More water projects may get AML funds

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

During a groundbreaking ceremony Thursday to put construction for the Ligon/Clear Creek water project into motion, officials announced that other areas in the county would be studied to see if they also qualify for federal funds.

While participating in the ceremony for the $935,000 project which will provide water to more than 200 area residents, Abandoned Mines Land (AML) director Steve Hohman said seven other sites would be tested.

Hohman announced that $46,100 have been allocated to test water samples at Buckeye Branch; Pitts Fork; Henrys Branch; Johns Branch; a portion of Turkey Creek; Stephens Branch; and a portion of Spurlock Creek.

The testing will determine if water in those areas has been affected by pre-1977 mining. Sites are not eligible for AML funds unless the water contamination is due to mining activity before 1977.

Hohman said AML has just completed funding a water project in Arkansas Creek which cost nearly $1 million, "and on the heels of that one, we're going to do Ligon/Clear Creek."

Floyd Judge-Executive Ben Hale and the AML director explained that the Ligon/Clear Creek area had previously been declared non-

Floyd County man accused of murder

by Chris McDavid

The arrest of a Floyd County teen Monday followed a Knott County shooting incident which left one dead and another seriously injured.

Burl Waller, 19, of Wayland, was taken into custody Monday and charged with murder and first degree assault.

The youth is accused of fatally wounding 31-year-old Ray Charles, of Pippa Passes, and shooting Ricky Tackett, whose age and address were unavailable.

According to a Hazard state police media release, Waller shot the two men Monday at Meades Rental Court in Dema. The release does not provide any other information about the shootings.

Tackett was transported from the scene to McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital. He was released from the hospital two days after the incident.

Judge Terry Jacobs entered a not-guilty plea to Waller's felony charges during arraignments Tuesday in Knott District Court. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, March 17.

Waller is being held at the Knott County Jail in lieu of a $500,000 cash bond.

Killers trade accusations

by Bill Jones
The Greeneville Sun

The finger pointing began when two of six Eastern Kentuckians, who confessed to the slaying of a Tennessee family, took the stand this week during their sentencing hearing.

Jason Blake Bryant, 15, was the first to testify in the hearing this week and alleged that co-defendants Edward Dean Mullins, 20, and Joseph Lance Risner, 21, were the shooters in the incident which left three members of the Lillelid family dead.

Natasha Wallen Cornett, 18, testified Wednesday that Bryant was the sole gunman. She also denied a claim by her former attorney, Eric Conn, that she proclaimed herself to be the daughter of Satan, however; Cornett admitted she had an interest in the occult.

Cornett's testimony about Bryant being the lone gunman in the shootings is expected to be supported by Mullins and Risner, who were to testify Thursday. According to opening statements by their attorneys, they will also say Bryant acted alone in fatally shooting Vidar, Delfina and Tabitha Lillelid - and wounding two-year-old Peter Lillelid.

On Tuesday, Bryant testified that he saw Risner fire the first shot, then closed his eyes until he heard a pause in the firing.

Bryant also claimed that after firing several shots, Risner punched Mullins in the arm and that Mullins then joined in the fatal shooting, with the two alternating taking shots.

However, on cross-examination, defense attorney Mark Slagle pointed out that a witness who heard shots fired the night the Lillelids were killed on isolated Payne Hollow Lane outside Baileytown said the shots were fired in two distinct groupings that were separated by a pause of several seconds.

That account matches a statement, which was later ruled inadmissible, that was given to Greene County Sheriff's Department Det. Sgt. Jim Ellison by codefendant Crystal R. Sturgill the day the adult defendants were returned to Tennessee from Arizona, where they were arrested while trying to flee into Mexico in the Lillelid's stolen van.

In that statement, Sturgill indicated that Bryant did all the shooting. She also claimed that Bryant fired all the bullets from a 9 mm pistol into the Lillelids, then emptied a .25-caliber pistol into the victims as well.

While on the witness stand Tuesday, Bryant claimed Risner threatened him with a 9 mm pistol after the Lillelid shootings, telling him to "get in the G.D. van or I'll leave you here like them (the Lillelids)."

Charge from '93 election dropped by AG's office

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Election fraud charges against WMDJ radio station owner and judge-executive candidate Dale McKinney have been dismissed.

