martin scored the first four points of the third period and rolled out to a 37-14 margin. Ousley took a nice assist from Frasure and slipped under for an easy basket. Martin hit the next five points, all by Leigh Brown, to go up 42-16.

Adams went on a 9-2 spurt and climbed back in the game at 44-15. Ousley scored all nine points for Adams. Martin led 45-26 after three quarters.

Jaclyn Brown hit a trey to start Martin's scoring in the third after Robinson missed two free throws for Adams. Ousley answered the trey with one of her own for a 48-30 game.

Martin maintained a 18-20 point cushion throughout the fourth period. Ousley, on a steal, went solo and was fouled completing the three-point play to make it a 54-39 game.

Jaclyn Martin pulled down nine rebounds for the Lady Flashes. Megan had eight and Jeni Spurlock five. Jaclyn Brown had two three-point baskets for Martin.

Jessica Isaac netted three points and Terri Mullins scored two for Martin.

Frasure finished with six points for the Lady Blackcats. Majakey scored four, all in the fourth period. Nelson and Robinson totaled two points apiece with Parsons scoring three. Amanda Goble had one point.

"B" TEAM GAME

Martin pulled out a 11-10 win over Adams in the "B" team game. Whitney Parsons had a three-point basket and scored six points to lead Prestonsburg. Heather White scored the other four points.

Terri Mullins had five points to lead Martin. Tabitha Caudill netted four points. Jessica Isaac had two points.

Betsy Layne golf team sets new school record

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Betsy Layne golf coach, Keith Henry, said his golf team was elated after Wednesday's meet against Sheldon Clark at Allen's Beaver Valley Golf Course.

The foursome of Mark Bowling, Josh Kidd, Bradley Reynolds and Justin Bartley shot a 145 to better the previous record of 152.

"They were tickled to death," said Coach Henry. "They thought that was something."

Mark Bowling shot a 1-under par 33 on the par 34 course. Kidd was one over par at 35. Reynolds shot a four over 37 and Bartley was a six over 40.

Mike Marcum was the low scorer for Sheldon Clark with a four over 38.

The district golf meet gets underway this coming Tuesday at the Allen course. On Wednesday, the tournament will move to the Jenny Wiley State Park. Tee off time is 5 p.m. with Prestonsburg the host school.

OFFICIAL REGISTRATION CONTINUES

The grade school basketball season is quickly drawing near and the Floyd County Elementary Basketball Officials Association is still registering officials who wish to call elementary games this season.

Each official must be a member of the FCEOA. There are no registration fees. You must be a registered official with the Kentucky High School Athletic Association, wear a proper official's uniform and attend at least one on-court training during the pre-season.

WPRT-AM TO AIR THOROUGHBLADE GAMES LOCALLY

The Kentucky Thoroughblades Director of Communications and play-by-play broadcaster Tim Woodburn announced last Friday partnership with WPRT-AM in the Prestonsburg area. WPRT becomes one of six current stations on the Thoroughblades radio network.

"During the Thoroughblades inaugural season, our surveys and TicketMaster reports indicated a strong following in the Prestonsburg area," said Woodburn.

"Our live broadcast presence on WPRT-AM should only enhance what is already a potentially thriving hockey community."

The Thoroughblades averaged 7,608 fans per game during the 1996-97 season, including six crowds over 10,000 and finished second in AHL attendance among 18 total teams.

WPRT-AM will air all 80 regular season games and all potential play-off games on a live or joined-in progress basis beginning October 3 and ending with the regular season finale on April 11.

FROM LAST WEEK

WINSTON CUP: Jeff Gordon matched his career best with his 10th victory of the 1997 season, holding off Ernie Irvan in the CMT 300 at New Hampshire International Speedway.

Gordon became the first two-time winner in NHIS history. Five different drivers had won the previous races since the track first received a Winston Cup date in 1993.

The victory was the 29th of Gordon's career and put the 26-year-old driver in position to threaten Richard Petty's modern-era record of 13 victories in a season, set in 1975.

There were six caution flags at the end of the race, keeping Gordon and Irvan from dueling down the stretch.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Ricky Rudd vs. Geoff Bodine

Bodine was involved in at least four separate incidents on a long day at New Hampshire, and one of them eliminated Rudd. "Bodine decides to drive in (to the turn) three-wide and be a big hero, and it just didn't work out too good," said an exasperated Rudd.

NASCAR This Week writer Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "Actually, it's kind of enjoyable to see the old, aggressive Geoff, trading paint and sheet-metal. When he was out of money, Geoff had to leave his fangs at the shop. He's out there to win again, and he doesn't mind taking chances."

FROM THE ARCHIVES:

The rich history of NASCAR:
James Harvey Hylton of Inman, S.C., was perhaps the greatest of all the true "independents." Three times Hylton finished second in the NASCAR point standings, and he achieved a feat that may never be duplicated. He was runner-up in the point standings during his rookie year in the sport's premier division. Hylton, who seldom had adequate financing, won only two races during his long career, but consistency was his strong point.

AROUND THE TRACK
Dizzy Burton sits out Sat

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week
LOUDON, N.H. - At New Hampshire International Speedway Saturday morning, most of the Winston Cup drivers were out practicing on the 1.058-mile track. All except Jeff Burton.
Burton was "doing doughnuts" on the runway at a local airport. No, Burton was not out joyriding with a bunch of infantile high school buddies. He was driving a passenger car because he wasn't sure he was up to driving a race car at NHIS.

Burton suffered from a mysterious inner ear problem that made him dizzy. He drove only up to the first caution flag in the CMT 300.
ON THE BOARDWALK: Charlotte-based Speedway Motorsports Inc. opened a new front in its acquisition of race-track properties on Sept. 10 as CEO Bruton Smith announced plans to build a superspeedway in the resort/gambling capital of Atlantic City, N.J.
Smith made the announcement in the Marcus Aurelius Room of Caesars Atlantic City, saying that he had narrowed potential conster mile!"

THREE WHO COULD SURPRISE: Kyle Petty's last victory was here in 1995. So was Kenny Schrader's, in 1991. Bobby Hamilton has often been strong here.
KEY TO THE RACE: The high-banked concrete is treacherous, and high G-forces make this race one of the circuit's most demanding.

This is one of the few tracks where neither Mark Martin nor Terry Labonte has ever won.