In an agreed order dated March 6, Mike Wright, a prosecutor with the state Attorney General's Office, and McKinney's attorney, Ned Pillersdorf, agreed to dismiss the charges, saying the matter should have been presented to the state's Registry of Election Finance before criminal charges were sought.

Corey Belamy, spokesman for the AG's office, said Thursday the case would be forwarded to the Registry of Election Finance.

There is no case law on the issue, he added, and it is interpretation that the case should go to the Registry.

M. Stumbo and was defeated.

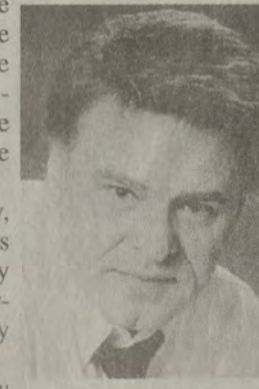

After the election, McKinney filed a civil suit accusing Stumbo of election fraud and that suit was subsequently dismissed with prejudice in September 1994.

As a result of McKinney's lawsuit and requests by some Floyd Countians, a special grand jury was called into session to hear from witnesses in what was called a public corruption probe. The state Attorney General's office conducted the investigation, which led to McKinney's indictment.

During open depositions in the civil case, McKinney admitted to taking hundreds of dollars from Martin banker Ben Spradlin to "test the waters" prior to his race for judge-executive. McKinney said he did not report the money received because he had not become a candidate for judge.

McKinney and five other Floyd Countians were indicted as a result of the special grand jury probe.

Primary candidate pleads guilty to shoplifting charge

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A Democratic candidate for Floyd County Clerk was arrested last month on felony theft and misdemeanor shoplifting charges.

Bonnie Shepherd, 53, of Sally Stephens Branch in Prestonsburg, was arrested February 27 by Prestonsburg policeman Ron Diddle.

Prestonsburg sergeant Gerald Clark charged Shepherd on March 2 with felony theft charges for allegedly forging a $300 check belonging to Jeff C. Sturgill and Evelyn B. Wells. The check was issued to Winn Dixie in Prestonsburg, according to the complaint.

Diddle arrested Shepherd on a shoplifting charge for allegedly taking a package of Armour Beef and a can of smoked oysters from Food City in Prestonsburg, according to the court records.

An incident report submitted by Food City employees says that Shepherd was observed with the food items in her cart which she then allegedly put into a large brown purse. The total of the items allegedly taken was $6.07.

Shepherd pleaded guilty to the shoplifting charge Wednesday and was fined $10, plus court costs.

A preliminary hearing on the felony charges is set for March 18 at 2:30 p.m. in Floyd District Court. Shepherd was released from jail on a surety bond.

Homecoming...
As Mandy May entered the Allen Elementary lunchroom there was silence until suddenly everyone surrounded the sixth-grader hugging her, kissing her and welcoming her home. The sixth-grader was paralyzed in an auto accident that claimed the lives of her great-grandmother and uncle and seriously injured her grandmother. More photos inside.

Surprise welcome lifts spirits of injured youth

Sixth-grader Mandy May thought she was returning to her classroom at Allen Elementary Monday evening to test out the facility's accessibility to her wheelchair.

When she got there, though, she was in for a big surprise. Her fellow students, their parents, and school faculty had organized a surprise party to welcome her home from the hospital.

Mandy received a spinal cord injury in an automobile accident late last year that caused the deaths of her great-grandmother and her uncle and seriously injured her grandmother. Mandy was paralyzed in the accident.

The community has rallied around the youngster and her family. The Mandy May Foundation was set up at the First Commonwealth Bank and, thus far, $1,500 has been contributed to the account. The fund continues to grow.

"It comes in 20s, some 30s, 40s, and hundreds," Robert Allen, an officer at the bank who is overseeing the account, said Thursday.

A benefit at Allen Elementary last week raised $2,100 to help offset Mandy's medical bills. Those funds were presented directly to the family, school principal Linda Gearheart said.

A country music benefit at the Mountain Arts Center will also be held in honor of Mandy. The event, which is being organized by Trish and James Hall, will be held April 26 and will feature Gone Country, Westwind, Carla Brumfield, and the Boys from Middle Creek, as well as several other acts, including comedy routines.

Band members are donating their service, and 100 percent of the profits from the concert will be given to the May family, Trish Hall said. Students at Allen Elementary are continuing their efforts to contribute to the May Foundation through various donation cans set up at the school, principal Gearheart said. They're also displaying yellow ribbons at Allen Elementary until Mandy returns to class.

To donate to the Mandy May Foundation, send checks to The First Commonwealth Bank, c/o Robert Allen, 169 North Arnold Avenue, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653.

Governor's mother loses fight with cancer

The mother of Governor Paul E. Patton died Thursday in Frankfort after a lengthy battle with cancer.

Funeral services for Irene Borders Patton, 81, of Louisa, will be held Saturday, March 14, at the Walnut Grove Freewill Baptist Church at Ulysses where Mrs. Patton was a longtime member.

Mrs. Patton was active in her community. She was a working mother who helped establish and manage the Fallsburg Consolidated School lunchroom, where she worked for nine years.

Two hats are hard to wear

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

Prestonsburg Tourism director Fred James is finding it difficult these days to wear two hats. James has been doing double duty as director of both tourism and marketing for the Mountain Arts Center since 1996, and that's what is causing some concern in the local tourism industry.

Thursday, Prestonsburg tourism commissioners addressed concerns voiced in February by the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce that some businesses had been neglected because of James' time constraints.

In a letter to the tourism commission, Carla S. Coburn, executive director of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce, said that, although the Chamber strongly supported the MAC, the Chamber wanted the commission to consider how the combination of offices for the director impacted local tourism businesses.

Coburn said the Chamber supported James and the activities of the commission and offered to assist the commission in resolving the matter.

Tourism chairman Mark Miller and James met with Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin February 27 to discuss that issue. Miller said commissioners were also concerned that James had to divide his time between the tourism department and the MAC, but that decision was totally in the hands of the mayor and the Prestonsburg City Council.

"We met with the mayor to address concerns of the community as well as the commission that we were focusing on MAC, thus losing focus on everything else," Miller said.

Fannin told James and Miller that James will remain on loan to the MAC for the rest of the year, but he expected to have a fully staffed tourism office in 1999, and that office would move out of the MAC and into another location.

Miller also asked the mayor to make a commitment to fill vacant tourism seats on the board and to remind him that some commissions would expire soon.

Miller said the mayor made a commitment to renew commissions. Fannin and the Prestonsburg City Council also granted approval for two commissioners — Vickie Ewen and Jim Stinnett, both with Jenny Wiley State Park — to fill the vacant slots.

In other business at Thursday's tourism meeting, commissioners established an idea exchange symposium to meet with local groups to discuss "the big umbrella of tourism" and what tourism can do to help those organizations.

"We ought to regroup ... I want to direct more (grant funds) toward the city," chairman Miller said.

Stinnett agreed and said he hoped to see more events downtown.

The idea session will be held April 2 at 7 p.m. Commissioners ask groups to pre-register by contacting Fred James.

Commissioners set April 9 as the date to work on the new budget. Commissioner Boyd Thompson asked James to prepare revenues from previous years and give a percentage of the increase or decrease they had received.

Also at the meeting, commissioners discussed a Harley Davidson rally that is expected to bring thousands of people to Floyd County. Miller suggested the commissioners meet with the Chamber of Commerce and the local H.O.G. Chapter.

Toward the end of the meeting, Fred James reported that tour operators will be coming to the area and he planned to set up a "mini-market place" in the lobby of the MAC. He encouraged any organization or business to participate by exhibiting.

He also reported that more than 100,000 people had attended the 120 shows held at the Mountain Arts Center since its opening.

Commissioners attending the meeting were Mark Miller, Boyd Thompson, Jim Stinnett, and Vickie Ewen. Blake Burchett, Linda Smith, and Donna Wells were absent from the meeting.

She taught Sunday School for four-year-old children at Westmoreland Baptist Church in Huntington, West Virginia, for 23 years.

Governor Patton has often credited his mother and father, the late Ward Patton, with instilling into him a sense of responsibility, respect for education and regard for family values.

"My mother and father made me what I am today," the governor wrote in his inaugural message.

Irene Patton once recalled the advice she had given her son when he attained the top leadership role in Frankfort.

"Be good," she said. "That's the advice I always gave to all my children. And they never let me or their daddy down."