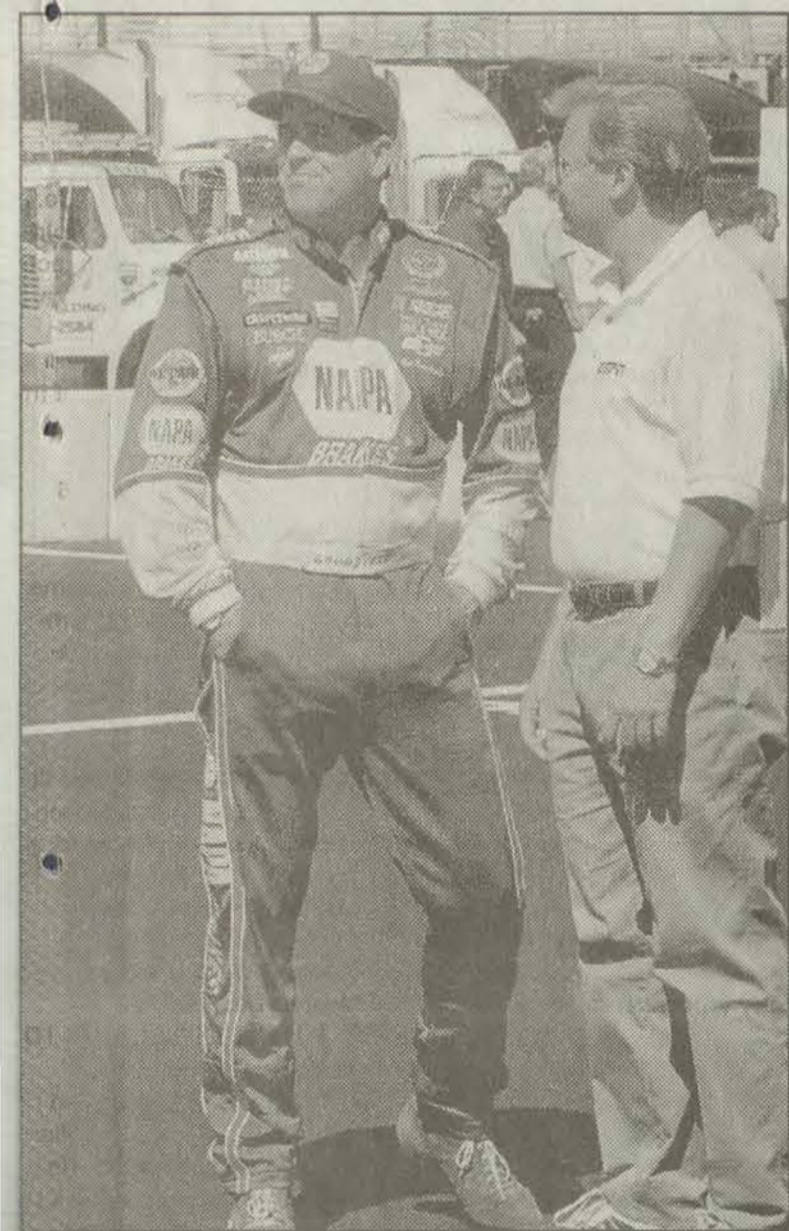

Bobby Labonte

BUSCH GRAND NATIONAL: Sept. 20, MBNA 200, Dover.
EARLIER THIS YEAR: Bobby Labonte won the May 31 Goodwrench 200, marking the first victory of the season by a Pontiac.

NOTABLE: Steve Park became the first BGN rookie in history to win three races with his Richmond victory. ... Park has already clinched the series' rookie-of-the-year award. Only Tommy Houston, Larry Pearson and David Green have won more money on the Busch Series than Randy LaJoie, the reigning champion and current point leader.

YOUR TURN

READERS ASK THE QUESTIONS

Dear NASCAR This Week,

We have a discussion going. When and where did Richard Petty win his 200th race? We have not been able to find answers. We enjoy "Your Turn" very much and feel you will give us the correct answer.

M. Edge
Athens, Tenn.

Dear NASCAR Race Fan,

Petty won his 200th race at Daytona International Speedway in the Firecracker 400, held on July 4, 1984.

Dear NASCAR This Week:

I am writing to get some needed information. I was told that NASCAR, before each race, gives the drivers a boost of some type of dope to tranquilize them, the idea being if they are in a wreck, it would not hurt them as bad. I know this sounds ludicrous. It does to me. They would have no reflexes at all this way. No one in his right mind could really believe this. This is a dispute in the family. Please inform as this has caused a rift in our family by one who does not like car racing to begin with.

Geri Messick
Panama City, Fla.

P.S. This all started from Earnhardt's miscue in the Mountain Dew Southern 500 race. The party said he was high on dope. We are Earnhardt's fans. We know it would have showed up in his blood test if this were so.

Dear NASCAR Race Fan,

You're right. No one in his right mind could possibly believe this. Perhaps your relative should take a blood test.

If you've got a question or a comment, write: NASCAR This Week Your Turn, c/o The Gaston Gazette, 25 E. Franklin Blvd., Gastonia, N.C. 28054

Crew of the Week

The driver is leaving at the end of the year and the future is uncertain. But Robbie Loomis has obviously kept morale up at the Petty Enterprises shops in Level Cross, N.C. The result? A third-place finish by Bobby Hamilton at New Hampshire International Speedway. Hamilton, who will move to the Kodak No. 4 Chevrolet next year, broke a long string of finishes outside the top 10 that stretched back to April.

by Ed Taylor

The second leg of the Eastern Kentucky Shootout will be ran this Sunday after a successful part one last Saturday night at the Thunder Ridge Speedway.

Prestonsburg's Paul Harris drove his #10 car across the finish line and on to the victory lane where he collected the $4,000 first place prize money. It was the fourth feature win of the season for Harris at the local track. Harris finished ahead of Greg Lucas (#32) and Randy Fields (#42).

Van Lear's Gary Combs took the checkered flag in his #10C car in winning the Modified feature. Langley's Brad Martin took third place in his #55 car while Chuckie May ran third.

In the AMRA stock cars, Steve Stollings was the first to cross the finish line in his #17 car in winning the Saturday night feature. Bill Smith (#51) and Bill Butcher (#00) finished second and third respectively.

Home Spun Country added to annual car show festivities

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Trans Financial Bank Red, White and Blue Car Show added another event to their show that really kicks off on Friday, October 17th when the Friday Night Cruise takes place. The car show itself is scheduled for Saturday, October 18th but the fun really gets started on Friday night.