Visitation for Mrs. Patton was held in Frankfort Thursday and at the Heston Funeral Home in Louisa Hunter was charged with first degree perjury for lying to the special grand jury. Hunter pleaded guilty to attempted perjury, a misdemeanor.

Harold Junior Joseph was acquitted of a vote-buying charge; a violation claiming wilful neglect of duty filed against Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson was dismissed; and a theft charge filed against county road foreman Raymond Mike Jarrell was dismissed.

The British are coming to the MAC

The British are coming; the British are coming, and it isn't the Beatles.

The Fortunes, formed in Rugby, England in 1962, will appear in concert with the internationally famous Vogues at the Mountain Arts Center on March 20.

They'll bring to the stage hits that reached the top of the charts in the 60s and 70s. Those tunes, though, are still popular. The saying that everything old eventually becomes new again is especially true in music. Hit songs popular decades ago eventually make the charts again, usually with a new face belting out the tune.

With the Fortunes, though, at least one face behind the voice will be familiar.

Bringing The Fortunes international stage show to America — and the MAC — is the man who was there in the beginning. When the late Reg Calvert put the original group together in England, Jon Washington was an original member, along with Rod Alan and Barry Pritchard. Washington is bringing back the sounds of The Fortunes so audiences can relive those magical days.

The Fortunes' and The Vogues' concert will be reminiscent of the past, but will contain the excitement of the 90s.

"The music of the Fortunes and the Vogues will take you back to the 60s and 70s right up through the exciting sounds of the 1990s with some of their hit songs like, 'Here Comes That Rainy Day Feeling,' 'Seasons in the Sun,' and '5 O'clock World,'" Fred James, marketing director at the MAC, said in promotion of the concert.

Other songs by the Fortunes include "You've Got Your Troubles I've Got Mine," from 1965; "Seasons In The Sun," from 1973; "Here It Comes Again," from 1966; and "I Still Get That Same Old Feeling," from 1973.

Over the years, The Fortunes have become not just a fine nostalgia act, but seasoned entertainers in today's competitive market. While still retaining the unique vocal sound that made them hit international recording artists, they have kept their fingers on the pulse of the times. The costumes are hip. The choreography is slick, and the comedy is funny.

Nor have The Vogues been left behind in time. Rock and roll gave the group its beginning. Pop sound was incorporated for their night club and college act. Country and Western has also found its way into their repertoire.

The Vogues created a sound with their original blend of harmony that left an indelible mark on the music world. They have been honored as one of the best vocal groups on the scene.

Through eras of sound, through fads of fancy, The Vogues have been a constant; showing in polls, selling records and attracting sellout audiences at concert and club appearances.

Their hits include "Turn Around Look At Me," "Till," "You're the One," and "Magic Concert show time at the MAC is 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 20. For ticket information, call 886-2623; or toll-free 1-888-MAC-ARTS (1-888-

News of the Weird

— Among the exhibits at the Impulse to Collect show at San Jose State University in February were Chris Daubert's "Chromatic extrusions rodenta" (rat droppings following their ingestion of some of his oil paints), Maryly Snow's collection of 696 toothbrushes (each cataloged on 13 attributes) and Bob Rasmussen's collection of items containing red X's. Among the exhibits rejected were a huge mass of dryer lint, an assortment of cat snot on slides, and a 15-year collection of umbilical cords. Said organizer Theta Belcher, on what makes a real collector: "They take it that one step too far."

— In May 1997, Dalton, Ga., juror Jim Thomas, 69, voted with his colleagues to convict Wayne Cservak of child molesting, but he soon had second thoughts and spent his own money for a lawyer to handle Cservak's appeal. The victim then admitted he had lied about Cservak, and in December the case against him was dismissed. Cservak's lawyer said Thomas' deed was "unheard of, not only in Georgia legal history but in the entire American legal history." Not quite. In January, the Connecticut Supreme Court heard arguments on the appeal of convicted murderer Adrian Santiago, funded by $12,000 so far from the life savings of regretful juror June Briere.