After the Friday Night Cruise that will find its way through Martin, to Allen, then Prestonsburg, down to Lancer on the old road, and then back to Martin.

Walter Clyde Dingus (from WDHR) will bring his live local talent show to the Martin Branch parking lot for some live entertainment. The show, "Home Spun Country," is a favorite among listeners throughout the region and may find its way to Nashville.

Saturday's entertainment line-up will feature the Junior Pro Opry singers, a group you don't want to miss. Also on hand will be line dancers and the cloggers.

"We're still working on the car show," said Tina Mills, car show director. "We have a lot of prizes to give away this year."

Mills also announced this year could be the last year the car show is connected with the Red, White and Blue Days in Martin.

"We're thinking about maybe Memorial Day, because of the weather," she said. "We haven't decided yet but we will announce our decision at the car show on Saturday."

The popular Model Car Contest will return this year with four trophies to be presented to those participating. There is only a $1 charge to enter the model car contest.

"We will have a lot of booths at this year's show," said Mills. "We're going to give trophies for different age groups in the model car contest."

Three front end alignments will be given away along with cases of motor oil. The first 100 cars to register will receive a commemorative dash plaque of the show.

The Best of Show will receive a $500 savings bond. Other savings bonds will be awarded to some car owners. T-shirts, sweatshirts, and other items will be taken home.

Trophies will go to the Top 50 car owners. A special '80s and up category will be held with the top five cars being in the Top 50.

It promises to be a fun-filled weekend at Martin as one of Eastern Kentucky's largest car shows kicks off.

strong third place with her time of 19:03 with Pikeville's Emily DeMarest a distant fourth. Johnson Central's Selena Curtins rounded out the top five girl runners.

be a Briggs and Stratton engine. Each race will consist of eight laps around the track with six classes running each Saturday.

"We will have our hot laps and qualifying runs," said Setser. "That will determine the order they start in. Everybody races."

Setser said the problem with other tracks has been the delay between classes.

"We will have the next group lined up while one is running on the track. When the last car exits the track, then the next class will run," he said.

The track is all clay with a smooth surface. Tires will line the track as safety for the drivers. Setser said that 75-80 drivers are located in Floyd County but expects other drivers from other areas to be in competition.

"We already have a group of drivers from Virginia that will be here at a later date," he said. "They are a touring group and will just race against themselves."

Setser said the track will have special holiday racing and will have sponsors as well.

"They will sponsor some things and that will take care of the trophies and maintaining the track," he said. "We will not allow any alcoholic beverages on the site and no bad language will be tolerated," said Setser.

The admission to the new track is only $5 and everyone pays, according to Setser.

"There will be a $7.50 registration fee for each driver," he said. "That helps pay for the insurance as well."

Fans will find the track by taking the first railroad crossing in Dwale and following the road. The pavement will end into a dirt road with the track located approximately 500 feet after the pavement does end.

Routine Pap Smears: The Key To Cervical Health

(NAPS)—Routine Pap smears can save lives from cervical cancer. Yet half of the women diagnosed with cervical cancer in the United States have never had a Pap test. The overwhelming majority of women who have Pap smears on a regular basis will have any abnormalities detected at a stage that can be readily treated. If cervical cancer is detected in its earliest stage, the likelihood of survival is almost 100 percent with timely and appropriate follow-up.

Pelvic exams and Pap tests allow the doctor to detect abnormal changes in the cervix or precancerous cells that can be treated before they become malignant. All women, age 18 and older should have both of these exams on an annual basis. Twenty-five percent of cervical cancer cases are 41 percent of cervical cancer deaths occur in women age 65 or older. This is perhaps because women who are beyond childbearing age are less likely to have regular gynecological checkups.

Each year, 470,000 women are diagnosed with cervical cancer worldwide. In the United States alone, 14,500 new cervical cancers will be diagnosed and 4,800 women will die from the disease during 1997. With the nearly 100 percent survival rate for cervical cancer that is detected early, it is tragic that an woman dies of this disease. Spread the word: routine Pap smears save lives.

All women are at risk for developing cancer of the cervix. For more information about this disease or other cancer, contact the Cancer Research Foundation of America at 800-227-CRFA or visit the Web site at www.prevent-cancer.org.