— "Road Rage" gets the attention, but more rages are coming into prominence: Prepay Rage, Albuquerque, N.M., January (a man wanted to pump his gas before he paid; fired several gunshots into the clerk's car). Late-Fee Rage, McLean, Va., January (former state department lawyer was not allowed to rent a movie until he settled an old late fee; ran down the store owner with his car, knocking him through the window of a nearby restaurant). Rain Rage, Los Angeles, February (as two men passed in the rain, their umbrellas accidentally touched; one man then aimed his umbrella at the other's face and thrust the tip through his eye, piercing his brain, sending him to the hospital in critical condition).

LATEST RELIGIOUS MESSAGES

— According to a September federal indictment in Des Moines, Iowa, Kenneth Ray Bruner (who is the stepson of a Pentacostal minister in Oklahoma City) led his seven accomplices in prayer three weeks earlier, asking for God's protection just before they set out to knock off Hermans Fine Jewelry. Bruner acknowledged, according to the indictment, "that they were going to do bad things but that they were not bad people." No one was hurt in the robbery, and everyone was behind bars by the following day.

— An August Associated Press report described the success of fiery, ten-year-old, traveling Baptist preacher Johnny Brown. According to his mother, the kid became inspired at age four during services in Georgetown, S.C., one Saturday, saying, "Momma, the Lord told me to get up and say something." Mrs. Brown said she tried to keep the toddler pinned in the pew, but he wiggled free, walked to the pulpit, and asked for the floor, at which point he began singing the hymn "Down at the Cross," setting the congregation abuzz. His travel dates are booked solid at churches as far away as New York.

— Taiwanese pilgrims Pi Feng Chiang and Hon-Ming Chen moved their God's Salvation Church from Los Angeles to Garland, Texas, in December based on a heavenly revelation (actually, a skywritten ad for the latest James Bond movie). (Garland was chosen because it sounded like "God land" to the pilgrims, who speak halting English.) Hon-Ming then took a crew to Lake Michigan to scout the location for the March 31, 1998, arrival of God's spacecraft, the loading dock for which will be at the Lake Street Beach in Gary, Ind. Hon-Ming periodically stares at his hand in public because, he said, that is how he converses with God.

— Dubious Salvations: In Hong Kong in November, self-proclaimed "knight of God" Syed Atta Muhammad, 32, was committed to a psychiatric center after he assaulted a 22-year-old tour guide, whose breasts he thought were too big to serve God because they made her look like a prostitute.

— In October, two months after Gov. Fob James came to the defense of a Jewish family whose children were being harassed by school officials in Pike County, Ala., first lady Bobbje James told reporters that the reason

Alabama was attracting so much new business (Boeing, Mercedes-Benz, others) was because God was blessing the state for being friendly toward Israel. (The Pike County School Superintendent admitted that officials ordered the children to remove Star of David pins because he thought they were gang symbols.)

— Pro football star Sean Gilbert sat out the 1997 season because the Washington Redskins had offered him only $20 million over the next five years, $1 million a season less than the figure that came to him last summer, he said, as a revelation from God.

OBSESSIONS

— The Associated Press reported in November on Morgan Wilburn, 7, of Salem, Va., who seems well on his way to a vacuum cleaner obsession. He owns 21 of them, with a new one showing up each Christmas, and was interviewed with his mother when they both were invited to the Bissell Inc. factory in Grand Rapids, Mich., to check out the new models. Said his mom, as the two were on their way to meeting Bissell president Mark Bissell, "That's like meeting Michael Jordan." Afterward, Bissell remarked, "The guy is really focused on product."

— Local prosecutor (described by the Boston Globe as "a rising star") William Charles McCallum of Brentwood, N.H., was sentenced to three to six years in prison in February for theft. He had confessed to stealing numerous home and office furnishings, ranging from 19th-century paintings to leatherbound books to the trousers he was wearing the day his trial opened. McCallum introduced testimony that he was a hopeless kleptomaniac, but the government thought he was faking.

— Darius McCollum, 32, was arrested in Brooklyn, N.Y., in November behind the wheel of a New York City Transit Authority truck, wearing a TA uniform, on his way to inspecting sections of track. However, he is not, and has never been, a Transit worker. He has been arrested more than 20 times in 16 years for using transit agency equipment and doing transit agency work in New York, New Jersey and North Carolina, and has spent four years in prison. Said a New York TA spokesman, McCollum is an engaging person, but, "He just thinks that he's a Transit employee, and he's not."
